THE JUDGE TOWERY CASE UNMASKED!

And How the Attempt to Ruin the Judge Came to Grief.

In answer to that part of statement in last week's issue of the Crittenden Record, in the case referred to against the prominent republican official, we would like to correct a little mistake which of course our neighbor overlooked; and that is, in leaving the impression on the minds of readers that the grand jury which found that groundless indictment referred to was composed of democrats, his statement is wholly untrue.

An examination of the records in the circuit clerk's office of our county reveals the fact that four members of the grand jury were republicans, thus giving them the power to defeat any political scheme that might have been brought about by a democratic try.

We further say, that instead of cashing that infamous scheme against the distinguished official referred to, is a fact and can be proven that three democratic jurors on that famous jury were opposed to finding any indictment against said official or signing the name of Jim Sullivan to a bond certificate for Mr. Henderson and Mr. Guess. Therefore it plain to be seen that in order to secure an indictment in that particular case it was necessary for every republican on the jury to vote for the finding of said indictment.

Again, reasoning from another standpoint, supposing that the grand jury which brought about this shameful indictment, had been composed of democrats altogether, and they had been so disposed to bring about such political scheme, what would have been the result? The answer is plain--seen that Judge Towery, who is an official to whom reference is made, would have an opportunity to expose our action and the result could have been an increased majority for his party at the poles next November.

Again, they say that Judge Towery was an innocent man, indicted by democratic grand jury at the request of a democratic commonwealth attorney. If that be true where was your republican county attorney that he did not intercede in behalf of Judge Towery and stay the hand of cruelty. And why did republican candidates take advantage of this misfortune of Judge Towery and send the news to every voting precinct in the county, telling republicans not to vote for him because the democrats had indicted him. If you believed him to be innocent then why did you not come out then and expose that cruel act as you do now?

Here is the list of names of the members of that grand jury who served at the March term, 1905, when that indictment was found against Judge Towery:

P. B. Croft	Democrat
Monti Davenport	"
E. H. Bigham	"
P. C. Stephens	"
G. D. Kemp	"
Norman Hoover	Republican
Otis Hughes	Democrat
Monroe Gilbert	"
James Paris	"
John L. Curry	Republican
Thomas Matthews	"
Joe A. Crayne	"

It is an undeniable fact that the republican members of that famous grand jury insisted and did press this charge against Judge Towery at the closing hour of said grand jury session. The people we hope will look at this part of our circuit court's history, and for themselves let the guilty bear the blame.

In answer to the charge that every democratic lawyer at the bar volunteered his services to defend Judge Towery, we are proud to say is true. It is not only true in this particular case but we remember another instance in this county where our esteemed friend, Mr. John L. Pickens, who is now your campaign chairman, had a damage suit filed against him in our circuit court, for shooting and wounding some one while trying to escape from custody we find the democratic lawyers volunteering their services in his behalf.

SCHOOL OPENED MONDAY.

The first day of school is always one of great interest to the children and last Monday was no exception to the rule in Marion for it seems as if every child in the district, regardless of age, was there all eager for the time of study to begin.

The new and beautiful auditorium was filled to overflowing with parents and the friends of the institution who had attended out of interest in the school which has always been great here, coupled with the desire to see the new teacher take the reins in his hands.

Suffice it to say that every one was well pleased with the exercises, the principal's address and with the professor himself. As to his support it is of the best talent obtainable. Following is a list of the faculty:

Prof. Victor G. Kee Principal.
Miss Margaret Moore, 8th grade.
Miss Frances Gray, 7th grade.
Miss Kitty Moore 6th & 5th grade
Miss Sadie Rankin, 4th grade.
Miss Florence Harris, 3d grade.
Miss Lena Woods, 2d grade.
Mrs. Fannie Walker, 1st grade
Mrs. J. W. Trisler, music.
Miss Lily Doss, "

To the Voters of Crittenden Co.

Having been solicited by numerous friends and nominated by my party, I have decided to become a candidate for the office of County Attorney of Crittenden county.

While I am a democrat, and my name will appear on that ticket, yet at the same time I submit my claim to the consideration of the voters of all parties, and if the people favor me as their choice, I promise a faithful and honest discharge of the duties of the office, and no feelings of partisan kind shall have a place therein.

Trusting that I may have your support and influence in this, my first race for office, and assuring you that I shall never lose an opportunity to show my appreciation of it, I am respectfully,

THOS. W. CHAMPION.

A Builder of Lakes.

R. W. Wilson has just completed the excavating at the old Lake on his hill farm and has made it better than ever. He is now scraping out another one on his land in the rear of the R. D. Moore house on the rail road. The dump being thrown up will hold back a fine sheet of water at this place. The water supply is Marion's greatest need.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE NEW RECRUIT!

Showing the Political Antics of Dr. Robert Love Moore!

Dr. Moore, in accepting the republican nomination for State Senator in this district used the following language:

"The democrats met in convention in Kansas City in 1895, and declared for free and unlimited coinage of silver; the republicans met in Chicago about a month afterward and declared for a single gold standard, and promised the people prosperity."

Further along he uses this language:

"I consider the republican party the greatest political organization in the world today, abreast of the times and up-to-date."

Now, the republican party may be abreast of the times, and, above all things else, may be "up-to-date," but the Doctor is certainly not up-to-date. For in saying that the democrats met in Kansas City in 1895 he is just five years back of the date they met there, for history tells us they met there in 1900. And he is likewise nine years behind the times as to when the republicans met at Chicago. For the facts are; the democrats met in Kansas City in the year 1900, and the republicans met in Philadelphia in the year 1900, in St. Louis in the year 1896, and in the city of Chicago in 1904. So, if the republican party is up-to-date, the distinguished Doctor is behind the date. The truth is, this man of mystery has kept his politics hidden from public gaze as successfully as Sherlock Holmes ever concealed his intentions in trying to unravel some baffling crime. The Doctor, in reality, was a democrat five years longer than he thought he was, because he says he did not leave us until we declared for free silver in Kansas City in 1895. But what is five years with this man, of such wonderful convictions, love of country and exalted patriotism? But we recall when he says that the republicans met at Chicago about a month afterwards and declared for the gold standard, and knowing that the republicans have not met in Chicago in national convention until 1904, for the last ten years, again the Doctor is nine years behind the date; and was a democrat nine years longer than he thought he was, if he did not leave us until we met at Kansas City, and that was in 1900, and did not join the republicans until they met in Chicago in 1904. Where was the Doctor between 1900 and 1904?

But let us see, was it the money question which drove the Doctor out of the democratic party? In 1895 the democrats of this good county of Crittenden instructed its delegates to cast the vote of the county for this same Doctor Moore, then a democrat, for railroad commissioner. The same convention instructed for free and unlimited coinage of silver at 16 to 1. This delegation went to Owensboro and did all in its power to secure the nomination for this same Dr. R. L. Moore upon a platform which declared for the same free and unlimited coinage of silver at 16 to 1. Why is it, Doctor, that you declare you left the democratic party because it declared for free and unlimited coinage of silver, and you were struggling to get the democratic party to nominate you in this Owensboro convention on a platform declaring for free silver? Has your patriotism become of a better type? When did the light burst upon you that you turn now and declare that you have betrayed the party because it declared for free silver, upon which character of platform you were willing to go to the country and beg suffrage of the people for railroad commissioner. Does anybody today believe the Doctor would be a follower of the flag of republicanism if he had been nominated by this democratic convention for railroad commissioner, upon a free silver platform? He would today be sucking the public teat and singing sweet psalms to the democratic cow to stand easy until the pail would overflow.

But who knew the Doctor was a republican until six months ago. Even his most intimate friends believed him to be a democrat until that time. But now his republicanism becomes effervescent. He wants it written upon the skies, because he wants an office. Where are going, Doctor, when the boys trim you in November, which they are certain to do?

The republicans do not like the character of stuff that makes a quitter, and they do not like the fellow who changes his political opinions between the sunset and its rise.

Republicans, many there are in this county, men of convictions--convictions sincerely held for a lifetime, will be unwilling to follow you. Who knows, whether you ever voted the Republican ticket or not? It is a secret ballot. You never attended a republican convention until you were nominated by this one. You contributed to the democratic campaign fund, according to your own statement the last time Harry Haynes ran. Say, when in reality was this sudden change?

Again, we read from this remarkable speech of his, "I am in favor of so amending the election laws as to allow the people to place the candidates' name under as many devices as they choose. It is the only way to develop his strength." Now, look here, Doc, we do not blame you for being in favor of this law. You think you can fool all the parties. Been a democrat, ran for Mayor as a prohibitionist, and now join the republican party and declaring for referendum in questions of vital importance to the people, a known tenet of populism. Your idea we presume, by favoring a law of this character, is to get under all the devices. Doctor, you will find out though, before you are very old in your new fledged convictions, that no matter how many devices a man has his name under, that voters will not for this reason support him. He must stand for something. If he has convictions he must proclaim them and not conceal them. If you were opposed to free silver you ought to have said so to the democracy of your own county, and refused to allow your name to be presented to the Owensboro convention, not wait until nine long years have elapsed and then turn up declaring that you have been a republican all the time.

Taft, the Optimist

Genial Secretary of War, Who Has Been Fighting the Chinese Boycott

Personal Side of a Statesman Who Tips the Scales at Three Hundred—Special Chair and Desk Made For His Use

Despises Affectation and False Dignity—Full of Patience and Tact and a Hard Worker—Has a Laugh That Carries Far

Fond of Jokes—Good Story Teller—Striking Tribute to His Popularity—Life Ambition Is to Be on the Supreme Bench

WHAT with his trip to the Philippines, Hawaii, Japan and China and his attempts to settle the Chinese boycott, William Howard Taft has been much in the public eye of late. Taft is such a large man, physically and otherwise, that it is hard for him to keep out of the public eye. Tom Reed once said that no gentleman weighs over 200 pounds. The secretary of war has revised this and says that no gentleman weighs over 300 pounds. Yet there are those who assert that the genial peace man at the head of the war portfolio tips the scales at 320. It is an old story, but a good one, that while governor general of the Philippines Taft wired to Secretary Root that he had ridden to the top of a mountain near Manila and had been wonderfully benefited by the trip, to which Root called back: "Glad to hear you are better. How is the horse?"

When President Roosevelt was killing bears in Texas and Colorado he left Taft holding down three jobs—secretary of war, acting secretary of state and acting president. In Rooseveltian phraseology, he "left Taft sitting on the lid." The threefold duty did not seem to worry the big Ohio man. Nothing ever does. But some one should have inquired, "How is the L.P.?"

Smiles From Ear to Ear.

One of the biggest things about Secretary Taft is his smile. It literally spreads from ear to ear. A still bigger thing, however, is his laugh. It is frequently heard, carries far and is so infectious that it spreads good nature all around the neighborhood. While not as good a story teller as Lincoln, the Buckeye statesman is quite as appreciative of a joke and enjoys his own so much that every one else must enjoy them also.

Here is one of the stories Secretary Taft told in a lecture that contains a bit of his optimistic philosophy:

"People—the poorest and most wretched people—are happier than we think, as a rule. To eat when one is hungry, to sleep well and comfortably, to warm oneself after a day's work in the cold—are not they who have these things often happy enough?"

"No matter how wretched we are, we hold that our lot is not a bad one, and we pity some one worse off. In a storm at sea one night two sailors, their clothing frozen to their bodies, hung to a rope as the waves washed over them.

"I say, Bill," says one. " 'Wot is it, mate?' says the other. 'Think of the poor fellows caught at a picnic in such weather as this.'"

At one time Taft, then governor of the Philippines, was giving testimony before a senate committee. After one of the hearings a senator remarked: "Well, governor, there's one thing to be said in favor of our holding those islands, and that is that you've enough unchanged Filipinos over there to turn out sufficient hemp to string up all the rascals in the world."

"True," responded Governor Taft. "I hadn't thought of that before." Then he added laughingly, "And your remark throws a flood of light upon the secret of the strenuous opposition from certain quarters in this country against the importation of hemp from Manila into the United States."

Here is another of the big Buckeye's yarns: Taft has a friend who is a farmer near a Maine Prohibition town. A stranger once went into the farmer's house, says the secretary, and asked for a glass of whisky, milk and sugar. The stranger, after draining the cup, handed it back and remarked: "My Lord, what a cow!"

Too Big For Ordinary Chairs.

When made secretary of war, Taft could not find a chair or desk large enough for him. Nor could any be found in Washington. He had to have some made especially for his size. Even the stairway leading up to his office had to be overhauled and a new balustrade erected. In the cabinet ed the big man he could not conceal his emotion. A year later he himself attended the dinner and feelingly referred to the episode and the cheer he had felt because his old friends had not forgotten him. Then, as if moved by a common impulse, every man present roared out: "Confound you, Bill Taft, forgotten you! Why, we love you."

After leaving college Taft was a reporter on one of the Cincinnati papers, at the same time taking a course in a law school. A particularly scurrilous article appeared in a disreputable local paper reflecting on his father. Whereupon the young man so soundly whipped the editor that the publication of the sheet was suspended. The episode made "Big Bill" the hero of the hour in Cincinnati and was said to be the start of his phenomenally successful career. It was at about this time that another incident occurred which illustrates the quality of the man.

Poor Company Better Than None.

One day when driving near Cincinnati Mr. Taft was asked by a pedestrian the way to a certain village. Taft told him, said he was going in the desired direction and offered the stranger a ride. The stranger climbed into the carriage, with the churlish remark that poor company was better than none. During the ride he was unsociable, haughty and uncongenial. "How about that branch road I was to take?" he asked at length. "Oh," said Taft, "we passed that six miles back." "Why didn't you tell me?" asked the stranger in anger. "Because I didn't want to lose your society," was Taft's reply. "Poor company, you know, is better than none."

It must not be imagined, however, that Judge Taft is only a man of humor. As all life thrives in the sunshine, so all the virtues are fostered by optimism. The fact that a man is a good fellow does not argue that he is nothing more. Taft is much more. He is one of the hardest workers in public life. He has large patience and tact. He despises affectation and false dignity. He likes genuine things.

Learned Filipino Dances and Customs.

His life ambition was to be on the supreme bench. This he sacrificed because President McKinley convinced him that duty called him to the Philippines. There the keynote of his policy was "the Philippines for the Filipinos." He made many enemies among the whites by that course, but he carried it forward through dark days to success. He abolished the social color line in the islands. He learned the native dances and customs, so that he could enter into their life. He kept on with his work at the expense of health. The love which that people have recently shown him is the most eloquent testimonial to the triumph of his policy.

Secretary Taft was born Sept. 15, 1857, and comes of a distinguished family. His father was Grant's attorney general and secretary of war, and one of his brothers is editor of the Cincinnati Times-Star. The adage that few public officials die and none resign does not apply to Taft. He has many resignations and declinations to his credit. He has resigned at least nine times, but generally to accept higher positions, and has declined an appointment to the United States supreme bench and if rumor is to be credited room he had the same difficulty with the chairs. After trying them all he gave it up.

"I believe," said Taft smilingly, "that these chairs are a trifle low. I don't like them."

"Well, governor," replied Secretary Root quick as a flash, remembering that this was his last cabinet meeting, "there are ways by which people can be got out of them."

Most Popular in College.

At Yale Taft was known as "Big Bill" and "Pork Bill," the first of which appellations has clung to him through life. He was an athlete and especially in evidence in class rushes and scrimmages. Notwithstanding this he stood high in his studies and carried off the second honor in a class of 129. He was one of the most popular men in college, a fact that has been amply attested in after life. At the time of one annual class dinner Taft was lying ill in Manila at probably the darkest hour in his career. A telegram was handed him signed by his former classmates attesting their affection and sympathy, and it was touch-the governorship of Ohio and the presidency of Yale.

In 1886 Secretary Taft married Miss Helen Herron, daughter of John W. Herron, who was once a United States district attorney in Cincinnati. Mrs. Taft is a woman of much tact and has won many friends for both her husband and herself. They have several children, and the family circle is a charming one. Mrs. Taft is very popular in Washington society and is fond of entertaining her many friends.

Judge Taft is over six feet in height and despite his weight is agile and athletic. His favorite recreation is horseback riding, and he is an accomplished horseman, even if he does have to use a stepladder to mount.

President Roosevelt once said of Taft that he combined the qualities of a president and a chief justice. That one of these exalted honors awaits him his friends all believe. He himself would prefer the bench. They would choose for him the White House. The future will have a word to say about the matter, and that mysterious divinity does unexpected things.

J. A. EDGERTON.

JAMES AT CHICAGO.

He Stood Among the Foremost in that Brilliant Assembly of the National Democracy.

We give below a few extracts from the brilliant speech of Hon. O. M. James, delivered before the Jefferson Club of Chicago last week, on the occasion of a farewell dinner to Hon. William Jennings Bryan. This was probably the greatest assemblage of Democrats of national reputation that has taken place in this country in the past half century, and its action clearly points to Mr. Bryan as the acknowledged leader of the national democracy and its logical candidate for the presidency.

Mr. James said:—

"The Democratic party of the United States looks to Bryan as the leader; he stands for something; he has convictions and the courage to express them; no longer do the six and a half millions of loyal Democrats look to the East. The wise men used to be there, but with star of empire westward they have taken their way. Listening no longer to the siren song of 'Anything to Win,' no longer deluded by the promise of campaign contributions, we bravely nail at the masthead of Democracy this motto: 'What shall it profit the Democratic party if it gain all the trusts and lose the common people?'"

"The Democrats of the South greet their Democratic brethren of the country and beg for harmony—the harmony that 'despise the gain of oppressions,' the harmony that 'shaketh its hands from the holding of bribes,' the harmony that 'stoppeh its ears from the hearing of blood, and shutteth its eyes from seeing evil;' for we are promised that those who keep this faith shall dwell on high; their place of defense shall be the munition of rocks.' We call with this motto for harmony the leader that we love, the one who marshaled back of his banner the mightiest army of unbought freemen that ever marched to the ballot-box, not one of whom was fattening by unjust laws. Kentucky, whose Democracy has been tried in blood, declares that with the passing years her love grows the greater for Bryan, Bryan, Bryan."

The entire speech of Mr. James was greeted with hearty cheers, and his eulogy of Bryan elicited an outburst of thunderous applause. If any better evidence were needed that Mr. James' sphere of influence and usefulness has extended beyond State lines the prominent position accorded him in this vast assemblage of Democratic leaders of the country has certainly furnished it.

Swore He Would Kill the Judge.

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 12.—"I solemnly swear, before God and man, if I can possibly escape from the penitentiary to which you have sentenced me, I will come back and kill you, Judge Wilkerson, and every member of that jury returning the verdict against me." So swore Henry Harmon, a young man of good family, found guilty of murder in the second degree and who has gone to Moundsville to spend the remainder of his life, unless he escapes from that institution.

Harmon had faced the court seven times on the charge of murder. He was convicted at the present term on the charge of killing James Newsome. He was once convicted of murder, but escaped through a technicality. The other charges were not substantiated.

Harmon was found guilty of killing Deputy Sheriff Murphy from ambush, several weeks ago. Harmon had mistaken Sheriff Robert Murphy for another man.

Harmon belongs to an influential family and being a desperate character will no doubt attempt to make his escape, in which event he will try to carry out his threat.

MODERN CLIFF DWELLERS

THE SKY SCRAPERS OF BIG CITIES
TAKING PLACE OF HOMES.

Not Only Used for Office Buildings,
But Occupied by Thousands of Families.

When the United States Consul in Europe says to his visiting countryman, "Come over to my house this afternoon and have a cup of tea with us," the listener makes a careful memorandum of the address, and towards five o'clock goes out in search of an unpretentious dwelling such as the modest salary of a consul might warrant. What he finds at the address given him is a big square building, into which he is admitted by an unseen porter, and the innumerable stairs of which he climbs, examining brass doorplates at every landing, until at last he comes to the apartment of his host.

Mr. W. J. Bryan, on his recent trip abroad, finding one of our Ambassadors similarly lodged, the only difference being the increased rental, inquired against it as being un-American. He wanted to know why a nice American home wasn't provided—such a house as would give the unlucky foreigner some idea of how we live in America. Mr. Bryan overlooked the fact that in our own big cities his "ideal American home" is rapidly disappearing, and that long before our metropolis is one-tenth the age of the European capitals, increase of population and greater need for economy have rendered unattainable the modest individual home, and will have driven city dwellers together under one roof in apartment houses whose size is limited only by the confines of the block and the building laws regulating height.

Private Homes Disappearing.

Twenty-five years ago the New Yorker who possessed an annual income of $10,000 lived in his own house and kept a carriage. The New Yorker of today with only $10,000 a year buys an apartment for the mere rent of which he expects to pay not less than $1,800, and he cannot afford a carriage. The trouble is that on the island of Manhattan there is not room for its millions to live in the old-fashioned way, and the cost of living has increased enormously.

They must suspend their dwellings high above the ground, every foot of which is worth a king's ransom. There is no room for the stately houses of revolutionary days—they are swept away for the warehouses of great mercantile companies. There is no room for the smaller brick houses of the past generation—their fronts are pulled off and replaced with the immense plate glass windows of the "exclusive importers." There is no room for churches—they are torn down to make space for annexes to the mammoth apartment houses.

New York, which offers the best example of the metamorphosis, is, of course, the most un-American of American cities. The Italian walking up from the Battery finds himself at home; here are the high tenements of Naples, Genoa, Venice. The Austrian and the Hungarian land among fa-son avenue and it is a long block from the park. But it is on the "east side"—and fashionable. The third street beyond it is roaring day and night with the flight of the elevated trains, and beyond that lies one of the poorest sections of New York City, where the children swarm like ants.

West of Central Park, the apartment buildings are still bigger, not so exclusive, and the prices are lower. On Broadway, above Columbus Circle, or Fifty-ninth street, where the Park begins, a fairly comfortable seven-room apartment in one of the smaller buildings, without elevators, may be had for $100 a month and upward. In the bigger twelve and fifteen story structures, where the apartments range from eight to twelve rooms, rents run from $2,500 a year up to $4,000 or $5,000, at least. In the best known of these a creamy white fifteen-story building, adorned with innumerable grilles from balconies painted green, one may secure a bachelor suite, consisting of parlor, bedroom and bath, unfurnished, for the mere pittance of $3,000 a year.

Tiny Hives for Homes.

On Riverside Drive rates are lower. The Drive is the most beautiful residence street in the city, but it is far from Fifth avenue, and the wind blowing in over five miles of bay and river is distressingly harsh during the winter. Here for $1,800 one may find an apartment comprising a parlor, a library (by courtesy so called), three bedrooms, bath, dining-room, pantry, servant's millar surroundings; here are the square-built palaces of Vienna and Budapest. The Russian suffers no homesickness; here are the narrow streets of St. Petersburg and Moscow. Only the native American, with his lungs full of country air, and his mind filled with the picture of sunny, cottage-lined village streets, stifles in the dust and noxious gases, gazes wonder-struck at the sky-scrapers.

GRAMERCY PARK, NEW YORK CITY, HISTORIC RESIDENCES OF SAMUEL J. TILDEN, JOHN BIGELOW AND OTHER FAMOUS AMERICANS SHOWN ON THE RIGHT SOON TO GIVE WAY TO ADDITIONAL TOWERING SKY SCRAPERS.

Fit Only for Paupers and Millionaires

It is these new comers, too, who do their share toward changing the appearance of the city. Wherever they congregate, and the migratory impulse seems to carry them no further than the foreign sections of the cities in which they land, they make life intolerable for the American-born, and thus drive out the moderately prosperous from the less expensive localities, until it is only the paupers and the millionaires who can afford to live in New York.

Seven thousand dollars a year for an apartment in New York is not, by any means, the highest price. There are buildings on Fifth Park, and Madison avenues between 50th and 110th streets in which some of the apartments rent for $15,000 a year. Yet, with the exception of Fifth avenue which runs along the east side of Central Park, these avenues are not particularly beautiful. The electric cars run on Madison avenue and kitchen. All light rooms, the advertisement says. The dining-room is very pretty. There is a big square alcove window, but coming up in front of it to darken the meal hours is another big steel and stone structure. The bedrooms look out over the city, but already the contractors are tearing down the neighboring houses and the blank white wall of still another giant hive will soon shut the air and light from the sleeping rooms.

Nashington is a city of such magnificent distances that people who could otherwise afford to build in the suburbs are obliged to move into apartments in order to be near enough to their offices to insure punctuality in business hours. In addition, for some unaccountable reason, property even on the outskirts of the capital is by no means cheap.

Chicago has a passion for flat life and sky-scrapers. Even San Francisco, the city of shingles, is turning her streets into canyons of brick and mortar.

The American traveler who asks "why" of the monotonous streets of Berlin, Paris, Vienna, Madrid, that stretch between endless walls broken only by window or fantastic balcony, may find the answer in the changing character of his own cities—saving space, money, time.

OPEN DOOR IN CHINA.

POLICY IS ASSURED AS RESULT OF RUSSIAN-JAPANESE WAR.

Statistics of the Year Indicate the Enormous Market Opened for American Goods in Manchuria.

With the close of the Russo-Japanese war the "open door" in Manchuria was assured for all time. Russia had told the world that she would see that the trade of Manchuria would be kept free to all nations alike, and that in the event of her victory the United States need never fear trade discriminations there. But while Russia has a traditional friendship for this country the policies of the nation do not inspire confidence that there will be no discrimination against our goods under any circumstances.

But with the victories of war declared in favor of Japan and with the present status of Manchuria fixed for all time in favor of Chinese sovereignty, the world is assured that there will be an open door there for the trade of all nations. To the United States, and especially for the states of the South, there should be a feeling of congratulation over this aspect of the situation, and the fruition of Secretary Hay's most cherished hopes.

Great Increase in Trade.

The trade of the United States with China has been going forward with bounding strides in recent years. The larger part of that trade is with Manchuria, which constitutes about one-tenth of Chinese territory and is located along her northern boundary line. About half of that trade is in cotton and the consumption of coarse cotton goods manufactured chiefly in the South is constantly increasing. The boycott of Chinese merchants is the only occurrence that has tended to hamper that trade, and it is expected that American tact will, in the near future, succeed in lifting the ban that has been placed on these goods which the Chinese want and which can be secured by them from this country cheaper than from anywhere else.

During July the United States sold to China goods worth about four millions of dollars. During that same month of the previous year the sales amounted to less than half of that value. During the seven months ending last July we sold to China over thirty-seven millions worth of goods, which was about four times the amount of our exports there during the same period of the previous year. Those figures indicate the rapidity of the trade advances that have been made by American manufacturers in China.

Manchurians Like American Goods.

The people of Manchuria, living in a cool climate, prefer the coarse and strong cotton weave that is turned out by the mills of the Southern states, while the inhabitants of the southern provinces buy the finer fabrics sent there from England. The American trade advantages that have been gained in China have done much to fire the imagination of the manufacturers of this country, who have long been told of the wonderful market that awaits American products of all kinds in China, but who have only recently had a demonstration of the nature of that market.

Not only is there established an "open door" in Manchuria, but the trade of all China is open to the nations of the world. The duty on goods entering China does not exceed five per cent. ad valorem, except on opium, which trade the Empire desires to discourage. On many articles the duty is less than five per cent. It is levied wholly for the purpose of raising revenue.

The Chinese Boycott.

But at the moment when the "open door" has been established officially in Manchuria the merchants themselves have determined to boycott American goods in retaliation for the exclusive policy toward the Chinese that has been adopted by the United States and for so long has been enforced. When the managers of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition invited China to send exhibits to the world's fair they did not dream that that act would result in trade disadvantages for America. The Chinese responded to the invitation liberally. Among those who came to attend the fair were many wealthy Chinese merchants and men of high standing at their homes. They may have heard of our laws from others, but when they came in contact with Uncle Sam's immigration agents they were humiliated by being treated in a manner they saw was not used toward men of any other race. They finally went home thoroughly mad. They were influential members of the great commercial guilds of China, and they stirred up such a feeling of dislike for the United States that it was not difficult for them to conduct a boycott against American goods and to extend it to all parts of the Empire.

Will Overcome Discrimination.

It is confidently believed in official circles that the diplomacy of the President will be adequate to the emergency in this case as it has been in others. Moreover, so long as superior American goods can be furnished at low prices, it is at the most a question of time when they will triumph. The boycott is not a matter that the Chinese Government can absolutely control, but it is believed the Government will do much to overcome its effects, and that in the near future the trade of the United States with the Chinese Empire will continue to grow at the same wonderful rate that has characterized it in the past.

Japanese Reason for Success.

Baron Komura ascribes the success which Japan has had to a just cause, absolute honesty in the administration of her affairs, and extreme simplicity of life among the masses of her people.

STORY OF AN OLD LOVE.

The Romantic History of Two Sweethearts of the Long Ago Who Discovered Each Other Only to be Separated.

The echo of an old Virginia romance comes from Omaha, where Mrs. Lela Moir, of Lynchburg, Va., has been prostrated over the news that the sweetheart of her youth, whom she has not seen for half a century, but to whom she was en route to be married, had died suddenly, where the marriage was to have taken place upon her arrival.

Before the war, down in Lynchburg, Va., Lela Saunders was one of the belles, while Charlie Clay was one of the best "matches" in the country. The two had been sweethearts from their childhood and were engaged to be married. But a lovers' quarrel occurred and young Clay went West and never wrote home.

In 1902, Miss Saunders married, her husband leaving the following day for the war, and three months later his dead body was brought home.

Husband Was a Mason.

But her husband had been a Mason, and last February the Lynchburg Masonic lodge was asked by the Elmo lodge of Washington State to furnish information concerning Miss Lela Saunders. Shortly after, Mrs. Moir received a letter from the friend of her childhood, Charlie Clay.

He told of his wanderings through the West and his final settlement in the State of Washington, where fortune had favored him with great financial success. He had married, raised a family and had finally lost his wife.

But he had kept the memory of his Virginia sweetheart—his first love—and he had carried her photograph during the fifty years of his absence. He asked her to write. Mrs. Moir did write at once. She, too, had kept the photograph of young Clay which he had given to her when a boy. Further letters followed. She had no children, while all of Mr. Clay's children had homes of their own.

Forgot That They Grew Old.

Throughout the correspondence the two old people remembered each other as they were in their young days and from their photographs. Neither pictured the other as old—they were again the sweethearts of their youth. And then it was arranged that they should be married. Mrs. Moir, sixty-three years old, started West to meet her future husband. Reaching Omaha, she received two telegrams, one that he was very sick, and as she was preparing to hasten to his bedside another came saying that he was dead. The old lady was stricken with grief and taken seriously ill. As soon as she is able to travel she will visit the grave of the man whom she says she has loved all her life.

Ben Butler and New Orleans.

From the Buffalo Express.

It would have done Ben Butler good if he could have lived to see the day when New Orleans would welcome Federal control of a yellow fever epidemic with such enthusiasm that the citizens themselves would raise by popular subscription the money to pay for it as was recently done. General Butler established Federal control of sanitation as of everything else in New Orleans during the war. He was roundly abused for it, but he proved the efficacy of cleanliness and strict quarantine in preventing yellow fever.

MRS. PAYNE WHITNEY, DAUGHTER OF LATE SECRETARY HAY.

LITERARY WORKS OF JOHN HAY

TO BE PUBLISHED BY HIS DAUGHTER

The country approves of John Hay's selection of his literary executor. The work of preparing the former statesman's papers for publication was bequeathed by him to his daughter, Mrs. Payne Whitney, who was Miss Helen Hay. She has inherited much of the high literary talent of her father and has been a frequent contributor to the leading periodicals of both prose and verse. It will be her pleasant duty to prepare for publication the many unpublished manuscripts from Mr. Hay's facile pen.

Mrs. Whitney's first published volume of her own was a collection of poems which appeared in 1898. Quite lately, and principally through the influence of her children, she has collected a series of charming stories for little folks. Many of these have attracted critical attention through their easily recognized smack of childhood's hours. As a possible explanation of how she was able to portray things so genuinely from the childish standpoint she has said that she has endeavored always when writing them to hark back to the scenes of her own childhood, and to assist her recollection and imagination she has thrown herself on the floor with pencil and tablet, getting as near actually as possible to the youngsters' point of view.

At the National Capital Miss Hay's true worth made her a great favorite, and both there and in London her learning, wide reading and ready sympathy with her father made her of great assistance to him in his work. Her husband, Mr. Payne Whitney, was a classmate of her brother, the late Adelbert Hay.

Danger in Door Knobs.

A dirty door-knob, says the "Lancet," is an obvious offense against sanitary principles. Constant contact with the hand means contamination sooner or later. It is conceivable that a dirty door-handle would convey disease, and here is thus ample reason why door-knobs should be kept as clean as possible.

THE PARCELS POST.

MOVEMENT TO SECURE EXACT-
MENT OF SUCH A LAW.

It Would Drive to the Wall all Local Stores—A Mooted Question Whether Mail Order Houses Are Real Benefits.

The "St. Paul Trade" sharply disagrees with Elbert Hubbard in his ideas of the value to the country of a parcels post system. Mr. Hubbard writes convincingly in the "Philistine" that the parcels post would be a splendid thing for the country at large, but the "St. Paul Trade" affirms that such a system would result in an enormous concentration and congestion of business in the few large cities which would entirely drive out of business, not only the small merchant, but even the department stores. The "Trade" says:

"The great mail order houses of the country, selling direct to the customer, are behind a manufacturing organization which has started at work an 'endless chain' scheme to secure the united support of the manufacturers and wholesalers of the entire country for an amendment to the postal laws, providing for two classes of mail matter, one, the first class, to consist of letter postage at one cent, and the second class to consist of all other classes of mailable matter at a rate sufficient to pay expenses."

Country Merchants Forced Out.

"This means," continues the "Trade," "brought down to bare facts, a parcels post. It means that the big mail order houses will be enabled to send their goods to farmers through the mails at a cost so little that it will be absolutely impossible for the country merchant to compete."

"The result will be one or more big department stores, according to the size of the place, in each town in country districts, and these will have a hard time to compete with the mail order houses, even though they will be able to get their goods in large quantities at first hand."

"It is, therefore, at once apparent that it is as much to the interest of the manufacturer and wholesaler to fight the parcels post scheme as it is for the small merchant."

Are the Catalogue Houses
Advantageous

While the mail order houses can do a large business in every section where they can get in touch with the customers, it is, however, a much discussed question whether they are a real benefit to the country. They can sell cheaper than local merchants, and if orders are combined and wisely placed they usually do enough so to more than pay the cost to the purchaser of the express or freight. But, on the other hand, things must be ordered from catalogues; there is always more or less disappointment upon their arrival, since there is no opportunity for a choice, and it seems practically impossible for the average family to look over one of these illustrated catalogues and send in an order without buying a number of articles not in the least needed, simply because they seem to be bargains.

Heading Off Lotteries.

Information has been received at the Post Office Department alleging that lottery ticket selling is again flourishing in the United States, which has led to an investigation and recommendation of a fraud order against E. Bogelsang, of Hamburg, Germany, who is stated to be conducting in the United States the Hamburg State Lottery, the Brunswick State Lottery and the Hessian State Lottery. Circulars intercepted at the New York Post Office, apparently mailed at Hamburg, solicit remittances for ticket drawings in the above lotteries and direct that remittances be made to Bogelsang, at Hamburg.

HOW THE WORLD TRAVELS FOR PLEASURE.

Great Improvement in Construction Since Early Days of the Velocipede and Bicycle.

Millions of Dollars Expended Annually Upon Various Kinds of Pleasure Machines. Their Use Leads up to Useful Forms.

Man, by nature one of the slowest of the animals, has an inclination for swift movement. Every second which he can cut down in the time of traveling from one point to another is hailed with exultation, thrilling his very soul, but instilling in him a desire for even greater speed.

Of course, the ancients had their chariots drawn by splendid horses, and, in the Middle Ages, the knights of the lance, on their war horses, were the swiftest of the land.

But last winter H. L. Bowden shot down the course on a Florida speed course at a rate equal to one hundred and twenty miles an hour.

Mr. S. A. Miles, the general manager of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers states in Munsey's Magazine that 20,000 machines were produced last year in picture by many as being driven speedily along the Roman roads, crushing beneath them the forms of the common and lowly subjects of the Empire. It remained for the rich of the modern world, however, to develop great speed, and still greater speed from some self-propelled vehicle.

While to some poor inventor might be ascribed the origin of our "speed-toss," still the world owes to the rich every advance made, through their financial encouragement.

The Earliest Bicycle.

At about the time when the Thirteen Original Colonies were ringing with shouts of freedom, a French balloonist, named Blanchard, invented what was known as a "straddle-wheel" for his own amusement. This was nothing more than two wheels connected by a simple framework, with no pedals. The rider straddled the machine and pushed it along with his feet, or coasted down grade. The dandies of Paris and London took up this toy and had great sport with it, but it was too hard work and the speed was not great enough.

Following this, in about 1828, Cugnot, a Frenchman, and Trevithick, an Englishman, and Oliver Evans, an American, experimented with a sort of carriage propelled by steam. Nothing so fast had ever been seen, and the carriage became quite the fashion with gentlemen who had money to spend and whose aim in life was enjoyment. But these carriages were noisy, clumsy and very dirty affairs and were discarded.

The Wheel of the Last Century.

The bicycle with the high wheel in front and little wheel behind came next, and being fairly comfortable, speedy, clean and creating no noise, quickly sprang into fashion, but there was always an element of danger to the "speed-seekers" through concealed stones in the path, which meant a header, so that something even more speedy and safe was called for.

The safety bicycle was an evolution coming some twenty years later, whose high price at first placed it as a luxury much to be desired. Bicycles were for a long time placed in the same category as pianos and carriages, though they were of little use other than for pleasure. The safety was, as its name implied, safe, swift and noiseless. By 1895 the bicycle boom rose beyond any proportions assumed by the previously demanded speed toys. In the United States four hundred factories, representing a capital of something like $75,000,000, turned out nearly a million machines a year.

Half a Mile a Minute too Slow.

The fad lasted five years, when a demand arose for something even faster than the speed of a mile in two minutes or so, attained by the bicycle, and a more comfortable seat than that afforded on the bicycle frame. Inventors were already at work, and while it may not be true that out of the bicycle developed the automobile, yet the two-wheeled conveyance, with its pneumatic tires, created the demand for something better.

Men like W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., John Jacob Astor, and Albert C. Boaswick were, among the pioneers in America to bring over from Europe the speed toys of the rich, and their machines were the targets for thousands of pairs of eyes in the streets of New York.

A Mile in Thirty Seconds.

When one of these men made a record of a mile in something like 32

the United States, valued at $23,000,000, giving employment to over 20,000 men.

With the automobile boats, the fast racing yachts, and the luxurious private yachts, developing speed, hair raising even to contemplate, who can say that after all our rich men have not done something of use to the world, even when they are not handling the ticker tape, or dabbling in stocks and bonds, or contemplating the flotation of new enterprises. Mankind must play, and speed toys seem to be the playthings demanded by the rich. And out of these toys later develop useful, if less extravagant, forms of locomotion and carriage.

THE WORLD'S ANARCHISTS.

ENGLAND A DUMPING GROUND FOR THE ADVOCATES OF ASSASSINATION.

English Expert Believes the Question is One for International Action—Could be Stamped Out.

By John Sweeney.

(Late Detective-Inspector, Scotland Yard.)

Mr. Sweeney intimates that regulations against anarchists are much more effective in the United States than in England. It is the opinion of American officials, however, that such is not the case to any extent. It is true that Congress passed a law, shortly following the assassination of President McKinley, empowering the Immigration Bureau to refuse admission to anarchists, but in only a single instance, that of John Turner, who was arrested in October, 1903, and after fighting the case and appealing it to the United States Supreme Court, was forced to leave the country. His admission being refused to foreign anarchists, although it is an unquestionable fact that many have entered our ports.

Although the moral effect of the law, which provides that anarchists, if they are proven to be such, can be deported at any time within three years after their arrival, is undoubtedly good, the law needs strengthening, since if an immigrant chooses to deny that he is an anarchist and believes in assassination or the overthrow of government, the authorities are powerless to reject him. As a matter of fact, it is believed by the government officials that in the matter of free anarchist speech and the printing and dissemination of flaming literature, the United States harbors conditions which are not materially different from those described in England by Detective-Inspector Sweeney.

England is the home and asylum of anarchists, the place where the most nefarious plots are hatched against the heads of states in all parts of the world. Yet our purely English anarchists can be counted on the fingers. The anarchist ranks in this country would be reduced to zero without the constant influx of penniless foreigners whose only means of living is the receipt of remittances from wealthy, and often highly placed, villains abroad, whose own support depends entirely on the constant reports they receive of anarchistic work accomplished here.

It is, above all, amongst the young at their most impressionable period that these foreign anarchists are most influential for evil.

When Voltairine de Cleyre, the American female anarchist, was in London in 1898, she influenced a number of young lads and young girls. Her orations were potent factors in the formation of incendiary opinions. In every speech she advocated force and violence. She would have been denied admission to any other country than England as an undesirable alien.

Another woman anarchist, Emma Goldman, was, to my mind, directly responsible for inspiring the anarchist that anarchists are so potent a force. And in nearly every case these alien anarchists are criminals from foreign prisons.

Influencing the Young.

Amongst the younger and more impressionable listeners, the foreign anarchists visiting England produce some powerful, although seldom lasting, effects. In the years 1890 to 1898 there might have been seen at anarchist meetings in London and Manchester not a few attractive and thoughtful young lads and girls ready to throw bombs or die for their newly learnt gospel of anarchism. It would be crucial to give the names of those young people to-day. I know the history of each of them, and in not a single case can you find those youthful enthusiasts in the anarchist groups of today. Some of the girls are married to respectable merchants. One of the promising lads is a well-known stage manager.

The alien anarchists in England to-day are more numerous than ever before. Their newspapers, in German, French, Italian, and Russian, are circulated in all the large cities of the kingdom. Their growth here is the consequence of many years' advertisement of England as the dumping ground of undesirables and a refuge for anarchist outlaws.

During my twenty-seven years' experience I have had many opportunities of investigating anarchist literature, and I have traced very great quantities of it to its sources. In 1904 I found tons of anarchist literature being printed in England, some of it in Italian, some prepared solely for use in France to stir up "la guerre sociale" for the consummation of "Actes de justice ou de vengeance."

Responsible for Many Outrages.

The year referred to was the year when President Carnot was assassinated. The same year saw the anarchist outrage at the Cafe Terminus, when two men were killed. Besides the bomb throwing at the Restaurant Very and other French anarchist outrages, the same year saw also assassinations and bomb outrages in Italy, Austria, and Spain. Thirty alien anarchists arrived here in one batch that year, and I was kept busy, not only watching these people as anarchists, but also because they were invariably ready to turn their hands to burglary or any other lawlessness.

AMERICAN CLOTHES CAUSE CONSUMPTION AND OTHER DISEASES.

Imagine Sickness Caused by Internal Devils.—Heroic Methods of Treatment.

The natives of Samoa, says Surgeon Spear of the navy, in a recent report, are beginning to wear white men's clothes, much to the detriment of their health. The climate is essentially a wet one. In former times a native would rub a little coconut oil on his skin and go out into the rain, and when he reached shelter there was nothing to dry but his "lava-lava" or breech-cloth. The same native now goes out in the rain, his modern clothes soon become wet and, before he realizes it, he is soon chilled through, for the rain in Samoa is always from 10 degrees to 15 degrees colder than the atmosphere. Pulmonary affections, such as pneumonia, bronchitis and tuberculosis, naturally follow.

The Samoans are very superstitious, and when taken sick they imagine devils are inside them. Almost every old woman and man has a sure cure for driving out these devils. This is accomplished by "loui loui" and external applications of various decorations made from leaves. If a cure results, the devils have been driven out; if, on the other hand, death follows, the devils are victorious.

The traders sell the natives a patent pain killer which can be used internally as medicine and externally as a liniment. This medicine is very highly thought of, and the natives will tell you they have great confidence in it; sometimes they name their children after it. A sick Samoan thinks that he must move about to regain strength. If he cannot walk he will bury himself under the clothes, and it is wonderful sometimes how they obtain air enough to breathe.

The usual treatment instituted in a case of pneumonia by the natives is about as follows: The man sits up almost continually; he is stuffed with all kinds of food and decorations to drive out the devils, the number of devils being estimated by the amount of pain. If much pleurisy exists there are at least eight devils in the chest, and it requires energetic treatment to drive them out. The man gets up, walks about as long as he can, and when he can no longer walk he lies down and is covered up carefully, so as to exclude all fresh air. If the man survives the ordeal his attendants consider themselves experts in treating that particular disease.

PEAT AS LOCOMOTIVE FUEL.

Successful Tests of It in New England—Great Stores of It in Maine.

Peat is abundantly stored in the Maine bogs. Androscoggin county is claimed to have peat to supply all Maine with fuel for a dozen generations. A number of experiments have recently been made by the Boston and Maine railroad in the use of peat fuel. The company had its attention called to the value of peat as a steaming agency some weeks ago, and upon representation that if properly prepared it was equal to bituminous coal, was induced to test its qualities. These were eminently satisfying and a carload of the material has been delivered for further experiment. The source of supply is in the town of Lewington, Mass., and it is said that this single deposit would furnish enough fuel for all the railroads entering Boston for 250 years.

EXCURSIONS TO THE WEST

To the Pacific Coast—to California, Oregon, Washington—round-trip, long transit and return limits, liberal stop-over privileges.

The rate is practically on the basis of one fare for the round trip. Of course, if you wish to visit both California and Oregon or Washington, the cost is slightly more.

These reduced rates are in effect on certain dates in months of May to October, inclusive. They apply from all Eastern points via Chicago, St. Louis or Memphis gateways. The Rock Island System will take you up in either Chicago or St. Louis, or at hundreds of other Middle West points and carry you to the Coast in through Standard or Tourist Sleepers with unexcelled Dining Car service. The Rock Island also affords a choice of routes; on the "Scenic" route you can stop off in Colorado—see Salt Lake City—visit Yellowstone National Park; on the "Southern" route you can go via El Paso, thru New Mexico, then "up coast" to San Francisco and on to Portland or Seattle if desired.

In short, these Pacific Coast excursions offer an unusually good chance to see our western country in a comprehensive manner.

If you desire to go only as far as Colorado, there are excursion rates in effect to that section and return, all summer long, specially reduced June 30 to July 4, August 12 and 13, and August 30 to September 4. Extension trips to Ogden or Salt Lake and return at low cost also.

From September 15 to October 31, 1905, one-way tourist or "colonist" tickets will be on sale to California and the Pacific Northwest—about half regular fare.

If interested, send name and address on this coupon, designating which booklet wanted and to what point you plan to go. Name probable date of start also, so we can advise definitely with respect to rates, etc.

Send Colorado booklet and rates.

Troops Mobilized.

Stockholm, Sweden, Sep. 14.—The Dagblad today printed a private telegram from Christiana that the second to the sixth year classes of the Norwegian conscription have been mobilized.

Political circles disavow any desire on the part of Sweden to oppose the arbitration treaty demanded by Norway, but they point out that only the preliminary negotiations in regard to the form and contents of such a treaty can be discussed at present, as the conclusion of a treaty is impossible until Norway has accepted Sweden's conditions and the latter has recognized Norway as an independent, sovereign state. The Swedish intentions, it is declared are pacific.

Save 1-2 Your Paint Bills

By using Weir's Bavarian White Lead, the most durable and therefore the most economical lead or paint made. It has zinc in it. The zinc gives the paint a beautiful gloss and prevents the lead from destroying the linseed oil which is the life of ALL PAINT. "Pure Lead" by itself will eat and destroy the linseed oil, thus causing the paint to become porous or open and dust off. Weir's Bavarian White Lead is better and cheaper than mixed paints because one-half of every gallon of mixed paint is linseed oil for which you pay $1.50 per gallon and get an old, stale, unsound linseed oil. Buy fresh oil from your dealer's barrel at its true value. 4 1-2 gallons linseed oil and 100 pounds of Weir's Lead will make 6 1-2 gallons best paint ready to use, that will cost you no more than other standard brands of lead and much less than mixed paint and will last twice as long as either. Write D. T. Weir White Lead Co., St. Louis, Mo., for their booklet "Facts About White Lead." Weir's Bavarian White Lead is for sale by Cochran & Pickens, Marion, Ky.

Much is being said by the Republican machine politicians, through their organ, the Record, attempting to arouse the prejudices of the republican voters on account of the juries. In the first place, no one at all familiar with the past record of the democratic nominees can or will place his hand upon his heart and say truthfully that the smiling, accommodating and genial Dave Woods ever accommodated a republican less than a democrat. The same can be said of Rochester, and his record as Judge attests this statement, as it might be truthfully said of all the other nominees. In the first place let us inquire what case of a political nature has ever been tried in this court that would necessitate or even call for a jury of democrats? We challenge any who write for the Record to name one. We again challenge the statement by those who assail the juries to name one case that was unjustly decided at all by politics; that a republican has been convicted who should have been acquitted; that a democrat has been discharged who ought to have been convicted. Name the cases, if such there be. Tell us where partisanship played any part in the courts. Take off your mask; lay down your whip, unbuckle your spurs, stand stripped of these appendages which you are attempting to use to arouse your voters in a purely local contest, where politics plays no part. Stand up and tell us in truth these things. The farmers of our county rather avoid than seek jury services. It is a matter of no remuneration to them. The trouble and neglect of leaving their farms and their travel to and board in Marion more than takes the small pittance which they receive. They will all tell you this. If there was any necessity for partisan juries, if there were any political cases to be tried, then, a howl of this character might receive some semblance of belief.

But nothing of this character has ever occurred in this county. Verdicts of the juries here, whether republicans or democrats, populists and all, have been free from any imputation of political bias until assailed in this instance. Many republicans throughout Judge Gordon's term have served upon juries, and we will give the list of their names.

And, as we have been talking about juries and the juries have always been composed of white republicans and democrats, and the Record is seemingly dissatisfied with them, please tell us if your complaint is that the negroes are not upon the juries? You have four or five hundred of these voters in the county. Now, answer and tell us, is that the trouble? Are you offended because this class of citizens are not on the juries? Answer and tell us, for they are entitled to know if this warfare upon the juries, where no partisan issue is involved in the court, when you are unable to name a case where partisan verdict was ever rendered for a democrat or against a republican, these negroes want to know if this warfare is waged in their interests? You are brave and you have nothing to conceal, because you said so, and therefore if it is true now, tell us is this the trouble?

Squire W. O. Black, the old war horse of Caldwell county and the candidate of the democratic party in that county for Judge, was in the city Tuesday shaking hands with his many friends, many of whom wished that there would be no boundary line between Crittenden and Caldwell on election day next November so that they could help him pile up a bigger majority. That he will be elected by a handsome vote is unquestioned by all intelligent and fair-minded citizens of his county with whom we have talked, and that was not a few of them either.

The Record mentioned last week an article "written by some one," which appeared in the PRESS. In the same issue, in referring to the indictment against Judge Towery it says: "The indictment was placed in a democratic law office in the town of Marion for a corrupt purpose." So far as the PRESS is concerned its editor supervises and stands responsible for the truthfulness of every line in it. Will the editors of the Record with that same sense of responsibility, publish the name of the democratic lawyer referred to? If the Record tells the truth it owes to the people of this county the duty of exposing this lawyer, otherwise it should confess itself a foul, cruel liar against the Marion bar, which has never before had the breath of suspicion cast upon it. If the Record will publish the name of such a lawyer we warn it to be careful that it has facts to substantiate the charge. And by the way, if the Record will take to heart this word of warning a great many other reckless statements will be eliminated from its columns.

The Record tries to shift the issue from Crittenden county juries to those of Breathitt county. This is a wise move on the part of the Record, but unless it sticks closer to the truth in dealing with that matter it can never make out a case that will stick before Crittenden county people. When Judge Hargis reads your statement that he can not be punished and that it will be impossible for him to be convicted he will doubtless seek a change of venue to your court in order to escape the democratic juries and courts of his section, which have decreed that he pay to Mrs. Marcum $10,000 damages and indicted the Hargises for murder and a life and death sentence to his tool and kinsman.

We notice that the Record says that the Tolu post office is too small a thing for Learner E. Guess, but that better things are in store for him in the future. We sincerely trust that this is true; but since when did the Record become the dispenser of offices throughout the country, with the exception of the Khedivship which it so generously tendered to Dr. Bob Moore "our Bob"? "Robert Love Moore; yum, yum!" We thought that this was the last of it at its disposal. You must think that the friends of Mr. Guess are mighty easily deceived if you think they will catch at such flimsy bait as this. He wanted this office; he needed it. He would have discharged its duties faithfully. You ruthlessly turn him down, and now in turn you ask him to wait for something better, with indefinite promises of future rewards. Go to!

The statement made in last week's Record that the Commonwealth Attorney wanted Judge Towery indicted, is absolutely and unqualifiedly false. No member of the grand jury or any other person can truthfully make such a statement. How did the Record get such statement as this, as to assault an honest, faithful and efficient public official, one who has prosecuted irrespective of politics every violator of the law.

The Record corrects our figures and says the republicans have had control of the Federal courts for the last forty years instead of ten, as stated by us. It is refreshing to hear of a republican who is willing to put upon his party the responsibility for the Cleveland administrations.

The Record seeks to refute our statement about Federal juries by naming six democrats who have served on those juries during the last forty years. How often has the teacher-editor of the Record tried to impress upon their pupils the truth that the exceptions only prove the rule.

The town was shocked last week by the news that the negro boy, George Cruce, who was for a long time the faithful servant of Dr. Moore, was dead. It is reported that he laughed himself to death when he read Dr. Moore's speech, saying, "that he had been a republican for the last eight years;" but by the best of medical attention he was resuscitated, and is now doing moderately well. It was explained to George that it was a secret ballot.

Two weeks ago the Record stated that for partisan reasons we had refused to print their paper on our press. Subsequently one of the proprietors said to us he knew this statement was not correct, and that he would see that the Record published a retraction of it. We scanned last week's issue in vain, and no retraction was made. This is merely to remind the Record proprietors of their promise.

Senator Deboe was in Princeton on a little business (?) Tuesday. He returned home Wednesday morning.

A Card.

TO THE VOTERS OF CRITTENDEN COUNTY:

After being solicited and urged by quite a number of friends from both political parties and chosen by the unanimous vote of the committee of my party, I have consented to become a candidate for the office of county clerk; but I am sorry to say it will be impossible for me to make anything like a thorough canvass. However, I will do the best I can in this respect. It would afford me great pleasure to visit you personally in your homes, but this will not be in my power to do. You can rest assured that I feel grateful to you for past favors and will appreciate your sympathy and help in the contest. Nothing known to me would give me more pleasure than to serve you as your next county clerk. It is true I am, like many of you, growing old; but yet I feel and know that I can discharge the duties of the office personally, and if elected you will always find me at my post ready to serve you.

Faithfully yours,
D. WOODS.

Letter from Florida.

WAUCHULA, FLA., Sept. 5.—ED. PRESS: Having been away from Crittenden ten months, and being asked to write, I will give a description of this town.

It is in Desoto county, Southern Florida. Decatur is the county seat. Has a population of 1600. Wauchula is 27 miles north of it on the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. Has a population of 800, and one negro, called Shorty. It has two good hotels, one of which, the Desoto, is the drummers' hotel, with W. W. Pogue of Frances, Ky., proprietor. We have a fine public school with about 400 scholars, with a Kentuckian as Principal.

The fruit crop was short this year. There were shipped from here 115 car loads of watermelons! sold on the track as high as $212.50 per car, 50,000 crates of vegetables. There is a fair orange crop here; there will be from 80,000 to 120,000 boxes of oranges to ship from this place; there will also be a large quantity of fine grapes to ship.

I have a great many letters of inquiry about this country. The land is generally level and a black loam. Near town land can be bought at $30 to $50 per acre. Back a few miles in the country land can be bought at from $2 to $3 per acre.

This is the best county in the state so said to be. You can raise any kind of fruit except apples, and wheat does no good; oats seem to do well; they tell me that clover and timothy won't grow here, but I think it will and am going to try it.

The principal vegetables shipped are beans cucumbers and tomatoes; they are shipped to New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and St. Paul; the beans sell as high as $5 per crate; cucumbers the same; tomatoes $2.50 to $3.

One of my neighbors net $3,500 on half an acre of cucumbers this year. Fertilizer is used in nearly everything to push it.

Truly yours,

J. A. LEWIS.

Two Shots Fired.

Erie, Penn., Sept. 14.—While fishing near the boundary line in Lake Erie this afternoon the fish tug William J. McCarter, a small boat of 15 tons, was struck twice by shots from the Canadian cruiser Vigilant, in the efforts of the Canadian to compel the tug to stop and surrender to him.

Captain Frank Handy, the engineer, and four men were on the boat, but they were determined to escape, and made the run home in their damaged boat.

The tug was struck once near the water line, but the hull was only dented. The second shot knocked over the "iron man" a piece of machinery used in hauling in nets. The men were not hurt. The boat sustained such small damage that just

The Captain said he was an American and that he was in American waters when the shots were fired, but many of the fishermen admit that they go over into Canadian waters regularly to fish at this season of the year. The Vigilant, it is claimed, comes down inside the Canadian line and intercepts all tugs that are not speedy enough to get away.

Blown to Atoms.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 14.—By the accidental explosion of a charge of nitro glycerine used by oil well drillers to "shoot" wells in the Salem oil fields, David McKay and wife were killed here today. Their bodies were actually blown to pieces, and only a few pieces of flesh and bone were found after the accident. The two horses drawing the wagon in which McKay and his wife were riding were also killed. They shared the fate of their master in that their bodies were also blown to pieces.

The wagon was literally annihilated. The largest piece of the structure that could be found was one of the axles.

The cause of the explosion will never be known, but it is supposed that the wagon hit a rut and that the jar exploded the deadly nitro glycerine. Forty quarts of the powerful explosive constituted the charge that McKay was conveying to the Salem fields when he and his wife met their dreadful fate.

A hole in the ground as large as a cellar in a ten room house was made by the explosion.

Woe to Roosevelt.

Did President Roosevelt accept a case containing 60 bottles of beer? asks a dispatch from Pittsburgh to the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Allegheny County W. C. T. U. has written to the Chief Executive, asking him this question.

The matter was brought up today at the annual meeting when a newspaper clipping was read that a new brewing company in the West had sent a case of beer and had been thanked on behalf of the President by his Secretary, in a letter written on White House stationery.

The Secretary of the W. C. T. U. was instructed to open correspondence with the President direct.

"We must not take snap judgment," said Mrs. H. M. Forrest, President of the Cumberland Union. "We must first find out if the story is true. If it is there will be something doing."

Sulphur in Mexican Volcano.

Galveston, Texas, Sept. 14.—Two Mexican scientists, who have just returned from their exploration of Mt. Cerro Dolores report that a great stream of pure sulphur is flowing day and night from the crater of the volcano which for some years has been regarded as extinct.

So far as known this is the only volcano in the world that emits undiluted sulphur, and the find is considered to be very valuable, as the scientists say that the sulphur can be retained in a lake or sea and eventually be utilized for commercial purposes.

GUNBOAT SENT

To Nicaragua to Teach the Greaters Good Manners.

Washington, D. C. Sept. 13.—Having waited about a month for the Government of Nicaragua to manifest some evidence of its purpose to give two American citizens of the name of Albers a "square deal," Uncle Sam has picked up his "big stick" preparatory to teaching the American Republic, so-called, a much needed lesson in international decency. The Albers brothers were placed in prison last month by the Nicaragua authorities upon what was alleged to be a trumped-up charge because they refused to permit agents of the government to confiscate property belonging to the Limon Company, a Philadelphia corporation, engaged in raising tobacco and wheat and in gold and silver mining. Diplomatic representations on the part of the United States appear to have failed to move Nicaragua to take any steps toward securing justice to the Alberses, and the State Department therefore requested the Navy Department to send a warship on a visit to the offending republic.

The request was acted upon at once, and the gunboat Princeton, now stationed at Panama, was dispatched today to Nicaragua. On the way it will stop at San Jose, Costa Rica, to pick up William L. Merry, the American Minister to Nicaragua and Costa Rica, and take him to the Nicaraguan port nearest to Ocotel, where the Albers brothers are now imprisoned. Minister Merry will have to travel overland about 70 miles before he reaches Ocotel. He should arrive there in time to be present at the trial of the Alberses, and as the representative of the United States is expected to see that justice is done the American prisoners. Since the arrest of the brothers the Nicaraguan government has withdrawn the ex-quaer of Chester Donaldson, United States Consul at Managua, because he interceded in their behalf and protested against their arrest on what he be an unjust and preposterous charge.

Snap Judgment.

Winchester, Ky., Sept. 15.—After being out seven minutes the jury in the case of Sam Hisle, charged with criminal assault, tonight rendered a verdict of guilty and fixed his punishment at death.

The case was entered into this morning and it soon became evident that a jury could not be found in the county of men who had not previously formed an opinion, and Judge Benton, on motion of the defense, sent to Madison county for a panel of fifty men. These arrived after dinner. He practically had no evidence to present, while the prosecution made out a perfect case. The attorneys for the defense stated that they could take no appeal. The date of execution has not been set.

Armistice Signed.

Gunshun Pass, Manchuria, Sept. 14.—Major General Ovanovsky, representing General Linevitch, was the last to arrive yesterday morning at the place for the armistice conference. General Fukushima, representing Field Marshal Oyama, with a guard of fifty men, had already arrived under a flag of truce. After some nine consecutive hours of negotiation the armistice was signed at 7 o'clock this evening.

It takes effect September 16th and agrees to the abolition of all hostile or inimical acts and establishes a neutral zone of four kilometers wide between the two armies. Shatohzu, on the railway, is the center. Thus ends one of the bloodiest wars known to modern history.

By a Pet Cat.

New York, Sept. 14.—In a very agony, making noises like those of a cat in anger, Frieda Walden, 8 years old, the daughter of a gardener, was seen at H. Starin, at Glen Island, disordered by night of hydrophobia.

Two weeks ago the little girl was playing together and the cat were playful and affectionate. With the child, sank its teeth into her hand.

The wound was attended and the Jew was cauterized and, nothing was to be seen of it as the cat was believed to be healthy.

A few days ago the wound was very painful and the child was with convulsions and showed symptoms of hydrophobia, instead of aversion to water.

Physicians who were called to see her, but she died before they could reach her. The little sufferer gave cries like a cat in a rage.

BY D'ERF MAILLW

ing the great Civil War the soldiers encountered many in- of loyal devotion to the old flag. One particular instance, of loyalty to the Union on the of a Southerner, and a Jew, a tragedy might readily have enacted. At the time I was Advocate of a military commis- organized in New Orleans during at rear of the war.

few was brought before us, upon surge of having furnished aid and art to the Confederacy. Proofs of guilt appeared quite conclusive, had been captured within the ene- lines, opposite Baton Rouge, and his person was found a paper in- a very complete list of arti- including revolvers, ammunition, ne, etc. He had agreed to deliver the following evening to the derate captain, with whom he ap- to be arguing when our boys ed the squad. I have forgotten ated compensation, but it was large, the amount to be paid for article being listed at figures far d even war prices.

Jew could speak but little Eng- and his attorney, who had been a d in a Western volunteer regi- and was permitted by courtesy in the prisoner's behalf, antage from the first, Colonel Buchan- president of the commission. After was a Regular Army officer old school, a martinet, red-tape Volunter, who still maintained a McChesman was the best of all our arais, and that Grant, Sherman Sheridan were Generals simply by luck, and without especial mil- equipment. The Articles at and military rules and regula- were to him as sacred as Holy taunted him about his "Yankee friends," to the effect that "hanging was better than helping Rebels."

The President appeared to consider all this side testimony as wholly ir- relevant and useless; apparently his own mind was fully made up as to the prisoner's guilt, although there ap- peared to me room for very grave doubt. The placid and almost con- tented look of the old Hebrew, and his unconcern when captured with such a damning paper in his possession, com- posed in me a belief that he was not entirely guilty, or at least that the whole truth had not yet been known, and that there must be some extenu- ating circumstances.

In my position as Judge Advocate, I endeavored to bring out these points, and worded my questions accordingly. But Colonel Buchanan was supreme over any court where he presided, and no question was ever permitted to be asked that he did not fully sanction and often change to suit his own views. He tried to be just, yet he was extremely arbitrary and opinionated, and I feared he had already prejudged the case.

After a consultation with his client, the lawyer said he would like to have the Rebel Captain who commanded the captured squad summoned.

"What do you propose to prove by him?" thundered the Colonel. "He is a Rebel, taken in arms against the Government; I doubt if I ought to per- mit his testimony to have any weight before this Commission."

The lawyer, however, insisted that he was a very important witness, and though refusing to reveal his line of defense, demanded that he be pro- duced, and threatened, if his request was refused, to lay the whole matter you, and in which you are described as belonging to the Rebel army?"

"I should reckon I did. Didn't I write it and put it in every blessed ar- ticle I thought we Rebels, as you call us, could get and make use of?"

I looked at Colonel Buchanan and saw a pallor slowly creeping over his face.

"Do you mean to say, sir," he asked, "that this prisoner did not voluntarily meet you people, and of his own free will agree to sell and deliver the arti- cles mentioned in that paper?" The witness threw his head back and laughed boisterously. The old Colo- nel's face changed from white to an ashy red, and he again rapped for order, and said sarcastically, "Please restrain your merriment and answer my question; remember this is a court room, and not a theatre."

"Beg pardon, Colonel, but if you'd seen how the old stunner trembled when I shoved my six-shooter under his nose and told him I'd blow out his brains if he didn't stop it, you'd want to laugh, too. The six-shooter hadn't nary a charge, but he didn't know that. You see, the way we got hold of him was this: Some of our boys live in Baton Rouge, and they know the old fellow has always been considered a bigger Yankee than old Greeley him- self. When we saw him inside our lines, near the Ferry, where we learned he had been to visit some sick relatives, we made up our minds we'd got a pretty good thing. We knew he was a rich old cock, and that his store- carried one of the biggest stocks of goods outside of Orleans. I decided that I could scare him into signing most anything, but it was tough work. I thought at one time I'd really have to load up and give him a flesh wound to make him ante up. Then just as he had signed the paper you Yankees swooped down upon us."

"Do you mean to say, on your oath—on your oath, sir," said the Colonel imperiously, "that the prisoner did not send word to you that he would meet you at that Ferry and furnish you certain information and contraband articles for certain sums of money?"

The young Confederate jumped up, and balancing himself on his foot, cried out, with the most intense scorn: "And you call this a Yankee court of justice! Couldn't any of you take trouble enough to find out what kind of a man you were trying? Why, any child in Baton Rouge could have told you who old Jew Isaac was, and twice he's had a rope 'round his neck and been nearly choked into Kingdom Come by our boys because he wouldn't tell where your boys were camped—and all the old fellow would say was, 'Hang away.' Couldn't you find out, through some of your smart witnesses, that my own capture was due to the plucky old devil, who was brave enough and loyal enough to you Yankees to send word to your Captain by his lit- tle son when and where he had agreed to meet us, in spite of my oath to him that I would shoot him down like a dog if he breathed a word to any one?"

And the indignant Southerner sank down in his chair, wiping the perspiration from his face.

That the dramatic part of this start- ling denouement was partly arranged by the lawyer has always been my conviction. He knew from the first that he had a sure case and he had been greatly nettled by the sharp words and ruminations of President Buchanan. At any rate, the effect was all that he could have wished. Never before, in his long military career, had the old Colonel's pride received such a blow. His boast had been that he had presided over more than fifty court- martials and had seldom had his find- ings disapproved, as he claimed to know all there was to know about military law.

The room was cleared and the Colo- nel, after a few words of explanation, added, "Of course, the case will be dis- missed at once and the prisoner re- leased. I desire to confess to you gentle- men that for my part I fear I have allowed my prejudices to influence my judgment, and that I have been more than ever before in all my military life committing a very grave and serious error. We are none of us too old to learn."

After adjourning the court, the noble old man went into the adjoining room, shook hands most heartily and courteously with the lawyer, the Con- federate Captain and the old Jew, and said that none of them could be more pleased than he that any suspicions he may have had were found to be false.

As I was arranging my papers, some one touched me on the shoulder, and looking around I encountered Isaac's swarthy countenance. He said, in his broken English: "I see you are a Mason." Answering in the affirmative, and learning that he was one, I asked why he had not made himself known before. "Oh, no," he said, "not while I was under charges, but now I am very glad to know you as one. I want you to bring some of your army friends and dine with me next Sun- day," handing me his card. I accepted his invitation and had an experience for the first time of dining in the fam- ily of a wealthy Jew.

He had invited a number of his friends, and the board was presided over by his only daughter, the most lovely Jewess I have ever seen. She was tall and graceful as a swan, with a clear, olive complexion through which burned the glow of perfect health, and she looked at me with eyes which, even out of the dim haze of years, I can see distinctly to-day—deep wells of melting brown, modestly shaded by long silky lashes.

As I was presented she came heavily forward, a charming blush diffusing its tint on her cheeks, and taking both my hands in her own two little soft ones she said, in the purest English: "Captain, can I thank you for your great kindness to my dear old father? Indeed, I shall always wish you joy and happiness."

I disclaimed having done anything at all to warrant her warm thanks; nevertheless, they were most pleasant to hear and the grateful glance she gave me well nigh set my young brain on fire. I was seated at her right hand and found her conversation cultured and herself truly bewitching.

The dinner itself was splendid and elaborate, consisting of innumerable courses and of unknown dishes. Some rare wines were brought from their cobweb beds, along with costly cigars. Over the wine and walnuts, Isaac in-trial. I assured him that I had done nothing for him that the case did not fully warrant, but he insisted that but for several of my protests he might have been condemned without a hear- ing. I explained to him that that was simply the duty of any Judge Advo- cate; but he said that Jews were never ungrateful and made me a point blank offer, that if I would resign my com- mission and start a store in Mobile, which had then just come into the pos- session of the Union forces, he would stock it with ten or even twenty thou- sand dollars' worth of goods, give me the entire charge and make me an equal partner.

As I mused over the old Maderia, visions arose before me of a prosper- ous business and also frequent calls to Baton Rouge to consult with Mr. Isaac, when I doubted not I would be a welcome visitor at his and his daugh- ter's home, and—I all but accepted the offer.

But ere the evening was spent, the spirit of war drove sentiment from my thoughts. An orderly brought the news of another fierce guerrilla raid up from the Bayou Teche, and making a hasty adieu, thanking the old gentle- man for his generous offer and head- ing over his lovely daughter's hand, I galloped back to my command and was soon again in the saddle on a four days' ride.

A DIFFERENCE IN THE SEXES.

Sentiment Not Highly Developed in Men—Prosaic and Unromantic.

Women never can get used to the lack of romantic sentiment displayed by the average man.

It takes a woman to hoard up every scrap of the writing of a beloved hand, and lock it away in a desk with blue ribbon around it.

The most cursory note he has scribbled in pencil is safely treasured up, not because it breathed unusual or fervid sentiments, but because indited in that hand.

Twenty-five years after, she can still regard with tender interest the letter he gave her on such and such a day, which she wore in her bosom until it died, and then tucked religiously into a book. A bit of gown she wore when she first saw him, the book they read together, the first "photo" he gave her—all these things have a mighty and undying interest for woman, who is by nature more sentimental than man.

The best man in the world often has a singular lack of romance of this sort in his make-up. When the past is over he forgets it. A rose that has served its purpose in his buttonhole, worn on whatever momentous occasion, is es- teemed by him to be more fit for the waste basket than the barren drawer. He has been known to crumple her bil- let doux before his lady's eyes and smil- ingly toss it to the four winds; and he would be puzzled to understand why that lightsome disregard of his should send a little chill to her heart.

No, men are not by nature senti- mental animals. They can love with- out enshrouding themselves with endless effects belonging to the object of their affections. And far be it to say that theirs is not the wiser method of the two. It simplifies life and is least likely to precipitate future embarrass- ments.

TEENAGE MOTHER.

Aboard Ship Presented with Wardrobe and Twenty-Five Dollars.

A few weeks ago the European steamer Graf Waldersee came flapping into New York Harbor after having en- countered, according to statements of the steamer officials and crew, one of the worst storms ever encountered on the Atlantic. But notwithstanding the rough voyage, there was a little inci- dent on shipboard which attracted as much attention as the storm. On the second day out just before the storm broke there was born to one of the steerage passengers a son, who was ap- propriately named Herman Waldersee Childs, and the cabin passengers gave him a wardrobe, besides raising $25 for his mother.

THE TYPICAL AMERICAN MOTHER PAINTING BY MAUD STEMM.

Notwithstanding the fact that 1,932,9 steerage passengers embarked for New York from European ports during the past three years, according to figures compiled by the immigration authorities, it is a remarkable fact that only 116 babies have been born in the steerage during that time. This number does not include the recent arrival on the Waldersee.

Yet, there was an early precedent for ocean births, for, according to history, the first English child born in the limits of New England was Peregrine White, who first saw light of day on the Mayflower in Cape Cod Harbor.

MACARONI OR DURUM WHEATS

Work of the United States Department of Agriculture.

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL.

The efforts of the Department of Agriculture not only contemplate the introduction into the United States of improved plants and crops from foreign countries to take the place of those which American farmers are already growing, and the breeding up and bettering of those which we now have; but also the introduction of plants onto great areas of country now thought to be unfit for farming.

Encroachment is constantly being made upon the waste places of the land; the semi-desert and the low places, by the introduction of crops which, through long years and centuries of acclimatization in similar regions of the Old World, have become either drought or water resistant.

A striking example of this sort of work, which has already proven a high success, is the introduction of the macaroni wheat plant, or, as it is more properly called, durum wheat.

To Establish Macaroni Factories.

It was Secretary Wilson's idea at first to introduce the culture of this Durum Wheat. Bluestem Wheat.

wheat for supplying macaroni and the concurrent establishment of a new American manufacturing industry. This feature has been a success, but macaroni, however, is not a staple food among Americans as it is in Italy, and no very great things were expected. Nevertheless, Mr. Mark Carleton, a cereal expert, was sent abroad into Russia and Turkestan to get seeds of durum wheats, and these he brought back some years ago, and the Department distributed them for trial in different parts of the country. They grew well, so well, in fact, and under such dry conditions where other wheat would not yield profitably that it was considered a shame that this splendid looking, large-grained wheat, which is moreover, rust proof, could not be made into bread. It is an unusually hard and close matted wheat, and it was supposed to be good for only macaroni and vermicelli.

Useless, Said the Croakers.

But the Department of Agriculture is nothing if not progressive, and the cerealists experts began to investigate whether it might not possibly be some good as a bread maker. Dozens of experiments were made in bread making and baking—a line, you may say, somewhat out of the beaten pathway of an agricultural department—and finally it was announced by Mr. Carleton that splendid bread could be baked from this durum wheat flour—light, nutritious and sweet as a nut. A hundred loaves were baked for the Department by a Washington bakery from the durum wheat flour and a hundred other loaves from regular Minnesota flour, and then samples were sent out to a hundred different judges to determine which was the best bread. In most all of the cases the decision was given in favor of the bread made from durum wheat flour.

Then began the planting of this wheat on a great scale by the farmers of the Northwest all along the western edge of the wheat belt, where it yielded twenty-five, fifty and even seventy-five per cent. better than blue stem or the other standard wheats.

Opposed by the Millers.

But now came a check. It was difficult to grind this wheat, and the ers found arrayed against them the whole combination of Northwestern millers, who said that the wheat was poor, made only inferior flour and would not make edible bread. But the farmers had the Department of Agriculture back of them, and Mr. Wilson had his own conviction about durum wheat and Northwestern millers, and moreover, he had the courage to back them up. The trouble with the millers was that with the milling apparatus which they used for grinding ordinary No. 1 Red, they could not grind the harder durum, and so they forced the price of wheat down in the market and threatened to have Secretary Wilson removed unless he stopped advising farmers to grow durum wheat. The Secretary, it seems, held his job, and the farmers had faith in him and continued planting durum wheat to the extent of several million additional acres each succeeding year.

Forced the Millers to Try.

"I am thinking the millers will come around to grinding durum wheat," he said. "The farmers of the United States will grow it because it is a splendid crop for them, throughout a very wide belt, and I guess the millers will rather have to grind it." Moreover, he intimated that the millers were at liberty to go right ahead and fire him.

Year before last some six million bushels of this durum or macaroni wheat was grown; last year the crop had increased to about eleven million bushels and the present crop is estimated by Mr. Carleton at from twenty to twenty-five million bushels.

But the industry has but barely started.

In connection with this subject I asked Mr. Wilson last spring how much land was suitable for such crops as durum wheat—for this wheat will make a big crop on only ten inches of rainfall—and he said, as quick as a flash:

All American Acres of Some Use.

"Why, we have no useless American acres. We shall make them all productive. We have agricultural explorers in every far corner of the world, and they are finding crops which have become so accustomed to dry conditions, similar to our own in the West, that we shall in time have plants thriving upon all of our so-called arid lands." And talks with the various explorers and travelers of the Department shows that the Secretary's statement is founded upon concrete facts. Already from distant and little-known quarters of the globe, and especially from the vast dry regions of Central Asia—the "Cradle of the World"—where the practice of agriculture reaches far back from history into dim traditional past, have been brought forth some of the most remarkable of desert plants, which are found to require but incredibly small amounts of moisture to produce luxuriant yields.

Opens Vast New Grain Belt.

But to return to durum wheat, Mark A. Carleton, to whom Secretary Wilson sent me for "details," said this:

"The Durum Wheat Belt extends on an average the width of the United States. It includes a very large fraction of a million square miles. This remarkable wheat will grow with ten inches of rainfall and yield fifteen bushels to the acre, where ordinary wheat is an absolute failure. This is about two bushels more than the average wheat yield for the United States.

"There are many other crops with as great possibilities which thrive on but slight moisture, including splendid forage plants. I might mention Kaffir corn, the sorghums, millets and broom grass, as well as new kinds of oats and barleys of wonderful drought-resisting powers, the emmer or speltz and a long line of others.

Plenty of Food for the World.

"We are constantly finding new grains and forage plants in the Caucasus, in Algeria, in Turkestan and other dry countries which will bring under cultivation amazing areas of now waste lands."

In the face of this, what does the prediction, a few years ago, of Sir William Crookes, of England, look like, to the effect that the agricultural lands of the earth had practically reached their producing limit in grain production, and who foresaw within a short time an increasing population crying unavailingly for bread?

Fish Cannot Live in Pure Water.

By use of their gills fishes breathe the air dissolved in water. Transferred to water from which the air has been artificially driven out, or in which the air absorbed by them is not replaced, they are soon suffocated. They require aerated water to maintain life and they take it in constantly through their mouths, retaining the air and expelling the water through their gills. Should the water in a lake be completely cut off from contact with the air long enough for the fish to exhaust the supply of air, they would die. It would take a severe and long continued freeze to accomplish this, but it might happen, and doubtless has frequently happened, in a small body of water.

Unique Fishing.

Up in Wisconsin there is a disciple of Isaac Walton who has a unique way of propelling his boat and fishing at the same time. Fitted up at the stern of the boat there is a paddle wheel something on the same style as those used on the Mississippi river steamers. From this there is run gearing and a chain to a crank in the center of the boat. This the old man turns with one hand while with the other hand he is able to attend to his fishing lines.

A Toast.

"Here's to you old pal!
May you live a thousand years
Just to keep things lively
In this vale of tears.
And may I live a thousand years
Just short one day,
For I wouldn't like to stay here
When you are gone away."

IRKED PLATING HODO, EXPERIMENTER FOUND THAT THE
REAL HODO HAS SOURED THE SOULS OF HUMANITY.

Connecticut Man Thought It an Easy Matter to Travel Penniless from New York to Torrington Now Realizes His Mistake.

A prosperous Connecticut man has made what he believes to be a fair test of the charity of the world, and has found it wanting. More, he has lost faith in his friends and is absolutely convinced that clothes do make the man, no matter what schools may teach or teachers preach.

William A. Gleason is his name. He was a delegate to the National Temperance Convention at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and stopping over in New York on his way home, he decided to play "hobo" for the remainder of the journey, and started out without money and dressed like a tramp.

He Had Theories.

He argued that the world is charitable. He believed that car conductors would take pity on his plight and give him "lifts"; that farmers would allow the homeless one to sleep in their barns and that kind-hearted housewives would feed the hungry after the manner of the Good Samaritan. Now he knows better.

The first conductor he told his hard luck tale to would have thrown him off the car if he hadn't jumped. The first night out he was "turned down" by half a dozen farmers and slept hungry next to a fence. Housewives called to their dogs when he approached, and one woman-charitable soul-made him saw wood for two hours for one meal.

Friends as Bad as the Rest.

Matters got so bad at last that Gleason went out of his way to visit some of his friends who had boasted of their charity. He was sure of a warm welcome, even though they wouldn't recognize him. He found his friends were no more charitable than the rest of the world, and without exception he got from them the cold shoulder, and not cold pork shoulder either.

A postmistress scowled at him when he wrote three postal cards in the post office, because he was disreputable looking.

Even the Dog Misunderstood.

Even a dog that he met troubled his soul and made him waste half an hour mending his trousers. In all his journey he met but one person who was kind to him, and this was a waitress in a cheap Bridgeport restaurant, who read him a lecture on the error of his ways.

Mr. Gleason says he is glad he made the trip, but he doesn't want to try it again. The charity of the world, he has found, is not what it is cracked up to be.

Held the Ship's Wheel While the Hurricane Raged.

Honolulu, Sept. 13.—A dead man held the wheel of the schooner Charles Levi Woodbury during several hours of the night of August 8 on her trip here from Laysan Island. He was a Japanese member of the crew and died clutching the wheel. He was found still holding it, and the vessel though greatly damaged by a hurricane, which is supposed to have caused the seaman's death from over-exertion, reached port in safety.

The Woodbury is the schooner for which the United States tug Iroquois recently left here to search, when she was long overdue from Laysan. It was found that she had put back after a terrible experience. Captain Harris, who was in command, says that his vessel was swept along at the rate of nine knots an hour without a stitch of canvas on her. He gave up hopes of saving her and said goodbye to Capt. Schlemmer of Laysan, who was on board.

Bulwarks were knocked away to keep the decks clear of water, and oil was pumped on the ocean. The schooner ran for five days and nights helpless in the gale, without the Captain being able to take an observation by either sun, moon or stars.

The Japanese complained of feeling unwell when he took his place as steersman, and he asked a companion to stand by him for a time. No one saw him die. He was found dead and stiff and holding the wheel as when alive. He had fallen forward, but his hands still held to the wheel and the vessel was still holding her course fairly well.

Which Child is the Older?

Hartford City, Ind., Sept. 14.—The unusual incident of a woman becoming a mother and a grandmother at the same hour occurred this morning.

Mrs. Flora Lechein and her daughter, Mrs. Martin Knecht, are residents of the South Side in this city. At 5 o'clock Mrs. Lechein, a large woman, weighing nearly 230 pounds, gave birth to a boy baby weighing six pounds.

At the same hour her daughter, who weighs 110 pounds, gave birth to a ten pound boy. The arrival and departure of the storks at the same hour, making Mr. and Mrs. Flora Lechein father and mother and grandfather and grandmother, is a remarkable coincidence.

The question that will trouble the two youngsters, should they both grow to manhood is. Which of the two is the elder, uncle or nephew? Inasmuch as their mothers can not tell the question will doubtless be a lifetime dispute.

No Mercy.

Winchester, Ky. Sept. 12.—Sam Hiale, the negro who is said to have assaulted Mrs. Bond near here some time ago, was brought here from Lexington for trial today. His trial is set for Thursday. There is much talk of mobbing him, but the vigorous charge of Judge Benton to the grand jury on the subject of mobs, and the determined character of Sheriff McCord, have nipped the affair in the bud it is hoped. Judge Benton got wind of an alleged organized mob today, and called up the supposed members and notified them to expect no quarter from him in case they took part. The Sheriff has a strong guard at the jail tonight.

Baron Kamura Has Typhoid.

New York, Sept. 13.—Three physicians, who are attending Baron Kamura, chief Japanese envoy, decided today that the Baron has typhoid fever. His intended return to Japan tomorrow was postponed and nurses were hastily summoned to his apartments at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel today. The Baron's temperature is 102 degrees today and he is said to be very ill, though only in the first stages of the fever. The decision as to the nature of the Baron's disease was reached after a consultation between Drs. Delafield, Brewer, and Pritchards.

A True Christian Life.

Honesty is commendable; but a man can honestly be mistaken. Paul was that way when he was going down to Damascus to persecute the Christians. He thought that he was right; but when God let on the light stopped and asked what to do; so you can see that light is the thing people need in this day and time; and we are commanded to let our light shine, so we will throw on the light.

In the 7th Romans, verse 21, we read of a man that saw men walking as trees, not very clear; so in love we want to say that much depends upon how we preach to people; we are going to the judgment day to give an account of our work and the way I have spent my time; and we don't go this way but once, and we want to come upright at the last day, with a clear record; and if we see a wrong and that wrong is likely to do some one else wrong we ought to correct it. So we will say to the preachers and people that Paul in the 7th of Romans was giving his experience as a man under the law, without salvation but wanted to do right. Paul was not talking about the evils that were in other people; on the contrary, where he was. But there was a time when this evil was of him, bringing him into captivity to the law of sin which was in his members, verse 23; also in verse 20 he said it was sin that dwelt in him; so you can see that he was giving his experience as a sinner under the law, with carnality in him, for to be carnally minded is death. Romans 8 and 6; he says let not sin, therefore reign in your mortal bodies, that ye should obey within the lust thereof; 7 and 12. Paul was not a sinner at the time he wrote this letter to the Romans; but he wanted them to know what he had come through when he was wanting to do right; a man must get right before he can do right; Jesus said a good tree can not bring evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Matthew 7 and 18. The reason Paul could not do good, sin was controlling him at that time, just like the woman was bound to her husband, so long as he liveth; so Paul was bound by Satan until he decided to move off of Satan's grounds and be a free man; so Paul moved over into the 8th chap. of Romans and declared his freedom from condemnation; he is now living under a new king. There is now no condemnation to those which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit, for the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death; Romans 8 to 12 now to the church at Rome he says, likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead unto sin but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord; Rom. 6 and 11.

I don't wonder at some people saying that the Christian life is a hard life, if they are living in the 7th of Romans; I would call it a hard life indeed; but the 7th chapter is a wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of death. Romans 7 to 24; Glory be to God in he has found one who can and does deliver men if they will meet the conditions laid down in the Bible. Jesus has said that he came to destroy the works of the devil. Glory to his name.

Now when Adam and Eve transgressed or broke the commandments given to them in the Garden; Satan put into their hearts the seed of life

You Must Sleep.

If you cannot, it is due to an irritated or congested state of the brain, which will soon develop into nervous prostration. Nature demands sleep, and it is as important as food; it is a part of her building and sustaining process. This period of unconsciousness relaxes the mental and physical strain, and allows nature to restore exhausted vitality.

Dr. Miles' Nervine brings refreshing sleep, because it soothes the irritation and removes the congestion.

It is also a nerve builder; it nourishes and strengthens every nerve in your body, and creates energy in all the organs. Nothing will give strength and vitality as surely and quickly as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"During the past winter I had two attacks of La Grippe which left me very weak, and in bad condition. I was so nervous I could not sleep. My wife, after trying different remedies, went for a doctor. The doctor was out, and a neighbor recommended Dr. Miles' Nervine, and she brought home a bottle. I had not slept for some time, and had terrible pains in my head. After taking a few doses of Nervine the pain was not so severe, and I slept. I am now taking the second bottle, and am very much improved." HENRY M. SMITH, Underhill, Vt.

or a principle that comes down to all of the race, and this thing can't be forgiven. But things that it causes can; now here is where so many Christians make a sad mistake; they stop too soon, don't go to the bottom and get the thing that causes so much trouble out of the way, and the result is the road is hard to travel; the thing that undermines or deceives him is still down in his heart, and it can't be forgiven; but it must be cleansed by the Holy Ghost and Fire and Paul is the crucifier or putting to death of the old man, which is a second benefit or entire sanctification; this is plainly taught in God's word. But a man has to want it so bad that he is willing to die out to the world and its pleasures, and be willing to go the death route, for it takes this to get rid of the Old Man, as he is called; but it pays to go the route. Oh, the peace, the soul rest, the satisfaction, the comfort, the joy we get by deciding to let God's will be done, in and by us. 1st Thessalonians, 4 to 3.

Thoughts.

BY O. G. W.

O great-unknown, eternal Power,
How vain all finite zeal,
To fathom what thou dost embower
Though we its essence feel;
What though we study Nature's laws
Involved within them lies
The latent force, creation's cause,
And untold mysteries.
Though for a time our hungry mind
Resorts to earthly love,
And, understanding, seeks to find
And science's paths explore.
Infinity and all it means
Far, far beyond us lies,
Dissolved are wisdom's dreams,
Like clouds on summer skies;
And once again we feel the sway
Of that within our hearts
That keeps those fearful doubts at bay
And faith in God imparts.
In vain we seek to analyze
The perfume of a rose.
And yet 'twere folly to despise
The sweetness it bestows.
E'en so whate'er we deepest feel
That least we can define,
But, though we may not break the seal
Or fathom the divine,
With trusting hearts we may receive
The influx from above.
It matters not what we BELIEVE,
But what we truly LOVE!
For love it is that shapes our thought
And doth our life imbue,
To know the right avails us naught,
Unless we love it, too.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Frank Conger was in Louisville this week with a car load of stock.

Copher's home bakery turns out the Pollard brand of bread. None better.

Frank L. Orr, an old Marion boy, is now located at 4th and Broadway Los Angeles, California, and is engaged in the real estate business. His old friends here enjoyed his long letter recently published in the PRESS a few weeks ago.

Al Dean who is one of, if not the most, progressive stock raisers in the county, left Tuesday at noon for Lexington to attend the State Fair. He is a great lover of fine stock and misses an opportunity to look at the exhibits.

Marion's two pushing grocery drummers, Messrs. Phillip Seigler and Will Staton, keep moving up and down the line of the I. C. R. R. and also to the interior points. They both represent first class houses and are valuable acquisitions to our city.

Miss Iva Hicklin celebrated her sixteenth birthday last Tuesday evening at her home east of the I. C. R. R. Many of her young friends called to congratulate her and the evening was delightfully spent in games and other social amusements. Refreshments were served and all who were fortunate enough to attend were delighted.

J. A. Stegar was in Marion on business the first of the week. Miss Leaffa Wilborn, of Marion, has been visiting Miss Edna Cole for several days. The protracted meeting at the Methodist church is progressing nicely and growing in interest. Rev. McAfee, of Marion, who is conducting the services is an able and forceful speaker, and is delivering strong and interesting sermons.—Princeton Leader.

The editor of the PRESS desiring to look into the canning industry with the view of getting a factory of that character here visited the Crider Canning Co.'s plant last Tuesday. The trip was pleasant and profitable and quite instructive and interesting. The plant there is having a most successful season and is shipping its product to all points of the compass. This season they have sold and shipped twelve car loads of a value of over $20,000 and have on hand for later business as much more. The tomatoes are brought in by the ton. One man can tend ten acres and it will produce much better returns than any crop raised in Kentucky even at $5 per ton for the tomatoes. The factory at Crider is under the management of Jas. Wilson, of the Crider section. In all a hundred hands are employed.

Mrs. Eliza Pritchett, relict of the late Wm. Pritchett, and mother of J. W. Pritchett, the Gladstone merchant, died at the home of her son where she has resided for 21 years, Saturday afternoon, Sept. 16th, 1905, at 2 o'clock, aged 85 years and six months. She was born in Henderson county, Ky., near where Corydon now stands, in March, 1820. Most of her life was spent in Henderson and Union counties, except the last 11 years which were spent in this county. She was a Christian and belonged to that church for nearly a half century. She left three children: Mrs. A. J. Grant; J. W. Pritchett and Nancy Pritchett, all of Gladstone. The burial took place Sunday at Rock Springs, in Webster county.

The PRESS notes with pleasure the voluntary contribution of the Southern Seed Company which we publish below. This shows a spirit of enterprise which is quite commendable and is highly appreciated. Louisville, Ky., Sept. 16, 1905. Messrs. Cochran & Pickens, Marion, Ky. Gentlemen:—The farmers of Crittenden county have always given us a large share of their trade on both field seeds and fertilizers, through Mr. J. Frank Conger and ourselves, and being desirous of showing my appreciation to some extent, I enclose you herewith the company's check for $10.00, to be applied to the Entertainment fund for the celebration of New Marion, October, 24th. Trusting I shall have the pleasure of being with you at that time, and wishing you success, I remain, yours very truly, W. J. DRIEN.

MONEY UP,

To Build the Loup Railroad from Mexico to Salem and to Marion via the Springs.

Capt. Haase informs the PRESS that the railroad to branch from Mexico, Ky., to Salem, thence via Crittenden Springs to Marion is now pretty well assured, as the money to make the survey is in the bank at Salem, having all been paid in. This is cheering news to all parties interested in mining, or any other enterprise for that matter along the proposed lines. Let every one assist by giving rights of way and other encouragement and we'll get the road.

Ollie James at Mayfield.

Congressman Ollie M. James arrived in the city Sunday night for the purpose of filling his appointment at the court house Monday. The largest crowd seen in the city for many years was here to greet him. He did not come for the purpose of making a political speech; he came for the interest of the men who told in the tobacco patch. Our popular Congressman is thoroughly in accord with our farmers in their struggle against the tobacco trust. His speech Monday afternoon to a representative crowd of Graves county farmers and the enthusiasm he received shows his popularity among the people and their great love for him in this fight against the tobacco kings of the east. Mr. James has a warm place in the hearts of Graves county people.—Mayfield Messenger.
