SAM JONES.

We propose to talk this morning on the word, "Home," and perhaps that one word embraces more this side of the grave than almost any word in our language. Home! I believe in the first place that home is essential and true manhood, true womanhood. The idle tramp is a hopeless wanderer through the country. I saw some statistical statements a few days ago that there were twelve millions of homes in the United States, allowing five people to each home. That would give us sixty million of our American people in homes. Homes foster family prayer; homes foster moral influence; homes foster social purity; home makes a people patriotic. As I said home makes a man patriotic, and a man will fight for his home; a man will die for his home; but who would fight for a boarding house. Now you imagine a fellow with a pistol or a gun going to the front to fight for a boarding house; a man is not going to do that. I have heard men say all kinds of bad things about boarding houses, but I never heard anybody take it up. There is a many a life ruined by boarding houses; I tell you when a man takes his wife to a boarding house and puts up if he don't get into trouble he is pretty lucky. Every man ought to have his home when he marries, but of course it does not make much difference in a small town like this, but you take cities where women board. We ought to be the best people in the world, because more of us have homes than any people under the shining sun. Take the physical home; I believe in the first place that home ought to be the brightest and cleanest place in the world. They say cleanliness is next to Godliness. Coming up from Nashville to Bowling Green I had to take Memphis Junction before I got to Bowling Green. If cleanliness is next to Godliness, I believe home ought to be the cleanest, the brightest and the most cleanly place in the world.

When I go to a man's house and see his fences all out of repair, two or three window blinds down and the door steps decaying I will say if you could see this fellow's character it is just about like his home. By going to a man's farm I can tell what sort of a fellow lives there by the way he keeps up his farm.

We will consider three things as essential to happiness. A good home, a good wife and a good cow. A sorry wife and a sorry home, either one of these things will make a fellow go through much tribulation, if he comes at all. A little wife presides within the home and she gives thrift and character almost to the entire home. A neat house, tidy wife—why, a man can not hardly help being a gentleman that has got such a wife, but a fellow that has got an old, slovenly, untidy, uncleanly wife, I don't see how he can be a first-class man. I don't, I don't. Let me say this to you. A man's wife determines largely what he is in the world, the way she runs home. Why, some women would not put up with some of our men. I know a farmer can not dress like a dandy, but an old farmer who will go out and work in the field all day, and at night come home all dirty and sweaty and sit down to the supper table with those old clothes on, and then his poor little wife has got to live down and sleep with that old sweaty, stinking case. It is an outrage! I had rather sleep with a wet dog and be done with it.

And you will say Sam Jones is just going on with his foolishness, I am not; I am talking good religion. And on the other hand, I hate to see a husband that is justly ashamed of his wife. "Wife, you don't look nice this morning." I tell you, women, I never did understand it. A woman at home that don't care how she looks, but when she is going to church or going down town she wants to look just as nice as possible. A woman that says, "If I could just look nice to my husband and children, I don't care how I look to the rest of the world," would be a good example. Water is free and there is no excuse for dirt. I like to see the pillow cases white and the counterpane as white and as beautiful. You need not have a carpet, but make the floor shine like silver. They are the nicest homes I ever saw in my life.

I went to a house once, and they asked me to stay for dinner, I saw through the window into the kitchen and told them I had an engagement. Another thing I never did understand this sort of a woman: She will let her husband and children sit down to any sort of a meal; and some day her husband will say "Wife, I am going to bring Mr. so and so to dinner with me to-morrow, and the next day when he walks in she has the nicest dinner imaginable for the other woman's husband. If my wife was to fix up a better dinner for some other woman's husband—and the woman that will fix up for any other man on God's earth nicer than she will for her husband, she has got wrong ideas, ain't she? Some of you would be very much mistaken, but you ought to think that you have got the nicest husband in the world. I like to see a woman that thinks her husband is the greatest fellow that ever walked the earth.

An old slovenly woman can raise about five "gals" and "spile" a whole State of men; it's right I believe we preachers, brother Lewis, out to preach more about this sort of a thing, don't you? We are talking about the New Jerusalem. My Lord brother, we are not there yet. New Jerusalem! If some of you women don't keep your homes any better in Heaven than you do on earth, I declare the angels will never go to see you but once. A woman ought to see to it that her husband looks nice too. I know that Brother Lewis and Brother Stagg's wives have a hard job, but they can do the best they can.

There is no excuse for a woman not keeping everything at rights about the house. I make some exceptions where the woman's health is ill; but sister if you have got daughters grown then you have got to do it. You raise them right, but you never raise them often enough, there is where you break down.

BLOODTHIRSTY INDIANS.
Two Hundred and Fifty Bucks on The Warpath.

Denver, Colo., April 28.—The long threatened war of the Navajo Indians against the settlers of the country in the vicinity of their lands has come at last, and with it the death of eight settlers. Two hundred bucks are raising the disturbance.

They are all mounted and equipped with the best repeating rifles, and have ample supplies for a long war. They are a bad lot, and reveling in plunder and murder. There has been ill feeling among them for a long time, and it has at last come to a head. The settlers down in that country and the Indians never could get along in peace.

The Indians are continually plundering and stealing from the whites, who have submitted to the thefts until the past few days.

The present conflict was precipitated by the resistance of the whites to the depredations of a band of warriors, who raided the stocks of the cattle men.

They drove off a large herd of cattle. Which they took to the mountains. This so incensed the stockmen that they organized a large party and went to recover the cattle.

The Indians fled on the approach of the cow-boys at first, and the cattle men were rejoicing at what they thought a very easy victory, and after they had secured their cattle started to return to their ranges. They had proceeded but a very short distance, however, when they were attacked from the flank as they were passing through a sort of shallow canyon by a desperate encounter followed, in which five cow-boys were killed, and it is believed, a number of Indians. The real men of course had the advantage.

The cow-boys took with them a portion of the herd of cattle which they had recovered and retreated. The Indians by this time were thoroughly aroused, and started on a marauding expedition across the country.

The reservation of the Navajo's is a large one, covering some 12,000 square miles in the north-western part of New Mexico and North-eastern Arizona, and extends up to the southern line of Colorado. On this there are thousands of Indians who are liable to go on the warpath.

Pathetic Double Drowning.
Princeton, Ky., April 30.—At Le-masco today a 2 year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey, while playing around a cistern accidentally tumbled in. The mother lowered her 10 year old boy into the cistern with a window curtain, not having any rope about the place. The improvised rope broke, and the boy fell in 10 feet of water. The mother ran to a neighbor's house and procured assistance, and when the boy was rescued he had the dead blue in his arms and was in a semi-conscious state. He died shortly afterward.

Died at 104.
Indianapolis, Ind., April 28.—Mrs. Ellen O'Connor died at her home in this city tonight at the age of 104 years. She was a native of Ireland and is believed to have been the oldest person in the State.

HOLT HELD OVER.

LEWIS LAND AND ALBERT CARTER WAIVE AN EXAMINATION.

Now for Circuit Court.

Morganfield, April 28.—The examining of W. H. Holt was resumed today. Holt claims that he and Thomson were both unarmed, and went to prevent Frank Holt from going into the difficulty. It is probable that he will be released. Carter and Land have announced that they waive an examining trial. Lewis Land is trying to work the insanity dodge, and when questioned by his lawyers this morning all that could be gotten out of him was that "a little bird keeps flitting, keeps flitting, and telling me to make a confession." It is thought that the really guilty parties are now in jail. The public is desirous of their punishment, but doubt that any of them will be convicted under the present mode of trial; that is, each being allowed a separate hearing. It has been facetiously remarked that it will finally be proved that the girl committed suicide.

At the conclusion of Will Holt's examining trial the prisoner, was held over. It was generally supposed that he, like Henry and Thomson, would be turned loose.

Lewis Land and Albert Carter waived an examining trial. This ends the matter until July, when the case of the prisoners will be called in the Circuit Court.

DANIEL HUDSON BURNHAM.

Daniel Hudson Burnham Chief Constructor of the World's Fair was born in Jefferson county, N. J., in 1846, but has lived in Chicago since he was nine years old. Mr. Burnham has planned and executed the construction of nearly all the beautiful Fair Buildings. He has had a heavy and responsible task to complete but has done this well. His name will always remain associated with the Fair.

He is an engineer of great ability and has to a great extent revolutionized the system in farmer use. In Chicago the twenty-two story Manning Temple and many other huge structures are worthy monuments to his skill and taste.

THE WEED.

In all its forms to be in Kentucky's Exhibit at the Fair—One Display Highly Creditable to Kentucky.

Kentucky's tobacco exhibit for the World's Fair left this city last Tuesday, Dr. Clardy in charge of the shipment.

The structure and the general exhibit will be the finest display of tobacco ever made in the world.

A pavilion will be especially erected, the sides of which are woven of twisted tobacco. The lower panels of the roof are made of tobacco, and in each one is some design woven of different colored tobaccos. Daniel Boone's picture and the coat of arms of the State are in the longest panels, while over the main entrance to the pavilion is the word "Kentucky." The whole structure is of the Oriental style of architecture and surmounted by spires and minarets, all of tobacco.

Inside this pavilion are arranged the display cases showing all the kinds of tobacco raised in this State. The exhibit will do credit to the State. Mr. Shunkleton will leave for Chicago, when notified by Dr. Clardy, to help him in the details of the final arrangement of the exhibit.—Louisville Commercial.

Given a Life Sentence.

Paducah, April 30.—John Hildebrand, was yesterday found guilty of murder in the first degree in the Livingston Circuit Court and sentenced to the penitentiary for life. Hildebrand lived on a shanty boat between this city and Smithland, and one day last fall picked up his child and buried it against the side of the boat. He afterwards stamped on it and it was dead when picked up. He was captured after a long chase and narrowly escaped lynching.

Weatherford Tex., April 29.—A cyclone this afternoon struck Cisco, a town of 1,200 inhabitants, on the

NEEDED REFORM BEGUN.

Work of the Pension Bureau Facilitated and Examiners Instructed to Use Extreme Caution.

Washington, April 26.—The Acting Commissioner of Pensions, Mr. D. I. Murphy, has transferred about fifty clerks who have heretofore been employed on what is known as statistical work, but which, so far as he can see, is of no value to the office, to current work in order to facilitate the bringing up of the business to date. Mr. Murphy is decidedly of the opinion that among the 958,000 pensioners on the rolls of the bureau there are many fraudulent cases, and, with a view to purging the lists of such as can be reached, he has issued an order to special Examiners in the field directing them to use all diligence in a searching out such cases as require the attention of the bureau. The order is, in part, as follows:

"The examiners are instructed to use extreme caution and discrimination as it is not the intention to disturb any just allowances of pensions, nor is it intended that special examiners should be made parties to the petty quarrels and spite work of unfriendly neighbors. In addition to making inquiry of those with whom the special examiner comes in contact while engaged in the examination of claims, it is believed that postmasters (especially in rural districts) may be relied upon to furnish accurate information. In the larger towns and cities, information may be sought from the real veterans of the war who believed that 'the pension roll should be a roll of honor,' members of Council, Aldermen, Assessors and such other persons who may be found to possess information in their various neighborhoods. But all statements so obtained should corroborated before the matter is reported to the Bureau."

DEATH DEALERS.

Cyclones Carry Death, Destruction and Terror Upon Their Wings.

Oklahoma City, O. T., April 26.—Two distinct cyclones, a terrific hail storm and a watery storm combined to wreak awful destruction on the newly-built towns in Oklahoma last night. It is reported that sixty-two human lives were sacrificed. It is positively known that over forty persons were killed, while several were fatally and seriously injured. The damage to property is incalculable.

Orders for thirty-one coffins have been received here and at Norman, and supplies have been telegraphed for from other points.

The brunt of the storm laid upon the prosperous little town of Norman, on the Santa Fe railroad, about twenty miles south of here. At that point thirty-one people were killed, dozens injured and the town almost completely destroyed. There a pall has overspread the town, business is suspended and everybody able to render any assistance to the poor unfortunate or toward removing the dead bodies are out searching along the track of the cyclone.

Further on, the towns of Down and Keokuk Falls fared but little better. The towns were nearly devastated and scores of people injured fatally and otherwise, though the loss of life here will not be as serious as at Norman.

The first signs of the impending danger were seen late yesterday afternoon in a pall of the black clouds overshadowing the northwest for miles around, while further to the west, rushing across the horizon, could be seen the cyclone. Men left their business places and hurried to their homes, where all who could sought the cyclone caves. At 7:30 o'clock the monster from the west reached its antagonist in the north-west, and with their combined strength swooped down on the town of Moore. Houses, with precious lives were caught up and carried before the angry torrent, great trees were twisted off, and barns, fences and everything in its path were swept low.

Passing along for eight miles, it struck the town of Norman, where the damage was repeated, and then to Down and Keokuk Falls and Pottawatomie county, where thousands of dollars' worth of property was destroyed.

At Langston, a negro town about twelve miles from Guthrie, thirty houses were carried away, and fourteen people killed. The negroes are panic-stricken. They are overcome with a superstition that the last day has come, and that Langston will be depopulated. They have no money and no energy, and if they remain in Langston can only do it by aid from the outside.

Weatherford Tex., April 29.—A cyclone this afternoon struck Cisco, a town of 1,200 inhabitants, on the

KENTUCKY "IN IT."

The Corn Cracker Occupies a Front Seat at the Great Fair.

A Chicago special to the Courier-Journal, May 1, says:

Kentucky Building, World's Fair, May 1.—Kentucky, ever modest, but ever "getting there," was not in the background to-day. When the great show opened in the proverbial blaze of glory, she sparkled like the gem she is. Her notables were among the notables on the stand where the central figure of the day stood. When Mr. Cleveland's speech ended and he touched the button that elicited a scene unparalleled in history, Kentuckians and ex-Kentuckians were about him. John G. Carlisle, the one who is to come after, and he as great, perhaps greater than he, was on his right. Carter Harrison, a Kentuckian, was with the Governor as the chief host of the day. Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, Kentuckians, had seats of honor between and just behind the President and the Duke of Veragua. Kentuckians were sprinkled about in the sea of upturned faces that moved and stretched away into the very vastness of the inland sea, and creditable Kentucky exhibits were sprinkled about among the wealth of exhibits that made the White City a veritable fairy-land.

The Kentucky Pavilion was one of the first rooms visited by the President when he went to assist in the dedication of the building that stands a monument to the development of American womanhood. President Dulaney, of the Kentucky Commission, and the Courier-Journal correspondent were the only Kentuckians who had seats on the President's stand. There were, however, less than a thousand people all told on this particular stand. They represented every part of the globe, and it required more luck and determined nerve than desire or prominence to secure a seat there. Once obtained, though, it afforded a sight never seen before, never to come again, and one that the myriads and the myriads below could not behold. Half of the two hundred thousand people who passed the growing Kentucky building in the strolls after the ceremonies of the day looked up at it with familiar marks of recognition. Each had something to say, like: "There stands old Kaintuck," or "there's 'The Old Kentucky Home.'" Kentucky and Kentuckians have well used the fund that they sought so hard to obtain, and they have nothing to-day, nor will they have anything during the days of the Exposition, of which to be ashamed.

At Leitchfield the rope was called into use to make three negroes tell what they knew of a robbery. They told and are now in jail.

Louisville is trying mightily hard to be good. An awful howl is being raised about the gamblers in that city. It will all blow over directly.

Let all who want a new school house hold up their hands:

Now let all who are willing to help pay for it hold up their hands:

Louisville voted to appropriate the $1,000,000 for the State Capital, if this will move the seat of government to the Falls City. The vote, however, was very tight, being 5,921 to 1,130, a total of 6151 cast out of about 30,000.

Sam Jones is a success and is doing a great work towards making the world better. If there were a few hundred of his kind scattered over the country, there would be less room for grumbling at the inadequacy of the courts to prevent crime.

The National Republican League will hold a convention in Louisville next week, beginning the 9th and continuing until the 11th. The Republican National Committee will hold a meeting at the same time and place. Some of the most prominent men of the party are expected to be present and to speak.

The legislature is at last getting down to work. A bill has been introduced to prevent the transportation of bears along the public highways without they (the bears and not the roads), are caged. This begins to look like business, and the remaining few months should be assiduously devoted to the settlement of the great bear question.

One Purchase editor is in the swim. Mr. J. R. Lemon, editor of Benton Tribune, has been appointed postmaster at Benton. He will make a good one too. It might be appropriate to remark in this connection that the Benton Tribune and Paducah Standard were the latest Stone papers in the district, in the fight between Stone and the other candidates for the nomination. The editor of each has drawn a good prize and is happy.

The national debt increased $3,720,819 in April.

Turn out on the first Saturday in June and select good school trustees, and while you have your hand in, go to the Democratic precinct meeting and help make good nominees.

An exchange says that an account of his opposition to Gov. Brown Col. Benton Sims who is a candidate for re-election to the Legislature in Tigg county, will probably have a hard fight to win. It would be interesting to know what "opposition" means in this connection.

The smartest lunatic in the State is in the asylum at Hopkinsville. His home was in Warren county, and after being adjudged of unsound mind he went alone from Bowling Green to the asylum. This is the only instance of the kind on record.—Pondleton Democrat.

Some of the papers in the district are printing Judge Robertson out of the next race for Congress, because of ill health. Judge Robertson has been quite poorly for the past six months, but he has been undergoing repairs, and the job promises now to be as good or better than when it was new. We have no idea what Judge Robertson's intentions are, but if he continues to mend, we are very glad to predict that had health will not keep him out of the tussle.—Mayfield Mirror.

She has a sister (Mrs. Cash), who is 91 years of age, is in good health, and sprightly as most women of 60. As very few people die of old age, we should strive to be ready when the summons may come "for in such hour as ye think not the son of man cometh."

To Carry Water For Spraying.

As spraying is an entirely preventive treatment, it must be commenced early, and timely preparations should be made so that all the apparatus will be ready for use. It is a hard task to carry water for a hand sprayer. To rig a barrel on wheels is no easy job without a deal of blacksmith work, and then the heavy

The School.

According to the census reports made by the trustees this year, there are 337 school children in the Marion district, a gain of 36 over last year. If the public money amounts to the same as last year, the district will have $872 with which to employ teachers. In a town of the size of Marion, and in a community of our pretensions this sum is not more than half enough for the purposes designated. The number of pupils that attend the school demands at least five teachers; if the school accomplishes real good work it will be necessary to employ a principal, who should be a man of learning and experience; to secure the right man, at least $75 per month would be necessary. The other four teachers should be good ones, and should be selected because of their fitness, and not because of cheapness. The free school should be a term of at least six months, and the term ought to be eight months. It can readily be seen that $872 is not sufficient to pay the teachers. The sum should be supplemented by at least $800, and this sum should be levied upon a favorable vote of the people. The vote should be taken and the school officials should see that the proper steps for getting the census of the people are taken at once. If we fail in everything else, let us have a good school, a good public school. The community is able, let us hope that it is willing.

And still no new P. M.

Death Doings.

Mrs. Mary A. Cardin wife of the well known farmer and politician, Mr. A. H. Cardin, of this county, died at her home seven miles from Marion Tuesday night, at 12 o'clock, after several weeks illness. The funeral will take place this morning at 10 o'clock from the residence, the remains will be placed to rest in the family cemetery on the farm. No woman in the country had a larger circle of friends and acquaintances; her pleasant country home was a popular resort for her many friends, who always found genuine hospitality. She was a good christian woman, an ardent and faithful member of the Presbyterian church of this place. Her good works and works will perpetuate her memory for many, many years in Crittenden county, where her long and useful life was spent.

Mrs. Lydia Clark died at her home a few miles from Marion Friday, of heart disease. She was in her 67th year, and was a good christian lady, loved and respected. Her maiden name was Paris, she was a sister of Eld. W. F. Paris. She is the first of a family of nine children to die, and the youngest of the nine is now fifty-one years old. Several children survive her.

Mrs. Cynthia De'oe, a venerable old lady of the Crayneville neighborhood, died last night. She was the relict of Phillip Deboe who died during the war, and is the mother of Messrs A. A. and Phil Deboe, the well-known citizens of the eastern portion of the county. She was loved and respected as a good christian woman.

Mrs. Drennan, widow of the late D. J. Drennan, died at her home in the Repton neighborhood Friday.

Mr. John Patton, formerly a citizen of this county, died at his home in Livingston county last week.

Dan Moss, colored, died Tuesday. He lived on A. H. Cardin's farm.

A Morganfield correspondent says: "Attorneys for the defense of W. H. Holt have issued a writ of habeas corpus in the latter's interest and the argument as to whether Holt shall be released upon bond will be presented before Judge M. C. Givens, at Henderson, on Mon. Henry Powell's return. The incarceration of W. H. Holt without bond met with the general and unqualified approval of our people, and the movement looking to his release is not regarded here with much favor. It is suggested by many to be an insidious play for a coup later on in the game to divert Mr. Holt's testimony away from his brother and other connections in the direction of shifting the crime of Abbie Oliver's murder, and the wounding of Taylor Gliver, upon the shoulders of Lewis Land and Albert Carter—especially the latter."

A party of youngsters spent yesterday picnicking on Piney. The following attended:

The heirs of John T. Black have sold to the coal privileges under a tract of land in this county to the Cumberland Coal Company, of Nashville, Tenn. The company expects to mine the coal, which is said to be a very fine article.

Mr. John Steamaker, a river bottom farmer, was in town Tuesday. He was not feeling especially merry over the outlook for an early corn crop. He has sixty acres just coming up nicely and the water is creeping over it.

Mr. J. H. Ramage is building J. A. Hurley's house. He has the contract for building McIntires. If you want carpenter work of any character, it will be to your interest to see him.

The late grand jury found one bill against the Marion distillers. The jury accuses them of selling less than five gallons of liquor to Buel Hughes.

Crittenden Springs.

Mr. R. W. Wilson, of Marion, was in the city yesterday, and while here transferred the Crittenden Springs property to Mr. S. M. Jenkins. Mr. Jenkins will place this magnificent property under first-class management and will formally open it to the public June 15.

The Crittenden Springs hotel is one of the finest in the western and southern country. It is a three story building with 100 rooms and thoroughly equipped with all modern improvements and handsomely furnished throughout. The house is provided with electric bell's throughout, and a system of water-works owned by the hotel management. Ample facilities for hot and cold fresh water or sulphur baths. For more than a generation the Crittenden sulphur has been noted far and wide for its many virtues.

A reporter of the Journal called upon Mr. Jenkins yesterday and was informed by him that he would capitalize the property at $100,000, including in the capitalization the mineral rights which are regarded as very valuable. There are strong evidences of silver and a well known vein of lead—being the same vein that was operated by the Columbia Lead and Zinc Co. Mr. Jenkins is to be congratulated upon coming into possession of such valuable property, and we have no doubt that in the next few years the stockholders in the enterprise will count themselves fortunate indeed.—Henderson Journal.

They Know Good Things.

Some two weeks ago when the agent of the firm that put the iron fence around the public square completed the work, he received a county order for eight hundred and some odd dollars. The order was payable out of the levy of 1893, and draws eight per cent. interest from date until paid. When the matter became known, it was supposed that the order would be for sale, and the aforesaid agent began to get offers for it. Each day developed new would-be-purchasers, and better offers. Finally the owner was heard to remark, as he received the face value of the order together with a neat premium: "This little town and county has more money in it than any I have visited in many a year, and I am always traveling, too." Paper, secured by real estate can find money at 8 per cent.; county orders bearing 6 per cent. interest go at a premium; Marion precinct railroad bonds are with home folks, a long ways more preferable than gold. The truth is, Marion and Crittenden county are both in the swim, and the real, live man, and good manager, is making money over and above a living.

Declared Insane.

Yesterday Mrs. Bagwell, wife of Mr. J. R. Bagwell, of Sheridan, was before Police Judge Hearin on a writ of lunacy. A jury declared her insane and she will be taken to Hopkinsville. Some years ago the unfortunate woman's mind was in a similar impaired condition; after a few months in the asylum she recovered and came home.

Monday night Sheriff Francis locked up the establishment of E. S. Farmer & Co., the grocery firm doing business on Main street. The attachment was served at the instance of A. Bonn & Co., of Evansville, who have filed suit to collect a debt of $60. The goods are still attached, and will probably remain in that condition until Circuit Court. Since the attachment was run, other claims have come in against the firm.

A merchant's maxim, goods well bought are half sold. To sell goods is to price them low. To buy goods low and to price them low means a sure sale.

Better to sell $3 worth at a small margin, than to keep $1 worth, expecting to sell at a Dutchman's 01 per cent.

A rolling stone gathers no moss, but a turning dollar will buy a house. The above is said by S. D. Hodge & Co., who have on hand an immense stock, consisting of dry goods, dress goods, trimmings to match, clothing, gente furnishings goods, shoes, slippers, hats, etc.

Yours respectfully,

SPRAYING.

What to Spray For, When to Spray and What to Spray With.

Here is some spraying information boiled down originally for The Farm Journal and containing pointers for readers in every locality.

Spray for the early fall of the leaf of the pear, apple, quince, cherry, currant, the cracking of the year: the rot of the cherry, plum and grape; apple scab; rust of the strawberry and blackberry; leaf and potato blight and rot. These diseases are caused by fungi, and these fungi can be rendered largely inert by spraying.

Spray also to prevent damage by insects, by leaf lice, apple worms, apple maggots, borers, leaf slugs, curculio, currant worms, cabbage worms and the potato beetle; also by lice and flies on animals and in chicken houses, and for musty collars, bad drains and sinks.

The Bordeaux mixture seems to be all that is necessary for most species of fungi. Here is one formula for making it: Put 30 gallons of clean water in a barrel, put four pounds of sulphate of copper in a coarse sack and suspend it in the water just below the surface. In about 12 hours the sack will be empty. When two or three pounds of lime are thoroughly slaked under water and cooled, stir well, and after it is partially settled pour off the milk of the lime and add it to the copper solution, straining it through a piece of bagging. This takes out the bulk of the lime sediment, and as it is again stirred as it goes into the sprayer there is little chance of clogging the nozzle. After the lime water is added the barrel is filled with clean water to the amount of 45 or 50 gallons, and the mixture is ready for use. Stir well before filling the sprayer.

Paris green is the material for leaf eating insects. When fungi and insects are to be met at the same time, the Paris green is to be mixed with the Bordeaux mixture, three or four ounces to a barrel of water. Take five pounds of tobacco stems, steep them in three gallons of water for three hours, strain the concoction and add sufficient water to make seven gallons. This is for spraying insects, such as lice on plants and animals, and kills by contact. Carbonate of copper dissolved in ammonia is a sure fungicide, is largely recommended and used, but it is more expensive than the Bordeaux mixture. It has to be cooked to keep, and we do not see that it is any way superior to the Bordeaux mixture. Where the preparation can be had ready mixed, as coprolins, it answers first rate. By spraying the potato plant every two weeks with this mixture some solutions it will be defended against the fungus, which causes the rot.

Spray all plants and fruit trees before they blossom, never while in blossom. Use no Paris green then. Then spray after the blossoms fall and every two or three weeks all summer. Use Paris green when leaf eating insects appear. This is soon after the first warm days come. Spray with tobacco water for lice on bark or leaf whenever visible. Look sharp for them.

A Cheap Wagon Jack. Oiling wagons is one of those little jobs, so common about the farm, which are always disagreeable if one has not something convenient with which to do them. Without a wagon jack it requires two persons, even for a light wagon, to avoid getting under it one side of the axle and greasing the wheels. Yet it is one of those simple operations for which good economy will not warrant the purchase of a high priced patent implement.

The one shown in the cut was originally described in The Rural New Yorker as possessing the merit of cheapness and effectiveness. All that is required in its construction are short pole three pieces of 2 by 4 measuring three feet four bolts and a piece of wire, while it can be very quickly made. The pole simply acts as a lever and is held at the right height by hooking the wire over a spike or bolt located in one side of the frame. Two of these spikes will easily regulate the height of the front and back wheels.

Important Points in Tile Drainage. Mr. Chamberlain of Ohio is reported to have said, in an address on tile drainage, that the upper ends of the laterals should be closed by small flat stones and made as secure as a joint of tiling. Water should enter there just as much as at other points and no more—that is, enter at the narrow crack. It is also very important that the outlets should be well guarded. Muskrats, crawfish and other animals are quite likely to crawl up the drains and die, and their remains will stop up the tile and cause a great deal of trouble. This may be prevented by placing before the outlet of the drain a galvanized wire screen with meshes of a quarter of an inch in size and fastening it by stakes.

"WITH DIVINE UNCTION."

REV. SAM JONES DELIVERS
GOD'S MESSAGE OF SAL-VATION TO LOST MEN.

A Well Known Baptist Preacher's
Opinion of the Noted
Evangelist.

EDITOR PRESS:—I spent three days at Paducah expressly to hear Sam Jones preach, and as the question, "What do you think of him?" is so often propounded to me, with your permission I will express an opinion through the columns of the Press:

There is only one Sam Jones in this world, never has been, nor is it probable there ever will be again. There are many Jones' that now live and have lived, and doubtless will continue to live to bless or curse the world, as the case may be; thousands of whom may hear the Christian name of Sam, but it is not the name, "the mind that makes the man," and can only be measured by his deeds and their effect on the world of mankind. His person, I will say of him as said the ancient prophet of the coming Saviour of the world, "There is no beauty in him that we should desire him." Personally he is not a striking man; he is medium in size, and rather thin in appearance, has dark hair, eyes and mustache; his personality helps him; from his looks you would expect little, but you get so much that you are overwhelmingly surprised; his style; he reads a passage of scripture, and then lays down the Bible; he uses neither manuscript or notes; he is slow, seemingly weighs every word and sentence before utterance. He speaks in a conversational tone, yet clear and distinct. He holds his vast audiences "spell bound" from beginning to finish and leaves them longing for more.

His matter, I liked it, it has the true ring. "It is the old, old story of Jesus and his love," and it comes from a warm, earnest heart. He believes what he preaches, and he has a Sam Jones way of preaching it, but you won't mind that, you'll like it. Every Christian will like it, and sinners from the worst to the best, (if there are any best), well, if they don't like it, they don't say anything against it, but come right back and rush for the nearest seat to hear more. "His slang!" I have read a great deal in the paper, since the noted evangelist began his career as a revivalist, about his "slang," his indecent language, in fact the innumerable criticisms of the secular press on his style of preaching, the doctrines he preaches and the object of his extensive itinerating until I confess that I was not only not friendly toward the evangelist and his work, but a little prejudiced against him, fearing that he was doing the cause of Christ's religion an injury. But after hearing him repeatedly with all the impartiality that I am capable of, and I think with an unprejudiced mind, and prayerful heart, I feel impelled to say that I am disarmed of all criticism, either of the doctrines he preached, his style of preaching or his "slang," as it is called. The great evangelist does use many words in the pulpit, and in a way, not common in the pulpit of our times; but his words are pure English, though many of them, on purpose, pronounces incorrectly, and some of his sentences would be pronounced by the average school teacher, "bad grammar." He has a purpose in this. He pitches his words to the same key, he talks to men from the pulpit just as he does on the streets or elsewhere. His is the parlance of the common people and they hear him gladly.

What do you think of Sam Jones? every one asks every one this question. My answer is, he is preeminently a godly man, in dead earnest to raise Christianity to a higher plane, to win souls to Christ, to stay the rushing, surging tide of evil influences that threaten the people, that threaten to engulf them in the vortex of moral and social ruin, and to elevate and make better his fellow man. "What personal magnetism he has to draw such vast crowds!" He has no personal magnetism. He's not an orator. His gestures are largely noticeable. His voice is not musical. The magnetic power by which he holds the ear of the people, is God's message of salvation to lost men, which he delivers with divine unction. J. W. C.

A Death in Lyon County.

Mr. Henry Lady, a prominent and well known citizen residing in Lyon county near Eddyville, died yesterday. His illness began a few days ago with a congestive chill and he never rallied from its effects. The decease was about 70 years of age and was well-to-do. He leaves a number of children and relatives besides a wife and brother. His remains were buried today at the family burying grounds. During the cyclone in 1890, which blew down the Cumberland river bridge, his home was blown and injured. When he recovers he said it was the work of the devil. It is related of him during his last illness, that he ordered one of his farm hands to go at once for a physician and not delay, as the future before him seemed very dark. This announcement startled those who knew him intimately and were acquainted with his eccentric qualities.—Paducah News.

ALL GIRLS.

Five Little Beauties Appear in Eleven Months.

Little Rock, Ark., April 28.—Mrs. L. E. Finney, the pretty young wife of L. E. Finney, a prosperous young merchant at Hannibal, Ark., has distinguished herself by presenting her husband with five bouncing baby girls all within the short space of eleven months.

Last May Mrs. Finney gave birth to two pretty little girl babies both of whom are living, and are fine-looking well-developed children for their age. Yesterday Mrs. Finney increased the family by three, and all girls at that. Mrs. Finney is a plump, healthy-looking woman of about 22 and weighs 140. Her husband is 30 years old and the very type of masculine beauty.

Painted Male Idiots.

Painted men exist. They are to be seen in London. They are the newest franks of melancholy. They have exhausted all other forms of beauty and would now entertain the world with their freckled visages, says a writer in the Boston Herald.

The first of this species that I encountered diffused soft scents. He sat opposite me toying with a soap suds and murmuring the platitudes of Picaudilly to an amazed spinster at his right. Before the dinner was finished he had whipped out a silver-mounted fan and was waving it gently before his ornamental brow. Over the coffee he produced perfumed cigarettes and the atmosphere became like that of a perfume's on a hot day in August. His fingers were covered with jewels, and he wore a dainty bracelet on his left wrist. He was a creature of most exquisite decoration, and I watched him throughout the courses in silent wonder. Once in the course of general talk I whispered to my host a question as to the identity of this marvel, and the answer came that the painted being was the son of a Scotch peer. That any thing so frail could be Scotch made amazement greater. The creature was ineffable, and he purred at the company, never openly addressing it. He had, perhaps, three ideas in his head, but he adroitly concealed them. His finest accomplishment was in looking at the ladies. He fancied that he made captive every fair head at the table; but I learned afterward that the sex nickered him in the drawing room while we were smoking, and that their laughter, which rippled down the stairs, was at the cost of this decorative person who was boring us over the walnuts and the wine.

Soon after this I saw another specimen of this new fashion in tressed humanity. Strangely enough, the second painted man was encountered at an orchestra. They were doing Gounod's "Redemption" at the Albert hall, and the thing was in the box adjoining ours. What it wanted there; what satisfaction it could capture from an orchestra I can never guess. It did not listen once in three hours. It gabbled. It was, for all the world like a hybrid of turkey and peacock. It gabbled and chuckled; it spread its superb tailoring; it extended its ringed hands; it adressed itself in a pocket mirror; it posed; it languished; it never smiled, and it was 30 years old, if a day—and fat.

Having encountered two of these creatures, I kept a vigil for others of their kind. Was it possible that a new fashion in man had been projected? Evidently yes, because my watch revealed companions to the primary pair. At a reception the other night I espied a being more wonderful than either of the two who started my quest. He was "made up" like a second-rate prima donna. His cheeks had an even pinkness most delicately laid on. His neither eyes were penciled, his hands were undeniably lined. He was a pattern in rouse, and he looked for all the world like one of Mme. Tussaud's wax images, except that he was much better dressed than any doll in Marylebone road. He is, I am informed, a man of wealth and 40 summers. It is alleged that he has a culture, and that he shows it in his writings about art and music. Wherefore, the wonder increases that any cultured being can paint himself.

But it is to this that the danified are coming. I have seen a dozen painted men of an evening at the play and they were not on the stage. Strolling in Picaudilly of an afternoon these gentlemen deport themselves. It is getting to be, in the language of the time, quite the proper caper for dandy men to paint themselves. A new horror waits on metropolitan life. And the worst of it is that those bedazzled males are now so numerous that they are tolerated. In what is called the "smart set" they will soon cease to be conspicuous because they threaten to become general. Two years ago half the women in London society were painting themselves, out of all semblance to respectability. But they seem to be giving up that trick, now that alleged men are acquiring it.

An Item on Beekeeping.
Unfinished sections—filled or nearly filled with drawn comb left over from last year—are very valuable to give the bees a start in the spring. The editor of The Beekeeper's Review says: "In my experience these unfinished sections are worth nearly as much as sections filled with honey. The objection has been urged against them that their comb surface is uneven, and that when filled and sealed they do not have the smooth, clean appearance that we so admire in combs newly built from foundation. To remedy this unevenness some have painted down the comb with a brush and with a knife. This is a slow, unpleasant and putting job, and an inexpensive arrangement has been invented whereby the cells can be shortened and the combs brought to a level as rapidly as the sections can be handled."

Notes in Passing.
"Chemicals and clover are bringing about radical changes in the power of Long Island and New Jersey."
"Fertilized farming" is very much the fashion just now among progressive farmers in the eastern states who are working worn soils.

Clover, which is even more readily winter killed than wheat, succeeds best on land naturally dry, or which has been thoroughly underdrained.
One of the regulations of the Columbian exhibition consists in requiring the use of wide tires on the heavy team wagons employed in the grounds.

Secure Sites.
This statement is made in the Jersey Bulletin: Sites may be made perfectly secure with only one thickness of plank, and if thoroughly painted on all sides and the joinings laid in lead they will last many years. The best method of decay in wooden sites is the alternate wetting and drying of the wood. Wood kept either perfectly wet or perfectly dry will last indefinitely.

In the Vegetable Garden.
Following are gleanings from The Farm Journal:
Don't plant too many varieties of beets. The old reliable sorts are best—Egyptian for very early and Eclipse for main crop. All seasons keep these kinds.
For tender lettuce find the right way is to lay a board on each side of the rows of plants, and the crown of the set should be three or four inches below the surface, so it will not interfere with the cultivation of the cabbage until last of June. Set plants 18 inches apart.
Plant a few bush beans, if the family relishes them, a little later than the peas. They will better endure the warm weather of midsummer.

Things That Are Told.
A New York World correspondent says: "I have found that frequent dressings during the growing period of asparagus are better than one heavy dressing. I have had better success by this plan. Grano and salt mixed, an excellent manure. With late asparagus moisture is an important factor. My rule is a good top dressing and then irrigation of the bed."
It is generally the biggest and best colored that goes down with leg weakness, says The Farm Journal. Birds that grow rapidly or are overstimulated lose their nervous force and succumb to this disease. We would not keep a bird of this kind for breeding purposes.
The bush lima beans are worthy of trial.

Mr. James Rankin says that a good duck will produce as many eggs as a hen and at a season when eggs bring the highest price.

DUCK FARMING.

How This Industry is Conducted on Forty Acres Near New York.

Duck culture is becoming an important branch of the market poultry farms of the east, but nowhere, with the exception of the farm of James H. Duffin, Massachusetts, can be found such a large collection of both old and young stock as on the great duck farms of Long Island. Michael K. Dyer recently made a visit to these farms and gathered some valuable data, to which he gives expression in The Poultry Monthly. He tells, among other things, that on the largest farms in the order days the Muscovy was considered the only breed of ducks that could be profitably kept, but since the introduction of the Peking race of the others is now used, it being considered far superior to even the once favorite Muscovy. On one farm visited by Mr. Dyer are kept 1,600 breeding ducks in pens of about 50 each. The houses for each flock measure 12 by 12 feet with runs of 50 by 125, of which 30 by 45 is occupied by a pond of water. There is a decided advantage in allowing bathing water to the ducks, as they keep much cleaner and a less number of drakes are required to a flock.

One drake is allowed for from seven to nine ducks in the beginning of the season and later on as many as 15 are given. Those ducks kept on land begin with from four to six ducks to a flock in the early part of the season and from six to nine later on. The floors of the houses are bedded with salt hay. All the hatching is done artificially. The majority of the farms have cellars for their incubators. In the matter of feeding there is some variation with the different breeders, but as a rule the same kind of feed is employed. One farm the breeding ducks are fed as follows: Cornmeal, 4 parts; bran, 2 parts; middlings, 2 parts; oats, 1 part; wheat, 1 part. This is mixed with about two bushels of clover or timothy, which they secure from the bottoms of the creeks. Each of the large duck farms has large floats on the water all the time gathering this grass. Breeding ducks are fed twice a day.

The rules in feeding ducklings with a number of the Long Islanders is to start them on soaked bread or cracker dust from four to six ducks to a flock in the early part of the season and from six to nine later on. The floors of the houses are bedded with salt hay. All the hatching is done artificially. The majority of the farms have cellars for their incubators.
