News of Interest Gleaned Up to the Hour of Going to Press.

Col Philip Hay, of Bowling Green, was struck by a train and killed near that city a few days ago.

The historic McDowell building in Danville will be sold at auction Monday. The building was the home of the late Dr. Ephraim McDowell.

County Judge Hall, of Webster county, has ordered the union men encamped at Providence to break camp at once and has threatened to arrest all the men in the camp if his instructions are not obeyed.

The county clerk's official tabulation of voters registered in Louisville, gives a total of 44,986; the Democratic committee's estimate from the books was 42,299. This gives a Democratic majority over all of 4,193.

Miss Nell Willis and Robin Kellogg, members of prominent families of Bowling Green, eloped to Gallatin, Tenn., and were married. The bride is a school girl, sixteen years of age, and wears short dresses. The groom is about seventeen years old.

Henderson, Oct. 19.—Mrs Annie Anderson filed suit against A. J. Duncan, a prominent farmer, for $1,000 damages for alleged malicious prosecution. Duncan had Mrs Anderson arrested about a week ago on the charge of burning his barn. She came clear on the examining trial, there being no evidence against her.

Owensboro, Oct. 18.—John A. Oldham, a race horse man, was shot and mortally wounded in a Magistrate's court at Reed's Station, in Henderson county, by Enoch Clary and his son James. The tragedy was the result of a quarrel between Oldham and the Clary's.

Interest is added to the tragedy by the filing of a divorce suit in the Henderson circuit court today by Oldham's wife on the ground of drunkenness and cruel treatment.

The suit of T. S. Rhea against the Evening Post came to an end in the Logan circuit court last Saturday with a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $4,800. Mr Rhea's friends are congratulating him on his fine victory and on the completeness of his vindication.

On October 26, 1900, the Post published an article, written by its local correspondent, S. W. Linebaugh, charging Mr. Rhea and John W. Edwards, members of the County Board of Election Commissioners, with fraud and unfairness in the appointment of election officers, for the various voting precincts of Logan county. —Herald-Ledger.

The Bourbon county courthouse in Paris, Ky., was destroyed by fire last week. The building was erected in 1872 at a cost of $145,000 and was considered one of the handsomest and best appointed structures of its kind in the State. There is $52,500 insurance on the house and $7,000 on the furniture.

A determined assault was made on the Providence mines in Webster county, by a band of forty armed men late Saturday night. The tipple was surrounded and the shots were poured in on all sides. The guards finally forced the attacking party to retreat, but the fire was continued from the hills. The houses of the Union miners near the Providence mine were also fired on.

At Madisonville Kills a Negro Burglar.

Madisonville, Ky. Oct. 21.—The Rev Eugene Harralson, pastor of the Southern Methodist church in this city and a well known young minister, shot and instantly killed James Lewis, a negro, at an early hour this morning. Lewis, whose home is at Princeton, came here yesterday to visit his parents, and last night he attempted to enter the parsonage, where Mr. Harralson resides. Mr. Harralson, hearing a noise, went to the door, and the negro fled. He returned again this morning and attempted to break in, when Mr. Harralson fired, with the above result.

Mr. Harralson went to the court house and surrendered to the County Judge, Hall. No charges having been slated against him he was released.

When Mrs Milligan made her appearance on the stage she was greeted by a storm of applause. While the accompanist was yet playing the soft tones of the prelude all hearts were won by her appearance. Her graceful figure, her piquant manner and vivacious expression, were all charms to be envied, and her voice rang out in marvelous sweetness, so full of pathos and feeling.—Lynchburg, (Va.) Advance.

Mrs Milligan is one of the "Dixie Belles." Hear her at the opera house Saturday night.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Iowa that nearly proved fatal. His back got so lame that he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair unless propped up by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters, which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c at H K Woods & Co's.

Burglars tunneled into the post office building at Chicago and stole $76,610 in stamps.

Peter Bell, an Indiana miller, has recovered his daughter, who was stolen by gypsies nine years ago.

George E. Koester, a Democrat, has been appointed Collector of Internal Revenue in South Carolina.

The Amalgamated Association of Iron Steel and Tin Workers of America is planning a reorganization.

Joseph F. Smith has been chosen President of the Mormon church to succeed to late Lorenzo Snow.

The Berlin papers comment favorably on the plans for the increase of the power of the American navy.

Rear Admiral Frances M Bunce of the United States navy, retired, died at his home in Hartford, Conn., Friday.

Mr. Kruger is said to have received advices that the Boers have armed fifteen thousand Afrikanders within the last three months.

Although no news has been received of Miss Stone, the captive missionary, the State Department is still confident of her ultimate release.

The United States Legation in Constantinople is still without definite news regarding the attempts to communicate with Miss Stone's abductors.

Venezuela has defaulted payment of $8,000 due the United States in quarterly payment of claims growing out of the revolution in 1892.

The period of official mourning for the late President McKinley has ended, and flags have been raised on the public buildings at Washington.

Bolomen in the island of Samar attacked a detachment of the Ninth infantry Friday and killed ten of the Americans before reinforcements arrived. Over 100 natives were slain.

James D. Wood, who drew the capital prize in the Lawton district at the El Reno lottery, last August and settled a claim valued at $50,000, is dead of typhoid fever after a brief illness. Before his death all the contests against his quarter section claim adjoining the town of Lawton had been disposed of by the Interior Department and his widow will come into undisputed possession of the property.

Senator Morgan, of Alabama, is confident that the approaching session of Congress will see money appropriated for an interoceanic canal. He will introduce a bill early in the session.

President Roosevelt's disregard of the color line in having Booker Washington to dinner, recalls the fact that he did the same thing while Governor of New York, and that he doesn't care what hostile critics say.

Gen. George B. Davis, Judge Advocate General of the Army, has submitted to the Secretary of War the annual report for the year ended June 30, 1901. It shows that during the year there were 6,065 trials by general court martial.

It is stated that on account of the recent outbreaks in the island of Samar, it will be impossible to reduce the force in the Philippines at present, and the War Department is confronted with the problem of supplying a deficiency each month of 2,000 men, whose terms expire.

Wichita, Kas., Oct. 19.—In order that his destitute wife and children might be provided for, Joseph Pabst, an alleged convict for whose capture a reward of $50 was offered, caused a friend to deliver him to the authorities and collect the reward for Pabst's family. Pabst was returned to the penitentiary.

London, Oct. 18.—Returns from the refugee camps in South Africa for September show a total white population of 109,418; the deaths among the whites 2,411, of which 1,964 were children. The colored population is shown to be 38,549, among whom were 301 deaths during the month.

Southern Congressmen now in Washington believe President Roosevelt has done harm to his new Southern departure by entertaining Prof. Washington at his dinner table. President Roosevelt is said to be undisturbed by the comments made upon his violation of the unwritten law, and the statement is made that he will again entertain Washington.

Washington, Oct. 20.—The cleverness of Republican politicians from Ohio in getting around the provisions of the civil service law is exemplified by an innocent looking slip of paper which has recently been mailed to employees in the departments. This slip of paper constitutes a notice that funds are needed for the campaign, but purports to be only the reprint of an article from the Ohio State Journal of Sept. 30th last. Two years ago there was an awful row kicked up by soliciting the funds direct. Then a circular letter was sent. This time the newspaper clipping which calls attention to the need of funds, has been used instead.

The bodies of nine American soldiers who were killed in the battle of Lundy's Lane were reinterred Saturday near the spot on the Niagara frontier where they fell nearly a hundred years ago. They were men of the Ninth infantry, a regiment which also has mounds in China and Samar.

The hundred million dollar Iowa corporation is to be the one to take over the Burlington, Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroad companies. The bonded debt will be $700,000 or more. To meet the interest charges the proprietary company must earn $28,000,000 annually. The earnings of the constituent companies now are but $21,837,000, but great economies are expected to result from consolidation.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 19.—President Roosevelt, in entertaining Booker T. Washington, the negro educator of Alabama, at dinner at the same table with his wife and family, has aroused much discussion in Alabama.

John B. Knox, late President of the Constitutional Convention, in a public speech called attention to the incident, and repeated the words of Abraham Lincoln on the question of negro equality. The Enterprise editorially asks former Governor Jones to return the appointment of United States Judge given him by President Roosevelt.

The situation in the Philippines is admittedly serious, and some hard fighting is in prospect. A plot has been discovered in Samar which had for its object the extermination of the garrison at Carabiga. Plots have been discovered also at other points. News of the recent American disasters has spread like wildfire. In Manila the police have discovered the shipment of large quantities of steel wagon springs to various districts to be used in making bolos. Reinforcements are being hurried to Samar, among the latest being a cruiser, 330 marines, and two battalions of infantry.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Bilioousness. Doctors were scarce and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. For sale by R. F. Haynes and J. H. Orme. Does it Pay to Buy Cheap?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the most severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible. If not possible for you, then in either case take the ONLY remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success for throat and lung troubles, "Boschee's German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try ONE bottle. Recommended many years by all druggists in the world. For sale by R. F. Haynes and Jas. H. Orme. Get Green's Prize Almanac.

"THEY WANT ME"

MISS NELLIE CARMAN

The famous actress appears as "Mary Ann Simpson," the poor silly Arkansas girl, in the farce comedy "They Want Me" at Marion Opera House, Monday night, Oct. 28.

That exasperatingly funny farce comedy, "They Want Me," will be the attraction at the Marion opera house Monday evening next. Built for laughing purposes only, rewritten by Tom Fitch, is now one of the most laughable farce comedies on the road, with a stronger cast than ever, is not to be compared to the old version. This screamingly funny farce, with so many new situations and climaxes, deals with a German who has suddenly come into possession of a fortune. His great antipathy for the gentle sex prompts him to go in search of a place inhabited by men only. He is recommended to Independent hotel, where he goes. But upon his arrival he is confronted by all sorts of women who have evil designs upon his money. All kinds of funny complications follow and at the expense of an excited German, a silly girl, a cranky old man, a none too obliging porter, an old maid, with troubles galore, and a score of others with whom trouble is dealing none too leniently, you are treated to an evening's fun, which can only be had by witnessing a performance of "They Want Me." The comedy is generously interspersed with specialties, which, for refinement and merit, are not surpassed by any traveling organization.

A Boy's Opinion of An Editor.

In a little country school not far from Benton, literary exercises are regularly indulged in every Friday afternoon during the term. A twelve year old boy recently read an original essay on "The Newspaper." This latter day youthful Solomon treats his subject thus:

"Newspapers are sheets of paper on which stuff to read is printed. The men look over the paper to see if their names are in it, and the women use it to put on shelves and such. I don't know how newspapers came into the world. I don't think God does. The Bible says nothing about editors, and I never heard of one being in heaven. I guess the editors is the missing link them fellows talk about. The first editors I ever heard of is the fellow who wrote up the flood. He has been here ever since. Some editors belong to church and some try to raise whisks. All of them raise hell in their neighborhood, and all of them are liars; at least all I know, and I only know one. Editors never die; at least I never saw a dead one. Sometimes the paper dies, and then the people feel glad, but some one starts it up again. Editors never went to school because editors never got licked. Our paper is a mighty poor one, but we take it so ma can use it on our pantry shelves. Our editor don't amount to much, but paw said he had a good chance when he was a boy. He goes without underclothes in winter, wears no socks, and has a wife to support him. A Squaw Man's Love.

W. A. Fraser, who, because of his virile language and fine word painting has been called the American Kipling, contributes to the November Delineator the best story that has yet come from his pen. It is entitled, "The Offcasting of Nicheinous," and it tells how a "Squaw Man" is called back to his desire for culture by some cultured neighbors only to have his aspirations quenched by a rebuff. The remarkable strength of the story is increased by excellent illustrations.

Does it Pay to Buy Cheap?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the most severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible. If not possible for you, then in either case take the ONLY remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success for throat and lung troubles, "Boschee's German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try ONE bottle. HANK SIMMONS

By KENNETH F. HARRIS

(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

HANK SIMMONS was never reckoned a particularly sociable individual, even when he was in "God's Country," where sociability was possible to some extent. The grocery at "the Corners," which was the intersection of the Vinton, Crosbytown and Blockley roads, in Saline county, Mo., "God's country" aforesaid, never had any great attraction for Hank, and the habit of that popular resort generally "lived" that Hank was right smart of good company—fer hisself. He certainly seemed to prefer spending his evenings on the paternal eighty, mending harness, reading the weekly paper, or even "jess a-settin'" gazing blankly into the fire of hickory logs, to the charms of converse with the aches of the soap box. Equally he shunned "singin' school," and the strawberry and ice cream festivals allured him not. "Not," he said, "by a darned sight."

Therefore, he might have been considered eminently fitted for the solitary life of a sheep herder in the slopes of the Jarrillas, whither he had drifted in course of time, but he had to confess at last that he found it "sort of lonesome" and that meant a great deal for him. An ordinarily gregarious man would probably have gone stark staring mad in from six months to a year, but Hank had now followed the flocks for three years, far from human habitation and the sound of human voices, and he was still reasonably sane.

Once in two or three months the supply wagon came around, and then the driver, Bill Williams, usually stayed with him a day or two and helped him to move camp to pastures new. Occasionally a Mexican prospector or a party of Indians on a hunt came into his range, but the rest of the time there was no sound but the ceaseless bleating of his sheep and the quick crunch of their teeth on the grass; no sight but the same old everlasting hills, with their scanty clothing of greasewood and cactus and stunted pine; no occupation but to slouch along after his imbecile charges, or lounge in the shade of rock and tree, no companionship but that of the misnamed Diablo, the half-bred sheep dog. It was no wonder that he felt it "sort of lonesome."

It was not so much the solitude, he said afterwards, as the eternal bleating, bleating, bleating. Or, at least, that in some way acted upon his nerves and intensified the feeling of loneliness. It sometimes happens that a herder who is not a Mexican suddenly snaps the cord of his endurance and runs amuck through the flock, with awful slaughter. After this happens he usually kills himself, for the survivors continue to bleat. This is just as well, for he would be an awkward patient to conduct to a lunatic asylum.

But this is beside the story, except to explain that Hank was so anxious to have Bill Williams stay with him for awhile longer on the occasion of his last visit, and why Bill was so genuinely sorry that he could not.

"I'd like to the best kind, Hank," said the driver. "If I wasn't short of chuck an' waitin' fer me on Madre Chiqueta, I'd do it, but I've got to hit the trail shore. It's a cinch that you've gotter come in, though, an' I'll shore bring some hombre to spell you ther nex' trip. Can you stick it out till then? If you can't, get in the wagon anyhow an' let the sheeps go to hell. A man's worth more'n a herd of snotty-nosed sheeps."

"Oh, I reckon I kin stand it till then," sighed Hank; "but it's shore lonesome." And so the long whip cracked and the brake ground on the wheels, and the wagon slid after the trotting mules down the trail.

In two days Hank was sorry that he had not climbed into the wagon, and considered whether he would not do well to strike out afoot for the Madre Chiqueta; but there were livin' tracks around the spring, and the coral was a frail thing, so he gritted his teeth and stayed, and then in his need came a man and a buckboard to the camp. It is safe to say that no man ever got a heartier welcome.

He stayed two days, and when he went he betrayed his eastern origin by asking for the "bill."

"God!" exclaimed Hank, "ef you only know how tickled I've ben ter have you here! How much do I owe you, pardner? I'd like ter hire you fer the nex' three months jess ter talk ter me."

That gave the parting guest an idea. He may have realized how this solitary herder felt. Perhaps even during his brief journey the dreariness of the desert had entered into his own soul. At all events, he unpacked his big cowhide trunk and took therefrom a small box and a paper parcel. From the box he took a curious little machine upon which he fitted a glossy hollow cylinder from the parcel; lastly attaching a tin funnel and winding up the arrangement with a key. Then, as Hank gazed in open-mouthed wonder, a curious whirling sound proceeded from the funnel, and then in nasal, vibrant tones a voice which said: "Ladies and gentlemen, fellow citizens: I have no hesitation in declaring to you tonight that in his attitude on the financial question, the president of the United States has placed himself in direct opposition to the letter and the spirit of the constitution."

"Know who that is?" asked the traveler. "It's William Jennings Bryan. Here, we'll jerk him out and try another. Sousa's band. How do you like that? Here's 'The Little Old Red Shawl That Mother Wore.' Another speech. Take the whole lot and be happy. There is a dozen records, and they ought to keep you from getting lonesome, for a while, anyway."

Hank had never seen or heard of anything like this before, and his delight and gratitude knew no bounds. He wanted to pay his benefactor for the machine, but could only get him to accept a tanned wildcat skin. Then this angel entertained unawares got into his buckboard and his team rapidly carried him out of sight.

But Hank's case was different now. At night he could wind up his little phonograph, and music and song and oratory and laughter filled his shack through the medium of the tin horn. There was one record that he used more than any other and swathed more tenderly in its protecting cotton, and as time went on there were evenings when this particular record was the only one that he used. It started off with a storm of handclapping. Then the music of a single violin in a prelude, and a woman's voice, strong and sweet and clear, sang:

"Round my Indiana homestead wave the cornfields,
In the distance loom the woodlands clear and cool;
Oftentimes my thoughts revert to scenes of childhood
Where I first received my lessons—nature's school."

Hank tried to imagine what she would look like, and presently identified her with a colored lithograph of a girl feeding chickens, that had come to him with a month's supply of plug tobacco—a blue-eyed, flaxen-haired maiden with round, white arms and a preternaturally graceful form. And so the singer grew very real to him, and he thought about her as he watched his flock and ever the refrain of the song rang in his ears:

"The moon shines bright to-night upon the Wabash,
From the fields there comes the scent of new mown hay,
Through the sycamores the candle light is gleaming
On the banks of the Wabash, far away."

"Well, you don't seem to have suffered none," said Bill Williams, when he drove up to the camp two months later. Fat and happy, by Jinks. And I was expectin' to need Jesus here to haul you back into El Paso. Heckon you don't need no relief."

"I sure do," said Hank. "Jesus kin tumble out an' take hold, an' I'll pack my wasack an' go back with you. I may be all right, but I ain't goin' to take no chances until after I've taken in the town fer awhile."

So the Mexican "took hold" and Hank went back to El Paso with his phonograph and drew his wages.

The second night of his relaxation he and his friend William were attracted by the lights and the show bills at the door of a theater. They went in. It was about the usual programme—juggling, dancing, singing, dialogue—all the rest of it, and the two men enjoyed it with the abandon of children. But suddenly Bill was aware that Hank was gazing with far more than ordinary interest on a girl who had just come on the stage—a blue-eyed and extremely golden-haired young woman. He nudged his friend and received in return a jolt in the side from Hank's elbow that for the moment robbed him of breath; for a violin was playing the prelude to "The Banks of the Wabash," and the next moment the girl sang in a clear, sweet voice:

"Round my Indiana homestead wave the cornfield,
In the distance loom the woodland clear and cool;
Oftentimes my thoughts revert to scenes of childhood
Where I first received my lessons—nature's school."

It was the voice of the phonograph. "Where you going?" asked William. "The show ain't over yet. Sit down."

"I'm goin' ter see that gal," said Hank, determinedly. "You kin wait or not, jess as you darn please." He worked his way with some difficulty behind and presently was confronted with Miss Mae St. Clair.

"Well?" said the singer, not unkindly, for Hank was a well-looking man and he showed something of the trepidation he felt, though he had been bluff and peremptory enough with the men who had barred his way. "You want me?"

"That's what," replied Hank, simply. "What is it?"

"I jest told you. I want you. Take a good look at me, an' see ef you think I'll do. I'm a stranger to you, but you hain't ter me. You've ben with me in my shack, singin' ter me fer two months stiddy. I'd like the best kind ter have you with me fer all ther rest of the time ther is."

Miss St. Clair looked at him for a moment in amazement and then burst into a fit of laughter. "You must be crazy," she said.

"No," said Hank, "I hain't crazy, nuther. You saved me from that. I'll tell you." And he told her, with a rude eloquence that moved her strangely. "I knowed when I seen you an' heard you to-night that I wuzn't mistaken," he concluded. "I knowed that your breath of ther new-mown hay come to you right ther, an' you seen the moon shinin' on ther ripples in ther water an' hankered after ther of home-stead. You hain't satisfied ter paint up your face this-a-way an' sing ter a mob of whisky-soakin' loafers—are you?"

"N—no," she half stammered. "Well, then, come with me an' I'll make a home fer you, an' ef it hain't a happy one it won't be my fault."

"You don't know anything about me," she said, quickly. "Nor you don't erbout me."

"But I know," she said, smiling. For a moment or two they looked at one another very earnestly. Then Hank put out his hand and she put hers within it.

That is how it happened that Miss Mae St. Clair—who is called Polly by her admiring husband—left the "profession" almost at the outset of a promising career.

DOUBLE-DECKER BEDSTEADS.

They Are So Made to Save Room—Three-Decker Bedsteads Are Also Manufactured.

"What?" said the furniture man to a New York Sun reporter. "You never heard of a double-decker bed before? Well, they are not new, but they are used now in a wider variety of situations than formerly and there are more of them sold."

"Their construction as you see is very simple. The four corner posts are carried up to a sufficient height to support a second bed frame directly over the first and on above that to terminate in the usual manner, even with a brass knob or other ornament for finish."

"Of course the original purpose of the double-decker bed was to save room; and one of their earlier uses was in a newboys' lodging house, instead of bunks. There have been built, in fact, for lodging house use, three-decker iron bedsteads, carrying three beds, one above the other. "But the double-decker iron bedstead is by no means designed for lodging house use alone; it is used on shipboard, on transports, and, in suitably finished styles, on passenger steamers in saloon staterooms or cabins in place of bunks. Used on shipboard they are, of course, securely clamped in position; and for sea use the bedsteads are equipped with front guard rails, equivalent to the front board of a bunk."

"Double-decker iron bedsteads are commonly made with amply sufficient head room between the lower and the upper bed so that the occupant of the lower bed can sit up in it without touching the under side of the upper bed. We have built double-decker bedsteads with ladders attached by which to mount conveniently to the upper bed and we have made double-decker bedsteads so constructed that the upper bed could be turned up out of the way like the upper berth in a sleeping car or into a vertical position quite out of the way."

"The double-decker is used in small rooms in flats and also in private houses, as for example, in a house where there might be available but one comparatively small room for two servants, where two beds would monopolize too much of the floor space. There they put in a double-decker iron bed, with a great saving of room, and I have no doubt to the entire satisfaction of the users of it."

"I have heard of college men building up to save space in a small bedroom two cot beds, with home-made supports, one above the other; this improvised double-decker serving its purpose very well as long as it served it at all, but likely to prove unstable, if not actually to collapse."

"Clearly the light but strong, rigid and secure double-decker iron bedstead would be a boon in such a place as that; and, as a matter of fact, such bedsteads have been put to use here in bachelor apartments, where two men are occupying a suite of rooms. They don't want folding beds in their parlor or to give up the room required for two beds anywhere, and so they put in a double-decker bed."

"And this would not of necessity be a cheap affair. You can buy double-decker beds, plain and of simple construction, at a low price, or you can have them built in any degree of elaborateness as to design and finish and you can furnish them with bedding equipment in whatever measure of luxuriousness you may wish to pay for."

"Take it altogether, the double-decker iron bedstead is really a good deal of an institution."

LAP WOMEN OF ALASKA.

They Manage the Reindeer and Are Making Educational Progress.

The Lap women who live in Alaska are proving themselves exceeding valuable by their aptness in the management and care of the reindeer and they are now teaching the native Alaskan the art, if such it may be called. There are about a dozen reindeer stations now established in Alaska and more to follow. The natives are required to serve an apprenticeship of several years at the reindeer stations. During this time they are practically taught how to manage the deer and the making of sledges and reindeer harness. After the expiration of their service the government allows each a number of deer as his own personal property. The total number of reindeer in Alaska at present is 3,500, of which some have been distributed to the Eskimos.

The average Lap woman is a picturesque figure. She is generally young and robust, and ten chances to one has an infant in her characteristic Lapland cradle, which is hewn out of a solid log and carried on the back by a strap. The wife of the chief herder is one of the most notable women of the colony. She is very intelligent and her particular duty is to teach the Eskimo women the art of making reindeer clothing, which is the warmest and best adapted for arctic climates. She also instructs them how to prepare the various foodstuffs which the reindeer furnishes, such as butter, cheese, and the cooking and drying of the meat. For this work she receives the same pay as the herders.

She travels from station to station, where the classes of women are assembled from the surrounding country of 100 miles or more. She then gives daily object lessons in her domestic work and gradually the Eskimo women are taught the ways of civilization.

How He Lost His Chill.

"I see they are predicting a cold winter," said the man with the summer suit, "but I'm not worrying about it. In fact, I'm hoping for an early winter and something below zero right along. You see, I went over to Philadelphia last June and got a chill and was never so cold in my life. I walked into a saloon and asked for a hot Scotch, but after looking at me for a minute the bartender said:

"Hot Scotch be hanged! What you want is four fingers of regular old burning lava, with two red peppers, a dash of horseradish and a spoonful of tobacco sauce."

"He prepared it, and I drank it, and do you know I have worn an alpaca suit ever since, and had to sleep with my feet to a chunk of ice to even get up a decent shiver."—Bucklyn Citizen.

October at the Pan-American.

Less than 30 days remain before the gates of the Pan-American Exposition are closed forever. During the crisp, cool days of October Buffalo is at her best, and those who have delayed their visit until now will have the most delightful weather of the year in which to enjoy the wonders of the Rainbow City.

In planning your trip you will probably want to go east of Buffalo, and it will be well to keep in mind how pleasantly this may be done over the picturesque Lackawanna Railroad.

The same low rates are in force over the Lackawanna Railroad as during midsummer. At this season a daylight ride over the Lackawanna System is a journey long to be remembered. Through the Delaware Gap and over the Blue Ridge ranges the woods are radiant in their autumnal coloring while the agricultural region of western New York is mellowed by the wonderfully rich tones of the fall harvest time.

Six solid, vestibuled trains are run daily between New York and Buffalo, with daily through service between New York and Chicago and New York and St. Louis. Observation cars, dining cars and Pullman sleeping cars offer every comfort for the trip. A beautiful guide, profusely illustrated, telling about the Exposition and its features will be sent on receipt of two cents in postage stamps. Write for one to T. W. Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, will pay the penalty of his damnable crime next week. It is believed that the execution will take place before 6 o'- clock in the morning, of October 28th, or if everything can not be gotten ready on that day at a similar hour on the 29th. The work of selecting the jury to sign the death warrant of the murderer has been completed, but their names are withheld from publication.
They will not be known until the morning of the electrocution. Only twenty-five people will witness the execution. Czolgosz nerve has deserted him and he begs for mercy.

RAILROAD SURVEYORS

At Work in Livingston County...
Citizens Very Hopeful.

Mr. William Lowery, of Livingston county, was in town yesterday. He stated to the Press that Livingston county is full of railroad capitalists and mineral magnates. The railroad men are from Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Newcomer, of that city, is the promoter of the proposed road. He has a large corps of surveyors at work in Livingston county. The proposed railroad is to start at Carrsville, run through Livingston county to Kuttawa, and from there into Tennessee. The Salem people are very sanguine regarding the outlook.

Mineral men from Pittsburg are securing a great deal of mining territory; capitalists from Louisville are prospecting for oil in different sections of the territory.
Everything indicates a boom for Salem and Livingston county.

GOV. BECKHAM

Pardons Bob Brantley, Convicted of Malicious Shooting.

Monday Gov. Beckham pardon-ed Bob Brantley, convicted at the June term of Crittenden circuit court on the charge of malicious shooting, and sentenced to the penitentiary for two years. Brantley was charged with shooting at Mr.
J. W. Pritchett, of Gladstone. He returned home Tuesday.

A large petition was presented to the Governor by friends of Brantley. The Governor has not yet made known his reason for issuing the pardon.

Health Notice.

As predicted in a notice issued by the Crittenden County Board of Health last spring, Marion is,
and has for some time been, suffering an epidemic of typhoid fever. Some valuable lives, a great deal of money and time have been sacrificed, to say nothing of the sorrow, affliction and suffering entailed. These last can not be estimated in dollars. This board has tried to enforce sanitary regulations. We are thankful to those who have encouraged us and seconded our efforts; but some have continually disregarded our notices and flagrantly violated the law.
To these we will say, our next notice will be in the form of a warrant.

Land Sale for School Tax.
School District No. 36, Crittenden County, Ky.

As Treasurer of the above named district, on the 18th day of November, between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock p. m., at the court house door in Marion, Ky., I will proceed to sell at public auction to pay school taxes due me as treasurer of above named district, one tract of land, or so much thereof as may be needful to pay taxes and costs due me as herein indicated, $4.98 taxes and penalty on property listed by the Gladstone Mining Co. for 1899, $5.25 for same for 1900, $5.25 same on property listed by F. B. Posey for $1901. Total, $16.98.

The land levied upon comprises about ninety acres and is situated in Bells Mines precinct, near Nunn's Switch, and in aforesaid school district, and is the property of F. B. Posey of Evansville, Ind., —the same that was conveyed to said Posey by T. W. Hughes, as shown by record in clerk's office, of this county in deed book No. 4, page 513.

This the 22d day of Oct., 1901.

Having purchased an interest in the Tolu Roller Mills I want the people to cast in their wheat and corn far me to manufacture into flour and meal. I do not go in the mill with a bee-gum hat or standing collar nor kid gloves on, but I go in with 25 years experience in the grinding of grain into bread stuff, and you will find me in the Tolu Mill in a perfectly good humor, with my working clothes on ready and willing to wait on you at any and all times.

Now I want to thank the people of this county for the liberal patronage given me in the past, and hope to share a good part of it in the future, as my motto is: "Honesty in its fullest extent." So give me a trial at the Tolu Mills and I can only promise in the future as in the past to do the very best that I can, with this I am, Yours to serve.

NOTICE!

Do You Want to Buy a Good Farm?

If so, call on J. H. Morse, Marion, Ky., he still owns more than 400 acres of the Garland Carter farm, 5 miles Southeast of Marion and 1 1/2 miles from Repton.

FARM NO. 1.

Contains 125 1/2 acres, about 25 acres fresh cleared, about 15 acres in timber, the remaining 85 acres were cultivated this year as follows: 65 acres in peas and 20 acres in corn. There is not one acre of land on this tract that can not be cultivated. This farm lies well and is very productive, there is no better farm to be had of its size. New box house and stables just completed. Lies on county road, 1/2 mile from Oakland school house. Price on this farm $20 per acre. Terms easy.

NO. 2.—Contains 149 acres, about 145 in cultivation, lies well, joins Oakland school house, has tenant house, box stables. This farm is worth more money but will sell it for $1,500.

NO. 3.—12 acres of land on the Ford's Ferry road, just outside of the city. It is of Marion; can easily be made into 12 good building lots. There is no way to lose money on this deal at $750 except to refuse to buy it.

NO. 4.—A big tobacco stemmery in Shady Grove, Ky., 8 miles from Providence, 14 miles from Marion. Good tobacco country and pleasant people to deal with. This factory is in good shape for business and a fine crop of tobacco in that section this season.
This factory could not be built and furnished for $2500; will sell it for $1500. We would not sell this property if we were able to look personally after it, but our other business takes all our time.

"One night my brother's baby was taken with croup," writes Mrs J C Snider of Crittenden, Ky., "it seemed it would strangle before we could get a doctor, so we gave it Dr King's New Discovery, which gave quick relief and permanently cured it. We always keep it in the house to protect our children from croup and whooping cough. It cured me of a chronic bronchial trouble that no other remedy would relieve." Infallible for coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles. 50c and $1 at H K Woods & Co.

Cured of Chronic Diarrhea.
"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhea and thought I was past being cured said John S. Holliday of French Camp, Miss. "I had spent so much time and money and suffered so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effects of diarrhea that I could do no kind of labor, and could not even travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy, and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it may be in reach of all who suffer as I have." For sale by R. F. Haynes.

A SENSE OF LOSS.

I'm feelin' kind o' lonesome an' I'm feelin' kind o' blue.
This old world doesn't seem to run the way it use to do;
The skies is jes' as sunny an' the woods is jes' as green,
But somehow there is somethin' that is missin' from the scene.
There ain't nobody standin' round with solemn mien to say;
We're all a workin' steady an' we eat three meals a day,
But I long for oratory and fur lofty thoughts that soar,
There isn't anybody 'lectioneerin' any more.

Nobody comes and tells me that this land from sea to sea
Is tremblin' in the balance, an' its fate depends on me;
Nor warns me that the monarchs an' the diplomats of note
Is waitin' in suspense to see jes' how I'm goin' to vote;
Nor tells me that my country needs my good plain common sense;
At present my opinions don't make any difference.

Nobody comes and grasps my hand the way they did of yore;
There isn't anybody 'lectioneerin' any more.

LISBON HOLLOW.

By Ethel Harrington.

"WHY, 'Liphe, you've made a mistake 'way back in the very beginning. Here it is. Fifteen and seven aren't twenty-one, are they?"

"I don't know, Livy, I'm sure. If you tell me they're ninety-one I'll take your word for it. I haven't any brains of my own to-night. I'm too tired."

"Oh, well, I'll help you, then. Let's do it over together. Come, let me take your pencil."

"I can't do any more to-night, Livy; I can't."

Livy Lanham looked up startled, for 'Liphe's voice was not quite steady.

"Are you sick?" she asked, anxiously. He shook his head.

"No; only tired. I guess it's no use, Livy; I guess you'll have to give me up."

"But I won't!" she exclaimed.

"You'll have to, if I give up myself. It's more than I can do, working and studying both. I shall be down sick if I go on; I'm all used up now; I'm not myself. I feel like a girl—I believe I could put my head on a cushion and cry, if I hadn't sense enough left to be ashamed. I must drop one thing or the other, and the farm can't be dropped, so—" He broke off, and they were both silent.

The farm could not be dropped, indeed. It was the poorest farm in Norley, but what came from it, together with Joseph Lanham's meager pension, was all the little family of three had to live upon. The father, sickly and slightly crippled, did the cooking and what odd jobs he could within doors and without; Livy, a slim, brown girl of sixteen, sewed and attended to other household matters; and upon 'Liphe, a sturdy youth not quite two years older, fell the main burden of labor on the farm.

He was a strong, steady, intelligent young fellow, who worked hard and managed better than could have been expected at his age. He was sweet-tempered and patient, too, and made few complaints of the hard lot to which he felt that honor and duty held him. One thing only had distressed him—the interruption of his education.

He had been a good student, but two years before he had had to leave school to take the place at home of an elder brother who died, and there seemed no chance of his ever being able to return. But Livy had kept on going to school, for she was to be a teacher when she was old enough, and this year, her own learning having reached a point at which 'Liphe had been broken off, she had taken him for her first pupil, and taught him in the evening what she herself learned in the daytime.

This she had faithfully done during the fall and winter, tired as she often was after her two miles' tramp to school and back over the snowy country roads. But now April had come, bringing with it an illness of several weeks for the father, who was always ailing in the spring, and under the triple burden of trying to be at once student, farmer and nurse, 'Liphe felt himself breaking down. As neither the farm nor his father could be neglected, he must give up his studies.

Livy was the first to speak: "If we could only hire a man!"

"I know. But we can't."

"No," she assented sorrowfully. She added, with a burst of indignant despair, "That horrid, horrid earthquake! Why couldn't it have spoiled somebody else's property and allowed some other potato patch a hundred years ago? Then we'd have had a farm worth having! Great-granther Lanham had six men to help with it, and we can't even have one! Oh, dear!"

She took her candle and went slowly to her room, with a pitying ache in her heart. It was so hard for 'Liphe! It had been some comfort hitherto to feel that she was helping him, but now she could not even do that. Her pillow was damp before she fell asleep.

The next day was a holiday on account of a teachers' meeting; and in the morning early Livy was on her way to the Whispering Rock, with a parcel of books in her hand, as she had threatened rain the day before.

as she was leaving school, and her books were still in the newspaper in which she had wrapped them. The heavy old English lettering of the title of the Norley Herald ran conspicuously across the package, which was tied with a bit of brown hair ribbon. She carried it carefully as she climbed down to a ledge near the base of the cliff. There she curled herself up comfortably, with her back against a convenient projection. The lofty, lichen-studded surface of the main rock rising high above her shut out half the world.

It was Livy's favorite spot. Behind her, with the farmhouse perched half-way up the steep ascent, rose Lanham Hill, around which, on three sides, swept the arid waste of the Pennyrroyal Plains, as they were called, waterless, treeless and barren, the bad lands of Norley. On its fourth side, from the sharply sloping brow of the hill the Whispering Rock descended to the ledge where she lay; and below this, quite at the foot of the crag, was the curious valley known as Lisbon Hollow.

Here, more than a hundred years before, that memorable and terrific earthquake, the lessening pulsations of which, sweeping beneath the broad Atlantic, overthrew in their dying tremors chimneys on Boston houses, dried wells, opened springs and tossed white sand through narrow fissures of unknown depth which suddenly seamed the surface of green New England fields—here had the Lisbon earthquake caught the best meadow of the Lanham farm and shaken the life out of it. For Lanham's brook and Lanham's pond had graced the hollow then, and watered old Ebenezer Lanham's crops and made his modest wealth; and these, when the earthquake passed, had disappeared utterly from sight, and left the land dry and valueless, and heaped hazard in hills and ridges and hills. The only trace remaining of the vanished stream was the faint rippling and murmuring sound that could sometimes be heard far underground, when on very still days one leaned an ear against the Whispering Rock.

Many declared that even this was but a fancy, and that people only imagined they heard the sound, or mistook some other sound—the rustling of the dry grass, perhaps—for that of water. But Livy Lanham was a firm believer in the hidden brook; and lying on the sunny ledge in the mild air of spring, with her head close against the rock, she thought she heard it now, and wished with all her heart it were above the ground once again.

Rousing herself from her despondent mood, she took up her books and was about to untie the parcel when a head-line of the Norley Herald caught her eye. "Trouble For the New Water Company," she read, and underneath, in smaller type, "Jones' Spring Not Sufficient—Objection of Our Citizens to the Use of River Water—Possible Typhoid—At a Deadlock—The Scheme May Be Given Up. After All."

Livy hastily tore off the brown hair ribbon, tumbled her books out on the ledge and read the article. How loud the Whispering Rock rippled and murmured as she read—it was the beating of her own heart that sounded so plainly in her ears!

An hour later she returned to the house and told 'Liphe that she was going into town. He was surprised, and wondered why she, who was usually so careful and economical, had put on her best dress on a week-day. He could not know that she was going to call on the president of the company that had lately been organized to introduce city water into Norley, and that she wished to make the best impression possible. She had knotted up her long braids to give herself a greater air of dignity, and she was wondering as she walked along what would be the proper way to introduce herself. Should she say she was Miss Lanham, or Miss Olivia Lanham, or just Livy Lanham from the Lanham farm? She had not settled this important question by the time she reached the president's house, and afterward she tried in vain to remember which she had said.

She could not even remember very distinctly what the president, Mr. Finch, had said to her. At first he had been polite, but she had felt he thought her foolish and was impatient to have her go. Gradually he had become interested in what she had to say, and at last really eager; and when she left he had promised to bring a man who knew all about springs to examine the Hollow. Meanwhile, she was not to talk about the matter to any one, except, of course, to 'Liphe and her father.

She saw 'Liphe working in the garden as she neared the house, and unable to keep her hopes to herself long enough to walk decorously around to the gate, she jumped nimbly over the stone wall and ran up to him. He straightened his back and pushed his hat away from his forehead, drawing an involuntary sigh of relief at the momentary respite from toil. Looking at his sister as she approached, with her brown eyes sparkling, her cheeks flushed, and a dimple dancing at the corner of her mouth, he thought to himself that Livy was certainly growing pretty; he had never noticed before how pretty she was. He was so occupied with the surprise of this new thought concerning her that he did not hear her first words of greeting, but she was in no mood to stand still and be admired. In a moment he felt himself seized by the shoulder and briskly shaken.

"'Liphe! 'Liphe!" she cried with joyful impatience. "Wake up! Don't stare at me in that moony way, as if you'd just discovered me and wondered what kind of new animal I was! Wake up—wake up all over, with every one of your five senses, and shake your wits together to hear what I've got to say! You know the Whispering Rock?"

"Of course I do. But—"

"Well! And you know Lanham's Brook?"

"How should I, when it's been buried more than a century?"

"You'll know it soon, if you don't now. O 'Liphe, they're going to dig it up again and use it—and it's ours—and they'll pay us for it—and we can hire a man—and the farm will be as good as it was in Granther Lanham's day—and you can study all you want to—and oh, I'm so happy, so happy, so happy, I don't know what to do!"

What she had already done was to shake the astounded 'Liphe harder and harder with each explosive fragment of a sentence; what she did next was to catch him suddenly round the neck and begin to cry and laugh together. But after a little while she became quieter, and was able to explain what she had done and what she hoped for. It was 'Liphe's turn to be excited then. The brook restored, the farm irrigated, the water company leasing or buying the Hollow! He hardly dared to think how much it might mean.

Mr. Finch and his scientific friend kept their appointment. They said but little then, but came again with men and boring apparatus, and other mechanical contrivances, and soon it was a settled thing that Norley was to be provided with city water, free from all taint of suspicion of impurity, and fresh from the cool depths below the Whispering Rock.

"A fine surprise we'll give 'em!" said the scientific man, rubbing his hands, two weeks after the interview with Livy. "No chance for growlers this time! This is better than Jones' spring. Why, there must be water enough down there to supply a metropolis!"

Negotiations were begun immediately, and the old Hollow was bought at a price that was satisfactory and generous. Workmen took possession of the Hollow, visitors came to see it, the townspeople talked about it, and the Norley Herald gave it a full page, beginning with a column account of the Lisbon earthquake, and concluding with a cut of the new waterworks as they would look when completed. 'Liphe and Livy were mentioned, and poor Livy made to suffer from the reporter's gallantry.

She became so sensitive that she avoided all reference to the Hollow scheme and her share in it, and so failed to understand that her bright idea had caused her to be a person of interest, and that the more people found out about her the more they liked her.

Knowledge of her popularity came to her suddenly. Norley possessed a little park, presented to the town by a wealthy former citizen, and this gentleman, learning of the introduction of water, desired to add to his gift an artificial pond and a fountain. The fountain was to be suitable and simple—three whirling circles of spray, with a central jet which was to toss a golden ball. Arrangements were made to have the new water first turned on at the pond. The occasion was to be a local holiday, with a procession, music, and a presentation speech by Mr. Finch, who was a friend of the absent donor.

Livy and 'Liphe were present, and listened to the speech with an interest which, toward its close, deepened suddenly to astonishment. Livy clutched 'Liphe's hand. Mr. Finch had mentioned her name; he was asking her to come forward; all eyes were upon her.

"Go!" whispered 'Liphe; but he had to lead her to the orator. Mr. Finch held a shining ball, which he laid in Livy's hand, telling her it was like the one in the fountain. There was but one difference; it could be opened.

He touched a tiny ring around the middle, and lo! it fell apart, and within lay a graceful silver cup with Livy's initials engraved upon it. It was a present, he explained, from the water company to Miss Olivia Lanham, the descendant of the original loser of Lanham's Brook, and the originator of the plan for its recovery; and she was requested to drink from it the first draught from the fountain, to the health of the giver thereof and the prosperity of the town.

The crowd cheered; 'Liphe, pleased and proud, took the pretty cup and stepped upon a plank which extended from the granite curb toward the middle of the pond. Livy was told to press her finger upon a little knob. She obeyed, tremulous with excitement and with no steady hand; and beneath her light touch, with a rush, a gleam, a plume of spray, a dance of twinkling rainbows and a soft sound of falling water, the brook that had been lost for more than a hundred years flashed again to the light of day.—Youth's Companion.

Just to Get Even.

She had just made some unkind remarks about the proceedings at the club, merely judging from his condition when he returned, and he felt that it was time to get even. That's the trouble with man—he remembers things so long. She had forgotten all about it and merely remarked that it was an enjoyable comedy they attended the previous evening.

"Comedy!" he exclaimed. "That was no comedy. When a play has a sad ending it comes nearer to being a tragedy."

"But the ending wasn't sad," she protested.

"Not sad!" he repeated. "Why, the hero and heroine were married in the last act, weren't they?"—Chicago Post.

"DIED LIKE A DUPONT."

How a Young Millionaire Gave Up His Life in Attempting to Prevent a Catastrophe.

"The Dynamite Worker" is the subject of Cleveland Moffett's "Danger and Daring" article in a recent St. Nicholas. Incidentally he tells how a member of the great powder-making firm of Duponts went to a hero's death when duty called him:

Let me conclude with the mention of a remarkable family of explosive-makers, the Duponts, of Wilmington, who for generations now have had practically the monopoly of the powder-making business, including dynamite and nitroglycerin. In this enterprise a great fortune has accumulated, so that the Duponts of to-day are very rich men, far beyond any need of working for years. Yet work in the mills they do—all of them practically—and direct in detail all of the processes of manufacture, and face continually, day by day, in their own persons the same terrible dangers that the humblest mixer faces in his tasks.

There has grown in their hearts through the century a great pride of courage, like that of an officer who leads his men into battle—a pride far stronger than any longing for pleasure. And they cannot, if they would, leave these slow, grinding mills, where any day a spark may bring catastrophe and make the whole land shudder.

There came a day, for instance—when a swift was a long time ago—when a swift flame swept through one of the mixing rooms, nearly empty of powder at the time, yet so permeated with the stuff in floor and walls that the building was burning fiercely in a few seconds. No man can say what started it, although it was believed that a heavy box, slid along the wooden floor, brought a flash out of the dry timbers.

At any rate, the flash came, and the blaze followed on it so swiftly that the building was wrapped in fire before the men inside could reach the door, and they presently burst out blazing themselves, for their clothing was sufficed through with explosive dust. Indeed, it is always true in fires at powder-mills that the workmen are a serious menace to the buildings by reason of their own inflammability.

So the next thing was a plunge into the placid Brandywine, which winds across the yards between willow-hung banks. In went the men; in went young Alexis Dupont; and with a little hiss their flaming garments were extinguished. Then, as they struck out into the stream, they looked back and saw that the wind was carrying a shower of sparks from the burning building to the roof of a cutting-mill near by, where tons of powder lay. For one of the sparks to reach the finest powder-train would mean the blowing up of this mill, and it might be, the blowing up of another and another by concussion.

All this young Dupont realized in a single glance. Here would be a awful disaster presently, and many lives imperiled, unless those falling firebrands could somehow be kept off that roof. To know this was to act. Millionaire or not, peril or not, it was his plain duty as a Dupont to fight those sparks; and, without a moment's wavering, he turned back and scrambled up the bank.

"Come on, boys!" he cried. "Start the bucket line." And a moment later he was climbing to the roof of the threatened mill. And there he did all that a brave man can do; he stamped out the falling embers; he dashed water again and again upon the kindling fire as the men passed up full buckets; and for a time he seemed to conquer. But presently the fire flamed hotter, the sparks came faster, and the water came not fast enough. He saw—he must have seen—that the struggle was hopeless, that the mill beneath him was doomed, that the explosion must come soon. They called on him to save himself. He shouted back an order that they pass up more water, and keep passing water.

The men below did their best, but it was a vain effort, for in those days the roofs of powder mills were made of pitch and cement—not of iron, as to-day—and by this time the fire had eaten its way nearly through. Alexis Dupont, working desperately, stood there with flames spreading all around him. It was plain to everyone that the minutes of his life were numbered. Again they shouted, and—

The explosion came like an execution, and out of the wreck of it they bore away his crushed and broken body. The last thing he knew was that he had played the game out fairly to the end—he died like a Dupont, said the men.

TWO MASCOT MONKEYS.

Their Names Are Jennie and Chipper, and They Belong to New York's Fire Department.

Probably the strangest mascots in the New York fire department are Jennie and Chipper, two lively monkeys, who pass a happy life in the hook and ladder house at No. 20 Mercer street. Jennie, the larger of the two, belongs to the mandrill species, and weighs 30 pounds. She is eight years old, but her companion, the Java monkey, Chipper, has seen only a year. The monkeys are kept in the back part of the building, near the strong, handsome horses that are such fleet runners. Jennie takes a special interest in the horses, and as each one is led back to be cleaned she seizes the halter and manages the horse quite skillfully, pulling him this way or that, as she sees it is necessary. If a horse gets restive and impatient Jennie accosts him in her funny, chattering way, while she clutches the halter like a vise. She is usually seated on the top of the radiator while holding the horse, and in the winter she will lie down on the radiator and sleep when it is so hot that a man cannot put his hand on it.

JENNIE AND CHIPPER.

Like most of her tribe, Jennie is full of mischief, so she is kept fastened to the wall by a long, heavy, double chain. Strong as this chain is, however, she breaks it sometimes, and then she rummages all over the premises, especially down cellar. She has learned that there are cans of condensed milk and food down there which the men keep for their meals, so she always visits that place first, and works havoc. Then she goes upstairs and eats up all the soap she can find in the sink, and if she comes across any bananas she will break them into sections, which she stows away in a pouchlike arrangement under her chin inside her mouth. Sometimes she disposes of as many as five in this way. This fruit she saves for future use.

It is a great grief to Jennie that Chipper, who is a quiet, gentle monkey, should be allowed to go out alone. A block away there is a large factory, where the people who work come down to the street every noon to eat their luncheon. Regularly at that hour Chipper walks around to get some tidbits from their friends. All the children know her, and it is quite safe for her to go alone, as they would not allow anyone to steal her. The other day Jennie became so jealous at luncheon time that she managed to break her chain, and when discovered a few minutes later she was walking gravely toward the factory, carrying her chain on one arm and Chipper seated like a baby on the other.

Frank Murphy has charge of the pets, and whenever he goes near the monkeys they will give every evidence of delight, and put their arms around his neck in the most affectionate way.

"Those monkeys know every word we say," said Mr. Murphy, as he threw Chipper lightly over to Jennie, who was trying hard to get possession of the smaller monkey, whom she loves to pet. "Jennie plans a lot of things, and whenever I see her looking carefully and attentively at every link in her chain I know she has got some scheme in mind, and is planning to break the chain. A few days ago she managed to wrench the whole top off of that large radiator. She never allows any tips to remain on the gas fixtures if she can help it, and she loosens all the handles which turn on the gas. A short time ago she took the tip off a fixture near her and then turned on the gas, as she had seen the men do. When she smelled the gas she put her mouth over the tube to breathe it in. We found her lying insensible on the floor, but we managed to bring her to."

It is not possible to leave any gas turned low near Jennie, for she likes to slap at it with her paw until the small light goes out. Another pet sport of hers is to wrench the handles off the doors, and she is so fond of breaking windows that those near her have been boarded in. Slamming the door is another pleasure, for she can easily turn the handle and open a door herself. During the hottest days she likes to sit in the sink and let the water from the faucet pour over her, and she is also an expert swimmer when she gets into deep water.

Chipper has funny tricks, too, although she is so much younger. Chipper's special trick is to go to fires. The other day when the big 85-foot ladder was dashed out to a fire Chipper was discovered calmly seated on the top. It was too late to take her off, and Chipper went to the fire. While the firemen were at work she stayed with the driver, and on the return trip she seemed to wear an expression of great satisfaction. Since then she has decided to attend fires whenever things at home get monotonous.—N. Y. Tribune.

MILWAUKEE PEOPLE

Could Hardly Believe It. A Prominent Woman Saved From Death by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suppose a large number of people who read of my remarkable cure will hardly believe it; had I not experienced it myself, I know that I should not."

MRS. SADIE E. KOCH.

"I suffered for months with trouble peculiar to women which gradually broke down my health and my very life. I was nearly insane with pain at times, and no human skill I consulted in Milwaukee could bring me relief."

"My attention was called to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; the first bottle brought relief, and the second bottle an absolute cure. I could not believe it myself, and felt sure it was only temporary, but blessed fact, I have now been well for a year, enjoy the best of health, and cannot in words express my gratitude. Sincerely yours, SADIE E. KOCH, 124 10th St., Milwaukee, Wis.—$5000 (perfect if above testimonial is not genuine)."

Such unquestionable testimony proves the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over diseases of women.

Women should remember that they are privileged to consult Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., about their illness, entirely free.

TEMPERANCE.

Its Importance as a Factor For Human Happiness.

[Published by request].

There is beauty in temperance, like that which is portrayed in virtue and truth. It is a close ally of both, and like them has that all-pervading essence and quality which chastens the feelings, invigorates the mind, and displays the perfection of the soul. Like water from a rill, rain from a cloud, or lightning from the heavenly bodies, the thoughts issue pure, refreshing, unsullied and radiant from within. There is no grossness, no dross, no corruption; for temperance, when effectually realized, is full of loveliness and joy, and virtue and purity are the elements in which it lives. It is the best guardian of youth and the guardian of old age; the best physician of the soul as well as of the body. But how very, very few of the men, both young and old, believe this; if they do, they fail to put it in practice.

Young man, did you know some of your best friends are your worst enemies? "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink." How many friends have you that will divide the contents of their bottle with you? That is the way you can know your enemies. They are instruments in Satan's hand, working your ruin, and the very minute you become a transgressor, by yielding to Satan's temptations, you also become a tempter and begin working for him by tempting others to do evil in the same way your friend tempted you. You never did anything mean in your life but you tried to get some one else to do the same thing. This has been the case since the beginning of time. When Eve yielded to the serpent's temptation and did the very thing God told her not to do, she turned right around and tempted Adam.

Satan uses whisky as a mark to cover the sinfulness of crime. Let him get you under its influence, and he has you where he wants you, he can get you to do low, immoral tricks, that you won't do when sober. Go to the county jail, ask the inmates what put them there, and if they would tell the truth nine times out of ten they say, "whisky."

The use of whisky makes drunkards, idlers, blasphemers, gamblers and murderers; and how many classes of people besides these fill the jails, penitentiaries, and gallows? And remember it don't stop here; there is a hereafter; it at least sends the poor victim's soul to disgrace and torment, to live and burn in that lake of fire forever and ever.

And is this all that the use of whisky does? No! Think of the wounds that are inflicted upon the hearts of mothers, wives and children; think of the homes that are wrecked by it. Boys, you don't know what mother suffers; you don't know how fast you are killing her; if you did, it seems to me you would stop; with your wild, reckless, sinful ways and the careless indifference with which you treat her pleadings and warnings, you are sending her to the grave; and remember, boys, remember, when the grave closes over mother your best friend is gone; mother will stand by and love you when all others have forsaken you; no matter how great your crime, how black your sin, mother will shield you so far as it is in her power. And I beg of you, boys, love and respect your best friend—mother. You will never know her worth until you have to give her up.

Husbands, have you thought of the pain you cause that wife, that should be dearer to you than all else in life, by the intemperate life you are leading? I can tell you some of the horrors that surround the life of a drunkard's wife, better by using the words of one who spoke from experience:

In the midst of a meeting a woman arose And a warning she uttered there; For the girls in the bloom of their beautiful youth

Who are happy, and free and fair. "Oh, girls," she then pleaded: oh heed me well, And listen while I my story tell. Too late I had heard of my wasted life. The terrible fate of a drunkard's wife.

I married a drunkard, dear girls, she exclaimed, And was giddy, and young, and gay, But like the mist in the morning my joys took their flight And thus swiftly they passed away.

I have learned that the crown of all sorrow below, Which will crush and blight the heart, The poor wife of a drunkard is destined to know,

And to writhe and suffer the smart, Though young, behold! my hair is white Made so by the scenes of one sad night.

Oh, the sight! oh the sight! of that terrible night! She exclaimed in an anguished tone, As the scene of the past seemed to rush o'er her sight

As if reason they would do throne, With hands that were pale she hid her face, As if to conceal her deep disgrace.

The delirium tremens! Oh, girls, have you seen? May God spare you the fearful sight Of a husband insane by the demon drink As he staggers towards home at night.

"Oh take them away!" I have heard him scream, It seems like a sad and awful dream.

On that night I was sitting beside my sick boy, And my two little girls at rest, When a feeling of fear that they both were unsafe

Of a sudden my soul possessed; I rushed to their room and on the bed I found them mangled, cold and dead. By the hand of their father they both were slain,

And with knife with their blood still red In the frenzy of drink and madness of shame He still raved with his reason fled.

Oh me he then glared—his wretched wife And then with a thrust he took his life. Then I fell to the floor and was borne from the room,

A wreck since that night I've been; And the boy that was left had passion for drink The sad mark of his father's sin,

It chained him, though young, a hopeless slave, And early he filled a drunkard's grave. I beg of you, girls, as you value your lives,

From the drinker to turn aside, And give heed to no plea, whatever it be Of the drinker to be his bride,

To save from such sorrow as wrecked my life Oh never become a drinker's wife."

There they are; judge for yourself.

WHISKY DEALERS.

The whisky dealers are a class of people that have my prayers; they are men that have hearts as well as you, and they have souls to be saved. They are God's creatures, spending their lives in the service of Satan, who has so blinded them with sin as to make them think there is no harm in it, and that it is as good a way as any of making a living. But do you suppose they know what they are selling, when they sell a barrel of whisky? Do you know?

A barrel of headaches, a barrel of woes; A barrel of curses, a barrel of blows; A barrel of sorrow from a weary, loving wife,

A barrel of care, a barrel of strife; A barrel of hunger, of poison, of pain; A barrel of hopes all blasted and vain;

A barrel of poverty, ruin and blight; A barrel of tears that flow in the night; A barrel of crimes, a barrel of groans;

A barrel of orphans' most pitiful moans; A barrel of serpents that hiss as they pass; And glow from the liquor at the top of the glass;

A barrel of falsehoods, a barrel of cries; That fall from the maniac's lips as he dies.

You know his fate, but what does he leave behind? Listen, I will read his will:

I leave to society a ruined character, a wretched example and a memory that will rot. I leave to my parents as much sorrow as they can in their feeble state bear. I leave to my brothers and sisters as much shame and mortification as I could bring on them. I leave to my wife a broken heart—a life of shame. I leave to each of my children poverty, ignorance, a dishonored name, and the stinging memory that their father fills a drunkard's grave.

Girls, did you know there is a judgment day coming? And did you know that on that day you and I will have to stand before the judgment bar of God and give an account of the life we are leading. God gave us this life and He intended for us to spend it in his service. How many of us are doing this? How many of us are doing what we can to save the fallen men of humanity? Some will say, O I haven't any influence; don't say that, for we all have our influence either for good or evil. When Satan tempted the pair in the Garden of Eden, he tempted the woman first, for he knew if he could get her to yield her influence over the man was so great that, using her as a tempter he could easily get the man to sin. And I must say this world today, to a great extent, is what the women have made it. We girls are to blame, to a great extent, for their being so many drinkers among the young men of this community. A sinful, wicked woman in the hands of Satan, using her influence for his cause, can drag a man down to ruin quicker than anything under the sun. Had you thought of that? Its as true as you live.

And now, girls, let us go to work and do what we can to save the drinkers of this neighborhood. Let them know we are anxious to have their souls saved. If we are not right, let us first get right with God, and then live right, and always take God's love as our motive power, and with that seek to save the drinkers. For when the true principles of temperance are established in early life, and made the controlling power through life they insure health, freedom from pain, honor, virtue, usefulness and happiness, all for which a true man lives or hopes for in this life. Happy would it be if they were general and every youth would put them in practice. Then would religion assert her mild and gentle sway, peace plant her olive wreath in every nation, wisdom, divine and time honored, shed everywhere here glorious light; a race of men and women, full of rosy health, strong, active, symmetrical beautiful as the artist's mould; pure, virtuous, wise, affectionate, full of honor and lofty principles, would grow up into communities and nations, and the earth would bloom and rejoice with more than Eden gladness. So girls, let's say with God's help we will establish these principles, so far as it is in our power.

May God take you all out of this city of Gomorrah's wickedness; may He take you out of this serpent's arms, out of this sea of evil and regenerate you all in your full manhood in my prayer.

This address was delivered by Miss Linnie Nunn at Repton Sunday school.

A CARD.

TO THE VOTERS OF CRITTENDEN COUNTY:

At the solicitation of many friends of the various political parties, and having received the nomination of my party without opposition, I take pleasure in announcing that I am a candidate for re-election to the office of county clerk, and hope that you will give my claims due consideration, and any and all favors shown me in this matter will be duly and kindly appreciated; and if re-elected I promise a faithful and impartial discharge of the duties of said office, as I have ever tried to do in the past; and permit me to return you my heartfelt thanks for your many acts of kindness extended me, and for the confidence reposed in me as your public servant and friend in the by gone years, and during all of which time I have endeavored to be faithful to the trusts confided to me, in the discharge of all of my official duties required by law, but how far short I have come, you are to be the judges; and knowing that your judgment will be just, I submit my entire case with you, and whatever decision you may render next November, will be cheerfully accepted by me, Respectfully yours,

D. Woods, Co. Clerk.

It Happened in a Drug Store

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, New York. She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine, and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the Remedy." For sale by H. K. Woods & Co.

Illinois Central Railroad Co.

NOTICE TO STOCKHOLDERS.

The Board of Directors of the Illinois Central Railroad Company at a meeting held July 18, 1900 adopted the following preamble and resolution:

Upon the recommendation of the President the resolution adopted July 21, 1897, authorizing the free transportation of stockholders over the Company's lines, to Chicago and return, at the time of the annual meeting of stockholders, was reconsidered and amended so as to read as follows:

Resolved: That until the further order of this Board, there may be issued to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered on the books of the company, a ticket enabling him or her to travel free over the company's lines from the station on the Illinois Central Railroad nearest to his or her registered address, to Chicago and return, for the purpose of attending in person the meeting of the stockholders. Such ticket to be good for the journey to Chicago only during the four days immediately preceding, and the days of the meeting, and for the return journey from Chicago only on the day of meeting and the four days immediately following, when properly countersigned and stamped during business hours—that is to say, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.—in the office of the Assistant Secretary, Mr. W. G. Bruen, in Chicago. Such ticket may be obtained by any registered holder of stock on application in writing to the President of the Company in Chicago. Each application must state the full name and address of the stockholder exactly as given in his or her certificate of stock, together with the number and date of such certificate. No more than one person will be carried free in respect to any one holding of stock as registered on the books of the company.

By order of the Board of Directors. A. G. HACKSTAFF, Sec'y.

The next annual meeting of the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company will be held at the office of the company in Chicago, Wednesday, October 16, 1901, at noon. For the purpose of this meeting, the stock transfer books will be closed from the close of business on Sept. 21, to the morning of Oct. 17.

THE RULES

That Govern Our Voting Contest to Determine the Most Popular Young Lady in Crittenden and Livingston Counties.

(1) Every young lady residing in Crittenden and Livingston counties is eligible to enter the contest. No married ladies can enter the contest.

(2) Every $1.00 paid on subscription to the Press entitles the subscriber to four votes in the contest. Every 25 cent subscription entitles the subscriber to one vote.

(3) A contestant must reside in either Crittenden or Livingston county. The voter may reside anywhere in the United States.

(4) No restrictions are placed on the voter, except that all votes must be cast on ballots provided by THE PRESS for use in said contest.

(5) The voter may pay all of his arrearages, and may pay his subscription as many years in advance as he may desire, and for each dollar so paid, receive a ticket entitling the holder to four votes in the contest.

(6) As received the ballots will be placed in a locked box kept in the Press office for that purpose. This box will be opened every Wednesday morning, and the ballots counted. The next day's issue of the Press will contain the standing of each candidate. The report will appear each week.

(7) The last count before the close of the contest will be made on WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 18th. The ballot-box will then be locked, the key given to some reputable citizen for safe keeping, and the box remain unopened until the close.

(8) The contest will be closed at 4 o'clock TUESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 24th.

(9) Immediately after the close a committee of three reputable and disinterested citizens will take charge of the ballot-box, open and count the ballots, and determine the winner in the contest.

(10) The contest will be conducted in a most impartial manner and these rules will be strictly observed. Those interested should read them carefully.

Stung by a Centipede.

Mrs. Thomas Saunders, Bluffton, Tex was stung by a centipede. A doctor was sent for but before he arrived some sensible friend sent her a piece of brown paper with Morley's Wonderful Eight and applied it to the wound. The doctor said his services were not needed for the poison was neutralized or killed by the Wonderful Eight. Mrs S. did not suffer from the wound. Sold by H. K. Woods & Co.

THE POWERS TRIAL.

New and Sensational Evidence Introduced.

The second trial of Caleb Powers, charged with complicity in the murder of Gov. Goebel is still in progress at Georgetown. The Commonwealth rested its case Saturday. The witnesses for the defense are now being examined.

Sensational testimony was introduced in the trial of Caleb Powers last week. One after another were presented witnesses who laid bare to the jury in a more concise and connected form than any of the previous trials, the details of the conspiracy alleged. W. H. Culton told of early plotting and of plans to start a general shooting in the Senate chamber, in which Goebel and other Democrats were to be killed, but this was called off by Charles Finley on the day decided upon. Finley said: "Culton, don't start the trouble today. Gen Duke says other arrangements have been made to settle the matter."

Former Chief Justice Hazlerigg testified that Leander Guffy, son of Justice Guffy, warned him at 10 o'clock on the day Goebel was shot that "the boys had decided the night before to kill him" (Hazlerigg.) Sherman Stivers, who was a Republican assistant postmaster at Paris, testified that Postmaster John L. Bosley, had told him on his return from Frankfort four days before the assassination that "we have arranged to raid the Kentucky Senate tomorrow," and that Goebel, among others, would be killed, and that five trusted men had been secured to do the work. The next day Bosley told him the plan was abandoned because the presence of deputy sheriffs made it impossible to get the men in the chamber, and that "we have arranged another plan." Sherman Stivers was corroborated by his brother Rufus, also an employee of the Paris postoffice and a friend of Bosley. The testimony adduced implicated all the men under indictment and others.

Powers was upon the witness stand to testify in his own behalf. He was not subject to questions but was permitted to tell his own story, which he did in an earnest and deliberate way. He admitted attending the various meetings mentioned by Golden and Culton, but denied making the murderous statements and predictions of which he is accused by these and other witnesses. He also denied that Youtsey obtained a key to his office from either himself or his brother.

The trial progressed more rapidly yesterday and there is some prospect that it will be finished Powers finished his examination in chief, and was then subjected to a long cross-examination, in which several new points were brought out. Powers this time admitted it was possible that the shot might have been fired from his office and that duplicate keys to the door might have been made; and he would not deny positively that he had given Youtsey a key, though he was inclined to the belief that he had not.

Eat What You Like.

When you take Morley's Liver and Kidney Cordial, for then dyspepsia, indigestion, heartburn, foul breath, dizziness and the long train of similar troubles will disappear, and your cleansed and awakened system will demand its food. Sound digestion and sound appetite go together, and both follow the use of this tried remedy. For sale by H. K. Woods & Co.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is a food medicine for the baby that is thin and not well nourished and for the mother whose milk does not nourish the baby.

It is equally good for the boy or girl who is thin and pale and not well nourished by their food; also for the anemic or consumptive adult that is losing flesh and strength.

In fact, for all conditions of wasting, it is the food medicine that will nourish and build up the body and give new life and energy when all other means fail.

Should be taken in summer as well as winter.

THE RULES

That Govern Our Voting Contest to Determine the Most Popular Young Lady in Crittenden and Livingston Counties.

(1) Every young lady residing in Crittenden and Livingston counties is eligible to enter the contest. No married ladies can enter the contest.

(2) Every $1.00 paid on subscription to the Press entitles the subscriber to four votes in the contest. Every 25 cent subscription entitles the subscriber to one vote.

(3) A contestant must reside in either Crittenden or Livingston county. The voter may reside anywhere in the United States.

(4) No restrictions are placed on the voter, except that all votes must be cast on ballots provided by THE PRESS for use in said contest.

(5) The voter may pay all of his ar-rears, and may pay his subscription as many years in advance as he may de-sire, and for each dollar so paid, receive a ticket entitling the holder to four votes in the contest.

(6) As received the ballots will be placed in a locked box kept in the Press office for that purpose. This box will be opened every Wednesday morning, and the ballots counted. The next day's is-sue of the Press will contain the stand-ing of each candidate. The report will appear each week.

(7) The last count before the close of the contest will be made on WEDNES-DAY, DECEMBER 18TH. The ballot-box will then be locked, the key given to some reputable citizen for safe keeping, and the box remain unopened until the close.

(8) The contest will be closed at 4 o'clock TUESDAY EVENING, DE-CEMBER 24TH.

(9) Immediately after the close a committee of three reputable and dis-in-terested citizens will take charge of the ballot-box, open and count the ballots, and determine the winner in the contest.

(10) The contest will be conducted in a most impartial manner and these rules will be strictly observed. Those inter-ested should read them carefully.

Stung by a Centipede.

Mrs. Thomas Saunders, Bluffton, Tex was stung by a centipede. A doctor was sent for but before he arrived some sen-sible friend wet a piece of brown paper with Morley's Wonderful Eight and ap-plied it to the wound. The doctor said his services were not needed for the poi-son was neutralized or killed by the Won-derful Eight. Mrs. S. did not suffer from the wound. Sold by H. K. Woods & Co.

THE POWERS TRIAL.

New and Sensational Evidence Introduced.

The second trial of Caleb Pow-ers, charged with complicity in the murder of Gov. Goebel is still in progress at Georgetown. The Commonwealth rested its case Sat-urday. The witnesses for the de-fense are now being examined.

Sensational testimony was intro-duced in the trial of Caleb Pow-ers last week. One after another were presented witnesses who laid bare to the jury in a more concise and connected form than any of the previous trials, the details of the conspiracy alleged. W. H. Culton told of early plotting and of plans to start a general shooting in the Senate chamber, in which Goebel and other Democrats were to be killed, but this was called off by Charles Finley on the day de-cided upon. Finley said: "Culton, don't start the trouble today. Gen Duke says other arrangements have been made to settle the mat-ter." Former Chief Justice Haz-lerigg testified that Leander Gul-fy, son of Justice Guffy, warned him at 10 o'clock on the day Goebel was shot that "the boys had decided the night before to kill him" (Hazlerigg.) Sherman Sti-vers, who was a Republican as-sistant postmaster at Paris, testi-fied that Postmaster John L. Bos-ley, had told him on his return from Frankfort four days before the assassination that "we have arranged to raid the Kentucky Sen-ate tomorrow," and that Goebel, among others, would be killed, and that five trusted men had been secured to do the work. The next day Bosley told him the plan was abandoned because the presence of deputy sheriffs made it impos-sible to get the men in the cham-ber, and that "we have arranged another plan." Sherman Stivers was corroborated by his brother Rufus, also an employe of the Paris postoffice and a friend of Bosley. The testimony adduced implicated all the men under in-dictment and others.

Powers was upon the witness stand to testify in his own behalf. He was not subject to questions but was permitted to tell his own story, which he did in an earnest and deliberate way. He admitted attending the various meetings mentioned by Golden and Culton, but denied making the murderous statements and predictions of which he is accused by these and other witnesses. He also denied that Youtsey obtained a key to his office from either himself or his brother.

The trial progressed more rap-idly yesterday and there is some prospect that it will be finished. Powers finished his examination in chief, and was then subjected to a long cross-examination, in which several new points were brought out. Powers this time admitted it was possible that the shot might have been fired from his office and that duplicate keys to the door might have been made; and he would not deny positively that he had given Youtsey a key, though he was inclined to the belief that he had not.

Eat What You Like.

When you take Morley's Liver and Kidney Cordial, for then dyspepsia, in-digestion, heartburn, foul breath, dizal-ness and the long train of similar trou-bles will disappear, and your cleansed and awakened system will demand its food. Sound digestion and sound appetite go together, and both follow the use of this time tried remedy. For sale by H. K. Woods & Co.
