THE FEDERAL COURT

Declines to Take a Hand in the Kentucky Fight.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 14-Last week ex-governor Reaching all the Bradley, representing the Republicans, filed a lengthy petition in the United States Court at this place, asking Judge Taft to issue an injunction restraining the Kentucky Election Commissioners from proceeding with the contests for the minor State offices. The Democrats answered that it was purely a State affair and the Federal Court had no jurisdiction. This point was argued Monday, and to-day Judge Taft rendered his decision, holding that the Federal Court had no jurisdiction, and sustaining the contention of the Democrats.

LEGISLATURE IN LOUISVILLE.

from attempting to exercise the func tions of Governor was drawn up yes terday. Notice will be served upor Mr. Taylor and on Mr. John Marshal at Frankfort today, and the suit will be filed in Judge Cantrill's court at Georgetown tomorrow. Argument will probably be heard early next

The Democratic lawyers do not believe Mr. Taylor has any idea of at tempting to enjoin Gov. Beckham in the Federal Court.

The Legislature yesterday appoint ed a special committee to investigate and report upon the advisability of adjourning to Frankfort. At a cau cus of members last night it was the prevailing opinion that the Legisla ture should remain in Louisville as long as the soldiers are in charge in Frankfort. Fifty nine members of the House and nineteen Senators were present at the session yesterday.

The Republican members of the House and Senate are at Frankfort, awaiting Mr. Taylor's orders. They have nothing to do but meet and

The State Board of Election Com missioners will meet tomorrow and will decide whether future sessions of the board shall be held in Frankfort or in Louisville. The first case to come up is the contest between Judge Brown and John H. Wilson for circuit judgeship. This having been disposed of the board will be ready for the contests of State officers.

The injunction preventing Taylor from interfering with the Legislature was made permanent by Judge Can trill at Georgetown yesterday. The Republicans ignored the action and were not represented.

ORDWAY KILLED.

A Well Known Citizen Shot By Marshal of Fredonia

Last Monday night at Fredonia, Mr Floyd Ordway was shot and killed by A. B. Mosely, the town marshal of that town. The particulars of the tragedy as we have been able to get them are in substance as follows:

Ordway returned to Fredonia from Louisville, Ky., Feb. 14.—The Marion about dark, and went into legislature to offer a reward commenpetition of Gov. Beckham for an in- Buckner's store, and asked about his junction to restrain W. S. Taylor son who was reported to have the smallpox. Mosely came in and Ordway said to him, "You was spotted two weeks ago," using rather rough lan guage. Another party who was in the ley followed him toward the door, when Ordway called to Mosley to come back, at the same time going towards him, and again using profane language. Mosley returned and took a seat at the stove and when Ordway returned Mosley offered him the chair he was occupying. Ordway refused to take the chair but moved around the stove towards Mosley, who retreat ed behind the counter, and the two men were behind the counter, when Dr. Buckner asked them to go out, if they were going to quarrel. Ordway said all right he would go if the doc tor would make Mosley go. Ordway went out the door with Mosley just behind.

Here, according to Mosley's statement, he told Ordway to consider him self under arrest, and Ordway caught him by the coat collar with both hands and, again using profane lan guage, told him that he would cut his throat, and proceeded to shake Mosley, and, in the scuffle the latter was thrown down and in a kneeling or stooped position he drew his pietol and fired, and in the scuffle that con tinued Mosley regained his feet and fired two more shots. The first shot entered just below the ribs and ranged upwards; the other two entered the groin. After the two last shots were fired, Ordway leaned up against the fence or building and sank down, and died within fifteen minutes.

Mosley went to Princeton imme diately and surrendered himself; Tues day an examining trial was held and he was discharged.

Ordway was one of the best known men in this section, and was a good citizen, and has many friends. Of late years he had become rather a hard drinker, and it is very probable that had he not been somewhat under the influence of liquor, the trouble would not have occurred.

The Democrats of Crittenden Express Themselves in Ringing Resolutions.

MASS MEETING,

Monday the Democrats of Crittenden held a mass meeting at the court house to express themselves on the murder of Gov. Goebel and the political situation.

About two hundred, representing all sections of the county were pres-

L. W. Cruce, chairman of the county committee called the meeting to order, and Mr. P. C. Stephens was chesen chairman, and Wm. H. Clark, secretary. Mr. Stephens made timely address stating the object of

The following committee on resolutions was appointed: R. C. Walker, C. S. Nunn, O. M. James, T. W Dollins, J. W. Blue.

The committee reported the follow ing resolutions, and they were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we deeply deplore the cowardly and cruel assassination of Gov. William Goebel, our brave, noble and fearless leader, and join with our brothers throughout the state in paying a just and deserved tribute of respect to the memory of Kentucky's loved and departed statesman and we denounce the act of the brutal assassin, whose bloody deed has hardly a parallel in the whole calendar of crime, and earnestly pray that the perpetrators of this the greatest crime in the simals of our state may be surate with the crime. That we approve the our leaders in the great hour of peril. and commend the Democratic mem-bors of Deglaleturn for their efforts to maintain and uphold the civil powers as against military despotism, and especially do we commend our Senator, Hon. J. H. McConnell, and our Representative, Hon. T. J. Nickel for their unswerving devotion to duty. Resolved, That we bid Gov. Beckham and the other Democratic officials of the state God-speed in their manly struggle against corruption and unlawful methods, and we pledge them our hearty and lawful support.

R. C. Walker, C. S. Nunn, J. W. Blue, jr, Thos. Dollins, Ollie M. James,

Committee. Mr. James was the spokesman for the committee and in presenting and moving the adoption of the resolutions, he made a speech that touched the heart of every man present, and when he finished there were few dry eyes in the audience.

Shady Grove Resolutions

1. We the loyal citizens of Shady Grove and surrounding country in meeting assembled do declare our profound serrow on account of the death of William Goebel and our condem nation of his assassination.

2. We sincerely believe that his assassiu should be apprehended if possible and punished to the extent of the law.

3. We also denounce as dangerous and un-American all of those incendiary and anarchists utterances of the press and public speakers which have aided in inflaming the public mind and which we believe to be responsi ble to a certain extent for the awful crime of Jan. 30th.

4. We hereby announce 'ourselves ready and willing to do anything in our power to catch, convict and punish the guilty party or parties in this crime against our State and the life of one of its best citizens,

5. Resolved that in the death of William Goebal the State has lost one of its brightest lights, the law one of its strongest advocates and the common people one of their truest friends. 6. That his intimate friends and elatives have our sympathy.

7. That we sincerely hope that the present political situation may be settled peaceably and justly without any turther trouble. 8. We beseech and implore our representatives and officers in power to abide by the laws as interpreted by the courts, and we condemn all attempts at revolution, force of arms, and anarchy and declare our opinion that the law is and should be greater than any man or set of men.

9. That we denounce the importation of armed men from the feud sec tions of this and others states to the Capitol of this state by state officials or others, believing that this was the cause, if not part of the plot or plan, to take the life of our brave and noble

10. We condemn in unmeasured terms, the attempt of the acting governor to adjourn the General Assembly, the legally chosen representatives of the people, and to convene them in the central portion of the feud section of the State, where their lives would have been in danger on account ion will have this service. of the lawless element there, and we believe this was a usurpation of power unparalled in the history of this or any other state.

11. We heartily comment the action of our representatives in the legislature in their courageous and devoted efforts to preserve our rights under the most trying conditions ever experienced in this country, and we pledge them our support at all times in their discharge of duty.

Committee on resolutions: G. T. Brown, J. B. Simpson, R. F. Lemon, J. L. Cardwell, J. B. Utley, J. C. Brown, Rev F A Atwood, T. E. Cannan,

The foregoing resolutions were unnimously adopted, and another meet peaceful, patriotic and wise course of ing called for Saturday, Fed. 10th, Number of sheep 1900, at Shady Grove, Ky. Speeches were made by Rev. F. A.

MONEY EASILY MADE.

Running a Public Spraying Machine Is Affording a Good Income to an Eastern Farmer.

There is a man in western New York who has a complete outfit of boiler, engine, steam pump, tank and hose mounted on his farm wagon. A 12year-old boy has run this outfit in neighboring orchards-driving the wagon and keeping up steam. The charge is $5 a day, the owner of the orchard

PUBLIC SPRAYING MACHINE. providing the spraying mixture and men to hold the nozzles. With this outfit it is possible to spray out 1,500 gallons of poisoned water in a day, and the first cost of the entire outfit was but $250. This man could not begin to accommodate those who wanted to hire his spraying outfit. In 50 days of soutside work he will pay the entire first cost of the apparatus, while the pump, boiler and tank are doubtless good for 1,000 days' work without repair. Here is an inkling of what is coming. A man with the needed capstal and the proper mechanical skill has a chance to make some money as public sprayer .- Farm and Home.

San Jose Scale Specific. More than one authority states that there is practically no interest in California over the San Jose scale. The San Jose spray is considered a sovereign remedy. The formula for it is follows: Unslaked lime, 40 pounds; salt, 15 pounds; sulphur, 20 pounds. Ten pounds of lime are first slaked and bolled with the sulphur in 20 gallons of water for three hours. The remaining lime and salt are then added, and the whole boiled an hour longer. Sufficient water is then added to bring the whole strained before using.—Guy E. Mitch ell in Farm and Fireside

Hunting a Panther.

By Joseph E. l'adger, Jr.

TOHN TAYLOR, wife and family lived in one of the border counties of Texas. He was poor and started farming in a humble way, but, being skillful and industrious, he was getting ahead in the world, when his life and property wer both swept away by one of those Mexican forays, even more commos then than now. By good luck his famlly were absent, and thus escaped sharing his fate. Two horses, a wagon and an old hound, the charred shell of their log cabin, a few odd tools-these and the land itself were all that the widow and her two sons, David and Saul, eight and ten years of age, had to keep the wolf from the door.

The neighbors rebuilt the cabin and gave the lone ones such aid as lay in their power, but it was one weary, never-ending struggle for life against starvation. Yet they did live, and two years later David and Saul had carned by night work enough to buy themselves each a rifle and ammunition. They were too poor not to become good shots, and the very nature of their lives rendered them bold and self-reliant. Saul, the oldest, was just 13 years old when the following incident or

The deep, mellow baying of a hound came from the undergrowth that fringed the slender creek, the bell notes coming at regular intervals. "He's jumped some critter," cried

David, eagerly. "It's a fresh trail, but he ain't sight ed what made it yet," responded the older brother. "Finish ungearin'. I don't reckon it's mor'n a rabbit, or mebbe a wolf."

The sun had already set and the boys had put in a long and hard day's worl The peach and the plum are so closely behind the plow, only stopping to eat a cold lunch for dinner. Any but a boy with the true spirit of a hunter would not have given the hound a second thought. Home, food and res would have been their one desire. But when the regular, measured bay changed to a rapid, continuous clanger the lads turned the horses free to and their own way home, and, grasping their never-absent rifles, started away in the direction of the chase.

Experience told them that the old hound was after no plebeian game. and they knew, too, that he was now running by eye, rather than by seent

Ere they had run 200 yards there came a flerce yelping ery, a snarl, the sounds of a sharp if short seuffle, then, at brief intervals, the excited bark of or some yet nobler game; if anything less awaited them the bound would never have been driven off once he had closed with it.

You can imagine the emotions which swelled the bosoms of these lads as they rushed forward at top speed.

They were too eager. The game heard their hasty footsteps and turned to seek safety in renewed flight, old Mector close upon its heels. Saul caught one glimpse of the long gray body as it glided across the open ground, and, throwing forward his

At the sharp report the animal leaped for ahead, as though sharply stung, and Saul saw by the fresh blood upon the dry grass that his lead had not been entirely wasted, and the boys pressed on with renewed energy, guided by the excited yelping of the old hound.

"We'll get him yet!" panted Saul. "He's takin' to Split hill, I'm 'most sarone, though." No more was said. A steady run of mile, carrying a heavy rifle, is no easy task even for a man. Fortunately the end of the run was near at hand. Once more old Hector set up a series of rapid, excited yelpings. The game was brought to bay, driven to earth, or else

Split bill was a natural curiosity, and doubly remarkable from being situated in the midst of a low, flat region, where agine a perfect cone, 100 feet high split directly in half from apex to base, and one portion of it entirely obligarated. leaving the other portion a solitary monument upon the level, sandy plain. The cliff thus formed was of barren almost solid rock, not even a vine clinging to its face. The rounded side was tolcrably well covered with stunted trees,

The apex was crowned by one huge, bushy-topped tree, the gnarled trunk of which was so bent that the limbs protruded far over the rocky precipice. Old Hector was standing with his forefeet resting against the trunk of this tree, his blazing eyes riveted upon the dense foliage above and beyond. The gume was treed, beyond a doubt, for as they drew near the boys both heard a scrambling sound as though the animal was retreating still farther into the leafy covert.

"But wolves can't climb a tree!" exelaimed David, sorely puzzled. "This one kin, but mebbe 'tain't a wolf," returned Saul, scratching his head dubiously. "I don't see how we're goin' to git at him, though." "We kin build a fire," suggested "Ain't got no matches." But David produced two, and five minutes later a bright blaze was leaping high above the pile of brush. From every possible point of view the lads endeavored to catch a glimpse of the strange animal, but in vain. Still Saul would not give up. "You go home an' git somethin' to eat, Dave. Take old Hec along. Mother Il be skeered to stuy all by herself. She'll do the chores for once. You come back, an' we'll watch until day. We'll hev pay fer this long run, ef it takes a week. David willingly agreed, though Hector was very reluctant to abandon his quarry. An hour later the lad returned, bearing an ample supply of food for his brother.

The two youngsters settled down beside the fire, cating, talking and watching for some signs of the strange animal. For an hour or two all went well enough, but then their eyelids grew heavy with sleep. They had been hard at work since early dawn, and growing lads must sleep at all hazards. What followed was natural enough. Before ten o'clock both boys were sound asleep, nor did they awaken until broad day-

And then-their game was gone. They could see where it had leaped from the trunk to the ground, its long claws deeply scoring the earth not a dozen feet from where they had been sleeping. Why had it not attacked them? That was a question they could not

They longed to follow the trail, but that was out of the question. Their day's work must be done. They set about without a murmur.

They were opened panther of the largest size. He could not understand how the boys had escaped so easily, especially as the animal was wounded. Their escape was one in a thousand.

The widow and her sons had gone to bed early after a hard day's work, but early in the night they were awakened from sleep by a hideous clamor. Old Hector was yelping furiously. The fattening hog was squealing fit to split its throat. The horses were snorting fairly healthy. Every plant was affectand kicking as though they meant to demolish their rude stable.

Saul and David, half asleep, crawled down from the loft where they slept, and, grasping their rifles, opened the door and rushed forth. As they ran around the corner of the house, shouting encouragement to the hound, they eaught a glimpse of something just leaping out of the pig pen, but before they could fairly lift a weapon the prime cause of all this nocturnal disturbance ran nimbly up the old live oak tree which formed one corner of the stable. It crouched in the lowest fork, glaring at them with flery eyes.

"It's that old panther," and as he spoke Saul endeavored to draw a bead upon the animal.

It was too dark for him to see the double sights, and now that he knew how dangerous the creature was he dare not risk an uncertain shot. "Tell mother to fetch the lantern," he muttered to David. This was the scene I beheld, as, belated, I neared the cabin. A tall, handsome woman in a night dress and bare- similar lot of camphor trees from footed, holding a lantern so that the light fell upon the leveled rifles of her

As one report the weapons spoke, and with a screech of mortal pain the huge panther shot through the air and hurled that little group aside. But that leap was only spasmodic; both bullets were buried in the brain of the beast and no person was hurt.

I helped to skin the creature, which measured nine feet seven inches from tip to tip and weighed 250 pounds. I spent a week at the farm and I learned sible additional losses through these to love the boys as my own kindred. INSPECTION OF PLANTS.

In No Other Way Can the Introduction and Propagation of Insect Pests Be Prevented.

For nearly a week nothing more was of all importations of plants and shrubs and a number of them found to contain young camphor trees intended for distribution among the southern staes. As is usually the case, the various scientists of the department-the bug men, the fungus specialists, etc.,-were present and on the lookout for any new bugs, fungi or other pests. The expert examination resulted in the entire lot of camphor trees being burned up, although to all appearances they were ed by a kind of anthracuose, and mildew and a species of scale insect were

The camphor tree as grown in the United States is remarkably free from diseases, but with the distribution which might have been given this lot of trees, perhaps highly injurious diseases and insects would have been introduced in all camphor growing sections: Such diseases frequently do not develop on the one or two-year-old nursery plants, and if sent out by nurserymen who do not take especial notice and who, anyway, having paid for their importation, are loth to adopt stringent measures, are very liable to spdead an ineradicable disease before its very existence may be known. The camphor industry in the United States is not now an important one, but in later years it may be, yet this is simply an example of what is liable to occur in other and more valuable industries, There is absolutely no national protection possible under present laws. If the nurseryman wishes to import a Japan, or some other more widely grown tree, and send them out broadcast over the country, even though they be full of diseases, he cannot be stopped by the government. Many of the worst diseases and insects have been brought into the United States in this manner, requiring the annual outlay of thousands of dollars to combat their depre dations; whereas, at a comparatively small cost the government could entirely control all imports of plants, seeds, etc., and save growers from posmediums. Germany, France, Italy and even dozens of unimportant colonies are enforcing stringent regulations in this respect, but the United States, the country in which the imports are largest and most varied because of the energy of her people, is the farthest behind .- Journal of Agriculture, is no safety. Kentucky has a reputation for the bloody adjustment of personal quarrels; portions of the State are notorious for handing down of feuds from father to son, but the settlement of political fights with the assassin is a novelty even in the "dark and bloody ground," Here we have our political "scrape," plow up the earth, fling mud and mortar adjinfinitum during a cam paign, and then when the "cruel war is over," drink out of the same bottle as we compare notes, borrow meal from each other, chew from each others plug until the next campaign, and then line up for the fray in the usual way, and the world moves merrily on, But when the assassin appears upon the scene, its a new order of thing in Kentucky politics. matter what you or what I think of our opponent-he may think the same thing of us-its brutal, cowardly, unmanly and ungodly to resort to such things, and as it has come, the only way to keep it from staying is to punish the criminals, and any reward that fails to uncover him is too small. We rejoice that the legislature ccmprehends the situation and begins at a decent sum; and we hope that every man in our baliwick has foresight enough to say "amen," for its not so much the reputation of our State a broad at stake, as it is the lives and happiness of ourselves, our children and our children's children.

The Louisville Dispatch has discovered that the Republicans at Frankfort will discard McKinley and support Roosevelt for President, because McKinley refused to send troops at the proper part of the play and Roosevelt fired off his mouth. A BURGLAR STORY

A pretty little volume by Margaret Penrose, on the order of "Bessic's Burglar," has been issued by Jordan, Marsh & Co., of Boston, under the title "The Burglar's Danghter," and it will be sure to interest our young readers, and the older ones, too, perhaps.

The story begins with a gay children's party at the home of Ethel Weston, whose papa has just presented her with a beautiful silver workbox as a present on this her tenth birthday. All Ethel's young friends were at the party, where they played games, some played on the plane and others danced, while the little hostess moved among them, talking first with one, then another, seeing that all were having a pleasant time.

All at once, when the enjoyment was at its height, loud voices were heard in Mr. Weston's study, where he was busy preparing notes for his work as night editor of a newspaper. All the other girls were talking and laughing, and no one seemed to hear the voices except herself. She stepped aside to listen, and presently her quick ear heard the front door close and a carriage drive rapidly away. She heard the servants running backward and forward to her mother's room, talking in hushed voices.

Ethel had lost interest in her party. She felt that her paper must be in trouble, but for another half hour she entertained her merry guests. After they had gone away at last she ran to her mamma's room and found Mrs. Weston unconscious on a couch, with a maid attending her.

"What made my mamma ill, Ka e, and where is papa?" Ethel asked ex-

"Your papa went away with two men, and your mamma fainted," the girl tried to explain, but before Ethel could ask another question her mother's eyes opened and she motioned Ethel to her side. "I cannot tell you all that has hap-pend to-night, Ethel," she said, feebly, "so now you may kiss me and come early to-morrow morning. This is the only way you can help me now, dear, I am ill.'

What a sad ending to such a delightful birthday! Her thoughts ran over the events of the party, the hours of happiness ending with grief. She prayed earnestly, with all the inno-cence of childhood, that everything might end well, and in the peace that came with this simple trust she fell asleep.

The next morning Mrs. Weston made up her mind that it was better that Ethel should learn the truth from her lips than from those of a stranger, so she drew Ethel to her side.

"In the first place," she began, "you must show me that you have courage, for what I am going to tell you will be as great a shock to you as it is to me. It seems that many of the nights when your papa was supposed to be at his office, he was stealing into the homes of wealthy people, taking their money and any valuables that he could turn into money. In fact, dear, he is-I am ashamed to tell you-a burglar. Yet I cannot wish you to dislike papa, nor to lose hope for him, for certainly he was kind to you and me. Let us rather believe he must have been strongly tempted in some way, and let us never give up hoping that he may sometimes become an honest man."

They sat together ver; sill. Ethe began to cry, but as he saw the tears come in mamma's eyes she wiped her own and said resolutely:

"I shall always love my papa, and I will never believe he is a very bad man. Something may have led him astray. But, Oh, mamma, do you suppose he could have taken my silver workbox from anybody's home? I never could keep it if I thought that."

"No, dear, you need have no doubt about the box, for I was with papa when he bought that at Hill's. cheer up and be as strong as you can, for I must tell you something more. had hoped last night there might be some mistake when he was accused, but I see by the morning papers that papa has confessed his wrong doing. Now, we must sell everything in this house to pay his debts, so that it will be easier for him. Do you understand,

Ethel saw poverty before them; she saw that they must become like other poor people, but her heart should be true. And it was true. Ethel herself went to the private school where she had been a favorite pupil and told the teacher that she could come no more. That same day the servants were sent away, and in a few days more everything was sold, except Ethel's workbox and a few keepsakes Mrs. Weston had before her marriage, the debts were paid, and the two faced the world

In many places Mrs. Weston and Ethel tried to get rooms within their means, but while there were many places where the sign "Rooms to Rent" was hung out, they were all too high in price for their modest purses. On the afternoon of the second day they found time to turn aside and question a little fellow who was crying bitterly upon the street. He had run away from home and couldn't find his way back, but he knew the street and number, so Ethel and her mamma went with him and were rewarded for their trou-ble by finding with the little boy's mother, a pleasant-faced German woman, the home for which they had so wearily searched. All went well for one week, and then Ethel's true nature had a chance to reveal itself, for Mrs. Westen fell ill and Ethel became a brave, true little woman. How their slender store of money was soon gone, and how Ethel sold all her pretty trinkets to buy medicines and food; how she found a firm friend in the doctor and in Mr. Hill, the very merchant from whom her silver workbox had been purchased, is all a story full of interest to those who admire the noble impulses of a brave heart. Ethel did not forget her papa. Mrs. Weston was confined to her bed and Ethel was her constant nurse, with all the cares of the two upon her small shoulders. One by one all Mrs. Weston's jewels were sold, and often Ethel tried in vain to get work. In the first of these efforts she passed by a police station and ran in asking to see her papa, thinking that he must be kept there, but she found that he had been sent many miles away to prison for two years.

At last Mrs. Weston became so ill that it was feared she would die, and then Mr. Hill had her sent to the hospital and took Ethel to his home to live, where she was once more surrounded by comfort and luxury. A beautiful blue and white bedroom had been prepared for her, and on the pretty little stand stood the silver work box she had sold to Mr. Hill on her first visit to his store.

She was very happy in her new home, where every one came to love her dearjust as thoughtful as ever. She had one wish, and that was to reunite her old home.

She returned to her studies at a different school, and tried hard to make up for her lost year, and but for the absence of her dear mamma, whom she often visited, and the thought she might never see her papa again, she had nothing left to wish for. But no home is like one's own home, on a cold, dreary day, when the snow was falling fast, Mr. Weston was released from prison. It was a gloomy outlook for this man, once respected by all. His wife and daughter, he thought, would not want to see the man who utation, they would be lucky. had brought disgrace upon them, but yet he thought he must look upon them once more. With the money the prison straight to the house in which they had all lived so happily. It was night when he arrived there, but the house and despair he forced open a window and slept upon the floor.

All the next day he spent in making inquiries about the Westons, but he could find no trace of them. In the evening he met Mr. Hill, who was on his way home, but Mr. Weston was so changed that his old time friend did not recognize him, and thought the shabby looking man who addressed him was but a common beggar. So he handed him a dime and passed on, busy with his own thoughts.

Mr. Weston was first stung and then made bitter by this. At first he had resolved to lead an honest life, but now the old temptation came back to him. "Viell," he muttered to himself, "I when some of these rich fellows wake a little less money I'll have a litt'e

So it came about that Mr. Weston found himself after midnight in Ethel's room, with his head bowed in grief over Ethel's silver work box, which he had recognized. It was so that Ethel found him when she awoke. "Sir," she cried, "who are you and how dare you touch the box my papa gave me? Give it to me now!"

Prepared by the finding of this box, Mr. Weston knew his daughter's voice

"Don't be afraid of me, little girl. I won't hurt you," he said. "Ethel, darling, look at me. Don't you know your own father?" With a cry Ethel was upon the floor by his side, and their tears mingled together as Ethel told of her mother's long illness and their struggle with poverty. But Ethel would not let her father go away, in spite of all his pleading. His sense of right triumphed, and at last he let her lead him to Mr. Hill's bedroom, where he confessed that he unknowingly come to rob the house of the man who had befriended his wife and child. That was the turning point in Mr. Weston's life. Mr. Hill secured work for him, and from that time on he became an honest man. Mrs. Weston got well, and was not long until the three were reunited in a happy little home of their own, surrounded by the firm friends that Ethel's true heart had

How a Turf Plunger Won $100,000 in Less Than Two Months on a Borrowed Capital of $200-Yet the Moral of It Is to Avoid Speculation.

William M. Barrick is the latest successful turf plunger. In less than two months he has managed to win, with a borrowed capital of $200, more than $100,000 in cash and twelve good race

To a New York World reporter a Washington, Barrick the other day told the story of his racing career:

"I had been knocking around the tracks a little, placing a few small bets on the ponies, till one day-this was years ago-I went to Clifton. Ballston was then the crack of the Jersey tracks. If a man owned a horse that could beat Ballston he had a good horse. While there I was let into the secret that a horse called Loantaka could sift sand some.

"The people behind Loantaka were not content to race him against poor horses they wished to stack him up against Balston or keep him in the barn. Finally they got him into a race where they met Ballston. I placed a big bet, for me then-not quite $500on him. There was a long price and I waited and hoped. Well, to make a long story short, Loantaka went off and never came back to Ballston. He won by fifty yards. It was my first big winnig and I was highly elated. "I soon got to betting heavily and fortune favored" me. I bought a twoyear-old called Void and won a sma!! ortune with him. Then Dr. Hasbrouck won a selling race at the Brooklyn track and I bought him out of it. I would never have secured Hasbronck except that some kind friend told Wyndham Walden I hadn't the money to purchase him and that it would be wise to drop the colt on me and have him resold in fifteen minutes when the money was not forthcoming. But I fooled them; I had the money and I bought the Doctor with it.

"Dr. Hasbrouck was a great horse and won me a fortune in stakes and purses. I have bet as much as $10,000 on him and won more than double that amount in one race. He was game and true. I owned several other good horses, but none was as good or true or Dr. Hasbrouck. "When Dr. Hasbrouck broke down my fortunes also went to the bad. I could not do anything right. I drifted along, going from bad to worse, till finally Dr. Rowell, a veterinary surgeon, took my last good horse from me in a selling race. This was in the West. came back to New York badly bent inancially. Old Maurice kept me goin for a time, but even he finally went back on me. I would, now and then, get hold of a few thousand dollars, but could never make three or four good bets stick together. "After many ups and downs I borrowed $200 during the Morris Park meeting from a Canadian friend and played 'the bank'. After an all-night session I was $10,000 to the good. After an interval of a day I returned to the bank and played all night, quitting $11,000 richer.

"From that time I prospered in all my speculations. I won over $16,000 at the Morris Park meeting and went to the Aqueduct track well heeled, as the boys say. There I ran Sir Guy, a colt belonging to me. I got 30, 25 and 20 to 1 against him and won nearly $40-000 on him. It was one of the biggest killings I ever made. I beat the Aqueduct meeting good and then came to

"To show you that a man when in luck can't do anything wrong, I telegraphed to a couple of friends to place several thousand dollars on Sir Guy when he was beaten here by Royal Sterling. What was the result? That night when I had returned to the hotel I opened a telegram I had received just as I left the track and found that my friends were unable to place my money on Sir Guy because the pool-rooms had refused to take it. That's luck, ain't it? "During the fifteen days' racing here I had only three losing days. The other twelve days have netted me a big profit on my investments. 'I have backed horses at all kinds of prices and won a big majority of them. Just how long this good fortune will continue I casay. But I can stand it as long as old Dame Fortune is willing to throw it at me. Should my good luck desert me I suppose I will go broke again. That is the fortune of all speculators."

The sweet bay tree, or laurel, was sacred to Apollo, and in both Egypt and Rome its leaves were used to decorate the victors in games or in war. These leaves are much used now in the culinary art, the practice having been borrowed from the French.

From time to time experts have noticed certain unexplained peculiarities in magnetic instruments in various buildings. Electricians now declare, as the result of experiments and invest-igations that the vagaries are due to the presence of magnetism in brisks.

New Chimney Was Not Built as Spon

A new chimney was going to be built on grandma's house, and the boye were in a state of high glee. They were always delighted when there was something going on, and this would be "something like," Wayne said,

"Mike's coming to mix the mortar, you know, and carry it up the ladder to the mason. He'll tell us stories noonings-Mike's such fun!"

"Yes," echoed Casper, "I guess he is! You spell Mike's kind o' fun with a big F and a big U and a big N! I say, Wayne, let's go get his hod and play we're hodcarriers, with mud for mortar, you know-come on!" "Come on!" shouted Wayne.

leaning up against the barn. Mike leftit there last Friday, when he brought his things over." On the way to the barn they saw grandpa harnessing Old Molly to the big blue cart. That meant a beautiful, jolty ride down the orchard, and the boys forgot all about playing hadgarrier. They climbed in and jolted away "Mike's coming to-morrow, you know, grandpa, and the mason," said Casper his voice quiver-quavering over the

"Oh, goody!" cried Wayne. But dear grandpa shook his white

"Not tomorrow, boys. You'll have to wait a bit longer. I sent word to Mr. Keet and Mike last night that they needn't come for a few weeks longer I'd decided to put the chimney off,"

"Oh, grandpa!" Both clear little voices were shrill with disappointment. Both little brown faces fell. Grandpa did not speak again at once—he was guiding Old Molly carefully out at the side of the cart road. The boys saw a little crippled butterfly fluttering along in the wheel track-that was why grandpa turned out. Grandpa's big heart had room enough in it for every little live thing. Back in the track again, farther on, grandpa spoke.

"I'll show you why we must wait for the new chimney when we get home, boys," he said, cheerily. "You'll agree with me, I know. It's a case of neces shaggy brows.

"A little bird told me to," he said and that was all they found out until they got home. Then the same little bird told them. Grandpa took them up ipto the attic, with a great air of mystery. The old chimney had been partly taken away-half way down to the attic floor. Grandpa tiptoed up to it and lifted them, one at a time, to peer

"Sh!" he whispered softly, "look And there, on a little nest of mud, lined with thistledown and straws, that rested lightly on the projecting bricks sat the little bird! She blinked her bright eyes at the kind faces peering down, as if to say: Oh, dear, no; I'm not afraid of you! Isn't this a beautiful nest? So exclusive and safe! There are four little speckly, freckly eggs under me. When I've hatched them and brought up my bables in the way well educated little chimney swallows should go, then you can build your chimney, you know. So that was why grandpa's new chimney had to wait.

Why Wood Crackles,

Why Wood Crackies.

Wood crackies when it is ignited because the air contained in the wood, as soon as it is heated, expands and forces its way through the porse of the wood with a crackling noise. Green wood makes less snapping or rrackling than dry, because the poras of the green wood contain less air, being filled with sap and moisture, which extinguish the flame, whereas the porce of dry wood are filled with air, which supports combustion. Chestnute contain a great quantity of air, and when one washit is placed on the bar of the grate to roast, as soon as the air inside its rind becomes heated it expands and bursts through the rind with a long report, whereas, if the chestnut be slit before putting on the grate, it will not make any report, because the heated air can escape through the rind as it expands. expands.

TRICKS WITH EGGS.

Many Curious Things That May Be Done to Astonished Onlookers. Rather & pretty experiment with a blown egg is to suspend it by means of a piece of cotton attached to it with sealing wax, and then cause it to swing, without being touched, by means of electric attraction. The latter is supplied by a doubled sheet of brown paper, warmed and made electrical by being held tightly against the body with the upper arm, while it is drawn smartly out with the other

The brown paper, which will give s bright electric spark to the knuckles, will make the egg swing briskly by its attraction, drawing the egg to itself as a very powerful magnet will attract a piece, of iron, but in a much more striking manner.

An egg-that is, a complete egg, not the empty shell, such as we have just been using-will sink in water. But it will float in strong brine, made by adding to cold water as much salt as will dissolve in it. Cold water will dissolve a little more salt than hot. If we mix a solution of salt with some pure water, trying the egg in it from time to time, we can obtain u mixture having the same specific grayity as the egg; and in this water we can make the egg float, by a little care, at any particular spot. Thus if we take a tall jar full of the fluid mixed as above, and by means of a bent piece of tin carefully release the egg half way down, we shall have the curious phenomenon of an egg sus-pended, as though by magic, in the middle of the jar, as Mohammed's coffin hung in air between earth and

But if we had not wholly filled the jar there is yet a more curious trick greatly surprising to the unwarned onlooker. By means of a long funnel add some more brine to the water and the egg will gradually rise to the surface. Now add fresh water in sufficient quantity and it will slowly sink. Take an empty eggshell and choose one in which the hole has not been made too large. If you now put the empty shell into the oven, so as to make it very hot, and then plunge it in a bowl of water for a few minutes, the shell will suck in some of the water, owing to the contraction of the contained air in cooling.

Do this once or twice until you have in the eggshell just sufficient water for this experiment, which requires that the shell shall just be able to float and no more-that is, that a very slight touch will send it down, to bob up (

The egg will sink to the bottom. Lift the hand and the egg will rise quickly to the surface. The compression of the air destroys the buoyancy of the partially filled eggshell. In the next trick it is to allow the onlookers eitl the preparations or to be fact that it is an empty ing used. Take a little muslin and soak it in stro it dry and repeat the pro four times. Then, by attac of wire to each corner of make a little cradle to hold th Do not do this until the muslin is oughly dry. If you now set fire to the muslin so that it may burn, the eggshell will not, as the bystanders expect, fall. The trick is a very surprising one and its explanation simple. The salting of the muslin causes t to leave an ash sufficiently strong to support a light object like the eggshell.

New Way to Hunt Tigers. The latest use to which bicycles have been applied is tiger hunting. A paper published in British India gve an account of this startling innovation. A pig. It appears, was carried away by a tiger from a coffee estate at Castlewood, in the State of Johore. "The sews having been sent to Johore," runs the report, "the Sultan's trackers were out on bicycles by midday and located the tiger in some low shrub within a half a mile of the shed. The Sultan himself rode out at 4 o'clock, and after a short beat of half an hour a large tiger was driven out of the shrub and fell to one well-placed shot by the Sultan through the tiger's forehead."

A Strange Pet. Miss Daisy Keevil, of St. Louis ewils the strangest pet in that city. It is a catamount, which was captured near Wittenberg, Ill., and was then about week old. Captain Byard Burton, of the steamer Cherokee, shot the mother, and Miss Daisy admired the bright litbundle of fuzzy fur so much that her father gave it to her. It goes where it likes about the house, and is very gentle with its mistress and the other members of the family, though it spits angrily when strangers come about.

In China hens are employed to hatch fish eggs. These are sealed in an egg-shell and placed under the unsuspeting hen for a few days. The contents of the shell are then emptied into a shallow pool, where they can bask in the sunshine until the minnows are strong enough to be turned into a lake or riv-

HEALTH BOARD

Explains its Action and Inspection of its Record Invited.

The Local Board of Health is con posed of J. P. Pierce, J. R. Clark and J. J. Clark, and I am sure there isn't a one ashamed of his name or ashamed of what we have done, for we have followed the law as near as we could ry. with the help of the better and responsible class of citizens of the county, when the law pinches an outlaw he squaels and howls worse than a Commanche Indian, The law is plain and is the duty of the health officer when it is made known to him that there is any kind of an epidemic disease in any family, be it Jim Rankin's or the lowest negro in the county, to quarantine that family, if he, from the evidence, believes it is a contagious disease, for the law recognizes no race, and we had been quarantining the negroes and some white people up here for the same disease, and now that the Board, or the law, decided it best to quarantine "Hon. Jim's" family, he raises a great howl, and this is the fraud he speaks of the Board practicing. There isn't an on our streets Sunday. honest thinking man in the county that wouldn't say it was as much of a as it was to quarantine any other man. We had Charlie Morgan quarantined for about six weeks and we know Charlie is just about as well known as some other people, and he has never accused the Board of fraud and dishonesty, but did everything in his power to help the Board, and said he didn't want other people to catch the disease from him or his family. It Jim wanted his family to have the disease that was his business, but it was the business of the Board to see Saturday; price $4.30 to it that Jim didn't give it to other people outside of his family, especially poor people that might not be able to get the proper attention. These are the people the county has to take care of and the county officials don't propose to set back and see even Jim trespass the law and then expect to see the Board punish the poor negro or white man for violating the law, Jim sees a fraud. J. J. Clark w sent down to see Mr. Hull by Dr. N. McCormac, not only to benefit Mr. Hull, but to try and stop the spread of the disease from Jim's family, and protect the community at large; and the only thing J. J. Clark did was to examine Mr. Hull and pronounce it small-pox, and quarantine Jim's family, and the same thing has been done at least at a hundred other places in tha county, and Jim is the only man to yell traud and rottenness. If Dr. Moreland thinks there is fraud, why don't he come out from under cover and expose it himself instead of letting another man use his name. We do not know how many nurses Mr. Hull had, nor how many visits Dr. Moreland made, for that certainly was Mr. Hull's private affair and we had nothing to do with it, and there was no fraud there. This disease is all over many states, in many counties in this state, and all of the authorities, medical. state and municipal, say that it is small-pox, and treat it as such, and this board honestly and conscienciously believes it small-pox. We guess they are all fraude (?)

The board has a record of every thing it has done, even to the proceedings at Dr. Jim's, and the record is open to the inspection of any citia zen, as we keep no secrets.

In regard to sending for experts to see the negroes, we don't suppose Dr. Jim knew he was jumping upon many good citizens, when he propounded that corker. The board is willing to take any blame for its actions that de scrve censure, but we won't let a tie go unnoticed. When the board discovered the first case. the negro, many of the citizens, wanted to send for an expert, every business man in town wanted this done, and at this solicita tion Dr. McCormick, who had seen hundreds of cases of small pox, was sent for and he unhesitatingly pronounced it small pox, so if the county was put to extra expense, while you are abusing, you might abuse the whole of Marion. We have nothing willfully misrepresented in the public prints. We invite the inspection of of our proceedings, and if fraud can be detected by even the "near sighted," we are more than willing to right any wrong, and if we have made any mis takes, correct us as a man should, we can see the law only in this way, that it reaches the merchant, even if he be a merchant of Fords Ferry, just the same as it reaches the poor | beggar, and we will continue to quarantine the of Crittenden county were in town rich and poor alike when it is necessa THE BOARD.

Closing Exercises.

Tuesday Feb. 6th, 1900, was s grand day for the pupils of Lily Dale school. The appearances of many of the patrons and friends of the school shows their appreciation of the good work done in their district by Mr. P. M. Woodall, the teacher.

The forenoon was past in reciting the routine of lessons. Those who heard this part of the exercises are satisfied that Mr. Woodall is a good teacher. By noon the house was packed; a sumptuous dinner was then served. Just in time to take a part in the above, the Woodalı band arriv ed to make music for the occasion.

The afternoon programme was com posed of speeches, recitations, etc., which showed marked improvement on the children in this line. Several valuable gifts were then presented by the teacher to those who received the most head marks in the various spell ing classes. May Jacobs, Marvin Scott, Johnnie Cole, Elvah Jacobs, Curtis O'Neal and Ernest Ordway were the lucky ones. Then some rous ing speeches were made by the trus tees, and a general sweetning up the comfiscating of twenty five pounds of candy. This closes a day long to be remembered by the merry juviniles.
