VOLUME 1.

MARION, CRITTENDEN COUNTY, KY., JUNE 23, 1905.

NUMBER 50.

"Eben Holden" a Masterpiece of Fiction Begins in this Issue of The Record.

THE NEW HOME OF THE RECORD

Work Was Commenced the First of the Week.

VERY HANDSOME STRUCTURE

Will be Built of Concrete, and Will be Picturesque in Appearance and Original in Design.

PER BUILDING PERMITS GRANTED

At the regular meeting of the City Council Tuesday evening several building permits were granted. Mrs. E. M. Able was given permission to build a two-story brick business house on Bank street. Messrs. Yandell & Orme were granted a permit to build a two-story hotel building on Bank street. Permission was granted Messrs. Crittenden & Whitehouse to erect the story office building on Bank street, which is to be occupied by THE RECORD printing plant. The fact that these buildings were to go up has been mentioned in these columns heretofore, and work on all of them is under way. A permit was also granted for the building of the Masonic temple, some of the details for which is now on the ground.

Work was begun this week on THE RECORD office building, which is to be on Bank street.

Both the design of the building and the selection of the material to be used throughout, the builders have been actuated by a desire to add something original in design and picturesque in appearance to the new dress in which Marion shall arise from the ruins of the old town of March 28th.

The building will be about 31 feet wide, 65 feet in length, and two stories high. THE RECORD office and printery will be on the ground floor, together with one additional office room. There will be six offices on the second floor. The material used in the construction of the building will be concrete-stone blocks for the walls, and the ground floor and roof will probably be built of concrete also.

The machinery for making the blocks is now on the ground. The decision to use this material was reached only after careful consideration and thorough investigation, resulting in the most inevitable conclusion that concrete is the material which will be used in buildings of all kinds, as it is met with a hearty reception north, south and west, wherever it has been introduced.

The greatest difficulty was met with in selecting a machine suited to the work in every detail, fully guaranteed every respect, not omitting the patent rights, which is one of the foremost essentials to be considered. The agent, made at Columbus, Ohio, was only selected as covering all requirements.

The material, when moulded into concrete-stone blocks and laid in the wall, will not be as expensive as pressed brick, nor yet so cheap as ordinary brick, but the buildings erected from this class of material can be made as beautiful as any other class of material, and is easily in a class with the pressed, from the standpoint of appearance alone. Besides, there is a water point of merit to be considered in the lasting qualities, and the fact that it can be made fire-proof, frost-proof and moisture proof, and it reduces the cost of insurance to a minimum.

Well made concrete is as durable as the pyramids of Egypt, whose composition scientists have only recently discovered to be none other than concrete. It is therefore being employed now for every class of building, and in every manner in which it can be used.

The building will be erected under the supervision of Chas. W. Aten, of Louisville, who has had considerable experience in construction work of similar nature, including some of the largest and handsomest office buildings and the new Seelbach Hotel, at Louisville. The prime motive in erecting a building of this nature was to afford a permanent home for THE RECORD which will be worthy of the high esteem and liberal patronage which has come from its readers and the business men of the entire community during its brief existence of less than one year.

Beautiful and Substantial Structures Are Now Being Built of Concrete Blocks

Norwood M. E. Church, Cincinnati, O. Concrete blocks, rock face. Similar in outline to Baptist Church, Hopkinsville, Ky.

Postoffice Building, Bucyrus, O. Built of hollow concrete blocks, plain face, made on the Winget Machine.

DISTRICT INSPECTED BY CAPITALISTS

With a View to Building a Belt Line Railroad From Mexico to Marion.

OTHER MINING NEWS OF INTEREST

There is Considerable Talk of the Probable Erection of a Smelter at This Place.

The Marion Zinc Co. have struck a fine vein of zinc ore and spar on their Jno. Polk property.

Capt. Haase recently shipped a carload of zinc ore and spar to Kansas for experimental purposes.

Work at the Burns mines has not yet been begun, but it is thought they will start to work in the no distant future.

President Stephenson, of the Albany Mining & Investment Co., is at Joplin purchasing a mill to separate lead and spar, also machinery to grind their No. 1 spar. About 1,500 tons of fine lead and spar is now on the dump. This property is near Salem.

The Schoolfield-Speas mines, are in fine progress. Work in the main shaft continues. Two side shafts have been sunk in order to intercept the inflow of water. New machinery and with the force of hands now on the prospects are altogether promising.

C. S. Knight, president of the Marion Zinc Co., is arranging to put in machinery for grinding spar at their Jap Riley mine. They have over one thousand tons of No. 1 spar now on their dump. This mine is 170 feet deep and they are sinking the shaft as fast as men and steam drills can push it.

At the Wheatcroft mine work is steadily progressing along lines of development. Bob Rushing, foreman for the operators, is keeping everything well timbered, and is doing good work on the east shaft, which will be sunk to about 150 feet. The shaft is now down seventy-five feet, and will be pushed rapidly with two shifts.

The spar is of good quality, much of it requiring shooting to remove it from the vein. No effort is being made for big tonnage, the owners' aim at present being to put the property in shape to work extensively later on, after the true conditions are determined.

About fifteen tons of gravel and lump spar is being raised daily.

Johnson Crider, secretary and manager of the Marion Mineral Co., operating the big Pogue mine, says they are taking out 75 tons daily and can raise it to 100 tons easily. At this mine they have two years of overhead "stoping" in sight. Mr. Crider is a hustler and one of the most successful operators in the district.

Mr. Julian G. Hearne, of Wheeling, W. Va., a large stockholder in the Eagle Fluor Spar Co., has been spending the week at Salem. Mr. E. L. Wiles, of Stony Point, N. Y., another large stockholder in the same company, accompanies Mr. Hearne. Both gentlemen have considerable means and influence, and are the kind of men to develop this district into one of prominence.

The mineral shipments of the week ending June 21st are as follows:
1 car lump fluorspar	88,000
1 car carbonate of zinc	53,231
19 cars gravel fluorspar	567,831
94 barrels ground fluorspar	50,000
Total	751,062

Mexico, Ky., June 21.—Following is the list of fluorspar shipments from this place for week ending June 17th.
Kentucky Fluor Spar Co.
1 car lump	61,730
2 cars gravel	103,040
Marion Mineral Co.
3 cars gravel	204,000
Total	368,770

Wednesday last, at the Senator mine in Caldwell county, Coy Weakes, a one-armed man about twenty years old, accidentally fell from the top to the bottom of the seventy-eight foot shaft, but happening to fall upon a workman at the bottom of the shaft, strange to narrate, he not only was not seriously hurt himself, no bones being broken, but the workman struck was not more than bruised a little, and was able to go right on to work. Young Weakes was not employed at the mine, and was merely standing around. None but employees should be permitted about a mine.

A party of capitalists from Pennsylvania and Indiana were here last week in charge of Capt. Haase looking over this and the Salem district with a view of building a belt line railroad from Mexico by way of Salem and Crittenden Springs to Marion. After making a careful examination of the district they left highly pleased with the prospects for a good tonnage from the time the road can be completed and placed in operation. There is a quiet movement on foot for the building of such a belt line road and will probably develop soon into something more realistic and substantial.

There was a party of capitalists in the district last week investigating the lead and zinc output with a view of erecting a smelter at Marion. This industry could be easily secured for the district with a belt line road through the mining section via Salem, affording cheap transportation to Marion from all the mines. With a railroad through the mining section, assuring a 25 cent haul to Marion, where a smelter would undoubtedly be erected, this district would witness a great and more substantial boom than ever before, not barring the valuable advertising secured by its St. Louis Exposition exhibits.

A Loss to Kentucky's Schools.

It will be a matter of regret to Kentucky teachers to know that Charles Evans, who for the past eleven years has been superintendent of the Marion city schools, is to leave Kentucky. He is a practical school man; enthusiastic, a hard worker, and his loss will be a sad blow to the public schools of Kentucky. He has made the Marion city schools equal to any in the state. The Ardmore schools are five in number with from eight to twelve rooms, and about two thousand children. We lose, but Ardmore gains, one of the most progressive school men of our State.—Southern School Journal.

SUITS FILED AGAINST MINING COMPANIES

Revenue Agent Claims Back Taxes For a Period of Five Years.

Assistant Revenue Agent, for the State at large, J. Wood Browning, of Lexington, was in the city Saturday and Sunday looking up claims against individuals or corporations for the purpose of suing for back taxes on property not given in the general assessment, and Monday afternoon suits were filed against the following mining companies for taxes on property claimed to have been omitted in all for a period covering the past five years:

Kentucky Fluor Spar Co.	$200,000
Eagle Fluor Spar Co.	100,000
Marion Mineral Co.	50,000
Marion Zinc Co.	50,000
Commodore Mining Co.	50,000

The suits to recover taxes on the above, aggregating $450,000, were brought in the name of A. M. Harrison, the revenue agent for the State at large, who is the plaintiff in all the cases. The commonwealth's interests will be represented by the noted Lexington attorney, Col. John R. Allen.

If the contention can be established and the courts direct the payment of the taxes, County Attorney Carl Henderson will see that the county's interests in the matter are given due consideration.

In the presentation of evidence at the trial of such cases, according to the recent decision of the court of appeals rendered about April 1st, records can be had to the books, which in such cases the taxpayers are compelled to grant that the courts may see what their business amounts to.

ARE ENTHUSIASTIC OVER INTERURBAN

People of Livingston County Very Anxious to Get Proposed Line.

PADUCAHANS SHOULD BE INTERESTED

Would Pass Through a Rich Country And Would Prove to be a Very Profitable Investment.

Paducahans who have returned from Livingston county this summer say that capitalists there and elsewhere are making a great mistake in not taking more interest in the proposed interurban line from Marion, Crittenden county, to Paducah.

The people of those counties are most enthusiastic, and as told in the Sun the other day, have appealed to the Louisville Commercial Club for assistance in building the line.

It is quite a rich country, and for several months in the year, very frequently, there is no way to ship goods in or out, and the farmers and merchants have to haul it a dozen miles or more. Often they have to do without, and last year for three months there was not even a steamboat going that way. For days there is often no mail, and the farmers have to pay considerable money to have their goods hauled, thus increasing the cost of everything, and making the burden fall on all alike.

This is one of the reasons the people up in Livingston and adjacent counties are so anxious to get this interurban road. They are tired being isolated from the rest of the world when it is so near, and weary of having to wait for days sometimes for their mail.

The proposed line from Marion to Paducah would be about thirty miles long and pass through Smithland, Birds-ville, Bayou Mills, Hampton, Salem and other towns.

Some of the country thereabout is hilly, but it is believed that the road could be constructed for much less than the proposed interurban line from Paducah to Cairo.

The people all over that section, according to Paducahans who have been there, are in the right state of mind to make almost any kind of fair, reasonable concessions to get the interurban to Paducah. It seems to be a project that promises much profit for those who invest in it, and Paducah capitalists should take it up at once, in the opinion of those who know.—Paducah Sun.

Denman & Love have employed their trimmer, Miss McNeely, for another month.

LIVELY SESSION TUESDAY NIGHT

Commercial Club Directors Hold Business Meeting.

CONVENTION AND BARBECUE

For Road Overseers is Discussed at Length, and Will be Had on Saturday, June 24th.

MANUFACTURING AND WATERWORKS

At the Commercial Club Directors' Meeting Tuesday evening, June 20th, many matters of interest were discussed and disposed of in a business like manner. Chief among such matters, however, was the Road Overseers' Convention and Barbecue Dinner, Saturday, June 24th. Arrangements will be made to serve dinner in the court house yard to all road overseers who attend, and also to the Club's members who may be present. Badges appropriate to the occasion will be distributed, and will entitle the wearers to dinner when served.

This convention will mark a new era for the county, and will begin a general campaign of education in road working and building. Addresses will be delivered by capable speakers, and it is expected that Mr. Dodge, chief of the county and State roads bureau, of Washington, will be in attendance.

All of the preliminary arrangements have been in the hands of Mr. C. S. Nunn and his committee on good roads. The entertainment feature will be in charge of Mr. H. H. Sayre and his committee. However, owing to Mr. Sayre's enforced absence from the city on Saturday morning, Mr. James M. Freeman will arrange for serving the barbecue dinner. Mr. Freeman has had considerable experience in such matters, and it is needless to expect anything but a delectable repast of mutton, shoat, pickles and other essentials.

The waterworks question is a subject of never-ending interest at all meetings of the Club or its directors, and it is safe to predict that the city will have waterworks as a result of the combined efforts of the Council and Commercial Club. It was appropriately stated that Mayor Blue will have a lasting monument commemorating his administration through the aid rendered by him on any and all occasions to bring about success.

The subject of advertising the natural resources of the city and district was discussed, and an effort will be made to draft some catchy phrases and paragraphs to be printed on the Club's stationery, particularly the envelopes. This matter was referred to the president, secretary and publicity and promotion committee, jointly, to act in such manner as may be mutually agreed upon.

All officers and directors of the Club were present, except Mr. Chas. Evans, who is absent from the city, and Mr. George M. Crider, who seemed indisposed—to attend.

Ready For the Reaper.

BY RUSTIC.

Little brown men with coats bursting quite,
Murmur away, we will listen to-night.
Stroke your rough beards and rustle your caps,
You never are weary, never need naps.
Take in more strength and drink up the dew,
Save up your stores to make sinews new.
Your little brown coats are getting quite snug,
Closer and closer they seem to hug.
You murmur and shake and bow in fear;
Do you know the glistening steel draws near?
You bend with the weight you carry for man,
And each in its order must give all it can.
So rustle and murmur away, O grain,
For soon in your strength you will all be slain.

CHAPTER I.

OF all the people that ever went west that expedition was the most remarkable.

A small boy in a big basket on the back of a jolly old man, who carried a cane in one hand, a rifle in the other; a black dog serving as scout, skirmisher and rear guard—that was the size of it. They were the survivors of a ruined home in the north of Vermont and were traveling far into the valley of the St. Lawrence, but with no particular destination.

Midsummer had passed them in their journey. Their clothes were covered with dust, their faces browned in the hot sun. It was a very small boy that sat inside the basket and clung to the rim, his tow head shaking as the old man walked. He saw wonderful things day after day looking down at the green fields or peering into the gloomy reaches of the wood, and he talked about them.

"Uncle Eb, is that where the swifts are?" he would ask often, and the old man would answer: "No; they ain't real sassy this time o' year. They lay round in the deep dingles every day."

Then the small voice would sing idly or prattle with an imaginary being that had a habit of peeking over the edge of the basket or would shout a greeting to some bird or butterfly and ask finally:

"Tired, Uncle Eb?" Sometimes the old gentleman would say "Not very" and keep on, looking thoughtfully at the ground. Then, again, he would stop and mop his bald head with a big red handkerchief and say, a little tremor of irritation in his voice: "Tired! Who wouldn't be tired with a big elephant like you on his back all day? I'd be 'shamed o' myself 't set there an' let an old man carry me from Dan to Beersheba. Git out now an' shake yer legs."

I was the small boy, and I remember it was always a great relief to get out of the basket and, having run ahead, to lie in the grass among the wild flowers and jump up at him as he came along.

Uncle Eb had been working for my father five years before I was born. He was not a strong man and had never been able to carry the wide swath of the other help in the fields, but we all loved him for his kindness and his knack of story telling. He was a bachelor who came over the mountain from Pleasant Valley, a little bundle of clothes on his shoulder, and bringing a name that enriched the nomenclature of our neighborhood. It was Eben Holden.

He had a cheerful temper and an imagination that was a very wilderness of oddities. Bears and panthers growled and were very terrible in that strange country. He had invented an animal more treacherous than any in the woods, and he called it a swift. "Sum-thin' like a panther," he described the look of it—a fearsome creature that lay in the edge of the woods at sundown and made a noise like a woman crying to lure the unwary. It would light one's eye with fear to hear Uncle Eb lift his voice in the cry of the swift. Many a time in the twilight when the bay of a bound or some far cry came faintly through the wooded hills I have seen him lift his hand and bid us hark. And when we had listened a moment, our eyes wide with wonder, he would turn and say in a low, half-whispered tone, "It's a swift." I suppose we needed more the fear of God, but the young children of the pioneer needed also the fear of the woods or they would have strayed to their death in them.

A big bass viol, taller than himself, had long been the solace of his Sundays. After he had shaved—a ceremony so solemn that it seemed a rite of his religion—that sacred viol was uncovered. He carried it sometimes to the back piazza and sometimes to the barn, where the horses shook and trembled at the roaring thunder of the strings. When he began playing we children had to get well out of the way and keep our distance. I remember now the look of him then—his thin face, his soft black eyes, his long nose, the suit of broadcloth, the stock and standing collar and, above all, the solemnity in his manner when that big devil of a thing was leaning on his breast.

As to his playing, I have never heard a more fearful sound in any time of peace or one less creditable to a Christian. Week days he was addicted to the milder sin of the flute, and after chores, if there were no one to talk with him, he would sit long and pour his soul into that magic bar of boxwood.

Uncle Eb had another great accomplishment. He was what they call in the north country "a natural cooner." After nightfall, when the corn was ripening, he spoke in a whisper and had his ear cocked for coons. But he loved all kinds of good fun.

So this man had a boy in his heart and a boy in his basket that evening we left the old house. My father and mother and older brother had been drowned in the lake, where they had gone for a day of pleasure. I had then a small understanding of my loss, but I have learned since that the farm was not worth the mortgage and that everything had to be sold. Uncle Eb and I—a little lad, a very little lad of six—were all that was left of what had been in that home. Some were for sending me to the county house, but they decided finally to turn me over to a dissolute uncle, with some allowance for my keep. Therein Uncle Eb was to be reckoned with. He had set his heart on keeping me, but he was a farm hand without any home or visible property and not, therefore, in the mind of the authorities, a proper guardian. He had me with him in the old house, and the very night he heard they were coming after me in the morning we started on our journey.

I remember he was a long time tying packages of bread and butter and tea and boiled eggs to the rim of the basket so that they hung on the outside. Then he put a woolen shawl and an oilcloth blanket on the bottom, pulled the straps over his shoulders and buckled them, standing before the looking glass, and, having put on my cap and coat, stood me on the table and stooped so that I could climb into the basket—a pack basket that he had used in hunting, the top a little smaller than the bottom. Once in, I could stand comfortably or sit facing sideways, my back and knees wedged from port to starboard. With me in my place, he blew out the lantern and groped his way to the road, his cane in one hand, his rifle in the other. Fred, our old dog—a black shepherd, with tawny points—came after us. Uncle Eb scolded him and tried to send him back, but I plead for the poor creature, and that settled it; he was one of our party.

"Dunno how we'll feed him," said Uncle Eb. "Our own mouths are big enough 't take all we can carry, but I hain't no heart 't leave 'im all 'lone there."

I was old for my age, they tell me, and had a serious look and a wise way of talking for a boy so young, but I had no notion of what lay before or behind us.

"Now, boy, take a good look at the old house," I remember he whispered to me at the gate that night. "Tain't likely ye'll ever see it ag'in. Keep quiet now," he added, letting down the bars at the foot of the lane. "We're goin' west, an' we musn't let the grass grow under us. Got 't be purty spy, I can tell ye."

It was quite dark, and he felt his way carefully down the cow paths into the broad pasture. With every step I kept a sharp lookout for swifths, and the moon shone after awhile, making my work easier.

I had to hold my head down presently when the tall brush began to whip the basket, and I heard the big boots of Uncle Eb ripping the briars. Then we came into the blackness of the thick timber, and I could hear him feeling his way over the dead leaves with his cane. I got down shortly and walked beside him, holding on to the rifle with one hand. We stumbled often and were long in the trail before we could see the moonlight through the tree columns. In the clearing I climbed to my seat again, and by and by we came to the road, where my companion sat down, resting his load on a boarder.

"Pretty hot, Uncle Eb; pretty hot," he said to himself, fanning his brow with that old felt hat he wore everywhere. "We've come three miles or more without a stop, an' I guess we'd better rest a jiffy."

My legs ached, too, and I was getting very sleepy. I remember the jolt of the basket as he rose and hearing him say, "Well, Uncle Eb, I guess we'd better be goin'."

The elbow that held my head, lying on the rim of the basket, was already numb, but the pricking could no longer rouse me, and, half dead with weariness, I fell asleep. Uncle Eb has told me since that I tumbled out of the basket once and that he had a time of it getting me in again, but I remember nothing more of that day's history.

When I woke in the morning I could hear the crackling of fire and felt very warm and cozy wrapped in the big shawl. I got a cheery greeting from Uncle Eb, who was feeding the fire with a big heap of sticks that he had piled together. Old Fred was licking my hands with his rough tongue, and I suppose that is what waked me. Tea was steeping in the little pot that hung over the fire, and our breakfast of boiled eggs and bread and butter lay on a paper beside it. I remember well the scene of our little camp that morning. We had come to a strange country, and there was no road in sight. A wooded hill lay back of us, and just before ran a noisy little brook, winding between smooth banks, through a long pasture into a dense wood. Behind a wall on the opposite shore a great field of rustling corn filled a broad valley and stood higher than a man's head.

While I went to wash my face in the clear water Uncle Eb was husking some ears of corn that he took out of his pocket and had them roasting over the fire in a moment. We ate heartily, giving Fred two big slices of bread and butter, packing up with enough remaining for another day. Breakfast over, we doused the fire, and Uncle Eb put on his basket. He made after a squirrel presently with old Fred and brought him down out of a tree by hurling stones at him, and then the faithful follower of our camp got a bit of meat for his breakfast. We climbed the wall as he ate and buried ourselves in the deep corn. The fragrant, silky tassels brushed my face and the corn hissed at our intrusion, crossing its green sabers in our path. Far in the field my companion heaped a little of the soft earth for a pillow, spread the oilcloth between rows and, as we lay down, drew the big shawl over us.

Uncle Eb was tired after the toll of that night and went asleep almost as soon as he was down. Before I dropped off Fred came and licked my face and stepped over me, his tail wagging for leave, and curled upon the shawl at my feet. I could see no sky in that gloomy green aisle of corn. This going to bed in the morning seemed a foolish business to me that day, and I lay a long time looking up at the rustling canopy overhead. I remember listening to the waves that came whispering out of the further field nearer and nearer until they swept over us with a roaring swash of leaves like that of water flooding among rocks, as I have heard it often. A twinge of homesickness came to me, and the snoring of Uncle Eb gave me no comfort. I remember covering my head and crying softly as I thought of those who had gone away and whom I was to meet in a far country called heaven, whither we were going. I forgot my sorrow finally in sleep. When I awoke it had grown dusk under the corn. I felt for Uncle Eb and he was gone. Then I called to him.

"Hush, boy! Lie low," he whispered, bending over me, a sharp look in his eye. "Fraid they're after us."

He sat kneeling beside me, holding Fred by the collar and listening. I could hear voices, the rustle of the corn and the tramp of feet near by. It was thundering in the distance—that heavy, shaking thunder that seems to take hold of the earth—and there were sounds in the corn like the drawing of sabers and the rush of many feet. The noisy thunderclouds came nearer and the voices that had made us tremble were no longer heard.

Uncle Eb began to fasten the oil blanket to the stalks of corn for a shelter. The rain came roaring over us. The sound of it was like that of a host of cavalry coming at a gallop. We lay bracing the stalks, the blanket tied above us, and were quite dry for a time. The rain rattled in the sounding sheaves and then came flooding down the steep gutters. Above us beam and rafter creaked, swaying and showing glimpses of the dark sky. The rain passed—we could hear the last battalion leaving the field—and then the tumult ended as suddenly as it began. The corn trembled a few moments and hushed to a faint whisper. Then we could hear only the drip of raindrops leaking through the green roof. It was dark under the corn.

Old Folk's Meeting at Mt. Zion.

The Old Folk's meeting recently held at Mt. Zion church was a day of great joy and gladness to many hearts. The hearty handshakes and the good old songs brought to memory things of the past. We were reminded of the days of Peter Clinton and others.

The services began at 10 a. m. with the song, "How Tedious and Tasteless the Hour." The opening address was delivered by W. J. Hill, at the close of which Rev. T. F. Rowland preached an interesting sermon, his subject being "The Gospel and its Mission."

At the close of his sermon the good people with their baskets filled to the handle secured a comfortable place and said, "Come and eat," and all seemed to feel perfectly at home for the next thirty minutes.

When the noon hour was over the house was again called to order by W. J. Hill, who read for a lesson the 34th Psalm, after which Uncle John Hogard talked a short time, his subject being "What a Privilege to be the Sons of God." After this the services closed with prayer by Bro. Tom Henry.

Then it was that goodbyes could be heard about the sacred old spot. The songs, prayers and testimonials that went up to God for his goodness will not soon be forgotten. W. J. H.

INSURANCE RATES AND FIRE HAZARDS REDUCED

By Using Wire Glass in Openings of Exposed Buildings.

The installation of wire glass windows in exposed side or end openings of store buildings, factories, etc., would result in a material reduction of fire hazard, and a corresponding reduction in the insurance rate, which would soon save enough to pay for the additional cost of the wire glass.

Parties manufacturing this glass have been in communication with the Commercial Club, and below we publish below a letter for general information:

Chicago, June 7th, 1905.

MR. JAS. E. CHITTENDEN,
Marion, Ky.

DEAR SIR:—We are very much obliged to you for your prompt reply to our recent inquiry. We received a letter on April 25 from Messrs. Geo. M. Crider & Co., of your city, who told us about the severe loss by fire that your city had suffered, and who expressed the hope that in rebuilding the property owners may be influenced to so construct their buildings as to avoid possible duplication of the recent terrible loss.

We will send you today a dozen copies of our catalogue, that you may find useful to those that should be interested, also a copy of a book issued by the Mississippi Wire Glass Co., subsequent to the Baltimore fire, that you will probably find very interesting, and blue prints showing full size details of our two most popular styles of windows. These two windows are shown on pages 4 and 28 of our catalogue. You will find that the blue prints differ slightly from those shown in the catalogue; we having made small changes since the booklet was published.

All metal window work is made to order, and until we know just exactly what will be required it is not possible for us to make prices that we can depend upon as being fair. If you will send us a memorandum of the extreme outside sizes of the brick openings to be filled, giving the width first, then the height from the sill to the spring of arch, and the height of arch if any, and sag what particular type of window will be most acceptable, we will quote you prices that we are quite sure you will find attractive.

Our standard window, having the lower sash stationary and the upper sash pivoted, is the cheapest one that we make, and is undoubtedly the best for use in factories, warehouses and stores, where an absolutely weather tight window is not an absolute necessity. These windows are about as tight against wind and weather as an ordinary wooden window.

In our boxframe window, which is the most expensive window that we make, you will notice by the blue print, every provision is made for excluding dust and weather, and this window we claim is practically as tight as an ordinary watch case.

We have requested the Mississippi Wire Glass Co., to send you a square foot sample of each ribbed and polished wire glass, and a number of small samples of each finish. The ribbed wire glass is what we always use unless something else is specified. This glass is prismatic, and will when used in a room thirty or more feet deep at least double the amount of interior light. The polished wire glass is more attractive, and is extremely expensive, costing about five times as much as the ribbed, or more for this glass alone than we would ask for a window complete with the ribbed glass.

We are extremely anxious to give you every possible item of information that may assist you in your campaign of education, and trust that you will let us hear from you at a very early date.

Yours truly,

Voightmann & Co.

Morgan and the trusts are pretty big until one gets in on the ground floor. Ask Sturgis.

Sturgis, the coming city of the South.—Sturgis News-Democrat.
Louisville, the metropolis, will have to take a back seat.

Will the next Democratic State legislature enact a law requiring that only Democrats shall serve on juries in this State, or will some of the present commissioners just keep their seats.

Editorial Comment.
They say the per capita will be larger this year, but who is "they?"
Cold facts may become hot by using them intensely; otherwise they will freeze their own passage.
An increase in salary this year would be a surprise to school teachers, but they are used to surprises—adversely.
They say that peace is in sight; but what peace? Peace of quietness or peace of the once grand army and navy of Russia?
The one "ideal" man, known by the more common cognomen as "crank," is the one that does things, and such a one counts.
Will power is the power behind the throne that paves the way to the goal of success. It's not luck, but pluck, that makes fortune, smiling, beckon.
As are a man's neighbors, so is the man. Not so. We are often helpless with regard to the actions of those in the next door, but not so with our own door.
The "what's the use man" usually swells the number of life's failures. Not the interrogation, but the intense application of facilities makes or mars life's fortunes.
An agent of "My Own Story," by Caleb Powers, reports sales of the book to many Democrats, they making statements that they believe Mr. Powers is innocent.
Partisanship and partyism often go hand in hand, and when blinded by their tenets, regardless of justice and patriotism, then liberty trails in the dust.
Who said Theodore Roosevelt was a dangerous man for the peace of the country? A fighting man to the core, but behold his efforts as peacemaker between Russia and Japan.
Many detest "progressive push" because they fear their own little shells will be broken. They think not of "leaving thy outgrown shell by life's unresting sea," simply from the fact that they have not outgrown their shell.

Dying of Famine
Is, in its torments, like dying of consumption. The progress of consumption, from the beginning to the very end, is a long torture, both to victim and friends. "When I had consumption in its first stage," writes Wm. Myers, of Cearfoss, Md., "after trying different medicines and a good doctor in vain, I at last took Dr. King's New Discovery, which quickly and perfectly cured me." Prompt relief and sure cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, etc. Positively prevents pneumonia. Guaranteed at Haynes & Taylor's drug store, price 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Trial bottle free.

ROBERTSON & COMPANY
DISTILLERY PURCHASED
By Fred Hipple, of Madisonville, and Will Soon be Put In Operation.
Last week the Robertson & Co. distillery was purchased by Fred Hipple, of Madisonville, who is in the saloon business at that place and who is reputed to be one of the most wealthy business men of the city. It is understood that Mr. Hipple came here for the purpose of buying the distilling plant and removing it, but after spending a short time in the city looking at the location of the plant and viewing the rapidly with which the city is arising from the ashes of the recent great fire, he came to the conclusion that the plant was as well situated as could be elsewhere, and he found the business prospects so flattering that he purchased of County Clerk C. E. Weldon the Perry lot, which is on Main street and one of the most prominent business blocks in the city, and he will very likely build a business house within a short time, but he stated to a representative of THE RECORD that he was undecided whether he would go into business in this building or whether he would build to rent.
Notwithstanding the Robertson distillery has not been run for several years, it is certain that the conditions are such that it can be run on its present site quite successfully, and the citizens here would much rather see the plant start up here than to have it moved away and run elsewhere.

Accidentally Shot.
Last Tuesday morning, in the Morris & Hubbard restaurant, Herbert Morris was shot in the abdomen by Willie Clement, colored. The weapon used was a 22-caliber Winchester rifle that the boys had been shooting with. Herbert was in the kitchen at work when the negro boy, who washes dishes at the restaurant, took up the gun and discharged it, not knowing that young Morris was near. The wound is not a serious one, being only a flesh wound. Dr. Daughtrey located and removed the ball.

Death's Harvest.
Early Friday Morning, June 16, Miss Emma King, passed into the great beyond, at the family home near Carra-ville. About three months ago she received a paralytic stroke, rendering her helpless.
Miss King was a sister of Esq. Carl King, and was of a prominent family. Some years ago she was engaged in teaching. She was a member of the Methodist church and lived a consistent christian life. Besides brother and sisters she leaves many friend to mourn her demise.

All persons holding claims against the estate of Sam Cruce (colored), deceased, are hereby notified to present them properly proved by or before June 26, 1905, or they will be forever barred.
GEO. W. CRUCE, (Col.) Admr.
Marion, Ky., 6-1-'05.

S. S. Teachers' Training Class.
The review lesson should be one of the most interesting lessons of the quarter, one in which we gather up the precious truths we have learned. It is a principle of human nature to tell what we have learned. At the beginning of the quarter each teacher should plan for the review. Let the essential points of each lesson fit into this plan.
OLD TESTAMENT.
The next six months we turn to the Old Testament. The period included in the lessons for the last half of 1905 embraces the great prophetic period of Jewish history. Many thrilling scenes and stirring events are to be studied. These lessons are replete with historical, prophetic and practical facts. About one-half of the lessons for this period are taken from the last historical books—2nd Chronicles to Ezra, and from the prophetic books—Isaiah to Malachi. Beginning with the great Assyrian invasion of Shennacherib, we study the vicissitudes through which the kingdom of Judah passed, closing with the prophetic character of Christ and the preparation for his coming.

Gathering Statistics.
In 1902 Congress passed a law requiring the census of manufactories to be taken every five years. The first of these census was taken in the regular census year, 1900. Another is being taken this year. Chas. W. Bowman, of Washington, D. C., representing the Bureau of Census, division of manufactories, was in this city this week looking after this business. Mills, printing establishments, mining plants, etc., come under the head of manufactories.

The Crittenden Springs Ball.
The grand opening ball at the Crittenden Springs was given Friday evening, June 16th. The afternoon was warm, but the evening was pleasant, and the visitors were received from four o'clock to eight.
About one hundred guests were present, the majority being from Marion, but quite a number were from a distance.
The music, which was furnished by the Smithland band, was enjoyed by all, and the guests tripped the light fantastic toe and whirled in the giddy dance from nine o'clock to twelve.
Mr. and Mrs. William Oliver Tucker led the grand march, and the participants claim it was the finest ball they had ever witnessed at the Crittenden Springs or elsewhere.
The personage of Jno. W. Wilson, proprietor of the hotel, as is usual with such social functions, went a long way toward making the success of the evening complete.

NOW IS THE TIME TO USE HYOMEI
Far Easier to Cure Catarrh Now Than at Any Other Season.
Now is the time to use Hyomei, when the early summer days make it so easy to cure catarrhal troubles. The Hyomei treatment, breathed for a few minutes three or four times a day in May or June, will do good twice as quickly as it did in January, and nearly everyone knows that used faithfully then, it completely rids the system of catarrh.
Hyomei is a purely vegetable preparation whose active curative properties are given off when it is breathed by the aid of the pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit. It destroys all germ life in the air passages, purifies the blood by supplying additional ozone, and its healing, volatile, antiseptic fragrance reaches every corner of the respiratory tract as no medicine taken through the stomach can possibly do.
The complete Hyomei outfit costs but one dollar, and consists of a neat inhaler that can be carried in the purse or vest pocket and will last a life time, a medicine dropper, and a bottle of Hyomei. Extra bottles of Hyomei can be procured, if desired, for fifty cents.
At this season of the year when catarrhal troubles can be so quickly and readily cured, the merits of the Hyomei treatment should be carefully investigated by everyone and a complete outfit should be in every home. Haynes & Taylor give their personal guarantee with every Hyomei outfit they sell to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction. There is no risk whatever to the purchaser of Hyomei.

A very enjoyable evening of the week in society was a lawn party given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Nunn, on Salem street, Monday evening. The handsome residence was all aglow with merriment and music. At first entrance the guests were met by Mrs. Nunn, where they met her aunt, Mrs. Gordon Flanary, of Dallas, Tex. They were then led to the parlor, where Miss Della Barnes received them and her cousin, Miss May Flanary, the guest of honor, was presented. The happy party soon sought the lawn where all was pleasant and delightful.

STATE OF WASHINGTON AND GREAT NORTHWEST

Letter From Mrs. Arnalla Jacobs Hill, Toppenish, Washington.

Toppenish, Wash., June 12.—Please allow me the space in your paper to tell my relatives and friends in our beloved old State of Kentucky some of the facts that make us Kentucky folks of Yakima Valley so delighted with this wealthy country to which God has led us, where we are so happily located and thus far more prosperous than in the East. My letter will show you all in a short time why all of us are so well satisfied.

You all remember that H. C. Hill's family immigrated to this State eighteen years ago. His sons are all prominent men, honored by all who know them. One of them, Thomas C. Hill, is my husband. I know whereof I speak that no man here is held in higher esteem than the father, H. C. Hill, through whose influence over 200 Kentuckians were immigrated here last year. Scores of others from different parts of Kentucky are here also. In fact, the first settlers west of Walla Walla were from Kentucky in 1844. The name, "Dark and Bloody Ground," is fast fading away under the glow of a name loved by us all as most industrious and intelligent citizens of the State. Even the Indians point to us say, "Those folks are from our grandfather's State, 'Old Kankakee.'"

The people of the East who have not by actual contact with the Northwest, become familiar with the resources of the region comprised of the States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, often ridicule the pretensions of Western enterprise in assuming its ability to compete successfully with the East in the field of commerce. Such a position on the part of the East is quite natural, as no one who has not kept in touch with the almost marvelously rapid growth and development of the resources of this region could credit the great strides which have been taken in almost all lines of industrialism.

The East judges the West, in a measure, by the standard of its own growth and development, which, however astonishing, it may be compared to the development of other portions of the world, is slow and conservative compared to the standard of achievement which the West has established during the past few years.

For a community to step forth, in the short space of twenty years, from comparative wildness and obscurity, to a front rank in the industries and issues of the most progressive nation of the world, is unprecedented, yet that is what the Puget Sound country, and, in fact, nearly all of the Northwest, has done. In 1880 the population of the State of Washington was 75,000 people, the larger portion of it being in Eastern Washington. Her surplus production in 1881 amounted to $5,000,000. There were forty-two steam-vessels navigating on Puget Sound. In 1881, also, the first vessel loaded at the Tacoma wharf. In October of that year there were 440 miles of railroad in the State.

Her population today is over 600,000. Her wheat yield alone in 1900 was worth $12,000,000, her forestry industries $16,500,000. There were, in that year, 2,823 miles of railroad in the State. The flour-milling capacity of the State was an average of 14,000 barrels per day, which has since increased. There are over 550 saw and shingle mills in operation in the State, and during 1900, 2,046 vessels cleared from the Puget Sound collection district.

These figures, though brief, will serve to show that in speaking of our growth we are not compelled to confine ourselves to generalities. They do not, however, give any adequate idea of the commerce carried on all over the country.

Giving Policies Away.

"The Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York is resorting to a rather unique plan of securing business, and it is said to be working admirably. In Ballard county during the past few days the plan has been worked and several new policy holders have been added to the list of the above company. An agent of the Equitable spent several days at Blandville, and a large number of policies were absolutely given to persons who would accept them. Nothing whatever was charged for the first twelve months, and the insured has the privilege of dropping the policy at the end of that time if he so desires. Even the medical examination fee is paid by the insurance company. After supplying the people of Blandville and vicinity, the agent went to Wilkiffe to introduce the novel idea."

The above article appeared in the Carlisle County News of May 26th. If the report is true it is a violation of State insurance laws and should be brought to the attention of State Insurance Commissioner Prewett.

AUNT ELIZA NEWCOM EIGHTY-ONE YEARS OLD

Birthday Celebration Described by One Who Was Present.

June 7, 1905, dawned cloudy and threatening, but by nine o'clock quite a crowd of children, grandchildren, relatives, friends and neighbors had gathered at the beautiful country home of J. S. Newcom, two miles east of Weston, where his mother, Aunt Eliza Newcom, was visiting, to celebrate her eighty-first birthday.

The crowd and feast of good things, which were to be served later, had been gotten up by the children as a surprise for her, and to anyone who saw the happy face of the dear old grandma that day of a truth that it was indeed a pleasant surprise to her, and one which by every word and act she showed that she appreciated.

The entire family, consisting of herself and Uncle Joe, her faithful partner for over half a century, with children, were all present.

The time was pleasantly spent in handshaking, talking and listening to delightful music, such as makes the old feel young again and the young more gay, which was furnished on the violin by L. B. Cain, accompanied on the guitar by his daughter, Miss Nona, and Miss Birdie Williams.

At noon a delightful and refreshing repast, consisting of barbecued meats, cakes, pies, lemonade, ice cream, sherbet, etc., was out in the shade of the stately oaks and spreading maples, whose shade covers almost the entire lawn. For an hour or more there was feasting indeed, if not revelry.

After all appetites were satisfied, or even more than satisfied, the time was again spent in talking and listening to more music. But, alas, the time passed all too soon, and the slanting rays of "King Sol" as he approached the western horizon, warned us that the time for good-byes and leave taking had come, which was the first thing that had happened to make the least showing of sadness on any countenance there that day. Everybody expressed themselves as having spent a pleasant day, and the face of no one present showed it more than she for whom it was given. May she continue with us to spend many more such birthdays.

Huge Task.

It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease as that of C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone I could not sit on a chair without a cushion, and suffered from dreadful backache, headache and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure, and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach. Guaranteed by Haynes & Taylor, druggists. Price 50 cents."

An Oil Wagon Is a Unit.

Frankfort, Ky., June 17.—In construing the law in the cases of the Commonwealth in Henry, Anderson, Lyon, Trigg and Breckinridge counties versus the Standard Oil Company, the court of appeals holds that in indictments against the oil company for peddling without license, only one fine can be imposed at one term of court during the license year. The court holds that the wagon is the unit of license taxation under the Kentucky statutes, and that a fine may be imposed under the indictments on each wagon that the company runs in the county.

Indictments were returned against the Standard Oil Company in nearly every county of the State for selling oil without a license, and fines were assessed.

LACE BARK TREES.

The Many Uses to Which Their Airtight Light Fabrics Are Put.

There are in all about half a dozen lace bark trees in the world, so called because the inner bark yields a natural lace in ready made sheet form which can be made up in serviceable articles of apparel. Only four of these curious species of trees are of much practical value. Tourists who have stopped at Hawaii or Samoa may recall the lace bark clothing of the natives—clothing of a neat brown color when new, of remarkable strength and of a fragrant odor, like freshly cured tobacco leaf. The native tapa cloth, as it is called, is made from the bark of the braussetia papifera, but it is not usually included among the real lace bark trees.

In its natural state the real lace bark is of a delicate cream white tint. It is probably a kind of fibrous pith. When the outer bark is removed it can be unfurled and unwound in one seamless piece, having a surface of a little more than a square yard. Washing and sun bleaching give it a dazzling white appearance. The fabric is airtight. It is used in the West Indies for mantillas, cravats, collars, cuffs, window curtains—in a word, for every purpose that ordinary lace is used. In making up shawls, vests and the like it is customary to piece two sheets of lace bark together. Delicate and apparently weak as it is in single mesh, a bit of lace bark, if rolled into a thin string, will all but resist human strength to break it.

Despite its practical use there is no essential demand for lace bark. It has been used by the natives for hundreds of years and yet is comparatively little known to this day. A few specimens of lace bark articles exist in different countries of Europe. These were made hundreds of years ago, yet, although their age is considerable, they are said to be in a good state of preservation.—Chicago News.
