NUMBER 11.

ZINC SOARING LEAD $53.50

Mining Matters Quiet Throughout The District—Small Shipments.

A TWO FOOT LEDGE OF GOLD.

The highest price reported paid for zinc ore in the Joplin district during the last week was $43.50 for the ore from the Bumblebee mine on the Shewmaker land in the southeast part of Joplin. The Belmont at Cartersville was reported sold at $43 per ton. This was better than a $40 basis. Lead remained unchanged selling all week at $53.50 per ton. It is predicted that the price of zinc ore will reach $45 within the next week or ten days by prominent mining men who keep in close touch with conditions throughout the district, as the smelters keep it cleaned up from one week to another. The present high prices have stimulated prospecting and the development of virgin tracts. There is a larger demand now for mining leases and undeveloped properties than there has been in recent years. Moneyed men are arriving from the East in large numbers and the hotels are crowded as in the days when zinc ore was selling for $55 five years ago.

THE SMALL NUMBER of ore wagons passing through our streets as compared with last year's shipments is very noticeable. It is estimated that not over ten per cent of fluor spar tonnage as compared with previous years is being mined and put on cars for consumers. The shipments of zinc carbonate has almost ceased, occasionally a carload or two is moved but no regular daily shipments are being made as in former years. The production of zinc blende or jack as well as galena concentrates is increasing month by month. Of course, the carbonate of zinc which up to this year has been our particular pride has in several instances been exhausted as it would naturally happen on so essentially a surface ore. The fluor spar decrease must be owing to but little if any preparations having been made in the past for the future. Open cut work and surface mining all through the district is responsible for our present small output. The cheap producing policy adopted at the outset of our mining career is naturally the cause of our present decrease in tons. This is gradually being remedied by the employment of intelligent mining methods. Robert Drescher, who has charge of the Columbia mine is one of our pioneers in blocking out ore for the future. The Columbia mine has always been a strong one, yet there is a limit to the supply if new is not opened and ore put for the future supply. Mr. Drescher's policy is to continue and as depth is gained to open up in this manner to have an ample supply of ore ready to hand. It is at the outset much more to open a property in this many of the stockholders find more or less such methods, but that they are the only proper ones to pursue is unquestionably true as all of the great mines of the world are worked in this manner. The constant production of zinc and lead ore at the Columbia is the best argument that could be adduced in support of Mr. Drescher's mining methods, and that this output is increasing month by month is one of the most favorable features in our mining future.

Mr. Reed who has charge of the mining work for the Kentucky Fluor Spar Company has also had rather a strenuous time in attempting the same methods that are employed in other sections. It is sheer folly to argue that what has been done in the way of ore production from surface work can be duplicated from exhausted openings. Mr. Reed's suggestions of proper mining methods are receiving strong support from the President of the Kentucky Company and the output in the near future from one or two of the Kentucky Companies' properties will in all probability be far more than from half a dozen surface prospects and really what is of far greater interest the product will be much more valuable and in the end will show a lessened cost per ton. That open cut methods are still being pursued in many parts of this district is to be regretted. There is no question but that this class of work is a menace to future profits as well as safety and permanency to the mining company permitting such slipshod methods.

It is rather amusing yet very wearisome to read of the many "Greatest Strikes" that are reported weekly from various portions of this district. The very latest one is the personal experiences of a jolly good fellow who visited a prospective mine where great care is exercised about permitting visitors in the shaft. As he tells it the orders are almost prohibitory and only a select few are ever allowed the usual privileges of a peep at the ore bodies. One of the cast iron rules of the management being that every visitor should take a solemn obligation not to reveal what he saw down below. As it happened, two gentlemen were allowed down at the same time with the foreman, one being the narrator of this story. He says that somehow he escaped the usual oath and that what he saw down below he could talk about, dropping his voice several degrees he said, "They have two feet of solid gold in that shaft and it is fully a mile long."

In the front windows of the Yandell-Gugenheim dry goods store is a unique device for advertising our ores of lead and zinc, of fluor spar and coal. A large oaken frame with glass covers a banded background of the various ores and minerals mentioned, the letters in each division being composed of small pieces of the ore named. Mr. Nunn was the designer assisted by Mr. Savre.

AMONG old Gorgon Graham's maxims are one or two that an unsuccessful prospector might do well to remember. "No man's a failure until he's dead or loses his courage." "It isn't what a man's got in the bank, but what he's got in his head that makes him a great merchant."

COL. J. L. FRANKLIN, of Trade-water Coal Co., is installing an electric light plant at the company's shaft near Sturgis, and, it is stated, with proper encouragement he will install a system of electric lights for the town of Sturgis.

Military Wedding.

Marion Ryan, of near Crittenden Springs, 20 years of age, was arrested and lodged in jail here charged with seducing Nora Bagwell, 15 years of age, and daughter of Jim Bagwell, of Sheridan.

Ryan had his examining trial last week before County Judge Towery and was held over to await the action of the grand jury. On Wednesday Ryan sent for the girl and they were married by Judge Towery, and the charge was dismissed.

WITH A REVOLVER

Young Thomas Linley, of Salem, Attempts the Life of His Father.

A FORE FINGER SHOT OFF

Thursday morning Isaac Linley, an attorney and leading farmer of Salem, was minus a fore finger and his boy, Tom, had a sore head on account of the latter's drunken spree and ill humor.

Late Wednesday afternoon Tom, aged 22, went home in a drunken state to secure a horse to ride or drive to Lola. Not knowing of his son's intentions, the father had turned the horse into the pasture. Upon not finding the horse in the stable Thomas became very angry with his father, abusing him and chasing him about the place with a revolver. It is reported that a scuffle ensued and Mr. Linley was trying to take the weapon from the young man when an accidental shot cut off the left fore finger of the father.

Mr. Linley at once went to the drug store of N. R. Farris & Co., to have the wound dressed. The young man followed him to the store and attempted entering when N. R. Farris, being unable to stop him any other way, struck him on the head with a base ball bat, which quieted him, but for fear of his again becoming aroused, Mr. Linley remained away from home over night.

ANOTHER SET BACK

Declares Unconstitutional Act Making Circuit Clerk Umpire.

Covington, Ky., Sept. 17.—Judge Lassing, who yesterday heard a motion to dissolve the injunction granted by County Judge Stephens preventing Circuit Clerk Drogo from acting as referee of the Kenton board of election commissioners today handed down a decision overruling the motion. Judge Lassing declares that the law, which applies only to counties containing cities of the second class is unconstitutional. The law was passed in an effort to prevent Sheriff McNery, who is at outs with the Democratic organization, from acting. Judge Lassing, who declared it invalid, is a Democratic state central and executive committeeman.

Roosevelt's Record

A Friend to the Working Man During His Entire Public Career.

Theodore Roosevelt from the day of his first entrance into public life over twenty years ago has been a consistent and unselfish friend of the man who toils. As a member of the New York Assembly, as Civil Service Commissioner, as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, as Governor of New York, as President of the United States, he has never failed to show a real loyalty to the interests of labor. In his first message to Congress as President he said:

"The most vital problem with which the country, and for that matter the whole civilized world, has to deal is the problem which has for one side the betterment of social conditions, moral and physical, in large cities, and for another side the effort to deal with that tangle of far-reaching questions which we group together when we speak of 'labor.'"

His entire record as legislator and executive is consistent with that utterance.

BETTER ROADS

In Livingston County—Farmers Take Action—Vreeland Lost.

At a Farmers' Institute recently held at Duley Bluff church in Livingston county, by Commissioner of Agriculture Hubert Vreeland and O. M. Hanna, of Frankfort, committees were appointed to purchase graders and other machinery necessary to make better roads.

These committees will investigate the various means of making better roads and it is hoped that valuable results will accrue to the county as a result of these investigations.

It will be remembered by our readers that attention was called to the present bad condition of roads in that county, by our Birdsville correspondent a short time ago, which in turn was referred to by some of the Paducah papers.

After the meeting had been held Messrs. Vreeland and Hanna took a skiff at Smithland for Paducah and got caught in a fog and spent nearly all night on the river reaching Paducah at 3 a. m.

DEMOCRATIC LAW KNOCKED OUT

No Certificate Necessary to Show Registration.

Covington, Ky., Sept. 20.—Special Judge Mackoy has declared unconstitutional the amendment to the election law passed by the last Kentucky legislature compelling all voters registering to secure from the clerks of their respective counties a certificate of registration. He enjoined John B. Yates, county clerk, from issuing any of the certificates of registration as prayed for Saturday by Dr. J. D. Collins, of Covington. Mackoy, by agreement, acted for judge in the absence of Circuit Judge Shaw.

The law, as amended, affects cities of the first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth classes. The amendment provided that certificates of registration must be presented by each voter and that if a certificate should be lost, the holder could buy another by paying 50 cents. The law does not, however, provide any punishment for purchasing or selling these certificates fraudulently.

According to the agreement reached between the attorneys on both sides in the case, the decision of Judge Mackoy ends the matter so far as the circuit court is concerned, and the case will be taken to the court of appeals and advanced on the docket so as to obtain an early decision.

Judge Mackoy, in his decision, said there were two questions for consideration in the case to decide—whether Collins had the right to sue and whether the legislature's act was constitutional.

As to the first, he said: "In this state I have no doubt that the remedy by injunction is the proper proceeding, and that any illegal expenditure of money by a public officer may be enjoined in a suit begun by a resident taxpayer. I am of the opinion, therefore, that the plaintiff in this action has sufficient interest in the subject matter to enable him to maintain an action."

The second question was whether the requirement that voters have certificates, as provided in the amendment, was the "registration" mentioned in section 147 of the state constitution.

As to this, he said: "I am of the opinion that the provision in the reference to the issuing of a certificate to a voter, which he is required to present when he offers to vote, and without the presentation of which to officers of election he can not vote, does not come within the meaning of word registration, as that word or term is used."

"The issuing of a certificate to a person who registers in no way serves the purpose intended in the registration of voters. The certificate remains in the possession of the registered voter, unless he loses it, and can not afford any aid either to the officers of election nor to the public in determining any condition of the election."

"The requiring that the voter shall present a certificate of the fact that he is registered is imposing another qualification upon a voter not prescribed by the constitution, and is a limitation upon his right to vote. It is in no sense a reasonable regulation for right of suffrage, and if the voter shall lose his certificate the burden is imposed upon him of obtaining a duplicate before he can exercise the privilege of voting. The act under consideration disqualifies a person from voting, and if he would exercise the privilege of voting he must then pay a stipulated sum in order that he may vote."

The hearing was given Tuesday, when arguments were made against the amendment by the Hon. David Fairleigh, of this city. He claimed that the amendment provides an additional qualification in order to exercise the elective franchise; and further, that it impedes and was intended to impede suffrage in cities of the first, second, third and fourth classes, and was therefore unconstitutional.

HURRICANE.

It has been some time since we appeared in these columns. We are back from Henderson, back from the camp meeting, from Dunn Springs, from Tolu, and from Joe Lindsay's to see Joe Bateman make sorghum.

The Henderson State Convention was an enjoyable occasion and was enjoyed by your correspondent.

The camp meeting was fine, one of the best out of 15. I hope to live to see another one.

Bob Threlkeld will move to Livingston county soon.

George Sullenger and George Station will move to Crayneville right soon.

Orat Stephenson has moved to Tolu.

Will the people ever get through talking about the camp meeting and the women preachers. One man of some prominence has been heard to say that they were leading men to hell. Well, Brother, you will need all of your tobacco juice to cool your own filthy tongue if you don't get converted and quit your sinning every day, if you do wear a long coat and bear the name of a minister. You had better learn the secret of success so that you would be able to count one conversion in your ministry to their hundreds. I know you. I have smelt your smoke.

Ethel, the daughter of George Layton, is still sick at the campground, but is much improved and will soon be out again.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

THE SUNDAY BIBLE SCHOOL

Lesson in the International Series for September 25, 1904—Quarterly Review.

(Prepared by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.)
(Copyright, 1904, by J. M. Edson.)
GOLDEN TEXT FOR QUARTER.—"The Lord is merciful and gracious."—Psalm 104:8.

The Quarterly Review.

The Kings.—The quarter's lessons have taken us over about 80 years of the history of Judah and Israel. Three lessons have been devoted to the kings of Judah—Rehoboam, Asa and Jehoash—phat—and nine to the kingdom of Israel. Following the splendid reign of David and the magnificent reign of David's son, Solomon, Rehoboam, the latter's son, came to the throne, and it was his pride and impolitic conduct which alienated the ten tribes from Judah, the ruling house. Jehoash, the son of Nebat, became king over the northern kingdom and Rehoboam continued as king over Judah and part of the tribe of Benjamin.

Kings of Judah and Israel.

The following diagram gives the kings of the two kingdoms, the length of their respective reigns and the prophets who served in Judah and Israel. Note the great number of kings in Israel and the shortness of their reigns as compared with the Kings of Judah:

SAUL (40 YRS.) SAMUEL	REHOBAM (22 YRS.) SHEMIAH (8 YRS.) ABIAH (1 YR.) ASAH (41 YRS.) AZARIAH (1 YR.) JOTHAM (16 YRS.) JEREMIAH (2 YRS.) JEHU (28 YRS.)	JEHOASH (40 YRS.) JEREMIAH (2 YRS.) JEHOASH (40 YRS.) JEHOASH (40 YRS.) JEHOASH (40 YRS.) JEHOASH (40 YRS.) JEHOASH (40 YRS.) JEHOASH (40 YRS.)
--------------------------	--	--

The Names of the Prophets are in Black Faced Type.

The Lessons.—Of the six kings considered in the lessons two were good and four were bad, but even the good kings made grave mistakes which God did not fail to record for our instruction and warning. Note that the general tendency in the two kingdoms is downward, toward the ultimate ruin which engulfed first Israel and then Judah. The events of the lessons naturally group themselves around the kings of Judah and Israel and the prophet Elijah. For this reason the review may well be made a character study. Note how the character of the kings determine largely the character of the nation; good kings bringing about wholesome reforms and bad kings causing great moral and religious decline. The lessons are full of God, of His mercy, patience and judgment on sin; of sin, its beginnings, its progress, its ultimate ruin and death; of prayer, its importance, the character of true prayer, its power and the necessity of prayer.

Review Methods.—If the review is to be general the superintendent may assign to capable members of the school brief papers on the different kings and Elijah. If it is a class review the teacher may assign such papers to the members of the class. Or each one may be asked to bring in a written list of the kings with their prominent traits of character enumerated; as, Rehoboam—proud, unreasonable, weak, oppressive, ungodly; Asa—God-fearing, conscientious, energetic, enterprising, brave, etc. Or the scholars may be interested and encouraged to cover the points in each lesson by an acrostic exercise. Take the names of the Kings and of Elijah and after the following manner tell of the events of the lessons:

Rehoboam ruptured the kingdom.
Exasperated his subjects.
Heeded not wise advice.
Obeyed false leaders.
Boasted of what he would do.
Ordered Adoram to a fatal task.
Almost lost his own life.
Made a failure of life.

Jeroboam built cities.
Established his kingdom.
Rebeld on his own wisdom.
Evil purposes carried out.
Built golden calves.
Ordered people to worship them.
Altered the feast days.
Made priests of the lowest of people.

Asa allied himself with God.
Sought for religious revival.
Applied himself to national problems.
The above will give the idea and the rest of the lessons can be worked out in this manner. This method would also prove attractive and successful for a general blackboard exercise.

Ram's Horn Blasts.
Breeding over troubles but hatches new broods.
There is little to inspire in a spire with a debt on it.

A large house often gives the soul a cramped feeling.
He must have a holy purpose who seeks Heavenly power.

The presence of the Master makes the mansion of His people.
Man cannot live by bread alone and he will not work for bread alone.

A little money to-day may be worth more than a big monument to-morrow.

ANNOUNCEMENTS
FOR SHERIFF
DUVALL—We are authorized to announce Alonzo J. Duvall a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Crittenden county, subject to the action of the Republican party. Election 1905.

It is a 100 to 1 shot that the Democratic party will fall before Port Arthur.
Former Governor W. O. Bradley is doubtful as to whether his health will permit him to make any speeches this fall, however, he says that he feels deeply interested in Roosevelt's election.

John L. Smith, of Kuttawa, sheriff of Lyon county and editor and publisher of The Lyon County Times, was in the city Wednesday and visited us at our office. Mr. Smith has but recently purchased The Times, but has had considerable experience in the newspaper business, having been connected for some time with the Tale of Two Cities, at Eddyville, and founder of The Kuttawa Times, and judging from the past we predict that the paper will greatly improve under his watchcare.

Urey Woodson and Senators Blackburn and McCreary all three having been original Parker supporters in Kentucky, Woodson having been elected National committeeman over the influence of Gov. Beckham which was given W. B. Haldeman, and on account of Beckham's free silver views it is very likely that credit would be given Woodson, Blackburn and McCreary in case there should be a decisive Parker victory in Kentucky this fall. Having nothing personally at stake Beckham is loath to do anything that will result finally in strengthening an enemy. This is the situation at present and it explains the inactivity at the Democratic headquarters at Seelbach's Hotel, and unless the situation changes the efforts on the part of the state machine are not apt to be free of some sort of reservation.

It is an error to suppose, as many do, that a newspaper devoted to the principles of the Republican party, as THE CRITTENDEN RECORD surely is, should not, in any possible event, see the slightest virtue in anyone affiliating with the opposition. We all have our ideals as to good government and we all, or nearly all, desire the friends belonging to our own household of faith to be close to the rudder of the ship of state, in other words, put it in what language we may, it finally resolves itself "to the victors belong the spoils," or, as Flanigan of Texas, said, "What else are we here for?" Politically we would, as a matter of faith, oppose the reelection of Hon. Ollie M. James to the congress, and the reasons would simply be a matter of politics. Certainly Mr. James is an ideal congressman socially and physically. Cultured, well read, ambitious for his constituents as well as for himself, which is perfectly proper and to be commended, untiring, earnest, possessing all of those magnetic qualities which make and retain friends, and but one fault is apparent, he has no enemies, or but few. Now a man without enemies is not necessarily a trimmer or a bidder for popularity or a time server, but in a general way we love men for the enemies they have made, and Ollie James has none. It would be much better for Congressman James' political aspirations to get a lot of people real mad at him.

LOCAL OVERFLOW.

Mrs. Rosa Bransford is visiting her brother, Lon Johnson.
F. E. Coleman, of Shady Grove, was a caller at this office Thursday.

Mrs. Patten Thompson, of Wilson county, Tenn., is visiting Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Oakley.

The Louisville and Marion Mining Co. are now occupying an office in the post office building.

Rev. W. T. Oakley is assisting Rev. J. R. King, pastor, in a protracted meeting at Weston.

Messrs. Blue & Nunn have moved into an elegant suite of rooms in the new post office building.

Seven day tickets to St. Louis—sold daily except Friday and Saturday—$6.50 round trip.
LON JOHNSON, Ag't.

F. Julius Fohs left Thursday for St. Louis where he will attend the Fair and the American Institute of Mining Engineers which convenes there Monday of which he is a member.

Wednesday about noon Chas. Evans, Superintendent of the Marion Graded School, was called home. On arriving he found a new comer in the person of a 10 pound boy. The mother and boy are getting along nicely.

Last week David Driskill rented a sawmill from the Marion Hardware Company and left for Smithland and Paducah to visit young Friends. They had an all round good time but David returned Wednesday minus a big toe having accidentally shot it off.

C. E. Weldon has in his office an Elliott Book Typewriter, but it will not be purchased without the approval of the Fiscal Court. It would cost about $175, yet it is very valuable for recording purposes.

Jim Henry returned from his Arkansas trip early on Thursday morning. He describes the country that he and Oliver Hurley passed through as simply wonderful. Jim left Marion on Tuesday and reached Smithland, Ark.,(?) on Wednesday, returning to Marion early Thursday morning. Jim, during the Arkansas trip, has gained in both weight and height, but his appetite remains unchanged, and he is still taking medicine.

Another Typhoid Fever Victim.

DON'T SHOOT

Squirrels and Rabbits From September 15 to November 15.

LAW RECENTLY AMENDED.

Formerly it was only unlawful to kill black or fox squirrels between the first day of February and the fifteenth day of June each year, it being permissible to kill gray squirrels for the protection of crops. This law was amended at the last session of the legislature making it also unlawful to kill either squirrels or rabbits between September 15th and November 15th. Under the law now as amended it will be permissible to kill squirrels from June 15th to September 15th and between November 15th and the first day of the following February, it being unlawful to kill rabbits only between September 15th and November 15th and permissible to catch them with dogs or in snares at any time. Following is the amendment in full:
"No person shall kill or pursue with such intent or have in his possession when so killed any rabbit or squirrels between the 15th day of September and the 15th day of November in each year. Provided, any one may catch rabbits with dogs or in snares."
It is unlawful to kill doves from the first day of February to the first day of August.

Harth Brothers Sell Out.
The following is taken from the Sturgis News-Democrat and will be interesting to the citizens of this place since Harth Bros. are connected with the Lucile Mining Co., operating near here:
The big firm of Harth Bros., at Caseyville, have sold their store and stock to Ames Bros., of that town. Jno. F. Harth, the head of the firm, built up one of the largest grocery businesses of the county, besides dealing extensively in grain here and in the South, and owing to the development of the grain business he will move to Paducah for headquarters, L. Harth remaining at Caseyville to look after the affairs at this end of the territory. The Messrs. Ames are young men of enterprise and business ability, and will doubtless continue to make the big Caseyville combination of stores a success.

Removed to California.
Mrs. R. E. Bigham left Saturday for Evansville where she will join W. D. Browning and family and her daughters, Misses Bettie and Lillian Bigham, all of whom preceded her there.

The company will visit friends and relatives in Evansville, and Misses Bettie and Lillian and possibly others of the company will attend the World's Fair, after which they will return to Evansville where the entire family will secure through tickets to Pomona, Cal., where they will make their future home, all arrangements having been made by R. E. Bigham who has been in California for some time.
These people have been leading citizens of Marion and we regret to lose them.
We understand the removal was necessary on account of the bad health of certain members of the family.

Died of Typhoid Fever.
After two week's sickness of typhoid fever, William G. Bebout, of Sheridan, died Wednesday at the age of 38. He was a farmer and was born and reared near Sheridan, being the son of the Rev. Israel Bebout, deceased. He was married in September, 1886, to Miss Alice D. Wilson, of this county. The funeral was conducted from the Deer Creek Baptist church, of which the deceased was a member, on Thursday at 11 o'clock, Rev. J. S. Miller, of Princeton, officiating, and the body was laid to rest in the Deer Creek cemetery. He is survived by a wife and four children.

CHAMPION & CHAMPION, ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW.

The above is the picture of a law office in Marion and also its proprietors, who look alike, dress alike, walk alike and talk alike, and who are partners, brothers and twins. They are sterling young men and have been engaged in the practice of law about two years. They are 25 years of age, of erect stature and over six feet tall. It is no trouble to distinguish them in any crowd. They were born and reared in Livingston county on a farm near the village of Hampton, where their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ben Champion now reside. They have no sister and only one brother, Prof. R. R. Champion, who is principal of Salem Public Schools. The twin brothers attended the University at Lexington in 1900 and after that J. B. Champion, jr. began the study of law under Hon. J. K. Hendrick, of Paducah, and in 1901 came to Marion where he continued and completed his course under Hon. L. H. James and his son, Congressman Ollie M. James, being admitted to the Marion bar in March, 1902, Circuit Judge Nunn on the bench. Thos. W. Champion taught school in 1899, 1900 and 1901 and attended Bowling Green law school where he graduated, receiving a diploma and being admitted to the Bowling Green bar in June, 1902, Circuit Judge Warner E. Settle on the bench. The young men are acquiring a good practice and their patronage is increasing. Strange to say, while the young men are twins, matters with which they are associated often travel in parallel lines, Judges Settles and Nunn under whom they were admitted to the bar being elected to the Court of Appeals at the same time, and it is reported that there is likely to be a double wedding before long.

SLOW GRIND

Judge Gordon Adjourns the Livingston Circuit Court.

GRAND JURY WAS KEPT BUSY

County Clerk Landram Was Indicted. But the Matter Was Held up and Then Dropped.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY GRAYOT WAS ABSENT

Judge Gordon arrived here yesterday morning from Smithland where he adjourned circuit court the afternoon before, and left at noon for his home in Madisonville. Nothing of especial note transpired during this term of court, and nobody was sent to the penitentiary. The most important case was that charging Editor Young E. Allison and Correspondent Joe Riley, of the Louisville Herald, with having criminally libelled Harry McChesney, secretary of state, by publishing that he made his race for the secretaryship nomination on public school funds, while state superintendent of public instruction. The case was continued.

County Clerk George Landram was here yesterday from Smithland and states that Judge Abell tried to have him indicted by the last grand jury, but did not succeed. Mr. Landram, before the recent county primary, cartooned Mr. Abell as a chicken with a man's head, while several squibs indicating grafts went along with the drawing that was printed and scattered around over the county by Mr. Landram, who was fighting Abell, and assisted in the latter's defeat. The grand jury had the indictment about returned and the commonwealth attorney was drawing same up, when friends of Landram got them to withdraw the charge, which was then dropped.

Hon. John K. Hendrick returned from Smithland yesterday. He has been acting commonwealth's attorney during the circuit court for John Grayot, who was compelled to remain at the bedside of his sick wife.—[Paducah Register of September 15th.

The grand jury at the above mentioned term of court returned sixty-four indictments for murder, gaming, unlawful voting at primary election, giving liquor on primary election day, etc.

Of these Joe Weiss, of Blackford, and Henry Mitchell, of Libman, will return to Palestine to reside. It is a prosperous city containing about 15,000 people. Messrs. Weiss and Mitchell will probably engage in farming.

Likely Discontinue Mexico.
About two months ago Mr. Myers, the postmaster at Mexico, sent his resignation to the Post Office Department to take effect the first day of October. It has been accepted and the Department has notified the patrons of the office that unless some suitable person applies for the place before that time the office will be discontinued. It appears that no one wants the office for the same reason that Mr. Myers wished to resign, the revenue derived from it not being sufficient to pay for handling the mail at the station. It is claimed that when the Frances-View-Crayneville mail route was discontinued and the Frances-Mexico route established, the work of the Mexico postmaster was increased without just compensation. It is hoped that someone in business at Mexico will take the office for the accommodation of its patrons.

JAPANESE ENJOY BATHING.

Take Baths Hot and Cold and Disperse with Anything Like Clothing.

From time immemorial the bathtub has been an honorable institution in Japan. Instead of a cold dip in the morning, the Japs take their baths hot in the afternoon, at about five o'clock, and, beginning at 100 degrees, the tendency is to raise the temperature as one becomes acclimatized, so to speak. One traveler, says the Chicago Inter Ocean, tells of the Kawayay bathers, who stay in the tub for several weeks at a time with stone in their laps to keep their bodies from floating while they are asleep.

The usual thing is to have the tub on the lawn with a charcoal fire beneath it, so that one can get into the water at 80 degrees and sit in it until it reaches 100 degrees. At this point a "griffin," which is to say a newbom, a greenhorn, or a tenderfoot, usually has to get out, for it becomes literally too hot for him. But, after a year or two of practice, he can manage 115 or 120 degrees. The Japs themselves can enjoy a batheven at 128 degrees.

A traveler tells an amusing tale of how he visited a Japanese friend on at home day and accepted the offer of a bath on the lawn. He got in when the water was tepid and enjoyed it immensely up to ninety something. Just as he was thinking of getting out his friend's wife and daughter put in an appearance and began to wash rice at a well near by. Now the regulation bathing dress of Japan is like a footless stocking without a leg, or a bungle without a barrel around it, and our traveler hadn't it with him at the time. He endured another five degrees, and then, with death by boiling staring him in the face, he was forced out with an involuntary yell that attracted much attention.

The fact is that in Japan everybody bathes in puris naturalibus. It is their way, and it is not until a European has lived among them for years that he or she realizes that, after all, there is nothing very terrible about it.

SPOONING ON THE FERRIES

New York River Boats Regular Sparking Places on Summer Evenings.

"Folks who burst forth periodically in letters to the editor and the park commissioner protesting against public love making in the parks," remarked the commuter, reports the New York Sun, "must not think that they have exhausted the subject until they have taken a few late evening ferryboat sails on these summer nights. If all the energy that's used up in squeezing hands and pressing lips on the open upper decks could be converted into horse power and transferred to the engine rooms, some of the ancient tubs that ply the two rivers and the upper bay could make their runs in half schedule time—unless the boilers burst.

"For long sustained efforts in the cooling line the young men and women of Hoboken and the nearby villages up on Union hill probably hold the record. They go to Coney island in pairs and sit on the beach or hold hands under a table in one of the concert halls while they operate the beer glasses with the hands that are free.

"Then there is the long ride to the bridge on the trolley car, with arms about waists every mile, with his head on her shoulder until the second fare point is reached, and her head on his shoulder the rest of the way. From the bridge there is a quick no-time-to-loose run, hand in hand, to the Barclay street ferry.

"And then the race of all the couples up the stairs to get the most secluded nooks on the deck. Fine spots for spooning provided free on ferryboats these warm nights."

Is the Real Woman Hidden Behind Lying Lips?

By MAXINE ELLIOT, the Actress.

WOMAN cannot tell the truth about herself; she dare not expose the real woman to the scoffing eyes of the world.

A well known playwright, whose plays throb with human passion, with suffering, with love, with hatred, with despair, vigorously asserted as her belief: "No, a woman not only cannot but should not be asked to tell the truth about herself. Would we lay bare our pulsing nerves to the unskilled surgeon? Why, then, should we ask a living, throbbing, sensitive woman to lay bare her heart for the daws to peck at? No, a woman cannot tell the truth about herself. She cannot, because society's usages forbid it. She cannot, because her womanhood shrinks from it."

How can a woman tell the truth about herself? She cannot know herself as others see her. No woman believes she is homely; therefore, if asked whether she thought herself beautiful she would not admit she did, and still she would. No woman can see her faults as others see them, because they are not the same to her way of thinking, therefore she cannot tell the truth about them, as she would be talking from an entirely different viewpoint to the outsider who questioned.

Zola's methods of studying the characters—many of which were so revolting—in his great nature novels, show that he takes the mind of his character and places it on the operating table as the surgeon places the body which is to be operated upon. He studies every nerve, every sentiment, every thought, as the surgeon follows the veins and arteries laid open before his eyes. To Zola's mental vision certain conditions, certain environments, on certain characters, certain minds, would bring about certain results, and from the results of this surgical diagnosis of the mentality of his character he elaborates the life, actions and thoughts of the men or women whom his brain has created.

No surgeon can operate upon himself. No woman can know herself as she really is; therefore she can only tell you the truth about herself in so far as that truth is known to her by the training she has received, fitting her for the station in life to which she was born. Mayhap, I agree with the playwright that no woman can tell the truth about herself. Yet she is not a liar, only the victim of circumstances.

The Country School

By PROF. O. J. KERN, Superintendent of Schools, Winnebago County, Ill.

The country school of its kind should be just as good as the best city school for the most favored child. It should not be the same kind of school with the same course of instruction. There is a difference of environment which must be considered. The school training should relate more to daily life. Let us give the country school all the credit possible for its work in the past. It has done a great work, and will yet do a greater work. But there is vast room for improvement.

There are two great movements, at least, now operating in the new education for the country child, if it may be called a new education, which gives us a glimpse of the educational possibilities. The first has to do with the spirit of the child, the school, and the home, and the second has to do with the environment of the child, a consideration of the farm interests as educational factors.

By the awakening of the spirit, I mean that soul culture that will enable the child to thirst for and enjoy the best of the civilization of the age. It is the country child's right to be brought into contact with the best music, literature and art. There should be no discrimination between the child living in the field and the child on the boulevard in this respect. There is plenty of hard work on the farm, much that is necessary, perhaps, and no insignificant factor in the education of the individual to a life of usefulness. But the child's education can impart a spiritual force that will give freedom from the slavery of toil. This spiritualizing force that will lead to more attractive farms and comfortable homes, better reading in the homes, has its beginning in the improvement of the material environments of the country school; by this is meant the outdoor art movement for more attractive school grounds. The indoor art movement is bringing more attractive school rooms for the country child. There are great possibilities in the library movement.

The course of study for the country child should be more practical. The things surrounding the child on the farm should be utilized in a system of training that will result in greater efficiency for life's work.

Best Time to Marry

By MRS. MAE D. FRASER.

It would seem that the best time to marry is when the mind and heart are satisfied that the true ideal has been found and that with this ideal is the assurance of practical happiness founded upon esteem, respect and close friendship.

All this points to something beyond first youth with its lack of experience and impractical enthusiasms.

It is an undoubted truth that the progress in advancement for women along educational lines has brought about a change in the feminine view of marriage.

Girls are so independent in these days they do not make a hasty choice merely to arrive at matrimony, for it is no longer necessary for a woman to be a wife in order to have a home. And yet our girls are fitting themselves for noble wives and mothers, and there is among them the highest sense of the duty and privilege of the home-maker.

It is certainly wise for a young man to found a home just so soon as he sees his way clear to support one in a simple way, and when he can find a young woman ready and willing to share his duties, and this may usually be accomplished by the time he is 26. If he finds a wife of 23 years, she will have had the time to enjoy a free and happy girlhood and have learned to know something of the joys and responsibilities of wedded life.

The man must be the head of the house in the right marriage, and the reasonable woman realizes this and appreciates the strength she can rely upon in trouble or difficulty.

Marriage is not so much a lottery as many wise heads will tell us. It is, rather, a wonderfully simple and happy state of being that is arrived at through some trying experiences, but in which mutual forbearance, true consideration and perfect courtesy bring ideal results.

Prof. Otis T. Mason, of the Smithsonian Institution says:

"Women possess a peculiar form of perception which may be called the mirror sense. They can see themselves without looking in the glass. Furthermore, thanks to an inheritance from a line of grand mothers running back to remote antiquity, they are able, as one might say, to see with the tips of their fingers. To them the sense of touch is almost a form of sight, actually superseding the latter under some circumstances."

Of course, this is a delicate subject for timid bachelor editors to undertake to discuss (and that may be the secret of our ignorance,) but we confess that we do not understand just what is here meant by the "mirror sense." We can not tell whether the statement means that woman can see herself as seen by others or whether on account of the frequent use of the mirror the optic nerve continuously reproduces the reflection observed thereby. And, "to see with the tips of their fingers" we take it that in this statement Mr. Mason refers to the attainment of the hand resulting from practical training, but he says, "inheritance from grandmothers" and "remote antiquity" and it seems to us that "mothers" and "modern times" should have been considered also.

Marion : : Kentucky

After the Fourth.
Let the joy bells loud be ringing,
Though it is no holiday.
We have shown our patriotism
Midst much peril and dismay.
Now that quietude is reigning
We should pause for thanks sincere.
Mother, father, sister murmur:
"Little Willie is all here!"

There is not an eyebrow missing;
Every tooth is still in place.
Free from blisters, we unfold him
Once more in a fond embrace.
Both his smiling eyes are present,
And he hasn't lost an ear.
Proud and grateful, we repeat it:
"Little Willie is all here!"
—Washington Star.

When They All Save.
The Fourth is near; the small boy hoarsely
His nickel and his dime.
To buy gunpowder, bombs and things,
And dreams of glorious times.
His anxious ma is sewing too,
And boards up ponds and pounds
Of bandages and lint and salve
To bind up Jimmy's wounds.

And papa, though he grows red hot
And cusses with a will,
Is saving up a sum each day
To pay the doctor's bill.
—C. H. M., in Chicago Record-Herald.

The Time of His Life.
A neat little package, bound tightly with
A cord,
Face checked with court-plaster, left arm
In a splint,
Hair singed and hands blistered—grim ear-
marks of strife.
But happy? He's just had the time of his life!
—Chicago Daily News

Slightly Scattered.
When Johnny closed this day of bills
His face was very queer.
One eyebrow was askew like this
And one way over here.

THE GHOST'S LEGACY

If you had seen the ghost in question a month before he departed this mortal life, he would not have thought there was much of the spectral about him. For he was a good looking, well made, dark, curly haired sort of a man; lively, cheery and jocund, and, although a demon to work, one who knew how to enjoy himself thoroughly, which enjoyment he always took in the company of the single creature in this world he loved, namely, his wife.

"Only," Clara Weaver used to say to her husband, with reference to that work, "I can't understand why you should slave so hard all the morning and also at night, shut up in that study in the roof. Where does all the work go to when it is done? That's what I want to know."

"Where do the legs of mutton come from that we eat? Where do your pretty gowns come from that you pick up at the sales, and my tobacco, and other things, eh? Five hundred a year isn't made by lying in bed."

"Why won't you ever let me see some of those articles you write for the papers at three guineas a column? Why won't you point them out to me? I should be so proud to read them."

"I'm a failure. But you see the legs of mutton, and eat some of them, too, and you wear the gowns, and I take you everywhere you want to go, and I love you. Isn't that enough?"

"A failure? You! When you can make £500 a year! And your novel, 'Pomegranate Kisses'! That wasn't a failure, though most of the reviews said it was."

"Never mind 'Pomegranate Kisses,'" Charlie replied, though his face darkened as he spoke. "I shan't try any more novels of that sort."

"You should. It was a shame—I mean what those old women, or young boys, said. I believe they were all jealous of you. Ivan Melton wasn't, though."

"Ivan Melton is the popular novelist of the day," Charlie replied, with a queer kind of grin on his half averted face. "He could afford to be magnanimous. And he's a reviewer, and an editor, and a publisher's reader, and a bit of a dramatist, too, and he has got heaps of influential friends in the literary world. He wouldn't abuse a poor devil like me. I make £500 a year, and he makes thousands. He's a great man, is Ivan," and again Charlie grinned.

"It looks to me as if you were trying to be a bit of a dramatist, too," Clara remarked, as she bent over her husband's shoulder and glanced at the manuscript sheets beneath his hand. "That looks more like conversations than a leading article on the German abuse of England, which you say is ordered by a paper."

"It isn't a play, though," Charlie replied, as he covered the words up with the blotting paper. "I'm just jotting down a few of the choice expressions of our Teutonic friends about us."

A week or so after this little conversation poor Charlie fell ill. He had long suffered from a queer pain in his left side, and another under his heart, and his lips got more of a bluish tinge than usual, when one day he swooned, and, when he came to himself he found the local doctor standing over him. And not only standing over him, but looking precious grave.

"Palpitation of the heart," this gentleman said, though he didn't say it very encouragingly. "Keep quiet in bed a day or two, and you'll soon be all right. I'll come in again to-night and see you."

"Clara," Charlie said, "I fancy I am worse than that chap says, and that I'm going—"

"Oh, Charlie, don't—don't! Oh! what shall I do?"

"Listen to me, darling, and don't get frightened. I want to see Ivan Melton at once. And—I've got something to tell you. You know the old hair-covered trunk in my study that belonged to my aunt? Yes? All right. Well, if I go, there's—there's—a fortune in that trunk for you, if you only know how to use it."

"You are breaking my heart. You go! You! The best, the sweetest husband on earth!"

"God bless you for saying so. Never mind. Open the trunk if I go, look at the contents and read the letter I have left on top, and—and—you will find an annuity for life."

Poor Clara! As her husband spoke thus she thought it must be his brain and not his heart that was wrong; but when he was gone she found out that it was she who was wrong.

Before he "went," however, Ivan Melton came to see him, and quickly, too, in answer to the summons. Ivan Melton, frock coated, rose buttonhole, driving a pair of grays in a phaeton, prosperous and flamboyant. Ivan Melton, exclaimed, "My dear old chap," "My dear old Charlie," after having been shown into the room. Then, after all due inquiries had been made as to "dear old Charlie's" chances of future existence, accompanied by many "Dears, dears," "Don't say that, old chap," "I can't believe it," etc., the prosperous one said: "I don't know whatever I shall do without you."

"You'll be all right. You'll find plenty like me. Every one has his anuses; lucky if he never meets him. You might help Clara if you feel like it, eh?"

"Hard times, old chap. Yes, even for me; as you say. Terrible expenses I'm put to. You can't keep right with the people if you don't cocker them up—upon my word you can't. All the same, trust in me. By the way, there's something due to you, isn't there?"

"A hundred and thirty-three pounds."

"Phew! that's a lot! I've got a ten-pound note in my pocket, old chap, if that's any good to go on with."

"I don't want a ten-pound note."

"All right, dear boy. I won't forget the one, three, three. Good-by. God bless you. I'll come and see you again in a little while. Would you like me to send you a pineapple or some nice grapes, eh?" And off Ivan Melton went.

"Vagabond!" muttered Charlie, as the door shut after his friend—

"vagabond! Little enough will Clara ever see of that 'one, three, three,' as he calls it. Never mind, there's the hair covered trunk. Oh, Lord, I hope she will be firm."

Meantime, as he was musing thus, Ivan Melton had got up into the phaeton, and was driving back to town as fast as the grays could take him. As he did so he muttered to himself: "It's all right. Not a line of manuscript in existence. I took care of that, and typescript tells no tales. Only what the deuce is to become of me if he pops off? I shall never find another one like him to take his place."

Poor Charlie did "pop off" in the middle of a night without disturbing any one; and when, six months later, Clara returned to town from her mother's, and began to dismantle the house, the recollection of the hair covered trunk occurred to her. Upon which she went up to the study, and proceeded to open it.

When she had done so she started back as if an adder had sprung at her. For in front of, or below, her, were six enormous heaps of tied-up manuscript in her late husband's handwriting, and each heap bore on its front page the title of one of Ivan Melton's novels, from his first one, "Bid Me

Good-by and Go," down to his last, "A Monarch's Bride."

"My God!" Clara exclaimed. "What does it mean?"

Then she picked out of the top heap a letter addressed to her, and opened it, and read as follows:

"Darling: I have been Ivan Melton's 'ghost' for years. I have written all his novels. He gave me £3 3s. 'per thou,' as we say, and got £10 10s., and the kudos. I sent them to him chapter by chapter; he had them typed in the country under his own name, and then burnt my MS. But, in spite of the labor, which turned every thousand words into 2,000, I made a copy of them all in my own hand. Here they are. I would never have given him away—even to you, my pet—only it was he who set all his friends on to slate 'Pomegranate Kisses' wherever they could do so, or not to notice it at all; and he lent a hand himself at the game. He used to boast that he never let a rival in where he could help it. Two of his jackals, however, with whom he had quarreled, wrote to me, and told me all about it. Their letters are in the trunk below the last MS. I told you there was an annuity here if you manage things well. Good-by, my own. You will find me waiting for you in the next world."

CHARLIE.
Clara did try to manage things well, but all the same she never got anything out of Ivan Melton. His next novel but one created a stir among his friends, if nowhere else, since even they, with the best will in the world, thought that his powers must have left him suddenly; and even their stupendous efforts to write the book up failed before the honest attacks of those outside the "ring." The one after that was even worse, if possible, and they say that he now proclaims novel writing to be a pursuit unworthy a man of genius, and is going into finance.—The King.

WRINKLES FROM MILK WASH

Woman Who Eschewed Soap and Water Had Cause for Deep Regret.

A writer on beauty in one of the society papers urges her readers never to wash the face with soap and water, as being certain destruction to a fine complexion. I cannot indorse this view, writes Lady Greville, in London Graphic.

Cleanliness is absolutely necessary to the beauty and delicacy of the texture of the skin. If soap is not liked, at least oatmeal should take its place, and pure or distilled water invariably be used. I once saw the result of only washing the face with milk in a lady who started life with a good complexion, but before she reached middle age had lost all freshness, and showed a faded skin covered with fine wrinkles. Nothing equals the complexion of the country woman who rises early, is much in the open air, and bathes freely in cold water. The homely idea of washing in the dew of the morning as an aid to beauty is simply a practical way of expressing this fact.

ENGLISH SPARROW IN WEST

From Five Birds in 1874 They Have Spread All Over the Country.

The first English sparrows were brought to Kansas City in 1874, says the Topeka Herald. F. W. Giles conceived the idea of importing some of these birds. He shipped in 28 of them. They were confined in cages at his place in Topeka until all but five had died. At last the five were turned loose to take their chances of life or death, though Giles had no hope that they would live. They fooled him.

They took up their home in the neighborhood. The following autumn there were 12 birds. The second summer found 60, and the third summer about 300. Then they increased so fast that no count could be kept, and in the 23 years which followed they spread all over the west.
