WATERSON'S REMEDY.

The Recalcitrants Must be Disowned; The Weak Must be Sent to the Rear.

(Courier Journal.)

There is but one Democratic line of procedure, and that is indicated by Harper's Weekly. Consistently this has been advocated by the Courier-Journal. The recalcitrants must be disowned and driven out. New men must be put in the lead. Not merely this; but those honest, but weak men, who have gone to sleep on their watch—allowing these infamies to proceed without protest—must be sent to the rear, and others more alert, if not more honest, must be called to the front. The Democratic rank and file must rise en masse, and put their foot upon the corruptionists and the laggards. Our rescue from destruction can be compassed in no other way.

With overwhelming changes of party majorities going on all about us—in the face of such a popular rebuke to the incapacity of leaders as no body of politicians ever received before in the history of the country—it is worse than folly, it is a crime, for Democrats who yet retain some self respect and to whom the people have been want to look for unselfish counsel to bait their breath and hold their tongue. The feathers of the ostrich are fair to see; but his methods of self-protection are ridiculous. They are not to be imitated by Democrats. The Tariff Bill which is about to pass the Senate is abominable. Practically it will yield the consumer little, if any, relief. It presents the Democratic party in the character both of a fool and a fraud, crippling the cause without a shadow of compensation. The Administration should in some way—there are many ways—disentangle itself. The House should throw it out by a single vote. The Committee of Conference should promptly report itself unable to agree. The Ways and Means Committee should as promptly bring in a measure involving revenue only—a simple Tariff scale raising two hundred and fifty millions on fifty single items—no schedules and no classifications with their misleading subterfuges and confusing incidents—and, if this be rejected—as it doubtless would be—adjourn Congress, and go to the country, placing the responsibility where it belongs, pledging the party to stand by its guns and to fight its battle upon the line of principle and honor until the people shall decide, conclusively and for all time, whether we are to live under a Free Trade system or under a Protective system.

The field is not wholly lost. It will only be wholly lost when a Democratic Congress has passed a Republican Tariff condoning the Protectionism we have denounced and relegating agitation to the place it occupied in 1880, with the added handicap of corruption and cowardice, requiring the good work of fifteen years to be begun all over again. The Democrats of the Ways and Means Committee have everything to gain and nothing to lose by this reversal of the policy of time-serving and the substitution of a policy of integrity and courage. The Administration has everything to gain and nothing to lose by receding from a policy of conservatism, doubtless well meant, but which has led the party into this labyrinth of dishonor and ruin. The President himself, who owes his political life to the belief among the people that he knew what he was talking about and meant what he said—but whom those events have so signally discredited—has everything to gain and nothing to lose by silently confessing his mistake, and throwing the force of his great personality and undoubted power upon the side of the people and the truth, and against the vicious and venal classes, who, entrenched in the Senate—finding a naked battery in every tariff schedule and a rifle-pit in every classification—are pouring their deadly fire into the masses of producers and consumers—who have everything to produce and everything they consume taxed to the moon by the Tariff Bill, with whose enactment we are threatened.

It is not too late for the party to reorganize itself and adjust its line in the House. It does not, it will be reorganized, and the Democratic line readjusted, out of the House. In the first case we shall make a present sacrifice for a future advantage. In the second, we shall postpone the day of profit indefinitely, risking the future on the profound displeasure and deep disgust which our leaders have earned for us in the estimation of the voters.

LIFE IN TEXAS.

A Former Marionite Railroad, Hunting and Fishing in the West.

A PARADISE FOR THE ANGLER.

DEAR PRESS, Please find enclosed $1, for which send me the Press; and when my time is out please notify me, so that I may do so some more. I sent you some time since an advertising pamphlet of our road, which names some points of interest, with cuts of some of them. Now I want you to tell our boys, who are of a sportive turn of mind, that our road comes nearer being the "sportsman's" road than any road in the United States. There is no time in the year that one can not camp out, and have a good time; there is no time in the year when one can not have excellent sport. During the fall and winter hunting of every kind is good, and fishing is good the year round. I had some duck shooting in old Kaintuck, that I thought was fair, but since I have been here have hunted at places where I saw as many thousands as I saw ducks there.

Everything is as large as the State in proportion; for instance we have many pastures of 100,000 acres, and some of 300,000; I have at present an invitation to take a hunt this fall with a gentleman who has one pasture of 150,000 acres and another of 50,000. Some people have an idea that Texas is but one remove from hades, and that a very short remove, but in many things she is far ahead of my native State, and will compare favorably with any other. The time of the cowboy, as he is known in dime novels, and as he was supposed to exist on the wide prairies, by our good citizens at home, has gone by; the day of the desperado has passed, and the people here look with horror upon the man who takes a human life. One is safer here than in Kentucky for the law is respected and enforced.

There is really so much to tell of this country that one gets confused in the telling, and if you want to know anything specially, I will take great pleasure in confining myself to my subject and enlightening you to the best of my ability.

We have seven hundred miles of road and I travel over it all, and if it would interest any of your readers to hear of any special place on the line, nothing would afford me greater pleasure than to give them any information they wish. The Salado, Alamo, San Jacinto, and the old Missions are all on our line, while Gold is not far from it. One takes off his hat in silent reverence when he enters the Alamo, for he can take no step that is not ground hallowed by the blood of Texas heroes. Thermopylae had one messenger of defeat; the Alamo had none. San Jacinto is no less famous for on that field the brave defenders of the Alamo were avenged.

Some weeks ago Mrs. B. went with me to the coast, to pay a long promised visit to our friends, Mr. and Mrs. Wimberly, of Aransas Pass. Mr. W. had arranged for a trip to Mustang Island, where Uncle Sam has a life-saving station; and to numerous places of interest on Corpus Christi bay. Saturday morning we started for Mustang Island in an elegant sail boat and arrived there just about the time dinner tasted best, and as plenty had been provided, that was our first consideration. Our next move was to investigate the Life Saving Station; here we found many appliances that the ingenuity of man has provided to assist in rescuing the shipwrecked mariner. Boats, signals, mortars, life lines, and things too numerous to mention, that we did not find the names of, nor to what uses they were put; and best of all, we saw the men themselves, who are trained in the scientific use of all these things, and who when occasion demands shirk not their duty because of the danger, but go to apparent death in the endeavor to save others. After this we went across the island and gazed upon the waters of the Gulf of Mexico, for the first time. This was a grand sight, and one that we will never forget. We picked up many beautiful shells on the beach, and brought back with us, to preserve as mementoes of a pleasant trip.

THREE WALKING GOWNS.

At the left is a gray hairline silk and wool mixture gown with a handsome belt of black silk edged with lace. In the center is a light plaid poplin, pearl gray, with green and russet stripes. The third walking dress is an old rose and moss green Scotch gingham. The vest front is of muslin worked in large wheels of colored silk.

Leaving Mustang island at 3:30 p. m., we encountered adverse wind and tide combined, and after beating about until 10 p. m. we reached home completely worn out, but compelled to acknowledge we had seen the greatest sights of our lives.

We went fishing also on this trip, and I want to observe right here that I never fished before. We struck our fishing place about 3:30 p. m., and at 4:30 the bait was all gone and we had about fifty pounds of nice fish, as you ever caught—trout, red fish and channel cat. We saw lots of Tarpon, but as they are rather game, and their capture connected with considerable work, they possessed few charms for your humble servant. Aransas Pass is the place for Tarpon, above all places, and the sports of old Kentucky if they pine for Tarpon fishing, should try no other place.

Well, excuse me; I started in to write you a few lines and have worn out your patience with a long letter. I'm in love with the country, Bob, and like to talk about it. Come down and see me, take in the country, have a good time, and when you go home, if you tell the simple truth, the people will say you are paid for it by the railroads.

All well, and send our kindest regards to our old friends.

Yours truly,

J. E. BRAWNER.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE DISTRICT PRESIDENTS CONFINE THEIR REPORT.

CROOKED CREEK.

We called at this church the first Sunday morning, and made a talk on the importance of Sunday schools; after which we organized a school of about 30 pupils.

R. L. Thurman was elected superintendent; Miss Ellen Paris, secretary; T. L. Gas, leader of the choir.

Rev. L. P. Conger and others assisted in the work.

OAK GROVE.

We visited this school in the evening. We were not present at the entertainments. Our talk here was on Sunday school work.

Pupils present, 57. C. W. Love, superintendent; Miss Annie Clark, secretary; R. C. Haynes, leader of choir.

The crowd here was simply immense. Rev. B. F. McMan and Stone followed us with a good talk.

They have an excellent singing class—look out for them at the convention.

At the close of school the three ministers present and a good number of the school gave us a hearty welcome.

BLACKBURN.

We visited this church the second Sunday morning in June. Made a brief talk and organized a school with an enrollment of 42.

A. J. Ekwel, superintendent; Mrs. E. J. Vanhousen, secretary.

There is some faithful brethren in this church and community, and all they need is encouragement. Remember the promise is to the faithful.

ARIZONA.

Her Agricultural Future.—The Richness of Her Mines.—A Deed of Blood.

THE EARTH AND ITS FRUITS.

As I have before remarked in these letters, the plains or mesas of Southern Arizona are composed of the most fruitful soil that a torrid sun ever warmed into life and activity, when once touched by water. The whole of that country was once unquestionably an arm of the sea, or a northern extension of the Gulf of California, and hence these mesas are all "made soil," composed of sea mud and other marine ingredients, and ranging in depth from ten to thirty feet, thus being practically inexhaustible. In further proof of its marine origin, sea shells have been found imbedded high up the sides of the loftiest mountain peaks, and the fossil remains of long extinct sea animals lie scattered in the mountain caves.

But with all this richness of soil it will be many years ago. Arizona's position now held by California as a grain State. Corn and wheat both yield enormously where irrigation floods the land, but the cost of production overshadows and swallows up the profits and the cost of railroad transportation to a distant market soon swallows up the original capital. The destiny of Southern Arizona, like that of Southern California, lies in the cultivation of the citrus fruit and the grape, banana, fig, apricot, olive, peach, and all varieties of vegetables. The peaches, apricots, grapes and figs now raised near Phoenix, in the Salt River Valley, are the most delicious I ever tasted, far superior in flavor to those of Southern California, and the crop never fails.

But when once the gigantic systems of irrigation now contemplated are placed in successful operation, the whole of Southern Arizona, from Yuma to Tucson, will become a continuous garden of fruits, vegetables, flowers, song-birds and beauty for the entire three hundred miles distance. Yet it will take many years and many millions of dollars to accomplish this result.

COPPER AND LEAD.

I have heretofore described, for the benefit of the readers of the Press, the extent and richness of Arizona's gold and silver mines; but that wonderful Territory is equally rich in its copper and galena ores. The yearly output of copper from the Bisbee and Mammoth mines is almost marvelous, and from the richness of ore and quality of the manufactured article. At the World's Columbian Exhibition the celebrated "Copper Queen" mine of Mammoth, Arizona, had on exhibition a gigantic block of copper that took the first premium over all competitors, Lake Superior included; and yet the copper industry in this Territory is but in its infancy. I am told the mountains surrounding Gila Bend are full of it, and that no pick has as yet ever been stuck into it, owing to the distance to railroad transportation. And the same may be said of the galena or lead ores of the Territory. I have seen, both in Phoenix and Tucson, pieces of almost pure galena, weighing hundreds of pounds, intersected by thin veins of silver ore. This galena is mined simply for the silver it contains, and when this is extracted the lead is thrown away as worthless rubbish. This may seem a ruinous waste of the raw material to the uninitiated; but when the enormous railroad charges are taken into consideration the matter is easily explained. A year ago last February I purchased a printing office in Tucson and sent Southern Pacific railroad agent and Shady's divorced at the M.

charged me 95 cents a hundred to remove it to Gila Bend, a distance of only 140 miles. This is one reason why Arizona is developing so slowly. The Southern Pacific has it by the throat and is trying to squeeze the life out of it.

A DEED OF BLOOD.

Some seventy-five miles west of Phoenix is located the great Harqua Hala gold mine. Years ago, the spot on which Phoenix now stands was occupied by a lonely adobe hacienda, and was a stopping point between the mine and Tucson, being about half way between the two points. Then, as now, the Harqua Hala had a "clean up" at the end of each month, the result of the month's run being a solid gold brick, ranging anywhere from $60,000 to $80,000 in value. Those precious bricks were then transported overland to Tucson and there placed in bank. This duty was generally intrusted to a grizzly old frontiersman by the name of Dick Sebastian, honest as an alderman and fearless as the devil. Late one evening in June Dick drove to the Phoenix posada in an old buckboard to which was hitched two wiry little bronchos. Lounging in front of the house was an American, two Mexicans and a Yuma Indian. The white man was the notorious renegade and cutthroat, Jack Clark, and the others were his gang. Dick knew them and entered into a friendly conversation with Clark. Shortly after supper the gang left, and early next morning Sebastian was again on the road to Tucson. About ten miles South of Phoenix, where the beautiful little town of Tempe now lies embowered in its orange and apricot groves, a bold bluff or butte adjoined flush with the road, around which it winds eastward to Tucson. Early in the day Sebastian was whirling merrily along this road, doubtless dreaming of the gay time before him in the saloons of Tucson. But like the Turk who Marco Bozzaris so unceremoniously routed out, once upon a time, "that bright dream was his last." His ponies wheeled around the butte at a sharp trot, four Winchester flashed, and Sebastian lay on the ground gasping in his death agony. The ponies were caught, a little iron bound box taken from the buckboard, when Clark and his men returned to Phoenix, leaving the remains of poor Sebastian to rot and the coyotes. That night the gang had a wild revel in the old posada, mescal flowed like water, and when morning dawned one Indian and two Mexicans lay dead on the floor, each stabbed to the heart with a stiletto in the hands of Clark. He was now sole possessor of the treasure and the secret. He buried the gold near the posada and fled to Sonora, in old Mexico, where he was shortly afterwards shot dead in a quarrel over a game of monte. And there that gold brick lies buried to this day. The forest and the solitude have given place to a beautiful city of sixteen thousand people, full of life and energy; a stately court house, surrounded with evergreens, now marks the spot where stood that ancient posada; and still that blood-stained cube of gold nestles securely amid the element from which it was wrested and "makes no sign," although to this day search for it is occasionally made.

A REJECTED LOVER'S CRIME.

Youth of Eighteen Kills His Successful Sixteen-Year-Old Rival.

Paducah, Ky., June 5.—A terrible tragedy was enacted near Murray, in Callaway county, at 8 o'clock last night. A young man named Storey, sixteen years of age, and Leslie Cochran, a youth of eighteen, have been paying attentions to the 13 year old daughter of Wm. Kelley, a former deputy sheriff. On Sunday last Storey and the girl were married. This enraged Cochran and he swore he would kill Storey on sight. Yesterday, however, they met and apparently became friends, but when night came Cochran called at Kelly's house, where the newly married couple was stopping, and asked Storey to take a walk with him, as he wanted to have a talk.

When but a few rods from his house Cochran drew his revolver and shot Storey in the mouth, killing him instantly. He then returned to the house and was confronted by Kelley. Some words ensued when Cochran again brought his weapon to bear and shot Kelley in the mouth. He was dangerously wounded but was alive when last heard from. The murderer then fled, and at noon today had not been caught. The parties belong to well-to-do families. The utmost excitement prevails and summary punishment would probably follow the boy's capture.

DALTON KILLED.

Leader of the Notorious Band of Outlaws Breathes His Last.

Ardmore, I. T., June 8.—Bill Dalton, the noted outlaw and leader of the Longview bank robbers, lies dead in this city, pierced through with a Winchester bullet. One of his pale victims talking around the suspicions of the deputy marshals, who organized and surrounded the robbers rendezvous near a little town named Elk, about twenty miles distant.

While taking their position Dalton was seen to come out, look around, and immediately return. The officers on the east side were discovered by him through the window on the north side or by some women in the house, and pistol in hand he jumped through a window on the north and started to run east. Close Hart, one of the deputies, was less than thirty yards from the house and called on him to halt.

Dalton turned around, tried to take aim while running, and just then the officer shot. Two jumps in the air were the only motions made. His pistol fell from his hand and he sank to the ground, and Hart ran up and asked him what he was doing there, but he was too near dead to reply and soon expired.

The house was searched, and over 150 letters, besides numerous rolls of crisp bank bills, were found. The addresses proved him to be Bill Dalton, and the money proved him to be the leader of the Longview bank robbers.

His wife, who is in Ardmore, became hysterical, but soon recovered, and telegraphed C. H. Blivens, 1407 Vanness avenue, San Francisco, and relatives in Kingsfisher, O. T., that her husband was dead.

In an interview Mrs. Dalton said she was born in Merced county, Cal., where she married Dalton in 1884. Her maiden name was Jennie Vanness. They came to the Territory in 1891, and have two children, one of whom is an invalid. Mrs. Dalton is 27 years old and her husband was 23. She is well educated and appears to be refined.

DO YOU WANT Harvesting Machines? The Walter A. Wood Machines

LEAD THE WORLD.

The Walter A. Wood mowers need no introduction to the farmers of the world. Their ever increasing production, and the hundreds of thousands of them in use to-day, attest their superiority and popularity. They have become as staple an article as a barrel of flour, and are used all over the known world.

The tubular steel mower is the most modern machine made. It combines all those features of excellence in design, construction and operation, the lightest draft of any mower, and has more improvements.

The Single Apron Binder Has No Superior

It is of light draft, and with its open-rear has unlimited capacity for tall grain, and will cut, elevate, bind and discharge sowed corn—a most severe test in capacity and strength. The heads of the grain are not bent back in their passage to the binder, and much grain is thereby saved which would otherwise be lost through shelling. The saving of the grain is an important matter to the farmer and should receive serious consideration.

The difficulty of selling other makes of machines at all in most localities, so long as a Walter A. Wood can be had, has provoked attacks by competitors which are entirely groundless; the machine has reached practical perfection and we are building it season after season without changes, for none are needed.

J. W. JOHNSON, Agent, Marion, Ky.

Keeps repairs for their machines. Also sells hay racks, twine, straw, and all other farm supplies. Warrants good as new. Get his Three homicides in two years is a record that we can not be proud of, to say the least of it.

The Frankfort penitentiary is paying the State a net revenue. This is not a bad recommendation for the new order of things.

The Congressional primary is coming around rapidly and it appears that there will be no joint discussions between Stone and Hendricks.

Had the weather bill become a law the flags on the mail wagons would have told us, by this time at least, that Tuesday was a pretty warm day.

The courts have postponed the hanging of Prendergast until after November, and in the meantime his attorneys are trying to get him in an asylum.

Spoke well at Paducah, made a speech, and $350 for the self-appointed general and his so-called army.

Of course the Democrats are using all these hard times. England, France and Germany, we presume, are in the hands of Democrats because they are likewise suffering from the universal panic.

Joe Parker, the Exponent, failed to fill his appointment here Monday. He remained at Paducah to see Kelly's "band wagon" come. Really it appears that Joe thinks more of Kelley than he does of us Crittenden county folks.

The big strike of coal miners is practically over. A compromise has been agreed upon between the operators and the miners of the Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania and West Virginia fields. The strike will end next week.

Dr. R. L. Moore is arranging his affairs for making a canvass, and a vigorous one, too, for railroad commissioner of this district. He is going to win that place, or know the reason why. There is no other candidate in this congressional district for that place and not likely to be any, because Crittenden's candidate is not only eminently fitted for the position and deserving, but the Democracy of the county deserves recognition at the hands of the congressional district, because they have always stood by the men of the district in their aspirations for State honors.

Notwithstanding the tramping armies of Kelley, Coxey and others the presence of food so plentiful in the country through which they pass is evidence that there is no excuse for the existence of such an organization. While they prate about hard times, they are being fed from the bins of honest toil. They sing of woe and misery and pass the hat to gather in the shakels of those whose condition they purpose to seek to ameliorate. They are grasshoppers flitting across the country feeding off of the industrious ants.

In Alabama the rioters are burning railroad bridges and raising trouble in general. They need and should have some gastric medicine. Men have the right to strike and demand higher wages, but to destroy property and life is another thing, and should not be tolerated. Anarchy in any form or fashion is out of place in this country, and the official who winks at it is untrue to his country and unfaithful to his oath of office.

The circuit court docket in Crittenden is not improving. Another homicide which is a matter of course.

THE RECORDS SPEAK.

A Pointed Letter From a Solid Citizen of Livingston County.

EDITOR PRESS: A letter recently published in the Paducah Standard under the signature of A. H. S. Boyd, makes an attack on John K. Hendrick by charging that after he introduced the resolution to appoint a committee to investigate Treasurer Tate's office, while he was in the State Senate, got excused from the committee and showed he did not have the backbone and retreated. He adds that he has told the facts as he remembers them. It is self evident that Mr. Boyd's memory is not good, or that he never did know anything about the case, or that he willfully misrepresents Mr. Hendrick. Any one who wishes to know the facts about the Tate investigation can go to either the county or circuit clerk's office and get the Senate Journal for 1887-8, and look on page 47, where it shows that Mr. Hendrick on Jan. 4, 1888, introduced the resolution to appoint a committee to investigate Tate. It shows, on page 974, that Mr. Hendrick, on March 21, 1888, introduced a resolution asking the Governor to offer a reward of $5,000 for the capture of Tate. It shows on page 1112 that Mr. Hendrick, on March 29, 1888, introduced a resolution to correct the record because it inadvertently failed to show that a committee was appointed to draft rules for the Tate investigation to show who would be entitled to vote in the impeachment.

On page 1156 it shows that Mr. Hendrick on March 31, 1888, introduced a resolution fixing the pay of the experts employed to examine Tate's books and accounts. It will show on pages 1144 to 1150 that Mr. Hendrick on March 30, 1888, voted guilty to each of the four articles of impeachment against Tate. On page 1616 it shows that Mr. Hendrick, on April 27, 1888, introduced a resolution to authorize the committee to charge of the vouchers and un-audited accounts in the Treasurer's office, so the his securities might not be released. It also shows that Mr. Hendricks made a strong fight, almost single handed to extend the session in order that the investigation might not fail.

Now these are the facts, not as I remember them, but as shown by the records. The following letter from Lieut. Gov. J. W. Brian, who was the presiding officer of the Senate at that time, refutes the charge that Mr. Hendrick got excused from being appointed chairman of the investigating committee:

Hon. John K. Hendrick, Smithland, Ky.: Dear Sir: In reply to yours of the 3d I beg to say the only reason you were not appointed chairman of the committee at the 1887-8 session of the Ky. Legislature to investigate the State Treasurer's office, was that you had theretofore been appointed chairman of the Legislative committee to investigate the conduct of circuit judge A. E. Cole, and we thought you would not have time to attend to both.

Yours truly, J. W. Brian.

All this goes to prove that Mr. Hendrick was an able and industrious worker while in the State Senate, and instead of backing down in the Tate investigation he persistently pressed it to the very last.

The people of the State of Kentucky well know Mr. Hendrick's record in this case, and I advise any man who wants Stone to feel the nomination and begins to get desperate over the prospect, if he does not wish to help Hendrick, to say nothing about the Tate affair. The writer of this article does not desire to engage in any discussion with A. H. S. Boyd or any one else, but he does desire the fair thing in this canvass.

Miss Lena Hodge is home from Bethel College, and a host of friends welcome her back.

Quite a number from Salem and Marion swelled the select audience to listen to an excellent sermon from Bishop Willis Pierce in Pinkneyville church Sunday. The people are proud of him as a preacher and proud of his work in the Seminary.

Faultless in diction, chaste in speech, courteous, kind and true, he would adorn any bar in the land.

TWENTY MISSING.

A Score of Coxeyites Said to Have Been Drowned In Platte River.

Brighton, Col., June 8.—Twenty five of the Coxeyites who set sail from Denver are missing as a result of the upsetting of their boat. It is thought that twenty are drowned. Dead bodies can be seen on sand-bars and lodged in trees, but can not now be recovered.

Brighton, Col., June 8.—The number or names of the Coxeyites drowned in the attempt to navigate the Platte river can not be told. The river was a raging torrent yesterday and many boats were wrecked at the bridges. Twenty-nine boats, containing 185 men, passed Henderson island bridge. Only twenty, with less than 100 men, reached Brighton. Some boats were deserted, their occupants taking to the road. At the McKay bridge several men were drowned. At Henderson island bridge twenty-one men were in the water at one time, but were rescued with ropes by Ralph Lee and Louise Brantner. The boat of one man from Utah, known as "Frenchy," has been recovered. Of one boat containing eight, six are said to have been lost. Most of the bodies have been washed down stream.

Many of the Coxeyites believe fourteen to twenty men were drowned. Many men are clinging to the trees along the river banks, and an order has been telegraphed to Denver for skiffs to take them off.

Minister Taylor, at Madrid, Calls On Spain for $4,500,000.

Madrid, June 8.—The United States Minister, Hannis Taylor, has communicated a note to the Spanish government, declaring that the customs duties are improperly collected in the Island of Cuba, owing to misinterpretation of the treaty with the United States. As a result the United States claims the reimbursement of 22,500,000 pesetas, on the ground that articles which are free of duty, according to the English text of the agreement, are not included in the Spanish copy of the agreement, which was sent to Cuba for the use of the Spanish customs officers in that island. It is said that if Spain should yield in this matter the Cuban revenue under the estimates would undergo a decline of 15,000,000 pesetas.

DAY OF RIOT.

Blood and Brutality in the Pennsylvania Strike.

Uniontown, Pa., June 10.—The truce is ended and armed deputies in the coke region had to kill or to be killed. One striker killed in his boots two others dying and another shot through, is the result of a battle this morning at Lenont. There were six deputies on one side and a mob of strikers on the other. Unbiased testimony is to the effect that the mob not only provoked but compelled the deputies to fire on them, after the strikers had compelled them to retreat, and had fired several shots at them.

The circumstance that led up to this latest of the main tragedies of the coke region, had been developing since yesterday afternoon. Four American workmen, John Delaney, Oliver Atteley, John Britt and James Furlough who live in Leisner, have been working at the Frick Coke Company's valley works for some time. They came to New Haven yesterday afternoon, where they were to take the Leisner electric road for home, where they had not been for a month. As soon as they alighted from the train at New Haven they were surrounded by a mob of several hundred strikers from Trotter and other works in the vicinity. The strikers first beat the four workmen and then put tags on them bearing the inscription, "Blacklegs." They were also covered with chalk marks. They then marched their prisoners to the Leisner works, and from there to Trotter, Morrell, and in fact to all the works on the line from New Haven south, holding them up as decorated samples of "blacklegs."

The four prisoners were subjected to all manner of insults and indignities, to such an extent that many of the more rational strikers protested that it was cruel and cowardly for so many men to assail four helpless fellows in that way.

The Frick Coke Company heard of the perilous position their workmen were in, and called on sheriff Wilhem to release their men from the custody of the mob. Deputy Allen and six men were sent to New Haven on the evening train. They were mixed by false information, the strikers' friends baffling them at every turn; but they followed every clue they could find, and were securing the country during the night in search of the mob.

The mob finally attacked the deputies and each side began firing with Winchester and revolvers; the rioters at last retired, carrying their dead and wounded with them. Six of the more active have been arrested and put in jail.

About a year ago I took a violent attack of the grippe. I coughed day and night for about six weeks; my wife then suggested that I try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. At first I could not believe it, but still kept taking it, and soon found that it was what I needed. If I got no relief from one dose I took another, and it was only a few days until I was free from the cough. I think people in general ought to know the value of this remedy, and I take pleasure in acknowledging the benefit I have received from it. Madison Mustard, Otway, Ohio. 25 and 50 cent bottles or sale by Moore & Orme.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Moore & Orme.

SHOT TO DEATH.

John Hankins Dies the Victim of John Mullinax's Bullets.

HIS DYING STATEMENT.—MULLINAX'S STORY.

About six o'clock Saturday evening, in Pierce & Son's store at this place, John Mullinax and George W. Hankins, two young men who lived six miles southwest of Marion, engaged in a quarrel, a blow followed and before the bystanders knew there was trouble, two bullets from Mullinax's pistol had pierced Hankins' abdomen and the third had missed its mark. Parties called upon the combatants to desist and they did so. The wounded man walked from the store to Dr. Swope's office over Moore's store; his wounds were examined, he was told that he must die, and was carried to J. A. Davidson's boarding house, and suffered intensely until 1 o'clock Monday morning, when he died. A post mortem examination showed that either of the wounds would have produced death. One ball pierced the intestines sixteen times, while the other punctured the bladder and passed through one kidney.

After the shooting Mullinax attempted to leave the building by the rear door, but he had been anticipated and the door was locked; he then returned to the front door and was told to remain inside, and without further ado he stood waiting for the officer. Deputy Sheriff Pickens arrested him a few minutes later, when he was taken before Judge Moore, who committed him to jail without bond. Monday he was again taken before the court, and by agreement June 21 was fixed for a preliminary examination. As circuit court is so near, it is very probable that the investigation will be left for the grand jury, and Mullinax will remain in jail charged with murder, the murder of his neighbor.

The following is the statement made by Hankins after he had been told that he could live but a short time:

"John Mullinax has been telling lies on me for a month or so; I met him at or near Pierce's store today, and was asking him about it, told him what I had heard, and he said I was a G—d d—m liar and son of a b—h, and I struck him; and then I saw he was going to shoot me, but I tried to choke him off of me, but he shot in spite of all I could do. He drew his pistol as soon as I struck him. I struck him with my fist. I had a weapon except a pocket knife, which was closed in my pocket. He called me into Pierce's store, when the conversation between us first commenced. He said he heard I was mad at him, and I told him I was not but told him what I had heard he had said. He had told that I had been stealing meat and carrying it to an old woman—old lady Reynolds."

A representative of the Press called upon Mullinax in jail, and when twitted with being in such close quarters on such a lovely morning, he joined in a hearty laugh with the other prisoners, and apparently had no thought of his victim, whose body was then being prepared for the grave. After some reluctance he consented to briefly tell his side of the affair. He said in substance: I was passing Pierce's store. Hankins was standing inside. He owed me $1.35. I went in and asked him to buy me a bridge, to square the debt. He said he did not run an account with Pierce, and besides he would not oblige me, because of the way I had been mistreating him. That I had been telling lies on him, and that I was a d—d lying black s—n of a b—h. I said he was another, and then he struck me, knocking me backwards across the store, and then grabbed me by the throat with one hand and with the other opened his knife with his teeth; he then struck at me with the knife, but I caught his hand, and before he could make another blow I shot him. I did not want to kill him, but was compelled to shoot to save my own life.

There were a number of men at the front door of the building, and two men at the desk in the rear of the room, while the two men were about the middle of the building. No one heard an angry word and no one knew there was trouble until the two men began to scuffle, and then it was thought to be a friendly scuffle until the shots rang out. When approached Hankins had his arm across Mullinax's shoulders, trying to hold his arms; he cried out that he was shot, while Mullinax said, "He is cutting me."

There are no wounds of any kind on Mullinax; the pistol was under his coat when he fired, and the balls passed through the tail of that garment, and the flesh from the pistol-set the coat on fire.

George Hankins was in the 22d year; he was the son of a widow and bore a good reputation. His father died when he was twelve years old, and since then he has supported his mother and sister, by hard labor on the little farm. All of his neighbors speak in the highest terms of him.

Mullinax came from DeKalb county, Tenn., a few months ago, and his father resides there now. He has an uncle in this county—John Mullinax, a respectable citizen. Young Mullinax worked for some months on the farm with the man he killed. For the past two months he has been living with Mr. T. T. Murphy, who speaks well of his conduct since he has been with him. It is said that he had trouble in Tennessee, and left to avoid the law. Public sentiment is pretty strong against the prisoner.

Bonds Burned.

"Little by little the bird builds her nest, little by little the sun sinks to rest." But they both get there after awhile. So will Marion district get there in the liquidation of its railroad bonds. Some months ago $700 worth of the bonds were called in and destroyed, and on the 9th, bonds No. 10 and 34 for $100 each, were called and paid off, making about $900.00 paid on the $15,000 debt. The tax rate had been fixed at 15 cents, which, it was estimated, would just pay the interest, but it has paid the interest and $900 in addition. The county clerk estimates that at the same rate of taxation the entire debt will be wiped out within ten years.

Shot in the Leg.

"I never will monkey with another old pistol," said Geo. Adams, son of Jailer Adams, yesterday morning, as he limped into the Press office.

How did it happen George? Well you see, the old man's pistol, it has been laying around so long until it got rusty. Last night, I greased it up, and was showing the old gentleman what a dandy she was after going through my hands. Well, the old man, he wanted to work it, and I handed it to him and he didn't know it was loaded. (Oh! goh, what that thing hurts.) He pulled on the trigger to see how stout the spring was. The bullet hit me on the side of the shin, and skipped around the back and hid itself in the wall. The old man, he is dangerous, when he gets hold of a pistol. I am going to smash that thing into jelly with a sledge hammer. Golly that awful sore."

S. S. Convention Changed.

For good reasons the county Sunday school convention is changed from July 7th to Friday July 6th. Let every Sunday school possible have their school come as a class and contribute their part in the musical part of the programme. We hope that the officers and teachers, at least, of every Sunday school in the county will be present.

J. F. PRICE.

Bonds Sold.

Unless there is a "slip twist cup and lip," the school bonds are sold and the new school house will soon be under way. The bonds have been contracted and are now in the hands of the lithographer, and soon as completed they will be delivered to the purchasers—and then the Trustees will be ready for business. The old buildings have been sold and are being removed.

BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT.

Matilda J. Thompson Wants $10,000 From Chess E. Towery.

Yesterday through her attorneys, James & James, Matilda J. Thompson filed suit against Chess E. Towery for breach of marriage contract, and prays the court for damages in the sum of $10,000. The plaintiff says that she and the defendant, being of marriageable age, and under no disabilities, did about the 1st day of May, 1893, mutually agree and promise, and in consideration of each other's promise; then and there made to each other to marry and become man and wife, that at the time of making this contract of marriage, there was no time set for same, except at such reasonable time in the future as would suit their convenience, but that this contract was often there after renewed and finally the month of December, 1893, was agreed upon as the time they should be married, and that sometime in said month, he, the defendant, came to the residence of this plaintiff and asked her father for her, and insisted upon his going with him to the county seat of Caldwell county, in which they resided for the marriage licenses, but was unable to go, and that it was unnecessary that he should go; both being of age, he could very readily procure the licenses without his presence, and that he seemingly became offended and left and not seen any more by the plaintiff until she went and tendered herself to him and made known her readiness and willingness to perform and carry out said contract, at which time and place, without reason of excuse, he informed the plaintiff ever enjoyed, would not marry her, and that said plaintiff, in special reference to charges seduction, there by Lewis and one of the Stagg speakers will tell the plaintiff. The plaintiffs brought each was divorced since the time of the marriage; but there can be no suit at the banquet of 1893.

He says that he had an engagement to meet parties at Fredonia, on the afternoon of the 9th of June, on business of importance to this plaintiff, and by reason of his being ejected from said train, he failed to reach Fredonia on said afternoon, and failed to meet the parties and failed to transact said business; and for reason of these wrongs he asks for damages in the sum of $2,000.

THIRD PARTY PEOPLE.

Dr. Clark Addresses an Audience At the Court House.

When the court house bell rang Monday afternoon a good sized audience, composed largely of Third Party people—interspersed nevertheless, with representatives of all political faiths—gathered, expecting to hear Mr. Joe A. Parker, of Paducah, discuss political matters. Mr. Parker had been announced for a speech in the interest of the Third Party candidate for congress from this district, but instead of the Paducah politician our townsman, Dr. J. R. Clark, took the stand and addressed the audience on the political issues of the day, as viewed from a Third Party standpoint. After announcing to his auditors that Mr. Parker could not be on hand owing to the fact that Kelly's army was paying a visit to that city, Dr. Clark went at once into the subject of national politics.

"This is my first political speech," said he. "Everybody has to make his first speech. Henry Watterson made his first speech once and I don't expect he did any better than I will do if you will give me your attention for a short time. I tell you, gentlemen," he continued, "there's something wrong. I don't have to tell you this; you know it. You see it in the strikes all over the country, in the unheard of number of tramps; in the unemployed of our cities and towns, in the Coxey movement. My friends, you need not to be told that there must be a cause for this deplorable state of affairs. There is a wrong somewhere; and if it is ever righted, the people will have to do it. Capitalists will not do it. Wall street politicians will not do it. A congress composed of and under the direction and control of the millionaires of the country will not do it. It is capital arrayed against labor, the rich against the poor."

After further describing the condition of the country he went into the discussion of the financial question. The country needs more money; money not only makes the mare go, but it moves the people as well. That's what the Populists will give, if they have a chance. He reviewed the workings of the Democratic and Republican parties on financial legislation and other questions and labored handsomely the leaders of both. He made a good speech from his way of looking at things, and when he closed was considerably applauded.

A BOY TRAINER.

Who Around the Affection of an Enraged Elephant.

"I used to travel with a circus in my younger days," said Walter L. Miles of Boston, as he strolled around the corridor of the hotel, "and during that time witnessed a good many exciting incidents. We had with the show an old elephant named Nero who was noted for his bad temper. He had killed two keepers and crippled several others. One afternoon, just after the performance was over, Nero broke his fastenings and proceeded to demolish everything around him. Among our performers was a young boy named Wood. This young fellow happened to be near Nero when he broke out, and the elephant grabbed the boy with his trunk, held him high in the air for a moment, and then commenced to swing him backward and forward. All those who witnessed the act expected to see the boy killed, and were filled with astonishment when Nero set young Wood down on the ground as gently as a mother would her child and began to caress him in as friendly a manner as possible. One of the keepers who understood the nature of the elephant told the boy the driving hook, shouting: 'Lead the beast away, he will mind you.' The boy did as he was told, and, sure enough, the elephant obeyed the boy and allowed him to replace the chains from which he had broken. From that hour the boy had to be the elephant's keeper."

BROUGHT TEARS.

The Song That Negroes Sang as a Farewell to a Friend.

There was a colored man going off on the ship, and a number of his friends, men and women, had come down to the dock in New York to say good-by. They had been laughing and joking in great spirits for the half hour before, but now, as the vessel started to move away, one of the women started to sing that pathetic parting hymn most boys and girls learn in Sunday school, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again." Her voice was sweet and full of feeling, as the voices of the men often are, and as she sang the others joined her till there arose a fine chorus on the air. The man smiled at first, but as he listened his smile faded and he dropped his head. Other passengers crowded to the side, and many tears were lifted, many eyes wet and tearful while the melody rang out.

But soon the big boat was clear of the pier and in midstream: there she stood for a few moments, swinging her nose slowly around until it pointed seaward, and then, with her captain and pilot on the bridge, an officer up in the mast in his lookout perch, flags flying from every mast, she sailed finely away, a beautiful and interesting sight.

TOO CALM TO BE USEFUL.

How the Man Who Never Gets Excited Put Out a Bit of a Fire.

Some men never get excited, no matter what the provocation. One of this number is employed in a foundry in Albany.

The other day he strolled into the foundry office, and in a very casual way inquired: "What's become of that extinguisher I used to see around here?"

"Oh, it was a little out of order, and we sent it back to be repaired," said one of the clerks.

Still puffing tranquilly on his pipe, the man inquired: "Doesn't he happen to have a pall handy, do you?"

"No; what do you want a pall for?" was the answer and question.

"I thought I could use it: the shop's safe."

There was a scramble to get out, and when the shop was reached the fire had made some progress. The steamer company near at hand was notified, and after a short fight the flames were stifled.

Chaining a Horse.

A Boston man who has a pretty summer residence up near the line of the Grand Trunk in Northern Maine mutely indicates that he "has been there before." Over the roof of this dwelling runs a stout iron rod, both ends coming down over the eaves. To these ends heavy chains are attached and are fastened solidly into the ledge by means of rings. The stable and in the summer houses are likewise chained down, and 'tis reasonable to expect that though Eurus or Boreas and all the rest of the winds may rant and blow, that particular summer resident will find his property sticking fast to the rock when he returns with the robins.

Negroes and Extreme Heat.

The function of the negro's black skin is now supposed to be the conversion of the sun's light into heat. The heat thus generated remains in the skin, never penetrating to the deeper and more vital tissues. This being the case the African may properly be said to be possessed with a thin, sun-proof armor. This accounts for the curious but well-known physiological fact that the negro is able to stand almost any degree of heat without being in danger from sunstroke.

All Born in 1809.

A wave of great men (or babies that were destined to become great) seems to have swept over the world in 1809. Why they were precipitated upon the world during that particular year will, perhaps, never be known, but it is a fact that the following named historical personages count it as their birth year: Lincoln, Gladstone, Darwin, Edgar Allan Poe, Cyrus McCormick, Benjamin Pierce, Alfred Russel Wallace, Mark Twain, Jules Verne, Raphael Semmes, Albert Pike and Oliver Wendell Holmes.

POACHED EGGS.

The Man With the Bare Lip Had a Difficulty With the Waiters.

The man with the bare lip was hungry. He went into a restaurant and at once got into trouble with the waiter because of his inability to pronounce the letter "p." He studied the coffee stained bill of fare and then said:

"I want four poached eggs."

When the waiter returned he deposited before the guest four slices of pork. The bare-lipped man looked at the meat, then at the waiter.

"I didn't order that," he said.

"But, what ye' ordered, sah," replied the waiter. "Ye' said ye' wanted four poached eggs."

"No, I didn't order four pork steaks. I ordered four poached eggs."

"Well, what ye' kinkin about? Dere's yer pork steaks."

The hungry man first made sure that the Senebambian was not gnying him, and then said:

"See here, my friend, I don't suppose you ever lived on a farm."

The waiter said he didn't and the colloquy proceeded by the following circuitous route, in order to avoid the lingual rock on which the hungry man's gastronomic hopes had been wrecked at the outset.

"Well, you know what a rooster is?"

"Yes, sah; saw one on Souf Watan street once."

"You know what a rooster's wife is?"

"They rooster call 'em hens."

"You know what a rooster's wife's children are?"

"Chickens."

"You know what a rooster's wife's children after they're hatched are?"

"Ags!"

"Well! I want—four—rooster's—wife's—children—after—they're—hatched—foached."

STENOGRAPHERS' BILLS.

They Are Hard to Collect—How to Get a Remedy.

These are bitter days for stenographers. There is just as much work as ever, but collections are slow and uncertain. One of them told me the other day that he had been doing $1,500 worth of work for every $100 he had received during the last year. A movement is now on foot to raise a fund to send a competent lawyer before the supreme court and argue against the celebrated Bonygre decision. This is the man who sent in a bill of $12,000 to Tweed's lawyers for his work on the Tweed case, together with the transcripts of money ordered. The lawyers refused to pay it on the ground that they were simply acting as agents of their clients, and were not personally responsible for the bill. The general term sustained the decision, when Bonygre's brought suit, and the case was lost every time it was appealed. Now stenographers are compelled to wait until their lawyers collect their fees from clients, and if there are no collections the stenographer's bill is held over. The only remedy is to get a written contract from the lawyer himself to be personally responsible for the bill; but few court stenographers care to risk loss of clients and patronage by insisting on this precaution. Of course, great law firms pay their stenographers promptly as they would pay any other employee, and do not ask them to leave their place in business. But the great majority of small firms and individuals in bad times take advantage of the law and the stenographers have to suffer.

A POINT OF LAW.

The Janitor Wanted All the Statutes Turned on His Enemy.

"Squah," said the colored janitor of the building, as he timidly entered the lawyer's office, "I got er case foh yer. I wants ter ask ye 'bout er pint of law."

"State it."

"You knows what a mule is at 'is best?" he said interrogatively.

"I know something of the animal's habits."

"An you know dat some mules is wusser'n others?"

"Yes, of course."

"Well, Jed Simpson done sot me one ob de wusses' kin' what is, fro misrepresentations ob de mos' zasperated scripshins."

"That's too bad. Now I suppose you want to sue him to recover your money."

"Jah's de pint ob law I wants ter know best. I wants ter know de books an' see ef we kain't hab him presented ter de gran' jury fer assault an' battery, as er accessory befo' de fact."

Fourteen Long-Lived Children.

Canon Rowell, of England, who died lately at the advanced age of 78, came of a long-lived family. Mr. Rowell's father married at the age of 49, his wife being 20. They had nineteen children, of whom five died in infancy. The remaining fourteen attained or have attained three are still living; the following ages: 79, 78, 67, 80, 71, 89 (still living), 83, 81, 77, 38, 79 (still living), 78 and 75 (still living). What is perhaps as remarkable is the length of days reached by the respective husbands and wives of the twelve of the above fourteen who entered the married state. These are the ages: 74, 45, 65, 79, 87 (still living), 85, 80, 84 (still living), 77, 57, 73, 87.

A Professor.

A professor was lately lecturing at the Harvard Annex to a class of three. In the course of his talk, he came to an exposition of his views as to woman's functions in the body politic. "Women," he said, "are merely the elements of beauty in life; their business is to make life graceful. If a girl is not pretty, she might just as well vanish from the face of the earth—that is," he qualified, "as he gazed at the three sober-spokened faces in front of him—"Yes, unless—she's tolerably pretty, you know."

WHEELS.

They Are Never Heard in a Wealthy City of Mexico.

"In the city of Catorce, in Mexico, the sound of a carriage wheel never has been heard," said a traveler, lately. "The city is located in the mountains eight miles from the nearest station. In order to reach it one must travel on horseback. It is a town of about 1,000 people, but few foreign people have ever visited the town. As a result, at Catorce, is found the Mexican people in their primitive purity. They know but little of the outside world. Its inhabitants are engaged in silver mining. Thousands of dollars of bullion is secured yearly. Miles of tunnels extend in all directions, and thousands of dollars have been expended on the mine."

"The streets of Catorce run up and down the mountainside at an angle of forty-five degrees, making the use of wheeled vehicles impossible. All transportation is done by the locos, or by the Carregadores, who are able to carry great weights on their backs suspended by bands from around their foreheads. With 300 pounds on their backs these men will move along the steep, rocky roads. The only level spot of ground in Catorce is its plaza, which is very beautiful, as also is its cathedral, which is richly decorated with silver and precious stones. Catorce, which is the Spanish word meaning fountain, got its name, so the legend runs, from fourteen bandits who discovered the rich deposits of silver in 1580 and at once made it their headquarters. It is indeed a wonderful and interesting place, grand in scenery, and interesting by reason of the life and habits of its people."

AN ENGLISH PARTY WHIP.

One of the Quaker-Salaried Positions in the House of Commons.

Reverting to the duties of a whip and patronage secretary, in English politics, it is an astonishing fact that gentlemen of birth and social position can be found to fill the post. The junior whips' duties are not onerous, but irksome. They sit or stand in the outer lobby of the house from 10:30 to 11:30 at night and they ask every member who means to vote, he is going, whether he is paired, and when he will be back. If he is not paired they have either to find a pair for him or to prevent him from passing out, coaxing or threats. The former for preference. When their party is in these gentlemen have to attend to their office from 12 to 3. Their hours of duty are therefore from 11 a. m. to 12 p. m., or thirteen hours, with intervals for lunch and dinner, and this they do for £1,000 a year. When their party is out they do it, minus their office work, for nothing.

In addition to keeping an eye on his juniors, the chief whip, who has £2,000 a year, deals with the members on their more touchy side. It is he who practically distributes ribbons and titles and sees that cards of invitation are sent to the man and that no one is given undue preference—a delicate duty which requires much tact and skill.

EMPLOYED STRATEGY.

Didn't Dare to Discharge Mary Ann. The young husband, somewhat surprised when his wife came into the office. She opened the conversation at once.

"I want enough money to go out of town for a few days."

"You will have to take your meals down town for a few days."

"Why, what does this mean?"

"It means just this. I got a messenger boy to come to the house for Mary Ann to tell her that she was wanted at her aunt's, and as soon as she got around the corner I shut up the house and locked it and ran away. When she comes back she won't find any one there. We don't want to hear of her, so it's all right, and I wanted to discharge her, but you know I never would dare to tell her to go, and I knew you wouldn't dare, and don't you think your little wife knows pretty well how to manage? Say yes, now, or I'll break down and cry right here in the office."

Booth's Cure for Truancy.

School principals in Boston are not much troubled by truancy in their schools. Every morning, directly after the opening of the school, every principal makes out a list of the names and addresses of the pupils who are absent without known cause and hands it to the policeman on the beat. It then becomes the business of this functionary to call at the addresses given and ascertain the cause of absence. By this systematic method absences are very few. No youngster is going to dodge his arithmetic and geography when he knows perfectly well that at dinner time a big policeman will call at his father's house to know why he is not at school.

The Fabulous Cockatrice.

The cockatrice, like the basilisk, was one of the fabulous monsters of antiquity. Its very look was fatal to life. It breathed fire, and on that account could only live in desert regions, where there was no danger of its fiery exhalations consuming vegetation. Travelers who were forced to cross a desert formerly took with them a cock, whose crowing, it was believed, would kill all the cockatrices in hearing.

Precautions Against Anarchists.

Because of the recent bomb outrage in London, precautions are taken before admitting strangers to the galleries of legislative chambers of Europe. In Rome only forty-eight men are admitted at any one time, and in England no stranger is to be seen in the houses of parliament.

AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

Persons who sympathize with the afflicted will rejoice with D. E. Carr, of 1235 Harris street Kansas City. He is an old sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, but has not heretofore been troubled in this climate. Last winter he went into Wisconsin, and in consequence has had another attack. "It came upon me again very sudden and severe," he said. "My joints ached and became inflamed; sore to touch, or almost to look at. Upon the urgent request of my mother-in-law I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm to reduce the swelling and ease and pain and to my agreeable surprise, it did both. I have used three fifty-cent bottles and believe it to be the best thing for rheumatism, pains and swelling extant. For sale by Moore & Orme.

If King Solomon was alive he would now say: "Go to the traveling man, learn his ways, and be wise." Mr. C. W. Battell, a Cincinnati traveling man representing the Queen City Printing Ink Co. after suffering intensely for two or three days with lameness of shoulder, resulting from rheumatism, completely cured it with two applications of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This remedy is gaining a wide reputation for its prompt cures of rheumatism, lame back, sprains, swellings and lacerations 50 cent bottles are for sale by Moore & Orme.

AYER'S O. V. R. R.

Sarsaparilla
ADMITTED
READ RULE XV.

"Articles that are in any way dangerous or offensive, also patent medicines, nostrums, and empirical preparations, whose ingredients are concealed, will not be admitted to the Exposition."

Why was Ayer's Sarsaparilla admitted? Because it is not a patent medicine, not a nostrum, not a secret preparation, not dangerous, not an experiment, and because it is all that a family medicine should be.
