REPORT OF THE ORE MARKET

Son of C. S. Knight Hurt in St. Louis.

NOTES OF THE MILLINERS

The Fall Season Bids Fair to Be an Active One For the Millinery Trade.

THE WORK OF CUPID'S DARTS

Joplin, Mo., August 20.—As was predicted early in the week, the price of zinc ore went down, and the highest price received was $57. per ton. Only a few bins were sold early, and at the end of the week the price had gone down to $48. and $52. per ton. Lead sold for $60. per ton, and a few choice bins brought as high as $61. per ton.

C. S. Knight, of Ft. Wayne, who has been staying in Marion for some time looking after the various interests of the Marion Zinc Co., of which he is president, received news Friday that his son had been injured in a railroad wreck near East St. Louis, Ill. Both of the young man's legs were broken, but the doctor offers the encouraging news that he will recover without permanent injury. Mr. Knight's family have gone to St. Louis to care for the injured young man, and he will not leave here unless it should later be considered necessary.

Mr. Knight's large and growing interests in this community demands his almost constant attention, and it is very unfortunate that so serious an accident should occur at a time when he is engaged so closely with business interests far from home.

Mrs. Grant Davidson left Sunday for St. Louis with her taimmer, Miss Laura Hurley. They will spend ten days or more at market and will select a very nice line of hats for the fall trade.

Miss Bertie Chittenden left Sunday for St. Louis to spend several days studying the fall styles in the wholesale houses. She accompanied Mrs. Grant Bugg, of Fredonia, who goes to select a nice line of fall goods for her millinery trade. Returning, Miss Chittenden will accompany Mrs. Bugg home and will act as her trimmer this fall. Miss Chittenden has had several year's training as a trimmer and should be very competent.

Miss Ruby Castleberry, of Princeton, will arrive in the city soon with a full line of millinery for the fall trade and will open up her stock in the McConnell & Stone new store. Miss Castleberry needs no introduction to our readers as she is well known here and besides, has frequently been employed by local milliners as head trimmer.

Miss Ella McNeely left Sunday for Louisville, where she will remain until about the first of September visiting the markets and studying the latest styles in millinery. Miss McNeely has had quiet a broad experience in this line of work and is at present with the millinery establishment of DENMAN & LOVE.

Wednesday afternoon, about 3 o'clock Joe Lemon a prosperous young farmer and Miss Laura Marvel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Marvel, were united in matrimony by Rev. W. T. Oakley. Both parties live near Tribune. They were married at the residence of Rev. Oakley and immediately after the ceremony the happy couple departed for the home of the bride's mother where they will reside for the present. The Record joins their many friends in wishing them much success.

Mr. Rudolph Andrews and Miss Nora Wynn, both of Caldwell county, arrived in town Tuesday afternoon secured a marriage license and were married by Rev. Board, who accompanied them from Caldwell county, they were married in Ray Bros. store.

Mr. Ray asserts that he intends making a "Gretchen Green" of the Palace and will have a wedding once a week. Any one considering such matters seriously should put in their application at once, to Messrs. Ray Bros. who will be found accommodating.

GUBERNATORIAL CHAIR NOT FOR HIM

Judge Nunn Says He has no Idea of Running for Governor

Judge Nunn has returned from a visit to his home in Western Kentucky. He will remain at the Capital for a few days and then go to the mountains for a few days' fishing trip.

The Judge was not particularly pleased with the story sent out from Paducah that he would be a candidate for governor. He thinks the story was started without malice, but by some one who did not understand politics. He said he had six more years of service on the appellate bench, and that he had not the remotest idea of becoming a candidate for governor.

The Judge says everything is prospering in his old home—Frankfort Journal.

Regarding the Piney Camp Meeting Postponement.

Yes, the camp meeting was postponed at Piney. The writer of the article in the RECORD last week thinks Piney Fork people did awfully wrong. I don't agree with the writer in that, but think the church did a righteous deed in not having camp meeting this year. Yes, there is always some soul saved without doubt, but there are also close of the meetings so many nearer hell than they were before. For many years some have gone away from camp meeting with stained characters and heart-broken parents.

Yes, they have been having camp meetings at Piney for nearly a hundred years, but the camp meetings now are not like they used to be. Years ago people would come from miles away to camp meeting, but they came to honor God. Nowadays it is more of a picnic than anything else. The people go and camp, but they don't do so in order that they may honor God, but merely to have a good time and be in the fashion.

There are some faithful ones, I know, but what can they do with the sinners when there is everything that can be thought of to draw them away? There are six or eight stands every year and the Lord only knows what they sell.

As I said before, some will go just to have a good time. Yes, they will sit at their camps in time of meeting talking and laughing with their friends. I have heard so many say: "Well, I would not go to camp meeting, only I see so many people I never see any other time." The Lord is not going to bless people until they come to Him right.

I think if they would do away with camp meeting and have protracted meeting they would do more good. I have heard many of the Piney Fork members say they would rather have a protracted meeting, then maybe those who came would do some good. Anyway we would not have all these stands to draw the people away. Oh, that the people of God would pray earnestly for a revival throughout our country.

When we used to go to Piney Fork to the camp meeting the people would leave their camps when the horn blew and there were quite a number of times the shed wouldn't hold them—they would come as close as they could to hear the gospel and their meeting did good back in those days. Now they have the modern bell, and when it rings some will go and others won't—they are now putting on more style.

Three years ago the people began on the first of April, people began preparing for camp meeting. Every time they met for Sunday school one could hear on every side: "Well, are you ready for camp meeting?" There were more gaily dressed people than were ever known to be at camp meeting before; and they didn't have much of a meeting, either. Some blamed the preacher's wife for not carrying the meeting on longer; some said they would never camp any more. So I think it would be best to drop camp meeting and have protracted meeting.

May the people of God pray for the upbuilding of Piney Fork church. Yes, I say water the gold plant, but be sure you use the right kind of water, is the fervent desire of one who, for years, has been a

REPUBLICANS NAME R. L. MOORE FOR SENATE

The Selection Made Here Yesterday in Delegate Convention—Unanimous Choice.

M. B. CLARK, OF LIVINGSTON, FOR THE LEGISLATURE

Both Men Named on Strong Platforms Denouncing Party Corruption Where Found—R. L. Moore, Once a Democrat, But Saw the Error of His Way, and Turned—Resolutions Will Appear Next Week.

FULL REPORT AND RESOLUTIONS OF THE SALEM CONVENTION

A large crowd attended the senatorial delegate convention here yesterday which met for the purpose of nominating a candidate to represent this senatorial district, composed of Crittenden, Caldwell and Webster, in the state senate. The Caldwell county delegation was accompanied by the Princeton brass band which made music for the convention. R. L. Moore, generally known in this section as Dr. Moore, was nominated by the convention by acclamation. He is widely known, popular and a Christian gentleman. He stands on a platform opposed to party corruption wherein a few claiming to represent the whole party, manipulate public affairs for the purpose of their own selfish gains, a platform of right and justice between man and man.

The convention was called to order by H. A. Haynes, chairman of this county, who stated the purpose of the meeting. County Judge Aaron Towery was called to the chair and made temporary Chairman Frank U. Harris, of Caldwell county, was made temporary secretary after which committees on credentials, organization and resolutions, were appointed respectively.

The reports of the committees were adopted, all delegates being seated and the temporary organization was made permanent. The resolutions, as adopted, will be given next week.

THE SALEM CONVENTION

Tuesday, August 22, delegates from mass conventions held in Crittenden and Livingston counties the Saturday before, met at Salem and nominated M. B. Clark, of Livingston county, as a candidate for representative to make the race against the Democratic nominee, Thos. H. Cochran. H. A. Haynes was absent and the convention was called to order by Chairman H. C. McCord, of Livingston. The meeting was held in the Masonic building and was called to order at 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon. P. A. Clark, of Livingston, was chosen as temporary chairman of the convention and J. E. Chittenden, of Crittenden, as secretary. In assuming the chair, Mr. Clark thanked the convention for the honor of serving it in that capacity. Wm. J. Deboe, Dave Sexton and George Belt were appointed as a committee on credentials. J. Watts Lamb, Tom Davis and R. M. Wilborn, committee on organization, and Carl Henderson, H. C. McCord and J. A. Davidson, Sr., committee on resolutions. While the committees were preparing their reports W. D. Bishop, of Livingston, made a brief talk. The committee on credentials reported that all delegates present were entitled to be seated. The following report of the committee on organization was adopted:

- 1.—The temporary organization to be made permanent.
2. The report of committee on credentials.
3. The report of committee on resolutions.
4. Nomination of candidate.
5. Ballotting.

The following report of the committee on resolutions was adopted: Be it resolved by the Republicans of the legislative district composed of Crittenden and Livingston counties, who assembled in convention, that they most heartily endorse the call of a convention to nominate a candidate to represent the counties of Crittenden and Livingston in the next general duty.

The rules of the convention were suspended and Mr. Clerk was made the nominee by acclamation. Before the convention adjourned, Senator Deboe offered the following resolutions which passed:

Resolved, that the delegates of this convention extend their grateful gratitude to the members of the Masonic fraternity for the use of the hall for our convention.

The Livingston county delegates were:

C. M. King, R. E. Coulter, R. H. Chittenden, D. A. Sexton, T. M. Davis, Jno. Steele, W. F. Paris, Jr., J. J. Chittenden and H. C. McCord.

RECENT HAPPENINGS IN LIVINGSTON COUNTY

Two Young Men Meet an Unlucky Death.

Smithland, Ky., Aug. 19.—Charles Sanders, formerly of Livingston county, was shot and killed by his cousin, Will Dave Long, at Charleston, Mo., Thursday. Sanders body was brought here for burial.

Both Long and Sanders formerly lived near here and went to Missouri about a year ago. Thursday, so report says, they quarreled and Sanders advanced on Long with a knife. Long shot him and he died soon after. Both are well known in this county.

Smithland, Ky., Aug. 19.—Roy Duncan, the sixteen-year-old son of the Rev. Mr. Duncan, who lives near Dycusburg, this county, died from knife wounds inflicted by George Bevers, with whom he had a difficulty a day or two ago. Bevers is much older than Duncan. He is hiding near the scene of the murder with a posse at his heels.

Bevers held Duncan with one hand in the fight and stabbed him with the other.

AMERICAN FARMS WILL PRODUCE BIG CROP

Every Estimate Shows Unprecedented Yield May Be Looked For.

American farms will produce bigger and better crops and return more millions in revenue to the farming interests this year than ever before in the history of the country.

All kind of crops, wheat, corn, oats, hay and smaller grains and produce staples have progressed to the stage where this prediction may be made with scarcely the slightest chance that the final official figures will prove its correctness.

Railroad officials and statisticians of agricultural departments in the various states of the grain producing region give their personal and official guarantee that the year 1905 is to be the banner year in farm prosperity.

If there is a dissenting voice anywhere it is drowned out by the clamor of optimism that comes from Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, the far Southwest, the Pacific coast and the wonderful spring wheat crop of the great Northwest.

Possibly one wheat crop, that of 1901, will exceed that of 1905. In 1901 the crop aggregated 784,000,000 bushels. It looks now as if the corn crop would exceed by a large margin that of 1902, when 2,524,000,000 was bushels produced.

It is when one takes the wheat, corn, oats and hay crops together and contemplates what the grand total of this year of grace is to be that the story becomes an inspiring one. There never was such a celebration of stunning figures needed to express the tribute of the nation's horn of plenty.

Quote as much to the point, if not even more, in casting up the ledger of prosperity is the prospect that the prices, compared with the hugeness of the production, will be higher than they have been since war times.

An estimate of total values of farm products, based on present quotations, would present an array of figures that would be staggering. Superlatives are in order all along the line to make the situation sufficiently impressive.

If this general survey is extravagant, practically every shrewd railroad crop inspector and every state statistician will have been discredited.

MINUTES OF CONVENTION

Held Here Last Saturday by the Republicans.

RESOLUTIONS AS ADOPTED

Oppose Party Corruption and Ask for an Undeified Jury System in This District.

NAMES OF THE DELEGATES CHOSEN

Saturday, pursuant to a call from the county chairman of the party, H. A. Haynes, the Republicans met at the court house in mass convention for the purpose of selecting delegates to the legislative district convention which met at Salem on Tuesday, August 22.

The following minutes of the convention are reported by County Secretary Jno. G. Asher:

On motion, Harry A. Haynes was chosen permanent chairman and J. G. Asher, secretary.

On motion, the chairman appointed the following named persons as a committee on resolutions, viz: J. W. Lamb, W. B. Yandell and E. B. Franklin.

The following resolutions were read and adopted:

WHEREAS, we, the Republicans of Crittenden county in convention assembled, endorse the call of the county chairman for the selection of delegates for the convention at Salem and to nominate a candidate for the Legislature and also to select delegates for the senatorial convention at this place to nominate a candidate for the state senate from this district, be it

Resolved, That we earnestly endorse each and all of the nominees of the party for the different county offices and pledge them our united support.

Resolved, That we denounce with all our faith the system practiced in this county for selecting jurors from one political party and condemn the acts of the jury commissioners in that regard as unfair, unjust and having a tendency to degrade our judicial system in this county and district.

Resolved, That we recommend the following persons as delegates to the convention at Salem on Tuesday, August 22, and all other good Republicans who may attend, to nominate a candidate for the Legislature and to the convention at this place on Thursday, August 24, to nominate a candidate for the state senate, to wit:

Lan Harpending, E. B. Franklin, W. J. Deboe, H. A. Haynes, R. F. Haynes, J. Frank Conger, Judge J. A. Moore, R. M. Wilborn, R. L. Moore, John Sedberry, Bede Wilborn, W. A. Woodall, A. J. Woodall, A. J. Pickens, J. M. Freeman, J. E. Chittenden, Dr. T. A. Frazer, Judge Aaron Towery, Geo. T. Belt, W. B. Yandell, E. B. Franklin and J. W. Lamb.

H. A. HAYNES, Chairman.
J. G. ASHER, Secretary.

Register Sued.

Paducah, Ky., August 16.—Eldon Stone has filed suit in the Livingston circuit court against The Register Publishing company, of Paducah, for $5,000 damages for alleged libelous publication in the Paducah Register concerning the arrest of Eldon Stone.

A few months ago Sam Stone, father of Eldon Stone, sued the Register for $10,000, damages for the same publication; and the Register won the suit. It is said that the article referred to Eldon Stone instead of Sam Stone. The suit was filed by Attorney Mark Worton, of Paducah, representing Stone.

The Earth Trembled.

At about 11 o'clock Monday night, an earthquake was felt here which caused some excitement for awhile.

The shock lasted for fully a half-minute, and it is asserted by some that it lasted a full minute.

Buildings shook and windows rattled while the shock lasted and many were awakened.

The shock was clearly perceptible in Kentucky and all surrounding states.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.

CHAPTER I.—I am left an orphan at six and am saved from a dissolute uncle by Eben Holden, an old man who has worked for my father. Uncle Eb takes me through the wilderness from Vermont to seek a new home in New York State.

II.—Our adventures in the woods. Uncle Eb scares away a panther.

III.—A woman presents a little wagon to me, to which Fred, our dog, is attached. A man tries to enter our camp in the woods.

IV.—Uncle Eb repulses the intruder. We stay in an old cabin and are warned during the night to leave by its mysterious owner.

VI.—I meet Jed Peary, a country poet who takes a liking to me. I am almost frozen to death and am saved by Uncle Eb.

VIII.—Hope and I try to save our old dog from the butcher's hands, but are compelled by circumstances to leave him to starve.

IX.—The mysterious "night man," a nocturnal prowler of the countryside, is bugaboo to the children. Story of Nehemiah Brower, who killed another boy by accident, ran away and was reported drowned near Van Deiman's land. I escort Hope to a "school lyceum."

X.—I win distinction at school. Hope's musical ability develops. Her voice is praised by young Mr. Livingstone, a visitor from the city. I disclose my love for Hope to Jed Peary, who advises me to study.

XI and XII.—Gerald Brower, my young foster brother, dies. Hope and go away to the Hillsborough academy.

XIII.—My Academy work is praised. Mr. Livingstone sends Christmas gifts from the city to Hope and her mother.

XIV.—Hope and I confess our mutual love, which is not to be spoken of until we are older.

XV.—Hope and I go to a country dance.

CHAPTER XIV.

Went back to our work again shortly, the sweetness and the bitterness of life fresh in our remembrance. When we came back for another vacation the fields were aglow with color and the roads were now overdrifted with meadow music and the smell of clover. I had creditably taken examination for college, where I was to begin my course in the fall, with a scholarship. Hope had made remarkable progress in music and was soon going to Ogdensburg for instruction.

A year had gone nearly since Jed Peary had cautioned me about falling in love. I had kept enough of my heart about me "to do business with," but I had continued to feel an uncomfortable absence in the region of it. Young men at Hillsborough—many of whom, I felt sure, had a smarter look than I—had bid stubbornly for Hope's favor. I wondered often it did not turn her head—this tribute of rustic admiration. But she seemed to be all unconscious of its cause and went about her work with small conceit of herself. Many a time they had tried to take her from my arm at the church door—a good natured phase of youthful rivalry there in those days—but she had always said laughingly, "No, thank you," and clung all the closer to me. Now Jed Peary had no knowledge of the worry it gave me or of the peril it suggested. I knew that if I felt free to tell him all he would give me other counsel.

I was now seventeen and she a bit older, and had I not heard of many young men and women who had been engaged—aye, even married—at that age? Well, as it happened, a day before she left us to go to her work in Ogdensburg, where she was to live with her uncle, I made an end of delay. I considered carefully what a man ought to say in the circumstances, and I thought I had near an accurate notion. We were in the garden together—the playground of our childhood.

"Hope, I have a secret to tell you," I said.

"A secret," she exclaimed eagerly. "I love secrets."

"A great secret," I repeated, as I felt my face burning.

"Why, it must be something awful!"

"Not very," I stammered. Having missed my cue from the beginning, I was now utterly confused.

"William," she exclaimed, "what is the matter of you?"

"I—I am in love," said I, very awkwardly.

"Is that all?" she answered, a trace of humor in her tone. "I thought it was bad news."

I stooped to pick a rose and handed it to her.

"Well," she remarked soberly, but smiling a little as she lifted the rose to her lips, "is it any one I know?"

I felt it was going badly with me, but caught a sudden inspiration.

"You have never seen her," I said.

If she had suspected the truth I had turned the tables on her, and now she was guessing. A quick change came into her face, and for a moment it gave me confidence.

"Is she pretty?" she asked very seriously as she dropped the flower and looked down, crushing it beneath her foot.

"She is very beautiful. It is you I love, Hope."

A flood of color came into her cheeks

then, as she stood a moment looking down at the flower in silence.

"I shall keep your secret," she said tenderly and hesitating as she spoke.

"And when you are through college—and you are older—and I am older—and you love me as you do now—I hope—I shall love you, too—as—I do now."

Her lips were trembling as she gave me that sweet assurance, dearer to me—far dearer—than all else I remember of that golden time, and tears were coursing down her cheeks. For myself I was in a worse plight of emotion. I dare say she remembered also the look of my face in that moment.

"Do not speak of it again," she said as we walked away together on the shorn sod of the orchard meadow, now sown with apple blossoms, "until we are older, and if you never speak again I shall know you—do not love me any longer."

The dinner horn sounded. We turned and walked slowly back.

"Do I look all right?" she asked, turning her face to me and smiling sweetly.

"All right," I said. "Nobody would know that any one loved you—except for your beauty and that one tear track on your cheek."

She wiped it away as she laughed.

"Mother knows anyway," she said, "and she has given me good advice."

She looked so fine in her big hat and new gown with its many dainty accessories of lace and ribbon, adjusted with so much patting and pulling, that as she sat beside me I hardly dared touch her for fear of spoiling something. When she shivered a little and said it was growing cool I put my arm about her, and as I drew her closer to my side she turned her hat obligingly and said it was a great nuisance.

I tried to kiss her then, but she put her hand over my mouth and said sweetly that I would spoil everything if I did that.

"I must not let you kiss me, William," she said. "Not—not for all in the world. I'm sure you wouldn't have me do what I think is wrong—would you?"

There was but one answer to such an appeal, and I made myself as happy as possible feeling her head upon my shoulder and her soft hair touching my cheek. As I think of it now the trust she put in me was something sublime and holy.

"Then I shall talk about—about our love," I said. "I must do something."

"Promised I wouldn't let you," she said. Then she added, after a moment of silence: "I'll tell you what you may do. Tell me what is your ideal in a woman—the one you would love best of all. I don't think that would be wicked, do you?"

"I think God would forgive that," I said. "She must be tall and slim, with dainty feet and hands and a pair of big eyes, blue as a violet, shaded with long dark lashes. And her hair must be wavy and light, with a little tinge of gold in it. And her cheek must have the pink of the rose and dimples that show in laughter. And her voice—that must have music in it and the ring of kindness and good nature. And her lips—let them show the crimson of her blood and be ready to give and receive a kiss when I meet her."

She stared and nestled closer to me.

"If I let you kiss me just once," she whispered, "you will not ask me again, will you?"

"No, sweetheart. I will not," I answered. Then we gave each other such a kiss as may be known once and only once in a lifetime.

"What would you do for the love of a girl like that?" she whispered.

I thought a moment, sounding depths of undiscovered woe to see if there were anything I should hesitate to suffer, and there was nothing.

"I'd lay me down an' die," I said.

And I well remember how, when I lay dying, as I believed, in rain and darkness on the bloody field of Bull Run, I thought of that moment and of those words.

"I cannot say such beautiful things as you," she answered when I asked her to describe her ideal. "He must be good, and he must be tall and handsome and strong and brave."

Then she sang a tender love ballad. I have often shared the pleasure of thousands under the spell of her voice, but I have never heard her sing as to that small audience on Paraway turpentine.

As we came near Rickard's hall we could hear the fiddlers and the calling off.

The windows on the long sides of the big house were open. Long shafts of light shot out upon the gloom. It had always reminded me of a picture of Noah's ark that hung in my bedroom, and now it seemed to be floating, with resting ears of gold, in a deluge of darkness. We were greeted with a noisy welcome at the door. Many of the boys and girls came from all sides of the big hall and shook hands with us.

Enos Brown, whose long forelocks had been oiled for the occasion and combed down so they touched his right eyebrow, was panting in a jig that to the paper, had been whipped to death.

"If God knows 'at such things are bein' done, why don't he stop 'em?" David asked.

"Can't very well," said Jed Peary.

"Can't he be omnipotent?" said David.

"That's a bad word, a dangerous one," said the old poet, dropping his dialect as he spoke. "It makes God responsible for evil as well as good. The word carries us beyond our depth. It's too big for our boots. I'd rather think he can do what's do-able an' know what's knowable. In the beginning he gave laws to the world, an' these laws are unchangeable, or they are not wise and perfect. If God were to change them he would thereby acknowledge their imperfection. By this law men and races suffer as they struggle upward. But if the law is unchangeable can it be changed for a better cause even than the relief of a whipped slave? In good time the law shall punish and relieve. The groans of them that suffer shall hasten it, but there shall be no change in the law. There can be no change in the law."

"Let's hard t' tell jest how powerful God is," said Uncle Eb. "Good deal like tryin' t' weigh Lake Champlain with a quart pail an' a pair of steel-yards."

"If God's laws are unchangeable what is the use of praying?" I asked.

"He can give us the strength to bear, the will to obey him an' light to guide us," said the poet.

Hope returned for a few days late in August. Invitations were just issued for the harvest dance at Rickard's.

"You mus' take 'er," said Uncle Eb the day she came. "She's a party dancer as a man over see. France right up an' tell 'er she mus' go. Don't want to let any one git ahead o' ye."

"Of course I will go," she said in answer to my invitation. "I shouldn't think you were a bean worth having if you did not ask me."

The yellow moon was peering over Woody ledge when we went away that evening. I knew it was our last pleasure seeking in Paraway, and the crackles in the stubble filled the silence with a kind of mourning.

She looked so fine in her big hat and new gown with its many dainty accessories of lace and ribbon, adjusted with so much patting and pulling, that as she sat beside me I hardly dared touch her for fear of spoiling something. When she shivered a little and said it was growing cool I put my arm about her, and as I drew her closer to my side she turned her hat obligingly and said it was a great nuisance.

In good time the law shall punish and relieve. The groans of them that suffer shall hasten it, but there shall be no change in the law. There can be no change in the law."

"Let's hard t' tell jest how powerful God is," said Uncle Eb. "Good deal like tryin' t' weigh Lake Champlain with a quart pail an' a pair of steel-yards."

"If God's laws are unchangeable what is the use of praying?" I asked.

"He can give us the strength to bear, the will to obey him an' light to guide us," said the poet.

Hope returned for a few days late in August. Invitations were just issued for the harvest dance at Rickard's.

"You mus' take 'er," said Uncle Eb the day she came. "She's a party dancer as a man over see. France right up an' tell 'er she mus' go. Don't want to let any one git ahead o' ye."

"Of course I will go," she said in answer to my invitation. "I shouldn't think you were a bean worth having if you did not ask me."

The yellow moon was peering over Woody ledge when we went away that evening. I knew it was our last pleasure seeking in Paraway, and the crackles in the stubble filled the silence with a kind of mourning.

She looked so fine in her big hat and new gown with its many dainty accessories of lace and ribbon, adjusted with so much patting and pulling, that as she sat beside me I hardly dared touch her for fear of spoiling something. When she shivered a little and said it was growing cool I put my arm about her, and as I drew her closer to my side she turned her hat obligingly and said it was a great nuisance.

I tried to kiss her then, but she put her hand over my mouth and said sweetly that I would spoil everything if I did that.

There was but one answer to such an appeal, and I made myself as happy as possible feeling her head upon my shoulder and her soft hair touching my cheek. As I think of it now the trust she put in me was something sublime and holy.

"Promised I wouldn't let you," she said. Then she added, after a moment of silence: "I'll tell you what you may do. Tell me what is your ideal in a woman—the one you would love best of all. I don't think that would be wicked, do you?"

"I think God would forgive that," I said. "She must be tall and slim, with dainty feet and hands and a pair of big eyes, blue as a violet, shaded with long dark lashes. And her hair must be wavy and light, with a little tinge of gold in it. And her cheek must have the pink of the rose and dimples that show in laughter. And her voice—that must have music in it and the ring of kindness and good nature. And her lips—let them show the crimson of her blood and be ready to give and receive a kiss when I meet her."

She stared and nestled closer to me.

"If I let you kiss me just once," she whispered, "you will not ask me again, will you?"

"No, sweetheart. I will not," I answered. Then we gave each other such a kiss as may be known once and only once in a lifetime.

"What would you do for the love of a girl like that?" she whispered.

energy. It was an exhibition both of power and endurance. He was damp and apologetic when at length he stepped with a mighty bang of his foot and sat down beside me. He said he was badly out of practice when I offered congratulations. The fiddler was a small man with a short leg and a character that was minus one dimension. It had length and breadth, but no thickness. He sat with his fellow player on a little platform at one end of the room. He was an old man who wandered all over the township with his fiddle. He played by ear, and I have seen babies smile and old men dance when his bow was swaying. I remember that when I heard it for the first time I determined that I should be a fiddler if I ever grew to be a man, but David told me that fiddlers were a worthless lot and that no wise man should ever fool with a fiddle. One is lucky, I have since learned, if any dream of yesterday shall stand the better light of today or the more searching rays of tomorrow.

"Choose yer partners fer Money Musk!" the caller shouted.

Hope and I got into line; the music started; the circles began to sway. Darwin Powers, an old but frisky man, stood up beside the fiddlers whistling with sobriety and vigor as they played. It was a pleasure to see some of the older men of the neighborhood join the dizzy riot by skipping playfully in the corners. They tried to rally their unwilling wives, and generally a number of them were dancing before the night was over. The life and color of the scene, the fresh young faces of the girls—some of them models of rustic beauty—the playful antics of the young men, the merrymaking of their fathers, the laughter, the airs of gallantry, the glances of affection—there is a magic in the thought of it all that makes me young again.

There were teams before and behind us when we came home late at night, so sleepy that the stars went reeling as we looked at them.

"This night is the end of many things," I remarked.

"And the beginning of better ones," I hope," was her answer.

"Yes, but they are so far away," I am to be four years in college—possibly I can finish in three."

"Perfectly terrible!" she said, and then she added the favorite phrase and tone of her mother, "We must be patient."

"I am very sorry of one thing," I said.

"What's that?"

"I promised not to ask you for one more kiss."

"Well then," said she, "you—you—needn't ask me."

And in a moment I helped her out at the door.

Educational Column

W. HUGH WATSON, Editor.

FELLOW TEACHERS: This column is open for the discussion of educational subjects. You, being a factor in education in Crittenden
county, or any other county,
are most cordially invited
to contribute to its columns.
Every teacher is invited to send an article, and I assure you of a hearing. In order to insure your getting in,
send your article to me at Carrsville.

The watermelon as moral factor, is the latest rival in the role as teacher.

Education is moral character made efficient by mental discipline.—Dean Briggs.

Josh Billings says that the most vehement expression to escape the school teacher's lips is "condemn it."

Isn't it about time there is a let up on the general ignorance of the school teacher? His honesty and personal worth are worth some mention.

Most callings have life adherents.
How about teaching? In the country school—six months in the year for twelve month's living. As a specialty never.

Just think a moment M. Cynic, if it had not been for the self-sacrifice of some noble man or woman teacher, you would not be enjoying your present salary and affluent circumstances.

The underpay has been the cause of "thinning ranks." New faces appear each year as familiar ones disappear.
The old go—the new come, is the unwritten history of every county institute.

The simple application of some simple arithmetic to our life in the division of sorrows and multiplication of joys will bring forth a more bounteous harvest of happiness. Optimism is a noble heritage.

A martyr? Never! But merely an underpaid class who rather than have learning go, have chosen to stand by the profession. There lies the secret and in all ages this has been the test of devotion to any cause.

An educated rascal is more apt in his cunning than the uneducated one. A good man, because of his education, can be more effective in his benevolence.
The adverb, how, solves many problems in our American life.

We must adhere to our first statement that articles appear in this column in the order of reception. And that reminds me to remind you of the promise you made us during the institute to furnish an article for the column. Let us have it at once.

The eight hours between 8 o'clock
a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. have their lights and shades. It is folly to let the shadows drive out the sunshine; to rob us of the hour of rest after work; to adulterate the pleasure on excellent books brings in the quiet of the evening. Drive out the day's worries with a cheerful spirit.

Self-sacrifice? Yes, that's what we said and what we mean. It doesn't take a magnifying glass to see that there is more pay in other lines than the teaching profession, but the self-sacrificing man and woman stayed in the profession, nevertheless. The result is that you, Mr. Cynic, have the knowledge to enter the business world.

Aristotle says:
Educated men are as superior to those uneducated as the living are to the dead, and those parents who educate their children are superior to those who merely beget them;
for the latter only enable their children to live, but the former give them the power to live well.

Let us then be willing to make sacrifices that our children may be ready to step forth upon the stage of life well equipped and with the knowledge that will enable them to "live well." Let us fit them for the highest spheres of usefulness here, that may gain the richest rewards hereafter.

Parents should do all but impoverish themselves for the education of their children. To this good all their show and luxury should be sacrificed. Here they should be lavish while they should straighten themselves in everything else. They should wear the cheapest clothing and live on the plainest food if they can in no other way secure to their families the best instruction.

They should have no anxiety to accumulate property for their children, provided they can place them under influences that will awaken their faculties,
inspire them with pure and high principles and fit them to bear a manly, useful and honorable part in the world.
No words can express the cruelty or folly of that economy, which, to leave a fortune to a child, starves his intellect and impoverishes his heart. There should be no economy in education.
Money should never be weighed against the soul of a child. It should be poured out like water for the child's intellectual and moral life.—Channing.

Doubtless there is no young man or woman who enters the teaching profession with the intention of making it a life work. Indeed, there are but few that recur to our minds who have said that in teaching they have found their life work. In the good county of Crittenden you can count upon your fingers
those who have been teaching a dozen years. After any teacher's name, professionally, the word, "transient" may be very appropriately written. Is the sum Carnegie set aside as a pension for the superannuated teacher an incentive for life tenure in the profession? Never, never, never! Teachers want competence in the way of salary that will enable them to live and build their own haven when old age claims the last quiet years. For the fault we have to look at the source—the State. It has not faded from the memory of the middle ages where we had three months
school terms in districts whose census reports did not contain forty-five. An advance step was made when a five month's term was due each district.
Now we have six months and there should be no quiet hours for the lawmakers until we have at least an eight month's school term for every child in Kentucky. Yes, it will cost money but the investment will not be a risk in "watered stock." The result will be a noble, educated, cultured citizenship.

In this issue Mr. A. E. Brown discusses very entertainingly the origin of "Dixie." The article should be of interest to readers of the column:

ORIGIN OF "DIXIE."
A place of which little is known by the many who speak of "Dixie" as a place of little signification.

First, I shall try to give the meaning and origin of the word "Dixie," maginary line supposed to be somewhere in the southern states of America. Celebrated in a popular negro melody as "a perfect paradise of luxurious ease and enjoyment." Not only the negro looks upon the word as becoming with awe, but the true South-erner regards it as the most beautiful and beloved places on earth. It brings to his mind a vivid account of past events, pleasure, sociability, strife, and last but not least, patriotism. I might add, strike the Dixie melody and watch the Northerner give evidences of respect and with a cheerful heart
lift his hat and cheer the bonny South.

This place not only at home has respect, but abroad it has gained renewed for itself and has been placed among the fictitious things of today,
called upon by the poets of the day.

Once this would be "Dixie" was the home of the Confederacy and the ground of contending armies. Battle after battle was fought amid the flowers and all of Nature's beautiful scenes of the South and the patriots in blue and gray fell alike on the battle field
to determine who should control Dixie's land, the North or South. The Confederacy fell but Dixie survives and will thrive through countless ages.

I have given you a faint idea of the "Dixie" of today, yet there seems to be a difference in the origin of the word. The term is often used as a collective designation of the Southern states as stated above, yet a correspondent of the New Orleans Delta has given the following account of the original and early application of the name:

"I do not wish to spoil a pretty illusion, but the real truth is,
that 'Dixie' is an indigenous northern negro refrain which is as common to the writer as the lamp posts were in New York city seventy-five years ago. It was one of the every day illusions of boys at that time in all their outdoor sports. And no one ever heard of Dixie's land being other than Manhattan Island until recently, when it has been erroneously supposed to refer to the South from its connection with pathetic negro allegory. When slavery existed in New York, one 'Dixy' owned a large tract of land on Manhattan Island and a large number of slaves. The increase of the abolition sentiment caused an emigration of the slaves to more thorough and secure slave sections and the negroes who were thus sent off, (many being born there) naturally looked back to their old home where they had lived in clover, with feelings of regret, as they could not imagine any like Dixie's land.
Hence it became synonymous with an ideal locality combining ease, comfort and maternal happiness of every description. In those days, negro singing and minstrelsy were in their infancy and any subject that could be wrought into a ballad was eagerly picked up. This was the case with 'Dixie.' It originated in New York and assumed the proportions of a song there.
In its travels it has been enlarged and has gathered moss. It has picked up a note here and there, a chorus has been added to it and from an indistinct chant of two or three notes, it has become an elaborate melody. But the fact that it is not a southern song can be rubbed out. The fallacy is so popular to the contrary that I have thus been at pains to state the real origin

of it.

Thus I have tried to give you the two versions of "Dixie." I can only say all hail the bonny blue flag and Dixie's land of the South!

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climatic condition
in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better
at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakened cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer climate, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives
there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. For sale by Woods & Orme. No. 10, -alternate.

Poems

BY RUSTIC

The following short poems, written by our able rural poet while in a humorous vein, are worthy of perusal and contain a little philosophical bit of verse:

PROTECTION OR FREE TRADE?
"Were you allowed to vote?" said I As through the sheltered lane we strayed.
"For what would you vote? Please make reply,
Protection or free trade?"

The gentle maiden hung her head
While to her cheek the color flew;
"I would not care to vote," she said,
"I'd rather pair with you."

Gez whiz! Well—er—a—nevertheless —notwithstanding—however—

"Twas then I kissed her!
I couldn't help it; she was such a dear!
And as I knew no one else was near—
I simply kissed her."

She fairly spun it!
Her black eyes flashed, her cheeks
flushed rosy red;
"I do not want your horrid kiss," she said—

So she returned it.

EPITAPH ON A TIRED WOMAN.

Here lies a poor woman who always was tired
For she lived in a place where help
wasn't hired;
Her last words on earth were: "Dear friends, I am going Where washing ain't done, nor sweeping nor sewing;
And every thing there is exact to my wishes,
For where they don't eat there's no
washing of dishes;
I'll be where loud anthems forever are ringing,
But, having no voice, I'll get rid of singing;
Don't sing for me now! Weep for me never!
For I'm going to do nothin'—forever
and ever."

N. B.—Now, I knowed that want.
Nothin' niver did suit her. She haint had no more troubles to bear than the rest of us, but you never seed her that she didn't have a whole chapter to lay before you. I've got as much feelin'
as the next one, but when folks drive in their spiggets and want to draw a bucketful of compassion every day, right straight along, then do come times when it seems as if the bar'l was gettin' low. I'm glad she's gone, so I am, and so is more'n me—now!

CURE FOR HAY FEVER

Haynes & Taylor Say Hyomei Will Give Relief—Sold Under Guarantee.

The season for hay fever is almost at hand, and many people feel that they will be obliged to go away in order to avoid the sneezing, watery eyes, and other annoying symptoms of this disagreeable summer disease.

Haynes & Taylor wish us to announce that when Hyomei is used as a preventive, or a cure, there will be no hay fever. They advise daily treatment with Hyomei for two or three weeks before the usual time for the annual appearance of hay fever. If this is done, the attack will be prevented.
However, if the preventive treatment is not started soon enough, and the disease makes its appearance, use Hyomei six or seven times daily, and relief will be given at once.

There is no stomach dosing when Hyomei is used. Breathed through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, its medicated air reaches the minutest air cells, killing all germs
and soothing and healing the irritated mucous membrane.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1, extra bottles 50 cents. It is the only treatment for hay fever sold by Haynes & Taylor under a guarantee to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.

Notice.

All parties holding claims against the estate of T. A. McAmis deceased, are hereby notified to present same properly proven within 90 days from date hereof to the undersigned Administrator at Tolu Ky., and those owing his estate must prepare to meet their indebtedness at once. I also have a lot of store room fixtures including counters, show cases, etc., for sale the property of said decedent. This Aug. 22,

HYOMEI WAS USED WITH PERFECT SUCCESS

As a Remedy For Hay Fever After Trying Other Treatments.

Before the discovery of Hyomei the only advice a physician could give ha
hay fever patients was to go away from home, but now anyone who is subject to this disease can, if Hyomei is used, stay at home without fear of the annual attack of sneezing, water eyes and other discomforts.

J. F. Forbes, a well known Western railroad man, whose home is at Mc-Cook, Nebraska, writes "I have never had any relief from any remedy for hay fever, even temporarily, until I discovered the merits of Hyomei. I always recommend it when occasion requires."

There is no offensive or dangerous
stomach dosing when Hyomei is used.
This reliable remedy for the cure of all diseases of the respiratory organs is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, so that he air taken into the throat and lungs is like that of the White Mountains or other health resorts, where hay fever is unknown.

The fact that Haynes & Taylor agree to refund the money to any hay fever sufferer who uses Hyomei without success, should inspire confidence in its power to effect a cure. A complete outfit costs only $1.00 and extra bottles
but 50 cents.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON IX, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 27.

Text of the Lesson, Jer. xxxviii, 1-13. Memory Verses, 8-10—Golden Text, Matt. v, 10—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1905, by American Press Association.]

This lesson might with propriety be entitled the hatred of the rulers, or the weakness of the king, or the compassion of Ebed-melech, or, better still, the Lord's care of His servant. When the Lord sent Jeremiah forth as His servant He said to him, "They shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee, for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee" (Jer. i, 19), and both of these Jeremiah proved fully as the Lord's messenger. Two very prominent truths concerning man in the Scriptures are, "The carnal mind is enmity against God" and "The whole world lieth in the wicked one" (Rom. viii, 7; I John v, 19, Rev. xvi, 12). These are true of all people and all times since sin entered upon our planet.

On the other hand, it is plainly revealed that "God is love," that He is "long suffering and not willing that any should perish" (I John iv, 8, 10; II Pet. iii, 9). But there always have been, are now and will be till the kingdom comes those who while professing to be on the Lord's side pervert His truth and deceive His people and lead them into trouble. In Jer. v, 30, it is written, "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land; the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means, and my people love to have it so, and what will ye do in the end thereof?" In Jer. xxi, 9-11, we read that the people would not hear the law of the Lord, but said, "Speak unto us smooth things; prophesy deceits; cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us."

In the opening verses of our lesson we find just such as these among the princes of Judah saying to the king that Jeremiah ought to be put to death because of his words and that he was not seeking the welfare of the people. Jeremiah was a messenger of righteousness from the Lord, but the people wanted neither God nor His righteous (chapter ii, 13).

The weak and worthless king Zedekiah said to the rulers that he would not resist them, that Jeremiah was in their hands and they might do what they would with him, yet he was on the throne of the Lord as the representative of righteousness (II Chron. ix, 8). The last days of this evil age in which we are now living are very similar to the last days of Judah as she was carried into captivity; the word of God is dishonored by many preachers and teachers, and the Lord Jesus Himself is respected as the Son of God, but He shall overcome and shall reign, for it is the eternal purpose of God (Eph. iii, 11; Rev. xi, 15).

We are either with Christ or against Him, and if we receive not the word of God as He did we are certainly not with Him. If we stand with Him, believing all that is written in the law and the prophets, we must expect no better treatment than He and the prophets received (John xv, 18-20; Acts xxiv, 14). Jeremiah in the filthy dungeon was a more prosperous man than Zedekiah and his counselors. See Gen. xxxix, 2, 21, 23; Acts xvi, 22-25. All who will live godly lives must expect persecution and tribulation, for the devil is still the god of this world, the prince of the world (John xiv, 30; xvi, 11; II Cor. iv, 4).

Ebed-melech, whose name signifies "servant of a king," was evidently a servant of the True King whom Zedekiah so misrepresented, for he became Jeremiah's deliverer, and the Lord specially remembered him in the time of trouble (chapter xxxix, 15-18), for He counts all kindness done to His people as if done to Himself (Matt. xxv, 40, 45). Not only did Ebed-melech take Jeremiah out of the dungeon, but he did it kindly and tenderly in providing old cast cloths and rotten rags for him to put under the ropes that the ropes might not hurt him, not only does God see every act, but He notes how the action is done and the motive, and in giving Him any service it would be well to remember that our Lord still "beholds how" (Mark xii, 41).

Jeremiah's filthy dungeon suggests the horrible pit and mire clay in which every sinner is till rescued, but how few seem to know of the Rock and the New Song and the privilege of being deliverers of the perishing (I Ps. xi, 2, 3). The sinner is as helpless to deliver himself as Jeremiah was (Rom. iii, 19, 20; v, 6), but God, who is not willing that any should perish, has provided a ransom and is pleading for messengers to tell the good news (II Pet. iii, 9; Job xxxiii, 23, 24; Isa. vi, 8).

Ebed-melech was so sorry for Jeremiah in his trouble that he did not seem to consider that he was only a servant and that the princes and the king were the cause of the prophet's suffering. The woman of Samaria in the joy of her new life and in her desire that her townsmen should have the same joy seemed to forget all about herself as she carried to them the glad tidings.

When we have really found a Saviour who has without a doubt saved us and filled us with the joy of being redeemed and know that others might have the same joy if they only knew Him, we will be very apt to forget all about ourselves and act as Ebed-melech and the woman of Samaria. If we do not thus act it would seem that we are more occupied with ourselves than with Christ and His salvation or with sinners and their need. Dr. Torrey says that Ebed-melech had a black skin, but a white heart.

TRAVELERS BECOME COSTIVE!

The change in diet and drinking water, the motion of the cars, the irregular habits of travelers, no matter whether they travel on business all the time or for pleasure occasionally, usually result in a constipated condition of the bowels or some stomach or bowel trouble.

Travelers should always have a bottle of

with them. It is a pleasant liquid laxative and a certain cure for sick headache, train sickness and all stomach trouble. Your druggist sells it in 50 Cent and One Dollar bottles.

W. P. Gaines, of Little Rock, Ark., Traveling Salesman for the Smith-Premier Typewriter Co., writes: "While traveling through western Arkansas, in February last, I had a severe attack of Acute Indigestion. There was no doctor at hand, and I was suffering terribly. Your agent handed me a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin (which at that time was unknown to me). I took two doses and was relieved at once, and I took it a few more times when I got on the road I am perfectly cured. I consider it as essential to my order book, and can do nothing equal to it for stomach trouble and Constipation."

Public Is Aroused.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St. Clair Ave., Columbia, O., writes: "For several months I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep and my stomach was so weak from useless doctors' drugs that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed at Haynes & Taylor's drug store; price 50c.

A Touching Story

is the saving from death of the baby girl of Geo. A. Eyler, Cumberland, Md. He writes: "At the age of 11 months our little girl was in declining health with serious Throat Trouble and two physicians gave her up. We were almost in despair when we resolved to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. The first bottle gave relief; after taking four bottles she was cured and is now in perfect health." Never fails to relieve and cure a cough or cold. At Haynes & Taylor's drug store; 50c and $1.00 guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. The books of the Home Law School Series are designed especially for young men. Never before has a complete education in one of the noblest and most practical of the sciences been brought within the reach of every young man. Lincoln was a Lawyer, Home Trained, who had great faith in the powers of the young man, and the following extract from one of his letters shows how he urged them to "push forward."

"The possession and use of a set of books will not only enable but stimulate every young man to 'push forward' and bring out the best that is in him, attaining a higher and more honored station in life than he could hope to attain without them."

The Lawyer of to-day is the right hand to every great business undertaking. In politics and statesmanship the Lawyer stands pre-eminent. He is credited with judgment and discretion, and his advice controls in all important matters. Every commercial enterprise of any importance has its salaried legal adviser. There is a great demand for young men with knowledge of Law. Any man can Reward will be paid to any person who can find one atom of opium, chloral, morphine, cocaine, ether or chloroform in any form in any of Dr. Miles' Remedies.

This reward is offered because certain unscrupulous persons make false statements about these remedies. It is understood that this reward applies only to goods purchased in the open market, which have not been tampered with in any way. Dr. Miles' remedies cure by their soothing, nourishing, strengthening and invigorating effects upon the nervous system, and not by paralyzing and weakening the nerves as would be the case if these drugs were used.

For this reason Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are universally considered the best pain remedy. "I have suffered for 25 years with severe pains in my head, heart and back, and have tried everything I could get and could not find any relief until I got a box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. I suffered as long as 12 hours at a time with such severe pains that I feared I would lose my mind. The Anti-Pain Pills gave me relief in from 10 to 25 minutes. I do not have to use Morphine any more, I wish you would publish this so that other sufferers may find relief."

L. A. WALKER, Salem, Ind.
Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first package will benefit. If it fails he will return your money. 25 doses, 25 cents. Never sold in bulk. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.
