POSTOFFICE

DEPARTMENT

Shows a Big Deficit Because of Rural Delivery Expense.

Because of the great increase in rural mail routes, the post offices in many communities are being forced to operate at a deficit. In a recent report, the Postmaster General stated that the deficit for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1929, amounted to $600,000,000, which would be needed to continue the service as it is now conducted.

A FRUITFUL MINE.

Running the mail carriers may be a big business, but it is a fruitful one. A hundred thousand acre raisin farm, for instance, is several times the size of a small railroad, or a hundred thousand acres of cotton would produce enough to feed the entire population of the United States. A thousand acres of tobacco would make enough to supply the whole country with cigarettes.

Another One.

A few weeks ago we ordered a lot from Mr. Spiegler in the Blue River district, and it has just arrived. It consisted of one hundred boxes of the best Tolo fruit. We have always been very pleased with the Tolo fruit, and we think that it is the best kind of fruit that can be grown. We have always found it to be plump, juicy, and full of flavor.
