POLITICAL ACERBITY

A CENTURY OF ENCOUNTERS IN KENTUCKY.

(London, Ky., Cor. New York Sun.)

Kentucky's political troubles have been going on for more than 100 years. The men who came out from Virginia and Maryland and settled Kentucky had a great deal of trouble with the Virginia politicians in obtaining the rights of statehood. It was six years after Kentucky first asked to be admitted into the Union before her prayer was granted, and during that time the most bitter and unceasing discussion was going on among the politicians. But in those days the politicians did not fight and kill, as they began doing later in the State's history. They were content to make stump speeches at the barbecues and to print pamphlets and write withering editorials in the few newspapers.

One of the first assassinations believed to have been done for political purposes was the mysterious killing of Colonel Solomon P. Sharp, at Frankfort, in November 1825. He had just been elected to the Legislature after having resigned as Attorney-General under Governor Desha, and in a few days he would have been elected Speaker of the House of Representatives, which place Gov. Desha was anxious that he should have, in order that he might be in a position to forward the interests of the New Court party. The Old Court party's leaders had been unusually bitter toward him in the canvass and had abused him like a pickpocket. The night before the Legislature was to meet he was called to his door, which is within 100 yards of the spot on which Senator William Goebel was shot, and in full view of it, and was stabbed to the heart with a very wide dirk. He died almost instantly, and although his wife was at his side within a few minutes after the stabbing, he was unable to speak to her and he died without telling the name of the man who killed him. The crime was immediately laid at the door of the leaders of the Old Court party, and the editor of the opposing papers vied with one another in saying abusive things about these leaders. In a few weeks it was found that by J. O. Beauchamp because he had betrayed Beauchamp's sweetheart and that she had made Beauchamp promise to kill Sharp before she would agree to marry him. Beauchamp was executed for the crime a year after its commission, and his wife committed suicide in the jail where she had been allowed to visit him.

THE CLAY-WICKLIFFE DUEL.

A noted political controversy occurred between the late Robert J. Breckinridge, father of Col. W. P. C. Breckinridge, a leader in the anti-Goebel fight, and the late Robert Wickliffe. They both lived at Lexington and they hated each other. On the steps of the courthouse of Lexington one day in summer Dr. Breckinridge was speaking against Colonel Wickliffe, who was present. His abuse was so violent that the knees of Wickliffe were seen to smite together. When Dr. Breckinridge was at the height of his invective against the "Old Duke," as Wickliffe was called, a man put his hand out of the window and yelled:

"Give it to him, doctor; if you need any help I am here!"

"Come down and let me see who you are!" shouted the doctor in reply.

"I don't half to come down! My name is Cassius M. Clay!" came back in trumpet-like tones from the window.

It was Cassius M. Clay, then a civilian and an enemy of the Wickliffes. Although it was believed that Dr. Breckinridge could not keep out of a duel with Colonel Wickliffe, they never fought. But Colonel Wickliffe carried his hatred of Breckinridge beyond his grave, for he willed that his body should not be buried in the cemetery at Lexington because Robert J. Breckinridge had taken part in its dedication.

One of the first duels fought over politics in Kentucky was between Cassius M. Clay and Charles Wickliffe, son of Colonel Wickliffe. The two were both candidates for Congress, and in their campaigns they had abused each other so that Wickliffe called Clay out. They went on a secluded grove near Lexington, arriving there just as the sun was rising. Their seconds loaded their pistols and measured the distance, 20 paces. The principals took their places and at the word fired. Neither was hit. Again the weapons were loaded and again the principals fired with the same result. Clay, who was an excellent pistol shot, declared that the seconds had played them false and had not loaded the pistols with ball, so he refused to fight further. The seconds afterward admitted that Clay was right, but defended their action by saying that they did not want to see two promising young men kill each other, as they would have been almost certain to do had the pistols been properly loaded, for Wickliffe like Clay, was a dead shot with a pistol.

EDITOR SHOT DOWN.

About a year after this trouble the editor of a Lexington newspaper, John Bennett, began abusing the Wickliffes on account of their politics. After several months the editor fell ill, and a friend wrote his editorials for him. One of these was so violently abusive that Charles Wickliffe, with whom Clay fought the duel, called to see the editor. Bennett had just got up from his sick bed, and when Wickliffe called he told him that he could not tell him who was the author of the article, but would do so the next day. In the meantime Bennett went to see the friend who wrote the articles and told him of Wickliffe's visit. The friend was afraid that Wickliffe would kill him, and would not let the editor tell who wrote the article. The next day Wickliffe called at the appointed hour. The editor told him that he would let him know the author's name at noon the next day. Wickliffe replied:

"Very well, I shall be here when the clock strikes 12 tomorrow, and I want to know who wrote that article."

He came on the stroke, and, walking into the office shot Bennett dead without giving him an opportunity to defend himself. Sheriff Redd, instead of taking Wickliffe to jail, kept him under guard at the home of Colonel Wickliffe. The political enemies of Wickliffe were furious, and a large crowd of them gathered in that night and went to Wickliffe's house, and would have lynched young Wickliffe had it not been for the pleadings of a minister, who begged them to allow the law to take its course. The mob left, and Wickliffe, after securing the best lawyers in the land, including Henry Clay, who was a strong political opponent of the Wickliffes, succeeded in getting clear.

Another editor was found for Bennett's paper in the person of a little man of the name of Denton. He never flinched from what he thought was his duty, and he believed his duty was to attack the Wickliffes on every occasion. He not only assailed young Wickliffe and called him a murderer, but he also attacked the father and said that he was everything but what he pretended to be—a gentleman. Young Wickliffe could not stand this, and he promptly challenged Denton to a duel. Being challenged party, Denton said he wanted shyness at five steps. The second sent by Wickliffe was horror-stricken at this, and exclaimed:

"Why, that would be murder!"

"Yes, and it would be murder for Charley Wickliffe to shoot at me twenty steps with a pistol, for I am so near-sighted that I can not see a man over five steps away."

KILLED BY NEAR SIGHTED ANTAGONIST.

After much parleying it was finally decided that the men should fight with rifles at 20 yards. The spring races were then going on in Lexington, and on the morning young Wickliffe started to go to the place of rendezvous, a friend accosted him, and asked him where he was going that time of the morning, remarking that it was too early to be going to the races. Wickliffe laughingly replied:

"Oh, I'm just going out here in the county to kill a near-sighted scoundrel. I'll be back in time for the races."

He drove on, and within less than an hour he was a corpse. The two men were attended by their second and two surgeons. They were placed at the proper distance apart and a loaded rifle was given to each. At the word both fired, but Denton's gun cracked an instant before Wickliffe's, and the bullet struck Wickliffe's heart, killing him instantly. Denton escaped unhurt. He was acquitted at the examining trial, but being of a deeply sympathetic nature the ordeal through which he had passed caused him to lose his reason, and he was taken to the Eastern Kentucky Lunatic Asylum a few months later.

During the Civil War there were many killings, as Kentucky was about evenly divided between Confederate and Union sympathizers.

From 1867 until 1872 there were many other political killings in Kentucky. They were mostly done by the young men who were not old enough to go into the war, but who had imbibed a spirit of lawlessness from the conditions which obtained during the latter years of the struggle. These young men banded themselves together in Kuklux Klans, as they were called, and visited their wrath on political opponents. These klans belonged to both parties, and the Republican klans were as vindictive and as bloodthirsty as the Democratic.

CASSIUS M. CLAY'S CONFLICTS.

He was preaching a new political doctrine. He wanted constitutional emancipation of the slaves. This was very distasteful to the average Kentuckian, as about every man in the state who was able to do so owned negroes. Thus it was that when Clay was making a speech near his home at a little place called Foxtown, in Madison county, a number of bullies in the neighborhood attempted to interrupt him. He paid little attention to them at first, but finally got angry and told them what he thought of them. Thereupon ten or a dozen of the fellows attacked Clay. He was powerful, physically as well as mentally, and he fought the entire crowd. He used his fists, as he had no weapon. Finally one of the men drew a large bowie knife, and Clay saw that unless he disarmed him he would be killed. He grabbed the blade of the knife with his left hand and with his right tried to pry open the clenched fist of the holder of the weapon. He succeeded, but just then Si Turner ran in and cut him in the right side with a bowie knife. But now Clay was armed, and he went at Turner, who was soon lying on the ground with mortal wounds. Clay was also badly cut, and it was six months before he was able to go out. Turner died next day.

In the year following Clay was speaking at Russell's Cave, in Fayette county. He was making a plea for the abolition of slavery by constitutional means. The opposition to Clay had sent down South and secured a noted gambler and fighter, Sam Brown, who was known all over the lower Mississippi region as one of the best pistol shots in the country. He was present, together with a number of fighting men, the slavery party had hired to attend him. When Clay got well into his speech and was growing eloquent over the curse of slavery one of Brown's companions interrupted him, and Clay made some rough rejoinder, and the fight began. Brown drew a pistol and shot at Clay, who was not more than 20 feet from him. The bullet struck the scabbard of Clay's bowie knife and glanced off. But the shock was great that Clay thought he was shot, and drew his knife and began slashing Brown. In telling of the fight Clay said:

"I thought I had received my death wound from Brown. I felt the bullet from his pistol strike me a tremendous blow in the breast and I believed that I had only a little while to live. I did not know but what he had another pistol and I drew my knife, determined to sell what little of life I had as dearly as possible. I was held back by his friends and could not get close enough to him to stab him as I wanted to do, so I had to hack at him. My arm was long and I reached his face the first stroke and laid open his nose. The next lick I cut off his ear. The next I cut one eye out and then I cut at him as fast as I could wield the heavy knife. When I had made his face look like a piece of raw beef his friends grabbed him and threw him over the fence and my few friends carried me to a nearby house, where an examination of my supposed wound was made. It was discovered that the bullet from Brown's pistol had struck the brass tip of the scabbard of my bowie knife, which I carried in my breast pocket. My enemies started the story that I wore a coat of mail, but that was a mistake."

GIFTS OF MILLIONS

THE NOTABLE RECORD OF GENEROUS WOMEN.

A Total of More Than $16,000,000 Given in Large Sums by American Women—Much of the Money Devoted to Educational Purposes.

During the year 1899 nearly $16,000,000 was given for philanthropic purposes by American women.

Of this amount, the single largest sum is Mrs. Stanford's $10,000,000.

Half a million given by Mrs. Lydia Bradley, of Peoria, Ill., comes next to Mrs. Stanford's gift. It was presented last summer to the Bradley Polytechnic Institute, and constituted her second donation, the first being a gift of the land on which the institute was built and the money to build it. That involved a sum approximating $250,000. In addition, Mrs. Bradley has given to Peoria 137 acres of land home for aged women and many other smaller institutions.

Miss Flood's presentation of her father's country place at Menlo Park to the University of California made last year, has been supplemented recently by a gift of money. The house and its contents are valued at $1,000,000, and a tract of nearly 3,000 acres is included in the transfer.

Another California woman has been munificent in her gifts; this is Mrs. E. B. Crocker, who has conveyed to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks her home in Sacramento as a memorial of her husband; it is valued at $90,000. Mrs. Phoebe Hearst and Mrs. Leland Stanford are constantly adding to their gifts to the universities they have built up in California, and their benefactions go up into the millions.

Mrs. Emmons Blaine, of Chicago, in May announced that she would found a college of pedagogy. It will represent an outlay of $500,000.

At the commencement of Vassar College in June it was announced that Mrs. Katherine Tuttle has given a ten thousand dollar scholarship in memory of her sister, and Mrs. Caroline Swift Atwater, of Poughkeepsie, to build a new infirmary has donated $8,000.

From Mrs. William Beldon Noble, of Washington, Harvard University has received a gift of $20,000 to endow a lectureship in memory of her husband, a graduate of the class of 1885. Another gift of $20,000 was received by the university from the family of John Simpkins for the Lawrence Scientific School, and still another $5,000 from Mrs. Frederick T. Phillips of Lawrence, R. I. The gift is in memory of the donor's brother.

A new dormitory to be erected at Wellesley College, at a cost of $60,000, is the gift of Mrs. Martha B. Porter of Washington. Mrs. Irene B. Lewis, of Hamilton, N. Y., has recently made a gift of $5,000 to Colgate University.

Miss Marie Hopper, of Philadelphia, has given $10,000 to Bryn Mawr College.

Mrs. Joseph Moffatt, of Los Angeles, Cal., has given property to the value of $50,000 to the endowment fund of the National Florence Crittenton Mission.

For the maintenance of a home for convalescent invalids at Santa Barbara, $50,000 has been left by Miss Anna S. C. Blake, her will being probated in April. She also left to the Cottage Hospital, $10,000; to the Ortheopedic Hospital, Philadelphia, $10,000, and to a Boston hospital a like sum.

During last summer a new floating hospital for St. John's Guild was built by Mrs. Augustus D. Julliard, of New York, at a cost of $33,000.

To the endowment fund of the university of Chicago Miss Helen Miller Gould has recently contributed $25,000. A second scholarship of $8,000 to Vassar College was announced at the commencement of June—these scholarships are given in memory of her mother. Two scholarships of $5,000 each she has given to Mr. Moody's schools; one for the boys' seminary and one for the girls. To endow a free bed in perpetuity in the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, New York, she has given $5,000. At the cost of about $250 she provided for a floating hospital trip last summer. For cyclone sufferers in Wisconsin July 6 last, she sent her check for $250.

In March the Countess de Castellane (Anna Gould) gave $20,000 to a children's society in Paris.

Since her husband's death, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt has sent $5,000 to the police pension fund. To the Kings' Daughters of Newport her check for $1,000 was lately sent.

Miss Elizabeth Plankinton, of Milwaukee, gives $100,000 for a Young Women's Christian Association in that city. Through the generous gift of $50,000 from a woman residing in New England, Bishop Grafton, of Fond du Lac, Wis., recently announced that the indebtedness on the cathedral had been wiped out and the school fund augmented.

Gifts of bequests have abounded during 1899. A quarter of a million dollars was left by Mrs. Eugene Kelly to build a chapel for St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, and to provide a fund for the sick poor. Of the Baroness de Hirsch's $10,000,000 left to charity, $1,500,000 comes to America. The Clara de Hirsch Home in New York, founded about two years ago by the Baroness, received an additional legacy of $250,000.

The will of Mrs. Caroline L. Macy, who founded the Macy Memorial Art School in New York, bequeathed $200,000 to the Teachers' College and $5,000 to the Presbyterian Hospital. Mrs. E. A. Stevens, of Castle Point, Hoboken, bequeathed to Holy Innocent Church, which she was mainly instrumental in establishing a fund of $3,000 to provide coal for the poor of Hoboken free or at a cost price, and $12,000 for other church charities. To the Church of the Holy Communion, New York, Mrs. Caroline A. Cisco leaves $10,000.

St. Barnabas Hospital Newark, benefits to the value of $1,000 and a share in the residuary estate of Mrs. Eliza Wells who also left $1,000 to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

By the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson in July the poor seamstresses of Rhinebeck-on-Hudson and themselves heirs to an estate of $800,000, which is to be equally divided among them.

THE WORK OF WOMEN

THEIR FADS, DIVERSIONS AND INVENTIONS.

Royal and Literary Women and Their Work—Serviceable Devices for Which Humanity is Grateful—Occupations of Rich and Poor.

Nearly all great women, as well as great men have their fads. A fad is a useful thing in many ways. It serves to rest the intelligent at times, when every nerve and brain cell has been overtaxed by the absorbing subject of tensor study.

Queen Victoria's fads are gardening and dogs and ponies.

Princess Louise boasts of the number of dishes which she has invented. The Queen of Italy collects gloves, boots and shoes which have been worn by royal personages. She has shoes which belonged to Queen Ann, and a fan which was the property of Mary, Queen of Scots.

The Queen of Greece is said to be the finest needlewoman among European royalty. The Empress of Germany loves to knit. The Dowager Queen of Portugal, when at her home on the seashore of Caldas, amuses herself by shooting from high windows at bottles placed in the sea for the purpose.

Maria Theresa of Bavaria is fond of pets, and is always accompanied by 14 of her favorites when she takes a long journey.

The Czarine of Russia is fond of lace, and a remarkable piece of Chantilly was presented to her as a birthday gift by the French government last year.

Many of America's favorite women also have their fads.

Mrs. Francis MacVeigh collects palms. She has one, a dwarf palm, which is said to be 250 years old.

Mrs. Philip D. Armour, Jr., collects plates, and owns more than 2,000 exquisite plates.

Susan B. Anthony has a fad for making quilts and rugs. Candace Wheeler, the veteran art connoisseur and business woman, knits. The daughters of ex-Mayor Hewitt have a mania for learning how to do things, and recently they even learned how to shoe a horse, not only hammering out the shoes on the anvil, but nailing them to the horse's feet.

A long list of American women have become experts in the use of rifles and pistols. Among them are Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Havemeyer, Mrs. Alfred Selton, Mrs. Sewall, and Mrs. M. Valentine Mott. All of these women by diligent practice of their pet fad have routed the ancient creed that a bull's eye must be the size of a barn door in order for a woman to hit it.

Mrs. Charles T. Barnes's collection of tea pots in Chicago is one of the largest in the country, or was, until half of her lot was lost in the fire that destroyed her house.

Mrs. D. Harry Hammer has 10,000 buttons which came from all over the world, and many of which are interesting as souvenirs of various wars. Several of the buttons bear crests of distinguished families, among which are those of Gladstone, Sir Robert Napier, Lord Raleigh, the Duke of Argyll, Count Hatfeldt and the Marquis of Lorne.

In the inventive world women have not been idle. Many of the most useful inventions of to-day were evolved by the eternal feminine. Nor do they pertain to what has been termed the "woman's sphere."

Silk weaving was invented by the wife of the fourth Chinese Emperor; bronze work by a Japanese woman; the weaving of cashmere shawls by a woman of the Indian harem, and the lost secret of Venetian point lace was rediscovered by an Italian woman. Harriet Hosmer is mentioned as having invented the way to make marble from limestone which the Italian Government had long been seeking. Mary Kies was the first woman in America to take out a patent and in the year 1809 she was granted one for "weaving straw with either silk or thread."

Mrs. Harriet Strong who began by inventing a corset ended by taking out patents for dams and reservoirs. Although now an aged woman she recently patented a device for storing water.

A woman invented a satchel-bottomed paper bag and was offered $20,000 for her patent before she left Washington. A woman invented the Burken process of making horse-shoes, which turns out such rapid work that it has saved the country $2,500,000 in 14 years. A number of women's inventions are known to have been patented under the names of their husbands, fathers or brothers.

The women of the State of New York, in point of numbers of inventions, head the list, with those of the New England States following; a close second, the Northwest and Middle States ranking next.

An Illinois woman invented a baling press, and two from Texas a digging machine. A Cincinnati woman is the inventor of a method for decorating pottery, and one from San Francisco devised a tap and faucet; a Philadelphia woman a bicycle saddle; a Massachusetts woman a window frame and sash; a woman from Switzerland a calendar clock; a California woman a method of and means for impounding debris and storing water; a New York woman a glass jar fruit protector; an English woman a horse shoe; a Massachusetts woman an abdominal supporter; a Florida woman a railroad car; an Illinois woman a car heater; a West Virginia woman a hemming attachment for sewing machines.

In the beginning and toward the middle of this century most of the inventions patented by women were made in the line of articles pertaining to the house, the nursery, personal comfort and wearing apparel, such as spinning wheels, heads, moccasins, a calash balloon for ladies, a handbag, an ice-cream freezer, making artificial flowers, a button worker, a clothes frame, a muff, washing machines and a process for manufacturing cheese. After the war and up to the present time street cars, vulcanized rubber and textile fabrics, windmills, fire escapes, typewriters, sectional horse-shoes and pneumatic tires were patented by women inventors.

HOLOCAUST.

Horses, Mules and Cattle Perished in a Burning Building and Perish.

JOHN P. REED'S BIG LOSS.

Between ten and eleven o'clock Sunday night, the big grain and stock barn of Mr. John P. Reed, near town, was destroyed by fire, and in the flames seven fine mules, three good horses and five head of cattle perished, and two other good mules were so badly injured that they will probably be worthless. Besides the live stock, 350 bushels of corn, a lot of oats, five tons of hay, a binder, a buggy, a wagon and a lot of harness and saddlery of all kinds used on a big farm were burned.

When Mr. Reed and other parties reached the building, the roof had fallen in, and it was impossible to get into the passage to unfasten the doors of the stalls that held the stock in prison, while it was roasted alive. It was a pitiable scene, and the distressing calls of the horses and mules, the belching of the cattle and the mad roar of the burning, consuming, heartless flames all combined to make a hideous, as well as pitiful noise that will not soon be forgotten by those who heard it. Nothing could be done for the stock, and gradually as the flames swept around them, the poor animals ceased one by one, to give expression in tones that were as sorrowful as the cry of a human being, to their excruciating pain.

The fire evidently originated in the hay loft, and did its work rapidly. How it originated is not known, but Mr. Reed feels certain that it was the work of an incendiary. He had always taken special pains to keep fire away from the building, allowing no one to smoke in or around it, and no one of the family had been to the building that day with fire in any shape.

The loss is between $1,500 and $2,000. No insurance.

FIRED AWAY.

No Double Mail Service on the Ohio Valley at Present.

The people along the Ohio Valley branch of the I. C., have been very much interested in an effort to get double mail service on the branch. Lengthy petitions were sent in from the towns along the road, and as the train service is good, it was hoped that an extra mail car and clerks would be put on. Monday Postmaster Crider received a letter from Senator Deboe in which the Senator enclosed a letter from the Postoffice Department saying that while the expense was comparatively small and the service needed, there were no available funds for this purpose and the matter had been filed away and would receive further attention in 1901.

This service is badly needed and the business interests all along the road will be disappointed at the result of its efforts to secure a service that it merits.

TWO MARION BOYS.

There was a change effected yesterday in the agency of the Adams and Southern Express Companies in this city. Joe H. Walker, who had resigned on the 6th of November last was checked out and Alfred W. Blondin checked in agent. The reason that the resignation of Mr. Walker was not effective until yesterday, was that he was asked to hold up until after the holiday rush. He has served the company as agent in this city since about 1888 and during that time he has deservedly gained the confidence and good will of the citizens of this city and has built up the company's business to a very great degree. He was always courteous and attentive to business. He will go on the road as traveling salesman for the Henderson Lithographing Co., of Cincinnati. His friends wish him unbounded prosperity in his new field.—Henderson Gleaner.

Mr. Will Hammond, who has been a valued employee of the Bennett, Winston & Hatfield Dry Goods Co., the past two years has resigned to accept a clerical position with the I. C. Co., at Henderson. Mr. Hammond has had previous experience in railroad business and will doubtless prove a popular member of the office force at Henderson.—Sturgis correspondent.

Mr. Robert E. Foster and Miss Annie Frazier were united in marriage at the residence of Mr. C. E. Weldon, at Fulton, yesterday morning, and reached home in the afternoon. They were given a reception at the home of the groom's father, Mr. R. N. Foster.

The bride is one of Marion's handsomest young ladies. Vivacious and amiable, she has the qualities for adorning any home. The groom is a popular young man, highly appreciated by a large circle of friends.

Mr. James W. Dobson and Mrs. Sue Frazier were united in marriage at the home of the bride at this place Feb. 28. The bride moved from Kelsey to this place some time ago, and during her residence here she made many warm friends. The groom is a well known tobaccoist of Kelsey and is accounted one of the good and substantial citizens of that section. They will reside at his home in Kelsey.

RIDING A BUCKING MULE.

A "Puncher's" Adventure From the Indian Territory.

The Century Magazine's prize for the best short story submitted by a college student has been awarded to John M. Oskison of Leland Stanford University, whose home is in the Indian Territory, and whose blood is partly Indian. "Only the Master Shall Prune" is its title, and one of its scenes is a description of a ride on a bucking mule.

Out of a knot of excited men Hanner went straight to the waiting, restless mule. With a mock air of bravado, he struck the excited mule across the flank with his sombrero, after roughly seizing the reins. No one who has not learned by experience how to mount a plunging horse can understand how Hanner lifted himself out of the chaos of rearing mule and struggling attendants into the saddle before he signed to the men to turn the animal loose.

When the mule found itself free to act there was a momentary pause. Then began the short, nasty jumps straight into the air, with the animal's back bowed, its legs stiff, and its head lowered. It was the first powerful effort of the angered beast, made with devilish confidence. Hanner was scarcely shaken by these first straight jumps, but he began the twisting series which is the second expedient of a bucking animal. A jump high into the air, with a seemingly impossible twist to the side, landed the mule with its head turned almost half round. Before the rider caught his breath another jump and another half-turn were made. These are the motions that make a bronco-buster's life shorter. Hanner was bleeding at the nose in half a minute. The twisting jumps were continued until the strength of the mule was almost exhausted and as yet only the hat of the puncher had been dislodged. A short pause followed, placed upon the paper-covered plate, during which the mule changed its tactics and Hanner swayed its sweaty neck with his open hand. The next motion was a sudden rearing by the mule. As it rose on its hind legs, the rider yanked fiercely on the reins, and, slipping to the ground on one side, allowed the brute to fall on its back. The saddle horn buried itself in the earth, and the mule's hoofs beat the air a moment before it scrambled to its feet.

Hanner was cooler than the mule now, and swung himself back into the saddle with the first long leap of the desperate animal. This was the easy part of the trial for the rider, and the spectacular part for the world. The mule ran straight away for the opposite fence of the fair-ground with long, lunging jumps, rising and pitching forward with the speed of a racing yacht. Hanner brought his craft about before it sailed into the fence, and beat it fore and aft with a flourishing hand. He was wild with triumph now, his hair blowing in the wind. He leaned forward as in a race, urging the thoroughly tired and conquered mule straight for the crowd. A particularly vicious dig with the spurs made the beast plunge into the scattering knot of spectators and rise to a four-legged gate. At the opposite side of the track no fence barred its way, and it ran, frightened and quivering under the awning of a temporary wooden stand, scattering glasses and confections to the winds, and wrecking the stand. Hanner slowly dismounted, stroked the sweaty flank of the subdued mule, then turning and picking up an unbroken bottle of soda, proposed a toast "to our gentle old family-buggy horse!"

SCIENCE EXPLAINS.

Bible Miracles Are Not Essential to Christianity.

Miracles as an article of faith were taken out of Christianity by Prof. Benjamin W. Bacon, of the Yale Divinity School, the other evening. He spoke before the Men's Club of the United Church on the theme "Is a Belief in Miracles Essential to Christianity?"

At the outset Prof. Bacon declared that it was not, and he said that the greater part of the miracles of the Bible can now be explained by scientific reasoning. They were regarded originally as miracles because they were not understood. He pointed to the alleged miraculous destruction of armies and multitudes of people according to the Old Testament, asserting that some plague which was not understood fell upon the armies, and that because of the enormous number of deaths which followed a miracle was said to have been wrought.

Prof. Bacon explained the crossing of the Red Sea by the children of Israel by saying that it had been found that high winds actually drive the sea back at the exact spot where the miracle is supposed to have taken place, and that probably the children of Israel arrived at just the time when one of these was blowing.

He declared that the test of the miraculous was "permanent incomprehensibility." The only two miracles which have stood the test of science in attempts to explain are, he said, the Resurrection and the Crucifixion. He referred to many of the miracles of the New Testament as "legendary accretions," declaring that the narratives were written down from memory, years after their occurrence, by the Apostles.

Prof. Bacon's address is said to have been based on the doctrine taught in the Yale Divinity School.—N. Y. World.

ISSUED WEEKLY.

R. C. WALKER, Publisher.

ONE YEAR ONE DOLLAR

The Porto Rican Tariff Bill passed the House but the more sedate senate may not be so much like potter's clay in the hands of the President as is the House.

According to the rumors that come from Frankfort, Mr. Taylor is going to the mountains with his soldiers. Probably its a case of the mountains refusing to come to Mohammed.

There are people who hold that money is not the creature of law, but they will not deny that without a tariff law behind him Mr. Carnegie would not be turning out a dollar a second.

Mr. R. J. Bugg, of Bardwell, is a candidate for delegate to the National Democratic Convention. As he is no relation to "g bug" who gave the party so much trouble four years ago, we are for him.

The Boers are evidently making a hopeless fight, but their spendid effort to stand by their own rights is the best of evidence that they are capable of attending to their affairs and ought to be permitted to do so.

The Spooner Bill for governing the Philippines will be reported favorably to the Senate. It practically makes the President Emperor, King, Czar, or whatever he chooses to be, of the islands, until congress decrees otherwise.

The fight on Goebelism was commenced long before the election law that bears the dead governor's name was enacted and will be kept up so long as there are those who have the nerve to fight greedy corporations at Frankfort.

The new census will show a great increase in the wealth of the country. No average fellow can gaze at the stupendous array of figures necessary to represent on paper the fortunes of the Rockfellers, Carnegies and the few other fortunates who have raked off their winnings from the big wheel of fortune, without feeling that this is a great country, but at the same time he will feel that he is a mighty small portion of it.

Will somebody please tell us how much taxes Senator Ferguson pays, who introduced that bill to squander $100,000 of the taxpayers' money, and incidentally also to create seven new and unheard-of offices to add to a state having claimants to all the offices in sight?—Paducah News.

Yes, we will give you the desired information, when somebody tells us that a man's qualification for office and his privilege of introducing bills in a legislative body to which he has been elected must be measured and controlled by the amount of taxable property he owns, and, incidentally, is there a taxpayer in the State who would not cheerfully give his pro rata of the $100,000, if all that amount is required, to have convicted and lawfully punished the cowardly assassin, who holds human life so cheaply as to shoot from ambush any citizen, much less a man who is the chosen leader of one of the great political parties of the State? If the News knows of such and will furnish the public their names, we will have the assessor to call and furnish it with a schedule of Senator Ferguson's taxable property.

FRANKFORT NEWS.

Mr. W. S. Taylor left Monday to attend the funeral of his brother in Butler county.

The legislature's constitutional sixty days expires next Tuesday and that will adjourn.

The Roberts local option bill was defeated in the Senate. The bill made the county the unit in the adoption of local option.

After a continuous fight for five hours, the Democrats of the House of Representatives passed the $100,000 Reward Bill, the object of which is to bring to justice the murderers of Gov. Wm. Goebel. The vote 57 to 37, being divided almost on strict party lines.

The jury commissioners and clerks of more than sixty counties have reported to Auditor Coulter, making remittances for monies due the State. The Democratic officials though cramped and inconvenienced in the offices in the hotel, are attending to business.

A letter addressed by Prof. Charles Williams, Superintendent of Schools of Laurel county, to H. V. McChesney, Superintendent of Public Instruction, was answered by Prof. Burke, the Republican claimant. Prof. Williams has written Prof. Burke to ascertain how the letter came into his possession.

Judge Field will hand down his opinion in the gubernatorial contest cases on or before Saturday, and that event is being looked to with much interest on all sides, not because it will be final, but it is one step in the direction of a final settlement. The case, it is understood, will go to the court of appeals, no matter which way Judge Field decides.

The Kentucky Court of Appeals in an opinion by Judge Paynter, holds that William H. Sweeney, of Washington county, defaulted for nearly $2,000 as an official of a lower court, and that his bondsmen must make good the amount of the shortage. This man is the Sweeney who during the recent campaign was known as "Roaring Bill," and who, since that campaign closed has been the leading counsel for W. S. Taylor.

The most talked of event so far this week is the shipping of guns and other munitions of war from the armory at this place to London by Mr. Taylor. What he means is purely problematical, and there are various conjectures. Some think he intends to establish himself in his mountain fastness and defy the courts. A resolution has been introduced in the Senate providing for an investigation and a demand of their return, and appropriating $250,000 to equip militia to bring the guns back to Frankfort.

TELEPHONE CONNECTION.

The Carrsville people are very anxious for telephone connections and have asked Alexander to make them a proposition for extending his line either from Salem or Tolu. We hope an agreement can be reached and Carrsville hitched on to the Alexander line. This line is giving splendid service and as Mr. Alexander's propositions are usually very liberal, we now confidently expect the enterprising citizens of the thriving little city of Carrsville to take hold of the matter.

Near Baxley, Ga., two negro boys murdered a farmer and his babe and beat his wife terribly.

Mrs. H. A. Ingram has postponed the date of her entertainment at the M. E. church until Friday night, March 16th.

WHITTAKER IS HELD OVER WITHOUT BAIL.

Frankfort, Ky., March 6—Silas Jones, of Whitley county, who was arrested for complicity in the Goebel shooting, was this afternoon admitted to bail in the sum of $500. At the Whittaker trial he testified that five shots came from the executive building.

When the case against Harland Whittaker was called, the room was full of people, many of whom were witnesses. Twelve Commonwealth witnesses were examined; the defendant introduced no testimony, both prosecution and defense seemed to hold back and evade touching the points that will be of vital importance at the regular trials of whoever may be indicted. The plan of the prosecution was evidently to bring out barely enough to hold Whittaker, and not disclose to the defense the evidence intended to be brought out later.

At the conclusion of this testimony both sides rested, without argument, Judge Moore promptly said: "I will hold the prisoner over to the next grand jury without bail." Whittaker was immediately taken back to jail.

Mr. Miles detailed the arrest and taking from Whittaker of three pistols. "He whimpered and cried that he did not do the shooting, before I accused him of it and insisted that he was a Democrat," said the witness. Mr. Whittaker told the witness that he had come to Frankfort at the instance of a brother of W. S. Taylor for the purpose of assisting him in holding on to the office of Governor. He secured two of his pistols after coming here. Prisoner told him conflicting stories of where he was when the shots were fired.

Mr. Charles Howard, a farmer of this county, said he met the prisoner three days before the shooting and Whittaker asked him to point out Senator Goebel. "I told him Goebel was not in the building," said the witness. "During the conversation he said that he was here to see that Taylor kept his office."

F. W. Bowman, of Hardin county, said he was present when Whittaker was arrested and heard one mountain-er say to another that there were others had to go like Goebel. A half hour before the shooting witness saw a man closely resembling Whittaker raise a window in the Executive building on the second floor, west end, and look out.

Silas Jones, of Whitley county, who has been in jail with Whittaker, was then placed on the stand. He was in the Executive building when the shots were fired and thought they were fired from the western end of that building. Some of the shots, he thought, were fired inside of the building.

Charleston, W. Va., March 6.—The greatest mining horror in the New River region occurred at Red Ash about 8 o'clock this morning by an explosion in the Drift mine of the Red Ash Coal Company. The mine was full of men and the explosion occurred near the entrance, which was closed by falling slate. The working capacity of the mine is 175 men, and it was being worked to its full capacity. It is believed over 100 men were at work. Already fifty bodies have been taken out, and the work of rescue is still going on.

August Flower.

"It is a surprising fact," says Prof. Houton, "that in my travels in all parts of the world, for the last ten years, I have met more people having used Green's August Flower than any other remedy for dyspepsia, deranged liver and stomach and for constipation. I find for tourists and salesmen, or for persons filling office positions, where headaches and general bad feelings from irregular habits exist, that Green's August Flower is a grand remedy. It does not injure the system by frequent use, and is excellent for sour stomachs and indigestion." Sample bottles free at J. H. Orme's. Sold by all dealers in all civilized countries.

WAR TO THE DEATH.

Pests Of The Poultry Yard Must Go!

American Lice Destroyer Kills More Mites, Lice and Other Vermin in a Day Than All Other Remedies Combined.

The war is on! The days of lice and vermin that have done so much to make the life of the poultryman miserable, and his business unprofitable are over. American Lice Destroyer is the proper ammunition to use! This preparation is wonderful in its power, and vermin cannot exist 24 hours after it is applied to the coop of fowls. Every poultryman needs it. It is cheap, reliable and effective, one package being sufficient to protect 250 fowls from mites and lice for one year. When this Destroyer is used, profits at once increase. Lice and vermin do more to kill profits than all other causes combined. You know it. Don't go losing money every week, but try American Lice Destroyer. You may have tried other things without success, but if this fails, you can have your money back. We are in this fight to stay, and will back Destroyer against any number of mites or lice you may have. Don't fool away money with "receipts" or home-made makeshifts. Use scientific means. The American Lice Destroyer has been used by thousands of poultrymen; it has been on the market several years and has been tested thousands of times. We know it is all right, and if it doesn't do the work remember you get your money back. What more can you ask? If your druggist don't sell American Lice Destroyer, he's behind the age. In that case send for $1.00 box at once. Made only by American Mfg. Co., Terre Haute, Ind.

YOUNG LAW BREAKERS.

The Tabor Brothers Confess to the Crime of Petty Larceny.

WILL GO TO THE REFORMATORY.

Tuesday there were two youthful law breakers before County Judge Rochester. Will Hugh Tabor, aged seventeen, plead guilty to stealing three chickens, which he brought to town and sold, while his brother Floyd, aged 13, acknowledged that he had taken a possum pelt from Koltinsky's grocery and sold it.

They are both waifs, without friends or homes. Their father, who formerly lived here, is now in a distant state. The House of Reform, near Lexington, owned and kept up by the State, is for such as they, and instead of sending them to jail, the court will send them to the State institution; this will be cheaper for the county and infinitely better for the boys. To punish them with a month's sentence in jail, and then turn them adrift without a parent's care or the restraining influence of home, would but invite them to go from bad to worse, while there is at least a chance for them, if placed under the care of the reformatory.

In answer to a telegram, Judge Rochester was notified yesterday that there was room for them. They will be sent to Lexington tomorrow.

R. M. FRANKS,
Manager of Grounds.

The largest and most valuable collection of specimens of Crittenden county minerals that perhaps have ever been made belong to Mr. J. W. Waggoner, of this place. His collection embraces the lead, zinc and spars, in their various forms, together with the kindred formations of other minerals that nature has so skillfully and artistically combined in the mineral veins that have been uncovered in this section. The cubes, cones and spheres, in their variegated colors of blue, purple, pink, red, lead, black and snow-white, combined and cemented together in mother nature's laboratory, are so attractive to the eye, so enticing to the imagination that it is no wonder that the vision of the uninitiated, as they discover these things, take fancy flight to fields of gold, silver, diamonds and other precious stones. Mr. Waggoner has spent a great deal of time and some money in making this collection, and it would take a good deal of money to induce him to part with it. The collection is exhibited in a handsome cabinet in the Farmers Bank.

PROSPECTORS.

Our Valuable Minerals are Attracting Widespread Attention.

Hardly a week passes that there are not capitalists here from a distance to investigate the reports that have gone out concerning the spar, zinc and lead in this section. Yesterday, Messrs. H. A. Morton, general manager of the Consolidated Oil and Gas Co., and Ed. A. Lagenbach, of Canton, Ohio, were here. They visited the Salem valley and looked over some of the claims and will probably make an investment.

POLITICAL ACEBRITY.

A CORRESPONDENT'S ENCOUNTER.

In the August election of 1889 the Know Nothing party was destroyed in Kentucky by a riot, it started in Louisville. A mob of Know Nothings went to the part of the city peopled chiefly by Irish and killed all told about 80 people and burned the houses of many. The day has been referred to ever since in the history of Louisville, as Bloody Monday, and it killed Know Nothingism in Kentucky.

A desperate political fight occurred in Lexington in the fall of 1888 in front of the Penix Hotel. Thomas M. Green, a descendant of the Marshalls of Kentucky, and one of the most bitter writers Kentucky ever produced, was an editorial correspondent of the old Cincinnati Commercial Gazette. There had been an election that summer in which the Democrats were charged with having practiced gross frauds, especially in Jessamine. It was charged that Lee Baldwin, a prominent Democrat of that county, was concerned in these frauds. Green wrote a series of articles which bristled with abuse of Baldwin. He also pried into his business record and charged him with crookedness in money affairs. This incensed Baldwin and he told his friends that he intended to kill Green on sight. They met on the day the monument to John C. Breckinridge was to be dedicated at Lexington. The men were strangers to each other. One of Green's friends told him that Baldwin was in town and would kill him if he found him. Green went to a pawnbroker's shop and bought a pistol, which he put in his overcoat pocket. In less than half an hour afterwards he started to go from the Phoenix Hotel to the upside where the monument was to be unveiled. He had gone but a few steps from the entrance when he met Baldwin. Green had been pointed out to Baldwin, and the latter accosted him with the question:

"Is this Thomas M. Green?"

"Yes sir; it is. Who are you?" came the reply.

Green is deaf, and he put his hand to his ear to catch the answer, which was: "I am Lee Baldwin, and I think you are a d—d scoundrel."

Baldwin then struck Green with his fist, and at the same time drew his pistol, which was hammerless. He failed to press the releasing spring, and before he could get his pistol out and was shooting with rapidity and accuracy. His second shot went through Baldwin's heart. Baldwin had got in one shot at Green, but the latter recovered from the wound.

WHEN GOODLOE AND SWOPE MET.

Another desperate hand-to-hand encounter was between Colonel William Cassius Goodloe and Colonel Armistead M. Swope. This was in the fall of 1889. The government had just completed a new postoffice building at Lexington. The upper rooms are used by the Collector of Internal Revenue for the Seventh District. Colonel Goodloe was then Collector. One Friday afternoon about 1 o'clock he came down stairs and went to his box in the postoffice to get his mail. Colonel Swope was standing near the box, and talking through his own open box to one of the employees inside. Addressing Colonel Swope, Colonel Goodloe said:

"You obstruct the way."
"It's a matter of indifference if I do," replied Colonel Swope. Instantly the men were fighting Goodloe with a large knife and Swope with a pistol. Swope shot Goodloe in the abdomen, and immediately thereafter Goodloe cut his pistol wrist, causing him to drop the weapon. Then Goodloe went at him and inflicted thirteen wounds, six of which were mortal. Swope died before any person could reach him. As Colonel Goodloe left the building to go to the office of a near-by doctor he waved his bloody knife and exclaimed in exultant tones: "He bellowed like a calf." Goodloe died two days later.

THE ELECTION LAW.

The Senate Passes an Amendment to the Goebel Bill.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 1.—The Johnson amendment to the Goebel election law was passed by the Senate to-day, with amendments by Senator Allen, of Fayette county. This bill abolishes the party devices on the ballot and requires that the State Librarian shall furnish the ballot paper in order that it may be of uniform thickness all over the State. It requires the Board of Election Commissioners to appoint at least one Republican on each county board, and requires the county boards to appoint two election officers in each precinct from each of the two strongest parties, to be selected from lists submitted by the constituted party authorities in the various counties. The Democrats seem to regard the amendment as an improvement on the present law, and it may pass the House next week.

HAT PASSED AROUND

And a Nice Collection Taken Up For Taylor.

County Judge Cansler, of this county raised $222 for William Sylvester Taylor and sent him a draft for that amount. A petition signed by fifty Republicans and a few of the Brown Democrats, who had contributed from $1 to $10, accompanied the draft, requesting Taylor to use the money in meeting expenses. One of the first needs for money will be the purchase of a ticket to Butler county. Judge Cansler is one of the most influential Republican leaders of Christian county, and was an original Taylor man.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.
