THE FARMERS ORGANIZE CLUB

On Monday Afternoon at the Court House.

FIFTY CHARTER MEMBERS

Assistant Commissioner R. C. Crenshaw Made an Address and Helped to Organize.

MEETS FIRST MONDAY IN EACH MONTH

Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock the Crittenden county farmers met at the court house and organized a farmers' club with fifty charter members. The organization of such a club in the county had been agitated for some time, the state department joining in the movement, it was soon set on foot with the result of the effected organization Monday.

Mr. R. C. Crenshaw, assistant commissioner of agriculture of Kentucky was here to effect the organization. He made a very interesting speech to the farmers in which he explained that there was as much art in farming as in any other vocation, and that farmers should study to make the best profit out of the smallest amount of land and labor.

He advised the enriching of run-down lands, the study and practice of horticulture and the raising of cattle, sheep and mules in this, one of the finest districts for that purpose in the state of Kentucky.

He explained at length, the nutritive qualities of alfalfa, the best and cheapest feed for stock of all kinds raised on the farm. Alfalfa, he said, was an old product having been used centuries ago in the old world by the Roman cavalry.

Mr. Crenshaw's talk was short and to the point and carried conviction to its hearers. At the close of the meeting the following fifty names were subscribed as charter members.

J. H. Thomason, B. Rankin, B. Paris Wm. Hughes, W. N. Rochester, F. E. Davidson, R. E. Holloman, P. C. Stephens, Lester Terry, Wm. Condit, W. R. Lanham, Al Dean, C. W. Bryant, Frank Conger, Joe M. Dean, J. E. Sullenger, J. W. Blue, Joe Dean, Wm. Adams, Jr., Myron Frisette, Hezekiah Hughes, Wheeler, Marion, J. J. Hicks, Ira Bradburn, R. L. Howerton, J. E. Stephens, R. L. Nichols, G. W. Howerton, J. H. Stanley, W. C. Stanley, Repton, T. W. Davenport, H. C. Howard, D. N. Riley, C. W. Fox, A. B. Childress, G. R. Brown, W. H. Cardin, A. H. Cardin, View, T. C. Campbell, Dyensburg, J. S. Newcom, Weston, John Hodge, Frances, C. S. Jackson, H. C. Rice, Jr., Kelsey, J. H. Brouster, W. H. Brown, W. C. Tyner, Salem, W. J. Hodges, Iron Hill, E. L. Nunn, Rodney, Ed Cook, J. D. Hughes, Fords Perry, A. J. Hughes Tolu.

OLD HICKORY DISTILLERY MAY START AUGUST 28.

Preparations to That End Are Now Being Made.

Thornton Lowery, of Madisonville, has been in the city several days getting the "Old Hickory" distillery in shape for running.

Fred Hipple who was here and purchased the plant some time ago, has also been here recently. These gentlemen will soon have the distillery ready for operation, and informed a RECORD correspondent that if possible they would begin operation the 28th day of the present month. Mr. Lowery has rented a residence and removed here. His family is now visiting relatives at Crofton, but will arrive in a few days. Mr. Lowery will have charge of the distillery and will have two experienced employees who will also remove here with their families.

COUNTY VISITED BY ANGEL OF DEATH

And Several of Our Citizens Taken to Their Reward.

WILLIAM H. WOLF.

William H. Wolf, aged 80 years, died Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock at his farm in the eastern part of the county. Cancer and old age caused his death. He was one of the oldest and most prosperous farmers of that section of the country. He moved to that vicinity fifty years ago from Caldwell county and for many years owned and operated the old water mill at Iron Bridge, almost the first mill in Crittenden county. He leaves a large family of sons and daughters, his wife having died several years ago.

He was a devout Christian and a member of the Baptist church. Funeral services were conducted yesterday at Olive Branch grave yard on his farm.

W. M. HURST.

Quite a sad coincidence in connection with the death of Mr. Wolf was the death of W. M. Hurst, a son-in-law of Mr. Wolf, and who died about an hour later, of typhoid fever. He was 36 years of age and leaves a wife and several small children.

At the time of his death he lived on the Berry Deboe farm which he purchased some time ago.

He was interred at Olive Branch yesterday.

MRS. W. E. DIXON.

Mrs. W. E. Dixon died Thursday morning at 11 o'clock at her home in Carrsville. She was born in Tennessee in 1829 but moved to this county while yet a girl. She was married twice, the first time to A. T. Scott who lived only a few years after. One child survives her from that marriage, Mrs. W. S. Hamby, of Durant, I. T. In 1865 she was married to W. E. Dixon who yet survives her. Two children of this marriage also survive her, Mrs. Henry Hill and Miss Nannie Dixon, both residing at Carrsville.

Mrs. Dixon was 76 years of age, loved and honored by all who knew her for her many womanly qualities.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon resided in this county many years before removing to Carrsville, Livingston county, where they had since resided. She was buried at Piney Fork Friday.

MRS. W. B. BINKLEY.

Mrs. W. B. Binkley died at her home in View Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, of typhoid fever.

She was 35 years of age, a devout Christian and a devoted wife and mother. She leaves a husband and eight children.

She was interred at Sisco Chappel Sunday afternoon.

CATALOG OF MARION GRADED SCHOOLS OUT.

School and Mining Industries Beneficent Factors to Our City.

The new catalog of the Marion Graded Schools has been issued and embodies some new features and some important advances over previous issues as is customary with all schools which keep abreast of the times, and rapid march of progress along educational lines.

The catalog is being mailed this week to the public generally, and to interested students, past and prospective, in particular.

The school is the chief factor in the greatness and importance of town, county and state.

At present there are two principal factors operating to make the city of Marion an attractive business center—the public schools and the mining interests of the district.

All other commercial interests and industries are dependent upon and subservient to these two prime factors.

The people of Marion and Crittenden county and even the people of adjoining counties fully realize this fact, but its emphasis will probably increase their appreciation of it.

The reputation of Marion Graded Schools has been too long established to admit of any question of efficiency at this time and with the retention of practically the same faculty as heretofore, there should be no apprehension felt that the change of principals will have any material effect, especially since so wise a selection has been made in choosing Prof. Victor G. Kee to succeed Prof. Evans.

Prof. Kee comes to Marion highly recommended, but aside from this he is a man who recommends himself to all who make his acquaintance, by his evident command of language, complete grasp of educational subjects and features, and above all, his energy and enterprize.

The school season of 1905-6 begins September 18 and closes January 12.

The Louisville-Herald says:

Stop talking for a while about Kentucky's productive soil, inviting climate; yea, of her beautiful women, her fine horses, her superb vintages and luxurious crops of all kinds. Better than soil, climate and crops are men and women, not merely brave and beautiful, but cultured, refined, soulful and humane. Such men and women we cannot have without schools.

Why is there a Breathitt in Kentucky? Poor schools or none.

MARION AN APPLICANT FOR METHODIST COLLEGE

The Question of Selecting Site Not to be Considered at Lexington.

As has been reported in various papers of the State, the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal church which meets in Lexington September 29 will not take up at that time the question of selecting the site in Western Kentucky for the college, but when the matter is taken up, Marion will be considered. In response to a letter from the secretary of the Commercial club here setting forth the advantages of Marion as a possible site for the location of such a college, Secretary C. B. Nordeman, of the Board of Education of that church, writes:

"Your letter of the 11th inst. to hand and noted. As secretary of the Board of Education of the Kentucky Annual Conference of the M. E. church, I beg to advise that sometime in the future our Board will probably establish a school somewhere in Western Kentucky but we do not know when, and the matter, I am sure, will not be taken up at our next meeting on September 29th at Lexington, Ky., but when we do take the matter up, a committee of our Board will be appointed to examine feasible sites, etc.

Your letter will be kept on file and at that time we will correspond with you further about the matter.

Very truly yours,
C. B. NORDEMAN, Sec'y.

CONSTANTLY IMPROVING

Is This Western Kentucky Gateway

A CENTER OF INDUSTRY

Excellent Schools, Energy, Push and Mines the Basis and Buildings Are Rapidly Going Up.

NEW HOMES ARE BEGUN EACH WEEK

Bennett Walker has just completed a barn in the rear of his lot on Gum street in the Blackburn-Weldon subdivision. Mr. Walker is also making preparations to begin the erection of a cottage frame residence in the near future. The building will be completed in the fall. Mr. Walker's lot adjoins on the west the lot on which Dr. A. J. Driskill is building his handsome residence.

William Ackridge has just about completed for Henry Moore a five or six room frame cottage residence. This building, which is conveniently and appropriately designed, is situated on one of the most desirable lots in the Blackburn-Weldon addition. It is on the corner lot opposite the property of Mrs. L. A. Welden. Several shade trees stand in the yard, which give the place a pleasant and attractive appearance in the foreground.

The brick work on the Yandell & Orme hotel proper was completed this week and the foundation for the kitchen and dining room ell in the rear, was begun.

—00—

Jurgenmeier and his crew are busy laying the brick work on the Haynes & Taylor warehouse to be erected in the rear of their new stand in the postoffice building on Bank street. Messrs. Haynes & Taylor will have one of the most desirable localities for a drug store in the city. It will be just one door west of the postoffice.

The brick work on the new postoffice building was completed this week and the carpenters are now pushing the wood work. The roof is on and the floors are being laid. The work on this building which has heretofore been delayed, will now be advanced and Contractor McGraw will likely be able to turn the completed job over some time before the Marion bank is finished.

Timbers for the Masonic building which were ordered from the South, have not yet arrived, and on account of the yellow fever situation, the arrival of the timbers is somewhat indefinite.

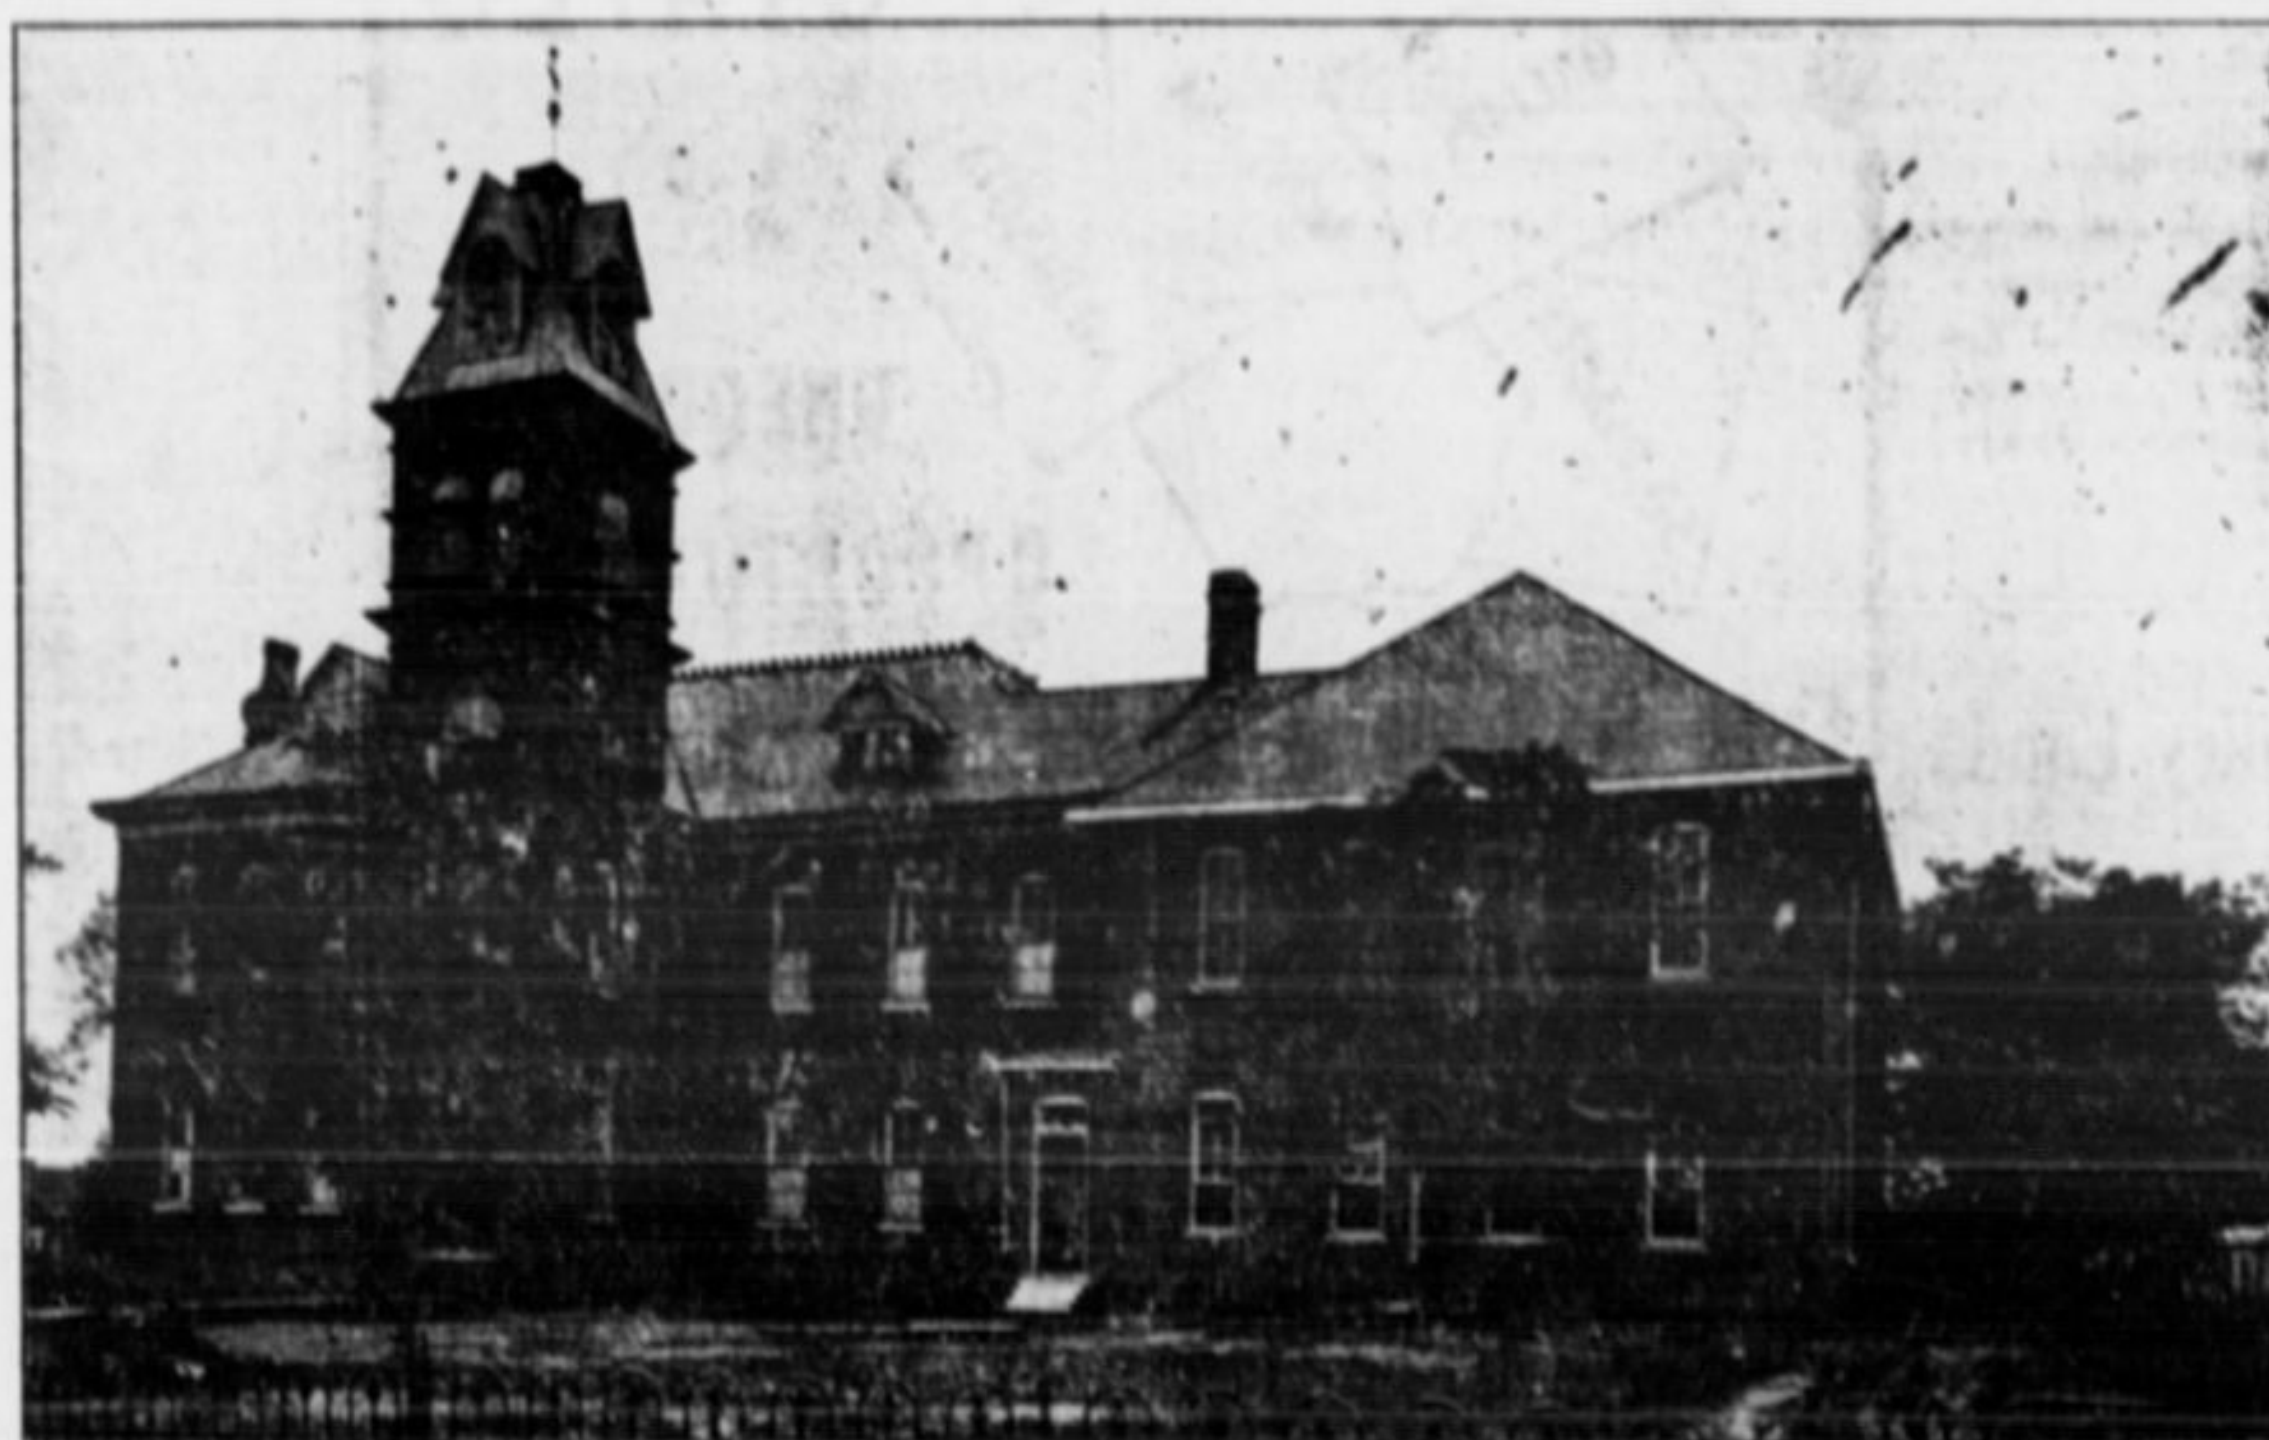

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

Which is to be Voted on at the Coming November Election.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 15, 1905.—Secretary of State H. V. McChesney is making the official publication of the proposed amendment to the Constitution of Kentucky changing the manner of voting from the present secret ballot system to the old-time viva voce system to be voted on at the coming regular election to be held November 7.

The act submitting the proposed amendment to the voters of the State was passed at the 1904 session of the Legislature and became a law, June 14, 1904.

The amendment provides that all elections shall be viva voce and made a matter of public record by the officers of election, and the first General Assembly held after the adoption of the amendment shall pass all necessary laws to enforce this provision.

Belt-Loften.

Iley Loftin and Miss Clara Belt were married last week. The groom is a hard working young man and has many valuable qualities. The bride is one of the most attractive young girls of this county. THE RECORD joins with their friends in wishing them useful and happy lives.

The books of the Home Law School Series are designed especially for young men never before has a complete education in one of the noblest and most practical of the sciences been brought within the reach of every young man. Lincoln was a Lawyer, Home Trained, who had great faith in the powers of the young man, and the following extract from one of his letters shows how he urged them to "push forward."

"The possession and use of a set of books will not only enable but stimulate every young man to 'push forward' and bring out the best that is in him, attaining a higher and more honored station in life than he could hope to attain without them."

The Lawyer of to-day is the right hand to every great business undertaking. In politics and statesmanship the Lawyer stands pre-eminent. He is credited with judgment and discretion, and his advice controls in all important matters. Every commercial enterprise of any importance has its salaried legal adviser. There is a great demand for young men with knowledge of Law. Any man can

CURE FOR HAY FEVER

Haynes & Taylor Say Hyomei Will Give Relief—Sold Under Guarantee.

The season for hay fever is almost at hand, and many people feel that they will be obliged to go away in order to avoid the sneezing, watery eyes, and other annoying symptoms of this disagreeable summer disease.

Haynes & Taylor wish us to announce that when Hyomei is used as a preventive, or a cure, there will be no hay fever. They advise daily treatment with Hyomei for two or three weeks before the usual time for the annual appearance of hay fever. If this is done, the attack will be prevented. However, if the preventive treatment is not started soon enough, and the disease makes its appearance, use Hyomei six or seven times daily, and relief will be given at once.

There is no stomach dosing when Hyomei is used. Breathed through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, its medicated air reaches the minutest air cells, killing all germs and soothing and healing the irritated mucous membrane.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1, extra bottles 50 cents. It is the only treatment for hay fever sold by Haynes & Taylor under a guarantee to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.

Are You Prepared to Die?

BY T. A. CONWAY.

Is this not a practical as well as a solemn question? There is no event so certain to take place as your death, and none may be as soon. The silver cord may be loosed and the golden pitcher broken at the fountain most any day and your spirit ushered into the presence of your Creator to be judged.

But you say, "Talk to me not of death for it casts a shadow across my mind; it disturbs my conscience; it turns my carnal pleasures into an unenjoyable vanity. Let me think of life, long days of pleasure and unalloyed delights." But, my friend, the coffin, the lonely tomb and eternity are just before you, and why will a person neglect to become alive to God? Why die the second death and go down to an eternal absence from God, light, purity and love?

Death is a solemn thing, yes, it is a solemn thing to die, because it is the parting with all around which thy heart's best affections have tuned themselves.

True thoughtfulness cannot result in death without Christ. There is a world of untold sensations crowded into that moment when a man puts his hand to his forehead and feels the damp upon it which tells him the hour is come. He has been waiting for death all of his life and now it is come. It is all over; his chance is past; his eternity is settled.

To the body, the body we love, death for a while is terrible. Look at a corpse—putrid, bloated, infecting all the air and every feature of humanity shockingly defaced; the damask cheek, the lovely form changed into silent loathsomeness—a banquet to bones. Placed in the confines of a narrow house of clay, soon the very memory of it is almost gone. There is a sweet assurance to the child of God when of his body it is said in God's word, "Asleep in Jesus." They shall awake to glorious immortality; with the lost this is not so—they shall awake differently for it is said that some to everlasting shame and contempt.

None but the shallow and those who would with bravado drown the thought, think lightly of death. "The sting of death is sin," but thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord, Jesus Christ. Which shall it be, the sting or the victory? They will, with hands of self sacrificing love offers the victory. Sin, with its fair deceitfulness, will surely inflict the sting.

Listen to the dying words of some of the world's greatest infidels and be ye warned, oh, lesser devotees of sin! Death tries the nerve and takes of the mark of the enemies of righteousness.

Gibson.—All is dark and doubtful.
Charles.—I am lost forever and I know it.

Hobbs.—I am taking a fearful leap in the dark.

Attamout.—Hell is a refuge if it hides me from Thy frown.

Voltaire.—I am abandoned by God and man. I shall go to hell.

Mirabeau.—Give me more laudanum that I may not think of eternity.

Tom Payne.—Stay with me for God's sake. I can not bear to be alone.

Listen to a few Christian voices:
Stephens, when dying, looked into heaven and said: "Behold, I see the heavens opened and the son of man standing on the right hand of God. Lord Jesus, receive my spirit."

Thomas Kean, Bishop of Bath and Wells, author of the doxology, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," the morning hymn, "Awake my soul," and the evening hymn, "Glory to Thee, my God, this night," died 1711. When death approached he put on his shroud which he had always carried with him and then calmly awaited the approach of the last moment. As he expired he exclaimed: "God's will be done!"

Sir Henry Harelock, the hero of Lucknow, died Nov. 22, 1857. His last words were, "I have so ruled my life that when death came I might face it without fear. I die happy and contented."

Henry Drummond, the author of "Natural law in the spiritual world," a short time before his death, joined in the singing of the Scotch hymn of the time of martyrdom,

"I'm not ashamed to own my Lord
Or to defend his cause,
Maintain the glory of his cross
And honor of his laws."

And when the hymn was finished, he said, "Ah! there's nothing to beat that."

John Wesley.—The best of all; God is with us.

Would it not be well to have the Christians help in death, the Christ, the conqueror of death, so,

When Time's veil shall fall asunder,
The soul may know
No fearful change or sudden wonder.

Seren and mild, the untired light
May have its dawning.

And, as the summer's northern light,
The evening and the dawn unite;
The sunset's hues of Time blend
With the soul's new morning.

Oh, soul, let not the pleasures of sin, which are but for a moment, keep you from Christ, then, you will be ready for the King of Terrors and for the providence of God and can feel as Tennyson so tenderly expresses himself in those, almost his last, beautiful lines. Yes, feel when death comes—

Sunset and evening star
And one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning of the lark
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as, moving, seems Asleep,
Too full for sound and foam
When that which drew from out the boundless deep Turns again home.

Twilight and evening fell,
And after that the dark,
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

For though from out our home of clay
And place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

LESSON VIII, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 20.

Text of the Lesson, Jer. xxxvi, 21-32. Memory Verses, 22-24—Golden Text, Jer. xxxvi, 13—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1906, by American Press Association.]

We have had two lessons on the life of a good king, one who believed God and trembled at His word and sought very earnestly to lead the people to know and trust and serve Him. Now we have before us a son of that same king, sitting on the same throne, the throne of the Lord (I Chron. xxi, 23), as the Lord's representative, but he has no respect for God or for His word. The ten tribes, the kingdom of Israel, had been carried into captivity because of their persistent rebellion against God, and now the two tribes, the kingdom of Judah, were nearing the end of God's patience with them. In less than twenty years from the date of our lesson (see verse 1) the judgment had fallen upon them, and they were captives at Babylon. When men persistently blaspheme God and refuse to listen to Him, then He speaks in judgment, but up to the last with a desire that men may not perish eternally. See verse 3 and Job xxxiii, 29, 30.

Jeremiah was the Lord's messenger during the last forty years before the captivity of Judah, eighteen years of the reign of Josiah and twenty-two of Jehoiakim and Zedekiah, and now after he had been the Lord's faithful witness for about twenty-two of the forty years he is commanded to write in a book the Lord's words against His people if perchance they might return to the Lord and the threatened judgments be averted. It is no easy matter to be a witness against evil and evildoers, and Jeremiah was told at the beginning of his ministry, "They shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee, for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee" (chapter 1, 10). Isaiah and Ezekiel were also forewarned that the people would not receive their message. The apostles were sent forth as sheep in the midst of wolves, and we are assured that throughout this whole age there will be wayside and rocky soil hearers, and tares will grow with the wheat till the harvest, while in the last days there will only be a form of godliness, without the power, and people will not endure sound doctrine (II Tim. iii, 1-5; iv, 3).

Verse 4 of our lesson chapter teaches us that Scripture is the word of the Lord. There may be a man's pen and a man's mouth, but the words are the words of the Lord. See chapter 1, 9; II Sam. xxiii, 2; Deut. xviii, 18; Matt. x, 20.

In Jehoiakim, the professed representative of God, cutting and burning the words of the Lord without fear or trembling we see a foreshadowing of the destructive criticism of our own day which will not tolerate the word of God concerning sin or judgment to come or anything supernatural, will not believe in a Saviour conceived by the Holy Spirit nor in the resurrection of the dead, has no use for the atonement of Christ and therefore no interest in foreign missions. Like the prophets of Jeremiah's time, they prophesy falsely, speak a vision of their own heart and cause people to err by their lies and their lightness, and the people seem to love to have it so (Jer. v, 20, 31; xxiii, 10, 32; Isa. xxx, 10, 11).

In all ages God has His remnant of faithful ones, and there were those who begged Jehoiakim not to burn the roll, but he would not hear (verse 25). He had no use for such words as these, "He that, being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy" (Prov. xxix, 1), but he had hatred and imprisonment for those who would dare to reprove him (verse 26), reminding us of the words of Ahab concerning Micah, "I hate him, for he never prophesied good unto me, but always evil" (II Chron. xviii, 7), and recalling the words of our Lord also, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you" (John xv, 18). The princes, knowing the temper of their king, had advised Baruch and Jeremiah to hide themselves, and now we read that the Lord hid them (verses 19, 20). When the Lord hid Elijah, Ahab could not possibly find him (I Kings xvii, 3; xviii, 10). There is a hiding from God and a hiding in God (Gen. ii, 8, 10; Isa. xxviii, 17; II, 10; Zeph. ii, 3). Happy are those who can truly say, "My life is hid with Christ in God" (Col. iii, 3).

However much men may seek to destroy the word of God and seem to succeed, the true child of God rejoices in Ps. cxix, 80, "Forever, O Lord, Thy word is settled in heaven," and Isa. xl, 8, "The word of our God shall stand forever." The Lord saw Jehoiakim's treatment of His message and bore patiently with him yet awhile, but told Jeremiah to take another roll and write in it all the former words and many more (verses 28, 32). Men may refuse to believe the word of God and even cut out and destroy the portions of the Bible which they do not like, but it stands, all of it, forever settled in heaven, and some day they will believe it.

Although neither the king nor his people would listen to the words of the Lord, it came to pass in due time just as the Lord had said (II Chron. xxxvi, 5-7), and so it always will be, and it shall yet be seen that whosoever is not found written in the book of life shall be cast into the lake of fire (Rev. xx, 15). Our believing or not believing what God has said cannot in any way affect the truth. It is the unbeliever who suffers because of his unbelief and thus gives evidence of his folly and madness in thus seeking his own ruin.

DROPPED DEAD!

You pick up a paper nearly every day and read that some man or woman in apparently perfect health has died suddenly at a banquet, on the street, at the theater, of "heart failure." 80 per cent of such cases follow heavy eating. The digestive organs are not in condition, the food ferments in the stomach, forming gases which distend the walls of the stomach—which presses against the heart—crowds—suffocates—"Heart failure" results. Take a spoonful of after eating. It relieves that "full feeling," stops fermentation, aids digestion and prevents biliousness and constipation.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

L. O. HAMMON, Wagner, Ind. Ter., under date of May 21, 1906, writes: "For over a year I was troubled with my heart. Doctors and medicines were unable to help me; finally I noticed an advertisement of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and tried it and was fully cured and wish to take this means of letting others know of the merits of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin."

Public Is Aroused.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St. Clair Ave., Columbia, O., writes: "For several months I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep and my stomach was so weak from useless doctors' drugs that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed a Haynes & Taylor's drug store; price 50c.

A Touching Story

is the saving from death of the baby girl of Geo. A. Eyler, Cumberland, Md. He writes: "At the age of 11 months our little girl was in declining health with serious Throat Trouble and two physicians gave her up. We were almost in despair when we resolved to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. The first bottle gave relief; after taking four bottles she was cured and is now in perfect health." Never fails to relieve and cure a cough or cold. At Haynes & Taylor's drug store; 50c and $1.00 guaranteed. Trial bottle.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. DOUGHT TO BEAT.

"Disgruntled, sore headed, tender footed, defeated, rattle brain, cross breed, bolting Democrats,—carbuncles and old sores," says the Banner, are the better element Democrats of Livingston county, who have fused with the Republicans.

That the regular Democratic ticket in that county is now in danger there is now no longer any doubt in our minds.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

Why not talk an electric line from Henderson to Paducah or Memphis. It would go through a fertile territory, the largest coal and mineral producing sections in the State and by such towns as Corydon, Uniontown, Morganfield, Sturgis, Marion, Princeton and others too numerous to mention. There is plenty of capital seeking a poorer investment than this would be.—Corydon News.

A CALL.

The Livingston Banner, a Democratic organ of Livingston county, is running C. W. Mason, colored, for county attorney on what it calls the "Mule" ticket. Mason doubtlessly believes in honest government and fair elections, and that a majority should rule, and for these reasons will not likely ask for office in response to the call from the editorial sanctum of the Banner, an organ of the crowd that will have to answer this fall for the selfish misdoings of its own leaders. Remember, colored voters of Livingston county, that the crowd in power in that county would like only too well to have one of you on the ticket so it could give space in its county organs to the picture of "Rastus" especially drawn for that purpose a few years ago. Remember, too, that the Banner last week was calculated to play on your sympathies for its own selfish gains, and had it not been so, dollars to doughnuts, its editor would have said "nigger vote" instead of "colored vote" as is its usual custom.

WANT ANOTHER CHANGE?

Honest men everywhere believe not in discarding the secret ballot system for the old viva voce system of voting, but rather to improve the secret system wherever it is in any way deficient.
The secret booth where man stands alone with his conscience and God, will come nearer expressing the true will of all voters than the old system. The secret system in Kentucky was considered all right until it was corrupted by the new methods of counting. The party that corrupted it is the party that modified its changes, and is still the dissatisfied party. Dissatisfied today not so much with the system, and with itself, oh, no! But dissatisfied because its honest men—men who believe in fair and honest government, but who have been denied voice and party representation, have become a boomerang to thwart the selfish principles of the Democratic regulars who seek to perpetrate themselves in power.
In all counties and districts where such conditions prevail, the regulars are clamoring for the old viva voce system of voting. In Livingston county these conditions exist and the regular party organs are asking the voters to vote for the return of the old system. The reason is obvious. Let us keep the secret ballot and may the expressed will of the voters so be this fall.

LET IT BE MARION.

Public interest in the proposed Methodist college for Western Kentucky is increased by the lively riv-arly among the towns which are seeking to be chosen as the site.

Owensboro is already claiming success. Central City has made the greatest public display, subscribing several thousand dollars and providing for a free site at a public meeting attended by the representative citizens of the place. Other Western Kentucky towns have been active.

Paducah has done much. The committee of the Commercial club which has charge of the proposition is working with a will and with confidence of victory.

But there ought to be a public manifestation of the interest that is felt here. Paducah is one of the most public-spirited towns in the United States, but there are times when it is slow to express the interest it feels. Let there be a public meeting apart from the Commercial club committee's business-like handling of the situation at which an exchange of views may be had and at which Paducah men may publicly give expression to their opinions as to why Paducah should have this college and what it should do to get it.—Paducah News-Democrat.

With the object in view of securing the college for Marion, officials of the Commercial club have written several letters to the trustees of the fund bequeathed for the purpose of establishing the institution in Western Kentucky. These officials, in behalf of the city, have pledged the site and offered other inducements such as Marion can offer. No place in Kentucky is nearer nature's heart than our own city. It has precisely the proper elevation to make it a healthful spot. It is surrounded by rich mineral lands on every hand. Inexhaustible beds of coal north and east, iron on the south and lead, zinc and fluorspar on every hand, besides the surrounding country is well adapted to farming and fruit growing.
All these things together make a most prosperous community. That is why people come here, and, once here, want to live here always. It is just in such a community that bright boys and girls can be impressed and every influence is congenial to the proper training of womanhood and manhood. These, too, are some of the reasons why our own institutions of learning, Marion Graded Schools, lead the State.

The Crittenden County Commercial club will do what it can to secure the M. E. college for Marion. What assistance will the citizens of Marion, as individuals, give the movement, and how many of the farmers throughout the community feel that such an institution in our midst would benefit us all, either directly or indirectly?

Arbutus Blossoms

BY RUSTIC.

A gift of the springtime they come to me,
Pure and sweet in their first, fresh bloom
As if they knew what a welcome guest
They must be in my rural home.

Telling their story of sunny days,
Of May-time brightness and orchard
bloom,
Of soft, green mosses beside the brook,
That sings with the birds its low, soft tune.

They seem to me like a dear old friend—
Some friend beloved in my vanished youth, Keeping unchanged through all the years

Dear childhood's earnest heart of truth,
Beautiful flowers doth the florist rear,
Lovely as ever in Eden grew.

But gold can buy them everyone;
Each day will give you a garland new.
But my little arbutus so shy and sweet Will never thrive in the mast of trade;

It loveth best its quiet home
In the pasture wild 'neath the maple's shade.

There's many a life like thine, fair flower,
Unknown to the world and unknown
to fame,
But filled with the fragrance of noble
deeds,

And, if fortune changes, ever the same.

A Flower Book of Real Flowers.

The Yellowstone Park Flower Book, published by the Northern Pacific, is a beautiful creation. It contains twelve specimens of real, pressed flowers, in natural colors, from Yellowstone Park, with botanical names and the places where found.

The book also has six full page, fine half-tone illustrations, showing the Park bears, Grand Canon, geysers, hot-springs, etc., found in the Park, with a brief description of this most wonderful region, 54 by 62 miles in size, in the very depths of the Rockies.

HYOMEI WAS USED

WITH PERFECT SUCCESS

As a Remedy For Hay Fever After Trying Other Treatments.

Before the discovery of Hyomei the only advice a physician could give his hay fever patients was to go away from home, but now anyone who is subject to this disease can, if Hyomei is used, stay at home without fear of the annual attack of sneezing, water eyes and other discomforts.

J. F. Forbes, a well known Western railroad man, whose home is at Mc-Cook, Nebraska, writes "I have never had any relief from any remedy for hay fever, even temporarily, until I discovered the merits of Hyomei. I always recommend it when occasion requires."

There is no offensive or dangerous stomach dosing when Hyomei is used.
This reliable remedy for the cure of all diseases of the respiratory organs is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, so that the air taken into the throat and lungs is like that of the White Mountains or other health resorts, where hay fever is unknown.

The fact that Haynes & Taylor agree to refund the money to any hay fever sufferer who uses Hyomei without success, should inspire confidence in its power to effect a cure. A complete outfit costs only $1.00 and extra bottles but 50 cents.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climatic condition in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakened cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. For sale by Woods & Orme.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.

CHAPTER I.—I am left an orphan at six and am saved from a dissolute uncle by Eben Holden, an old man who has worked for my father. Uncle Eb takes me through the wilderness from Vermont to seek a new home in New York State.

II.—Our adventures in the woods. Uncle Eb scares away a panther.

III.—A woman presents a little wagon to me, to which Fred, our dog, is attached. A man tries to enter our camp in the woods.

IV.—Uncle Eb repulses the intruder. We stay in an old cabin and are warned during the night to leave by its mysterious owner.

V.—I meet Jed Peary, a country poet who takes a liking to me. I am almost frozen to death and am saved by Uncle Eb.

VIII.—Hope and I try to save our old dog from the butcher's hands, but are compelled by circumstances to leave him to starve.

IX.—The mysterious "night man," a nocturnal prowler of the countryside, is bugaboo to the children. Story of Nehemiah Brower, who killed another boy by accident, ran away and was reported drowned near Van Deiman's land. I escort Hope to a "school lyceum."

X.—I win distinction at school. Hope's musical ability develops. Her voice is praised by young Mr. Livingstone, a visitor from the city. I disclose my love for Hope to Jed Peary, who advises me to study.

XI and XII.—Gerald Brower, my young foster brother, dies. Hope and I go away to the Hillsborough academy.

XIII.—My Academy work is praised. Mr. Livingstone sends Christmas gifts from the city to Hope and her mother.

XIV.—Hope and I confess our mutual love, which is not to be spoken of until we are older.

CHAPTER XII.

ON October following the events of the last chapter Gerald died of consumption, having borne a lingering illness with great fortitude. I, who had come there as a homeless orphan in a basket and who with the God given eloquence of childhood had brought them to take me to their hearts and the old man that was with me as well, was now the only son left to Elizabeth and David Brower. There were those who called it folly at the time they took us in, I have heard, but he who shall read this history to the end shall see how that kind of folly may profit one or even many here in this hard world.

It was a gloomy summer for all of us. The industry and patience with which Hope bore her trial night and day is the sweetest recollection of my youth. It brought to her young face a tender solemnity of womanhood—a subtle change of expression that made her all the more dear to me. Every day, rain or shine, the old doctor had come to visit his patient, sometimes sitting an hour and gazing thoughtfully in his face, occasionally asking a question or telling a quaint anecdote. And then came the end.

The sky was cold and gray in the late autumn, and the leaves were drifted deep in the edge of the woodlands when Hope and I went away to school together at Hillsborough. Uncle Eb drove us to our boarding place in town. When we bade him goodby and saw him driving away alone in the wagon we hardly dared look at each other for the tears in our eyes.

David Brower had taken board for us at the house of one Solomon Rollin, universally known as Cooky Rollin. That was one of the first things I learned at the academy. It seemed that many years ago he had taken his girl to a dance and offered her in lieu of supper cookies that he had thoughtfully brought with him. Thus cheaply he had come to lifelong distinction.

"You know Rollin's ancient history, don't you?" the young man asked who sat with me at school that first day.

"Have it at home," I answered. "It's in five volumes."

"I mean the history of Sol Rollin, the man you are boarding with," said he, smiling at me, and then he told the story of the cookies.

The principal of the Hillsborough academy was a big, brawny bachelor of Scotch descent, with a stern face and cold, gray, glaring eyes. When he stood towering above us on his platform in the main room of the building where I sat there was an alertness in his figure and a look of responsibility in his face that reminded me of the pictures of Napoleon at Waterloo. He always carried a stout ruler that had blistered a shank of every mischievous boy in school. As he stood by the line that came marching in to prayers every morning he would frequently pull out a boy, administer a loud smack or two, shake him violently and force him into a seat.

The day I began my studies at the academy I saw him put two dents in the wall with the heels of a young man who had failed in his algebra. To a harsh and sensitive youth just out of a country home the sight of such violence was appalling. My first talk with him, however, renewed my courage. He had heard I was a good scholar and talked with me in a friendly way about my plans. Both Hope and I were under him in algebra and Latin. I well remember my first error in his class. I had misinterpreted a Latin sentence. He looked at me, a smile and a sneer crowding each other for possession of his face. In a loud, jeering tone he cried, "Mirabile dictu!"

I looked at him, in doubt of his meaning.

"Mirabile dictu!" he shouted, his tongue trilling the r.

I corrected my error.

"Perfect!" he cried again. "Puer pulchre! Next!"

He never went further than that with me in the way of correction. My size and my skill as a wrestler, that shortly insured for me the respect of the boys, helped me to win the esteem of the master. I learned my lessons and kept out of mischief. But others of equal proficiency were not so fortunate. He was apt to be hard on a light man who could be handled without overexertion.

Uncle Eb came in to see me one day and sat awhile with me in my seat. While he was there the master took a boy by the collar and almost literally wiped the blackboard with him. There was a great clatter of heels for a moment. Uncle Eb went away shortly and was at Sol Rollin's when I came to dinner.

"Powerful man, ain't he?" said Uncle Eb.

"Rather," I said.

"Turned that boy into a regular horse fiddle," he remarked. "Must 'ave unsot his reason."

"Unnecessary," I said.

"Reminded me o' the time 'at Tip Taylor got his tooth pulled," said he. "Shook 'im up so 'at he thought he'd had his neck put out o' 'int."

Sol Rollin was one of my studies that winter. He was a carpenter by trade, and his oddities were new and delightful. He whistled as he worked, he whistled as he read, he whistled right merrily as he walked up and down the streets, a short, slight figure with a gray hair under his chin. The little man had one big passion—that for getting and saving. The ancient thrift of his race had pinched him small and narrow as a foot is stunted by a tight shoe. His mind was a bit out of register, as we say in the printing business. His vocabulary was rich and vivid and stimulating.

"Somebody broke into the arsenic today," he announced one evening at the supper table.

"The arsenic?" said somebody. "What arsenic?"

"Why the place where they keep the powder," he answered.

"Oh, the arsenal!"

"Yes, the arsenal," he said, chuckling with laughter at his error. Then he grew serious.

"Stole all the ambition out of it," he added.

"You mean ammunition, don't you, Solomon?" his wife inquired.

"Certainly," said he. "Wasn't that what I said?"

When he had said a thing that met his own approval Sol Rollin would mackle most cheerfully and then crack a knuckle by twisting a finger.

His laugh was mostly out of register also. It had a sad lack of relevancy. He laughed on principle rather than provocation. Some sort of secret comedy of which the world knew nothing was passing in his mind. It seemed to leave its exits and its entrances, its villain, its clown and its miser who got all the applause.

While working his joy was unconfined. Many a time I have sat and watched him in his little shop, its windows

He wiped the blackboard with him.

dove dim with colowels. Sometimes he would stop whistling and chuckle heartily as he worked his plane or drew his pencil to the square. I have even seen him drop his tools and give his undivided attention to laughter. He did not like to be interrupted. He loved his own company the best while he was "doin' business."

I went one day when he was singing the two lines and their quaint chorus, which was all he ever sang in my hearing.

"Mr. Rollin!" I said.

"Yes, sree," said he, pausing in the midst of his chorus to look up at me.

"Where can I get a piece of yellow

"See 'n a minute," he said. Then he continued his sawing and his song. "Says I, 'Dan Skinner, I think yer mighty mean'—What d'ye want it for?" he asked, stopping abruptly.

"Going to make a ruler," I answered.

"T' sen' me up the river with a seven dollar team," he went on, picking out a piece of smooth planed lumber and handing it to me.

"How much is it worth?" I inquired.

He whistled a moment as he surveyed it carefully.

"Bout a cent," he answered seriously.

I handed him the money and sat down awhile to watch him as he went on with his work. It was the cheapest amusement I have yet enjoyed. Indeed, Sol Rollin became a dissipation, a subtle and seductive habit, that grew upon me, and on one pretext or another I went every Saturday to the shop if I had not gone home.

"What ye goin' t' be?"

He stopped his saw and looked at me, waiting for my answer.

At last the time had come when I must declare myself, and I did.

"A journalist," I replied.

"What's that?" he inquired curiously.

"An editor," I said.

"A printer man?"

"Huh!" said he. "Mebbe I'll give ye a job. Saffrey tol' me I'd orter t' 'ave some cards printed. I'll want good plain print, 'Solomon Rollin, Carpenter an' Printer, Hillsborough, N. Y.' Soun's purty good, don't it?"

"Beautiful," I answered.

"I'll git a big lot on 'em," he said. "I'll want one fer Sister Susan 'at's out in Minnesoty—no, I guess I'll send 'er tew, so she can give one away—an' one fer my brother, Ellphaiet, an' one apiece fer my three cousins over 'n Vermont an' one fer my aunt Mirandy. Le's see—tew an' one is three an' three is six an' one is seven. When I'll git a few struck off fer the folks here. Guess they'll think I'm gittin' up 'n the world."

He shook and snickered with anticipation of the glory of it. Pure vanity inspired him in the matter, and it had in it no vulgar consideration of business policy. He whistled a lively tune as he bent to his work again.

"Yer sister says ye're a splendid scholar," said he. "Hear'n 'er braggin' 'bout ye 't'other night. She thinks a good deal o' her brother, I can tell ye. Guess I know what she's goin' t' give ye 'Crissmusus'."

"What's that?" I asked, with a curiosity more youthful than becoming.

"Don't ye never let on," said he.

"Never," said I.

"Hear'n 'em tell," he said. "'Twas a gol' lockup with 'er pictur' in it."

"Oh, a locket!" I exclaimed.

"That's it," he replied, "an' pure gol' too."

I turned to go.

"Hope she'll grow up a savin' woman," he remarked. "Fraid she won't never be very good t' work."

"Why not?" I inquired.

"Han's are too little an' white," he answered.

"She won't have to," I said.

He chuckled uproariously for a moment, then grew serious.

"Her father's rich," he said, "the richest man o' Faraway, an' I guess she won't never hev anything t' dew but set an' sing an' play the melodi-um."

"She can do as she likes," I said.

He stood a moment, looking down as if meditating on the delights he had pictured.

"Gol!" he exclaimed suddenly.

My subject had begun to study me, and I came away to escape further examination.

CHAPTER XIII.

I OUGHT to say that I have had and shall have to chronicle herein much that would seem to indicate a mighty conceit of myself. Unfortunately the little word "I" throws a big shadow in this history. It looms up all too frequently in every page for the sign of a modest man. But, indeed, I cannot help it, for he was the only observer of all there is to tell. Now, there is much, for example, in the very narrow of my history—things that never would have been said, but for my fame as a scholar. My learning was of small account, for it must be remembered, I am writing of a time when any degree of scholarship was counted remarkable among the simple folk of Faraway.

Hope took singing lessons and sang in church every Sunday. David or Uncle Eb came down for us often of a Saturday and brought us back before service in the morning. One may find in that town today many who will love to tell him of the voice and beauty and sweetness of Hope Brower those days and of what they expected regarding her and me. We went out a good deal evenings to concerts, lectures at the churches or the college or to visit some of the many people who invited us to their homes.

We had a recess of two weeks at the winter holidays, and David Brower came after us the day the term ended. Oh, the great happiness of that day before Christmas when we came flying home in the sleigh behind a new team of grays and felt the intoxication of the frosty air, and drove in at dusk after the lamps were lit and we could see mother and Uncle Eb and Grandma Bissette looking out of the window, and a steaming dinner on the table! I declare! It is long since then, but I cannot ever think of that time without wiping my glasses and taking a moment off. Tip Taylor took the horses, and we all came in where the kettle was singing on the stove, and loving hands helped us out of our wraps. The supper was a merry feast, the like of which one may find only by returning to his boyhood. Alack, that is a long journey for some of us!

For Mrs. Brower, were the words I read upon that one.

The strings were cut, the wrappers torn away, and two big rolls of shiny silk loosened their coils on the table.

Hope uttered a cry of delight. A murmur of surprise and admiration passed from one to another. Elizabeth lifted a rustling fold and held it to the lamplight. We passed our hands over the smooth sheen of the silk.

"Waal, I swan!" said Uncle Eb. "Jes' like a kitten's ear!"

"Eggzac'y!" said David Brower.

Elizabeth lifted the silk and let it flow to her feet. Then for a little she looked down, draping it to her skirt and moving her foot to make the silk rustle. For the moment she was young again.

"David," she said, still looking at the glory of glossy black that covered her plain dress.

"Well, mother," he answered.

"Was you fool enough t' go'n buy this stuff fer me?"

Supper over and the dishes out of the way, we gathered about the stove with cider and buttermilk.

"Well," said Hope, "I've got some news to tell you. This boy is the best scholar of his age in this county."

"Thet so?" said David.

Uncle Eb stopped his hammer that was lifted to crack a butternut and pulled his chair close to Hope's. Elizabeth looked at her daughter and then at me, a smile and a protest in her face.

"True as you live," said Hope. "The master told me so. He's first in everything, and in the town hall the other night he split everybody down."

"What? In Hillsborough?" Uncle Eb asked incredulously.

"Yes, in Hillsborough," said Hope, "and there were doctors and lawyers and college students and I don't know who all in the match."

"Most re-markable!" said David Brower.

"Tree-menjious!" exclaimed Uncle Eb. "I heard about it over at the mills t'day," said Tip Taylor.

"Merci Dieu!" exclaimed Grandma Bissette, crossing herself.

Elizabeth Brower was unable to stem this tide of enthusiasm. I had tried to stop it, but instantly it had gone beyond my control. If I could be hurt by praise the mischief had been done.

"It's very nice, indeed," said she soberly. "I do hope it won't make him conceited. He should remember that people do not always mean what they say."

"He's too sensible for that, mother," said David.

"Shucks!" said Uncle Eb. "He ain't no fool if he is a good speller—not by a dunn sight!"

"Tip," said David, "you'll find a box in the sleigh 'at come by express. I wish ye'd go an' git it."

We all stood looking while Tip brought it in and pried off the top boards with a hatchet.

"Careful, now!" Uncle Eb cautioned him. "Might spile somethin'."

The top off, Uncle Eb removed a layer of pasteboard. Then he pulled out a lot of colored tissue paper, and under that was a package wrapped and tied. Something was written on it. He held it up and tried to read the writing.

"Can't see without my spectacles," he said, handing it to me.

"For Hope," I read as I passed it to her.

"Hooray!" said Uncle Eb as he lifted another and the last package from the box.

"For Mrs. Brower," were the words I read upon that one.

The strings were cut, the wrappers torn away, and two big rolls of shiny silk loosened their coils on the table.

"No, mother; it come from New York city," he said.

"From New York city?" was the exclamation of all.

Elizabeth Brower looked thoughtfully at her husband.

"Clear from New York city?" she repeated.

"From New York city," said he.

"Waal, of all things!" said Uncle Eb, looking over his spectacles from one to another.

"It's from that Livingstone boy," said Mrs. Brower. "I've heard he's the son of a rich man."

"Fraid he took a great fancy t' Hope," said David.

"Father," said the girl, "you've no right to say that. I'm sure he never cared a straw for me."

"I don't think we ought to keep it," said Mrs. Brower, looking up thoughtfully.

"Shucks an' shavin's!" said Uncle Eb. "Ye don't know but what I had it sent myself."

Hope went over and put her arms around his neck.

"Did you, Uncle Eb?" she asked.

"Now, you tell me the truth, Uncle Eb."

"Wouldn't say 't I did," he answered, "but I don't want 'a see ye go sendin' av it back. Ye dunno who sent it."

"What'll I do with it?" Mrs. Brower asked, laughing in a way that showed a sense of absurdity. "I'd 'a' been tickled with it thirty years ago, but now—folks 'nd think I was crazy."

"Never heard such foddorol," said Uncle Eb. "If ye move t' the village it'll come handy t' go t' meetin' in."

That seemed to be unanswerable and conclusive, at least for the time being, and the silk was laid away. We sat talking until late bedtime, Hope and I telling of our studies and of the many people we had met in Hillsborough.

We hung up our stockings just as we had always done Christmas eve and were up betimes in the morning to find them filled with many simple but delightful things, and one which I treasure to this day—the locket and its picture, of which I had been surreptitiously informed.

At 2 o'clock we had a fine dinner of roast turkey and chicken pie, with plenty of good cider, and the mince pie, of blessed memory, such as only a daughter of New England may dare try to make.

Uncle Eb went upstairs after dinner and presently we heard him descending with a slow and heavy foot. I opened the stair door, and there he stood, with the old bass viol that had long lain neglected in a dusty corner of the attic. Many a night I had heard it groan as the strings loosened in the years it had lain on its back, helpless and forgotten. It was like a dreamer snoring in his sleep and murmuring of that he saw in his dreams. Uncle Eb had dusted and strung it and glued its weaker joints. He sat down with it, the severe look of old upon his face, and set the strings roaring as he tuned them. Then he brought the sacred treasure to me and leaned it against my shoulder.

"There, that's a Crissmus present fer ye, Willie," said he. "It may help ye t' pass away the time once in awhile."

I thanked him warmly.

"'S a reel first class instrument," he said. "Been a rip shorter 'n its day."

He took from his bosom then the old heart pin of silver that he had always worn of a Sunday.

"Goin' t' give ye thet, too," he said.

"Dunno's ye'll ever care to wear it, but I want ye should hev sumthin' ye can carry 'n yer pocket t' remember me by."

I did not dare trust myself to speak, and I sat helplessly turning that relic of a better day in my fingers.

"It's genuine silver," said he proudly.

I took his old hand in mine and raised it reverently to my lips.

"Hear'n 'em tell 'bout goin' t' the villas, an' I says t' myself, 'Uncle Eb, says I, 'we'n nev'r be gon', I ain no place fer you in the village.'"

"Holden," said David Brower, "don't ye never talk like that ag'in. Yer just the same as married t' this family, an' ye can't ever git away from us."

And he never did until his help was needed in other and fairer fields, I am sure, than those of Faraway—God knows where.

REVENUE AGENT SPEER CONTINUES TAX SUITS

And Discourses Politics While Staying in the City.

In the county court Monday the auditor's back tax suits were continued to the September term. It was a noticeable fact that A. M. Harrison, of Lexington, the gentleman who had the suits brought, was not here because of his having been deposed on account of the graft that leaked out in his department.

However, the commonwealth was represented by Agent G. G. Speer, of Frankfort. Mr. Speer had the cases continued, his attorneys being absent, and also had time to discuss politics, stating that Hager could not be defeated for the nomination for governor in 1907. He made some inquiries as to the political ambitions of Congressman O. M. James and stated it as his opinion that James made a mistake in not offering for the senate against J. C. Blackburn.

Mr. Speer had evidently not heard of the vice presidential boost given Mr. James by the Crittenden Press. But it may be that he had heard that Mr. James had invested in the Press when R. C. Walker left here, and it may be for that reason he did not give much weight to the boom.

Nevertheless, we would rather see James governor or senator than Hager or Blackburn.

Educational Column

W. HUGH WATSON, Editor.

FELLOW TEACHERS: This column is open for the discussion of educational subjects. You, being a factor in education in Crittenden county, or any other county, are most cordially invited to contribute to its columns. Every teacher is invited to send an article, and I assure you of a hearing. In order to insure your getting in, send your article to me at Carrsville.

The race that kills is more directly race suicide than an empty cradle.

"What's the use?" is an interrogatory that often dampens enthusiasm and puts a curb on ambition. Yet it is altogether a proper question.

The voice of the school teacher is abroad in the land, but for lo, these many years he seems to have been afraid of his own voice, since legislation is so long in coming toward the profession.

Side lines necessarily weaken a specialty, but in some professions, notably that of teaching, they have a tendency of inflating the pocketbook.

The reason why there are so few strong personalities is because there are so many imitators. Let something new or strikingly original come to the light and scores of imitators swarm about. Why? Because for no other reason than a precedent is more easily followed than to strike out into an original field. Often and often our excuse for doing things is because Mr. So and So did such and such. "To thine own self be true, and it shall follow as the day the night, thou canst not then be false to any man." True when Shakespeare wrote it, true today.

The key to character is words. The most common key words are YES and NO, the smallest and the largest. Invariably the teacher is judged by these two words. No does not always mean NO, nor yes, YES with some, but the thing to do is to make them exactly what they mean. A thoughtless yes or no in the school room will create a sentiment among the pupils and that sentiment will be anything but favorable to the teacher. How often is a thoughtless no changed into a yes simply by the constant asking of pupils. It's a teacher's weak spot, but being such there is no excuse for its being. Like teacher, like pupils, like citizens, state, nation.

Who said we should be deceitful? Deceit is a false alarm and but a sham, skin deep, however, of a weakening in character who has not sufficient vim to declare himself. Be assured children have eyes and they see the real nine times in ten.

"Language Training" is discussed by M. in this issue of the column. The subject is a practical one and is treated in a practical way. M. promises us a series of articles along the same line. These articles will appear from time to time during the next six months.

LANGUAGE TRAINING. The art of speaking or writing is the most important of the school of arts, which begins at home, and continues in the primary school and it should be made the central aim of all elementary teaching.

Children enter school say at six years of age. They have at this period of child life, many ideas and more or less ability to express what they know, in words and sentences. Therefore every exercise of the first year of school life should properly end in the expression of such knowledge and when training in expression is the end sought. It is a mistake to let even a story exercise end with the telling of the story by the teacher. But rather say "that is correct, that is excellent," and leave their faces shining with delight and intense interest and a desire to try again. This training in language should make clear the ideas expressed by words, and this daily exercise of the primary school—the first year—should include conversations, used in child-life, talks about commonplace things, the telling of incidents of interest to children, the recital of little poems, the singing of child-songs. It is what children can tell that is evidence of real training.

The tongue before the pen in order to bring out real expression the first two years of school. In all primary training, oral method should go before the written and if the training is skillful, and taught in an attractive and interesting manner, the pupil will come up to the third year with a good degree of facility in telling what he knows. And in this, the third year, pupils should begin to write short sentences and form simple paragraphs.

Mrs. Howell Entertains.

On last Thursday evening, that universally loved matron, Mrs. G. W. Howell, ably assisted by Mrs. Edna Adams, entertained over a score of her many friends at her pleasant home, two miles north of Marion, the occasion being due to Miss Carrie Hughes' birthday.

The weather being clear and favorable, the guests had all arrived by 8:30 o'clock and from that time the "fun" began by pinning the "Donkey tail" on and from this as an introduction until the departure, not a moment did the merry young people loose in taking advantage of opportunity and have a "spanking good time".

Many were the games the gay hearts indulged in during the fleeting hours every game being especially enlivened by the participation of every guest who were not lured into dreamland by the entrancing music afforded by competent musicians.

The whole house wore a cheerful and inviting aspect, but ah, me! what a thrill animated every breast as they entered the artistically arranged dining room. The table was bedecked with dazzling lights, fragrant flowers, choicest fruits, daintiest ices and naturally the heart of man lingered near such an interesting place until time was up.

After all the good things had been eaten, all the games played, all the contests decided and the house torn topsyturvy, the pleasure seekers made their departure declaring Mrs. Howell an extraordinary entertainer and wishing Miss Carrie might live to experience many such birthdays.

Those who enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Howell besides the guest of honor were: Misses Lily Gilbert, Pearl Morrell, Alma Postlethweight, Josie and Conie Ford, Nellie Carter of Milbourn Ok., Lillie Guess and Ethel Hard. Messrs. Jas. Wilson, Claud Guess, Chas. Conger, Gilbert Worley, Chas. Gilbert, Taylor Lucas, Amie Edloch, Albert Conger and Harry Vaughn.

A GUEST.

Minine Notes.

The mining company reported as being organized last week is now ready for its charter. The name of the company is the Morris Mining Company, and its officers are as follows: Senator Wm. J. Deboe, President; Judge Jas. A. Moore, Vice President; Geo. M. Crider, Secretary and Treasurer; Geo. M. Morris, General Manager; F. E. Robertson, Superintendent of Mines. The capital stock is $100,000, divided into as many shares of the denomination of $1 each. The company has 127 acres of splendid mining land, about five miles northwest of Marion, and near the Memphis and Klondike shafts. Besides the fluorspar vein that is already developed, it is said that a number of parallel or cross veins exist on the property which carry such ores as galena and sulphide of zinc.

The Redd mines are yielding a goodly amount of fluorspar. Constant work is going on at these mines, as is being done at a hundred other properties in the district. From 400 to 700 tons of ore are now on the surface ready to be hauled from this point.

There is considerable activity in mining circles, and a great deal of work is being done. It is our purpose to handle mining news in concrete form when our new office building is completed and we get moved to the new quarters.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY FROM THE OLD FARM

Showing how, by the exercise of a little taste and ingenuity, the abandoned farm may be changed into a paying proposition for the summer. —New York Press.
