A YOUNG LADY KILLED.

The Happiness of May Day Merry The Republicans Select Their From Madisonville to Marion and Exercises at Opera House Thurs-Makers Turned to Sorrow.

Wednesday. May 1st, a gay and happy crowd of young people left folio for Hurricane church on a Mayday pienic, anticipating a day of merriment. But their happiness was destined to be overshad-oxed by the gloom of a distressing tragedy. In the afternoon Miss Lula Clayton, a beautiful and beloved young lady of Tolu, was sitting on the steps leading into the church, when little Tasco Bozeman, the son of Mr. Charles Bozeman, no of Tolu's most prominent citizens, came around the commence adjourned until the commence of the church, and seeing a rifle standing against the building high and seven the farmoon.

Romantic Spot in the Valley of Broad Creek, Ten Miles from the Capital, on the Maryland Side of the Potomac.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THE forests are clad in emerald the chipperings and twitterings and of creation; the hills and dales of dreds o' times, an' de gin'ral a-wadin' suburban Washington are daily and nightly traveled, on their superior roads, by riders, drivers, cyclists, automobilists and pedestrians. Not only our own people are enjoying the woodland glories and beauties of the country, but visiting friends who come from near and far are shown the country side of the national capital, as well as its official, social and architectural side.

There is no road leading into or out of the national capital which does not bring one to historic spots; and they who have been here long do not realize this fact so well as the easual visitor or occasional literary tramp, who keeps his eyes open and asks questions of the plain people, realizing the wisdom of the old saying:

"Lean not on one mind, constantly, Lest, where one stood before, two fall.

Something God hath to say to thee Worth hearing from the lips of all." In one day's journey along the old common road which follows the Maryland shore of the Potomac, down towards Piscataway creek, by asking questions of the people, we discovered that this oft traveled road is replete with history-and the writer has been over it fully fourscore times, without asking questions. By the time one has traveled so far from the city that the natives begin saluting-which they never do in the immediate vicinity of townyou can, in your imagination, date yourself back three or four generations without meeting anything modern enough in appearance to "bring you out of it," to use the phrase of the hypnotist.

The region was once a rich tobacco country, and a spot of untilled land was more rare than a well-cultivated field is now. Tobacco, or the "sotweed," as it was called, made the colony one of the wealthiest of the new world, and the "sot-weed factor," or agent, was a lord, to all intents and purposes, though in his lordliness imagination. We read of them as we Confederacy," whom not only the clung to the land, is being gradually ton's attending service in the little forced to knuckle un ous second-growth of oak and pine, which is slowly encroaching upon the worn-out fields. But those energetic, rom the plains of Texas and the hard-drinking, bull-baiting and cockand of the setting sun as a tribute fighting old colonists builded well to her worth and in attestation of a and left to their posterity solid walls, often of brick imported from England, which are as good to-day as they were a century ago; and so their in as good repair and quite as respectable as his pedigree. You will find any number of these picturesque old places, some in good condition the habitable portions have been slowly contracted by advancing decay, others again quite abandoned and falling into complete ruin, or gone entirely, and their sites marked only by a solitary chimney standing like a gravestone. A ten-mile drive from the city will bring us to a point where the road Broad creek. After we descend the stony hill and cross the stream at its foot we will come upon a little brick church, surrounded by two or three score of graves. The little edifice is in a fair state of repair, and there is little about it to suggest great age, but on one of the headstones in the

This old church is surrounded by old colored people and very old poor white people, who carry the traditions which were handed down to them through two generations, and they all agree that Gen. Washington frequently attended this church across the river from his home, because in some seasons the roads were well-nigh impassable, so that he could not go to old Pohick church, nor to old Christ church in Alexandria. They say that whether the general was himself still, others occupied only in part, as anxious to go every Sunday or not, his wife insisted upon it; and that is one of the reasons he would be rowed over the river to church in extremely bad weather when the roads were too

Less than a quarter of a mile farther down the river road we came to the parsonage, and the European exploiters of ancient dwelling places cannot makes a sudden dip into the valley of show anything more quaint or ancient looking, albeit their houses are surely much older. For the times of its occupancy, this must have been a large, pretentious brick house of the colonial period, having a fine broad hallway through the entire middle portion, a very wide stairway, with galleries above. The brick walls are as sound as ever, and it must have been an elegant home a century and a half ago, but the interior has been abused. Very little of the stucco work remains; just enough to show that the walls and ceilings were once beautifully ornamented by skillful workmen. The paneling and laboriously handcut scrolls decorating the walls are badly broken. But these, the arched cupboard in the dining-room, and the folding inside shutters in the deep recessed windows, show that the parsonage was expensively built. The rector must have had as grand a home as he had in England, and his surroundings were much more romantic. Besides he had the satisfaction, as he ate his shad, bass, lamb chops, beef and "corn pone," of knowing that he was a sure enough missionary to the heathen. Under the circumstances, in this elegant home, how he must have enjoyed himself! One day in the near future, we will take a day off and ramble down the Virginia side of the Potomac, and see some other quaint historic places.

SHAMROCK AT HER PAGES.

The America's Cup Challenger, Shamrock II., on Trial Spins with Her Predecessor.

THE OLD YACHT ISN'T SUFFERING MUCH.

A Real Match Race, However, Over a Set Course, Not Likely to Take Place Till the Last of This Week, or Later-A Yachting Correspondent's Opinion.

Southampton, May 6 .- Shamrock II. had her second spin Monday morning. A fresh, squally northeast wind promised just the conditions Capt. Sycamore desired, to supplement Saturday's light-breeze trial. The chief interest now centers in the cup challenger's behavior when poking her long bow into a rough sea. Mr. Watson, the designer, is so pleased with Saturday's performance that he has gone back to Loudon.

A preliminary brush between the two Shamrocks is expected Wednesday, but the first match race round a set course is not likely to take place until late in the week or early next week. Mr. Pife will arrive here, Wednesday, to take charge of Shamrock IL.

The preparations for getting under way were started early. When the two Shamrocks were still inside Southampton water the wind drew north and became lighter. The challenger sent up her club topsail and Shamrock I. set a much larger topsail. They had the wind dead aft down the water. The challenger went out under mainsail and topsail only. Shamrock I. set a jib. At the start the challenger ran out ahead, but Shemrock I., catching a better breeze, soon began to overhaul her. The challenger set a jib and staysail, but, through the breeze here was light and the water smooth, Shamrock I, held close astern, losing nothing from Nettley to Calshot. There they hauled in the wind and reached along in a fresher breeze, the challenger leading by half a minute passing the Spit light.

It is sent a solid six-inch fountain of oil impossible to ascertain who is missing, as thousands have left the city. S. A. McCottery's Story.

S. A. McCottery, who was employed at the Gardner shipyards, almost lost his life in trying to save the people who rushed down Market street to the river when the flames were at their flercest. He says he succeeded in getting 20 persons across the river, but as many more were either burned to death or drowned at the pier.

"I had no idea the shipyard was in danger," said Mr. McCottery. "I was trying to save my tools as the fire was being blown to the east and away from the docks.

"Suddenly the flames shot across the yard with the wind from the west right behind them. Then I knew everything was gone. The building was burning over my head.

No Escape For Those Left.

"On the pier I saw a crowd of people. I am positive that 40 is a low estimate of those I saw. Of this number I saw only the 20 I carried across. There was absolutely no way

The east side Russian cafe is in many respects the prototype of the old London coffee house of Ben Johnson's time. Liquor is not sold there. Tea is the common beverage. There are many of these cafes oa the east side. Food is served in glass with rose-colored prisms, whose letters of the alphabet in proper orthem, but that is a secondary consideration. them late after midnight he will find all animation and life. There may be a few women, but the little groups here and there in different parts of the room are mostly men. Over in one corner is an actor who has made a great success at one of the Yiddish theaters on the Bowery. He may not be known to histrionic fame on upper Broadway, but his name is a household word on the east side. And he is a man who is clever. He has talents of a high order, be he comedian or tragedian, for you must know that the east side is a severe critic, and success can only be achieved there by true talent. He has about him an interested group. He is telling to them a story or an amusing incident. His listeners represent the lighter side of the night.

In another corner are eight or nine men silently watching two chess players absorbed in the intricacies of the game. Their faces betray the deepest interest. They are all experts and watch with an intensity that borders on worriment each move and study each possiblity of the play.

Near the center is a man with unkempt hair and haggard eyes talking with an earnestness that demonstrates the faith in his own words. He is a socialist and the room is full of those who sympathize with him. He is discussing the situation in Russia. He knows the life and the niovements of every ezar. He knows of the horrors of Siberia. He calls by name this one and that one who has been driven in chains to a Russian prison. He draws a word picture of the oppression of his people and his very thoughts find an echo in the breasts of those who surround him.

As one glances into the faces of the men assembled there he sees a little world the like of which has never before entered into his philosophy. The faces are thin and hungry looking. They are pale and drawn and they have about them the unmistakable air of the worker between brick walls; the toiler for bread on whom God's sunshine seldom shines. But through the eyes comes the light of the higher life. There may be hungry men there, but not one among that throng who would not forego his supper rather than miss the joy of that one night.

Despite the poverty that overshadows all there is a general air that bespeaks cleverness and wit and wisdom and casts a glamour over the midnight meetings in the Russian cafes that long remains upon the memory of those who visit them.

There is seriousness there, to be sure, but above it all bubbles an ef-

MOST ANCIENT WATER MILL

One in Connecticut Destroyed After Being Operated Two Hundred and Fifty Years.

What perhaps is the oldest tenure of property in the United States came to an end recently when Fowler's mills in Milford, Conn., passed from the possession of William Fowler into that of George M. Gunn, a lawyer of that town. The mill site and the perpetual water franchise of the Wopowage river, or which it is situated, have been owned by the Fowler family since 1640, 20 years after the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth. William M. Fowler, the last owner, was the eighth William in a succession of nine generations. Now the water power will furnish electric fty to light the town, says an eastern exchange. The old mill was the first grist mil in the colony of Connecticut, and the second in America. In a shed attached to it was operated the first sawmill in the western hemisphere. At its doors was built the first wagon bridge or this continent.

When Ansantawae, the sachem of the Paugasuck Indians, sold to the settlers of Milford a strip two miles long on the banks of Wopowage river William Fowler was one of the buy ers. He was a leader among the men of the settlement, to which he and 40 others had come from the settlement of New Haven. He was a member of the general court of the colony and was one of the first three civil judges appointed by the governor. He was also a man of influence with the Indians, and his skill as a diplomat pulled the little settlement through many a tight place. In recognition of his services the villagers, backed up by the general court, voted to him

All manner of extravagant expressions are possible when a woman's nerves are overwrought.

The spasm at the top of the wind pipe or bronchial tubes, "ball rising in the throat," violent beating of the heart, laughing and crying by turns, muscular spasms (throwing the arms about), frightened by the most insignificant occur-rences—are all symptoms of a hysterical condition and serious derangement of the female organs.

Any female complaint may produce hysterics, which must be regarded as a symptom only. The cause, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms.

REUNION PLANS DEVELOPING

into a Fixed State of Completion-The Grand Ball as the Brilliant Feature of the Entertainment Work.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 6. -Gen. G. W. Gordon, who will be chief marshal of the mammoth parade on the last official day of the Confederate Reunion, has given out his plans for the line of march. As has hitherto been the custom, the Army of Virginia will be placed at the head of the procession, as the post of honor. The Army of Tennessee follow s and the third position is assigned to the Trans-Mississippi Department. This will form the body of the parade. Following the Veterans come the divisions of Sons of Veterans, occupying the same order, the Army of Northern Virginia again taking first place. The sponsors and maids of honor of the Sons of Veterans for the three divisions, for the commander-in-chief and the Forrest Camp, will be the only sponsors reconized unless the order is modified. In the rear of the Sons of Veterans and bringing up the rear will be the local tary companies. The present order is only general in character, and the formation and order of parade, the line of march, and the details in connection therewith, will be announced in future orders.

It may now be said that in general the work of the different sub-committees is rapidly formulating into a completeness in every way desirable for the perfection of the greatest Reunion of Veterans ever held in the country. The immense Confederate Hall rears its roof high above the business blocks along Front street, and requires only a few more weeks for its completion.

Residents are furnishing their spare rooms with cots-public buildings all over the city have finally been contracted for and engaged for sleeping quarters-the commissary department reports enough provisions for the grand encampment, and in all the different ramifications of the work progress is sure and satisfactory.

An outline sketch of the official program has been prepared by Temporary Chairman Gen. G. W. Gordon, of this city, and is as follows:

Tuesday, May 28 .- Calling convention to order at 10 a.m. by Temporary Chairman G. W. Gordon; invocation by Rev. William Jones, chaplain-general United Confederate Veterans; singing of the doxology; address of welcome to Veterans by Gov Benton McMillin, on behalf of the State; address of welcome to Veterans and visitors by Mayor J. J. Williams, on behalf of the City of Memphis; address of welcome to visiting Sons of Veterans by Right Rev. Bishop Gailor, on behalf of the local Sons of Veterans; address of welcome to Veterans by Senator Thomas B. Turley, on behalf of local Veterans and executive committee; brief general remarks by Temporary Chairman Gen. G. W. Gordon, of Memphis, who will conclude by introducing Gen. John B. Gordon, and turning the convention over to him.

Wednesday, May 29.-Convention meets in business session probably at 9:30 a.m. Convention reassembles in business session at 2 o'clock p.m.

Thursday, May 30. - Convention meets in business session probably at 9:30 a.m. Final adjournament. Parade at 3:30

It is not expected that this program will be changed to any great extent. It does not, of course, include the hundreds of amusements, exhibitions, entertainments, etc., mention of which will be made at a later date.

The Grand Ball. In settling the much talked of question of the grand ball, to be given on Thursday night of the Confederate Reunion, the general executive committee has at last disposed of one of the most perplexing entertainment problems that has thus far presented itself for solution. The ball will be a pay affair, instead of being free to all visitors. It has been found impossible to do other than this, owing to the fact that, while the ballroom in Confederate Hall will be the largest one in the South, there will be such an immense crowd in attendance as to preclude any possibility of making the affair a social success. It is feared that if the hall is thrown open to a free public the result will be the fervent reply. "Shure you're a feine docthor. If I'd a sint fer ye befoorhand an overcrowded and unsuccessful func-Oi'd niver been sick at all, at all."-Detroit tion. As now decided, the ball will be a brilliant one.

The most important feature of the order issued is that it settles the point in regard to spousors. There will be allowed one carriage each for the sponsors of the three departments and for eighteen divisions, making a total of twenty-one carriages for that purpose. However, Gen. Gordon has added that all sponsors and maids of honor for the brigades and camps may follow at the end of the procession. He explains that this limitation is necessary for the comfort of the old Veterans in 'the line of suffering with toxonososses catarrh, as my cure is complete."

Hon. B. B. Doviner, Congressman from West Virginia, in a letter from Washington, D. C., to The Peruna Med-icine Co., says the following of their catarrh remedy, Peruna:

"I join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in recommending your excellent remedy, Peruna, as a good tonic and also an effective cure for catarrh."

Mrs. Mary C. Fentress writes from Paradise, Tex., the following: "I think I can say that your good advice and medicine has cured me of chronic catarrh. I have had no pains in my head since I have taken Peruna. I have been in bad health ever since '59, and have taken a good many medicines which were only of temporary relief. Peruna is the catarrh cure. The Peruna stopped my catarrh of the head so that it did not become chronic, and I am very thankful for Dr. Hartman's advice and medicine."

Peruna is a specific for all catarrhal diseases. It acts quickly and bene-ficially upon the inflamed mucous membrane thus removing the cause of catarrh.

Catarrh is catarrh wherever located. Catarrh is essentially the same everywhere. The remedy that will cure catarrh in one situation will cure it in all situations.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his val-uable advice gratis.

Osteopathy.

[From Our Special Correspondent]. FRANKLIN, KY.,) May 6th, 1901.

EDITOR PRESS: Osteopathic success depends upon diagnosis. Diagnosis means knowing through and through. Knowledge is the one essential. It must be a know- road machinery, and will build duledge of actual conditions. The average doctor guesses at the condition from whot the patients say. The osteopath finds the real condition by examination. We know the natural position, condition and action of every part of the body. We carefully explore and ascertain whether the thousand and one parts are in their proaer position. whether they are doing the work they were intended to do.
