NOTES OF INTEREST.

A Week's Happenings Over the State Briefly Chronicled.

Heavy damage was done by a storm in Pike county.

County Judge J. C. Tully, of McCracken county died suddenly in Paducah Monday.

Dr. A. D. James was reappointed United States Marshal for the western district of Kentucky.

John Leek, a life convict, was stabbed fatally by Milton Camper, a fellow convict, at Frankfort.

A hand car on which six section hands were riding, was struck by lightning near Lexington and two men killed.

Senator Deboe is being denounced by the Eastern papers for his fight against Mrs. Sanders, the postmaster of New Castle.

The Populists of Trigg county have nominated Jeff D. Smith for the Legislature. The Democratic primary will be held June 29.

The Court of Appeals granted a new trial to Eugene Montgomery, sentenced at Danville to hang for the murder of his illegitimate child.

Mrs. Gertrude Sanders' fight against the Deboe combine to retain her job as postmistress at New Castle is attracting national attention.

The Court of Appeals affirmed the death sentence of Reuben Quinn, convicted of the murder of policeman Crum at Danville, a few weeks ago.

James P. Bailey, of Magoffin county has, through the efforts of Senator Deboe and others, been appointed by the President Secretary of Legation at Guatemala. The post has been vacant for some months.

During the last week or two several raids have been made on the Monarch mines at Earlington by striking miners. A number of shots were exchanged between the guards and the striking miners, who subsequently retired.

The following allowances have been made to the various revenue districts of Kentucky for salaries, clerk hire, etc. are: Second district, $28,898; Fifth, $39,198; Sixth, $24,284; Seventh, $26,159; Eighth, $31,329.

Oil and gas in paying quantities have been discovered in Kenton county, and a company, of which J. Linn Gooch is President and John McKnight Secretary, has secured a lease of 6,000 acres of land and an option of 1,000 more acres in that county.

Dr. Dolan, a government inspector of the Bureau of Animal Industry, was in Frankfort a few days ago with instructions to make an inspection of the sheep raising districts of Kentucky, for the disease known as the scabies, and to rigidly quarantine against the infected districts.

Thos. Fish, a prominent young man of Lincoln county, who was arrested at Vincennes, Ind., charged with killing a negro at Crab Orchard 14 years ago, was tried at Stanford and acquitted. Fish had married and was making a good citizen at Vincennes. His acquittal met with hearty approval.

The eleven-year-old son of John Crews, a farmer living about four miles east of Princeton, was plowing in an old field and discovered a half dollar in the dirt. The little fellow began to search and unearthed between $350 and $400. Some of the coin was dated 1811, the newest being 1845.

Col. Tom Scott, of St. Louis, is at Grand Rivers, with Superintendent Gifford, of the furnace reconstruction, and Monday put to work sixty men on the old furnaces. It is estimated that it will require four months to finish the repair work and get the furnaces in operation.

A late Paducah dispatch says: Gold has been discovered near Metropolis, Ill., on land in which Mr. Brack Owen, of this place, has a large interest. A piece of quartz from the land displayed here today is pronounced by experts as worth fifty dollars a ton. It is said to exist in large quantities. A joint stock company has been organized and its shares are being disposed of.

The secretaries of the State Board of Equalization have completed the tabulation of the work of that body on the books of the Assessors of the various counties, and will file it with the Auditor for publication. The report shows the amount of taxes to be collected to be $2,796,360.52. The equalized value of all property subject to taxation is $588,707,480, an increase of $9,623,946 over the value as fixed by the county assessors.

Judge O'Rear, of the Appellate Court, handed down an opinion reversing the Webster circuit court in the case of Dr. W. E. Clark vs. the Commonwealth, and ordering a new trial. Clark was indicted and tried for the murder of Miss Cora Waller, of Union county, on the night of September 9, 1900, in the town of Sturgis, by a criminal operation. He was convicted in January, 1901, of manslaughter, and sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary for ten years.

State Good Roads Convention.

A recent issue of the Courier-Journal complaisantly states that the National Good Roads Convention to be held at Louisville next week was a State affair, and that District conventions would be held later at Hopkinsville and other places. We beg to say that this big train of road machinery, all the experts, the commissary department, and every appurtenance of the National display, will be right on the spot here in Hopkinsville July 10th and 11th. No split circus here. On the contrary, ours will be by far the most interesting exhibit, inasmuch as our sample mile of model highway will be metaled, thus bringing into operation the giant crushers that will not be needed in Louisville, whose sample mile is to be of the earthy. However, Louisville will be urged through our Invitation Committee to visit our convention and see all that is to be seen, the crushers included.

Geo. E. Gary, Sec'y Exec. Com. Hopkinsville, June 22, 1901.

Saves Two from Death.

"Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of the whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland, of Armonk, N. Y., "but when all other remedies failed we saved her life with Dr. King's New Discovery; our niece, who had consumption in an advanced state, also used this wonderful medicine and today she is perfectly well." Desperate throat and lung diseases yield to Dr. King's New Discovery as to no other medicine on earth; 50c and $1 bottles guaranteed by J. H. Orme; trial bottle free.

Lock Jaw.

E. H. Hardin, Chiles Springs, Texas, says: "One large dose of Morley's Wonderful Eight cured my mare of lockjaw. It is a wonderful cure and saved me a good animal. For sale at the drug store."

DR. W. J. J. PARIS

Has Something to Say Concerning the Small Pox Affair.

EDITOR PRESS: The Livingston Banner has raised a "tempest in a teapot" over the recent smallpox scare in Marion, and sneeringly refers to the mistake of the Marion "docs." I trust the editor does not get his information from a member of the medical profession. If the Marion physicians have never made any mistakes they are the first in history. The most eminent are often in doubt and even make gross mistakes, as to diagnosis. The science is perfect, but men are imperfect; and notwithstanding the accumulated wisdom of centuries of study and investigation by millions of wise men, physicians are still finite creatures and liable to err.

The osteopath, christian scientist, patent medicine man, etc., etc. are the only men who know everything, cure all their cases and never make a mistake, and the more physicians quarrel among themselves the more will these vampires fatten by preying upon the credulity of the gullible.

By way of analogy we might say that Christianity is perfect, but Christians are imperfect, and the devil laughs when Christians fall out and fight.

Dr. J. O. Dixon and Dr. T. A. Frazer both saw Hays and pronounced it smallpox. Upon their diagnosis he was detained in the pest house and his "face fed" a few days. Dr. Frazer attended him and I never saw him until it was too late to be certain of anything except that he had very recently had smallpox. My opinion is, that it was a case of recurrent eruption, which sometimes happens, and that none of the physicians were mistaken; and again, any eruption following so soon after smallpox might somewhat resemble the disease and fool the doctor, especially when smallpox is so prevalent as at present, and the profession is expecting an outbreak at any time.

As to the statement that the Marion "docs" wrote to Dr. McCormick attacking the Smithland physicians, etc., the only letter to Dr. McCormick of which I have any knowledge was a simple report of the existence of smallpox in Marion, written by me the day Hays was sent to the pest house and before I knew where he hailed from or that he had been in the Smithland pest house. He told the doctors here that he came from Round Island, and said not a word about having had smallpox at Smithland.

I am very sorry to have to air this matter in the public prints, the discussion has reached a stage at which I feel that it is my duty as county health officer, and in justice to those concerned and the people, who pay the bills, to give the facts publicity.

I trust that the physicians will settle their little dispute without farther wrangling, and not subject themselves to the ridicule of quacks and charlatans.

Notwithstanding the fact that we are members of the greatest, grandest, noblest profession on earth, and that we set up a higher standard of honor and come nearer living up to our standard as a class, than any other class of men in the world, there is some humanity and selfishness in us all, but we are not like the quack, totally depraved, and even a very unworthy member of the medical profession is incomparably a better

A Gentle Hint.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature, rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day,—it is no wonder that our children, relatives and friends are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the deaths resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syrup kept about your home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three or four doses. For curing Consumption, Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs, Croup, or any disease of Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. Get a sample bottle free from Jas. H. Orme or Robert F. Haynes. Regular size 75 cents. Get Green's Prize Almanac.

On account of "Good Roads Convention" at Hopkinsville July 10 and 11 tickets will be sold to Hopkinsville and return on July 9th and 10th at rate of one fare for the round trip, good to return until July 12th. Crittenden county is certainly interested in good roads and a strong delegation should take advantage of this opportunity to get points on practical road building.

Osteopathy.

[From Our Special Correspondent], FRANKLIN, KY., June 24, 1901.

ED. PRESS: Throughout the country there will be a celebration of the declaration of Independence. Last week there was a celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the discovery of Osteopathy; this celebration of the independence of the human body from the pills, purges and nostrums of the medical world is a most important fact in the health of the present day. On every hand there is evidence of decadence in drug practice. Every discovery of any merit today is in the realm of hygienic treatment. Every work of real merit issued by a medical man today decryes the universal drugging. The only reason a medical doctor will continue to give drugs is his ignorance of other and more modern methods.

The dependence today is in the drugless agencies, and the most popular and successful of all the drugless forces is osteopathy. To this the people are turning, and the wisdom is manifest in the large per centage of cures which attend the practice of osteopathy. No other profession or system of healing can show such a large proportion of cures.

APPALLING DISASTER

Caused by a Cloudburst in West Virginia. Between 200 and 500 Lives Lost.

Property Destroyed Estimated at Not Less Than $2,000,000—Deluge Sweeps Down Upon the Stricken Valley With Terrific Force and Suddenness, Carrying Everything Before It With Resistless Fury—Drowned Include Many of the Most Prominent People of the Section.

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., June 23.—This entire section has just been visited by a flood, the extent of which, in all probability, will equal that of Johnstown, Pa., so far as the loss of property is concerned.

Early yesterday morning, shortly after midnight, a heavy downpour of rain began, accompanied by a severe electric storm, which violently increased in volume and continued for several hours. This continued throughout the entire day and night.

Many miles of the Norfolk and Western Railroad track, bridges and telegraph lines are entirely destroyed, and communication is entirely cut off west of Elkhorn, so that it is impossible to learn the full extent of the loss of life and property.

The Pocahontas coal field is located in a basin with high mountain ranges on either side, Elkhorn creek flowing through the center of the basin, which ranges from one-fourth to one mile in width. From Ennis, W. Va., to Vivian Yard, W. Va., a distance of ten miles, miners' cabins, coal company commissaries and coke plants line this basin. Elkhorn creek, being fed by numerous small streams coming from the mountain side, rises very rapidly, and this water spout came so suddenly that the entire basin between the two mountain ranges was flooded, and before the terror-stricken people realized what was upon them they were carried down by the flood, which swept everything in its path.

Keystone Entirely Obliterated.

The little town of Keystone, with a population of about 2,000, seems the greatest sufferer, practically the entire town being washed away. This town is the principal one on the Pocahontas coal fields, and is located near its center. It was to a great extent headquarters from which the mining population purchased supplies, and also the only place in the field where whisky could be purchased. At this place there were some twelve to fifteen saloons, all of which were washed away. The report comes that the mining population are now occupying the banks of the streams below, catching the merchandise and barrels of whisky and beer as they float down. A great number of the coal and coke plants throughout the Pocahontas coal region are reported practically destroyed, and are in some instances entirely washed away. Owing to the very high water which has flooded the region and prevented communication, anything like a correct estimate of the loss of property is impossible, but from the best information obtainable the loss will easily reach $2,000,000.

May Surpass Johnstown and Galveston.

ROANOKE, Va., June 23.—Great excitement and anxiety were created here today when it was reported that an awful flood and cloudburst had swept over the Elkhorn coal region in West Virginia. The region visited by the flood is said to be devastated and the Pocahontas coal fields are reported to be in ruins. More than thirty miles of the track of the Norfolk and Western Railroad are gone and reports are still coming into the general offices of this system in this city of washouts on the various sections on lines in the flooded districts. One of the breaks in the track will require at least a thousand laborers and several days' work to repair. The railroad yards at Vivian, a small town in West Virginia, were completely destroyed, and it is reported most of the town was washed away. North Fork Junction and a few other smaller towns suffered greatly.

Saturday night is pay night in the coal fields, and it is supposed that the coal miners had flocked into the towns in the district to do their trading, hence there is no telling how many of them were caught in the flood and drowned.

It is stated that the greatest damage, so far as known, is at Keystone, W. Va., one mile from North Fork, and thirty miles west of Bluefield. From the meager reports describing the force of the storm at Keystone, it would appear that the damage rivals that of Johnstown, and is equal to that of Galveston's horror. There is no telegraphic communication west of Bluefield, as the telegraph lines were swept away along with the railroad track. It is said by the telegraph officials that he lines are useless between Kenova, W. Va., and Bluefield, a distance of 200 miles. It may be several days before the telegraph lines are restored sufficiently between these two points to obtain a full report of damage done in that territory. It is stated, however, that every building in the town of Keystone was demolished or carried away by the water save one, and that a bar-room, which stands on a high hill. The normal population of Keystone is 2,000, and as last night was Saturday night there is no telling how many miners had gone into the town to swell its population. It is estimated that 200 lives were lost at Keystone alone.

Flood's Resistless Fury.

The flood seems to have extended over a vast area of mountain country, and the hundreds of mountain streams, becoming swollen, only served to swell the Elkhorn river until it overflowed and carried destruction in its wake. Railroad ties and tracks, small buildings of all descriptions, trees, telegraph poles, huge boulders and every imaginable movable thing that came within the sweep of this mighty torrent of maddened waters went down the mountainous district in a seething, roaring mass of debris.

Dead bodies could be seen floating along the valley by those who had gained a place of safety in the high hills.

All day Saturday the rain fell in sheets, and it soon became evident that there would be a flood and a great destruction must result from it, but it was not until after darkness had enveloped the coal regions that the great catastrophe was upon the country and was making a clean sweep of the valley for miles around.

Shortly after midnight Saturday night it seemed as if the heavens had opened their floodgates over the town of Vivian, W. Va. Here a passenger train was caught in the flood, and the lives of the frightened passengers were saved only by the use of ropes, which were quickly thrown over in the coke ovens which skirt the railroad yards at Vivian. The passengers were glad to catch the ropes, and willing hands dragged them from the submerged train and over the open barricades to a point of safety.

Owing to the fact that the telegraph lines had been prostrated by the storm, the Norfolk and Western officials detailed messengers by foot to cover the territory as best they could, they returning in a short time with reports of the terrible destruction which had been done in their respective territory. One of these messengers, in walking over the devastated district, came back and reported having seen thirty-eight dead bodies. There are supposed to be many who will never be accounted for.

Estimate of the Loss of Life.

The loss of life will probably reach 500 or 600, and possibly this number will be swelled when fuller details are obtainable. The Norfolk and Western Railroad officials, in this city, admit that at least 200 lives have been lost, Keystone wiped out and millions of dollars worth of property destroyed.

It is not known how far back into the mountains the storm extended, and it will be days and perhaps weeks before all the storm-stricken country is heard from.

The flood has not only damaged the Elkhorn Valley, but it is stated that every one of the thirty-three flat top coal plants has suffered to some extent. Great damage is also reported to have resulted in Clinch Valley section, which extends south from Graham, Va. No lives, however, are reported to have been lost along this valley.

IN KANAWHA VALLEY.

The Most Destructive Storm Known There for Years.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 23.—The severe storm that struck the Great Kanawha Valley last night was the most destructive that has visited this vicinity for years. There was a high wind and a rainfall of 3.25. The Kanawha river is thirty feet at 8 o'clock tonight and is rising. The people are preparing for a flood. The Kanawha and Michigan Railroad lost three bridges north of here and is tied up.

THREE NEGROES SHOT.

Firing Done by Unknown Parties, the Victims Being on Excursion Train.

JACKSON, MISS., June 23.—A report reaches here that three negroes were shot and seriously wounded at Florence, a small station on the Gulf & Ship Island road about fifteen miles south of this city, shortly after dark tonight. The shots were fired by unknown parties on an excursion train, and an investigation of the affair is being made.

THE LITTLE PRINCE EDWARD.

The Seven-Year-Old Heir Presumptive to the British Throne a Precocious Youngster.

London, June 23.—The British public is only just beginning to look upon the little Prince Edward, the seventh anniversary of whose birth occurs Sunday, in the light of future king. The importance of his place in the machine of state is somewhat magnified by the absence of his father. According to present plans, Prince Edward will be a sailor, going upon the training ship Britannia in a few years. His present education consists of a few short daily lessons given by Miss Bricks, for many years companion to the late duchess of Teck. The king is said to be strongly opposed to "stuffing children with too much knowledge." His recollection is keen of how unpleasant it was to be a "walking dictionary" at 20.

A story is going the rounds of young Prince Edward's precociousness. At a juvenile party, in the presence of the duke of Cornwall, he was given toys of wood, for which he solemnly thanked his playmates with old fashioned expression, whereupon the duke of Cornwall exclaimed: "The little wretch, he speaks better than I do," which is not far wrong, for the duke of Cornwall is notoriously nervous and unfitted for public speaking.

PHILIPPINE GOVERNMENT.

The Military Will Give Way to the Civil Arm, the Latter Occupying the Palaces.

Washington, June 22.—Following the order, issued Friday, making Judge Taft civil governor of the Philippines, an order has been issued naming Gen. Chaffee as military governor of the archipelago. The military has been ordered to vacate the ayuntamiento, the large public building which was erected out of the municipal funds of Manila for government purposes. This will be occupied by the civil officers in the Philippines. The palace of Malacayan, heretofore occupied as headquarters for Generals Otis and MacArthur, also has been ordered vacated by the military authorities, and will be occupied by Gov. Taft. Malacayan was the headquarters of the Spanish captains-general when in command in the Philippines, and the natives of the islands have come to regard it as the headquarters or seat of government. The Estada Mayo, another large public building, is to be the military headquarters, and will be occupied by Gen. Chaffee when he assumes command. All of these orders, including that of the president, Friday, have been cabled to Manila.

THE TRAIN WAS RIDDLED.

The Negro, Levy Spencer, Taken on Train to Huntsville, Tex., and Placed in Jail.

Houston, Tex., June 22.—The special train bearing troops from Trinity arrived here riddled with bullets. The cavalry arrived at Trinity at 2 a. m., and at once relieved the siege of the Light Guard, who were kept in a schoolhouse with an armed mob forming a cordon around it. The beleaguered soldiers marched back to the train with the negro, Levy Spencer, in their midst, and boarded it without molestation, but as the train pulled out the mob fired several volleys at the train. The soldiers returned the fire, and reported at least three members of the mob hit. The negro was taken to the penitentiary at Huntsville for safekeeping and the soldiers returned home.

THE STRIKE AT READING, PA.

A Thousand Machinists Are Expected to Join the Reading Railway Shops Strikers.

Reading, Pa., June 22.—The strike of employees of the Reading railway shops, which was begun Friday noon, has not spread to any other departments in this city and they are working as usual.

Large numbers of people gathered about the car and machine shops Friday evening for the purpose of counting the number of men who had not gone out. At the former place the crowd included many who had quit work, and at the latter some of the 1,000 machinists frankly told their friends that they were going out in a day or two. About 350 of these are union men, but the leaders say all the men but a few laborers will go out when they are asked, and that the request will probably be made on Monday.

The number on strike in the cement to work as usual, but the men said they were simply waiting for the call from their national organization.

The number on strike in the company's shops now is nearly 1,000. Early next week 1,500 men may go out in addition to 2,600 Reading Iron Co., workers who went on strike several weeks ago and are now locked out.

The world, they say, is getting old and weary as can be! But write me down as saying: 'It's good enough for me! It's good enough with all its grief, its pleasure, an' its pain. An' there's a ray of sunshine for every drop o' rain!'

They stumble in the lonesome dark, they cry for light to see; But write me down as saying: 'It's light enough for me! It's light enough to lead us on from where we faint an' fall, An' the hilltop nearest heaven wears the brightest crown o' all!'

They talk about the fadin' hopes that mock the years to be; But write me down as saying: 'There's hope enough for me! Over the old world's wallin' the sweeter music awails. In the stormiest night I listen an' hear the bells—the bells!'

This world o' God's is lighter than we ever dream or know; Its horizon grows lighter—an' it's love that makes 'em so! An' I'm thankful that I'm livin' where love's blessedness lies. 'Neath a heavenly that's forgivin', where the bells ring 'Home' to me! —F. L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

THE DESIRE OF HER HEART

By C. Wynne.

THE road from Burnthwaite to the nearest town was long and winding, and on hot days there was very little shade for some way. It was a sunny July afternoon when I propped my bicycle against the bank and leaned back luxuriously in the shadow of the pine trees, under the nodding foxgloves. I could catch glimpses of the distant blue mountains and the lake sparkling in the sunshine, and it was not easy to start again along the hot, dusty road.

For the moment I must decide not to go on to the few cottages by the roadside where some of my old people lived.

I was just beginning to feel ashamed of myself, and trying to shake off my laziness, when looking down the road my eyes rested on a most extraordinary object.

Was it a reaping machine running away with a bath chair? Or some terrible instrument of torture, being conveyed to the museum in the town? Or just a mangled heap of tricycles being towed slowly home?

I gazed and gazed till my eyes were dazzled, and still slowly, ponderously, the strange object advanced, hidden now and then by a cloud of dust or a sharp turn in the road.

It reached my shady spot at last, and I could see that it was an ancient tricycle of marvelous construction, to which was attached a still more ancient bath chair. An old man worked the tricycle, the perspiration pouring down his face, while his wife sat in the chair with a look of awe and delight on her face.

They did not look around them, but gazed steadfastly in front as they advanced slowly up the hill.

When they had disappeared in the distance I tried hard to recall where I had seen the two quaint old people, and it then flashed into my mind that they lived in one of a group of cottages in a lane leading from the main road.

I had missed my way one day, and stopped to ask for a drink of water at their cottage.

Seeing my bicycle, I determined to follow this old couple, and learn the history of their wonderful machine.

They were sitting in the little kitchen when I arrived, the old man tenderly watching his invalid wife in anxiety lest the ride should have been too much for her.

The walls of the room were covered with clocks of all descriptions, but most of them had stopped, and some ticked feebly, as if wearing out with age like the old watchmaker who loved each of them so dearly.

A little expressed admiration of some of the quaint carved oak cases soon warmed the hearts of the two old people, and before long I was sitting by them listening to the story of their ancient tricycle.

"Anna canna' dae without fresh air, she pines and pines indoors, but she has nae power to stan', and she maun bide liggin' (lying) or sittin' a' day long. But I've a rash (young) auld man, and I made a plan, and you day I bought an auld tricycle, and fixed her chair on t' front, and noo she can gang out every day."

The gentle old woman gazed with admiration at her "maister" and looked to me for sympathy. They both seemed overwhelmed with his cleverness and originality.

"An' a' the ladies an' gentlemen look at us on t' road as if she was t' queen herself o' ridin'."

I hardly wondered that "all the ladies and gentlemen" turned to gaze in amazement at the strange machine and its owners, but I could not say a word to mar their intense pride and delight in the precious tricycle, although I had a great fear that some day they would all come to grief together.

When we had fully discussed the subject of the tricycle, I asked if they would like me to come and read to them sometimes. Old Wolf's face clouded at once. "It's a lang time syne I've opened t' Bulik, it's liggin' (lying) on t' parlor table with a flower pot on t' top!" he said, bitterly.

"Aye, Jawsephe, his wife said, gently, 'it wad dae me guid ta hear a bit o' t' Bulik vane maier.'"

"Weel, Anna, if thou wants thoo shall," her husband said, more gently. While he fetched it his wife told me a pitiful story. "Jawsephe did gang regular ta t' chapel two year syne; but yan day ther coom a minister wha' preached that t' Bible were not a' the Word o' God, and Jawsephe he's sair hot-tempered, and he went oop after an' taud t' man he was a liar—he were that mad. They toorned him oot o' t' chapel, an' he hasna' been syne. He thinks God will ne'er forgive him for speakin' sae ta tae His minister."

I said nothing just then; I think I felt too sympathetic with Wolf and angry with the conceited young preacher who tried to upset the simple faith of these people. I read a few verses for the old woman, and ended with a passage in Hosea: "I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely," and as I closed the family Bible I saw the great tears falling down the man's cheek and spashing on the table. "Wull, He tak' me back, dae ye think?" he asked, brokenly.

"Mr. Woolf, He says the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin," I answered. There was a long silence, while the clocks ticked steadily on and on, and at last the old man laid his head on his arms and cried: "Lord, I've been a sinner" an' rebellious man, but will Thoo take me back for the sake of Jesus? Amen."

The sun was setting when I left the little cottage. As I looked through the lattice window the watchmaker was kneeling by his wife's chair, sobbing like a child. The poor old man's heart had grown bitter in those two years. I heard more about it later on. He had got into a great passion, but the stern deacons treated him very cruelly, and would never believe that he had any reason to be angry. The foolish young minister had so impressed them with his own cleverness that they were ready to coincide with him in whatever he might like to say.

But peace returned to the little cottage that night—"the peace of God which passeth all understanding"—and nothing came to mar their happiness, until one day a great grief befell them.

"Jawsephe" granted the loan of the precious tricycle to an inexperienced young man, who had been very pressing. They watched him wheel it away with fear and trembling and a strong presentiment of coming evil. They were almost prepared for the bad news, when the young man appeared later on, with a rueful face. He had fallen into a ditch and broken the brake—he was very sorry, but had no money with which to get it mended.

It did not seem such a terrible calamity to him, but to them it meant the crushing of all their joys—no more wonderful journeys along the high road, no fresh air for the poor invalid!

When I heard the woe of story I offered as delicately as I could to pay for the mending, and left half a crown for the purpose. But next time I found the tricycle still unmended, and then it was that first of all I discovered their extreme poverty.

They "hoped I would not be angry, but they had spent the money on bread, they were so hungry." My eyes filled with tears, and they looked intensely relieved that I was not vexed.

It is not easy to help north country people with their proud, independent spirit, and I had to be very careful—

"I will love them freely," but they did not again wait for food.

Still I noticed a little cloud on Anna's face, but it was a long time before she would tell me what it was that troubled her. One day, in a burst of confidence, she said: "I'll tell you what troubles me. I've got everything ready against I dee, but I've nae shrood, an' I should be sae happy if I jist had that—but I'm prayin', an' I do believe God will send yan ta me. Aye, but I wad be happy an' a' if I jist had a bonny shrood against I dee!"

I thought long over this trouble. I did not want to weaken her faith by supplying the money, and I knew it would grieve her if I did. She would think it had seemed like asking, but I need not have troubled.

She was sitting by the fire with a beaming face when I went there next time. "It's coom," she cried. "He heerd ma prayer, an' Mrs. Ritson brought me a flannel gown she had nae use for. It's worn down t' front, but I've patched it oop, and the patches will never show when they fold my hands over, like this."

Her cup was full to overflowing that day, and as I looked through the lattice window on my way down the path I saw the two sitting together—"Jawsephe" reading aloud from the great Bible, and Anna tenderly folding the beloved shroud, while the clocks ticked cheerily on the walls, and I thought they ticked faster than usual, as if they too were rejoicing with the old watchmaker and his wife.—The Quiver.

CLAYTON-BULWER TREATY.

The British Cabinet Once More Grappling With the Matter in its Leisurely Way.

IT HAS NO INTENTION OF HURRYING.

In a Month or So, When a Decision Has Been Reached, the Matter Likely to Be Turned Over to Lord Pauncefoot to Bring the Question to a Conclusion.

London, June 22.—In a tentative, easy-going sort of way the cabinet has begun to consider the Nicaragua treaty matter. Lord Pauncefoot has explained many things to Lord Lansdowne, the foreign secretary, and the latter is once more grappling with the problem. It is needless to say that the foreign office has no intention of hurrying; and in the course of a month or so it may come to a decision. This will take the form of instructions to Lord Pauncefoot, who will return to the United States. These instructions will probably not be officially communicated to the state department until congress shall convene or the attitude of the senate in the matter shall be definitely known.

Lord Pauncefoot will probably be permitted to interpret his instructions pretty broadly, and they show signs of being elastic enough to provide for any contingency except a direct refusal on the part of the senate to recognize the validity of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. Lord Lansdowne is as persistent as ever on this point, and, however willing he may be to abrogate it, he will vigorously maintain the potentiality of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty until such time as both signatories shall have agreed to its abrogation.

A high official, in the course of conversation with a representative of the press, said: "Americans seem to think we are trying to delay the construction of the canal; but this is entirely wrong. We are just as anxious as they to see it completed, and are willing to do almost anything to further that end. But we don't want to see a treaty we made in good faith torn up like a piece of waste paper, and we still consider that we are entitled to some quid pro quo for the relinquishment of our treaty rights."

A recent special cable dispatch saying that the Nicaragua route had been practically settled and that Lord Pauncefoot, in consequence, would not return to the United States, caused much amusement. It is utterly unfounded. On the highest authority it may be stated that Lord Pauncefoot will remain ambassador to the United States for the rest of his days or as long as he cares to retain the position.

Senator Deboe and a delegation that visited the President a few days ago, say that Mr. McKinley again announced his intention of re-appointing the Kentucky Federal office-holders.

We ought to send a delegation of good road enthusiasts to the convention at Hopkinsville July 11. The larger the delegation the better. There are hundreds of us who never saw a good road, and a peep at a half mile of the track would be worth an hour in the old John Robinson show.

As our townsman, Mr. Yandell, was defeated by an out-of-town man named James, for the Marshalship, the way to even the thing up is to defeat an out-of-town man by our fellow townsman named James for Congress. We may properly remark, however, that our James is not even distantly related to the other James, politically speaking.

With a corps of engineers surveying a railroad from Kuttawa to Carrsville, via Dycusburg and Salem, and another corps locating a line from Marion to the Ohio river, there ought to be ample room for a complete restoration of the good fellowship between all points named. Let us have another meeting of commercial clubs.

The taxes to be collected by the various sheriffs of the counties of Kentucky this year amounts to $2,796,390.52. Jefferson county heads the list with a contribution to the financial welfare of the public institutions of the State the sum of $616,155.74, while Menafee brings up the rear with only $2,413.15. Crittenden's share is $11,917.56; which exceeds the amount paid by 57 other counties, and is a pretty good showing, if it were not for the fact that 61 counties were lined up ahead of us.

SALEM NEWS.

The Railroad Still on Top--Other Interesting Items.

Hon. John K. Hendrick, of Smithland, was here Sunday night and left Monday morning for Marion to attend court. John has some warm friends here who are always glad to see him. We hope to see him our next governor.

Monday was Squire Stevens' regular court day and several cases were disposed of by compromise. The case, however, of George Conyers vs. Mr. Merritt was fought to a finish, Conyers dancing to the tune of $17.50 cost. This marks a new epoch in George's career; this is his first Waterloo on the field of legal contest. He was represented by attorney John Moore, of Marion, but he is no match for our own dear Ike, who is always ready, willing and able to scrap, in a legal way, with any that dare measure lances with him.

At the Commercial Club meeting Monday night there was some nice railroad talk made and some practical work done in the way of raising money to pay the bonds pledged by the club committee. We are expecting Mr. Barnes and his engineers here this week to commence driving down stakes along the proposed route from Carrsville to Kuttawa.

Mr. Hearne, President of the Eagle Fluor Spar Co., who was called to his home in Wheeling, W. Va., a few weeks ago on account of his wife's illness, returned Sunday. He will now push the work on his big mineral mill here to an early completion.

Mrs. Roney and daughter, Miss Maud, came down from Marion last week and went to Smithland on legal business.

State Superintendent McChesney and wife, of Frankfort, are spending a few days here with relatives this week.

Mrs. Pearl Rutter, of Carrsville, is the guest of Mrs. Henry Woodridge this week.

Mrs. Isbell and Misses Isbell and Poe, who have been visiting relatives and friends here and in the country for some days, returned Tuesday to their home in Bowling Green.

Misses Helen and Addie Boyd made a business trip to Marion Tuesday.

Roy Threlkeld, who has a position in the bank at Marion, came down on a visit Sunday.

Miss Fannie Finley, of Marion, has been the guest of Miss Myra Stevens several days.

Dr. R. J. Morris, resident dentist of Marion, will be in our city July 1, 2, 3 and 4, and all parties needing dental work should call on him.

The farmers report the wheat crop good.

It is hard for Harley Mc., our ice man, to keep us cool these hot days. The mercury has gone to 102 every day for four days.

John Pierce went to Chippis lake last Sunday fishing and hunting (Rose).

Norman Farris, who is in bad health, goes to the Sulphur Spring or in that neighborhood, Sunday. He has heart trouble.

Mrs. Hugh Glenn of Crayneville was visiting her parents here last week.

Mr. Porter, of Hopkinsville was here a few days this week.

Mrs. Deboe and Miss Neal, of Pinckneyville, were in town shopping and visiting Tuesday.

Didn't Marry for Money.

The Boston man who recently married a sickly rich young woman is happy now, for he got Dr. King's New Life Pills, which restored her to perfect health. Infallible for jaundice, biliousness, malaria, fever and ague, and every liver and stomach trouble; gentle but effective; only 25c at Orme's drug store.

A CARD.

TO THE VOTERS OF CRITTENDEN COUNTY:

At the solicitation of many friends of the various political parties, and having received the nomination of my party without opposition, I take pleasure in announcing that I am a candidate for re-election to the office of county court clerk, and hope that you will give my claims due consideration, and any and all favors shown me in this matter will be duly and kindly appreciated; and if re-elected I promise a faithful and impartial discharge of the duties of said office, as I have ever tried to do in the past; and permit me to return you my heartfelt thanks for your many acts of kindness extended me, and for the confidence reposed in me as your public servant and friend in the by gone years, and during all of which time I have endeavored to be faithful to the trusts confided to me, in the discharge of all of my official duties required by law, but how far short I have come, you are to be the judges; and knowing that your judgment will be just, I submit my entire case with you, and whatever decision you may render next November, will be cheerfully accepted by me.

Respectfully yours,
D. WOODS, Co. Clerk.

Railroad Surveys.

The corps of civil engineers who landed in Marion fresh from Chicago a few days ago, with no news to tell us, have been surveying and blazing out a line from here to the Ohio river. The line run took by Crittenden Springs; thence to the Flannery farm, where the old Wilson mill once stood; thence through the Walker farm to the Ohio river opposite Cave-in-Rock, Ills. Another line took thence to the Ohio river on the McFee farm. The conjecture is that the I. C. is planning a road to the Ohio river; thence across the river and through Hardin county to some point on their lines North. No definite information is obtainable.

Deeds Recorded.

Gus D. Rutherford to Henry O. Hill, 60 acres on Crooked Creek for $500.
R. E. Bigham to H. Levi Cook, lot in Marion.
William E. Fritts to Blue & Nunn, 58 acres.
W. T. Oakley to W. N. Travis and J. M. Lamb, sixteen acres on Piney.
Ewell C. Little to J. F. Miller, two acres on Tradewater.

Lost the Fight.

The present incumbent, James, has been reappointed United States Marshal for the Western District of Kentucky. This was the place for which Mr. W. B. Vandell, of Marion, was an applicant.

The crowd in town Monday was small for the opening day of circuit court.

Capt. Kennedy, of Uniontown, and several gentlemen from Paducah were in town Tuesday; summoned as witnesses in the Todd shooting case.

George Horning was the victim of a severe accident Friday. While returning in his wagon from Clark & Kevil's mills, his horses became frightened and ran away. He jumped from the wagon, striking the ground so heavily that his ankle was broken.

Dr. J. J. Clark has returned from St. Louis determined to locate on his native heath, and his hosts of friends will hear this bit of news with pleasure. He is not only a fine physician, but an enterprising, liberal citizen. He has purchased a lot adjoining Mr. Chas Evans' home, and will erect a handsome modern two-story residence upon it.

THE SNEED COAL LANDS.

Preparations Being Made to Open These Valuable Mines.

Last week Mr. G. M. Russell, of the Press office, received a letter from Mr. Samuel D. Winter, of St. Louis, Treasurer of the Credit Indemnity Co., of New York, in which the writer says: "I am about to take steps which, I trust, will lead to the working and development of the Sneed mines and am satisfied your county paper, the Press, will prove a valuable ally in the undertaking. Prof. John R. Proctor, who is known all over the world as one of the finest geologists in existence, considers this coal deposit to be so valuable that he gave it special mention, and put the analysis intact in his report."

Mr. Winter is one of the principal owners of the Sneed tract. This land borders on Tradewater, in Bells Mines precinct, and contains about 400 acres, the entire tract being underlaid with coal. There are two veins, the upper and lower strata, ranging from 3 1/2 to 5 feet in thickness, and is the only large body of fine coking coal in this end of the State. A ready market for a large amount of the output from these mines will be established at Grand Rivers, so soon as the large iron furnaces of that town again "blow in." The opening of these mines on the scale anticipated would indeed be a grand thing for old Bells Mines, if not the entire county.

The Crittenden Circuit Court convened Monday. The first day was spent in selecting the juries. The majority of the cases set for Tuesday were continued to the November term.

The indictment against John Ditterline for carrying concealed weapons dismissed.

Tom Brown, flourishing deadly weapon, dismissed.

W. H. Deboe, charged with placing obstruction on railroad track, was acquitted.

The case of Bob Brantley, charged with malicious shooting is set for today.

The grand jury for this term is as follows: E. B. Franklin, Z. T. Terry, R. N. Foster, E. R. Williams, W. B. Binkley, T. L. Waddell, E. R. Hibbs, H. L. Sullivan, J. M. McConnell, E. M. Duvall, Geo W. Parrish, A. L. Baker.

D. W. county clerk, $88.65; H. A. Haynes, circuit, $21.38; T. J. McKinney, justice, $1 01; T. J. Hamilton, justice, $2.

To my friends and patrons: On account of the condition of my health I was forced to leave St. Louis. Since coming back my health has improved so fast I have decided to locate permanently and make my future home in Marion, and I intend to continue in the practice of medicine.
Dr. Joe Clark.

CREBES & PATRICK.

W. S. Whedon, cashier of the First National Bank of Winterset, Iowa, in a recent letter gives some experience with a carpenter in his employ that will be of value to other mechanics. He says: "I had a carpenter working for me who was obliged to stop work for several days on account of being troubled with diarrhea. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the druggist here and he is again at work. Sold by R. F. Haynes."

TEAMS WANTED.—I want at once three wagons and teams to haul tobacco from Salem to Marion.

War Department Exhibit at the Buffalo Fair

West Point Academy and the Various Military Bureaus
Are Well Represented at the Pan-American

(Special Buffalo Correspondence.)
HUMANITY may be quite sincere in their applause of every effort made to reduce the world's armament, but seemingly everyone finds an interest in the weapons with which wars are fought. Here at the Pan-American exposition there is no other government exhibit that attracts more attention than that of the war department, and it is an exhibit worthy of the department that makes it.

The United States military academy and the following bureaus of the war department are represented in the exhibit: Adjutant general's department, quartermaster's department, medical department, corps of engineers, ordnance department and signal corps.

From the adjutant general's department is displayed a large number of maps and publications prepared in the military information department.

The quartermaster's department exhibits paintings, photographs and drawings illustrating the army transport service; 40 lay figures and 24 colored plates showing uniforms and equipments of the army from the revolution to the present day; 25 silk and 50 bunting corps flags of the civil war and the garrison, post and storm bunting flags of the present time.

The exhibit of the medical department, in charge of Capt. E. L. Munson, assistant surgeon, U. S. A., consists of a model of a brigade field hospital of 100 beds capacity, completely equipped in every detail, in wards, operating and dispensary tents, mess and kitchen as authorized in the 1900 manual for the medical department. This exhibit is especially interesting, building between the north end of the building and the canal. The space north of the building proper is devoted to the exhibit of modern sea-coast artillery, which consists of a 12-inch rifle mounted on disappearing carriage; ten-inch rifle on barbette carriage; 12-inch mortar on Gordon spring return carriage, and five-inch rapid fire gun on balanced pillar mount. Each of these four guns is mounted behind a section of a parapet such as is used in the fortifications on our seacoast. These guns were mounted by First Lieut. R. H. C. Kelton, Seventy-third company coast artillery, and a detachment of 17 artillery soldiers. The Seventy-third company coast artillery, commanded by Capt. J. P. Wisser, is encamped on the exposition grounds, and each day drills with the modern seacoast guns. The historical series, showing development of seacoast guns, mortars and howitzers are mounted along the canal west of the modern guns, and consists of a 24-pounder smooth bore gun and wooden carriage, model 1829; 32-pounder seacoast gun and wooden carriage, with cast iron top carriage, model 1831; eight-inch Columbiad, model 1846, with wooden carriage; 100-pounder Parrott rifle, model 1861, with wrought iron carriage; ten-inch seacoast mortar, model 1841, with cast iron carriage, and 13-inch Rodman mortar, model 1861, with wrought iron carriage, also 24-pounder flank defense howitzer, model 1841, with wooden carriage. The modern siege artillery exhibit consists of five-inch siege rifle with carriage and limber; seven-inch siege howitzer and carriage, seven-inch siege mortar and carriage, mortar field armory, consists of one gas pipe gun captured in the Philippine island, in which the charge was ignited by match (or lighted cigarette) held in the hand; four match-lock guns; one wheel lock gun; 30 flint lock guns; 64 percussion cap lock guns; 62 breech-loading guns and 44 repeaters and magazine rifles; also three boards of 74 pistols. Among the magazine arms are the rifles now used in European armies.

The exhibit of projectiles will include one or more for each gun exhibited and a large number of obsolete projectiles, including chain shot, bar shot, stands of grape shot, canister, shrapnel, studded and flanged projectiles, etc. Several of these have portions cut away to show interior construction. Arranged on four boards are all the principal obsolete time fuzes, impact (percussion and percussion) fuzes and combination fuzes. Modern fuzes are shown on six sample boards. A very complete and valuable collection of cartridges, showing development of small arms; ammunition from paper cartridges to the ammunition of today is exhibited in a cabinet containing 11 drawers. The collection of small-arm ammunition, boards of fuzes and primers and many of the projectiles were loaned from Frankford arsenal. There are a four-pounder cast iron smooth bore gun, the first gun fired in the war of the rebellion; a three-inch United States wrought iron rifle, which fired the last shot previous to the surrender of Lee's army at Appomattox courthouse; Chinese cannon, bronze, caliber two inches, a short, breech-loading wall piece, manufactured in 1312, showing the earliest arms were breech loading. This gun was captured from the Koreans June 10, 11, 1871, by United States naval squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral John Rodgers, U. S. N.

The exhibit of the signal corps consists of two sets of signaling apparatus for visual and telegraphic signals, also photographs of battles and operations of the American troops during the Philippine insurrection, photographed by members of this service. One set of visual apparatus will be used for daily demonstration work out of doors; the other set will be exhibited in space set apart for that purpose, and consists of heliographs and flags for day visual signaling and acetylene and oil lanterns for night signaling; vibrators, telephonic and telegraphic; reel cart with cable, and breast reels with naked wire for establishing rapid communication and operating successfully lines regardless of escapes, breaks and other faults where a regular telegraphic system could not be conveniently used during hostilities.

The exhibit of the United States military academy, designed by Col. Charles W. Larned, professor of drawing, U. S. M. A., consists of a textual and photographic mural display, shown on walls resembling the architecture of the cadet barracks at the academy. Printed tablets, showing the entire course of study pursued at the academy, by departments, are arranged upon the walls, with photographs pertaining to each department arranged contiguous to them. Photographic enlargements of buildings, interiors, and incidents of cadet life, are interspersed throughout. On tables are shown the textbooks studied, and specimens of work of the cadets, including examination papers, drawings, etc. One table shows a colored photographic enlargement of a map of West Point complete to 1901. On screens on a swing frame are specimens of cadet drawings from 1833 to date, including works of Gens. Sherman and Meade. The decorative features consist of a trophy, made up of arms and standards of the four arms of the service, engineers, cavalry, artillery and infantry, arranged in a group around a pedestal, bearing coat of arms of the academy and surmounted by a reproduction of the figure of Fame on the Battle Monument at West Point. On the frieze are placed in gilded letters groups of names of graduates who attained high rank during the civil war, enclosed by palm leaves. At intervals between the groups, shields with names of engagements participated in by graduates in the following wars: Indian, 1812, Mexican, Civil, Spanish and Philippine, are hung. Of special interest are the historical tablets illustrating the progress of the academy during the first century of its existence, and the photographs of famous graduates taken from the well-known Brady collection of civil war pictures.

The exhibit of the war department is in charge of and was installed by Capt. Peter C. Harris, U. S. A., who is representative of the department on the United States government board. He is a native of Rome, Ga. He was graduated from West Point military academy, 1888, with distinguished honors.

At the beginning of the war with Spain, his regiment, the Thirtieth infantry, was ordered to the front. He was with it in the hottest of the battle of San Juan hill, August, 1899, he was promoted to captain, assigned to the Ninth infantry and later ordered to the Philippines. While he was stationed at Tarlac with Gen. McArthur's division, his father-in-law, Maj. Guthrie, died, and Capt. Harris became his successor in charge of the exhibit of the war department at the Pan-American exposition.

WHY MRS. PINKHAM

Is Able to Help Sick Women When Doctors Fail.

How gladly would men fly to woman's aid did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances.

Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not at his command.

To treat a case properly it is necessary to know all about it, and full information, many times, cannot be given by a woman to her family physician.

Mrs. G. H. CHAPPELL.

She cannot bring herself to tell everything, and the physician is at a constant disadvantage. This is why, for the past twenty-five years, thousands of women have been confiding their troubles to Mrs. Pinkham, and whose advice has brought happiness and health to countless women in the United States.

Mrs. Chappell, of Grant Park, Ill., whose portrait we publish, advises all suffering women to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as they cured her of inflammation of the ovaries and womb; she, therefore, speaks from knowledge, and her experience ought to give others confidence. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is absolutely free.

since it represents the new equipment of the medical department in the field—scarcely an important article of which has been adopted since the outbreak of the war with Spain—which has never previously been shown. An enlisted personnel, consisting of one hospital steward, two acting hospital stewards and 20 privates of the hospital corps, is on duty with this hospital, acting as guards and attendants, and also giving daily exhibition drills in first aid to the wounded, litter drills, various means of transporting the wounded, tent pitching and hospital establishment.

The exhibit from the corps of engineers consists of torpedoes, models, photographs, transparencies, maps and publications illustrating military engineering and also river and harbor work. The military engineering exhibit, which was loaned from the museum at Willets Point, N. Y., embraces three types of torpedoes of the present day, showing electrical connections; two transparencies showing effect of explosion of torpedoes under water; five old confederate torpedoes, model of military ground mine, two models of block houses such as were used in the civil war, five models of the earlier attempts to solve the problem of disappearing gun carriage, model of mortar battery and models of pontoon and other field bridges. The Mississippi river commission shows models of hydraulic grader at work, hydraulic dredging plant, tow boat, standard bank revetment, subaqueous mat under construction, two models of spur dykes and a large number of photographs, maps and atlases, etc. The breakwater now under construction in Buffalo harbor is illustrated by three models, one of all stone breakwater, one of all wood or timber crib breakwater and one of timber crib breakwater with concrete superstructure. There is also displayed a plan of the harbor, showing location of each kind of breakwater construction. The models and plan were loaned by Maj. T. W. Symons, corps of engineers, U. S. A., who is now in charge of this work.

The exhibit of ordnance includes guns and carriages of every type of mountain, field, siege and seacoast artillery, machine guns and small arms now in use by the army, and also of every type used during the revolution and all other wars in which the United States has been engaged. The field, siege and seacoast artillery are exhibited outside the wagon, siege platform wagon, siege ammunition wagon and sling cart. To show the development of siege artillery the following old guns, mortars and howitzers, all mounted on carriages of the period in which they were used are arranged in line west of the modern siege artillery, viz.: 15-pounder gun, 4.5-inch rifle, model 1861; 30-pounder Parrott rifle, eight-inch howitzer, model 1841; eight-inch mortar, model 1841; ten-inch mortar, model 1861; 16-inch Stone mortar, 24-pounder Coehorn mortar.

The modern field artillery exhibit consists of 3.2-inch rifle, carriage and limber, and combined forge and battery wagon; 2.6-inch field mortar and carriage. The following old field guns and howitzers show development of field guns in the United States, viz.: 6-pounder field gun, 12-pounder heavy field gun, model 1841; 12-pounder light field gun, model 1857; three-inch rifle, model 1861, and 12-pounder field howitzer, model 1841. Around a fountain located in the center of the plot devoted to outside ordnance exhibit are grouped 20 old bronze guns, mortars and howitzers of foreign make. All of these are highly embellished and some are very old, the earliest pattern being French mortar caliber 14-inch, made in 1681. In this group are old English, French, Mexican, Austrian and Spanish guns.

The mountain and machine guns and small arms are exhibited inside the building. The mountain guns exhibited are the two-pounder B. L. Hotchkiss mountain gun, caliber 1.65, and carriage, packed on three wooden mules, and the old 12-pounder mountain howitzer, model 1841, and carriage.

The following machine guns are included in the exhibit, viz.: Hotchkiss revolving cannon, caliber 1.50; Gatling battery gun, caliber 30; Maxim Nordenfeld automatic, caliber 45; Colt's automatic, caliber 30; Lovell battery gun, caliber 45; Gardner improved gun; Gatling battery gun, model 1865; Farwell gun; Robertson machine gun; revolving gun (old type); coffee mill gun; two-barrel volley gun; brass volley gun; Robinson & Cottam; Pomeroy & Brownell gun (volley gun); and four breech-loading guns, primitive types. LARGEST LAND DEAL.

So the Famous "Yazoo Purchase" Might Be Called.

Memories of the Early Settlement of Mississippi—Historically the Most Interesting Section of the South.

[Special Vicksburg (Miss.) Letter.]
IN a cane-brake on the summit of a hill overlooking picturesque Mill-ale is the grave of one of the most historic personages who figured in the earliest settlement of this then Spanish territory, now known as Mississippi. The "dale" is perhaps the prettiest spot in this weird, heavily-wooded region of gnarled oaks and sylvan dells. It is about two miles from the river Yazoo, which takes its name from the "Yazous," Indians who disputed the possession of this wild country with the adventurous Spaniards. This beautiful and historic spot of rolling hills and picturesque "dale," was settled a few years after the close of the revolution by Ambrose Douglas, of Down, of Aberdeen, Scotland, a descendant of the historic chieftain "Black" Douglas, whose clan was so powerful as to cause the rulers of Scotland considerable anxiety for their power and throne. He was the husband of the "Heiress of Douglas," Lady Jane Douglas, so celebrated in Scottish song and story. The family estate was known as the "down," and, as was the custom in those days, this branch of the Douglas clan assumed the name of "Downs," after the estate. The father of Ambrose Douglas was a baron, and his "clan" was one of the most powerful in the downs of Scotland. The title descended to the eldest son, and Ambrose, William and Henry came to America. Ambrose came before the revolution, and fought in Morgan's brigade. After the revolution he came to this section, and located at the beautiful Mill-ale, then forest primeval.

His portion of the state enabled him to locate a large tract of land, which he improved and lived upon in almost baronial splendor in this wilderness among the Yazous and Spaniards. Here, in this dale, he built a fine castle after the Scottish style of architecture, and also a mill upon the pretty stream which courses through the dale. Hence the name—and a more appropriate one could not have been given—this home of the wood-nymphs, if such sprites dwell upon earth. The "baronial castle" was dismantled during the civil war, and the old mill was destroyed, but the foundations remain, and the little stream rushes over the moss-gray stones as of old on its impetuous way to the Yazoo. On the hill overlooking this picturesque dale and the ruins of the palace home in the forest lie the remains of the last descendants of the immediate house of Douglas—Ambrose Douglas, and his brothers, William and Henry, sons of Lady Jane Douglas. These were the earliest colonial settlers in the Mississippi valley, hence this spot is of especial historic interest.

In a few years the richness of the lands of the Yazous reached the older settlements of the Carolinas, and gradually the "delta" became settled with wealthy planters, who brought along their slaves, and established plantations limited in extent only by their ability to cultivate them. The Choctaw and the Yazous Indians claimed the territory by right of occupancy—their forefathers having lived in this region for unknown ages, tracing their ancestry to the mound-builders. The Yazous lived on the banks of that stream from near what is now Mill-ale, for a hundred miles up the delta. The Choctaw settlement extended from what is now Vicksburg to near the Natchez tribe.

Their chief settlement was what is known as the "old ball ground," where they played a game something like our town ball. This place later came into the possession of one of the descendants of the original settler of this valley—Ambrose Douglas Downs. The Spaniards, who were endeavoring to dispossess the Indians, occupied the banks of the river, having built forts at various points. Where Vicksburg stands was Fort Nogales, so named from the immense forest of walnut trees on the many hills at this point. Until the traveling preacher, Vick, settled there in the early part of last century the point was known as "Walnut Hills."

The United States also claimed this country by virtue of the English government having recognized the claim of Georgia to this section before the revolution. Companies were organized to purchase large tracts of land from Georgia, and by this means the great Yazoo and the Mississippi valleys became settled by Americans, and the country was eventually wrested from Spain and the Indians. The largest land deal perhaps on record was the noted "Yazoo purchase" of 15,000,000 acres, for which $200,000 was to be paid. Georgia had no funds, and in order to raise money sold these lands, after extinguishing the Indian title. But the newly formed United States government also claimed these lands on the grounds that, as Georgia had adopted the constitution, that state had thereby relinquished this territory to the general government, and, further, that Georgia should surrender these lands as part payment of that colony's expenses in the revolution. After the expulsion of the Spaniards and the extermination of the Indians, the real trouble began, and the Yazoo purchase became the most celebrated case in the country. The general government alleged that a state could not make a treaty with Indians. It was also shown that nearly all of the legislators who had voted for the bill had shares of stock in the company. Duels and street fights followed, and finally the sale was annulled by the legislature. The records of the great purchase were publicly burned by the governor at the state capitol, which was Lewisville. The money paid was ordered refunded to the purchasers. Unluckily, however, the greater part of the money was stolen by a dishonest official, as there were no banks in those days and the money was piled up in chests in the state house. The state transferred its interest in the Yazoo delta lands to the general government. For more than half a century this noted case came to the surface in land contests in the state and the United States courts. The supreme court had, in effect, decided that the sale was legal, but the manner in which Georgia authorized the sale was tainted with fraud and was the downfall of a number of politicians, and cast a blur upon the character of the members of the company who purchased the lands. In those primitive days bribery and the receiving of bribes were crimes, and not considered as "smart politics." Though all official records of this "Great Yazoo purchase swindle" have been expunged from the statute books and legislative records, it still lives in tradition among the oldest settlers on the Yazoo.

The early planters cultivated tobacco, indigo, wheat and corn, and "raised" their own horses and mules for plantation use. Flat-boating was the system of transportation until the invention of steamboats during the first quarter of the past century. Only a small quantity of cotton was cultivated by each planter, which was used mainly for home consumption, until the invention of the cotton-gin. Then indigo and tobacco gave way to cotton. Slaves were imported in greater numbers from the West Indian islands, principally Cuba, and the Yazoo delta and the Mississippi valley soon became known as the greatest and most productive cotton sections in the United States. Wealthy planters from the older states removed to these cotton belts, and here lived for half a century an aristocracy surpassed in no other section of the south in point of wealth and culture. These lands are compared to those of the Valley of the Nile in richness, caused by the frequent overflows of the Yazoo and the Mississippi rivers and the consequent heavy rich alluvial deposits. The group of Gulf states, of which these valleys form a large area, now produce nearly 50 per cent. of the cotton of the world. With the increase of factories in the south about one-fourth of this product is manufactured in the United States. Cotton raising in the south gives employment and support to about 7,000,000 negroes—white men not being adapted to this class of labor.

A LESSON IN ETIQUETTE.

As It Was Impressively Taught by a Gallant Southerner in a Street Car.

The regular report of the conductor of one of the California avenue cars of the Union Traction company tells this story, says the Chicago Tribune:

"When the car was waiting at the end of the line a tall man wearing a black slouch hat and a blue shirt boarded it and sat down. He was broad shouldered and unbrowned and wore a heavy mustache. Before the car started a couple of women got on the rear platform of the car. The tall man got up and opened the door for them. Then he doffed his hat, bowed and said: 'Allow me to show you to a seat.' The women were astonished and inclined to be frightened, but they finally sat down in one corner of the car, while the man resumed his seat.

"As the car filled up the strange passenger went through the same performance every time a woman boarded it. Presently all the seats were filled, half a dozen or more men being among the passengers who occupied seats. When the next woman got on the car the man with the black slouch hat was on his feet again. There happened to be three women in the party. He gave one of them his own seat. The other two he escorted back into the car, stopping before two young men who were buried in their morning papers.

"Here, ladies," said their escort, "are a couple of young men who will get up and give you their seats."

"While the rest of the passengers stared and smiled the two men rose, and, with poor grace, surrendered their seats. Thereafter the stranger met every woman who got on the car, shook her by the hand in welcome and secured her a seat in the same way. Finally only two men were left in the seats. When the next two women got on board the polite man went through his regular course of procedure, but the men addressed paid no attention to him and made no move toward surrendering their seats. Forthwith the tall man reached out two brawny hands, clutched the two men by their collars and dragged them through the car to the rear platform. Then he returned, sat to it that the waiting women sat down in the vacated seats, and then delivered the following lecture:

"This heah is my fust visit to Sheecago an' ah reckon ah doan know jess how to behave. But down wheah ah cum from we doan sit down while they ah ladies standin', and I can get up to seein' it. An' if them pulchans ah jes took out on thuh platform ahn't satisfied with things, why, ah'll be glad to give 'em satisfaction any way they like it."

PIAZZA LIFE IN SUMMER.

Importance of This Portion of the House Should Be Recognized in Building.

We in America are coming to understand the importance of outdoor life. The real poetry of summer is well-nigh lost unless one can come in contact with trees, grass and flowers. True country life bars none from this delight, but in villages and suburban towns its limit is fixed by the space devoted to the piazza, writes Alice M. Kellogg, in Woman's Home Companion.

The importance of this portion of the house should be duly recognized before the plans are out of the architect's hands, and the three essentials for the correct location—exposure, privacy and outlook—be as carefully considered as its construction and relation to the main building. In some instances even the conventional rule for attaching the piazza to that portion of the house that faces the street should not be followed, the interior plans being reversed in order to bring the living-rooms and porch at the rear.

There is one opportunity afforded by a broad piazza of which we are slow to take advantage. We might take more of our meals alfresco. One of the most fascinating things about living abroad is that in summer one may dine often out of doors. We should import the custom into this country, for it is a good one, and then to the delights of long evenings on our piazzas we should have added that greater pleasure of sitting down to tea or to luncheon with nature herself.

Individual Sweet Shortcakes.

Beat three eggs light, add one cupful of fine granulated sugar and beat again. Add one cupful of sifted flour mixed with one teaspoonful of cream of tartar and one-half teaspoonful of soda. Add three tablespoonfuls of milk. Beat well and bake in slightly buttered cupcake tins in a quick oven. When cold remove the centers and fill the cases with crushed sweetened strawberries and cover with sweetened whipped cream. These cakes are much better to serve for a supper than the usual shortcake, which needs to be eaten as soon as baked. A cold, soggy shortcake is a dish to avoid.—Good Housekeeping.

To the Girl Leaving College.

Aim for success. Do not select a calling which is beyond you. It is better to be a good housekeeper than a poor teacher. It is better to be an expert stenographer than a poor lawyer. It is better to be an efficient nurse than an inefficient doctor. Perhaps the more ambitious calling will bring a slight notoriety in the beginning, but if a girl wishes to take a worthy place in the world she must not only follow her bent, she must consider whether she has strength for the long race.—Temple Bailey, in Woman's Home Companion.

According to Harry Vardon, he is the best amateur the world ever saw, and many are prepared to go farther than that and proclaim him the most finished exponent of the game, either professional or amateur.

He thinks he lives, but he's a dead one. No person is really alive whose liver is dead. During the winter most people spend nearly all their time in warm, stuffy houses or offices or workshops. Many don't get as much exercise as they ought, and everybody knows that people gain weight in winter. As a rule it is not sound weight, but means a lot of flabby fat and useless, rotting matter staying in the body when it ought to have been driven out. NEWS OF THE COUNTY.

NEW SALEM.

Mrs. Martha Brown, Lan Harpending and Katie Baker, daughter of Bunk Baker, are all on the sick list.

We are needing rain very badly, and unless we have some in a few days the corn and tobacco crops will be cut rather short.

The wheat harvest is over. While the crop is 30 to 40 per cent. short of last year's crop in acreage, it will average 100 per cent. in quality. A few more days like Friday and Saturday and it will be ready for the thrasher.

Our section set a full crop of tobacco, but owing to the dry, hot weather, and the cut worms and grasshoppers, we got only about 80 per cent of a stand.

Harrison Austin's father, from Cave-in-Rock, was visiting relatives in this section last week.

Mrs. Bettie Watkins, of Pinckneyville, spent part of last week visiting her relative in this neighborhood.

Mrs. Jane Tyner and Miss Carrie Deboe of Pinckneyville were the guests of their kinsman, W. C. Tyner's family, last week.

Arch Crosson and Bill Tyner still have the brag pieces of wheat in this neighborhood.

Our farmers will commence laying by their corn this week. Corn is very small for the time of year, but has had the best working that a corn crop has had in many years.

Bro. Eli Eaton is running an independent wheat harvester this year. All you have to do is to show the parse the wheat and never mind about the grub.

Bill Tyner and son have their sawmill all up and in running trim and will soon be making the dust fly.

We of the New Salem valley would like to have a good wheat thrasher start in ten days in our section, as bread is getting scarce with most of us.

Well, the knowing ones say that we are to have two railroads built in the county—one from Carrsville to Kuttawa and one from Cave-in-Rock to Marion. Our people are very glad to hear the good news.

The hot winds that have been blowing the past few days, are ruining the pastures.

George Mitchell, of Salem, has been assisting Tyner & Son part of last week getting their sawmill in shape.

Esq. C. R. Stevens of Salem was in this section on business last week.

Say, Zinc Road, is your Salem Tiger a bad one, or have you more than one of the beasts in your town? From the way we heard a negro yelling in your town last Monday we thought he had got into a den of the beasts, but found that officer Jas. Woodyard roping one of the blacks preparatory to starting to Smithland jail with him. It was the wife of the prisoner doing the yelling.

David Childress, who left this county some forty years ago, came back last week and is examining the old landmarks. He finds very few of the old settlers here that were here when he left, and the neighborhood has undergone many changes in that time.

Hamby P. Brown and wife, of Lola, spent part of last week with relatives and friends in this section.

J. A. Davidson and wife, of Levisa, spent Sunday in this section.

The old lady (Miss Cooksey) who is at the widow White's crippled, is still confined to her bed.

There seems to be a big crop of people this year, and some of them near here "just will swap horses." Two generous hearted fellows exchanged horses here the other day. Both, as they separated were apparently feeling conscious that "I licked him," but before night one of the parties besought the other to rue with him; this didn't suit the second party: three days passed and first party in absence of second party exchanged horses and took home his first love. For further particulars ask at next quarterly court. This case will create widespread attention. The law does not excuse ignorance.

All persons having loved ones buried at Deer Creek graveyard are notified to meet there and clean off the graves and fix the fence. Why not treat the dead with respect?
