HIS PATRONAGE.

PLANS THE NEW GOVERNOR WILL GIVE AWAY.

SOME ARE FAT ONES.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 7.—Governor-elect Bradley will be inaugurated nearly a month in advance of the rest of the State officers, and the pressure upon him for the crumbs of official patronage for that reason will be all the greater. Even common sense does not pretend to name absolutely any of his appointees. It is supposed, however, that Walter Forrester, of Louisville, if he desires it, will come in for one of the best places within the gift of the new Governor. It is intimated by some, however, that Mr. Forrester will not ask for an appointment, but will wait with the hope of a change in the political complexion of the next National Administration, in which event he would count on securing the Internal Revenue Collectorship through Col. Bradley's influence. Ex-Postmaster John Barrett, of Louisville, is also tipped by many for a place. It is thought he may be made Adjutant General, a position which would require only part of his time, and would not necessitate his permanent residence here.

W. P. Scott, of Pulaski county, who is nephew of the Governor-elect, is almost certain to be the private secretary. Speculation does not name any of the probable appointees of the other offices.

There was gloom yesterday on State House Square when it became established that the entire Republican State ticket had won. It had been hoped that the back counties would show up with Democratic majorities sufficient to overcome the early reported Republican majorities, but hope was abandoned soon and the minor officials began speculating about whom their successors will be. It is evident that the rank and file of white Republicans in the State will make a rush almost on a mass upon the State officials-elect who have the giving out of State patronage, but, of course, only about one out of every hundred of those who are expecting jobs will get them. In the case of Col. Stone, for instance, who has been elected Auditor, it is said, had in his possession even before his election four thousand applications for places under his appointment. It is probable that all of the other Republicans elect have similar papers about their person, and a lot of disappointment is in store. The patronage which will be given out with the new order of things is as follows: The Governor will appoint a private secretary, salary $1,200; State Inspector and Examiner, salary $3,000; Adjutant General, salary $2,000; Assistant Adjutant General, salary $1,200; Arsenal Keeper, salary $200; Inspector of Mines, salary $1,800, and $800 as Curator of the Geological Survey; Assistant Inspector of Mines, salary $1,500. The members of the State Board of Equalization, whose pay shall be $5 per day for some time as the board is in session. Superintendent of Feeble-minded Institute at Frankfort, salary $2,000. Three asylum superintendents, salaries $2,000 nine assistant physicians and three stewards, salaries ranging from $1,200 to $850, board at State expense in asylum.

The Secretary of State will have the appointment of the Assistant Secretary of State, whose appointment must be confirmed by the Governor, salary $1,800; two clerks in the Corporation Department, fees aggregating $1,800 and $1,200. The Auditor will appoint the Insurance Commissioner, salary $4,000; Deputy Insurance Commissioner, salary $2,000; two clerks in the Insurance Bureau, salaries $1,800 and $1,200.

Assistant Auditor, salary $2,000; Chief Clerk, salary $1,800; nine clerks salaries $1,500; and one clerk, salary $1,300. The Treasurer will have the naming of his assistant, whose salary will be $1,200.

The Commissioner of Agriculture will appoint one clerk, salary $1,200, and a Grain Inspector and Grain Weigher Inspector at Louisville, salaries; fees optional with Commissioner, usually aggregating $3,000 and $4,000; weigher, fees worth $1,500. The Superintendent of Public Instruction will appoint three clerks, SALEM.

Salem, Ky., Nov. 4, 1895. Of all the great men that ever lived in Livingston county, there was none that had more warm friends than the Hon. Caswell Bennett, who departed this life about two years ago. He came from Virginia, and located in Smithland Ky when a mere lad and like most all men who have left their "foot prints on the sands of time," he began life poor. He told me one time, that a young lawyer, had to go through the process of starvation, before he could succeed in the practice of law. He won the reputation of having the best legal mind of any lawyer that ever lived in this county. And no one will deny it, that ever saw him, that he had the longest head on him of any man in the State. He was for many years one of the judges of the court of Appeals, and his decisions won for him the love, and respect of the entire people of this grand old commonwealth.

HER FIRST APPEARANCE.

Mary Anderson de Navarro Writes of Her Stage Debut And of Her Clouding Sorrow.

Mary Anderson de Navarro in her stage career memoirs, which will be published in The Ladies Home Journal (the opening chapters in December issue), gives the public a most interesting and entertaining view of the trials and hardships she successfully combated in following out her conviction that the stage presented to her the opportunity for a splendid career. She exultantly refers to her debut in Louisville, Kentucky, on Saturday evening November 27, 1875, upon which occasion the "tall, shy and awkward" girl of sixteen interpreted Shakespeare's love-lorn "Juliet." The performance was arranged upon two days' notice—time for but a single rehearsal—and the aspiring Kentucky girl was jubilant when the theatre and a stock company were offered her, upon condition that she play without pay. Her happiness, however, was not unclouded, for of the event she writes with touching pathos: "That Thursday" (the day that her first appearance was arranged) "was one of the happiest days of all my life, filled as it was with the brightest hope and anticipation. Only one black cloud hung over it: the thought of Nonie and my grandparents who were all very dear to me. Had I known then that I would never see the face of the former, that he would die, my mother and I far away from him, and that almost until his death he would refuse to forgive or see me unless I abandoned the stage-life which he thought so injurious—my sinful—I would even then have renounced what was within my grasp. This estrangement saddened many years of my life, and has cast a shadow over all the otherwise bright and happy memories of him who was the father, friend and playmate of our childhood days."

Mrs. de Navarro evidently did not suffer from stage fright, for she writes that she did not impatiently wait for her "cue" to go on. At last it came. "Then, in a flash, I was on the stage, conscious of a wall of yellow light before me, and a burst of prolonged applause." The performance was filled with rather depressing incidents; one of the players forgot his lines and had to be prompted by the youthful star; "Romeo" neglected to bring his dagger, and "Juliet" had to perform her dispatch with a hairpin, while the lamp that hung in "Juliet's" tomb fell and badly burned her hands and arms. "Despite of these," she writes, "the night was a success, and I knew that my stage career had begun in earnest."

HOW TO PREVENT CROUP.

SOME READINGS THAT WILL PROVE INTERESTING TO YOUNG MOTHERS. HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THE DISEASE. Croup is a terror to young mothers and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlin's Cough Remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by J. H. Orme & Bro. Druggists.

FOR PRESIDENT.

A Boom Already Started For Kentucky's New Governor.

Louisville, Ky., November 6.—The friends of Colonel Bradley have launched a Presidential boom for him. Governor Morton, as well as the political champions of Governor McKinley, have all been in constant correspondence with the friends of Colonel Bradley and have urged them to push his claims for the second place on the ticket. Colonel Bradley has heretofore refused to discuss the matter, but tonight it is announced by Mr. Walter Forrester, Secretary of Colonel Bradley's Campaign Committee, that Colonel Bradley's claims for National recognition will be urged in the next National Convention.

General Dudley was in Louisville during the Grand Army encampment, and had a long conference with Colonel Bradley's friends, in which the importance of Kentucky was discussed as probably having the deciding vote in the next National Convention, with the possibility of its Representatives in Congress having the deciding votes in the case of the election of President should be through the house. General Dudley declared that Kentucky would be the pivotal state in '96, and Colonel Bradley would be a most prominent figure in national politics.

The friends of governor Morton are urging the Bradley people to support the New York man on the ground that the relative geographical positions of New York and Kentucky would render Morton's nomination for President almost decisive in favor of Bradley's nomination for Vice President. On the other hand, the McKinley men are arguing that McKinley and Bradley would make the strongest ticket that could be put up because of the personal magnetism of the two men and the prestige that they enjoy of having won many gallant victories. It is also urged in favor of the Ohio-Kentucky combination, that it would thus divert the ticket of any extreme tendencies on either the currency or tariff questions, both men representing states in which manufacturing and agricultural interests are of nearly equal importance and where public sentiment is decidedly conservative.

Colonel Bradley will come to Louisville tomorrow from his home in Lancaster and will consult with his friends, and Colonel Bradley may be announced as a Presidential aspirant.

PLACE OF TORMENT.

Buddhist Idea of Hell is Far More Terrible Than the Christian's.

The place of torment to which all wicked Buddhists are apt to be assigned on the day of final reckoning is a terrible place of punishment. This Buddhist hell is a sort of apartment house, divided into eight "easy stages." In the first the poor victim is compelled to walk for untold ages in his bare feet over hills thickly set with red-hot needles, points upward. In the second stage the skin is all carefully flayed or rasped from the body and irritating mixtures applied. In the third stage the nails, hairs and eyes are picked out and the denuded body sawed and planned into all sorts of fantastic shapes. The fourth stage is the fifth of the left side of the body and the denuded head are carefully toasted, Yoma, the Buddhist stean, superintending the work. In the sixth stage the arms are torn from the body and thrown into an immense vat among the eyes, nails and hair previously removed. Then, in plain hearing of the sore footed, blind, maimed, roasted and bleeding victim, the whole horrid mass is pounded into a jelly. In the seventh stage the other side of the victim and his feet are roasted brown, and then comes the eighth and last stage, in which the candidate is thrown into the bottomless pit of perdition.—St. Louis Republic.

A Bible With Negro Angles, Etc.

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 31.—An enterprising fakir has stocked Montgomery and other black belt counties with Bibles profusely illustrated with negro angels, negro divinities, etc. It is about a dollar and a quarter book, but retails for $8—$2.50 cash, the balance on installments. Almost every negro family buys one. It is said that the vendor is reaping a harvest.

ONE YEAR - ONE DOLLAR

The boys are already out hunting the offices.

We have passed from an old to a new era of politics.

Salem seems to be the Bells Mines of Livingston county.

Cleveland is a Jonah to his party except in presidential elections.

Will knock 'em out next time, but next time is sometime off yet.

If Dave Woods had been in it this time, he wouldn't have been in it.

The passage of Kentucky to the Republican column was just as easy.

Though badly disfigured, the Democrats will still be found in the ring.

The Republicans out side of the State are enjoying it as much as those inside.

To him that asketh not, but little is given. If you even want office, remember this.

Put up your knives boys; they are gleaming already with good Democratic blood.

A Lexington paper announces that Joe Blackburn will be the next congressman from his old district.

Judge Pratt is after the "regulators," and he is generally fairly successful at getting things he goes after.

As many people voted for Hardin without the platform as would have voted for the platform without Hardin.

"I will vote for whom I please"—J. G. Carlisle. It is not altogether clear that he pleased the man for whom he voted.

The futher we get away from it, the better we like. It feels good after it quits hurting. The Lord chastise them who love it.

The November reports to the Department of Agriculture at Washington make the corn crop the largest in volume on record.

The towns trustees are talking of abolishing the street lamps. The oil lamps used have proven a dismal, dingy failure.

Now they lay it all at the door of Wat and Joe. These bad boys should have changed their politics, when the boss at Washington said so.

Dr. Deboe would like to be United States Senator, and if his party has the majority, the Press sincerely hopes that he will win the honor.

If there were no offices connected with politics, lots of folks would be as cold in the support of their party as they are in support of their church.

Our old friend Dr. Clark thinks there is a mistake somewhere. More men promised to vote for him than the books show kept that promise, and he would like to know where they are "at."

The First District is still the old Gibraltar. The majority is the largest, but when compared with its former self it looks like somebody had had a monkey and parrot time of it.

The Democrats might nominate Arkansas, on the platform, "no more punching," and hold the Administration in line, but we doubt it.

"Free silver is dead," is the cry of our gold bug friends. Not exactly, some of the free-silver fellows defeated, there would be some sense in the senseless talk now indulged in by some sensible men.

Pettit got twelve more votes in this county than Weaver got in 1892. That is a gain of four per year. Now figure how long it will take them, at that increase, to catch up with either of the old parties.

Livingston county is still Democratic, but it got so near the dead line that Crittenden county Democrats would have held their breath while waiting for the return, if some body had not knocked the breath out of them before their own county was complete.

The goldbug papers appear to be getting some satisfaction out of the result. Had a goldbug been nominated instead of Hardin, the silver papers would have been grinning behind the door at a similar catastrophe. It had to be done this time, and what matters it which faction was in the lead.

The Legislature a Tie.

The latest returns indicate that the State Legislature on joint ballot will be a tie. The make up of that body is as follows:

HOUSE.

Republicans 52

Democrats 46

Populists 2

SENATE.

Democrats 22

Republicans 16

Adding the strength in each house there are 68 Democrats and 68 Republicans. One of the Populists is said to be a Republican and the other a Democrat, and if they vote that way, when the two houses assemble to elect a United States Senator the vote will be 69 and 69. The Republicans have filed notice that they will contest the seat of two Democrats.

Official Count.

The official count of the vote in this county was practically the same as the Press' report last week. Hardin ran 39 votes ahead of Tyler, the candidate for lieutenant governor, while Bradley ran about 75 votes ahead of his ticket.

The vote in the Legislative race in the two counties was as follows:

BLACKBURN.

Crittenden county 1257

Livingston county 537

Total 1794

NICKELL.

Crittenden county 811

Livingston county 693

Total 1504

Blackburn's majority 290

Clark's vote in Crittenden was 223, in Livingston 193. Total 416.

Frank's vote in Crittenden 81, in Livingston 11. Total 92.

There are some crumbly conclusions even to defeat. The many-times millionaire Senator from Ohio, Calvin Brice, will not go back to the United States Senate. The Legislature's Republican and a Republican will succeed him. Brice is a Democrat in name only.

Alabama is to have a fight square on the currency question. Senator Morgan and others prominent in affairs have held a conference and so decided. Kentucky's bleeding nose has not cooled their ardor. Here's to them and may they fare better than the land of the shagbells.

The New York Journal of Commerce has been figuring on the status of the United States Senate on the currency question. It finds that when the Senate convenes in December, it will be composed of forty-five sound money Senators and an equal number of "silver" Senators. This is a pretty good showing for a cause that is continually pronounced dead.

Crittenden and Livingston counties voted largely for prohibition laws, but lightly for prohibition candidates. There is a necessity for several political parties, however; they give more people an opportunity to run for office, and it is relevant for those who run, and harmful to one else, there are none so mean as to object.

The burning question now is, Did Dempsey get there? If Mr. Dempsey can answer it, he will obligate divers friends by letting us know where he is. He was on a platform, the import of which a wayfarer man, though a fool, could understand, though making the time that brought Mr. Bradley under the wire.

Since the election Henry Waterson breaks forth in one of his sweet poems from the sunny south. He sings like a nightingale, and the theme of his song is the Atlanta Exposition. If he had just made a little of his dear old music before the election, things might have been different, but he is a rare avis that can sing but can't be made to sing when he wills otherwise.

Later returns indicate that there will be more than one applicant for this county for the deputy warden's place at Edlyville. Mr. J. A. Davidson, the well known citizen, will make a vigorous fight for the place; he will have strong backing. Mr. J. D. Gregory, an active young Republican, is already circulating a petition, and proposes to make the man who beats him hustle.

In the whirligig of politics the ins come out and the outs go in, and there is nothing strange in the fact that a number of the Republicans in this place have an eye on some of the good offices now held by Democrats. Among those who will be applicants is Mr. A. J. Pickens, who wants to be deputy warden of the Edlyville penitentiary. Mr. Pickens is one of the best men in Crittenden county; he is thoroughly competent, and as deserving as any man in the State. Should he succeed in capturing the plum, the others who want minor places, would have a good friend and an influential man where he could do them some good. Of course it is not our fight, but we are for some first, and then the world afterwards, whether it be a Republican or a Democrat dance.

The happiest man in the legislative district, any day since the election, is Rev. E. B. Blackburn, the member of the House elect. He appreciates the honor and the pacific smile that overshadows his face, together with that hearty handshake of his, will convince you that he has a happy way of expressing his appreciation. He is a man of commanding mien, has plenty of good sense, knows how to express himself and is as companionable a gentleman as you will meet with in a day's journey. He came from Caldwell county to Crittenden a few years ago, and has served as pastor for some of the leading Baptist churches of the county, which is evidence of his popularity as a preacher. He is a staunch Baptist, and at the same time as staunch a Republican as you will meet in the two counties.

It is a pity that the Legislature is evenly divided. The United States Senatorship is a rich plum, in both party and personal advantages, and the temptation to step a little aside from the path of rectitude to win it, will be great. It is thought that the Republicans will unseat enough members of the House, where they already have a majority, to give them a majority on joint ballot. To meet this it has been suggested that Democrats follow the same tactics in the Senate. It is to be hoped that Kentucky will never be disgraced by such "practical" politics. Better have no Senator than to blot our escutcheon with schemes of this kind. We are loath to think the Republicans will adopt such measures, and if they should, Democrats should remember that two wrongs do not make a right. We had better lose a Senator, than forfeit our claims to self-respect. Let the balloting go on, and if no election is had, the governor can appoint one. The unseating process is wrong in principle, pernicious in practice, and the disposition of Kentuckians generally to see the fair thing, and their promptness to right wrongs, would speedily put aside the party that would thus connive with dishonesty, whether the game of the political party began with a D or an R.

Mr. Carlisle, who, if we are daff on the silver question, let us draft a few years ago, said the recent election had a moral to it. It might also serve to advise a tale and the subject matter of that tale boiled down to a few plain words is Mr. Carlisle can not carry Kentucky for the Presidency next year. Before the election he came to the State with the prestige of his former popularity, and backed up by all the potent influences an administration has at its command and drove home the wedge that split asunder the factions of a Democracy that might have been united. On the eve of the election he came again and with seven words showed that he had been feeding on meat that the Kentucky Caesar of old was not wont to take into his system. If his utterance just before the election had been, "I am a Democrat and will vote the Democrat ticket," instead of "I will vote for whom I please," there would have been some evidence that the ozone in the atmosphere around Washington was slightly mixed, at least, with the Democratic element that the leaders in the Kentucky fight were breathing. If Mr. Carlisle, the Titan in politics, shows such an ungracious spirit at a critical moment, what should he expect from us unpretentious Lilliputians, especially those who have been dominated cranks and jabberwocks by his bed fellows.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

The constant goodness and forbearance of Almighty God which have been vouchsafed to the American people during the year which is just past call for all sincere acknowledgments of devout gratitude. To the end, therefore, that we may with thankful hearts unite in extolling the loving care of our Heavenly Father, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby appoint and set apart Thursday, the twenty-eighth day of the present month, to be kept, and observed by all our people.

We are the people this time—O. S. Young.

On that day let us forgo our usual occupations, and in our accustomed place of worship join in rendering thanks to the Giver of every good and perfect gift for the bounteous returns that have rewarded our labors in the fields and in the busy marts of trade; for the peace and order that have prevailed throughout the land; for our protection from pestilence and dire calamity, and for other blessings that have been showered upon us from an open hand.

And with our thanksgiving, let us humbly beseech the Lord to incline the hearts of the people unto Him that He will not leave us for forsake us as a nation, but will continue to us His mercy and protecting care, guiding us in the path of national prosperity and happiness, imbuing us with rectitude and virtue and keeping alive within us a patriotic love for the free institutions which have given to us our national heritage.

And let us also on the day of our thanksgiving especially remember the poor and needy, and by deeds of charity let us show the sincerity of our gratitude. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this fourth day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, and in the one hundred and twentieth year of the independence of the United States.

Grover Cleveland.

By the President.

ABOUT 11,000.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 13.—The clerks in the office of the Secretary of State finished their tabulations to day on 112 counties. The totals as based on these returns are:

Governor—Hardin 136,463; Bradley 140,399; Pettit 15,912; Demaree 3,816. The counties not yet received are expected to give a net Republican majority of 5,000; hence Bradley's plurality may be 11,000.

Dempsey All Right

Owensboro, Ky., Nov. 12.—Official returns from every county except Caldwell give Dempsey a majority of 927 over Porter for Railroad Commissioner. For Governor Caldwell gave Bradley 1,207 and Hardin 797. On this basis Dempsey has a small but safe majority.

The Scientific Churn.

The Only Churn on Earth

That Utilizes the Air in the Process of Buttermaking

WE WILL GIVE

$1,000 REWARD!

For any Churn that will make a better quality of Butter in the same length of time.

Pat. Dec. 13, 1887.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION:

It is put up on scientific principles for Prime Butter Making. It is cleaned and adjusted, simplest constructed, and most durable in make, of any churn ever offered to the American public. Every particle of cream is agitated thoroughly and alike, and at the same time the oxygenating process is complete. It will readily be seen from the Cut that the power can easily be attached to a stone jar or the ordinary reciprocating churn. The dasher-blades are formed spirally on two shafts. The inner shaft is hollow and when in operation the dashers run in opposite directions, drawing the contents of the churn from the bottom, causing a slight vacuum, which is filled with air admitted through the air shaft. The advantage is maintained by the interior of the churn is as follows: The rapid rotating of the dashers cause the air to mingle intimately with the milk, and the oxygen in the air combines with the sugar in the milk and produces lactic acid which curds the casein (cheese matter), thus separating from butter when the butter globules are ruptured by agitation.

No other method, patented or unpatented, can so easily and continuously lift the cream from the bottom, and so thoroughly agitate and combine with it the necessary oxygen as these spiral dashers do. The operation, in a measure, needless, no plunging or jarring motion is heard or felt. A six year old child can do the churning with perfect ease, while the mother is in an adjoining room entertaining visitors, who will know nothing of any churning being done.

By referring to our set page in grocery and running round pull at the side of the churn, shows plainly that with a small rope it can be attached to wind pump, or any lower power desirable can be used, such as dog, sheep or goat power, or it may be run by crank on smaller wheels. By loosening set screws on legs they can be widened or narrowed to suit width of churn to which they are applied. There is no friction or bearing in churn, all the gearing is above the lid.

We are now located at Marion, Ky., for the purpose of introducing the World Renowned Scientific Churn—the churn above all other churns, so much so that it has become a household word everywhere you go.

To introduce this wonderful Scientific Churn we have rented the large and commodious stables formerly occupied by J. A. Davidson.

We use the office in which to transact our business, and the stable to shelter our fine blooded horses and the best buggies made.

Mr. R. H. Browning, the patentee, is now with us for a short time, as he cannot remain with one crew long, having 65 men now at work, and would have a few more. Mr. J. D. O'Bannon, his general agent, is also here, with Messrs. Lee, Seligson and T. J. Elliott, and the latter engineers will call on you as your home, as they you this wonderful Scientific Churn. If any should be overlooked, please call at our office, as we take great pleasure in showing you the wonderful churn, and a full and complete list of the names of persons in this county who have given us orders for our churn.

TWO FIRES.

Residences of John Easley and Frank Conger Destroyed.

Monday afternoon the residences of Mr. John Easley, on his farm near Repton, was destroyed by fire. Mr. Easley was in town when the misfortune befall him his family was at home and succeeded in saving some of their beds a few pieces of furniture, and two trunks. Everything else was burned. The loss is a heavy one for Mr. Easley, who purchased that place and moved upon it a few months ago. He had no insurance. The fire it is thought originated from a defect in the chimney, and the chimney was rendered defective by the recent earthquake.

The residence of Mr. Frank Conger of the Pleasant Hill neighborhood, was burned Tuesday morning. No one was at home when the fire began, Mr. Conger was at a neighbor's, and his attention was attracted by a huge volume of smoke, he went home with all speed, but when he reached there, the flames had gained such headway that he was enabled to save but a few articles from the greedy flames.

VITALS OF A BATTLESHIP.

The Mace of Machinery Moves Almost Without a Sound.

In order to gain some idea of the complicated mechanism over which the engineers must exercise a ceaseless watchfulness, guided by intimate knowledge, one should descend to the depths where the vital parts of a battleship are in motion at a time when steam is up for maneuvering speed.

That means little more than half the rate she is capable of being driven at, but it is enough for a man unaccustomed to such situations. In spite of all attempts at ventilation the heat down there seems stifling at first by contrast with the pleasant breeze on deck, and the swift movements of wheels, cranks and piston rods are bewildering. Even when all this machinery is at rest one would shrink from an attempt to count its many parts. The valves alone and the means of controlling them would baffle enumeration, and only a vague impression of a tangled network remains on one's mind as the result of prolonged contemplation. The bewildering is increased when all these complicated parts are revolving or gliding to and fro like shuttles in a weaver's loom so rapidly that the eye cannot follow their movement. How it is possible for anybody to localize a mishap that occurs in the midst of so much whirl is a mystery to the uninitiated and not easily explained even by the engineers themselves. They have to be guided mostly by sound, occasionally by sight and sometimes by smell. Every piece of machinery connected with the motive power has to be duplicated for vessels propelled by twin screws, as all our effective battleships, fast cruisers and improved torpedo boats are.

Three port and starboard engines act independently, but so uniform are their revolutions that there is seldom more than a fractional difference between the two sets—a difference that could only just be measured on the 81 inch stroke of a piston rod. How enormous is the force exercised by these engines one can realize only when standing where the throbs of the propeller as it beats the water may be distinctly felt. This is near the vessel's stern post. A few yards from it the vibrations become attenuated to a thrill. The great shaft, turning at a rate of nearly 100 revolutions every minute, works with absolute noiseless energy, and its movement is so rapid as to be perceptible only because of the ripple of light that ripples along it reflected from the electric lights that glow night and day in this part of the ship when engines are in motion. A similar absence of all sounds that might indicate friction is a characteristic of every part of the motive power in a battleship. Words of command can be heard throughout the engine room though uttered little louder than an ordinary conversational tone. Were it otherwise, the engineer on duty would be harassed by intolerable noise and the noise would be a constant source of confusion to him through electric wire or voice tube from the executive officer on the bridge, who is responsible for the ship's safety.

At cruising speed of anything between five and eight knots an hour the 14,000 tons of armored hull, batteries, batteries and less important superstructure are driven with so little apparent effort that the great battleship seems almost motionless. The vibrations running through her mighty framework are scarcely perceptible on deck, and one must be very close to the engines before he can hear any sound of their regular pulsations.—London News.

A Cameo Worth $50,000.

One of the rarest and most valuable cameos in the world is now in the possession of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. It is a head of Jupiter Aegrochus, exquisitely carved from a single chrysoprase and is 7 inches long by nearly 5 inches in width. It dates from the second century A. D. and is said to be the finest specimen of cut chrysoprase now known to exist. The antiquarians prize it above price because it shows both the oak leaf and the eagle, or armor, a combination known in only two other representations of Jupiter. This rare gem is valued at $50,000 and is a part of the famous Sempronius collection.—St. Louis Republic.

Expense Regardless of Pleasure.

A visitor who passed more than one summer in Newport has been struck by the statement that some of the richest sports there devote themselves to pleasure regardless of expense, and suggests that more familiarity with the subject would have indicated to him that they devote themselves to expense regardless of pleasure.

Sorry He Spoke.

First Laborer—What a boss man you are! "Ho, hurra!"

Second Laborer—Not "ho, hurra," but "hurry." That means he wants you to work faster.

First Laborer—I sorry I ask.—New York Weekly.

A Golden Rule Lost.

The golden rule, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you," is no more beautiful in its sentiment and meaning than the old saying, "Be mortuus noli bo-mum" (Say nothing but good of the dead). Both have come to us through the ages, and both are in a state of innocuous desuetude. I do not believe I know a man or woman today who lives up to either rule. Our dear old mothers drummed the first into us as we grew up, and when we became of age we departed from it. The other seems to have been an unwritten law, prompted by the chivalrous spirit of protecting those who cannot protect themselves, and I regret to say that it has fallen into disuse. No sooner does a man die of one of the diseases than the vultures gather about to peck at his reputation and destroy his character.—New York Press.

THEOPHILE GAUTIER'S CATS.

The Novelist Had One That Thought a Parrot Human.

Theophile Gautier had an especial fondness for all animals, but cats were his particular favorites. One of the first was Childbrand, a short haired, fawn colored beauty striped with black velvet like the clown in Hugo's "Roi S'Amuse." He had great green eyes, almond shaped and surrounded by bands of black.

Mme. Theophile was another favorite: red-sh and white breasted, pink nose and blue eyes. She dwelt with him on terms of great intimacy, sleeping with him, sitting on the arm of his chair when he wrote, following him on his walks through his garden and always present at meals, when she sometimes stole attractive bits from his plate.

He tells an amusing tale about her and it astonished her greatly by its gyrations with back at a claw and the strange motions of its awkward green body.

She sat for a long time as still as an Egyptian mummy cat watching it with meditation, for she had never witnessed such a peculiar example of natural history. Finally she seemed to say, "I have it now. It is a green chicken."

Meanwhile the parrot watched the cat with increasing alarm, ruffling its feathers and whacking its beak uneasily against its cage. Presently the cat seemed to say, "Well, even if it is a green chicken very likely it is good to eat."

"I watched the scene," said Gautier. "Her paws gradually spread and contracted; she gave alternate purrs and growls and prepared for a spring. The parrot, perceiving the danger, said in a deep bass voice, 'Have you breakfasted, Jacquot?'"

"A blast from a trumpet, a pistol shot, an earthquake could not have frightened her more. All of her orthologous ideas were upset. 'What more?' said the parrot; 'the king's roast beef?'"

"The cat's face expressed terror. 'He is not a bird. He is a monsieur,' she seemed to say. The green creature then sang a French couplet about good wine, and the cat, feeling for her life, took refuge under the bed."

Mme. Theophile had all the tastes of a great French lady, being especially fond of perfumes, but paradoxically and verily would throw her into ecstasies. She liked music, too, but sharp, high notes affected her, and she would put her paw up on a singer's lips when such a high note distressed her.

A third favorite was brought to Gautier from Havana by a friend. This was an Andalusian white as a swan, the founder of the "white dynasty." He received the name of Pierrot, and as he grew older and more dignified this was extended to Don Pierrot de Navarre.

He always loved to be with people, adored Gautier's literary friends and used to sit silently when they discussed great questions, sometimes putting his head on one side and occasionally making a little cry. He used to play with books, turning over the leaves with his paws and going to sleep on top of them. He never seemed to be at all disturbed when he was disturbed, and no matter how late it was he would bound out of the dark to greet him and so soon as the candle was lit scamper ahead like a page.

His companion was a beautiful puss, white as snow, and she was named "Seraphina," for Balzac's romance.—Boston Globe.

Common Mistakes as to Americans.

There are two great mistakes commonly made as to Americans. One is that they are original inventors. The other is that they are humorists. Neither of these propositions is true. It is true that if asked to create a knitting machine or a typewriter or a reaper they will put together well known mechanical devices to accomplish the result. But this is designing, not inventing, and the cause of so much work of this kind being done in America is the high price of labor, which must be replaced by steam and machinery. So humor, with, of course, some brilliant exceptions, their periodical literature filled with jokes and used to sit silently when they discussed great questions, sometimes putting his head on one side and occasionally making a little cry. He used to play with books, turning over the leaves with his paws and going to sleep on top of them. He never seemed to be at all disturbed when he was disturbed, and no matter how late it was he would bound out of the dark to greet him and so soon as the candle was lit scamper ahead like a page.

Fine Prospect.

"Didn't Smithett nearly talk you to death?"

"Yes, but it's ten years since I saw him, and he has to tell me he knows."

"Well, it will take him another ten years to tell you all he doesn't know."—Detroit Free Press.

Oil Strips In the Gulf.

Ten miles off shore almost directly south of the spot where the Saline river empties into the gulf of Mexico there is a curious, calm tract of water known to the sailors as the oil ponds. No visible boundary separates these "ponds" from the remainder of the gulf, but ship captains have long since learned that it is a safe spot for a vessel during a storm. The only explanation is that these oil ponds are caused by petroleum springs which open in the bottom of the gulf.—St. Louis Republic.

Telephone Whistles.

In large offices and noisy factories the bell of the telephone may often ring itself hoarse before any one hears it. To obviate this a steam whistle may be attached. The instrument is called from the exchange; the bell rings, and the electric current passing through a magnet releases a weight which pulls the lever of the whistle.

THE GOOD QUALITIES OF THE LEMON AS A LIFE PRESERVER.

The writer had corralled a western man in a hotel lobby and was holding him up for all there was in it, which was a good deal, considering that the man hadn't been east for ten years or more and had never fallen into the clutches of the journalist in quest of an item of interest.

"You were a sailor, were you?"

"Yes, and it reminds me of a time when I served an excellent lemon as a life preserver."

"It isn't always used for that, is it?"

"Well, no," laughed the westerner. "I've seen it do prompt service when there was no other rope handy and the horse thief was in the act. It was different," he went on. "I know because I was the one preserver."

"I was in the canyon country looking for some cattle, and one of the boys and I had gone off the trail to a stream to take a bath, as you might call it in the east, for it was hotter than blazes, and shade was not plentiful. We went into the water some distance above a turbulent rapid and a waterfall of 25 or 30 feet, and as we didn't go to swim so much as to get cool all we needed was enough water to cover us, and that's all my companion needed, and I was, however, more ambitious, and having been a fine swimmer when I was in the east I thought I would branch out a bit. I was soon branching out extensively, and the first thing I knew the swift water caught me, and down I went toward the fall. I tried to pull for the shore, but it was no good, and then I set up a yell that made the canyon echo, and my partner came after me along the shore. I was 50 feet out in the stream struggling, and there wasn't any more sign of salvation for me than if I had been in mid-ocean."

"Down I kept going, whirled and turned upside down and dived around promiscuously, until about 100 yards above the final fall I caught on a rock. It was just high enough to keep my head out of water, and I hung to it till my finger nails seemed to be imbedded in it. My partner at this juncture showed the kind of a fellow he was in an emergency, for he appeared on shore with our two lariats tied together, and just as I was about to let go and be smashed on the rocks below he swung that leathery coil over my head. The rope of I am not very conscious of, because by the time he had pulled me ashore by the neck I was about as near hanged as I ever want to be, but he brought me around all right in the course of half an hour or so, and I was quite as good as new again."

"That was a narrow escape," remarked the writer.

"And that was an odd fellow who saved me," added the westerner, "for he was as mad about the rope as I had given him. He had named it 'I didn't turn it for the day was over and give me the worst kicking I ever got in my life for saving him.'"—Washington Post.
