BIGGEST DEAL YET MADE IN THE DISTRICT.

$32,500 Paid for Mineral Lands in One Day--Property Steadily Advancing all Along the Line.

Harry Watkins says he will pay a good price for a red fox.

Mr. J. M. Persons thinks the roads ought to be improved south of Marion--as far as Chapel Hill, anyway.

Harry Watkins is acting as general manager of the Columbia mines until Mr. Drescher returns from the Fair.

The Marion Mineral company is loading a car of carbonate of zinc from their Miller mines, which is as fine as has been found in the district.

There is more lead and zinc showing in the mines in this district at the present time than ever before known, and the capitalists begin to see it and are flocking in.

Will Brown, the foreman of the Ada-Florence mine, was in town Saturday. Mr. Brown said that he thought the Ada-Florence would be as rich a mine as the Columbia when it reached the same depth.

Mr. Charles Montgomery, of Elizabethtown, Ill., will start some time or four of his mines that have been shut down for some time, the first of next month. He has some big deals on hand.

Our New Salem correspondent writes: The Cullen mines raised steam last week merely to try the machinery. We are informed that everything worked O. K. as far as tried.

The Nancy Hanks, near Salem, is working a 7 foot vein of lead and spar. The lead comes out in large lumps. Their shaft is clear nearly 200 feet. This proves that deep mining is the thing for this district.

The Hegan mines will blow their whistle on Thanksgiving morning. It's a big thing; some $20,000 being expended already. Mr. D. Humphrey deserves a great deal of credit for the excellent construction of the plant.

Harry Watkins also sold the Fords property last week to some capitalists for $12,500. The property joins the Columbia. A shaft will be started on this property in the near future, for the purpose of mining lead and zinc.

Mr. Harry Watkins sold the Fords property for $12,500. This is the largest sum that has ever been paid for a piece of mineral property in this district; but still it is predicted that this is the cheap place of property that has been sold on account of it being one of the richest pieces of mineral in the mining district.

A new shaft will be started this week at the Franks old mine, on the famous LaRue vein. The shaft will be sunk 100 feet before any drifting is done. Mr. J. S. Schaub of Louisville is the owner of the property. Mr. Persons will be Supt. of the mines. This is another company that Mr. Harry Watkins has organized. We can look back and see where Mr. Watkins has brought in more capitalists and organized more mining companies than any ten men in the district.

Some expert coal has been recently going from the Hopkins county fields to Southern ports. This sort of trade adds to the output tonnage of the mines, but does not increase the average sale price of the product, having, instead, the contrary effect. It is a filler, however, and provides for so much additional labor at the regular rate of wages, so that the coal mine employe and those with whom he spends his earnings are almost the sole gainers from this class of trade.

The brief shut down of Illinois mines, occasioned by a strike of about 1,000 hoisting engineers, was settled by the striking engineers accepting the slight reduction of about 5 per cent in wages. The stoppage of output was insignificant and found most large consumers well stocked with fuel in anticipation of such a strike. The little flurry caused in the coal trade brought some quick orders to the Hopkinsville field for a day or so but for small amounts of coal at close figures.

The zinc ore market at Joplin has again taken on sensational features, especially during the last 48 hours. The highest price paid last week for ore was $46, while the assay basis ranged from $40 to $42, according to the buyer and the character of the ore in question. The past week's shipments too were slightly heavier than those of the preceding week, notwithstanding the fact that all the cars needed were not to be had. Lead ore remained unchanged during the fortnight at $54.

The past week's ore market opened strong, with a fair demand early in the week and some purchases being made on a $40 basis. Ore buyers began competing early in the week and by Thursday the prices were again well advanced. Five buyers met accidentally in the office of one mining company and starting the bidding at $45 for the weeks production the price was run up to $56, being purchased by the buyer for the Illinois Zinc company.

Lead and Zinc News: The advent of the promoter with schemes for merging the mining properties of the Kentucky district has been made. This time an Owensboro man announces that he has plans under way by which millions are to be invested in mining properties in the Marion district.

Prospecting in an effort to locate extensions of the Columbia vein has resulted in the development of several good prospects the latest being located some two miles away from the Columbia, where a good vein of fluor spar and lead has been opened up at thirty feet.

From 10 to 18 tons of lead and fluor spar are being hoisted from the Nancy Hanks mine each day. The property has air compressors and drills and the mine is being opened up in order to determine the advisability of erecting a mill during the coming spring.

We publish the following extract from a letter received from Mr. F. E. Schoolfield, one of the proprietors of the Schoolfield-Spees mines, near Carrsville. It was through the efforts of the Crittenden Press that the great extent and richness of our mineral resources was first brought into public notice, and the paper will not let up along this line until every paying vein in the district is fully developed. Mr. Schoolfield writes:

"I must compliment you for your enterprise and energy in bringing the mineral resources of Crittenden and Livingston counties to the notice of the public. The people of those counties should appreciate your efforts to their full extent. Wishing you all possible success I subscribe myself,

Yours truly,
F. E. Schoolfield,

COMMERCIAL CLUB.

An Organization Perfected and Much Interest Manifested.

The business men of Marion have organized a Commercial Club to put the advantages of Marion and Crittenden county before the world, and to invite capital to come into our midst and invest in some of the enterprises which we need, such as waterworks, laundry, ice plant, etc., etc.

At the first meeting last Saturday night at the office of C. H. Whitehouse, in the new Postoffice building, Dr. T. A. Frazer was chosen temporary Chairman and J. E. Chittenden temporary Secretary. After considerable discussion of the various ways and means of getting started it was finally decided to go into permanent organization and the following officers were elected:

President--T. H. Cochran.
First Vice President--T. A. Frazer.
Second Vice President--R. I. Nunn.

Secretary--J. E. Chittenden.
Treasurer--G. M. Crider.
Committee on By-Laws--J. W. Blue, C. H. Whitehouse, T. A. Frazer, T. H. Cochran, C. S. Nunn.

The meeting then adjourned to meet Tuesday night.

The following are the charter members:
T. Atchison Frazer, James W. Lamb, S. Marshall Jenkins, H. K. Woods, R. F. Haynes, J. W. Blue, C. S. Nunn, T. H. Cochran, H. H. Sayre, C. E. Weldon, E. H. James, R. J. Morris, T. J. Ainsworth, E. P. Stewart, W. D. Baird, Chas. Evans, J. B. Hubbard, D. C. Roberts, George M. Crider, C. H. Whitehouse, James E. Chittenden, Sam. Gugenheim, J. H. Orme, Levi Cook, F. W. Nunn, G. C. Gray.

At the Tuesday night meeting which was largely attended, the by-laws, rules and regulations were read and adopted and six directors were chosen, each to head a committee, as follows:

County Development--C. S. Nunn, director and chairman committee.

Entertainment, Arrangement and Building--H. H. Sayre, director and chairman committee.

Public Policy--Chas. Evans, director and chairman committee.

City Development--Jas. Freeman, director and chairman committee.

Membership and Finance--C. E. Weldon, director and chairman of committee.

Press, Publicity and Promotion--C. H. Whitehouse, director and chairman committee.

Ordinance and Resolutions--T. A. Frazer, 1st Vice Pres't chairman committee.

Mercantile, Manufacturing and Commerce--R. I. Nunn, 2d Vice Pres't, chairman committee.

The directors are called by the president to special meeting next Monday night and they then will select their various committees and will report them at the general meeting Tuesday night, at which time it is confidently hoped that a larger meeting will be had than any of the previous ones.

EMMAUS.

Wheat is looking well in this section.

The protracted meeting at Emmaus has just closed with a good revival.

Henry Brown, from Colorado, has come home to visit his father, Wm. Brown. He will return to Colorado in a few days.

Thomas Brasler has gone to Ark to hunt a location.

A large crowd attended church at Emmaus Sunday.

Lela, little daughter of John and Nancy Campbell died at her home Nov 14th after an illness of several days with typhoid fever.

Charlie Sunderland and Nora Travis went to Marion Wednesday and were united in marriage.

Eff Howard has lost some cattle this fall.

CHAPEL HILL.

Look out for matrimonial services to be held in this vicinity.

Mrs. S. D. Hill, of Minnesota is the guest of T. M. Hill's family of this place.

Geo. Enoch and Miss Nellie Adams visited Forest Oliver Saturday and Sunday and took in the Caldwell Springs meeting.

William Adams and wife spent Sunday with Charlie Clement and family.

Uncle Billy Loyd and wife, of Crayneville were at meeting Sunday and called on James Alex Hill and wife.

John Long and sister are attending the Fair.

Uncle Geo. Douglas will visit his brother in Ills and will remain all winter.

Albert Hughes is still on the puny list.

Rev. Thompson filled his regular appointment here Sunday.

IRON HILL.

A large congregation at Sugar Grove Sunday.

Frank Travis, Ben Drenon and Zenoth Lemon have gone to the Fair.

Ed Turley has moved upon the farm he bought from C. O. Walker. C. O. Walker has moved to his father's farm.

A. A. Deboe has moved to Marion.

Wm. Hurst has moved to the A. A. Deboe farm.

Mrs. Lizzie Sexton, Misses Kitty Coram, Lizzie Dyous and Elva Sexton attended the teachers meeting at Grand Rivers last week.

Messrs. Al and Amos Doom and Lesley Pendergrass went to Paducah Sunday.

J. G. Evans visited Mrs. Eliza Evans, his mother, of Grand Rivers, last week.

Some of our neighbors attended quarterly meeting at Paradise on Wednesday.

"STEP LIVELY."

Anderson, Ind., Nov 15.--"Step lively, gents, dance faster, out 'er loose," yelled Lee Dennis, who kept time with shots from a revolver, while Elmer and Bert Brunston danced for their lives, with bullets grazing their toes, in a saloon this evening. Desperado like Dennis had everybody terrorized in the saloon, until his guns were emptied and then he went out to reload.

When he returned to call for another dance Saloonkeeper John Hizey got the gun up first and made Dennis crawl on the floor until officers arrived. Dennis then stepped lively to jail.

About a year ago Dennis cut a man with a razor at Noblesville and was captured here.

HAWAII BONDS.

San Francisco, Nov 15.--A. L. Atkinson, Secretary of the Territory of Hawaii, arrived here today on the steamer Alameda for Washington, where he will consult with the Secretary of the Treasury regarding the status of the coming issue of the Hawaii Government bonds amounting to $1,000,000. An issue of a million was made last year and Secretary Shaw allowed the bonds to be used as security for national bank deposits, thus greatly facilitating the Territory in floating them.

We are still headquarters for cook stoves, ranges and heaters.

Amid the gloom of a crushing defeat it is pleasant to read such kind and generous words as fell from the lips of Secretary Root in his eulogy of Senator Cockrell. There was no narrow partisanship in that; only a just tribute from a generous conqueror to a fallen foe.

In accordance with the Proclamations of the President of the United States and of the Governor of Kentucky and Mayor J. H. Powell of Henderson, the Press force will cease from its labors on this day and the office will be closed to business. May an abundance of good cheer grace the table of every patron of this paper, and may good digestion wait on appetite.

The drought has caused a number of disastrous forest fires in different parts of the country during the past week. One near Louisville caused immense loss in lumber and other valuable property and another between Crayneville and Fredonia was very destructive to timber. The smoke from the latter hung over this city like a pall.

Col. William P. C. Breckinridge, the distinguished soldier, editor and statesman was stricken with paralysis one day last week, and at 11:40 o'clock on Saturday evening his spirit solved the mystery of the unknown. The death of such a man is a public calamity, not confined to the borders of his own state. As lawyer, congressman and editor he has left his impress upon the age in which he lived and wrought and triumphed. Peace to his ashes!

An important move has recently been made in Russia which may go far toward reorganizing and strengthening that Empire on a broader basis of freedom to the subject. In speaking of this matter the Courier-Journal says:

"When the Zemstvo presidents from all parts of Russia met at St. Petersburg without opposition from the police, and under full protection of the Government and declare that it is imperative necessary that there should be a national house of representatives sitting as a specially and popularly elected body, to make laws, regulate the revenue and expenditure, and to control the executive."

Last week we called attention to the urgent necessity of a Commercial Club for Marion and Crittenden county. The matter was pressed by C. H. Whitehouse, T. A. Frazer and others with the most gratifying result. The Commercial Club is now a reality and has 40 members among the business men of Marion and vicinity and the Press congratulates the citizens on the personnel of the Directory—all of whom are eminently fitted by nature and inclination to fill the important posts assigned to them. The success of such a movement is dependent on the men in charge of it as much as the hearty support of the community. Some men are natural born leaders in anything they undertake, and we recognize in the Directory eight just such men and we shall now expect to see things happen. The Press takes off its hat to Greater Marion's Commercial Club and its officers and directors, and throws open its columns to advance any movement they may put on foot. Waterworks should be the watchword for the city, and good roads the gift to the county, and onward! the battle cry all along the line.

Glenn's Graphic, of last week, contains a lengthy article regarding the reconstruction of the Democratic party. That paper says as the South furnishes all, or nearly all of the Democratic electoral vote, she should have some hand in formulating the National platform and naming the candidate. This seems, at first blush, but reasonable and just. But as conditions now are it is impracticable. A strictly Southern organization, such as that suggested by the Graphic, could never draw to it enough strength from the eastern and western wings of the party to make it formidable. Time was when Southern influence dominated every National Convention and named every Democratic nominee. But that day has passed—at least for years to come. At some future day the South may regain her old political ascendancy through the development of her immense industrial resources. That is her only hope of a political resurrection; and the Press hopes that fortune may speed the day.

But few conditions are now lacking to make this district an ideal one for mining operations on an extensive scale, but that these conditions hamper, if they do not altogether block progress, in the development of Crittenden county's mineral resources can not be denied by any one who is fully conversant with the facts. Our most urgent requirements are good roads, then railroads, for the development of the country, then fire protection for the city. Other improvements and advantages will quickly follow.

This city and county is now facing an opportunity which has come to but very among the multitude of counties in the various states and territories comprising the United States, as we have within our borders mineral deposits vast in nature and rich in possibilities—so it is claimed by the mining experts who have able investment for the purpose of their development.

YANDELL-WHITT.

Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Whitt, their handsome daughter, Miss Leonora Gray, was united in marriage to James Milton Yandell, all of the Frances vicinity, the Rev. Jas. F. Price officiating. A wedding feast was spread at the bride's home that evening and the next day a dinner at the home of the groom's father, the venerable and much respected John Yandell, to each of which entertainments the friends of the young couple were invited. They will make their home with his father.

The Press extends congratulations to this happy and most worthy young couple. May a long, happy and useful life be allotted to each of them by the Giver of all good gifts.

Death of Mrs. Sarana Howerton.

Mrs. F. Sarana Howerton, relict of the late Wm. Howerton, died Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock of stomach and heart trouble. She had not been in good health for some time but her death was not expected at this time. She was sitting in her chair when the summons came and she died before she could be put in her bed. She was in her 68th year and is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Sarah Conger of this county and Miss Malissa Paris of this city. She was a sister of the late Josiah Paris. Her death took place at the home of Wyatt Hunt—a relative by marriage—where she was visiting when she was taken sick. She was buried in the Paris and Hunt family cemetery on the Piney road, Sunday afternoon.

Albert Weldon Dead.

Lorenzo A. Weldon died at his home on the Brick Kiln road, one mile from Marion, Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock of consumption. Mr. Weldon had been in failing health for some time and had visited Florida and other points in search of health, but all to no avail, for he gradually weakened until the end came Sunday afternoon. Mr. Weldon leaves a wife and eight children to mourn his death. His first wife was a Miss Champion and three of her children survive him. They are: Newton Weldon of Tolu, Mrs. Raymond Babb of Salem, and C. E. Weldon, county clerk of this county, who resides here. His second wife was a Miss Beard. She survives him as do her five children. They are: Mrs. Arbie Hina, wife of C. B. Hina, general manager of the Marion Hardware Co., of this city, Charles, who lives at Tolu, Simpson, of this city, and Miss Lena and Sallie, also of this city. Mr. Weldon was a member of the Deers Creek Baptist church and had been a consistent Christian for 35 years, having joined when a young man. Mr. Weldon was born near Crayneville, in this county, November 26, 1847, and had always lived in the county. For 20 years he was a merchant at Tolu and he owned some of the finest farming land in the county near Tolu. The funeral was held at the Baptist church at 2 o'clock and the interment was in the new cemetery, Rev. J. S. Henry officiating at both services. The pall bearers were Geo. M. Crider, J. G. Rochester, Frank Dodge, R. M. Franks, Lewis C. Terry and B. L. Wilborn. In the death of L. A. Weldon the county loses one of its best citizens, the church a loyal and true supporter, his wife a kind and affectionate husband, his children a loving and indulgent father and his friends a friend that was like a brother. Peace to his ashes.

Circuit Court in Session.

The fall term of the circuit court convened Monday morning with Judge J. F. Gordon on the bench, and commonwealth's Attorney J. L. Gray, prosecuting. The grand jury selected from those summoned were: E. J. Hayward, foreman, J. H. Carter, W. B. Rankin, H. B. Phillips, D. H. Woodford, Willie Lynn, H. C. Love, Gabe Wathen, Will Ordway, John Arns, Clark, J. A. Davidson, W. R. Thomas.

Judge Gordon's charge to the jury was couched in terms unmistakably impressing each juror with the importance of his duty and of the obligation placed on him. The grand jury is a most important body said the judge and no citizen can be tried without it first indicting him. The grand jury, however, is not a body to try any case—only to investigate and report as it were to the court which will take up all its findings. Another duty is to get witnesses and proofs and all the arteries of law are lent to their aid to attain this end. The grand jury said the judge is a dignified body set apart and above the rest of the people for the time being—guardians of the peace—and all proceedings should be conducted with caution. The members of the jury are chosen on account of their well known integrity, their business acumen, their keen insight into matters of every day life and their ability to discriminate between right and wrong. During their sitting they are free men under the surveillance of no one. Can go and come as they please. Six days are allotted by law, but the judge can and will if necessary, extend it and if first extension is not sufficient in the judgment of the grand jury then the judge can grant a second extension.

All infractions of law should be investigated whether grave or trifling, murder the most important. Object of law is to protect life and each citizen in the transaction of business which is an important constitutional guarantee. Unless the proper safeguards are thrown around human life society will degenerate. The effort of the grand jury should be to improve all the conditions of society. Homicide is divided into two classes. First, Wilful murder. The sentence should be death or life imprisonment. If shown that murder is cold blooded and unprovoked and done with malice of forethought the punishment should be great and the culprit should be put beyond the pale of doing injury again. Second grade of homicide is voluntary manslaughter. Murder done but no malice shown. Done in sudden heat and passion—on the impulse of the moment—and then regretted later. Some men said the judge are cool and collected and have consideration and respect for neighbor's which they do not always deserve, while others are hot headed and impulsive and the penalty for the crime of murder when done under these circumstances is 2 to 21 years according to the discretion of the jury. If an aggravated case it should be punished to the full extent of the law. Let the punishment fit the crime. It will prevent the commission of many of them. Involuntary manslaughter is where a killing is done accidentally or carelessly. Law takes cognizance of such cases and the penalty may be by confinement in jail or by paying a fine at the discretion of the jury.

Rape, a heinous offense, and offenders should be hung or sent to the penitentiary for life. Virtue of our womanhood must be protected. Detaining a woman against her will or seduction under promise of marriage should be given full extent of law, unless evidence shows the guilty man makes amends by marriage. All such cases should be carefully investigated so that no mistake be made and no innocent man be made to suffer. Sometimes a woman has no integrity and will entrap a man to extort money from him. All circumstances should be considered. A straw sometimes shows which way the wind blows. House burning is a felony and a man if shown guilty is an enemy to society.

One who would burn a stable is guilty of cruelty to animals. One who would burn a residence would commit murder as he exposes human life to risk.

Robbery was defined by the judge as taking from any one against his will any article of value.

Larceny is taking by stealth.

Trespassing is subject to a fine of $10 to $2,000 fine at the discretion of the jury. Housebreaking was noted too by the judge. To raise a window, push a door, or break a string constitutes an offense. To cut, strike, stab, or shoot maliciously is a penitentiary offense. To curse or disturb any one anywhere is a breach of the peace and the grand jury should probe all such cases and punish all in fractions. Carrying concealed deadly weapons is cowardly and villainous and open violation of law and should be stopped at all hazards said the judge. Leads to worse things and often to murder. Liquor traffic should be regulated and only men of good moral character given licenses. Blind tigers and boot leggers are dangerous criminals and should be dealt with accordingly. False swearing should be punished. Cocaine a dangerous drug and prescription necessary and druggists must keep book showing when bought and to whom sold. Fish must be protected. Law prohibits seining, netting or dynamiting in any stream except boundaries between states. The foreman must sign all true bills and 9 of the jury must concur before true bill can be obtained.

Examination and testing free.

A BOLD HOLD-UP.

Cheyenne, Wyo, Nov. 15.—Two masked bandits, the same men who made the descent on the First National Bank of Cody, two weeks ago and murdered Cashier I. O. Middaugh, swooped down on Thermopolis, in the northwestern part of the State, at 4 o'clock this morning, from their hiding place in the Owl creek mountains and committed another hold-up, making a successful retreat to their rendezvous southeast of this town.

The outlaws rode into town just after 3 o'clock, and spent some time reconnoitering. About 4 o'clock they rode up to Chas. Edwards' saloon and gambling house and entered. One of the robbers was quite tall, while his companion was short and stout, both men answering accurately the description of the two daring outlaws that entered the bank of Cody.

After fixing handkerchiefs with holes over their eyes, on their faces, the tall robber handed his bridle rein to the short man and boldly entered the front door of the saloon, a pistol in each hand. The astonished bar tender, far dealers and others in the saloon were told to back up against the wall and throw up their hands. A were compelled to give up their watches, rings and money. A alarm was quickly sounded and a posse organized and started in pursuit. Since then nothing has been heard of the chase, but most probably the robbers got away among the bad lands along the river.

Come and get American Field Fence, it is here for you.—Marion Hardware Co.

HIS MAJESTY THE TURKEY

By A. W. FERRIN

(Copyright, 1904, by A. W. Ferrin.)
It was Benjamin Franklin who said that the turkey and not the bald-headed eagle should be the American national bird, and the tribute which the patriot-philosopher paid to the piece de resistance of the Thanksgiving day feast is better deserved now than it was in Franklin's day, for, while an occasional eagle still flits from crag to crag, on the turkey the sun never sets. The turkey follows the flag, whatever the constitution may do, and wherever Uncle Sam has set his foot, whether in the snowdrifts of Alaska or on the flowery soil of the Philippines, Thanksgiving day is honored equally with the Fourth of July. Even in the effete capitals of Europe the aristocratic partridge and pheasant have to give way on Thanksgiving day to the ponderous rooster.

"RAISING" A TURKEY IN KENTUCKY.

The eagle is a pirate; he cannot sing and his beauty is greatest at a distance. All he can do is to soar aloft, and, while his single stunt may be emblematic of freedom, it is of a freedom which respects not the rights of others. Consider the turkey, how he grows. He toils not, neither does he spin, yet Solomon in all his glory never ate more delicious food than he furnishes. His plumage ranks him little lower than the peacock, while his "gobbie" makes music compared to the hoarse scream of the far flying eagle. All he lives for is to enhance the joy of his human friends. Then, too, he is distinctly an American. The bald eagle is, it is true, also an aborigine, but there are other eagles. The czar, the kaiser and the emperor of Austria bear eagles on their shields. The turkey was never even heard of in Europe before the voyage of Columbus. For nearly four authenticated centuries the turkey has roosted on its genealogical tree in the forests of America, and before the white man came the red Indians who sprang from the soil venerated him.

The first turkey appeared in written history about the year 1520, when the Spanish conquerors of Mexico found him at the court of Montezuma. Specimens of the new fowl were sent home to Spain by the companions of Cortes, and within five years thereafter the turkey appeared in England, where he soon became a general favorite. Civil and natural history had not then been reduced to an exact science, and in the common confusion of America with the Indies the turkey became involved. The name Turkey was then often used as a synonym for the orient; hence the erroneous appellation which the bird has never been able to shake off. The French made the same mistake, for they call the turkey to this day dinde or coq d'Inde (Indian cock). However, the turkey by another name would taste no sweeter, and popular disapprobation of the sultan has never extended to the fowl which bears his country's name.

It is a moot question among ornithologists whether the present day turkey is a descendant of the Mexican bird domesticated in England and brought back to America by the pilgrim fathers or is the wild turkey of the United States tamed. Whatever the tame turkey's remotest origin, the breeders frequently introduce into their flocks wild turkeys captured in the woods or raised from eggs to give stamina and the gamy taste so prized by epicures, and the barnyard bird may now trace his lineage to Montezuma's Imperial coop or to the wilds of the north, as he chooses.

Rhode Island has been until recently the principal turkey state, with Connecticut a close second, but now western turkeys are coming into the eastern markets in large numbers, and Kentucky is also making a good bid for the banner.

The Rhode Island turkey still keeps his reputation as the best born and best bred bird of his species in America, however, and it is from the Rhode Island ranges that the president's turkey comes every year. Hiram Vose, the famous turkey buyer, has been sending annual turkeys to the White House since General Grant was there, and no complaint as to their quality has yet been registered by the recipients.

The "bronze" turkey is Rhode Island's pride, and this bird adds to its beauty unparalleled delicacy of flesh and immense size. It is recorded that the turkey sent by Mr. Vose to General Grant weighed forty pounds. Mr. Cleveland's turkey weighed fifty pounds, but Mr. Cleveland is a much heavier man than Grant was. For President Roosevelt the farms of Rhode Island have been scoured this year for a record breaking heavy-weight and one with a reputation as a fighter and the father of a large family. Most of the presidential turkeys have been raised at Westerly, on the farm of Elias Miner, otherwise "Asia" Miner by analogy.

In Kentucky, as in Rhode Island, the outdoor method of turkey raising is being extensively practiced. Turkeys have always been regarded as difficult to rear. The new method is to imitate natural conditions as far as practicable and thus to save the flocks from the epidemics and other ills of civilization to which they have long been heirs. The birds are provided with neither shelter nor roosts even in winter. They are fed liberally and in the spring are furnished with half barrels for nests, but there is as little interference as possible with their ways of living. Whole corn, sweet apples and grasshoppers are considered the best turkey food. Cornmeal, which is more commonly used, fattens the bird more rapidly, but renders the flesh of poorer quality. Breeding by selection, picking out the largest individuals from generation to generation, is largely responsible for the greater size which the domestic turkey obtains over the wild bird.

Thousands of turkeys are raised by Kentucky negroes on their little holdings, and to the negroes also falls the task of slaughtering and picking the fowls grown on the large ranges. For this work they get 2½ cents per turk. The roads during the early days of November are dotted with marching flocks leaving the farms and converging on the towns, where the birds are dressed and packed into refrigerator cars or placed alive in wicker baskets to be shipped to every point of the compass.

Despite the abundance of turkeys in Kentucky, the negro's proverbial love of fowl and the natural disposition to regard stolen fruits, or turkeys, as sweetest require the owner of a turkey yard to be careful about locking up at night. Turkey shoots and raffles are very popular with the colored folk, and the lucky winner of a bird carrying home his prize in triumph would not change places with Caesar leading captive kings in chains behind his chariot.

The first Thanksgiving. The earliest recorded appointment of a Thanksgiving day was in 1623. There had been an unfavorable season for the young American colony, and starvation seemed imminent. To avert the terrible calamity a day of humiliation and prayer was appointed, and in the midst of the solemn observance the rain descended copiously. The crops afterward yielded an abundant harvest. To thank God "with all their hearts for the good world and the good things in it," the first American Thanksgiving was officially proclaimed and duly celebrated in the fort church, and Elder Brewster preached a sermon.

PRINCE FUSHIMA

Visits the President and Delivers the Mikado's Greetings.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—His Imperial Highness, Prince Sadamaru Fushima, special envoy of the Emperor of Japan, was the guest of honor at a state dinner given at the White House this evening. All the members of the Ambassadorial corps of Washington, with the exception of Count Cassini, were present, besides officers of the Cabinet and representatives of the army and navy. Count Cassini, the Dean of the corps, was absent because it would have been indelicate, if not embarrassing, for the Czar's diplomatic agent to sit at the same table with a near relative of the Mikado while the two nations are at war.

Prince Fushima was presented to the Assistant Secretary of State Pierce, the ceremony taking place in the Blue Room, the rich Oriental uniforms of His Highness and his retinue giving a touch of brilliancy to it. Expressions of regard which the United States and Japan entertain for each other were exchanged, and this afternoon the President returned the Prince's visit by calling on him at the Arlington hotel.

Shortly before 10 o'clock the Prince and his suit drove from the Arlington Hotel to the White House. The Prince occupied the state carriage of the Japanese Legation.

New Way of Using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr Arthur Chapman writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a cure suitable for old and young, I pen you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two months old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy teat the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby." This remedy is for sale by Woods & Orme Druggists.

Thanksgiving with a Vengeance

BY WILLIS D. HAWKINS

The Old House.

HE sitting room fire was to be built, but Chester Harding, with the basket of kindling before him, sat in the low, splint bottom rocker and stared gloomily into the deep, old fashioned fireplace—the same chair in which his gentle little mother, twenty-five years ago, had rocked and crooned and kissed away his baby troubles—the same fireplace before which his own beautiful wife had last night lulled their precious baby boy to sleep.

The dead ashes on the cold hearthstone seemed to have something in common with the burnt out hopes that lay so chill upon his comfortless heart. What had he to be thankful for? Soon the dear old homestead was to pass to hands far worse than those of strangers, hands that would desecrate and destroy through sheer malevolence.

Motherless at nine and fatherless three years later, he had been left to the care of his Aunt Electa, a strong, despotic spinster with decided opinions and a vigorous way of expressing them. His father, not long before his death, had been worried in a financial transaction by his own brother, Chester's Uncle James, and had been compelled to mortgage the homestead and its contents to save himself from immediate ruin. Aunt Electa had ever afterward detested her brother James and openly denounced his pious professions as wicked hypocrisy. She had drawn him (Chester) into the relentless warfare against Uncle James, and the vengeful uncle, cut from the same piece as the vengeful aunt, had bought and foreclosed the mortgage in the hope of throwing her and her ward out of house and home. Aunt Electa, enraged to almost superhuman energy, had moved heaven and earth to raise the necessary money and had bid in the property.

Chester was aroused from these recollections by his wife, who had come to dress the baby by the sitting room fire. The joy of the sun bright morning was in her thankful young mother heart as she began with merry mock seriousness to chide her dilatory husband for not having yet even laid the kindling.

loved the old place he had lived in so long.

"From Uncle James," he answered. "He owns everything here. Aunt Electa left no will, and her brother, being next of kin, inherits all she owned." Mrs. Harding had risen and now stood beside the chair, holding her husband's head against her breast. "Never mind, dear," she said, with tender sympathy; "we shall some time have money enough to buy the old place back."

But Chester shook his head. "Some time is as bad as no time. In a week Uncle James will have the house torn down and its contents scattered to the winds. I know him. He will chop down every tree and gloat over the knowledge that each stroke of the ax cuts into my heart. He hates me as relentlessly as Aunt Electa hated him."

The rest of the forenoon was passed in dismal despair. Mrs. Harding, with that niceness of perception which comes of true sympathy, had decided not to have the Thanksgiving dinner she had planned. It would be a mockery, a reminder of the blessings Chester had missed. So she set the table for the simple meal they ordinarily had at midday. It was nearly ready when the doorbell rang, and Chester, inwardly resenting intrusion, responded.

"I trust I am in time for dinner," said a cheery faced man whom Chester recognized as the new Methodist minister, who had been pointed out to him on the street the day before.

"Such as it is, you are in time for it," said Chester. The minister had stepped inside before even this dubious invitation was extended. Chester showed him to the sitting room and went to tell his wife.

"Did—you—ever?" When a little woman opens a pair of big brown eyes to their widest limits, utters those three short words as if each were a separate explosion and drops her hands in final despair you may know fate has done its worst. And if you have long been under the strain of a really great grief this heaping on of petty misfortunes is apt to stir a sense of the ridiculous in you. Chester, looking into his wife's dejected face, burst into uncontrollable laughter, which it was difficult to keep the minister from hearing. Grasping his sides with both hands, he staggered about the dining room, trying in vain to suppress his paroxysms, until his wife, catching the infection, joined him in the idiotic Indian dance, stuffing her apron into her mouth to smother her shrieks of laughter.

Near the end of the dinner the minister chanced to speak of Chester as a member of his church, and Chester corrected him. It then transpired that the minister, having received an invitation to dine with James Harding, had asked for "Mr. Harding's" house, and had been directed to Chester's.

After due apologies for his mistake the minister asked the privilege of reading a chapter from the Scriptures, and Mrs. Harding brought Aunt Electa's big clasp Bible, the only one in the house. At sight of the book Chester reproached himself for having shamelessly forgotten a tacit promise he had made to his aunt on the day of her death.

Aunt Electa's fatal illness had been characteristic of her—short, sharp, violent—and she had died in a convulsion. To the last she had stoutly maintained that she was not going to die and had insisted on being pillowed up that she might fortify herself to bear her pains by reading her Bible.

"Chet," she had said between writhings, "I don't lay the claim I ought to religion; but, I tell you, when I'm in pain or trouble there's nothing that bolsters me up like the book of Job. When you're in trouble and haven't any old aunt to come to read the book of Job. It's mighty solacing." In an hour she was dead.

Now, when the minister was gone, Chester, sitting again in the low rocker with the baby on his knee, asked his wife to read the book of Job to him. She had finished the first chapter and begun the second when she turned the leaf and a loose sheet fluttered out. As she picked it up her eye caught the boldly written words, "Last Will and Testament of Electa Harding."

"Chester!" Her tone startled him. "The will!" She almost faint. The document was offered for probate next day, and, though the witnesses had moved away, there was no doubt about Aunt Electa's sprawling signature. "What could have possessed her to hide it away in such a place?" asked the mistress of the old homestead.

"I think I know," answered the master. "I think she wanted Uncle James to hope awhile so that he might suffer all the more in the end." "Isn't that a dreadful spirit to wish to pursue one's enemy even after one is dead? Chester, do you think Aunt Electa is in heaven?" "She is if she knows how badly Uncle James is cut up."

By A. B. LEWIS

ALWAYS count noses just before you carve the turkey, and don't forget to include your own proboscis.

If you invite your relatives to dine with you on Thanksgiving, it is wise to help them to turkey first. They have probably skipped one or two meals to be in shape for the feast and are hungry enough to start a riot.

Don't invite your mother-in-law to a Thanksgiving dinner and carve the turkey in such a way that it will fly off the platter and strike her in the face. A Wisconsin man tried that trick last year, and the old lady caught the turkey and took it home and devoured it.

If the bird is particularly tough and you have difficulty in carving it, don't get angry if some one yells, "Take an ax!" Mark that person and see that the least desirable portions of the fowl go on his plate.

Don't heave a sigh of relief and think the worst is over when you have at last helped everybody to turkey. You'll just about sit down to eat the juicy portions you have laid aside for yourself when the plates will begin to come back again.

In carving a very tough turkey stand back from the table as far as possible. This will give you a better chance to escape from the house in case the carving knife slips and the diners are covered with hot gravy.

If you are invited out to Thanksgiving dinner and think you will be asked to carve the turkey it would be well to wear a coat of mail, get a permit from the police to carry a revolver and deposited in some one's lap, do not join in the laugh that will follow. Remember you will have troubles of your own when the guests depart and you are left alone with your wife to face the music.

Don't glare at your wife and create a scene if the turkey is cast iron and puncture proof. In that case it may be cooked over the next day and you will save on the butcher's bill.

Last, but not least, don't take it out of the children if you happen to break a five dollar meat platter in carving a two dollar turkey. It is the dog's fault, of course, and he should be kicked all over the dining room.

at the gathering place waiting for the moment when the agent shall let loose upon the herds grazing on the hillside the bands of painted warriors. Medicine men are holding executive sessions, and the squaws and children are running races in their glees. Hundreds of Indians are dancing and making merry. When the word is given for the beginning of the chase a wild, weird chanting runs throughout the camp. Suddenly from their lodges burst forth the young men, clad in gay trappings and armed with long shining rifles. Off to the herd they dash; the crack of a gun is heard, and the bellowing of the cattle, the fierce shouting of the hunter and the fusillade of rifle shots make one believe that a battle is in progress. Half an hour or more the chase is kept up, while the wildest excitement prevails in the camp. Squaws are sharpening long knives and the medicine men are chanting invocations for the success of the hunters. Then the warriors come riding back in a long column, dragging the beaver as trophies behind them, singing the buffalo song.

The squaws skin and dress the beef, the medicine men invoke the blessing of Manitou, and the Indians rush to the carcasses and eat their fill.

What Thanksgiving Means.

THANKSGIVING means a lot of things! Upon the farm when we were boys—Still memory about it sings—And accents all its olden joys.

How many things are brought to mind—From turkey fit for kingly feast To pies of every sort and kind, From mince to pumpkin, nicely creased.

AND who were there? Who were not, say, From grandpa to the youngest boy? It seemed just no Thanksgiving day If one were absent from the joy.

It was a feeling next to that Religion twines around the soul; That one must have a homelike chat This day, else it had missed its goal.

GOD bless the old Thanksgiving days Upon the farm when we were boys! For memory about them plays As round naught else of modern joys. From other days they stand aloof, As holier ones forever may, And typify in our behoof Eternity's Thanksgiving day.

MEMORIAL.

It is hard to realize and hard and painful to announce to the public the death of our beloved friend and brother, R. W. Wood; And to say a noble, tried and true representative man has fallen nor is it saying too much to say that this announcement caused and is causing many hearts to droop in saddest grief, for no one in our community had more warm-hearted friends or stood higher in the esteem of our people than he, and all considerate, intelligent people who knew him realize that we have sustained a great loss in his death.

This will be more apparent when we remember that in all the commendable walks of life his footprints are to be found demonstrating the noble qualities of the heart that actuated the man, he was a man of intelligent, deep convictions, strong character and high moral and religious ideas nor were his sympathies and endeavors circumscribed to the immediate needs and wants of himself and family but spontaneously ran out for the weal of all men. In early life Bro. Wood embraced the religion of the cross and attached himself to the M. E. church at Shady Grove in which connection he proved himself worthy of the confidence reposed in him by his brethren, conscientious, faithful and true. Then ask me not how he died, his death was as his life with his face toward the "pearly gate" and the throbbing and breathings of his soul were for the fullness of the divine nature and it were well for us all to emulate his exemplary life.

Early in the spring of this year he and his friends began to realize that his health was waning and about the middle of June he was forced to succumb to an attack of typhoid fever and during his illness it was discovered that his lungs were seriously effected but he recovered sufficient strength to set up and walk about some for some weeks but about the 22nd of Oct. he returned to his bed and after this it was apparent to all that his vital forces were rapidly losing their energies until death of consumption ended his sufferings Oct. 30th 1904.

After the funeral services at the Shady Grove cemetery, conducted by his Pastor Rev. F. F. Roland, his mortality was laid to rest in a grave made hopeful by the vacant tomb of Jesus. A large concourse of sympathizing friends honored his funeral by their presence, sympathy and assistance.

Brother Wood leaves a wife, six sons, four daughters and a sister who in deep grief realize their great loss.

Sleep on Bob, thy rest be sweet, Thy prison shall yield to thee, And thy joys shall be complete, When in his likeness you shall see.

Thy Lord, and of Him receive, Thy crown His award of glory; The heritage of those who believe, The glorious gospel story.

Of Jesus who revived to raise us all, From death, and the prison house of clay, To a brighter home than this terrestrial wall, And to the light of eternal day.

By his friend and brother in the hope of the cross life the resurrection. Frank L. Atwood, Shady Grove.
