SOME GOOD ADVICE.

DEAR READERS OF THE PRESS: While sitting in my room of our city," as my mother calls it, I can the whole world is that we neglect our duty towards God. It makes in which services are being held, and when they and their children should be present. But, oh no! They only stop and gaze in thro' the doors and windows, whose lights are shattered by the rocks thrown by their reckless children, just to see who are present and if Bro - has a respectable looking audience. Bless their poor hard hearts, if they are not very oareful Satan will have a respectable audience held "fire bound" for a long, long time, and they will be numbered there.

I have seen children from 1 years and on up to the age of man hood, and womanhood, who came to church with their parents only to see and be seen and ere they left the sacred place found the remedy for sinsickness: "repent, believe, becborn again." Naturally enough their first desire was to see their parents and embrace them, and show them what God has done for them and will do for all. Believe me, reader, dear, those sinwrecked mothers and fathers were so very, very sorry of the sons' or daughters' change from sin to salvation, that they tried to appear glad by saying: "Don't now; don't cry, for we dont like to hear you cry." No indeed, you do not like to hear their ories for you know their cries mean more fire and brimstone on your sin destroyed body if a change is not made; and it's best, sinner friend of mine not put off your change until tomorrow, for we know not what a day may bring forth. Let us quit this neglecting of our duties towards God and man.

He hesitated; thenwith a tempest in his heart. energy that gave him the courage to him if he could but!rescue Alice? And do it, Simon Kenton; I'll do it!" what were life should be fail to rescue her? The old, old song hummed in his wild beasts and scalp hunting savages baffle him? No; there is no barrier that can hinder love. He said this over and over to himself after his rencounter with the four Indian scouts on the Wabash. He repeated it with every heart beat until he fell in with some friendly red men, who took him to their camp, where, to his great surprise, he met M. Roussillon. It was his song when again he strode off toward the west on his lonely way. He did not know that Long Hair and sort o' crazylike. his band were fast on his track, but the knowledge could not have urged him to greater haste. He strained every muscle to its utmost, kept every nerve to the highest tension. Youder toward the west was help for Alice. That was all be cared for.

But if Long/Hair was pursuing him with relentless greed for the reward of fered by Hamilton there were friendly footsteps still nearer behind him, and one day at high noon while he was bending over a little fire broiling some liberal cuts of venison a finger tapped him on the shoulder. He sprang up and grappled Oncle Jazon. At the same time, standing near by, he saw Simon Kenton, his old time Kentucky friend. The pungled features of one and the fine, rugged face of the other swam as in a mist before Beverley's eyes. Kenton was laughing quietly, his strong. upright form shaking to the force of his pleasure. He was in the early prime of a vigorous life, not handsome, but strikingly/attractive by reason of a certain glow in his face and a kindle finsh in his deep set eyes.

"Well, well, my boy!" he exclaimed laying his left hand on Beverley's shoulder, while in the other he held a long, henvy rifle. "I'm glad to see ye, glad to see ye!"

"Thought we was Injuns, ch?" said Oncle Jazon. "An' ef we had 'a' been we'd 'a' been shore o' your scalp!" The wizened old creole cackled gleefully.

"And where are ye goin'?" demanded Kenton. "Ye're makin' what lacks a heap o' bein' a bee line for some place or other." Beverley was dazed and vacant mind

Kenton shook Beverley with rough familiarity as if to rouse his faculties. "What's the matter? Fitz, my lad, don't ye know/S! Kenton? It's not so long since we'were like brothers, and now ye don't speak to me. Ye've not forgotten me, Fitz!"

"Mebby he don't like ye as well as ye thought he did," drawled Oncle Jazon. "I hev known o' fellers a-bein' mistaken jes' thet way."

Beverley got his wits together as best he could, taking in the situation by such degrees as seemed at the time unduly slow, but which were really mere momentary falterings.

"Why, Kenton! Jazon!" he presently exclaimed, a cordial gladness blending with his surprise. "How did you get here? Where did you come from?"

He looked from one to the other back and forth, with a wondering smile breaking over his bronzed and deterinined face.

"Well, ye're takin' a mighty queer course, my boy, if ye ever expect to find Kaskaskia. Ye're already 'twenty miles too far south."

He and Oncle Jazon, therefore, knowing the main feature of Beverley's predicament, enjoyed making the most of their opportunity in their rude but perfectly

By indirection and impersonal de tails, as regarded his feelings toward Alice, Beverley in due time made his friends understand that his whole ambition was centered in rescuing her. Kenton had been peeping under the low hanging scrub oak boughs while Oncle Jazon was speaking these last words, and now he suddenly interrupt-

"The deuce! Look yonder!" he growled out in startling tone. "Injuns!"

It was a sharp snap of the conversation's thread, and at the same time our three friends realized that they had been careless in not keeping a better lookout. They let fall the meat they had not yet finished eating and seized their guns.

Five or six dark forms were moving toward them across a little point of the prairie that cut into the wood a quarter of a mile distant.

"Yander's more of em," said Oncle Jazon, as if not in the least concerned, wagging his head in an opposite direction, from which another squad was approaching.

That he duly appreciated the situation appeared only in the celerity with which he acted. Kenton at once assumed command and his companions felt his perfect fitness. There was no doubt from the first as to what the Indians meant, but even if there had been it would have soon vanished, for in less than three kill it. Every savage had his orders to minutes twenty-one savages were swiftly and silently forming a circle inclosing the spot where the three white men, who had covered themselves as best they could with trees, waited in grim steadiness for the worst.

BROKE JAIL.

Charles Burnett Makes a Break For Liberty, But is Soon Captured.

Last Saturday morning our citizens the county jail. Charley was lodged in jail some time since on a charge of highway robbery and had evidently grown tired of prison life, so he made his plans to escape. It occurred in this way:

There are several keys that unlock some miscreant had stolen one of the in some way managed to give it to Bur vant. nett, yet with the key in his possession Burnett could not reach the lock, but a gro named Lawrence, who hails Mississippi, and who had the misfortune some time ago to get his feet badly frozen, was in jail, not as a prisener, but as the guest of the county, and con- view? Answer: Locomotive. sequently this son of Ham was in the hallway outside the cells and, according to Lawrence's statement, Burnett bluffed him into unlocking his cell and then there was nothing between him and liberty except the brick wall. With an iron poker, a good muscle and a strong determination he proceeded to make an opening through the wall, tied some blankets together and fastened one end to the window, lowering himself to the ground.

Mr. Travis, the jailor, was not aware of what was transpiring during the night, but he went upstairs early Saturday morning and found the cells open, a hole in the wall and Burnett's cell empty, so he set about at once to capture his missing prisoner. Mr. Travis telephoned our efficient city marshal, Mr. Cannan, and after a short consultation with him, he telephoned to Morganfield for the famous Taylor blood hounds.

The man-hunting dogs reached town at 12 o'clock. They were taken at once to the jail and were soon on Burnett's trail, and when it was learned that he was only a short distance in advance of the dogs, Marshal Cannan and deputies Hicklin and Flanary procured horses and went in advance of the dogs. They soon learned that Burnett was wending his way to Cave-in-Rock. Ill., so they were startled by the news that one hurried in that direction and captured Chas. Burnett ha I made his escape from him one and one-half miles this side of the river. The officers who had cap tured Burnett started at once for town and soon met the dogs hot on his trail.

Mr. Taylor is to be congratulated up on the work of his dogs, and Mr. Travis deserves great credit for his determin the large pad-locks on the cells, and ation to do his duty. The people do not centure him, but everyone knows that keys, or at least got possession of it and he is an efficient and faithful public ser

Making Room

In order to make room for our large and constantly growing trade, we have moved our stock of GENERAL MERCHANDISE into the S. C. Towery store house on the corner of Main and College Streets, and will carry a stock of clean, new up-to-date goods; while we will not sell you goods at cost, we will sell them as close as any one can and stay in business. We will appreciate your trade and treat you right.

To our old friends and customers, who have stood by us and enabled us to build up our present large stock of General Merchandise, starting as we did two years ago with less than $25 worth of family groceries, we wish to return our heartfelt thanks, and say to you come and come again, and we will try to make you feel more and more at home while in our store.

To the public generally, all we ask is a trial. Thanking one and all for their patronage in the past, we beg to remain as ever.
