mals, and especially hogs, preparatory to converting them into pork and bacon. As long as corn is grown in this country, with its large proportion of fodder to add to its value, it will continue to be used as the principal diet for fatten-ing all classes of stock, and it is perhaps as cheap as any other kind of food, prolucing pork of a firmer texture and of chins.

used for fattening. While, however, it is desirable to seare as great weight as possible, and are several breeds that will not thrive in have the pork of as fine quality as can restricted runs, as, for instance, the secured, experiments made for the Hamburg and the lighter varieties of rpose demonstrate that an exclusive et of corn is not the mest economical do well in a confined space. While no good, and direct draughts on roosting or the best, either to produce weight or

It is cheaper to produce meat that contains a large proportion of lean with the fat than to fatten a hog to such a condition as to fit it only for the production of lard, and it is a fact that in feeding for lean meat a greater weight of carcass is secured, and at no more expense than in producing an excess of fat. This is explained by reason of the fact that when an animal is given food containing the elements of growth of bone and muscle as well as of fat, the condition of the animal'is sustained in a manner to permit of more perfect digestion and assimilation, and a greater appropriation for the support of the system, of the for the support of the system, of the nutritious elements that are required, and which are more evenly distributed through the body, instead of the semi-diseased condition produced when corn is given as an exclusive diet. Hence the farmer who diminishes the ration of semi-diseased condition produced when corn is given as an exclusive diet. Hence the farmer who diminishes the ration of seminary substituting therefor bran, middlings, milk and clover (cut fine and scalded), win have his hogs larger, heavier, healthier and of better quality of fiesh than from corn.

While granting the advantages of a systematic method of feeding for the best results in producing the heaviest and best pork, the fact that prime lard brings a price that makes it desirable on the part of the farmer to have his hogs very fat is a serious obstacle in the way when the value of lean meat is desired. But, explains The Philadelphia Record, authority for the foregoing, the lean is simply interspersed with the fat, and the greater increase from the variety of food does not diminish the suppy of lard. The farmer will find that on those portions of the carcass from which the lard is of the carcass from which the lard is procured but little difference will be observed, and the hog will be much more valuable as a whole.

Rust in Wheat.

The following communication was sent from Sydney to the bureau of agriculture of that colony by a writer who said that years in New South Wales had proved adhering to the following system: The land must be well worked during the hot summer months. After the crop has been reaped the stubble must be burned or quickly got rid of, and the ground at once plowed and well worked up to sow-ng time for the next crop. Plow deep, onlyerize well, consolidate by rolling, ow early (from February to middle of twelve hours in a strong solution of four-fifths bluestone and one-fifth arsenic and well dried with wood ashes before sow-ing, and care taken that the seed is not cracked and damaged by machine thrash-ing. Sow lightly on rich, well worked land. About half a bushel to the acre of good sound seed is ample. He had realized the best results off very rich land by using only a peck to the acre-If manure is required sheep manure is the best; any other must be well rotted and pulverized before using, if for pres-ent crop. Avoid plowing in stubble or bbish, unless the land is to be fallowed for a season. Keep all large stock out of cultivated land, particularly cattlk. Avoid working land wet. By strictly thering to the foregoing simple rules rust in wheat can be prevented.

How Many Pigs Can Be Kept to a Cow. Numbered with the queries answered at the Farmers' institute at Canton was the one, "How many pigs can be kept to o cow?" Mr. T. D. Curtis, who answered the question, said:

The old rule was one. It depends somewhat on the cow. I say three, because no farmer can afford to give a pig othing but milk. The milk is worth to much as an aid in the digestion of hid foods and in making succulency, which is an important part of a successful system of feeding. So I say add enough bran, middlings, linseed meal and corn meal or other meal to the milk, and keep three pigs to a cow, and so make valuable manure and more pork.

The Minnesota Agricultural station reports an interesting case of crossing corn—namely, a yellow fiint and a black sweet—that emphasizes the importance of pedigree in plants. Farmers are urged to develop varieties of corn to suit their own soil, locality and requirements. Many experiments have been made upon seeding with rusted, frosted and frozen wheat. Frosted wheat, if well cleaned, is safe to use for seed. Frosted grain that is useless for milling is of no value for seed. The more thoroughly wheat that is useless for milling is or no value for seed. The more thoroughly wheat is cleaned the better it is for seed. Tests should be made for gluten and percent-age of germination betwee sowing. Good gluten seems essential for a good orop.

Becs and Bes Hives. In a paper on bees, read before the Westfield Wisconsin institute, the Rev. James Bain said: "Apiarians have their favorite breed the same as other stock-men, so that with beginners either the favorite breed the same as other stockmen, so that with beginners either the Italian, Cyprian, Syrian, Holy Land or the brown German bee will sufficiently answer, yet I think the Italian is the general favorite. The old box hive must be laid aside with the sickle and hand loom as curiosities of antiquity, and some approved movable frame hive with supers and sections used. My experience with the Simplicity Langustroth and Wisconsin is that either is desirable, although I rather prefer the Wisconsin. Supers for honey in one pound sections are better in the ordinary apiary extracting; many yield greater returns, but require far more time and skill with a less general market. Wintering in a dry cellar with a uniform temperature of 45 degs. is my choice. Take them out when willow and soft maple are in blossom. Put on supers as soon as clover blossoms appear. Feed weak colonies with honey or sirup made of coffee C sugar. Take honey to market crated in good shape, so that the maker's name is a guarantee that all is no represented."

The second point to be considered is better quality than many other foods whether the birds are to be kept in confinement or given their liberty. There the Spanish tribe, which scarcely ever birds thrive as well in small runs, the Minorcas, Leghorns, Houdans and Plymouth Rocks, when not overfed and otherwise properly cared for, will give > tolerable satisfaction. Where eggs are the chief object the non-sitting breeds are advised. Poultry specially characterized for table qualities is, of course, the sort to be selected where the demand is for dressed fowls. In point of quality the Games come first, although these are small for ordinary market purposes. The Game, crossed with Dorking, is highly recommended. Other good table fowls are La Fleche, Dorkings, Houdans, Langshans and Ply-mouth Rooks.

An English pomologist gives his ideas as follows on the subject of root pruning: The operation should be performed as soon after the crops have been gathered as possible. Open a trench about eight-een inches wide at from two to three feet from the stem of the tree, giving more w less distance according to the age and ize, and about the same depth, working the soil out pretty well from underneath the roots, with a view of severing any top or perpendicular ones that may be there, and cutting all those in the prescribed space clean away in the opera-tion. If the trees are vigorous and the natural soil in which they are growing is good, it may be returned to fill up the trenches without additions of any kind being made. But, on the other hand, hould both trees and soil show signs of lebility, the trenches should be filled in with good, fertile loam, and the improvement in the crops in succeeding years will well pay for the trouble and labor. Really fruitful trees are often benefited as much by not pruning as by the pruning of the shoots. The slight check in growth leads to the production of short jointed limbs and the formation of strong, healthy fruit buds. Here and There. Favorable reports come from the win-

HINTS TO POULTRYMEN.

Tentllating Poultry Rouses Without Causing Draughts on the Fowls. The first objects now with poultry keepers, and particularly with those wh delitor of The New York World makes the following suggestions:

Success in poultry keeping depends largely in the selection of a breed that is suited to the special requirements of the locality where it is to be reared. One of the first considerations is the soil. For, while almost any breed can be kept on a dry, sandy, chalk or gravel soil, there are many varieties that will not thrive where it is not out of place to mention some of the recent innovations on the old time methods of fattening the animals, and especially hogs, preparatory to converting them into pork and bacon. As long as corn is grown in this counare making a specialty of egg production, tight as possible, and all fissures, especially about the doors and windows, to hen houses has been favorably reported upon by many, not only because this sper is tarred felting

The question of ventilation is an in portant one and worthy of consideration The ventilation gained, however, at the expense of warmth does more harm than fowls create more disease than no ventilation at all. Not a few noultry keeper make holes in one end of the house, and et the air get in and out the best way it can. Others build their houses with the boards a little apart in order to pro-vide a current of air, and then wonder why there is no profit in poultry. Better far no ventilation in winter, except what is gained during the day by opening the doors and windows, than this reck-ess exposure of the fowls to draughts. But, explains the agricultural editor of The New York World, authority for the foregoing, there is a happy medium between the two extremes of draught and no ventilation. One plan is to form a small chamber about midway between the eaves of the apex of the roof with boards, and then place at the end of this chamber a ventilating trap. By this means there will be a current through means there will be a current through the ventilating chamber that will carry off the vitiated air without causing draughts in the house itself. Wright advises for the ordinary poultry house an opening at the highest point of the roof, surmounted by a "lantern" of boards put together in the well known fashion of Venetian blinds.

It must be horse in mind that the air

It must be borne in mind that the air It must be borne in mind that the air of a poultry house does not become foul so quickly in cold as in hot weather, and therefore that much in the way of ventilation may be done by airing the houses during the day, and employing some absorbent, such as dry soil, on the floor. It is wise to sprinkle the floor often with some good disinfectant. Land plaster is a ready absorbent of odors. Another chesp disinfectant is sulphate of copper, diluted in water.

Comb Foundation

Prof. A. J. Cook in his guide to her eeping, has the following to say on omb foundation: German thought and Yankee inge nuity have devised means for giving the bee a start in the important yet expensive work of comb building, and hence the origin of another great aid to the spiarist-comb foundation. For more than thirty years the Germans have used He was also the first to suggest the idea casonable. Satisfaction guaranteed of rollers. It was not until 1874, how. JOHN D. BOAZ. of rollers. It was not until 1874, how ever, that Frederick Weiss, a German invented a machine which brought the foundation into general use here. In 1876 Mr. A. I. Root brought the roller machine and foundation into general use. Since that time improvements have been made on the machines both by Mr. Root and others. All of the improved machines give foundation of exquisite mold, and with such rapidity that it can be made cheap and practicable. As Mr. Heddon says, "The bees, in two days, with foundation, will do more than they would in eight days without." All who wish success must use foundation often in the brood chamber and always in the sections, unless nice white comb is at hand may well own a machine for himself. though it usually pays better to purchas the foundation. The process of making the foundation is very simple. Thin are pressed between the plates or passed between the rolls, which are made so as to stamp either drone or worker founda tion as desired. Worker is best, I think, even for sections.

SUCCESSFUL POULTRY RAISING.

Sensible and Plain Suggestions from Practical Poultry Grower In a paper read before a Massachusette farmers' club Mr. A. C. Hawkins, of Lancaster, Mass., recently made a number of useful suggestions, among them the following: Don't make poultry a side issue if you want to succeed. Many of the most sucressful poultry raisers are women, they having the patience and tact and intelligent application necessary. Start with small numbers and study the steps, read the poultry papers and magazines and learn what others are doing and how they are doing it.

A house for 100 fowls should be 50 feet long by 12 wide, divided into two pens, and on each end of the house an open shed 25 feet long by 12 wide. The and should be gravelly to avoid nposes; there should be six inches of clean, sandy gravel in the house, and a foot of dry leaves in the shed. A gravel-ly, well drained soil is best for a poultry house, as dampness causes sickness. A southeast exposure is best.
