The government has withdrawn its application for the extradition of Dr. Krause, and asks his trial in England on the charge of high treason and incitement to murder.

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 22.—The Ft. Worth Brewery, at Austin, this afternoon pleaded guilty to the charge of violating the anti-trust law and was fined $5,000. The other accused brewers will do the same, but will be fined in proportion to their accrued penalties.

It is stated that the Secretary of War will deal leniently in the case of Lieut. Preston Brown, of Ky., in accordance with the wishes of Gen. Chaffee. Brown was convicted by military court-martial of killing a Filipino pacifico, and sentenced to dismissal from the army.

Telluride, Col., Nov. 21.—Nearly one hundred miners were suffocated in the Smugler union mine as the result of a fire which consumed the buildings at the mouth of the bullion tunnel.

Twenty-two miners are known to be dead and scores of others are known to be in the mine, either suffocated or seeking safety in remote parts of the mine, until the place is cleared of foul gases and smoke.

Peru, Ind., Nov. 24.—The winter quarters of Wallace's show, where the animals are kept, was burned today. The fire started in the elephant house, a barn like structure, and spread rapidly. The animals became panic-stricken and their cries of terror mingled with the shouts of trainers and employees, trying to drive them out of danger. The animals were all safely removed but the structure was entirely destroyed.

IS LIFE WORTH LIVING.

Sleeplessness, debility, nervousness and pallidation of the heart are not diseases; they are symptoms indicating that the various vital organs are not working in harmony. Morley's Liver and Kidney Cordial restores order and rids the body of all waste products that clog the system. It insures sound digestion, sound nerves and sound sleep. At H. K. Woods & Co's.

KENTUCKY AFFAIRS.

John S. Rhea has filed his brief with the clerk of the House of Representatives, and will contest the right of McKenzie Moss to a seat in Congress.

The union miners in Hopkins county are defiant in their attitude and say they will not obey Judge Hall's order to disperse.

Mrs. Thomas F. Lane, youngest daughter of Senator Jo Blackburn, will wed Chivalier Trentanove, the Italian sculptor, December 17.

Reuben Quinn, the condemned negro murderer of Danville, refuses to have his photograph taken, and says he will not do so for less than $100.

Mrs. Agnes Evans, who lives two miles from Owensboro was fatally burned last week. She was burning some leaves in the yard when her dress caught fire. Her clothing was nearly all burned from her body. She was prominently connected.

The Court of Appeals, in an opinion written by Judge Guffey, decided the case of Judge Clifton J. Pratt vs. Judge Robert Breckinridge, involving the Attorney General's office, in favor of Pratt. The lower court, which decided against Pratt, was reversed. The three Democratic Judges dissented.

Notice to Tax-Payers.

To the tax-payers of Crittenden county who owe me taxes for 1898, 1899, 1900 and 1901. I am going out of office in a few days, and have to settle with the State and county in full, and to do that I will have to collect the outstanding taxes. I am not going to wait any longer for back taxes; necessity compels me to collect. The penalty will be added the first day of Dec., 1901, on all unpaid taxes. This Nov. 19th, 1901.

FOR SWEET CHARITY.

The Victim of an Accident Generously Provided For.

Mr. Dozier Hill, the young man who lost both hands while operating a corn shredder, is in a helpless condition. A wife and little children are looking to him for support, and now he has been deprived of the laboring man's fortune—strong arms, active hands. How can he meet their wants? Crippled as he is how can he contend with the trials that confront us on life's rugged and perilous road? Can we help him? Shall we let a fellow creature suffer when with little sacrifice we can somewhat brighten his life? The Press has discussed the matter with some of our local citizens, and we have decided to make an appeal in charity's name. Every man in Crittenden county can give something toward making life less burdensome for this unfortunate man. By popular subscription we intend to raise funds sufficient to purchase Mr. Hill a little home. The subscriptions will be received at the Press office and at Mr. R. F. Haynes' drug store. The contributions will be deposited in the banks to the credit of the "Hill Home Fund." Let every one help. "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you." You who are more fortunate, you who know not the sorrows of a great affliction, help this unfortunate man and you will be happier.

E. J. Hayward, P. S. Maxwell and John W. Blue as a committee, will have charge of the funds and will make the investment in suitable property.

LIVINGSTON COUNTY.

Well Known Citizen Dead—May Loose an Eye.

(From the Banner).

Mr. Benjamin B. Jameson, one of the best known citizens of Livingston county, died at the residence of Dr. Furnish, in Birdsville Sunday and was buried Monday.

Dr. F. G. LaRue, while out hunting last Friday, happened to an accident which may cost him the loss of an eye. In jumping from a log a thorn or sharp weed pierced the ball of his left eye, which caused him great pain, and, it is feared, destroyed the eye.

The Livingston County Farmers Club will hold its third meeting on Saturday, Nov. 30th, at Hampton. The meeting is called by President Geo. N. McGrew, for the purpose of completing the program of the recent Farmers Institute, which was rained out before its work was completed.

A PHYSICIAN TESTIFIES.

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that this did," says county physician Geo. W. Scroggs, of Hall county, Ga. "Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." If the food you eat remains indigested in your stomach it decays there and poisons the system; you can prevent this by dieting but that will mean starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat so you need suffer from neither dyspepsia or starvation. The worst cases quickly cured. It never fails. At R. F. Haynes.

Dangerous Vaccination.

EDITOR CRITTENDEN PRESS:

At Camden, New Jersey, last week, three children died from lockjaw, caused by being vaccinated with poisonous vaccine matter. There are so many of these poisoned vaccine points now in use that it has become almost as dangerous to be vaccinated as it is to have the latter day "smallpox"; in fact we had rather risk the so-called "smallpox" than the vaccination. The large demand for these points of late years has doubtless flooded the market with a spurious and dangerous article. Some forty years ago, when the genuine "black smallpox" was raging throughout the country, I took the disease in St. Louis and was immediately hurried off to Quarantine Island, a few miles below the city, where I was quarantined for thirty days. Having been vaccinated with pure virus when a small boy, my case was only a mild type of varioloid. There were some 150 cases of smallpox on the island and I embraced the opportunity to study the disease in all its different phases—from the time the first red pimples appear on the face until the entire body was a mass of corruption, from the crown of the head to the soles of the feet. I also saw in Union county, a year or two ago, several cases of the disease now prevalent in this State, and the disease has but few peculiarities analogous to the genuine black smallpox I saw on Quarantine Island. And there is also a slight difference in mortality. At Quarantine Island the death rate while I was there was fully forty per cent. I have heard of no deaths from the disease in this part of the State, although hundreds of cases have been reported. Probably the article we have among us is a mild form of the disease, which fails to vitiate the entire system, and refuses to result fatally. But far be it from me to say it is not smallpox. The proper authorities have so pronounced it and taken the necessary measure to prevent its spread. Yet for the life of me I can not help but regard it as being so far a very mild and inoffensive kind of smallpox.

BOB TAYLOR.

Relates an Amusing Experience with the Late President McKinley.

Ex-Governor Robert L. Taylor knew William McKinley personally. They served in the Forty-sixth Congress together and met several times in after years to renew their acquaintance and to forge the ties of friendship; when the President was shot Mr. Taylor was personally grieved. No higher eulogy was ever passed on a man than that which "The Merry Governor" of Tennessee passed upon his dead friend.

Tuesday night Governor Taylor was telling a party of friends an amusing incident which occurred at one point where his career and that of the dead president met.

"I served in the Forty-sixth Congress with Major McKinley," said the Governor, and knew him very well. Later on I met him and we renewed our friendship at the Tennessee Centennial in 1897, at which time I was governor of the State.

"When the Spanish-American war broke out there was so much beating of drums and marching of soldiers that I became imbued with the military spirit. It grew on me as the war progressed and I finally came to the conclusion that I was a born soldier, a military genius, a leader. So when President McKinley announced that he would appoint several brigadier generals I thought he almost singled me out for one of them. I consulted with some of my friends and they thought the President must be hinting to me to come to the front and get some shoulder straps. I could hear the drums and see old glory floating everywhere, and I was wild to be a soldier and ride a splendid horse over the bloody ground.

"At last I could stand it no longer. I went to Washington to see the President. He at once agreed to an audience with me. I was so ashamed I had not come sooner to offer my services to the country in peril. I was afraid the President would not like it. But I don't think I ever saw a better pleased man in my life, and I have seen some few fellows in a capital good humor in my time.

"Such a cordial grasp of the hand and such kindly reception I don't think I ever had from a man that didn't want an office from me. I thought he had divined my intentions and was delighted to know I had come out to serve my country in my natural capacity—war. He must have noticed my military appearance, but there was nothing stiff or formal in his reception. He met me just like the cheerful boy he was twenty-five years before in Congress. But it did not break through my military dignity. As soon as I entered the room I reared back and assumed a military air that would have jarred even the Iron Duke.

"I don't suppose anyone ever thought McKinley a great actor, but I think he was the greatest I ever met. I was not long in telling him I wanted to be made into a brigadier general so I could lead my brave and loyal Tennessee troops to the front. I will never forget the smile he gave me and the expression of extreme delight that came into his eyes when he put his hand on my shoulder like a father and said in a voice of the greatest solicitude:

"Governor, I'm afraid you might get killed."

"We both laughed, and my military spirit was gone."—Knoxville Sentinel.

HE NEEDED MEDICINE.

But Not the Sort the Drummer Proposed to Give Him.

A well known drug drummer who was paying his regular holiday visit to New Orleans took the train for a little side trip to Baton Rouge and in the hurry of his departure left a handsome bone handled umbrella hanging on a hook in the lobby of the hotel.

It was a tempting prize, but probably every kleptomaniac who saw it supposed the owner was seated near at hand. At any rate, it remained undisturbed and was still there when the drummer returned.

"By the way," he remarked after he had exchanged greetings with the clerk, "I've managed somehow to lose my new bone handled umbrella. Have any of you seen such a thing lying around the office?"

A quick witted bellboy heard the question and, glancing around, saw the missing article hanging within a foot of his head. Supposing it had been there for only a few moments, he promptly grasped the ferrule.

"Is this the one?" he inquired.

"Yes," exclaimed the traveler, delighted, "and I must say I'm surprised nobody has nipped it!"

"Aw, they couldn't do that," replied the bellboy. "I've been holding on to it for ye ever since ye hung it up."

The drug drummer stopped with his hand half way down his pocket, and a whimsical smile overspread his countenance.

"Well," he said slowly, "I was intending to give you half a dollar, but if you've been holding that umbrella for three consecutive days you're more in need of a tonic. Here is a capsule of quinine and iron."

The gloom which settled down upon the bell boy might have been news with an ax.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

According to records recently discovered, the first ironclad was built in the sixteenth century, but as it proved unmanageable was abandoned. In the present century people are trying this medicine and that one in the hope of finding relief from ailments of the stomach, liver and bowels. There is only one medicine that will cure indigestion, dyspepsia, flatulency, biliousness and malaria, fever and ague, and that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Try it and you will be convinced.

Recalls Famous Cures.
Small doses of fine, dry sand are the latest fad "remedy" for dyspepsia. Some how this specific recalls the remark of a distinguished American that six feet of gravel is the only cure for hay fever.—Norfolk Reflector.

and the constantly increasing demand for and steady growth in popularity of St. Jacobs Oil among all classes of people in every part of the civilized world, show conclusively what remedy the people use for their Rheumatism and bodily aches and pains. Facts speak louder than words, and the fact remains undisputed that the sale of St. Jacobs Oil is greater than all other remedies for outward application combined. It acts like magic, cures where everything else fails, conquers pain.

From Experience.

Don't Pay for Another's Dinner.
"Order what you want; pay for what you order," is the unique way in which the Lackawanna Railroad is advertising its new dining-car service. The aptness of the phrase is apparent when it is understood that the traveler may order from the most complete menu, and yet pay for nothing he does not want. In addition, low-priced club meals are served individually from 35 cents to $1.00, so that table d'hôte and à la carte features are virtually combined. All through trains to Buffalo, Chicago and St. Louis are equipped with dining-cars, and the service is admitted to be second to none in the world.

DEWEY'S REBUKE.

Presented a New York Nabob with a Splinter from the Pensacola as a Souvenir.

Though Admiral Dewey is a model of patience and considerate politeness, he can be peremptory and cuttingly ironical when occasion calls. His friends recall an interesting incident illustrative of these traits. It took place in 1875 when he was commander of the Pensacola of the European squadron, says the Philadelphia Post. His vessel visited a Mediterranean port which has seen few American war ships since the war with Tripoli. As the Pensacola needed sprucing up, Commodore Dewey gave orders that no visitors be allowed on board until noon of the next day.

It happened that a New York nabob was in the harbor with his yacht. In his launch he made for the Pensacola without delay, but was refused permission to board by the deck officer.

"No visitors will be received until noon to-morrow," the millionaire was informed.
"But you must let me on now," the nabob urged. "I am Mr. So-and-so, you know," mentioning his charmed name. "I pay more taxes in America than any other two men, and, in fact, I own half the United States navy."

"Let him up," came an order from the commander.

The man of millions clambered aboard and was met by Dewey.

"I heard your remark that you owned half of the United States navy," said the commander; and then, stooping, he cut with his knife a sliver of wood from the deck and handed it to the boastful visitor.

"Take this souvenir of the Pensacola and keep it," remarked the commander. "It is yours; it is all you have ever owned or ever will own of the navy of the United States. Shall be glad to see you with other visitors any time after the noon hour to-morrow."

So saying, Dewey turned and walked aft, and a crestfallen Croesus crept back to his launch.

The Returns from Pembina.
President Cleveland once asked Bishop Whipple what would be the effect of making the Indians voters. Then Bishop Whipple told him that it had been tried, and after listening to the story President Cleveland gave up the idea.

In Dakota territorial days a law was passed allowing Indians wearing civilized dress to vote. In the following election, when both sides were claiming the victory, some one said: "Wait until you hear from Pembina." In Pembina lived a large number of the Pembina tribe of Indians, and there also dwelt the local political boss, "Jud" La Moure, famed for his seal-skin overcoat and his qualities as a political fighter. When the returns came in from Pembina it was found that the members of the tribe had all been put into hickory shirts and trousers on election day, between sunrise and sunset, and after exercising the inalienable rights of citizenship, at the dictation of the local boss, they returned again to their blankets, having decided the territorial election.—Boston Transcript.

WALTER WALKER, Manager.
ONE YEAR - ONE DOLLAR

Of course numerous sensational stories will go out about the prevalence of smallpox in our city. That the situation will be greatly exaggerated goes without saying. The most effective and most reliable reply to all of these is the card of Dr J. D. McCormack, published in this paper. Dr. McCormack is the State health officer; he has no more interest in our locality than another, and always takes the most stringent steps possible to protect the people and prevent the spread of the disease. After a thorough personal examination he says the people may come to Marion to transact business in "perfect safety."

Every man, woman and child in the territory named should submit to the order of vaccination issued by the lawfully constituted authorities. There is no use in quibbling whether the two persons in quarantine in town have the small pox or not; no matter whether it is briar scratches or bubonic plague, so far as obeying the law is concerned. As Dr. McCormack says, it has been officially declared smallpox and the only thing to do is to pursue the most effective course known to the medical world to prevent these recurring attacks—submit to vaccination. To rebel against this is to set yourself up against the intelligence of the age and to fight the men and the profession you do trust and must trust your life with in all other ailments the human flesh is heir to.

Watterson's Lecture.

Hon Henry Watterson delivered his famous lecture, "Money and Morals," to a large audience at the opera house Tuesday night. Everybody was delighted with the great editor's lecture. It is full of thought and is permeated with the broadest spirit of patriotism. No thoughtful man can hear the lecture and fail to have a higher appreciation of this country, a clearer conception of its greatness and a greater veneration for one of its great men—Watterson.

More Zinc.

We learn that a good vein of carbonate of zinc was uncovered last Friday south of Hampton, by a company of which Mr. Bostwick is President.

WORK FINISHED.

The Drillers Have Completed
Their Line of Wells.

The crew of hands that has been at work with well drills in the Ohio river and on R. N. Walker's farm adjacent thereto, completed their undertaking last week, and the machinery is being removed. Twenty wells were drilled in depths ranging from 60 to 100 ft., and according to report good rock bottom was found at every point where the drill went down. This work has been done by the I. C. railroad, and the building of a bridge across the Ohio at that point, it is supposed, has been and is contemplated. Neither the company nor the men engaged in the work have been communicative about the work nor the object in view, and it is not likely that the report of the engineer to his company will be made public. Hence all the information obtainable as to the ultimate result of these three months labor is based principally upon conjecture and surmise.

The company evidently entertained some idea of building a railroad along the line surveyed, as several thousand dollars have been spent in this work, but whether that was the main object or not we are left to guess.

C. P. Church.

There will be services at C. P. church next Sunday at the usual hour. I hope every member of the church will be present. Every one is cordially invited to attend.

I had a good meeting at Mount Olivet, near Bowling Green. We had 17 professions of faith, 11 accessions, and the church wonderfully revived.

I am now in a meeting at Shiloh, in Webster county. The meeting has been in progress ten days. We have had 39 professions and 22 accessions to the church.

I have been in meetings, including Presbytery and Synod, for 72 days. The Lord has given me 120 professions of faith in Christ and nearly 70 additions to the church. Pray for me.

URIAH ALSOBROOK,

A Prominent Citizen of Hampton
Dies Suddenly.

Mr. Uriah Alsobrook, one of the best known men in Livingston county, was found dead in his bed Sunday night. He was the hotel keeper at Hampton. He retired in his usual good health early on Sunday night; late in the night his wife found him dead. He had apparently passed away without a struggle.

The Hill Home.

The effort to raise money to buy a home for Mr Hill, who lost both hands in a corn shredder, is meeting with general approbation and subscriptions are coming in from all sides. There never was a more worthy undertaking and those who have not already contributed will certainly find it in their hearts to do so at an early date. The victim of the accident is, or was, an industrious, honorable man, who earned a living for his wife and little ones by the honest sweat of his face. Deprived of both hands, the mainstay of the little family is gone. Could the people do a nobler thing than provide a home? Did a more christian-like impulse ever move the human heart than that which responds to an appeal of this kind? No big sum is asked, but contribute according to the measure with which God's goodness and mercy have been meted to you.

To Non-Resident Patrons.

Of course you have heard that Marion has smallpox. I want to emphatically state that Marion has the few cases under strict control, and there is no more fear of this disease here—nor is there need to be—than if it were no closer than St. Louis.

The school will go right on; rest assured that if the slightest danger arises to your children in this matter I would act quicker than you perhaps for their safety.

There is no quarantine and will be none. Vaccination will, and should be resorted to by every one. Hoping no patron having children in my school will become needlessly alarmed, and that they may leave to me when the alarm should be sounded.

I am, sincerely,

Charles Evans,
Sup't of School.

E. church officiating. Miss Dunnican is well and favorably known to the Charleston people. She is a graduate of Belmont college of Nashville, Tenn., and has visited Charleston often during her vacation.

"Mr. Moore is manager of the telephone exchange at Marion, Ky. The wedding was witnessed only by the relatives and a few intimate friends of the family, and quite a number of them accompanied the happy couple as far as Cairo, Ill., where Mrs. J. H. Moore entertained the party to a sumptuous dinner at the Halliday after which they saw them safely on the train for their honeymoon. Amid showers of rice and the bon voyages of their friends the happy couple went merrily on their journey of life."

The bridal party reached Marion Friday afternoon, and were greeted by their many friends with generous congratulations.

Jackson---Terry.

On Wednesday evening of last week, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Milton Terry, Mr. W. H. Jackson and Miss Minnie Terry were united in marriage, Rev. T. V. Joiner officiating.

A large number of friends witnessed the happy union. After the impressive ceremony the guests were invited to the dining room where an elegant repast was served.

The bride and groom left for his home in Oklahoma Saturday, and the young couple have the best wishes of a large circle of friends.

"My wife had a deep-seated cough for three years. I purchased two bottles of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, large size, and it cured her completely."

J. H. Burge, Macon, Col.

Probably you know of cough medicines that relieve little coughs, all coughs, except deep ones! The medicine that has been curing the worst of deep coughs for sixty years is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

The State Health Officer Says People Can Come To Town With Perfect Safety.

In view of the fact that all but two of the cases of small pox in Crittenden county are in the country, on or near the Salem road and that the two cases in Marion are outside of the business part of the town, and have been placed in rigid quarantine, I hereby officially advise the people of Crittenden county THAT THEY CAN GO TO MARION FOR THE TRANSACTION OF BUSINESS IN PERFECT SAFETY.

I make this statement after a careful personal investigation.

Church Notes.

Rev. Eli Eaton has just closed a twelve days meeting at Lola. There were five professions and one addition by baptism. Three years ago Rev. Eaton was sent by the Board to Lola. He organized a church of seventeen members, built and paid for the house, and now has a church of fifty members. He has tendered his resignation as pastor.

Rev. Price was in a meeting at Shiloh, in Webster county, last week.

Disgraceful Conduct.

A report reaches here that a crowd of young rowdies went to Emmaus church Sunday night and broke up the services. They went into the house swearing and abusing everybody, in a most disgraceful and shameful manner. Even the minister did not escape their imprecations. They attacked one young man, Al Kirk, and severely stabbed him with a pocket knife. An attempt was made to arrest them by a number of peaceable citizens present, but the rowdies defied them and were strong enough in numbers to have things their own way.

Small-Pox.

Marion, Ky., Nov. 26, 1901.

To the People—
We have small-pox and a number of persons have been exposed. The disease is in the country west of town and two cases in town. It so happens that this outbreak is among intelligent white people, and we expect intelligent co-operation in our efforts to stamp it out. Call it what you please; it is a loathsome disease that nobody wants, and the sooner it can be checked the better.
All persons who have disease, or have been exposed to it, are placed under quarantine and positively forbidden to leave the infected premises, or allow others to enter same under penalty.

Parents, guardians, heads of families and physicians are required to report all suspicious cases, within twenty-four hours, to the health authorities.
In consequence of this prevalence of small pox it is hereby ordered that every person living within the Marion, Oak Grove and Cisco Chapel school districts who has not been successfully vaccinated within the past 3 years be vaccinated at three places before next Monday noon, and that all physicians performing vaccinations within said limits be requested and instructed to furnish this board with a list of all persons vaccinated by them—a separate list being kept of indigent persons for presentation to the Fiscal Court, and that all physicians in Marion are requested to assist in pressing the work of vaccination.

The Board of Health is gratified to announce that it has the hearty co-operation of the people and by reason of this the two cases in town are effectually quarantined and the people can with perfect safety come to Marion for the transaction of any business.

W. J. J. PARIS,
Secretary Board of Health.

THE BOGEY.

I'd like to know what's round to make
The floors go "creak" at night,
So, suddenly, I'm wide awake
And stare with all my might.
I sort of "speak" it's looking out
To get some little tad—
A tad the size of me, about—
Because that he's been bad!

And first I hear it in the hall,
With "creaky, creaky, creak"—
Ma'd come, you bet, if I should call,
But I'm afraid to speak!
And then it's in the room—and then
It's coming at the bed!
I pray: "Please help me, God—amen."
And cover up my head.

I think of all the things I did
I hadn't ought to do,
And wonder if perhaps I'm hid,
Or if it sees right through.
And, Oh! I promise, hope to die,
A hundred times, or more,
I'll be a better boy than I
Have ever been before.

I don't even strike a match
To see if it is there—
For if I move it's close to catch
My legs or arms or hair!
And how I wish for morning light!
I don't care what you say,
But something sneaks about by night
That isn't round by day!

The Lady or the Gospel

By GEORGE BEARDSLEY.

(Copyrighted by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"THERE is a girl I could love—I'll bet I could. And I'll bet I never saw another girl in all my life that I really could love, though I've thought I've had many a time."

It was Silver T. Sly, the young gambler-bachelor editor of the Platteville News, who silently formulated the foregoing propositions. He sat in church, in the back row. The girl, with a blue ribbon tied exquisitely round her throat, was at the little organ playing "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

"These meetings," said the fat preacher, "will continue for two weeks, God willing, and we have great hopes that many of you who have come to-night as strangers and our guests will be moved to come again and again, and that before the end of the series you will come as one with us. We hope this crystalline February weather will continue, that we may make hay for the Lord and His Gospel, that the spirit of the community may experience a new birth, and that righteousness may run down our streets. We will sing 'Onward, Christian Soldiers,' and those who do not care to remain for the after service may pass out during the singing."

The little editor lingered, his eyes upon the organist, until the final verse. Then he heard his name whispered from behind:

"Sly, come along to Ep's."

It was Doc Gray's voice, and the editor slipped out of the pew and joined his pals.

"What'd you think of the preacher, Silver?" asked one. The new editor was so short and slight that the boys had transposed two letters in his name and dubbed him Silver.

"The preacher?" echoed the editor, absently. Truth to tell, he had not followed two consecutive sentences of the exhortation. He made an equivocal answer:

"Must have been good," said he; "seemed awfully short."

"Short! Why, we thought he'd decided to preach the week out at a sittin'. It's one o'clock."

Silver Sly was desperate to find out the name of the little organist and all about her. But he thought not for an instant of asking that crowd. He felt an impulse to slip away from them, and started off, declaring he had some writing to do. They knew that was improbable; he had never before hesitated to join their Sunday game in the three weeks since he came to Platteville.

"What's the matter with you, Silver?" cried one, impatiently.

"Don't pike on the procession, old man," said Doc, the editor's best friend.

Sly reluctantly yielded. All that glorious afternoon and nearly all that moonlight night the five young fellows sat round the table at Epanetries, with hats drawn down over tense, inscrutable faces, playing poker.

Monday evening they all went to the revival meeting again. Don't imagine they went to seoff; they went quietly and respectfully, to be entertained. The hymn singing, the light and warmth, the faces, interested them as much as they did the deacon and the Sunday school superintendent.

Just as a line of young men had filed into a pew near the door a bevy of young women passed up the aisle, and one of them wore a blue ribbon at her throat.

"Bess looks sweet as ever," said one of the fellows.

Sly, the editor, heard, and drew a quick breath. He had heard "Bess Swing" spoken of from time to time, just as he had heard of half a dozen other girls. But he only knew one or two of them by sight. He regarded himself rather blasé on the girl subject, and had not been able to take any interest in the Platteville rosebuds, who all seemed quite too young for him.

This evening, when he heard that remark: "Bess looks sweet as ever," something told him it was the organist who was referred to. "For she is the only sweet girl in the bunch," he reflected. "But Bess!" He grit his teeth. "I could smother whoever fastened that name on her. Elizabeth would be far enough off—she must have a middle name that fits better."

The meeting was a rouser. The three preachers—the rosy fat one, the handsome slim one and the consumptive ascetic—threw their whole souls into the work, and it was truly thrilling. The corpulent minister did the exhorting, and stopped every few minutes to catch his breath and cast his eye shrewdly about for repentant faces. When his glance ran along the row of "young men about town" it rested upon Silver Sly. The editor's animated eyes, he thought were a sure sign that the little man was aroused. The preacher took a glass of water, saying to himself: "I have touched the editor's heart—now to preach right at him." The revivalist plunged into an arraignment of the particular vices prevailing in Platteville. "Gambling," said he, "is worse than stealing, for it robs the gambler of honor and character. There is intelligence and ability in this town, there are fine gifts, there is genius itself," he cried, "being stolen away by this mania for winning money with dice and cards!"

The line of young fellows winced, almost to a man. The hymn book on the organ rack slipped and fell violently upon the floor. Sly, the editor, put his hand to his forehead and blushed sympathetically with the sweet-faced girl who picked the book up, without without confusion, but, heavens! with what simplicity and gracefulness!

In a few minutes, as it seemed to Sly, the preachers were passing pencils and little cards around which bore printed lines and a blank for signature.

"Everybody take a card, whether he wishes to sign it or not," said the hearty preacher. Silver Sly heard the man for the first time that evening. He took one of the cards automatically and passed some along the line to his companions. The red-faced preacher looked significantly to the slim preacher, who was coming up the aisle.

"I notice that some of our friends are without hymn books," said the ascetic. "I will ask Miss Swing to kindly distribute a few of the hymnals in this part of the house."

Some one in the gamblers' row started as if he had been hit. The organist took a little pile of books from a chair and stepped beautifully down the aisle. Silver Sly was afraid that everybody in the church could hear the thumping of his heart.

"Now, when we're all ready," said Rev. Flesh and Blood, "let us sing No. 10, 'The Ninety and Nine.'"

"GAMBLING," SAID HE, "IS WORSE THAN STEALING."

The hymn books had reached the rear row, and she was handing them along the row of young men. The man at the end offered to take a number and pass them along, but some way she missed his thought, reached past him and handed one herself to Silver Sly. As he took it her hand touched his, he looked up and their eyes met—her soft blue eyes, and his piercing dark ones.

Next instant she was back at the organ, and the little church was reverberating with the trident measures of "The Ninety and Nine." Sly's glance falling upon the fly leaf of the hymn book in his hand, he read, in a gentle handwriting: "Elizabeth Eleanor Swing." "Eleanor," he repeated, under his breath—"Eleanor Swing—that fits." He looked from the signature to the girl at the organ and back again, and then forth and back again. His head swam. His whole being seemed uplifted and aloft upon a far-off sea of possibilities. At the conclusion of the singing he sat down as one who moves in a dream. He held the hymn book open at the fly leaf, and resting the printed card under the name written there, feverishly signed his own in full—Silver Thornton Sly.

The fat preacher collected the cards. As he came opposite the row of young men and took theirs, all but one of them still blank, there was a perceptible stir, turning of heads and whispering in the seats nearabout. The minister returned forward with a distinct look of content; arriving quite close to his coworkers, he answered the mute inquiry of their faces with a nod and a smile.

When the strain of the evening was lifted and the members of the flock exchanged greetings, the new editor, new man now, was introduced to the sweet-faced organist. It was he who walked home with her under the prairie stars that night.

Something to Be Thankful For. M. Santos-Dumont has lost the airship prize on a technicality. He may thank Fortune, says the Chicago Record-Herald, that he didn't lose it on a church steeple or a flagpole.

OFFENSIVE BREATH.

Persons Afflicted with It Should Use Some Simple Disinfectant with Regularity.

There are many causes for bad breath; in some cases it is occasioned by the teeth, in others by a disordered stomach or catarrhal trouble, again it is the result of diseased and decaying lungs.

As persons afflicted with bad breath are themselves frequently unaware of the fact, it is the duty of those with whom they come in contact to call attention to the matter in as kindly a manner as possible. Where the disorder comes from the teeth, the services of a good dentist are necessary, also some simple preparation for the mouth. The following recipe is harmless and good: One ounce of powdered borax, one ounce of precipitated chalk, one-fourth ounce of powdered myrrh and one-fourth ounce of powdered orris root. Charcoal is an excellent remedy for a feverish breath and the Canadian snake root is also very highly recommended; it imparts a spicy aroma to the breath and leaves a pleasant taste in the mouth. Needless to say the greatest cleanliness in regard to the teeth and mouth is indispensable. Many persons who are most particular about brushing their teeth after meals never think of doing so before breakfast, and at no time is it more important as various impurities gather in the mouth at night. After cleansing the teeth in the morning, wash the mouth with weak borax water.

Where the offensive breath is caused by some incurable disease the person thus afflicted is deserving of sympathy and consideration. Even then some simple disinfectant should be used.—Eliza R. Parker, in National Stockman.

KILLED A RATTLER.

Mrs. Seton-Thompson Dispatched a Venomous Reptile with a Rusty Frying Pan.

Mrs. Seton-Thompson, in her camping experiences entitled "A Woman Tenderfoot," confesses that in the beginning of her Rocky mountain life she regarded rattlesnakes as only one kind of disagreeable reptile. One day she was riding in advance of her husband. She says:

"Suddenly, there came a noise like dried peas in a pod, and gliding across the road was a huge rattlesnake. Whiskers, my pony, performed a flank movement, so nearly unseating me that I deemed it expedient to drop to the ground; and Whiskers, without waiting for orders, galloped down the road."

"The rattler stopped his pretty gliding motion away from me and seemed in doubt."

"He is going to coil and then to strike," said I, recalling a paragraph from my school reader.

"I cast a despairing glance around, and saw, almost at my feet, half hidden by sage brush, several inches of rusty iron. Blest be the passing teamster who threw it there. I darted to it and turned on the rattler, armed with the goodly remains of a frying pan.

"The creature was ready for me, with darting tongue and flattened head. Another instant and it would have sprung. Smash on its head went my valiant frying pan and struck a deadly blow. I recaptured my weapon and again it descended. The rattler was settled."

"But, oh, that tail! That awful, writhing, lashing tail. I can stand Indians, bears, wolves, anything but that tail; and a rattler is all tail except its head. The snake was really helpless, and I put one foot on him to take his scalp; that is to say, his rattles."

"Then the uncanny thing began to wriggle and rattle with old-time vigor. Horrid thrills coursed through me; but, fortified by the assurance that the existing rattles were a 'purely reflex neuroganglionic movement,' I hardened my heart and captured the 'pod of dried peas.'"

Children's Social Liberties.

The social liberties of the American child are one of the evils of this country. Children's dances and children's parties, once given in the afternoon, have intruded into the evening and are sending thousands of our children to their beds in a state of excitement which means no good for their future. It stands to reason that no child can, with his or her unformed strength, burn the candle at both ends.—Ladies' Home Journal.

HELPED HER HUSBAND.

Mrs. La Follette, Wife of Wisconsin's Governor, Is a Helpmate in the Fullest Sense.

The tact and magnetism possessed by Mrs. La Follette, wife of the governor of Wisconsin, have made her of the greatest assistance to her husband in his political campaigns. She is best known among the women of the state for her advocacy of dress reform and physical culture, and as head of the Emily Bishop league for physical culture she has gathered an enthusiastic class about her. She attends all the gatherings of the league, and is usually its principal speaker and moving spirit. But Mrs. La Follette is remarkable for other reasons. She is one of the few women of the state admitted to the bar. She was a Baraboo girl—Miss Belle Case—and was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in the same class as her husband, that of 1879. The same year she won the Lewis prize for oratory, her husband also winning the interstate championship in oratory, with an oration on Iago. Later she studied law and was admitted to the bar. The home life of the La Follettes is ideal. They have three children. One daughter, Miss Flora, a freshman in the university, who traveled in Europe last summer. Mrs. La Follette prepares her children for the high school at home.

Wisconsin people, for some reason not reported, have the reputation of being exceedingly cold to their prominent fellow-citizens, but whether this be true or not it does not refer to the governor's wife, who is received everywhere with enthusiasm begotten of respect. The people of the state understand that by her earnest endeavors in behalf of movements calculated to improve the industrial and legal status of women she has earned the gratitude of her sex in all parts of the country.

LIVING WITH OTHERS.

It Is Better, Even Where There Is Jarring and Friction, Than One's Own Company.

"It is better to live with others even at the cost of considerable jarring and friction than to live in undisturbed quiet alone," said a wise little woman the other day.

"Yes, I know that sort of life brings hurts, smart and heartaches, to say nothing of an occasional temper, but all the same it is an education that cannot be gained in solitude. Life brings many changes and throws strange people together, and it is easy to decide that some of one's kindred by birth or by law—especially the latter—are so un congenial as to make living with them unendurable."

"Sometimes that is true, but very rarely. Usually if two persons are well-meaning—and most people really do mean well at heart—they can gradually grow into each other's ways, and by doing so modify individual traits and habits to the great improvement of character. We need to have our sharp corners rubbed off, our little pet vanities punctured, and most of all to learn self-control, 'sweet reasonableness,' and toleration for other people's point of view. When persons say to me of members of their own families: 'I do not know how to live with them,' I feel an unsympathetic desire to reply: 'Keep on living with them till you learn how; it is exactly what you need.'—Wellspring.

Harmony in Color Schemes.

Women would do well to give much thought to color harmony and circumstances rather than style when choosing house furnishings. Upon the harmonious blending of wall and floor covering, together with the woodwork, depends much of the success of the room; yet some woman, hearing that red walls "are the style," and seeing how effective a soft shade of it is with the pure black Flemish oak, straightway has it put on her walls to combine with yellow oak. How much better a gobelin blue burlap or cartridge paper would be! Then, too, often the mistake is made of having everything of one color to match, thereby causing monotony. Artistic decorators advocate old rose in rugs and hangings as a relieving contrasting bit to gobelin blue walls and yellow oak woodwork.—Chicago Daily News.

Regulating a Child's Diet.

A child who is given whatever he asks for at the table and who is also allowed to be continually eating and drinking, cakes, buns, etc., between meals sooner or later pay the penalty. It is as foolish to expect a child's digestive organs to do the work of those of an adult as to imagine he can compete with a grown person in physical or mental labor.

SUBMARINE ANIMALS.

All of Them Are Interesting, But None More So Than the Deep Sea Anemones.

Very interesting is the manner in which some of the little submarine animals, scientifically known as Actinia, live. Sea nettles, sea flowers and sea anemones are the popular names of these creatures, and they are called sea nettles because they sting when touched and sea flowers because their long and slender tentacles are similar to the petals of many flowers.

Many of the Actinia lead a solitary life, but others form regular colonies, among the latter being the epizoanthes, several of which form themselves into groups around hard and immovable bodies, such as rocks, corals and large shells, while others form themselves into a colony around the body of a pagurus, that singular denizen of the sea which is popularly known as Bernard the Hermit. The latter are thus enabled to move from place to place, and in return for such a service they protect their host from various enemies. As a rule they live with him in the depths of the sea, and that is why their novel mode of life has only recently attracted attention.

Prof. Louis Roule, who lectures on natural sciences, has studied these Actinia carefully and has succeeded in obtaining some excellent specimens of them.

"At first," he says, "the epizoanthes is a tiny embryo, which is able to move about in the water. After some time it attaches itself to some hard object, and then it puts forth buds and produces a colony. If its domicile is a rock or a large shell, its life thenceforth is uneventful, but, if it selects a small shell, already inhabited by a young pagurus, a lasting intimacy is at once established between the two animals.

"As a result, the two continue to grow and each in turn does good service for the other. The pagurus in time finds that he is supporting from eight to ten epizoanthes, all of whom are ready to protect him when danger is near and who only ask in return that he will take them with him wherever he goes and thus save them from the monotony of an absolutely motionless existence."

Specimens of these Actinia are not readily secured, owing to the fact that they are never found near the surface of the sea. Scientists, however, who desire to study them, will find little difficulty in doing so, for there has never been a time when so much interest was taken in deep sea explorations as at present, and among the curious objects that are brought up now and then from the deep waters are colonies of these sea anemones.

MUSHROOMS AS FOOD.

Their Usefulness Lies in the Palatableness They Give to Other Food Materials.

Recent investigations made by the department of agriculture show that mushrooms are about equal to potatoes in the element of nutrition that goes to make flesh and blood, but that on the other hand, they do not hold much of the fuel stuff required to keep the body machine running. Containing, as they do, a very large percentage of water, they may be said, in a sense, to correspond with fresh vegetables in respect to food value. The notion that their composition resembles closely that of meat—a conception which has caused the term "vegetable beefsteak" to be applied to them—is an absurd error. One would have to consume eight pounds of mushrooms in a day in order to take the place of the ordinary ration of beef or mutton.

The great usefulness of mushrooms lies in the palatableness which they give to other food materials. This is a matter of no small importance from the point of view of the economic expert in dietetics, who looks upon the attractiveness of dishes as a notable element in their value. In this country only one species of fungus is utilized to any extent for the table—namely, the common field mushroom with pink gills—whereas in Europe a dozen or more varieties are eaten.

This common mushroom is a trifle more than 91 per cent. water. It contains nearly four per cent. of flesh-forming stuff, three and one-half per cent. of starch and sugary substances, and one per cent. of fat and fiber, with one-half of one per cent. of mineral material. There are other species which are more nutritious—such as the "oyster mushroom"—but they are not sufficiently well known in the United States to be worthy of consideration.

THE POTATO ANALYZED.

It Is a Source of Muscular Energy, But Does Not Serve to Repair Body Tissue.

The accompanying diagram, which illustrates graphically the composition of the ordinary potato, has been prepared for the United States department of agriculture and appears in one of its recent publications. We quote the following description from the Philadelphia Record:

"The popularity of the potato as a foodstuff is well founded, and is due to its prolific yield, superior keeping qualities, ease of propagation, and agreeable flavor. It was introduced into this country at the time of Raleigh's voyages to Virginia, and has steadily increased in popularity ever since.

COMPOSITION OF A POTATO.

A, fat; B, crude fiber and other carbohydrates, exclusive of starch; C, protein; D, ash.

"Every school child is aware that potatoes are classed as starch foods, and that their bulk is made up largely of water. . . . It is chiefly on account of the starch content that potatoes are eaten, and while they are apparently not economical foods, owing to the large proportion of water which they contain, this is not actually the case. In other foods, as for instance, rice, there is four times as much nourishment as in an equal weight of potatoes, but then water or milk is added to the rice in preparing it for the table, so that when ready to be eaten it very much resembles potatoes in the assimilable proportion, bulk for bulk. Equal weights of the two foods do not cost as much in each case.

"Being chiefly starch, the potato is valuable as a source of muscular energy and does not serve to build or repair the body tissue, except in a very small degree. This explains why potatoes are generally served with foods rich in tissue-making properties, such as meats, and why it is that large numbers of the country population of Ireland and Germany are so poorly nourished. Potatoes alone are a very one-sided diet."

"The accompanying table shows at a glance how the potato is proportioned as regards its food value:

	Per cent.
Water	79.2
Starch, or energy-producing material	18.4
Nitrogen, or tissue-producing material	2.2
Fats	0.1
Mineral matter, chiefly potash salts	1.00

"It is often asserted that the potato is unwholesome, but there is no scientific basis for it. Eaten alone potatoes, of course, would form a very badly-balanced diet. As a matter of fact its universal popularity and consumption are evident from the statistics above quoted, that it forms nearly 14 per cent. of the total food of the people of this country, furnishing about four per cent. of the total proteins, or nitrogenous foods, and nearly ten per cent. of the total carbohydrates or starches."

"A word of warning. Potatoes that have been stored for a long time and which have begun to sprout, should not be eaten, as they are apt to contain an undue amount of solanine, or poisonous substance. Numerous cases of poisoning are on record resulting from this cause."

ART OF BREATHING.

Scientific Men All Over the World Are Beginning to Recognize Its Importance.

It is perhaps one of the signs of the times to those alert for indications that the art of breathing has become more and more a subject of attention. Oculists as well as physiologists go deeply into its study in a way hardly to be touched upon in a limited space. Physicians have cured aggravated cases of insomnia by long-drawn, regular breaths; fever-stricken patients have been quieted, stubborn forms of indigestion made to disappear. A tendency to consumption may be overcome, as some authority has within the past few years clearly demonstrated, by exercise in breathing. Seasickness, too, may be surmounted, and the victim of hypnotic influence taught to withstand the force of an energy directed against him.

There is a famous physician of Munich who has written an extensive work upon the subject of breathing. He has, besides, formulated a system by which asthmatic patients are made to walk without losing breath, while sufferers from weaknesses of the heart are cured. At Meran, in the Austrian Tyrol, his patients are put through a certain system of breathing and walking. The mountain paths are all marked off with stakes of different colors, indicating the number of minutes in which a patient must walk the given distance, the breathing and walking being in time together. As the cure progresses the ascents are made steeper and steeper.

Repairing Neatly Done

Never thought of such a sign for a medicine did you? Well, it's a good sign for Scott's Emulsion. The body has to be repaired like other things and Scott's Emulsion is the medicine that does it.

These poor bodies wear out from worry, from over-work, from disease. They get thin and weak. Some of the new ones are not well made—and all of the old ones are racked from long usage.

Scott's Emulsion fixes all kinds. It does the work both inside and out. It makes soft bones hard, thin blood red, weak lungs strong, hollow places full. Only the best materials are used in the patching and the patches don't show through the new glow of health.

No one has to wait his turn. You can do it yourself—you and the bottle.

This picture represents the Trade-Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle. Send for free sample. SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl St. New York. 50c. and $1. all druggists.
