KENTUCKY AT WORLD'S FAIR

The Mineral Feature of the State is Unique
It is the Showpiece of the Mines Building.

A FULL DISPLAY OF THE OILS, ORES, ROCKS AND CLAYS OF KENTUCKY.

LOCAL AND GENERAL MINING ITEMS.

CHARLEY LARUE at Levas, has his new fluor spar prospect opened in first class mercantile shape. It looks like a winner.

SATURDAY was the regular monthly pay day of the Kentucky Fluor Spar Company when some $8,000 was transferred to its employees.

DOCTOR NOE, of the Big Four Mining Company had a lot of friends in town Saturday, the pay day of his company. The Marion Bank building was used to make his payments.

IT IS REPORTED THAT J. H. HARRIS, of Louisville, representing a Louisville company, is prospecting on the Beard farm near Levas, having purchased the mineral rights on 200 acres for $4800.

ON THE White property under lease to the Crittenden Mining Company, a drift on the vein has been run 16 feet showing at that point a 3 foot ledge of good fluor spar.

A CONSIDERABLE QUANTITY of carbonate of zinc has been washed during the past two weeks at the Miller mine of the Marion Mineral company with their ten log washers.

MINING in the Cullen Mines main shaft was commenced on Monday. The great mill is entirely covered and the machinery partly in place.

THE STEVENS FIRE CLAY people have been offering $1.50 per ton for delivering Clay to the cars, but so far, no contracts have been made at that price. The last year's rate of $2 seems to be the lowest that will move this product.

THE MARION MINERAL COMPANY have assigned work on their Dr. Paris property over the river and are mining high grade fluor spar. Wirt Pierce has charge of the work.

DOUGLAS HUMPHREY, of Louisville, has the contract for erecting a milling plant for the new Louisville Mining Company who purchased mineral interests near Cave In Rock. The property is strong in lead ore and fluor spar.

EVERYBODY IS PLEASED over General Finley's success in striking so large a vein of zinc blende at 160 feet depth in the Lucile mine. The drifting into the vein from the bottom of the working shaft running east opened out a mass of ore that just now indicates a concentrating plant at that property in the near future.

THE OHIO VALLEY Mining Company are now down 88 feet in their shaft at Carversville. They will increase this depth to 145 feet where the core drill showed a heavy body of zinc and lead ore. This property has been managed in a splendid manner and when their ore body is reached at 145 feet a plant will be erected for preparing the material for market.

ON THE MARION Beard farm near Levas, two well defined veins have been uncovered by Geo. M. Crider, Charles J. Haury and Joel Farmer who have an option on the land. One of these veins samples a fine grade of zinc with some lead ore while the other is a very clean fluor spar.

THE PEOPLE OF LOUISVILLE are very much excited over the strike of oil within less than four miles of that city on the old third street road. This oil is said to be abundant in quantity and of first rate quality and is the second oil strike made in Jefferson county.

THE JOPLIN MARKET up to Saturday which is the settling day in that district, was distinctively higher for zinc ore and but little or no change in the price of lead. Zinc advanced about $1 per ton $40.70 being the top on an assay basis of $38 per ton. Lead sold all the week at $52 per ton.

THE MANUFACTURER'S Record says "Lemuel Clark, of Marion, Ky., wishes to correspond with various glass factories in the United States, or in reach of that city, and desires to submit to them samples of his sand. Marion, Ky., is a suitable place for the erection of a glass factory, ice plant and steam laundry. It is a mining and agricultural town, and is improving in a substantial way. Capitalists interested can obtain necessary information by addressing the CRITTENDEN Record."

WILLIAM C. UREN retires on September 1st from active work in the zinc industry. For nearly three score years Mr. Uren has been engaged in some one of the various branches of mining. New Jersey, California, New Mexico, Arkansas, Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois and Kentucky all lay claim to him so far as their mining interests are concerned. Of English birth and parentage he came to America a lad and at once developed a sincere loyalty and love for his adopted country which has remained with him through life. Mr. Uren retires with an ample fortune and will reside on his handsome farm at Mineral Point, Wisconsin. THE RECORD wishes him many happy years.

THE "OLD JIM," the really notable mine of the district looks somewhat deserted. Two or three men however, are prospecting for carbonate of zinc and occasionally finding small bodies. Shipments from this property during the past two years both in carbonate and sulphides of zinc were abnormally large and brought to its owners a very great amount of money. It would seem almost incredible that this big bunch of ore so easily mined and of such high grade should "peter out" at thirty or forty feet in depth especially in this fissure vein district. It is hoped that Blue & Nunn, its owners, will at least give the ore a chance to assert itself by letting in the daylight to where it is located whether it may be eighty or a hundred and fifty feet in depth.

WILL CRUCE, of Ardmore, Indian Territory, who is visiting his old friends in this city for a week or two, tells us that the Government has segregated half a million acres of the territorial mineral land and is putting it on sale. This land comprises the coal measures as well as lead, zinc and other ores that in places appear to be abundant. Part of the receipts will go to the Indians and a portion will probably get lost in the shuffle between the purchasers and the payees. Mr. Cruce has the appearance that a clear conscience and three or four good meals per day will give a Kentuckian almost anywhere. He is being extensively entertained all through the line by his many friends who seem to think it hard luck that he cannot put in the rest of his life here at Marion.

Work on the property of the Gracy Mining Co., a report from that district says, and that of the Trigg County Company, the two respective shafts being about two miles apart and on the same vein, is progressing most satisfactorily with equal and most flattering prospects of uncovering in the near future, an uncommonly large vein of lead and zinc ore. So say Prof. Wright and other experts in mining matters, who have recently inspected said mines. Nearly all the rocks gotten out now are more or less impregnated with ore and it gets richer as the work progresses. The two companies are much encouraged and are very sanguine of success. Prof. Wright, the state geologist, said it was the best property he ever saw anywhere in this part of the west. "Development work," he said, "is now progressed to an extent that renders the opinion of an expert no longer necessary."

The top notch in oil production was reached by the Kentucky-Tennessee field during the month of July when the developments showed an increase of 28,000 barrels over the record of the preceding month. The July runs fell a little short of 120,000 barrels.

The leading iron interests at Birmingham, posted notices at mines that miners were needed and operations would be resumed at once, regardless of whether miners were union or non-union men. It is too early to state results. The schedule of wages offered runs about five cents less than last year. The miners, as a rule, will decline the offer, and it looks as if the contentions will last for several weeks. The operators are declining to officially recognize the union, and are simply seeking to obtain labor to run their mines.

John H. Tonkin, of Wilksbarre, Pa., reported last week as arranging for the development of property near Wheatcroft, is organizing the Rock Spring Coal and Coke Co., with $100,000 capital. Coal mines will be opened and coke ovens built capacity 1000 tons of coal. Mr. Tonkin can be addressed at this city.

THE KENTUCKY EXHIBIT is one of the showpieces of the Mines Building. Occupying a central position, it cannot fail to attract the interested attention of anyone who visits the building. On three sides it is enclosed with a wall of materials representative of the best developed industries of the State in a mineral way. In the center of each wall there is a lofty arch affording a commodious entrance way and forming a striking feature of the display. The east or main wall is made of cannel coal set on a base of limestone. The central arch is made of cannel coal from the mines of the Kentucky Block Cannel Coal Co., of Cannel City, Ky. Inside the arch there are huge blocks of cannel and other Kentucky coals. One of the blocks, the largest in the collection of cannel coals, is 4x6 1-2 feet and is exhibited by W. D. Archibald, of the White Oak Cannel Co., of West Liberty, Ky. Most of these cannel coals show an aggregate of 91 to 92 per cent. of fixed carbon and volatile matter. Some of the bituminous coals from various mines of the state are six feet high, and one measures eight feet two inches without a parting. The Northern Coal & Coke Co. makes a particularly interesting exhibit of large blocks of coal. The St. Bernard Company exhibits sections of coal from its No. 11 vein six feet five inches thick, and from the No. 9 vein five feet six inches thick, together with coke made from a mixture of these two coals and Campbell washer for preparing it for the ovens, resulting in an extra fine coke. All the cokes exhibited have excellent analyses attached, one of which shows fixed carbon of 85.85.

The coke specimens shown indicate the existence of an important industry in this line. It is stated that new mines of coking coal are being opened continually, while the old ones are constantly increasing their capacity.

One of the side walls is of various kinds of natural and manufactured stone, with a central arch of white oolitic limestone. There is a very full exhibit of the many excellent stones for which Kentucky is noted, including handsome flagging, curbing and building stone, all of limestone from Warren county; a pyramid of fine limestone from Logan county which takes polish and is very durable, and is used extensively for building and street purposes; also a light brown sandstone from the same county.

There are dressed blocks of limestone from the central part of the state, and a fine exhibit of freestones from the eastern portion, including the counties of Rowan, Carter and Greenup. One striking exhibit from the Rowan County Freestone Co., of Farmers, Ky., is a reproduction of the company's quarry, showing 10 ledges of a bluish-gray freestone, the ledges measuring from four inches, the top ledge, to four and one-half feet in thickness. These ledges occur with hardly any stripping between them. There are also two cases of polished building stone, classified according to geological strata, and consisting of more than 100 blocks, a number of which are particularly handsome.

The north wall is of tile, brick and various other clay products, with an arch of terra-cotta of uniform size and height with two other arches. In addition to the many varieties of clay products the wall and arch contain, there is in exhibit space a very rich display of Kentucky clays. There is sewer pipe, tiling, terra-cotta for trimmings, fire-brick, pressed brick, specimens of pottery, etc. Altogether there are 114 different clays represented in the exhibit, and the burnt tests of each clay show them all to be excellent. The Kentucky clay exhibit is not surpassed by any on the grounds.

There is a large showing of Kentucky petroleum and its products, including paraffine oil, lubricating, kerosene, benzine, naphtha, coke, etc. An interesting historical exhibit is a specimen of oil from the old American well, bored in Cumberland county, Kentucky, in 1826, making it the oldest well in the United States. A placard with the specimens shown states that this oil was used for medicinal purposes for many years.

The exhibits of asphalt rock shown indicate the development in an important way of this resource of the state. The American Standard Asphalt Co., of Louisville, with quarries in Logan county, where it has very rich beds, with deposits 40 feet thick, shows specimens of the crude material and also a section of paving which has been in use on the streets of Louisville for four years. It certainly appears none the worse for the wear. Specimens are also exhibited by the Wadsworth Stone Paving Co., of Bowling Green, Ky., and several individual exhibitors, all the specimens coming from Logan, Warren, Edmondson and Grayson counties, where there are very rich deposits of asphalt rock.

A fine exhibit of sands is shown, including glass sands, some of which run as high as 98 per cent. silica, and along with the 16 specimens of fine moulding sands shown by the Newport Sandbank Co., are a number of handsome castings made in these sands.

There is a full line of Kentucky's iron ores shown, including specimens of every iron-producing geological strata in the state. Considerable mining is now being done in the western part of Kentucky, the ore from which mines is shipped to Paducah to be made into pig, specimens of which are here shown.

The lead and zinc exhibit is a very extensive one. Although this is a new industry in Kentucky, it is being steadily developed. Twelve or fifteen companies are operating, and they have a number of good mines. The best development is in Crittenden county, but specimens are shown from Scott, Henry and Owen counties as well. All of the ores exhibited are very rich, and one, a hydro-zinc, produces above 90 per cent. of a very fine quality of zinc. A smelter is now being promoted in Crittenden county, which is expected to still further stimulate the development of the industry.

Extensive specimens of fluorspar are shown from large deposits near Marion, in Crittenden county.

One large case is devoted to a display of Kentucky waters, where are found bottled specimens of Blue Lick and other well-known waters from the famous springs of the state.

STRUCK DEAD

By Lightning—Untimely Fate of Miss Ethel Bourland, of Dixon.

Miss Ethel Bourland, the fifteen-year-old daughter of W. E. Bourland, of Dixon, was killed by lightning Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock. She was standing on the porch at her home when the fatal bolt came. The young life was snuffed out in a moment. A younger sister standing near was severely shocked. Mr. Bourland is a prominent attorney of Dixon. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at the Presbyterian church.

Must Give Bond.

The post office department has issued a general order directing that every railway postal clerk shall give $1,000 bond to the United States. Each clerk shall pay the premium chargeable to himself. This order affects approximately 10,000 employees, embracing all the railroad postal clerks except those who are assigned to clerical duties in which they do not have access to registered mail.—Kentuckian.

I will sell round trip tickets to Louisville Tuesday, Aug. 30th, on train leaving Marion at 11:20 a. m. returning, leaving Louisville Thursday, Sept. 1st, 12 o'clock noon for $2.25 round trip. L. JOHNSON

MARION SCHOOL

The $5000.00 Addition Will be Completed by The Middle of December.

EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES.

The wish of Marion's citizens, as expressed at the polls June 20th, is slowly, but splendidly, maturing. Shopbell & Harris, of Evansville, Ind., submitted plans that were accepted with slight modification, and the specifications are now receiving attention from some of our ablest contractors.

Work will begin in a few days and the addition will stand completed by December 15th.

Some changes wrought by the the improvement will stand like this:

Instead of eight rooms there will be twelve.

Steam heating, or some process equally as good, will be substituted for stoves.

Chapel of 600 seating capacity with commodious stage will take the place of present small chapel on upper floor.

A music room in the building. New library quarters and study room for pupils.

More room for eighth grade, that has been overcrowded each year.

In short, Marion will have a school building of the most modern type and more commodious than any possessed by a town of equal size in the state.

The trustees have elected as teacher of Eighth Grade, Prof. J. R. Brinson, Principal of Eddyville graded school last year, but who has resigned to take this work here.

Prof. Brinson's record is in part known to us and it is such that in heartiest terms we congratulate Marion Graded School. Several splendid educators were before the trustees as applicants.

Quarterly Meeting.

The quarterly meeting of the Methodist church for the Shady Grove Circuit will be held at Shady Grove next Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 19th and 20th.

Blue Crane.

Carl Henderson killed a blue crane last Wednesday morning in the lake just back of his residence, that measured about 6 feet from the tip of its bill to its feet. Its beak measured 6 inches.

Myers Tried.

H. J. Myers, of Tolu, charged with breach of the peace for striking and abusing S. B. Weldon as reported last week, was tried Tuesday before Squire P. C. Moore. The jury found him guilty and fixed his punishment at $8 and cost.

Piney Meeting Closed.

Camp meeting closed at Piney Wednesday night. The services were conducted by Rev. Barbee who preached many splendid sermons. Sunday, one of the largest crowds in the history of the meeting was on the grounds, people being there from Clay, Princeton, Fredonia and Livingston county.

Peculiar Egg.

J. R. Finley, of this city, and manager for the Lucile Mining Company has in his possession a very peculiarly shaped hen egg. The egg doubtless has two yolks and is rather long, presenting the appearance of an egg within an egg, something like one ordinary sewing thimble slipped over the top of another of the same size.

SUB-CONTRACTED.

One Part of the Mail Route Let to Other Parties.

Of the Birdsville and Salem star mail route, the part running from Hampton to Salem has been sub-contracted to D. H. Spell and Jesse Ramage who will carry the mail over that part of the route. It will be remembered that this formerly was the extent of the route but on the first of July last the route was extended to Birdsville. This extension was of great benefit to Birdsville since there were usually two seasons of the year when the citizens of the town could not get their mail. One season was when the river was too full of ice for boats to run, the other in summer when the water was too low. J. D. Braswell, of Birdsville, secured the contract to carry the mail over the new route leaving Birdsville at 6:30, a. m., then reaching and leaving Hampton about 8 a. m. and arriving at Salem at 12. Leaving Salem at 1, returning, reaching and leaving Hampton about 5 and arriving at Birdsville at 6:30. He was thus given 12 hours in which to travel a distance of 42 miles. Taking into consideration the fact that rural carriers are expected to make only about 25 miles per day, the several stops and the irregular roads on this route, the distance was soon found to be too great for one man to make, therefore Mr. Braswell sub-contracted the part mentioned to Messrs. Ramage and Spell who took charge last week. The Mulliken postoffice is also supplied from this route.

TO STAMP COLLECTORS.

Advice Regarding the Securing of Early Issues of the United States.

There is a growing difficulty in securing fine copies of the early issues of United States stamps. The makers of these issues, says St. Nicholas, were not required by the government to be careful in relation to the perforating of them. The paper was of a brittle quality, very easily broken or injured by careless handling. The postmasters who canceled these stamps cared for nothing except to thoroughly obliterate them, so that they used unnecessary quantities of ink for this purpose. All these things combined make it difficult to find used copies of the early issues of our country in fine condition. There were few collectors, and therefore not many of these stamps were saved in unused condition. The consequence of this state of things is and will be an increasing difficulty in securing these stamps in such condition as is acceptable to collectors who are at all particular as to the looks of their albums. There are vast numbers of United States stamps in poor and ordinary condition. These many collectors take to fill the spaces in their albums until they can secure stamps of finer quality. This seems, on the whole, to be a mistake, for the possession of a specimen, even though it be a poor one, causes a collector to neglect to secure another of the same stamp.

The desire to fill spaces that are vacant is greater than to improve those that are not properly filled. The best thing for the young collector, if he wishes to have a really pleasing album, is to put nothing into its spaces but unused, lightly canceled, clean copies of the stamps which he selects. The filling of the album properly will be appreciated within a few years by those who care more for United States stamps than for the issues of foreign countries, since the growing demand will make it even more difficult than it now is to obtain fine specimens.

PIN-MONEY AT COLLEGE.

Society of Girls Make Flags and Have Sale in the Fall When the Students Return.

During the summer the members of one society of girls meet once a week and make college flags, ours being a college town, says a writer in Woman's Home Companion. In the fall, when the students return, these flags are placed on sale, usually at the dormitories, and in a week or two every flag is gone, and often orders for more are received. The girls then fill these orders, and set to work to have a supply ready for the baseball season, which begins in April. Often summer visitors buy these flags as souvenirs of the place, and thus all the year round they have a steady sale. Every March the senior and junior classes each order a large flag for a special occasion, and each returning school year brings new students, who are glad to aid the girls in this. The flags are made of felt or silk, according to order, and are of any desired size or shape. The felt pennant never fails to sell well, and it is very little trouble to make, for the letters can be stitched on without being hemmed. The flags of course are made in the college colors. The price is determined by the size and the cost of the material used.

Parliament's Wine Cellars.

One of the features of the house of commons cellars is the Valentin vat, so named from the popular whip, Viscount Valentia. This is a huge vessel, and holds 1,000 gallons of Scotch whisky two years old, 15 under proof. It is never drawn below a minimum of 400 gallons. A smaller vat of Irish whisky contains 300 gallons. The wine cellars are methodically arranged with bins of bottled wines, and among them are a selection of the royal sherries from Buckingham and St. James' palaces and Windsor castle.

Responsibilities of the Press and Sensational Journalism

By HON. SAMUEL W. McCALL,
Member of Congress from Massachusetts.

We tax ourselves enormously to support schools and colleges and carefully discuss systems of education, and yet the press as a practical educating force for good or evil is hardly second to any other agency. It keeps its watchful eye upon governors, legislators, courts, and it has its say about them. That is one of the things the press was brought into the world to do. But what can a corrupt legislator or governor avail if the press be vigilant and pure, and on the other hand, what can the most honest public officer avail if the press be corrupt and devoted to the service of humbug? Who then shall keep the keepers?

The press should be publicly discussed, and we shall be told that it is discussed. There is scarcely a month rolls by when some of our statesmen or clergymen do not make speeches, and very eloquent speeches, at meetings of editors about the press. But the difficulty is we have speeches about it but very little discussion. The subject is approached from the kneeling posture. We are worshipping at the shrine of a very great goddess. She has fame in her gift, or, what at the moment in most men's mind is just as good as fame, she has publicity.

In the interest of the nation which has so much at stake in the interest of the press itself, I believe the time is here when the press must be regulated, not indeed by law, which would be harmful if not nugatory, but by self-imposed restraints, and in deference to public opinion which is slowly being educated to a sense of what the press should be. There is of course danger that if the regulation does not come inside the institution it may come from the outside. Extremes often lie very near each other, and it is only a step from the wildest license to the most severe repression. Society is often long suffering and slow to act, but the gross abuse even of a most cherished freedom may force it to act for its own preservation. Long delayed action is apt to be extreme action.

The press has indeed become a mighty engine, but its rapid development has brought with it great abuses. Its chief fault is that, revelling in the freedom it enjoys, it has shown in much too slight a degree a sense of public responsibility for the use it makes of its freedom.

The time has come when journalism, in its own and the public interest, should become a genuine profession, when it should become subject to self-imposed ethics, such as govern the other professions, and that it should not exercise unregulated power. It is for its members to say whether it shall be a real institution and one of the most powerful in the state, whether it shall be in fact the "Fourth Estate," or whether, by being essentially superficial, unreliable, narrowly patriotic, sensational, and by doing the work of the scavenger of society, it shall sink into contempt.

No other calling or profession has a finer membership. The splendor of its history, the fertility of its field of labor, and the character of the men it attracts to it should, and I believe will, develop a code of professional ethics making impossible some of the abuses committed in its name. It can restore again what Bagehot calls "the daily play of the higher mind upon the lower," casting the light of the sun upon the doings of the world and, at the same time, sweetening the atmosphere as the sunshine sweetens it.

The freedom of the press and the freedom of the people are closely interwoven, the cause of the one is the cause of the other. If liberty is to be submerged again, fetters imposed upon the souls of men and their honest spoken thoughts made crimes, if the roofs which now cover the freemen of America shall ever shelter a race of slaves, it will be only when the press shall have proved false to its responsibilities.

Some Civic Duties

By E. R. PRITCHARD,
Secretary Chicago Board of Health.

There are too many men who seem to think that when they vote at every election and pay their taxes promptly they have fully discharged all their civic duties.

It never occurs to them that having helped to elect men to enforce the laws, they are also bound, as good citizens, to cooperate with their chosen officials in every way.

Especially is this true of sanitary laws. The proper enforcement of a sanitary code depends entirely upon the willingness of the people to have it enforced. If the residents of a given community desire that the locality be kept clean, that desire alone will prompt them to obey the laws themselves, and in doing this they are living up to the true spirit of civic righteousness, and at the same time are giving to the officers of the law the most effective cooperation that could be desired.

On the other hand, if the residents of a given community are indifferent as to their sanitary surroundings, the laws will not be enforced, and dirt and disorder will abound. So it will be seen that voting right is only starting right. It is not only important that good men be elected to official positions, but it is equally important that after being elected they should be aided in every way in their efforts to enforce the laws.

The highest civic duty, a duty which rests alike upon every citizen, is that of obedience to the laws. This means an enthusiastic compliance which soon becomes contagious in a community, and through which alone the greatest permanent good can be accomplished.

Athletics Demoralizing

By PROF. WILLIAM H. P. FAUNCE,
President of Brown University.

Thirty years ago college athletics were carried out for recreation. Then came the period of competition, and lastly has come the period of systematic prevarication, evasion and subterfuge. Why should not the college faculties open their eyes to facts? I have facts showing that, following the example of the colleges, the high schools are going to the grammar grades and offering money to likely young boys. I am told that of two eastern college nines there is hardly one player who is eligible under the amateur rules. I know of a case in a secondary school where a contract is being drawn up to enable the athletes to play for money outside the school games.

Hotel nines in the east are composed of college men who are paid $50 or $75 to play, but the receipt for the money is made out as to a bellboy or porter, so that no harm will come to the student or to his college. This system of prevarication is the curse of college athletics and should be wiped out.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FOR SHERIFF

DUVALL—We are authorized to announce Alonzo J. Duvall a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Crittenden county, subject to the action of the Republican party. Election 1905.

Turkey has been forced to yield to the demand of President Roosevelt that our schools there be placed on as liberal a footing and equally recognized with those of France and other countries.

As shown by statistics while the cost of living has increased 15.5 per cent wages have increased 16.6 per cent. This shows a balance in favor of prosperity. Doubtless the increase in living expense as compared with former years is due to more luxurious living on account of better wages.

Champ Clark, a member of Congress from Missouri, chairman of the Notification Committee while in a debate with Mr. Landis, of Indiana, at the New Albany Chautauqua Association meeting touching on Kentucky politics, stated that Republicans were advocates and defenders of murder.

A certain portion attending the World's Fair are destined to meet death, it seems. Aside from those being killed in the railroad wrecks, others are meeting death in St. Louis. One day last week two women were killed at the gates of the Exposition by a street car and Mrs. Breckenridge Jones, wife of a millionaire, was killed in a runaway accident inside the grounds.

After his formal notification and his speech of acceptance in which he failed to take an outspoken stand on any of the leading questions of the day, preferring to remain in the background rather than rise above the platform on which he stands, as a leader and statesman should, Judge Alton B. Parker went up apart on Slide Mountain to spend the night. Slide Mountain is his favorite mount. There is a stream of water at its base; probably the water is salty.

We have seen many articles in our exchanges this week charging Congressman Ollie James, of this District, with being found in a certain pool room in Louisville gambling, stating that the place was raided by officers and that Mr. James in making his escape through a window lost his hat. Ollie James is filling the high office of Congressman from our District and is our fellow townsman, therefore we do not publish what our exchanges state, trusting that the accusation is without foundation.

The action of the convention of August 4, at Lexington, nominating Jas. E. Cantrill for the Court of Appeals, and which broke up in a row, was sustained on the 13th inst. by the Democratic State Central Committee only after rejecting the adverse proxy of Jno. Vreeland, of Louisville, but even then Judge Cantrill owes his victory to the notorious Jas. F. Hargis, of Breathitt county fame. The vote of the committee was 4 to 4 and Hargis tipped the scales making it 5 to 4 in favor of the resolution sustaining Cantrill.

We presume that the reason the opposition to Cantrill submitted so tamely was that they could not envy an honor given by the lumber, produce and hardware merchant of Breathitt.

The following editorial clipped from the Paducah Sun has reference to the information contributed to the Record last week by our Birdsville correspondent:

"A farmer's club in Livingston county has figured up that the country spends about $300,000 a year on roads, counting in the value of the labor required of the 1200 voters subject to road duty. Yet they have abominable roads. The sooner the farmers realize that good substantial roads mean a saving in taxes, in addition to more satisfactory service on the roads, the better for the tax payers of a county."

In McCracken county the roads are worked by taxation at a cost of $8.50 per mile as shown by the sworn statements of the Supervisors. In Livingston county under the present system the roads are costing $10 per mile, yet we are informed that some of the roughest roads in the state are in that county. It appears that according to what roads are costing where worked by taxation, taking into consideration the better result, that the citizens of Livingston county would save money in a two-fold way by trying the system of taxation. One thing seems certain, that the cost can not be more and yet each tax payer has the privilege to work out the amount of his tax on the road.

WITH THE CHURCHES.

Next Sunday evening Union services will be held at the Christian church.

Elder H. A. McDonald failed to fill his appointment at the Christian church Sunday.

Union services were held at the Methodist church Sunday evening. Presiding Elder Elgin filling the pulpit. He also directed the sacramental service, but on account of rain the crowd was small.

At the Methodist church Sunday Rev. T. V. Joiner read his lesson as follows:—1st lesson, 73 Ps., 2nd lesson 4th chapter of James. He took his text from the 28th verse of 73 Psalm. Subject, "The Contrast in the Property of the Wicked and the Righteous—Good to Draw Near to God." A synopsis of the thought expressed is as follows: It is good to draw near to God because thereby we receive more light, more spiritual power and a happy experience. Our lives are more useful and our spiritual interests become more secure. As to how to draw near to God, he said, we could do this by prayer, study of God's word and full consecration. We should not only do this, but in the study of God's word we find that we are directed to do so and therein we find that the success and prosperity of the righteous has always been better and more staple than that of the wicked.

Rev. T. A. Conway preached at the Baptist church Sunday from the text, 1st Timothy, 3-15, subject, "Church Membership." Under the head of Value, he pointed out the facts that the Scriptures have no place for a convert outside of the church; that the place where the Christian can live better and do more for Christ, is in the church; that a life in the church is a recognition of the wisdom and commands of Christ and advancing the church is to advance the cause of Christ, and that to live in the church is to make it a light and to enlighten the world. As to the conduct of the church member, he said that it would be regulated by a right conception of the purpose of the church in winning souls to Christ and in building up the spiritual life of a brother; that it will be influenced by the knowledge of the spirit of Christian service such as love, kindness, helpfulness and sympathy; that by supporting the church as an institution we will be lead to make it prominent above all others and our support is given in our presence, co-operation, money, thinking for Christ, etc. To be an informed church member, he said we could acquire it by studying the Scriptures, attendance and attention to church services, study of the historical relations of the church and its duty to the times, denominational literature and attendance upon denominational services.

ODDS AND ENDS.

A Medley of Happenings and Sayings Spicily Told.

Ed McFee, who recently visited his aunt in Indianapolis, returned the other day with two most sumptuous remembrances presented to him by that relative. One was a very handsome solid gold mounted silk umbrella and the other a deliciously carved, ivory headed cane. A massive piece of ivory it must have been originally and it is most cunningly carved showing half a dozen animals with bright ruby eyes. The carving is a masterpiece of art, the larger animal a lion seemingly just emerging from the jungle while the others are in an attitude of fear, the facial expressions being especially noticeable. Just now when the old ivory carvings are so much sought after, Mr. McFee can be congratulated on the possession of so handsome an illustration of this art.

Down on the river somewhere opposite Elizabethtown, Ill., the malaria is particularly bad. Possibly more quinine is taken in that section than in half a dozen other counties. An old fellow by the name of Malcolm was one of those people who never seemed to remember the money borrowed of his friends from time to time and he was withal a great sufferer from fever and ague.

Lawrence Cruce was on his way to the Pell mine one morning when he met the old man by the roadside and asked him how he was getting along.

"Pooley, pooley," said Malcolm, "I am going to have the shakes again this evening."

"Well," said Mr. Cruce, "I am sorry, but if you do get to shaking, try and shake out that ten dollar note you owe me."

People who years ago girdled their trees and cleared off their land so clean that after a few seasons the ground became so poor that as Jim Henry would say, "you couldn't raise an umbrella on it," are rather astonished to hear that Major Clement has been offered $8000 in cash for the timber on 108 acres of his land. Of course, the trees are large and handsome, many being from 4 to 6 feet in diameter at the ground and of course the Major refused the offer of $8000 for the timber. We suppose it would seem like the loss of old friends for the Major to see those handsome, almost animate creations of nature removed from their home and his, where both have grown to a splendid ripe age in the many years that have passed since he and they were but infants in size.

Shortly after President Hayes was elected, the pressure for offices in his gift became so burdensome that the President was nearly worn out physically. Telling a friend about his troubles, he said it reminded him of the story about the Shah of Persia in the early centuries. His Highness was very fond of hunting with falcons, but before starting out he always sent for Hafig, the Court Astrologer and weather prophet to forecast the weather for the day. One Monday morning His Highness was particularly anxious to know about the day and Hafig assured him with many salaams that it would be fair, so the Shah and his retinue of courtiers and servants set forth, but shortly met a peasant driving a jackass to market. The peasant after considerable difficulty made known to the servants that a great storm of wind and rain would overtake them. The Shah on being informed, insisted that Hafig had assured him of a beautiful day and pressed forward.

The peasant's prediction was shortly afterwards verified and every one of the party was caught in the wind and rain. On returning to the palace the Shah sent for Hafig and told him he was a false weather prophet and sent him out to be beheaded as a matter of course. The peasant was sent for and appointed Court Astrologer and weather prophet but he assured the appointment clerk that he foretold the weather only through the actions of the jackass, who, when it was going to storm, pricked up his ears, so the Shah removed the peasant from office and appointed the jackass in his place and that is what makes all of my trouble now," said President Hayes.

"Why, how can that be?" asked his friend.

"It's very simple," replied Mr. Hayes, ever since that date every jackass in the country wants an office.

THE MARKETS

These Prices Are the Very Latest Procurable.

THE RECORD's markets are for the benefit of the farmers and producers who are not in touch with current prices in the cities. This paper discounts the freight or express rates to the consuming point and tells what the article is worth in Marion. For instance, eggs are worth in Chicago to-day 17 cents. It costs to send them in a refrigerator car 68 cents per hundred pounds, or about 1 1-4 cents per dozen. Eggs, therefore, should be worth in Marion to-day at least 15 cents per dozen. We understand they are selling much under that price.

Spring chickens are worth in Chicago to-day 13 cents per pound; at Marion they should bring 12 cents at least. There is no reason why the farmer and raiser should not have what articles are worth. It will pay to keep in touch with this column.

THE LOUISVILLE Live Stock market is difficult to forecast. Choice, well-matured butcher cattle sells more readily than any other class. The common and medium half-fat kinds are very hard to sell at even low prices. The country seems to be full of them and they are not wanted.

CALVES are in fair demand at 5 to 5 1-4.

HOGS are lower. There is no demand for half-fat, grassy shoats. Keep that kind at home.

NO PEANUT STANDS

At Hurricane This Year—Annual Session Begins Aug. 25.

The annual camp meeting at Hurricane will open Thursday, August 25th. A notable feature of the meeting this year will be the absence of stands on the ground. There will be no lemonade or cold drinks of any kind sold on the premises unless the proprietor of the hotel be permitted to sell lemonade, however, the chances appear to be such that those desiring this sort of a cold drink had better take their lemons and sugar along with them and be prepared to make the drink themselves.

At the hotel regular meals will be served and there will also be a lunch counter where you can buy anything you want. For the reason there will be no stands, the lunch counter will be indispensable.

The meeting will be conducted as usual by Rev. J. J. Smith, of Clinton, Ky., and Evangelist Miss Bertie Crow, of Joplin, Mo. They have conducted the services here several years and the committee appears to be well pleased with their efforts. They will probably be assisted by Evangelist Miss Luna Anderson, of Fruitland, Mo., who has been preaching several years and who was a school mate of Miss Crow.

The singing will be conducted by Rev. Charles, of Dycusburg, and Eulie Threlkeld, of Hurricane.

Everything being in readiness farmers generally being well up with their work one of the biggest meetings ever held here, is anticipated.

To a great extent the noted congeniality that exists among the citizens of Crittenden on the east side of the county, is brought about by the occasion the Piney camp meeting affords them to meet together and exchange ideas and courtesies and on the west this is equally true of Hurricane camp meeting.

Let every body attend and give the meeting a liberal patronage.

ALMOST ASSURED

Is Salem That the Desired Exchange Will be Secured.

It is almost an assured fact now that the local exchange at Salem will be built by the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co. This company has put local phones in at Mexico and have just completed a line from there to Dycusburg. The line will be extended from Dycusburg to Salem. Templeman and Dabney, managers of the Cumberland at Princeton, accompanied by Robt. F. Haynes, of this city, spent Wednesday at Salem working up the local exchange. Forty contracts for local phones were made, and only ten more are desired. Doubtless that number has been obtained by this time, as Mr. Templeman remained in Salem to close up the contracts.
 From Salem the Cumberland people will extend their line to Golconda, crossing the Ohio river at that point and making connection with other lines there.
 A short time ago it was thought that the local exchange at Salem would be built by mineral men and local capitalists, but the Cumberland people are now willing to put their system in operation there and it appears to be the best opportunity Salem has ever had to get an exchange.

Universal Good Has Resulted From Shortened Work Hours

By CHARLES L. BAINE,
General Secretary of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

IN comparison with olden times, the present workday is a shorter workday, but the shorter workday, as it is now commonly understood, signifies the eight-hour workday. It must be considered that the shorter workday is not universally enjoyed, rather, only in those trades favored with effectual organization of the workers, and in the infrequent instances of liberal-minded employers. We must not lose sight of this fact, when viewing the benefits and advantages resulting from the shorter workday to the favored few, for, whatever benefits and advantages the shorter workday has secured to favored workers, those benefits and advantages are, to some extent, narrowed by the very fact that the shorter workday is not universal. Neither should we overlook the benefits accruing to the many from the added advantages enjoyed by the comparative few.

Education, religion and good government have progressed, and, to some extent, each and all of these essentials to a higher civilized state are indebted to the benefits, advantages and opportunities secured to the workers by reducing the daily hours of excessive toil. The shorter workday has made the individual worker better and more healthful, morally and physically. It broadens his mental scope and increases his physical capacity. It leaves him in a physical condition and state of mind that enable and beget mental and moral development. It has given to the workers the opportunity to avail themselves of the advantages of our modern facilities for gaining a broader knowledge of the greater affairs of life and more intelligent association with the world in which we live. By increasing his physical and mental capacity it has increased and extended his economic efficiency, and, to a greater degree, protected him against industrial insecurity or premature disability.

He has become a better mechanic and more civilized, and, consequently, of more value to his employer. He has become a better citizen, and, consequently, of more value to his community.

One of the great evils of our industrial system is working the individual at top speed. This reduces his competitive efficiency from a period covering 45 or 50 years, which he must work if he does not become wholly incapacitated, to a period of 30 years or less, and makes no provision for the sacrifice imposed. A workman cannot healthfully perform more than a certain amount of work, or work more than a certain number of hours each day. When one, two or three hours are added to his daily task, there is bound to come, prematurely, a time when his muscles and sinews fail to respond, followed by a slowing down and the inevitable replacement by a younger and quicker worker. At a time when his family and social liabilities are greatest, his industrial asset, labor, has been made either of little, or sadly reduced, value. He is industrially, if not physically, a bankrupt.

Reduce the daily hours of labor of the workers from 11 and 10 to 8, and it gives them the time and opportunity for self-development along higher and useful lines; it gives them moments of recreation and relieves them from the drudging, enervating and stultifying monotony of performing one operation during every hour of the day that they are capable of healthfully expending physical energy; it gives them the opportunity to exercise right parental supervision over the wellbeing of their children and homes. The home is happier and more healthful and the environment of the children improved.

To the child and youthful workers and the young men and women, denied the earlier advantages of education, the opportunity is opened for self-cultivation, and to every worker, the opportunities to be self-helping and to promote honest ambitions are increased.

College Men and the Bible

By DR. RICHARD D. HARLAN,
President of Lake Forest University.

There are men who consult the Bible merely as a dry depository of doctrine, just as a lawyer delves into the volumes of the federal statutes to find out the law. That is valuable only as a preliminary; unless the soul comes into contact with the eternal power which pulsates in those inspired words, the Bible is a dead book instead of a living oracle. If a man will always remember that Christianity depends upon a person rather than upon a book, he may be saved from many an attack of despairing skepticism.

Here emerges an intensely practical question for parents and teachers. When the boy is developing into manhood there is a constant changing in the lines of his religious thinking, and it then is perilous to mistake the outer rampart of doctrine for the inner citadel of personal faith. It is sad that so many teachers do not recognize that it is wiser to leave many open questions for the youth to adjust as best suits his personal belief.

As youth is often a time of great intellectual ferment and as your boy develops into full manhood, there will be a constant changing of the lines of his religious thinking. During such a period it is perilous to mistake the outer rampart of doctrine for the inner citadel of personal faith. We do not believe the Bible to be inspired, God-breathed, because it tells us of Jesus Christ, because He is unveiled in it, but because all the lines of its history lead up to Him, because He is its climax and center and is the only light in the world.

Value of Association

By DR. FREDERIC E. DEWHURST.

"Remember the days of old; consider the years of many generations." The value of life is dependent to a good degree on the character of its memories and associations. Just as a violin acquires character by storing up tones and harmonic qualities at the hand of the master, so life acquires meaning by its accumulation of great memories and noble associations.

We are in these days in peril of losing the sense of the value of continuity of impression, of firm and fixed habit and of noble associations which grow up through our attachment to the church. The stock question nowadays is: "Have you heard Dr. So-and-So preach?" And the stock reply is: "Oh, yes; I've heard him, and Mr. Blank and Dr. What's-His-Name. In fact, I've heard nearly all who are worth hearing." We can almost imagine the denizens of our great cities writing their religious biographies one of these days under the title "Forty Churches in Forty Sundays." Such is the poor apology for religious life. Such is the vagrant and unhappy substitute for a life which can acquire value only in the midst of continuous associations.

MONEY IN CULTIVATION.

The Farmer Who Works His Soil Diligently Is the One That Gets the Big Crops.

When I was a child I read a Sunday-school story which impressed me very much about a poor boy who was made very happy by the gift of a pig. He did not have much to feed the pig, but he tried to make up for other lacks by attention and care and was so far rewarded that the pig became a fine large porker, and when brought to his natural end upon the block returned a "handsome pittance" to the sagacious boy. As I grew older, doubts beset my mind concerning the probabilities of that story, notwithstanding its irreproachable origin, until I met a woman who was striving most conscientiously to carry on and do justice to the pet farm of her husband, a railroad conductor who "conducted" most of the time. She kept pigs and, like all neat housekeepers, carried her passion for cleanliness into the barnyard. As a result those pigs were taken early to the watering trough and became so accustomed to their daily bath that, like the precocious children pictured in advertisements, they cried for it. It was a decided departure from established precedents in pig culture, but it paid. The pigs thrived and waxed so fat and beautiful that their proud mistress bore them off to the fair and took all the blue ribbons she could lay her hands on. Doubtless they were well fed, too, but that does not destroy the force of the argument for care and cultivation.

Cleanliness appears to be almost as near to godliness in the culture of crops as in the regeneration of the human family. When I questioned a man who had succeeded in raising 900 bushels of onions where only 500 grew before he assured me that the result was due more to care and attention than to richness of soil. He asserted that onion culture, like the training of a child, should begin with the ancestors. In other words, the seed sowed should be the product of good, well cultivated onions, and it should be planted in a seedbed as nearly perfect as harrowing and cultivating could make it. Then when the onions had sprouted, cultivation should be renewed and every weed should be removed in order that the young bulbs might inherit the earth and get the start of all competitors. "Cultivate!" "Cultivate!" was the motto of that onion grower, and we believe it must be the motto of every producer who deals with organized life.—Farmers' Review.

EASILY HANDLED HARROW.

It Is Arranged So That the Teeth Are Sure to Cover Every Inch of Ground.

The harrow herewith illustrated is eight feet long by four feet wide, with teeth in each beam. The teeth should be of five-eighth-inch steel and put through not more than two inches. This makes a fine comb harrow which draws all the top and does not pull up trash. Each beam is attached to the pulling bar with a hook and drop link. Through the middle is an inch rod put through thimbles, one being slipped over each beam as shown at A. This makes the harrow flexible. By withdrawing the inch rod and unhooking from the pulling bar, it can be stored in very small space. A boy can handle it. The harrow is very easy to draw, the beams being very near the ground act as levers, while the teeth cover every inch of ground.—J. Plomefield, in Orange Judd Farmer.

Red Gum Coming to Front.

Recent investigations of the Bureau of Forestry indicate an important addition to the present timber resources of the country through the better utilization of the red gum. This timber tree is the predominant species on the hardwood bottom lands of all the southeastern states. In spite of its abundant supply, it has been slow to reach commercial importance, because of the extent to which it warps and stains in seasoning. While hickory, oak, ash and yellow poplar were cheaply obtainable, red gum received little attention. The increasing scarcity and rising price of more adaptable trees have forced the gum into a market place of late and have caused lumbermen to seek, with partial success, such methods of handling it as would obviate the difficulties which have stood in the way of a larger use of the wood.

Action of Lime on Soil.

The Ohio experiment station gives this simple explanation of one action of lime: "If the lime be mixed with manure, an odor of ammonia will become apparent. This means that the lime is liberating the ammonia from the manure, and that it is escaping into the air. If lime be mixed with the soil similar action will take place. If a crop be growing upon the soil it may absorb part of the escaping ammonia and a larger crop will result; but this larger crop is made at the expense of the soil stores of plant food, and if these stores are not maintained by manuring or fertilizing the soil will soon refuse to respond to lime, because all the material in it upon which lime can act has been drawn out, and the soil is poorer than if no lime had been used."

Williams Reunion.

On Wednesday, July 27, 1904, the members and relatives of the Williams family gathered at the old homestead, now the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Williams, of near Ford's Ferry for the purpose of holding a family reunion.

The inclemency of the early morning made many sad hearts, but as the clouds floated by and gave way to the beautiful blue sky, just so, the rays of sunlight drove the sadness from all hearts. Crowds of mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters and friends were soon enroute until five generations were represented, including 105 persons that had assembled at this pleasant home.

As the noon hour drew near the extensive table in the big shady yard was rapidly filled from the many baskets and to this was added the juicy meats from an old Kentucky barbecue pit. Two hours were enjoyably spent doing justice to this spread.

The afternoon was spent in singing and pleasant visiting, and when the shadows began to lengthen and preparations were being made for going home, the choir sang "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

THE ATTAINABLE.

If I could write in softly-measured strains
The thoughts that flit betimes within my brain,
And I could grave them as with iron pen
Deep down within the secret hearts of men,
They might perchance bear fruitage there
And grow unto some good. Ah; that it might be so!
If I could sing as some have sung of old
Like silver lute-strings strung on frames of gold,
And burning words in melody impress
Upon a heart sin-burdened to excess
Till words and melody take root and grow
Unto its goal. Ah; that it might be so!

If I could speak with an entrancing tongue,
Could fire the aged, and subdue the young,
Bring light to eyes that have been dimmed
With tears,
And to the mourner bring back happier years;
If in their hearts my words would live and grow
It might do good. Ah; that it might be so!

But since I cannot wield a mighty pen,
Nor sing entrancing to the hearts of men;
Nor can my tongue like liquid silver flow;
What then? Is there no good that I may do?
Use but the talent that God gave, and know
You can do good. He speaks; it must be so.

The DEACON'S DEFECTION

By KENNETT HARRIS

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

JIMSONVILLE was a ferment of excitement. This was somewhat unusual for Jimsonville, because things had a way of not happening there. Uncle Billy Stephens could remember the time when the Second Baptist church steeple blew down and "come within ten rods of mashing" Lufe Walker's youngest inter the ground," and a circus visited Freedomburg in '72, and Freedomburg is less than five miles from Jimsonville. Of course, there were elections and occasional dog fights, but in the main the town's normal condition was far from frenzied. It took the appearance of Jack the Kisser to worsen the inhabitants to that pitch.

Belle Jackson was the first victim. Belle was a particularly plump and kissable girl and her report of the outrage to which she had been subjected occasioned no surprise. She was returning from Wilkenses with a tin pail of milk one evening about dark when a man met her—"a tall man, dressed in dark clothes, kind of middle aged, with a red beard an' fair complexion." This person, without offering any explanations or excuse for his unconventional behavior, placed his arm around the young woman's waist and imprinted a fervent salute upon her ruby lips. She was afraid to struggle for fear of spilling the milk and before she could recover from her surprise the man had disappeared.

Miss Caroline Gansing, the dressmaker, was kissed a night or two later. It was almost dark when this happened, which, some of the women said, accounted for it. In consequence of the darkness Miss Gansing could not give a very good description of her assailant, but she was sure that he was tall. "You didn't have to stoop then?" inquired Mrs. Cal Stevens, to whom the dressmaker was relating the story of the rude assault. But Cal Stevens' wife always did have a mean tongue.

Rhoda Wilkins was the next. She was going along the same road traversed by Belle Jackson when the kisses embraced her with the same dexterity and in the same ardent manner he had shown on the two previous occasions. It began to grow serious. Mrs. Payne who never thought that the kisses would have the boldness to attack a married woman, and in this belief ventured the dangerous highway, found out her mistake. She was kissed too and three other married women were obliged to submit to the same indignity within two weeks. "Lisha Payne got out his shotgun and lay in wait the best part of one night and other exasperated husbands and swains watched for the osculatory maniac, but in vain. For a time, at least, Jack the Kisser seemed to have disappeared.

Mrs. Malachi Blevins was one of the few who had escaped the terrible embraces of the mysterious unknown. She remarked that she would like to see the color of the hair of any two-legged man who would dare to kiss her. She did not intend the remark to be taken literally. In spite of her immunity, however, Deacon Malachi showed perhaps as much excitement and indignation as any man in town.

"I'd just like ter ketch a holt o' him," he said to Mrs. Plimpsey. "I'm a lawidin' man an' a man-o' peace, but such doin's is scan'lous, an' I'd be apt to make an example o' him."

Mrs. Plimpsey was a widow, black-eyed and buxom and of a cheerful disposition. She tenanted one of the deacon's two houses and he had stopped in like a good landlord, to see if there was anything that needed fixing around the place. He had found the widow perched on a stepladder, washing the parlor window, and she said that if he'd excuse her she'd just go right on with her work, as she could talk to him just as well. The deacon couldn't hardly help noticing that she had a mighty shapely ankle. He approved of planks, although he was, of course, too modest a man to say so.

"Gracious!" exclaimed Mrs. Plimpsey, "I never saw you so fierce, deacon. I sh'd think, though, that if people didn't want to get kissed they might keep away from the Wilkenses lane, evenin's."

"Well," said the deacon, "they might, mebby, but I don't reckon they go 'cep'n' out of a harmless female curiosity, an' they've a right to go. I don't blame 'em. But this Jack, he order he rid on a white oak rail. The idee, that a good lookin' woman can't go where she dum please, an' feel safe!"

The widow smiled. "You don't need to hold that ladder, deacon," she said. "I guess its safe now," she continued. "Anyways I've promised to go over to Wilkenses myself this evenin'."

"Not!" exclaimed the deacon, "don't you do it, Miss Plimpsey."

"I'll take chances," said the widow, giving him a coquettish glance. "I guess there ain't nobody'd want to kiss me."

"Come down off'n that there ladder a minit," said the deacon, with a flushing face.

"I'm not through yet," said Mrs. Plimpsey, calmly, "an' I think I see Miss Blevins startin' out of her front gate. Maybe she's lookin' for you."

The deacon started and hastily picked up his hat.

"I reckon it's time I was goin'," he said. "If you don't mind, I'll let myself out of the back door. He had reached the parlor door, when he turned back.

"You're jokin' about goin' through that lane this evenin', ain't you?" he asked.

"No," she answered, "I don't think I'll be bothered. Yet, it is Miss Blevins an' she's a comin' here."

The deacon bolted.

When Mrs. Plimpsey suddenly felt herself in the sudden clasp of a pair of strong arms in the gloom of the Wilkenses lane that evening, she possibly regretted that she had not heeded the deacon's advice, but at all events she retained her self-possession. Recognizing the futility of resistance she meekly surrendered her lips to the spoiler, but just as he drew away for breath she made a sudden snatch at the red beard that was pressing her peachy cheek. It came off in her hand, and Jack the Kisser, starting back, disclosed beneath his slouched hat the countenance of Deacon Malachi Blevins—and a rueful countenance it was, too.

"Deacon!" said Mrs. Plimpsey, reproachfully. "Can this be you?"

The deacon hung his head.

"What do you suppose Mrs. Blevins will say when I tell her this?" demanded the widow, sternly.

"You ain't goin' to tell her, are you?" asked the deacon, imploringly. "Say you won't. You don't know what she is or you wouldn't. I don't believe I'll ever have done this if it hadn't been for her. She's jest blue vit'rol an' cold pizen, is Miss Blevins. She's helt me down and made life a misery every time I looked cross-eyed at a woman, an' I allus liked wimmen, in an inncrnt way. Between her an' sustainin' a reputation I've ben a to'able miserable man, an' lately I got despr'it, an' kicked over the traces. You wouldn't tell her—Bessy?"

"I think you ought to be ashamed of yourself," said Mrs. Plimpsey. "I think I ought to tell. I declare I'm afraid of you."

"You don't need to be."

"I am. If I don't tell will you behave yourself and not go round kissing young girls again?"

"Honest, I never will—Bessy," said the deacon.

"I kind of had an idea it was you," said the widow presently. "—but I'd never have believed you had the spunk."

RUSSIAN FACTORY NURSERY

How Peasant Children Are Cared For While Their Parents Are at Work—Strong Force for Good.

Interesting is the study of working people in a great Russian factory told in Social Service by Vladimir F. Gnessin, a Russian electrical engineer. He tells how the great mills were founded in 1722 by Peter the Great, and how they have grown larger and larger from that time until now, when 14,000 people are employed. Among the interesting things which the writer tells concerning efforts made for the benefit of working people in this factory, he says, regarding the nursery:

"When the parents go to work they are compelled to leave the care of their children to nurses, chiefly old women or little girls. Such care consequently causes many cases of sickness among children. In consideration of this and in order to provide for the proper care of the children of the peasant parents, the company has established a nursery where every child brought in is washed, clothed in clean clothes and fed. This establishment, besides being a direct force for good, has also the advantage that it establishes among the mothers proper principles for caring for their children."

THE SUNDAY BIBLE SCHOOL

Lesson in the International Series for August 21, 1904—"Elijah on Mount Carmel."

(Prepared by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.)
(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)

LESSON TEXT.

(1 Kings 18:30-46; Memory Verses, 35-35.)
20. And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him. And he repaired the altar of the Lord that was broken down.

21. And Elijah took twelve stones according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the Lord came, saying, Israel shall be thy name.

22. And with the stones he built an altar in the name of the Lord; and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed.

23. And he put the wood in order, and cut bullock to pieces, and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt sacrifice, and on the wood.

24. And he said, Do it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time. And they did it the third time.

25. And the water ran round about the altar; and he filled the trench also with water.

26. And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that Thou art God in Israel, and that I am Thy servant, and that I have done all these things at Thy word.

27. Hear me, O Lord. Hear me, that this people may know that Thou art the Lord God, and that Thou hast turned their heart back again.

28. And the fire of the Lord fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.

29. And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces; and they said, The Lord, He is the God; the Lord, He is the God.

30. And Elijah said unto them, Take the prophets of Baal; let not one of them escape. And they took them; and Elijah brought them down to the brook Kishon, and slew them there.

31. And Elijah said unto Ahab, Get thee up, and eat and drink; for there is a sound of abundance of rain.

32. So Ahab went up to eat and to drink. And Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; and he cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees.

33. And said to his servant, Go up now, look toward the sea. And he went up, and looked, and said, There is nothing. And he said, Go again seven times.

34. And it came to pass at the seventh time, that he said, Behold, there ariseth a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand. And he said, Go up, say unto Ahab, Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not.

35. And it came to pass in the meanwhile that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to Jezreel.

36. And the hand of the Lord was on Elijah; and he girded up his loins, and ran before Ahab to the entrance of Jezreel.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"If the Lord be God, follow him."—1 Kings 18:21.

TIME.—Soon after the events of last lesson.

PLACE.—Mount Carmel, probably near its summit.

Comparing Scripture with Scripture.

Faith That Could Wait.—As we contemplate Elijah's glorious triumph on Mount Carmel, let us not forget the long three and one-half years of patient waiting. The test of success in God's work generally comes at this point. David emphasizes it in Ps. 27:13-14, and Paul says: "Having done all, stand."

Elijah waited and his waiting brought his glorious triumph. Heb. 10:36, Gal. 6:9. Rev. 2:10. The longest night has its end. Noah waited 100 years for the flood. Abraham waited a lifetime for the son of promise. Israel waited 400 years for deliverance. David waited many perilous years for the kingdom.

Faith That Knew No Fear.—Elijah had fled to the brook and then Zarephath to escape the foes of God, now he faces them. True faith sometimes runs from evil and evil's forces. And faith made Elijah bold to command a king to gather representatives from all over the nation, and to challenge the 850 false prophets to decisive test. True faith never fears in the face of God's foes. Matt. 10:26; Ps. 27:1-3; 56:4; 118:6.

Faith That Dared the Test.—Elijah on Mount Carmel with God was mightier than all of Baal's prophets, and the king of Israel behind them. But remember that Elijah was acting for God; at God's direction, see verse 36, and for God's honor and glory and the salvation of Israel. When God plans the test it is always safe to risk everything upon it. "One with God is a majority." How rich God's word is in examples of the truth of this.

Faith to Execute God's Judgments.—The law of the Moslem dispensation required that false prophets be slain. Deut. 13:15; 18:20; Zech. 13:2, 3. To fail to observe and execute all of God's word is disastrous. See examples in 1 Sam. 15:2, 3, 9, 23; 2 Kings 13:14-19. Paul, as God's faithful apostle, performed a painful duty. 1 Cor. 5:1-5; 1 Tim. 1:20. God has given us the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, with which to fight against the false prophets and the evil. Let us be bold and fearless in the wielding of that weapon. Heb. 4:12.

Faith That Brought the Blessing.—Faith that could wait; faith that knew no fear; faith that dared the test; faith that executed God's judgments, was the kind of faith which could bring the blessing. "Sound of abundance of rain." Elijah's ear was quickened to hear the sound before there was a cloud in sight. There is always sound of abundance of rain where faith performs her whole duty. All the tithes brought into the storehouse mean the pouring out of the blessing. Mal. 3:10. Real faith is overcoming faith. 1 John 5:4.

THE GOLDEN TEXT.

"If the Lord be God, follow Him." This is the challenge that come to every soul. We are ready to cry: with the people on Mount Carmel. "The Lord, He is God; the Lord, He is God." But how about following Him. We should follow Him, because:

(1) He invites us. Matt. 11:28. (2) His way is the only safe way. Ps. 1 (3) He is the only through Guide. John 14:6. (4) Cross-bearing means crown-wearing. Matt. 16:19 and James 1:12. (5) His way leads to mansion in Heaven. John 14:2. (6) His way is profitable. 1 Tim. 4:8.
