ABOUT WHEAT

Some Valuable Suggestions from a Wheat Cultivator and Grower of Wheat, From Seedling to Market.

There is no subject which attracts the attention of the farmer, in this his busy season, more than the cultivation and commerce of the grain. There have been many suggestions made for the improvement of the crop, and one of the most important is the selection of the best seedling stock. The writer of this article is a farmer and grower of wheat, and he has had considerable experience in the matter. He believes that the selection of the best seedling stock is the first step in the process of improving the crop. He recommends the use of varieties that have been successfully tested and found to be the most profitable. He also advises the use of seed supplied by reputable dealers.

REACHING WINTER IN COLD LANDS

The subject of winterizing wheat in cold lands is of great importance, and the writer of this article has given much thought to the matter. He believes that the best results are obtained by using proper precautions, such as the application of lime or manure, to the soil before the winter sets in. He also recommends the use of a good grade of seed, and the proper storage of the crop during the winter months. The writer believes that the best results are obtained when the wheat is winterized early in the season, and that the use of too much lime or manure should be avoided.

GETTING WINTER END ON CROPS

The subject of getting winter end on crops is of great importance, and the writer of this article has given much thought to the matter. He believes that the best results are obtained by using proper precautions, such as the application of lime or manure, to the soil before the winter sets in. He also recommends the use of a good grade of seed, and the proper storage of the crop during the winter months. The writer believes that the best results are obtained when the wheat is winterized early in the season, and that the use of too much lime or manure should be avoided.