Emerson said that no man is what he knows. We have all known men of great wealth, men of wealth and large fortune, men of high position, etc. None of them were more than average in their knowledge. They knew how to manage money, but not how to make it. They knew how to live comfortably, but not how to live worthily. They knew how to dress well, but not how to dress gracefully. They knew how to speak loudly, but not how to speak distinctly. They knew how to write beautifully, but not how to write meaningfully. They knew how to think clearly, but not how to think deeply. They knew how to act bravely, but not how to act wisely. They knew how to live comfortably, but not how to live worthily. They knew how to manage money, but not how to make it.

My Own Story

By

Caleb Powers

This book is a calm, dispassionate account, from the standpoint of the man most interested, of the conditions in Kentucky leading to the assassination of William Goebel, and of Powers' indictment and conviction on the charge of complicity in his murder.

It most interests the people of Kentucky, the conventions of 1899, the election, the shooting of Goebel, the arrest, the three trials and the prison life.

For dramatic situations, human interest and political importance, the use of Caleb Powers is unpainted.

Many Illustrations from Photographs of Actual Scenes Connected With the Tragedy

Powers has a substantial cash interest in every copy sold of "MY OWN STORY."
