MINING NOTES.

What is Being Done in the Great Kentucky Mineral Fields.

The Eclipse Mining company is stalling hoisting and pumping machinery and preparing to actively exploit its holdings in the Kentucky Fluor Spar District. The recent acquisition of this company on the McMinn farm is proving a great stimulus to further development. This is proving to be a very promising body of zinc sulphides, and the developments are being watched with interest by all concerned.

Renewed interest has been shown in the Eagle Fluor Spar company's prospects, the past season, and a new process zinc separating plant has been built and the machinery recently installed. Preparations have been made for an extensive campaign of the Cullen property near Salem. 500 foot shaft has been put down on a zinc fluor spar vein, and cross-cuts are being driven in two other recently discovered on the property. With such prospects ahead of them the campaign looks very favorable for the development of an excellent producing property.

The interest being shown in this district is growing and inquiries are being made concerning the possibility of this field as a zinc producer. A product of this field will find a ready sale if the separation of the lead and fluor spar proves effective. The zinc smelters will fight off any zinc concentrates having very high fluor spar content as impure. The problem of separation heretofore, vital to the district and not solved. The Lead and Zinc order.

The Union Central company is just erecting a concentrating plant on its property at Crider. It is expected that the prospect work done last summer will furnish sufficient mill dirt to keep the plant in operation.

Report has just been received of a strike of zinc carbonate, lead and fluor spar has been made on the Deane and Campbell land southeast of Princeton. The strike was made in the Louisville-Marion Mining company.

The West Kentucky Coal company equipped their great Tradewater with new automatic self-dumping chutes and are now prepared to haul coal with greater rapidity than ever before. Sturgis Herald.

The Crittenden Coal and Coke company has bought the coal lands which have been leased from Charles H. Hays between this place and Dekalb and will now run their mine with more force than ever before. Sturgis Herald.

The New Railroad.

The engineers of the Harrisburg & River Railroad completed their survey of the line from Galatia to City last Saturday. They report they found almost an air line. This is above overflow and over which gives them easy grades. It crosses the Middle Fork at east of Kias hill, Bankston just west of the J. L. Dorris farm, and crosses the subdivision of the J. L. Parish's subdivision of the section 16, crossing the Big Bear River.

The corps started South from last point Monday morning, and withstanding the severe cold weather have gone through the mountain to the southwestern part of the State at Gibbons hollow. They found a fine and a favorable grade through the Harrisburg Chronicle.

The New Century Hotel.

A deed was filed Friday, transferring the New Century Hotel at Dawson to J. V. Hayden, the consideration being $28,750. The management of the hotel made an assignment some time ago and Mr. Hayden became the owner, but the deed was not filed until Friday.

The company owning the big hotel property have met with many ups and downs and about a year ago an assignment was made and Mr. Hayden subsequently became owner of the property.

Large improvements in the hotel are contemplated, it is said by Mr. Hayden, who will spare no expense in making by far the finest in this section of the state. It could not be learned who will manage the hotel during the coming season. Madisonville Hustler.

Opportunity Knocked at the Door.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 17.—In spite of all the efforts of the Toledo board of education to hold her to her contract for two years, Miss Mary E. Reed was married today to Dr. H. H. Cleveland, of Orange, Mass. Miss Reed tendered her resignation which the school board declined to accept. But she was not to be deterred from her purpose, and without further formality quit her position in order to become a bride.

Welcome Back.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Coley Moore will be glad to learn that they have returned from Texas and will make their home here. Mr. Moore is one of the most popular of the many gentlemen who travel out of Hopkinsville, and will again go on the road for a large Evansville grocery house. Mrs. Moore will go to housekeeping as soon as she can secure a house. Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

Miss Annie Cannon married Christopher M. Berndt at Ledge wood, North Dakota, ceremony by Rev. E. Marcus, Jan. 11th, 1906, at the residence of the minister. Miss Annie is the daughter of G. W. Cannon of this city, and went to the northwest last August to visit her sister, Mrs. W. H. Berndt; and while there met her husband. It was a case of love at first sight, and the young people kept their secret well until the day before Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Berndt left for Kentucky, and then they had the solemn rites of matrimony administered. They are living on the farm of his brother who married Miss Edna Cannon; and now the two sisters will be together having married brothers. Mrs. W. H. Berndt and her husband are now visiting her father's family here on North Main street.

O. O.

R. N. WALKER DEAD.

A Good Man and Honored Citizen Passes to His Reward.

After a long and painful illness, extending over several years, Robert Newton Walker, one of the best known and most highly esteemed and beloved men of Marion and Crittenden county, passed away at his home on N. Main street, in this city, on Wednesday morning at nine o'clock.

Mr. Walker is survived by his wife who was before her marriage Miss Sarah Jane Clement to whom he was married March 4, 1857. This union was blessed by eight children, two of whom are dead, they being Miss Lou and Joseph H., six surviving, all of whom were with him during his last illness, excepting his son, R. C. Walker. The children are:

R. C. Walker of Grand Junction, Colorado.
Mrs. Jesse Olive, of Edinville.
Mrs. Henry Leubetter, of Elizabethtown, Ill.
Mrs. D. B. Moore, Mrs. E. H. Doss and Miss Nellie Walker of this city.

Robert Newton Walker was born in this county near Tolu on June 4, 1833, and was therefore in his seventy-third year. He lived on the farm until 1868 when he was elected Sheriff, defeating Robert Coffield, formerly postmaster at Marion. The fact that he was endorsed in 1872 and re-elected proves that he was one of the best sheriffs the county ever had.

He engaged in the retail dry goods business for several years in Marion with P. H. Woods, now of Ardmore, I. T., and in the leaf tobacco business with J. C. Elder, Jr., now in the post office, and also the late Piney Frank Wilson, and later in the furniture business with his son-in-law, Jesse Olive.

In all stations of life he has had the confidence, love and esteem of the people.

He retired from active business pursuits on account of his failing health several years ago, since which time he has been tenderly cared for by his devoted wife and children.

He was one of the pillars of the Methodist Episcopal church, and few were the times when his seat was vacant at services when held there.

The funeral will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. R. McAfee.

Patrick Henry Kemp Dead.

Patrick Kemp, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Kemp, of this city, died Tuesday morning Jan. 23rd at 5 o'clock. He had suffered extremely since Dec. 13th, '05, when he accidentally shot himself in the left shoulder inflicting a wound which caused his death. All the medical aid possible was given him but it seemed that death had held him.

He was born Feb. 14th, 1839 and if he had have lived until Feb. 14th would have been 17 years old. He was born and reared near Shady Grove and had only lived in Marion a short time but has many warm companions, school boys and girls who miss him from their ranks.

His mother was Miss Mary Virginia Fox, daughter of Noah Fox one of the county's best men.

He leaves besides his parents, one half-sister, Mrs. Sam Brown and one half-brother, Jno Kemp, and six brothers and sisters, the oldest being Mrs. Frank Swisher, of Tunica, Miss. Ashley, Dedic, Franklin, Robert and Pressley.

Since his affliction he made a bright profession of religion in the presence of relatives and friends. The funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon at the Baptist church by Rev. T. A. Conway and interment at the New Cemetery.

In Memory of R. H. Yates.

Robert H. Yates was born Oct 17, 1863 and departed this life Jan. 6th, 1906. He was 43 years, 2 months and 20 days old, was born, reared and died at Sheridan, Ky., this county. He was the elder son of Rev. and Mrs. John T. Yates. Nov. 11th 1885 he was married to Miss Sue Minner, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Minner. To this happy union seven children have blessed their home, of which four still survive, two boys and two girls, Charles and Ray, Lena and Birdie, besides his wife and children and five brothers and two sisters are left to mourn his loss, the Evangelist William B. Redford, Learner, George and Loren, Mrs. Margaret Clemens, of St. Louis, and Ima.

He professed faith in Christ in 1884, joined the M. E. church and has always lived a devoted christian, a faithful husband, a loving father and was highly respected by all who knew him. Mr. Yates' health began failing him some two or three years hence and gradually grew worse until he was confined to his room. He suffered untold agonies at times until the death angel spirited his soul to a haven of rest. He bore his pain like a soldier and never grew weary or impatient and oft times lay on his sick bed and sang and prayed with his family, kindred or friends and on number of occasions while alone could be heard singing praises to God on high. He was a dear lover of music either vocal or instrumental and his many friends were ever ready to assemble at his home and join him in singing.

He was a great church and Sunday school worker, always attended and took part whenever his health would permit and for many years camped and attended the famous Hurricane camp meeting and was ever ready and willing to lend a helping hand and contributed cheerfully to anything for the cause of rebuilding of Christ until called to rest.

His remains were interred at the Love cemetery. Revs. Bogges and Gibbs conducted the funeral services at the grave. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community and may the blessings of God rest and abide with them forever. Weep not for him who peacefully rests. For our Creator knows the best, God's will not ours has been fulfilled, A place is vacant in our home which never can be filled.

A FRIEND.

THE HOME COMING.

Of Kentuckians.—An Outline of The Programme.

The programme for "Home Coming Week" in Louisville, June 13 to 17, when one hundred thousand former Kentuckians are expected to go back to their native heath, is rapidly taking shape.

The first day, Wednesday, June 13 will be known as Reception and Welcome day; the second, June 14, as Foster day; the third, June 15 as Daniel Boone day; the fourth, June 16, as Greater Kentucky day, and the 5th day, Sunday, June 15, as Until We Meet Again.

The address of welcome is to be delivered by Henry Watterson and responded to by David R. Francis, of Missouri. Others on the programme are Wm. Lindsey, John G. Carlisle, John M. Harlan, Thos. T. Crittenden, Adlai E. Stevenson, etc.

There will be a civic and military parade on the first day, and every county in the state will make headquarters in the Armory, which is the second largest building of the kind in the United States. On "Foster Day" there will be several events in memory of the author of "My Old Kentucky Home," including the unveiling of a statue of Foster, which will be cast in bronze and later placed in the new Capitol at Frankfort. Daniel Boone day will be one of the features of the week, during which there will be sewing bees, apple parings, corn huskings and old fashioned dances.

The Commercial Club has offered a handsome medal to the person present on Daniel Boone day, who can prove the closest relationship to the pioneer. On Greater Kentucky day there will be barbecue campfires, etc., and orators will be given the opportunity to tell how Kentuckians have helped make other states greater by their having lived in them. On Sunday former Kentuckians will fill all the pulpits in Louisville. Send name and address of any former Kentuckian you may know to Mr. R. E. Hughes Secretary Commercial Club, Louisville, Ky.

Opening Oration.

The following was composed by A. E. Brown, and delivered by Victor Young on opening day at Lillie Dale school:

We meet today to do homage to our school and school house. Parents, friends and school mates, I extend to you a cordial welcome. I hope that all may feel at home in our new building, of which we feel so proud; this speaks for our district No. 47 that we are moving in the educational ranks of the day. We leave you, friends, to judge whether or not I have spoken the truth to you.

We can not expect to succeed in this life without an effort and education is the lever that drives the business world. Why should we not march to the front, with a beautiful home and lovely surroundings? I see no reason why our banner should not be foremost, with golden letters large and clear, "Excelsior" as our motto; then labor to keep this emblem aloft.

Will you, parents and friends lend Will you, patrons and friends lend us a helping hand? We are here in school work, trying to reach forth from the pale faced moon those honors which we so richly deserve.

The question is can we do it? We only ask that you lend a helping hand and see if we will not carry away with us the honors of a well trained school, and our boys and girls go out in life with quickened minds, and fresh memories of good and profitable days spent while at the Lillie Dale school.

We believe, dear friends, that this help is forthwith coming; as witness I call your attention to this building, for which words fail to express our gratitude to parents and to our noble county superintendent, Mr. John B. Paris.

We also point to the walls with pride, and could we but call into our midst these, our forefathers, they would doubtless say, come up higher; you have been faithful over a few things, we will make you ruler over great things.

All nature seems to join in with us on this lovely day, and God himself shows his admiration by smiles of sunshine on a day set apart for the advancement of civilization and betterment of the human family, made in His own image.

We are glad to meet our friends and schoolmates today for many reasons, sociability for one, the most needed in this line, can only be had through such friendly gatherings as we have today. We expect one and all to feel free and enjoy this gathering, and may it ever be that through school life there may some pleasure attached as well as work.

May Lillie Dale ever live and prosper, fostered by kind parents, such as you have here today. We look forth to a rich harvest, where all the boys and girls may reap a genuine education that will guide and keep them through this life. Such are the fruits of an education to be aimed at and secured by all American boys and girls.

Long may we live and prosper ever and reap the rich harvest that awaits the faithful and obedient boys and girls.

Dec. 6, 1905.

Bent Her Double.

"I knew no one, for four weeks, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter, of Pittsburgh, Pa., "and when I got better, although I had one of the best doctors I could get, I was bent double, and had to rest my hands on my knees when I walked. From this terrible affliction I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." Guaranteed to cure stomach, liver and kidney disorders; at Woods & Orme's drug store; price 50c.

In Memoriam.

"There is a voice we shall hear no more, Sweet as the odors of spring were they, Precious and rich but they have died away."

"Mrs. Gilliam is dead!" Such was the startling announcement on Tuesday morning of last week. Surely, surely, there must be some mistake. Seeing her less than two days previous, in apparently the best of health, no premonition that death's scythe was so near.

Alas! when ushered into the death chamber, where the still form manifested no sign of recognition. Oh, God! the aching heart was wrung with anguish, for though the casket was still warm the immortal soul's departure was confirmed by the immobility of those lovely and placid features.

The puny power of man against the Omnipotence of the great Creator.

Truly she was a grand, good woman, one whose benign influence was felt and recognized by all with whom she came in contact. She found life's voyage strewn with rugged scenes. Death had robbed her of the dearest treasures of her life, she well knew the truth of the adage, "A sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things."

With such an aching heart, there was ever a placid, sweet smile of resignation always hovering around her lovely face. She numbered her friends by her acquaintances.

"None knew her but to love her, None named her but to praise."

Adieu! friend of my girlhood days, You have crossed the dark river. I am waiting for Sharon's boat to ferry me over to the other side, where you and my other cherished ones await me.

A FRIEND.

The Dress of Paris.

Spring is certainly the season for the trotteur frock, so useful for morning wear, writes Edouard La Fontaine in the February Delineator.

For walking costumes cloth is less and less used, and fancy materials are now little use fancy materials are now more a la mode. Small checks, stripes, stripes especially in black and white, are in favor, and gray is very popular.

Every kind of light, transparent material, either plain or finely striped, will be much worn, and the voiles will be unusually fine and light, no woolen voiles but silk with so dull an effect that it looks like wool.

These soft materials lends itself most successfully to the new fashion. The new trend of fashion is toward the long, supple, flowing folds, consequently silk, as we have known it, is no longer in vogue, but its place is "Radium," a silk material that is at once brilliant, soft and strong. It can be had plain, glace, printed, striped, spotted, covered with small designs, either noticeable or almost imperceptible, yet which rings a change on the perfectly plain material.

Chiffon faille revived with added beauty and softness of weave, is extremely popular, and crepe de Chine with the countless varieties of lace that is to be found on the market, are as popular as ever.

Long lace coats, which were so much admired last year, will be worn as well as short vests and boleros. The Princess and Empire effects are the prevailing style.

A Surprise Party.

A pleasant surprise party may be given to your stomach and liver, by taking a medicine which will relieve their pain and discomfort, viz: Dr. King's New Life Pills. They are a most wonderful remedy, affording sure relief and cure, for headache, dizziness and constipation. 25c at Woods & Orme's drug store.

Barn Demolished.

Monday afternoon's strong wind, preceding a slight fall of hail made havoc in several communities in the county.

At Farmersville the house of Luther McChesney was completely demolished. The residence stood in front of the church and was almost completed, lacking only doors and window glazing. The wind scattered it in every direction.—Pittetion Leader.

LESSON XVI.

There are no Sunday School lessons in this week's readings.

DAILY MANNA.

Sunday, Jan. 28, Second preaching tour and companions on it, Lk. 8: 1-3.

Monday, Jan. 29, Christ enters the house followed by multitudes, Mk. 3: 19-20.

Tuesday, Jan. 30, Christ heals the blind and dumb demoniac, Mt. 12: 22, 23.

Wednesday, Jan. 31, His kinsman accuse him of insanity, Mk. 3: 21.

Thursday, Feb. 1, Dispute with scribes and Pharisees, Mt. 14: 24-37.

Friday, Feb. 2, Scribe and Pharisees demand a sign, Mt. 12: 38-45.

Saturday, Feb. 3, Christ's true disciples, his true kindred, Mt. 12: 46-50; Mk. 3: 31-35; Lk. 8: 19-21.

HELPS TO STUDY.

"Beelzebub" is derived from that of a heathen deity (2 Kings, 1: 3), who at one time was regarded as a great enemy of Jehovah. The Pharisees were arrayed against him and would not receive his doctrine. If any people in the world should have been susceptible to spiritual teaching, it was the Jews, but the Pharisees had lost spiritual susceptibility in their devotion to external rules.

Jesus teaches that mere physical relationship, blood kin, etc., are inferior to spiritual relationship, and that his true kindred are those who do God's will.

The Messianic Hope.—In their state of subjection the Jews sighed for relief and looked earnestly for the coming Messiah as a Deliverer. They had suffered enough in the last 150 years to make them sigh for relief. The Messianic hope originated in the prophecies of the Old Testament. Daniel's prophecy of the everlasting kingdom that should be set up in the days of those kings, and these had all reigned and fell except Rome, which was last and under whose government they were then groaning, it made them aglow with intense desire. Even term "son of man," used by Daniel, was not inappropriately applied by them to the Messiah. The Targums, which were free translations or paraphrases, of many of the prophecies contain announcements breathing the same spirit. The apocryphal writings, such as the "Book of Enoch," "Maccabees," the writings of Baruch, Esdras and others were full of Messianic predictions. The Sibylline prophecies, 140 B. C. gave many glowing glimpses of the coming Messianic kingdom. They were longing for the time when God should establish upon the earth an eternal kingdom of peace, into which all men should be gathered.

O. T. HISTORY, Period I.—From the creation 4004 B. C. to the Deluge, 2348 B. C., a period of 1656 years. Place. Principal events; mention four. Principal persons; mention four. Notice that the lives of the three patriarchs, Adam, Methuselah and Shem, extend over a period of 2150 years; that is, from the Creation to nearly 500 years after the Deluge. Adam was contemporary with Methuselah 243 years; Methuselah with Enoch 100 years; Shem with Abraham 100 years. Thus the story of Creation could easily and accurately pass to Abraham through three men.

PALESTINE, the maritime plain.—This was the plain that lay along the coast of the Mediterranean Sea. It is broken into two parts by Mt. Carmel. North of Carmel it is a narrow sea-coast plain, called Phoenicia. South of Carmel it is wider, ranging from 8 miles wide near Carmel to 20 miles farther south. Immediately south of Carmel it is called Sharon; farther south bordering on Judea, it was called Judea. It is a fertile, undulating plain from 100 to 200 feet above sea-level. These sea-plains were not occupied by Israelites very largely in O. T. times, but were more fully occupied in N. T. times.

THE TEACHER, His character.—By the character of the teacher we mean the sum-total of what he is; his belief, his morals, his manners. It is made up of his thoughts, his disposition, his affections, his words, his actions. It embraces all the man is at heart and in his life, secret, social and public. In his character the teacher should be

Nervous Worn-Out

If you are in this condition, your nerve force is weak—the power is giving out, the organs of your body have "slowed up," and do their work imperfectly. This failure to do the work required, clogs the system and brings distress and disease. When the nerves are weak the heart is unable to force the life-giving blood through your veins; the stomach fails to digest food; the kidneys lack power to filter impurities from the blood, and the poisonous waste remains in the system to breed disease. Nerve energy must be restored. Dr. Miles' Nervine will do it, because it strengthens the nerves; it is a nerve medicine and tonic, that rebuilds the entire nervous system.

"Several years ago I was all broken down. I was nervous, worn-out, could not sleep, and was in constant pain. I doctored for months, and finally the doctor said he could do nothing for me. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and used altogether eight bottles, and I became strong and healthy, and now weigh 170 pounds."

H. C. CUNNINGHAM,
108 Ellsworth Ave., Allegheny, Pa.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

Letter from Oklahoma.

LAWTON, OKLA., Jan. 19.—Editor Press: As many of my friends have asked me to write to them, and as we feel that we have so many friends who read the Press, therefore we make this plan of writing to them.

We left home in October with Mr. H. C. Cobb of Kuttawa, and came to Lawton and bought a farm through the agency of Ketch, Trent & Co.

On Dec. 19th Mr. J. T. Campbell and family together with my wife, and I started for our new home on the farm four miles east of Lawton. We had a safe trip but have had some inconvenience by not getting our goods for some time, but we managed to get along much better than we expected, and we found other people here getting along nicely with less to do with than they did in Ky. so we took lessons from them and managed to keep house without our goods. But now we are located on the farm, and do want to say that we certainly are delighted with the farm we have and with the country generally.

This country had its first settler but four years ago, and at that time there was not a railroad in the country. Today there are five ways out of Lawton by rail and the population is about 8,000. The country is laid off into one mile squares and roads are open. Every 160 acres a settler on it and there is a fine school house every three miles all over the country. And by the way Comanche county, is 60 miles long by 70 miles broad.

Every school house is nicely furnished and each one has an organ. Every farm has quite a lot in cultivation and on some of them nearly all the land has been plowed.

At this time there has not been more than four days that a farmer could not plow this winter and most of them say they will sow oats early in February. They raise oats, corn, cotton, wheat, Kaffler corn, Milo maize, millet, flax, sorghum, broom corn, etc., and all crops seem to do well.

This is said to be a very healthy country and it should be as the elevation is high.

We certainly would be glad to give more particularly to any one wishing more information about the country, and while we will always have a kindly place in our hearts for Kentucky, and the people there, yet we do think this is a better place to start in and also one where you can enjoy the comforts of life.

With best wishes to all we beg to remain,

J. C. CLARK.

A Porcine Wonder.

Mr. W. H. Nall, of Tiptonville, sold a hog Tuesday which was raised in rather a remarkable manner, says the Elizabethtown News. It was the runt of a litter of thirteen pigs. To prevent it starving it was taken to the house to be fed by hand. It immediately associated itself with a litter of pups, and was suckled by a bird dog. The pups from some cause died and the pig became the only surviving younger member of the family. After several months the bird dog attempted to wean it, but with no avail. It persistently followed its foster mother around the premises and evinced its hunger by incessant squeals. It was finally penned and fed for the market. Mr. Nall sold the entire litter Tuesday and strange to say the dog-suckled hog tipped the beam at 175 pounds; while the other members of the family only averaged 130 per head.

Thousand Dollars Worth of Good.

A. H. Thurnes, a well known coal operator of Buffalo, O., writes: "I have been afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble for years, passing gravel and stones with excruciating pain. I got no relief from medicine until I began taking Foley's Kidney Cure, then the result was surprising. A few doses started the brick dust like fine stones and now I have no pain across my kidneys and I feel like a new man. It has done me $1,000 worth of good. Woods & Orme.

SHERIDAN.

Glendale school closed last Friday.

Mr. John Hunt of Indiana made a flying trip through this neighborhood last Friday.

The mineral man, Mr. Temme, was in this neighborhood looking after his mineral interests a few days ago.

Miss Ada Thomas returned home Sunday from Missouri, after spending a month or six weeks with relatives and friends, and reports a fine time.

Miss Maud Humphrey is visiting at her home near Sheridan.

Mack Thomas' horse was seen hitched up at Cole Moore's Sunday evening; hurrah for Mack.

Mrs. Addie Jones of the Sheridan neighborhood, died this week.

Forced to Starve.

B. F. Leek, of Concord, Ky., says: "For 20 years I suffered agonies, with a sore on my upper lip, so painful, sometimes, that I could not eat. After vainly trying everything else, I cured it with Bucklen's Arnica Salve." It's great for burns, cuts and wounds. At Woods & Orme's drug store; Only 25c.

J. O. DIXON.
Dec. 12, 1905.

After visiting his father and family for several weeks, Ensign Clarence E. Landram left Saturday for Washington City, where he will await orders from the Navy Department.

This is the longest stay since going to the Navy and his many friends enjoyed having him among them very much. Clarence is one of the brightest boys Livingston county has ever produced, in proof of which he stands right in line for promotion in the Navy.—Livingston Banner. Ensign Clarence E. Landram was the guest of his uncle, Dr. A. J. Driskill and family during the holidays.

A Freak Ear of Corn.

J. R. Moore, of Repton, brought to the Press office a corn cob, from which he had shelled the corn, which is in the shape of a man's hand. The thumb and all four fingers being well formed and plainly outlined. It has been examined by several people and is certainly a curiosity.

NOTICE!

In future there will be no warrant on any electric light lamps sold by this company. We buy the best and our patrons by turning them off when not in use will treble the life of them, but in either case will take their own risk on them the same as they would on a lamp chimney. ## Obituary.

The Rev. R. M. Woodsides, of Braggadocio, Mo., died at that place happy in a Saviour's love on the 5th day of last December, of pneumonia, after an illness of eleven days.

Mr. Woodsides was for many years a resident of Crittenden county, and if I mistake not served for awhile in the Federal army. He was known as a public school teacher of the highest class, back in the 70's and contributed many articles in verse and prose to the local paper. The following stanza from one of his poems is still fresh in the writer's memory: "Alas! how vain and cheating

Are all the hopes of earth;
They're like the moments fleeting
And joys will die at birth.
They, like the little flower,
That looked so sweet at morn,
Will perish in an hour,
And leave the heart forlorn."

He came to Dixon schoolhouse, one mile north of Hampton, early in the spring of 1873, taught a school at that place during the spring and two or three times later on where Joy is now located.

He professed religion at the great Arbor meeting held by Eld. W. B. Hosick, and there at Dixon in the summer of 1874; he was married to Miss Henrietta Weaver early the following winter.

He began preaching shortly after he was married, and at the time of his death was a local Methodist minister.

He leaves a wife and several children to mourn his death.

He's gone and I'll see him no more.

This side the mournful tomb,

Gone, but I knew him well of yore.

Knew every look his features wore.

When they were in their bloom.

I shut my eyes and see him yet,

To me a thoughtful man,

Whose verse I strove in youth to get

And shuddered while I dared to let

His eyes my lyrics scan.

He's gone from us but there's a clime

Where parted friends may meet,

Beyond the sunset verge of time

And tune their harps to lays sublime

At Jesus' sacred feet.

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

Religion at Home.

Religion, if in heavenly truth attired Needs only to be seen to be admired.

—Cowper.

Our greatest writers all agree that religion affords home security and happiness, removes family friction and causes all complicated wheels of the home machinery to move along smoothly. When dark and sad days begin to shadow the home, what can cheer and brighten the sinking heart like turning to One who can make the blinding tears of sorrow to be the seed pearls of the brightest crown. What does a home become without religion as its light and rule? Human nature is checked and modulated by the amiable spirit and lovely character of Jesus. The heart is softened, sentiment refined, passions subdued, hopes elevated, purposes ennobled, the world cast into the shade and heaven realized as the first prize.

The great want of our intellectual and moral nature is here met and the home education becomes impregnated with the spirit and elements of preparation for eternity. Like manna it will feed our souls, quench our thirst, sweeten the cup of life and shed a halo of glory and of gladness around our fireside. Let yours, therefore, be the religious home and God will delight to dwell therein and his blessings will descend, like the dews of Heaven, upon it. Yours will be the home of love and harmony, of family hopes and happiness.

Good morals will be the crowning attribute of your peaceful home, "the crown of living stars" which shall adorn the right of tribulation, and the pillar of cloud and of fire in the pilgrimage to a better country.

It will strew the family threshold with the flowers of promise and enshrine the memories of loved ones gone before in all the fragrance of that blessed hope of reunion in heaven which looms up from a dying hour. It shall give to the infant soul its perfect flowering and expand it in all the fullness of a generous love making "lustrous in the livery of divine knowledge." Then in the dark hour of home separation and bereavement, when the question is put to the mourning parents, "It is well with the child, is it well with thee?" You can answer with joy, "It is well."

You must have had sixty at least! What? Only forty? Then it must be your gray hair. Ayer's Hair Vigor stops these frequent birthdays. It gives all the early, deep, rich color to gray hair, and checks falling hair. And it keeps the scalp clean and healthy.

"I was greatly troubled with dandruff which produced a most disagreeable itching of the scalp. I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor and the dandruff soon disappeared. My hair also stopped falling out until now I have a splendid head of hair."—DAVID C. KINNE, Plainfield, Conn.

In Memoriam.

I knew the Hon. T. Everett Butler well, and knew him to be a courteous christian gentleman. I offer these lines to his Memory:

Death always strikes a shining crest,
Unerring in its aim;

And in yielding its claim
The mortal takes immortal rest.

A score and ten brief years less one,
Measured the span of life

Ended ere scarce begun the strife,
And yet in golden words 'tis writ,
"Well done!"

The first of thoughts began thy tomb
Nor silent, pulseless shaft

That itches virtue in marble aft-
Long have come the shadows of gloom.

"Come walk with me," said Fame,
And with the guidance of my hand

Stamp upon thy native land
The granite of a righteous name.

Noble the structure of the youth,
And noble the very life plan

Of right with man and man,
And the dearest of earth—the truth.

Faded as fade the stars when day
Floods them with too portentous light,

Tho' faded they shine on as bright
Where stars nor life loath never a ray.

W. HUGH WATSON,
Jan. 19, 1906.

The Grip.

"Before we can sympathize with others, we must have suffered ourselves." No one can realize the suffering attendant upon an attack of the grip, unless he has the actual experience. There is probably no disease that causes so much physical and mental agony, or which so successfully defies medical aid. All danger from the grip, however, may be averted by the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Among the thousands who have used this remedy, not one case has ever been reported that has resulted in pneumonia or that has not recovered. For Woods & Orme, the leading store

You are tired to-night. You expected this morning to have an "easy day" but you have answered to the call of "mother" until the sun is set, and its departing glory almost makes you longing for the beyond. Now there are the children to be put to bed. In limited circumstances may not you have a nurse, but remember you can not keep them with long and your patient services are richly rewarded. Go lovingly and patiently; you know not when last time may come. Death is deeply, even if we have been to our friends. Comb the tangle carefully, soothe the head and straighten the little dream and laying your cheek close by the little darling's listen to "Now come," and then wait patiently for the ruby lips to slowly ask God some wished for toy. Kiss the "good-night." In short look

SPAIN'S KING TO WED.

THE YOUTHFUL PRINCESS OF ENGLAND IS TO BECOME THE SPANISH QUEEN.

She is the Niece of this Country's Recent Guest, Prince Louis of Battenberg—Princess Ena the Royal Beauty of England.

All eyes will be turned toward Spain next May when the young King Alfonso XIII. will take the most beautiful and popular princess of England to be his queen.

The young girl who has at last been selected to share the throne with Alfonso is the Princess Ena of Battenberg, only daughter of Princess Henry, the youngest sister of King Edward.

Ever since Alfonso became King of Spain, and even when his mother acted as Queen Regent, his picturesque personality has been the talk of two continents. Long before he reached the marriageable age, even for a king, a new bride was picked out for him every day, and to members of his suite he would often say:

"Whom am I to marry to-day? The newspapers surely have found me another wife!"

But now that question no longer agitates Alfonso's court, for the beautiful Princess Ena has been chosen after a search which led the young monarch all over Europe. Country after country was visited, but the fastidious young king was often confronted by more fastidious young princesses, and after he had been out on his search for a while he found that royal princesses were not so anxious to become Queen of Spain as he had thought back in his luxurious palace.

When Alfonso visited England a few months ago there were dozens of young noblewomen paraded for his inspection, but his eyes flew to the young Princess Ena, and Alfonso, the unim-pressionable, was conquered.

Few monarchs have had the meteoric career of this young King of Spain, and if the Princess who is to become his consort follows out the rules which have always governed her happy young life Alfonso will have at last found someone to keep him in the way he should go—an achievement which has never heretofore been accomplished.

He has frequently ridden out of the palace disguised as a soldier, a guard or even a peasant, and has gone for miles horseback riding or to attend some little fete which has come to his notice. Days have elapsed during which the queen mother and the entire court have searched high and low for the boy king without avail, but before the incident could be made public the young monarch would come riding back the way he had gone, happier for his boyish prank and cheeking remonstrance with the assurance that "I am the king."

The Princess Ena is regarded as the beauty of the royal household. She is but eighteen years old, and is the only girl in the family. Her three brothers adore her and are constantly giving her a "ripping" good time. Her elder brother, Prince Alexander, was recently in this country as a "middy" with the fleet of Prince Louis of Battenberg, his uncle.

This charming young woman made her debut last February at Buckingham Palace and created a furore. She is the favorite godchild and likely to become the principal mistress of Empress Eugenie.

Princess Ena is an enthusiastic sailor and motorist, and is the constant companion of her mother on numerous little trips in their yacht and through the beautiful country for which their home, the Isle of Wight, is noted. She is especially gifted with dramatic ability, and in a recent amateur production given in Kensington Palace she played the part of a vivandiere with marked success. She sings and dances exceptionally well.

FORESTRY A NECESSITY.

A BROAD, NATIONAL SYSTEM OF PRESERVATION NOT A FAD
NOR A FANCY.

The Editor of the American Lumberman Urges Irrigation and Forestry Legislation—Quotes Some Noted Authorities.

(From the "American Lumberman" of Dec. 2, 1905.)

By request the American Lumberman reprints in this issue a part of the speech of George H. Maxwell, executive chairman of the National Irrigation Association, delivered before the American Forest Congress at Washington, D. C., in the early part of January, 1905. This address has much to commend it to the business men of the country. It was termed the sensational address of the congress, and perhaps deservedly so called because it sets forth in illuminated words the necessity of inaugurating a systematic movement looking toward the rehabilitation of forest lands and the planting of treeless areas.

The gentleman who delivered this able talk on forestry spoke from experience and close observation. He did not dillydally around with the usual commonplace platitudes about the importance of forestry, but by illustration showed for what purposes the forests were intended and the commercial value of their importance as compared with the recognized bulwarks of the nation. While he conceded the necessity of an army and navy to guard invasion and to protect and uphold the rights of the people in foreign countries he called particular attention to the desirability of maintaining an adequate forested area in order that the commercial interests of the United States might in like manner be preserved.

Mr. Maxwell's arraignment of the national lawmakers and his comments on the shortsightedness of those in charge of business interests were timely. While not subscribing fully and unreservedly to the views expressed the American Lumberman believes that his severe condemnation of past and present methods and practices will bring forth good results and that its republication will again turn public attention to the necessity of adopting laws which will correct evils in the future and provide a system of a juster administration of the public land laws.

The attitude of the public toward forestry and irrigation is a peculiar one. Men evidently fail to recognize any personal interests in such questions. Some are totally indifferent; others admit the desirability of establishing reserves but want to leave it to those who are more directly concerned. Still others are lukewarm and, while readily admitting the benefits of forestry and irrigation projects, content themselves with waiting until there is more visible likelihood of the movement being successful. Still another faction is made up of those who are openly opposed to all forestry schemes, many national irrigation projects, and government intervention in such matters.

Until within recent years the forests of the country as a whole have been controlled by private owners. The in the central states the forests give place to farms, in some instances not even a woodlot being spared. The people of this country unquestionably have abused the privilege of doing as they please with their own property for their immediate financial betterment, with the prospect of such practices resulting disastrously in the future.

Much of the land denuded of its timber is absolute forest land, fit for no purpose except possibly grazing, and not of the best character even for that use. Nature will require years to replace this protection so that a new forest may be brought forth, and this change never will be possible unless the woods and small growth, which nature uses as a basis of the cover shall be protected. It is impossible to secure the adoption of laws looking toward the establishment of a new custom of national scope without a widespread public demand for the change believed by its supporters to be an improvement over existing customs. Few if any have the effrontery openly to take the field against the forestry movement, as all fair minded people realize the necessity of keeping a part of the country protected by a forest cover. The claim of science that forests are necessary to protect the rainfall as an aid in this regulation generally is admitted.

GEORGE H. MAXWELL,
Executive Chairman, the National Irrigation Association.

On the subject the attitude of the people as a whole is this: "Yes, forestry is a mighty good thing, but I am too busy with my little affairs to take any personal interest in it and then I would not be directly benefitted in any way. Let the other fellow who is going to get some advantage from it fight for it." It is about time for the public to wake up and begin to take notice. Mr. Maxwell's speech strikes a high note and should create sufficient noise thoroughly to awake the sleepers.

FORESTS SHOULD BE PROTECTED.

An Address Before the American Forest Congress.

In the American Lumberman's exhaustive report of the proceedings of the American Forest Congress, held in Washington, D. C., in January last, in the installment presented March 24 was given the address of George H. Maxwell, executive chairman of the National Irrigation Association. In view of the early meeting of congress Mr. Maxwell's recommendations, which follow, are timely and valuable.

I think the mistake we make today and always have made is in looking upon this question of forestry as in any sense a sectional question. It is necessarily as much a national question as is the maintenance of an army or the construction of a navy. (Applause.)

I wish I had the power by some telepathic process of impressing upon the mind of every man present the picture that is in my own mind as I stand here.

I crossed the Mississippi river on my way to the west a little over two years ago on a ferryboat on which was loaded a train of overland passenger cars; and as we crossed that great river opposite the city of New Orleans, during one of the greatest floods in years, the water was almost up to the tops of the levees on both sides of the river. It was a serious question whether the city of New Orleans was not in danger; and as we landed on the west side of the river we looked down over the bank and saw the plantations away down below the level of the water and exposed and vulnerable to destruction any moment that artificial barrier might break. Before we had gone twenty-four hours farther west the levee did break and one of those great crevasses was formed and it practically destroyed the crop for that season over a large area; though other localities and the city of New Orleans were saved by the diminished pressure of the flood on the adjacent levees.

SECRETARY TAFT'S CHILDREN IN THEIR PONY CART AT WASHINGTON.

ever-changing coterie of households which go to make up the official circle of the American capital has included so many junior members as at present. At the head of the list, of course, stand the young people of the White House household. Of the half dozen young folks of the Roosevelt clan, Theodore, Jr., who is attending Harvard, and Kermit, the second son, who is away at school, now spend comparatively little time at the White House save at holiday seasons; but Miss Alice, the flaxen-haired Miss Ethel and the younger boys, Archibald and Quentin, are much in evidence at the Presidential mansion, and one and all go in for riding, driving and the other strenuous athletic pursuits in which their parents take such delight. Vice-President Fairbanks has a family of sons and daughters which, though widely scattered most of the time, is reunited several times each season in Washington.

During many administrations the President's official family has been made up of men well advanced in years, whose households included few young people, but in this respect the present Cabinet is an exception, for in a majority of the Cabinet homes young America is well represented. Secretary of State Root has two manly sons, a daughter, Miss Edith, who is a daughter of Miss Alice Roosevelt. Secretary of War Taft has two lively children, a daughter, who is a playmate of Miss Alice Roosevelt, and a son yet young who has the reputation of being a tremendously bright lad—a prestige due to the fact that when his father was Governor of the Philippines he picked up a knowledge of different languages. Assistant-General Cortelyou has two handsome children. The two daughters are girls with beautiful dark hair, while the eldest are boys and companions of the two sons of the Secretary of Corporations Garfield, the martyr President and one of the closest personal friends of President Roosevelt. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has several children, but his daughter, Miss Flora, who was so prominent in the younger social circles of Washington during the McKinley administration, has spent the past few years in Paris. The American colony in French capital also includes the daughters of the Secretary of the Treasury, but the son, Earl, remains in this country. Sons of many of the nation's officials are enabled to earn handsome salaries from Uncle Sam by acting as night. Therefore, I say if you would keep your best beau limit your hugs."

This is unqualified commendation given by Mrs. S. M. Cory, of the Society for Political Study of Dr. T. S. Hanrahan's rules for courtship. The doctor, rector of the Sacred Heart church of West Fitchburg, Mass., outlined his ideas of the curtailment of tenderness in a sermon to young women.

"Lights in the parlor," he said, "should not be turned down too low. Don't be stingy with the gas. The final hug should be at 10 o'clock sharp. Young men should not stay later than this hour."

"I thoroughly agree," declared Mrs. Cory, "with the 10 o'clock theory on stay-at-home nights. I am a firm believer in no chaperons, and I think the young man should take his girl out and entertain her during the period of courtship if anything in that line is to be expected of him as a husband. If he is content to sit about the house all the time it is a bad sign."

"The matter of turning the lights low is largely dependent on how pretty the girl is. If she answers the description of certainly plain, I should suggest that a little softening of the illumination might be a good thing."

"A mother and a father cannot too thoroughly investigate the character of the man their daughter is to marry. And right here I should like to explode the theory that a good son makes a good husband. I think, on the contrary, the good son is so wrapped up in the virtue of 'mother' that it frequently blinds him to those of his wife."

"A long engagement is bound to be bad. Warmth of sentiment is much like warmed-over potatoes—flat and tasteless. The fire and spirit go out of the love-making, and there you are."

Despite this opinion Mrs. Cory laughs at Dr. Hanrahan's statement that he cannot see what people find to talk about when they go together for years.

"Love-making, which makes the lovers such a nuisance to others," she explained, "is so all-absorbing that it supplies all conversational needs, as anybody who has ever been in love can testify."

It Was Only a Counterfeit.

Jacob Riis, the sociologist, in an address to a workingmen's club, praised generosity.

"I see a handful of children here," he said. "May they grow up generous. May none of them grow up into such a man as an old banker whom I know."

"He is a millionaire banker, and he lives in a palace, but his heart is as hard as steel and as cold as ice."

"One of his men completed, the other day, his twenty-fifth year of service. For twenty-five years this honest man had worked for the banker faithfully. He and his chief were both poor at the beginning, but where, in the quarter century, the banker has accumulated millions, the faithful, middle-aged bookkeeper has accumulated only a few hundreds. His salary, you see, was only $2 a week."

"He didn't think the banker would remember the twenty-fifth anniversary of his engagement, but the old man did. That morning he handed the bookkeeper a sealed envelope."

"George," he said, 'to-day ends the twenty-fifth year of your work for me, and you have worked steadily and well. In this envelope is a memento of the occasion.'"

"The bookkeeper opened the envelope, trembling and eager. Within lay his employer's photograph. That was all."

"In the face of a disappointment so bitter the poor fellow could say nothing."

"Well," asked the banker, "what do you think of it?"

"It's just like you," said the bookkeeper simply.

MISS OLGA NETHERSOLE.

This English Actress Would Refuse Divorce to Couples
Who Have Children.

Miss Olga Nethersole, the distinguished English actress who is now producing in this country a new so-called drama, "The Labyrinth," speaks with intense conviction against divorces to families in which children have been born to the marriage. When the production of the play was first broached to Miss Nethersole she was more than willing to produce it not alone for the excellent opportunities afforded her for dramatic inspiration, but she found that it had a serious purpose in teaching humanity an object lesson. In fact most of the plays which Miss Nethersole has produced have hidden somewhere lessons to be taught the founders of homes. "Hervieu," she said in an interview, "has shown in his drama, 'The Labyrinth,' the indissoluble bond the child makes between husband and wife and the terrible consequences of a disruption of such a union."

"What does marriage mean," she asked, "if not, parentage? The relationship and responsibilities, not of husband and wife, but of father and mother, are those which should be accepted when a man and woman are joined in marriage. To tear apart by law the tie which binds a couple together, after they have brought children into the world, is to destroy the home and to rob those children of all the influences which develop them into good citizens. Divorce is an injustice to the offspring of marriage; it places a barrier between them and one of their parents—often times both; it warps their development; it embitters their souls. No such desecration of the home should be permitted by law."

"But what of the many cases in which repeated cruelty makes it impossible for a wife to live with her husband?" was asked.

"Such domestic tragedies occur, it is true, and occur with sad frequency," Miss Nethersole replied. "But even then there should be no absolute disruption of the marriage tie. Separation solves the question. Let them live apart, although still married, and perhaps a reconciliation will take place, and happiness come out of misery, in the end. Then the children will still have a father and mother, although they may spend most of the time with one of their parents. There will at least be no possibilities of placing them under the care of another mother or another father, by a second marriage. A spiritual nucleus, about which the home again might unite, would still exist."

"Uniformity is the first step that is needed in the formation of the divorce laws of the United States. There are different codes in almost every State, and one may be a criminal in one and not in another. Then the divorces are easily granted on too many grounds. In England there are three causes for which divorce may be secured—infidelity, cruelty and desertion. In this country there seem to be half a dozen or more, but America is ahead of France at least in one respect. There people who may have been divorced may not remarry each other. Such a law is a sin, for in the reunion of the pair lies the only hope for the salvation of the home."

J. E. DEFEBAUGH,
Editor of the "American Lumberman."

preponderance of the country covered with forests might delude the people into a belief that they were of minor importance as forests and of primary importance as manufacturing materials. The result has been that under private administration the forested areas largely have disappeared and at the present time little if any attention is being given to providing for a second growth. In the north the fires destroy what the loggers leave and

The Most Satisfactory Light.

The Angle Lamp is not the only method of lighting your home but taken all in all, it is the most satisfactory.

For while it floods your room with the finest, softest and most restful light, making your home more cozy and inviting, it requires almost as little attention as gas or electric light, is as simple and convenient to operate as either and actually costs less to burn than the ordinary troublesome old style lamp.

Our Catalogue "15" (sent free on request) shows how this new principle applied to burning common kerosene has so completely done away with all the smoke, odor and bother of ordinary lamps that such people as ex-Pres. Cleveland, the Rockefeller, Carnegies, Cookes, etc., who wouldn't think of using ordinary lamps, have chosen for lighting their homes and estates in preference to gas or electricity, gasoline, acetylene, or any other method of lighting.

This catalog tells how the special Angle burner and the shape of the glassware (see above illustration) give combustion so perfect that the Angle Lamp never smokes or smells whether burned at full height or turned low; why the lamp is lighted and extinguished like gas; the advantage of having the under-shade of other lamps done away with completely, also why the Angle Lamp burns 75 to 90 less oil than any other for the same amount of light. I could not help thinking to myself whether it might not be possible some day or other to awaken the people of the Mississippi valley to a realization of the fact that forestry is a problem extending from New Orleans to the continental divide of the Rocky mountains on the west, to Canada on the north and to the crest of the Alleghenies on the east, where the Ohio river has its source; and that failure and destruction are inevitable if it shall be expected in the years to come to control that great flood by increasing the levees to protect the sugarbowl of the nation. The time will come when they cannot build them higher and the country will revert to a swamp condition and be as desolate as it is today where the St. Francis basin is covered with water through which you may look down and see the tops of trees that once grew on dry land. How are you going to prevent that?

This great problem of forestry, is not alone a matter of sentiment. It is just as much a cold blooded question of business. The speculators who preceded me have spoken upon the importance of forestry to mining. I have listened with much interest to their masterly discussion on the relation of forestry to mining, and it brought more forcibly than ever to my mind the question that the whole country and those engaged in all its industries are fast coming to recognize the importance of forestry. I regret that we cannot include the lower house of congress. They do not seem to have yet waked up to it.

How to Get Things Done.

I am not going to take up your time with any further dissertations upon the importance of forestry. But I want to offer some practical suggestions as to what we must have a clear cut idea of what we are going to do and what we want Congress to do. I listened with the greatest interest and pleasure to the president's address yesterday and one of his sentences struck me very forcibly. He said: "We want to change the hope of accomplishment to the knowledge of things done. If we are going to do that we must have a clear cut idea of what we are going to do and what we want Congress to do."

SCENE IN MINNESOTA.

Timber Devastation After Lumbering and Fire. The president's address yesterday and one of his sentences struck me very forcibly. He said: "We want to change the hope of accomplishment to the knowledge of things done. If we are going to do that we must have a clear cut idea of what we are going to do and what we want Congress to do."

We have listened to these gentlemen here today telling of the necessities of the mining industries and of the injustices brought about by insufficient laws. There is a man here who has got all the things done that they have recommended, and more, too. The first is to come to a perfect understanding with a business bureau of the government, if we can create such a bureau, and the way to do that is to pass the bill consolidating the forest reserves under the control of Gifford Pinchot. (Applause.) And after you have done that, and he has consulted with the lumberman and the miner and the farmer and understands what they want, then back him up and make your congressman help to get it done.

A Case of Masterly Inactivity.

Let us look at the business end of that proposition. Other things besides bees have business ends. For a number of years the president of the United States has been talking about the necessity of doing something to stop the frauds and depredations upon the public domain under the timber and stone act. The president, in December, 1902, more than two years ago, called the attention of congress in the strongest possible language to the necessity of doing something to stop the frauds and depredations upon the public domain under the timber and stone act. The president, in December, 1902, more than two years ago, called the attention of congress in the strongest possible language to the necessity of doing something to stop the frauds and depredations upon the public domain under the timber and stone act.

I find these words in the report of the senate committee on the public lands, and the date is February 13, 1903. That can be plainly seen that all the valuable timber lands of the United States will be owned by speculators within three years if the opportunity to acquire them at $2.50 an acre is continued.

That was February 13, 1903. It is now pretty close to February 13, 1905, and one year from that date the three years will be exhausted and all the timber land will be gone according to this official statement.

Has the bill been repealed? No! Has the house of representatives done anything to stop this shameful waste of the public property under the timber and stone act? No! They have done nothing whatever to stop the abuses and frauds constantly being committed under that act.

President Sees the Necessity.

Again the following year the president in his message to congress made substantially the same recommendations. They were reiterated by the secretary of the interior. The senate committee on public lands recommended a bill to repeal the timber and stone act and the senate passed the bill in the last session of congress. It went to the public lands committee of the house of representatives. T. B. Walker appeared before that committee and waved his magic wand and they gave two votes for the repeal of the bill out of eighteen members of the committee. Two votes! And the bill is lying there in that committee yet.

In this session of congress without waiting for another day, or for anybody to do anything, they passed a resolution in the public lands committee of the house continuing the timber and stone act until the next session of congress.

The next session of congress will convene at a time within two months of the expiration of the three years within which the senate committee told congress that all the timber land would be gone unless they got action.

In the two years that have expired since the president has called the attention of congress to that timber and stone law there have been located under the timber and stone act over 800,000 acres of timber land, the greater part of it the magnificent timber of the northwest, which, according to the report of the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of the general land office, is worth anywhere from $20 to $100 an acre for the mere value of the stumpage, to say nothing of the young timber or the land itself.

Four Million Dollar Loss.

In other words, as a result of the deliberate delay of the public lands committee of the house, instead of having the value of the stumpage from that 800,000 acres of timber in the national treasury we have parted with the timber and the land and the young growth and everything for $2.50 an acre. Taking the value of that timber at what the stumpage actually sold for upon some of the government land in Minnesota, $15.00 an acre, the government has lost $40,000,000 by that proceeding. But the stumpage on the 800,000 acres located during the last two years was much more valuable than that. And if the government had managed its timber land business as any business man or any man of sense would have managed it we might just as well as not have lost $70,000,000 from that stumpage and have had our young forest trees planted in southern California and the surplus left over. (Applause.)

A Few Suppositions.

We are told that there is going to be a deficit this year in the treasury of the United States of $22,000,000. We had not thrown away that $70,000,000 we could have covered that deficit at least twice over and still have had money left in the treasury. In other words the public lands committee of the house has thrown away over $70,000,000 of the people's money in the last two years. If we should put this total loss at only $50,000,000 for the two years it has amounted to over $2,500,000 a month or about $70,000 a day.

Now suppose some enterprising and ingenious person had succeeded in tunneling under the United States treasury and cut a hole into the vaults of the national public lands committee. You suppose we could get the people of the United States to wake up to the fact that the government is squandering some action by it to stop that stealing? That is exactly what is going on; for if the house public lands committee does nothing in this session of congress (and it has already voted to do nothing) the loss to this country

NEW PUBLIC PRINTER.

AT THIRTY-FOUR YEARS OF AGE HE HEADS THE BIGGEST PRINT SHOP IN THE WORLD.

His Office Pays Out Annually Over Four and a Half Million Dollars in Wages—Is One of the President's Youngest.

At the head of the biggest printing office in the world at the age of 34. That is the position in which Charles A. Stillings finds himself to-day. When the Hon. Frank B. Palmer resigned from the office of Public Printer last summer, President Roosevelt found himself facing the necessity of making one of the most important appointments that had ever fallen to his lot to consider. The printing required for the United States Government is so voluminous and of such diversified kind that it is necessary to operate the enormous plant in which the printing is produced, in the most perfect way. At the head of this great printery the President knew he must place a man who would be mainly among men, strong of character, quick of decision and with a thorough grasp of every detail of the printing business in everyone of its many branches. Many men backed by strong political influence were presented to the President for his consideration in making the appointment for Public Printer, but none seemed to be possessed of all of the necessary qualifications, until his attention was directed to a progressive young man whose knowledge of the printing business covered the entire field and who had had practical experience in Boston, Philadelphia and Washington—one Charles A. Stillings. And so, after a thorough examination into Mr. Stillings' commercial career, the President, finding that Mr. Stillings' ability was just what he had been looking for, appointed him as the executive head of the Government Printing Office. The Senate promptly confirmed the President's appointment and so Mr. Stillings has become the active head of the establishment.

A brief idea of the volume of business conducted by the Government Printing Office may be obtained from the following figures. Last year they paid in wages to its various employees the sum of $4,616,781.70 and nearly three millions more were spent for various supplies, including paper, new machinery and maintenance of the plant. Every dollar of this great sum is expended under the check of the Public Printer and it is evident that much wisdom is needed in handling money where so large an amount is involved.

Mr. Stillings is especially fitted by training, inclination, and ability for the position. He forms an attractive addition to the ranks of the young men with whom President Roosevelt has surrounded himself in the administration of the Government affairs. He received his education in the Phillips Grammar School and the English High School at Boston. After leaving school he entered his father's printing office, where he received a varied and thorough experience in all branches of the trade, finally working up to the position of general manager and the Griffith-Stillings Press, an organization which took over the business formerly conducted by Mr. Stillings, Sr.

In all of Mr. Stillings' transactions he has shown an unusual aptitude for organization, and, possessing a marked degree of personal magnetism, has drawn into a close friendship with himself many men of dignity and position. Mr. Stillings is a Mason, having attained the honors of the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, and is also a Mystic Shriner.

That would make him feel the full weight of an outraged national public sentiment. (Applause.) They are not liable to punishment criminally, but they are morally responsible for every stone act since they shelved the bill to repeal it passed by the senate in the last session of congress.

But it is not enough merely to repeal the timber and stone act. Every acre of public forest lands or brush or woodland which conserves a water supply should be at once embraced in permanent forest reserves, the title to be always retained by the national government and the stumpage of matured timber only to be sold.

Wonderful Possibilities of the Arid Region. The whole great plains region should be studied and developed as a vast area which can be transformed from a semi-arid region to one of great fertility and more humid climate by the planting of immense areas, hundreds of thousands of acres, of

Revolutionary Russia.

Like the Stuarts of Great Britain and the Bourbons of France, the reigning dynasty of Russia goes from blunder to blunder. Such a revolution as is in progress throughout Europe cannot be suppressed by the sword. The thing to have done was to make concessions to the spirit of liberty when the agitation began. Grants that would have been hailed as liberal a year ago would be rejected with scorn to-day as wholly insufficient.

The revolution is strikingly like that of France, and there will be no stopping it. The proletariat has fought and tasted blood. Suppose they suppress the revolt in Moscow? It will break out at some other point—in Poland, or Lithuania, or Finland, or elsewhere between the Baltic and the Black seas. The army will be kept on the jump, and its loyalty put to the ultimate test. Then, when order has been shot into the nation, and reigns everywhere as it once did at Warsaw, the revolution will break out afresh in Moscow or somewhere else, and it will all have to be done over again.

Before the thing is finished, Russia will be a republic; not a free republic, but a revolutionary republic guided by a Cromwell or a Napoleon. And if such a Cromwell or such a Napoleon should be her destiny, she will be a mighty ugly customer in a quarrel with a neighbor, just as England was in the middle of the seventeenth century, just as France was at the close of the eighteenth century.

For a full 100 years republicanism has been driving autocracy to the wall in Europe. France is a pretty good republic and getting better every day. The Kaiser of the great German Empire has in the Reichstag a partner in the government, oftentimes a very meddlesome and a very obstinate partner at that. The Cortez holds the purse of Spain, and Italy is a constitutional monarchy. Austria-Hungary has a legislature, and the Scandinavian peoples have enjoyed liberty for ages. Russia is routing from the slumber of centuries and she cannot be put to sleep again. There will be battle and blood and terror, but it will end in a republic—at least, in a legislature—and then Russia will begin the new lesson of learning what liberty is and what to do with it.

Don't Ask Again.

An amusing incident is related of Nat Goodwin, the actor. Not long ago Goodwin was standing on the corner of Broadway and Thirty-fourth street, New York City, where three car lines converge, when a sassy-looking individual, apparently from the country, approached him questioningly.

"I want to go to the Brooklyn Bridge," he said, looking in perplexity at the cars rushing in six different directions.

"Very well," said Goodwin, severely.

"You can go this time, but never ask me again."

An Improvised Excuse.

Tommy was absent from school for one entire day. But he brought a note which would prove that he had been detained at home legitimately. The writing was hardly that of a feminine hand, and the note appeared to have been written laboriously. Furthermore, the penmanship seemed to be strangely familiar to his teacher. The note read as follows: "Dear Teacher: Please excuse Tommy for not coming to school yesterday. He couldn't come. I tore my pants. Yours truly, Mrs. Mulligan."

Here lies the body of Mary Ann. Her head on the bosom of Abraham. It's pleasant and sweet for Mary Ann. But tough tough for Abraham.

New forests by the national government on the wide level prairies and bare, rolling foothills which are now of the land and at only for grazing ground for a few stray cattle and sheep.

It is the vast possibilities of forest planting and timber production in that region that make it almost a crime against future generations to part with the land in its present condition to stockmen under such a scheme as the Kinkaid bill for the creation of large grazing estates in private ownership.

The mining interests more immediately than any other ought to oppose this 640-acre homestead idea anywhere in the great plains or Rocky mountain national policy of planting new forests, not only to furnish wood and timber for the mines but to conserve and increase the rainfall, regulate the flow of the rivers, stop floods and furnish water for irrigation.

Couldn't Milk the Bicycle.

Some years ago, soon after bicycles began to be freely used throughout the United States, an agent for a New York house turned up at a village in Central New York. He expatiated to an old farmer upon the virtues of the new machine, dwelling upon what a time-saver it was, and withal how fashionable it would be for the old farmer to be able to ride down to the village on one of the new-fangled machines whenever he wanted to.

"Why," said the salesman, "whenever you go to the postoffice, bank, or store, everybody will stop and stare at Farmer Wilson, and pretty soon you'll be the most-talked-of man in the whole county."

"That may be so," replied the farmer, "but I tell you I'm a-needin' a good new cow mo'n I am en-ef o' them things you're a-talkin' about."

Nevertheless, the agent extracted a promise that the old man would save up his money and purchase a bicycle when the agent came around in the fall. According to promise, the agent was on hand in the fall with the wheel. The farmer took him in charge and carried him out to the lot and showed him a fine Jersey cow.

"That's what I bought with the money I saved up for you," said the farmer. And without waiting for the agent to recover from his surprise he went on: "I loved that I needed the cow mo'n I did the bicycle, an' there she is. Ain't she a beauty?"

When the agent recovered his breath he said: "You'll look funny riding that cow to town, won't you?" "Y'as," drawled out the old farmer, "but I'd look a darned sight funnier tryin' to milk a bicycle."

THE COURTSHIP OF WESLEY

By Lollie Wells Smith

As Wesley plodded down the main road he glanced guiltily back over his shoulder at the straight rows of tobacco spread their broad leaves ripe for cutting. There was deeper guilt in his heart, too, when he thought of the project upon which he was bent. Never before had he done anything that he would have been ashamed to tell out loud. Meeting at the little cross roads where he was one of the younger leaders, the tall, gawky shadow he cast along the white road seemed a sort of promontory figure of that better self that would follow him the rest of his life like an accusing angel. And it was all on account of a woman; not that she was to blame, except for the fact that she had soft white skin and fair hair, and the tiniest of feet that made his own seem monstrous, and the daintiest little figure, the kind that a big muscular fellow like Wesley yearns to hold in his arms.

Wesley had never been a ladies' man until the school teacher came into the neighborhood. But he had been captured from the evening he drove to the station and she had sat beside him in the little spring wagon during the five miles they had to go in the September twilight. The scent of her gauzy handkerchief played about his senses for a week afterward; it was different from any perfume that had entered his nostrils, before accustomed to the odors of "sweet basil," marjoram, and a generous sprinkling of musk in the closely packed little chapel of Sunday mornings.

Propinquity, that strong promoter of the tender passions, sealed his doom. The school teacher boarded in his house and came to hear upon him the varied and wonderful charms of a woman.

He felt himself the most highly favored man in the universe to be able to live under the same roof with her, and to keep the little box behind the shetron stove filled with wood sawed and split to a nicety, to handle a refractory fire behind the school house as an example to all others who should dare to defy the teacher's authority, and a hundred other offices that a big, strong man can perform for a young and fragile member of his household, that brought him unspeakable joy.

So far, however, from believing these things were gaining for him the desired love, Wesley would have dispensed

Silas was seated on a high chair behind the counter regaling himself with the latest postal card news that had come in. "Howdy, Wes," he greeted, reluctantly placing the cards in their respective pigeon holes as the visitor came behind the counter. "Air ye through cuttin'?"

"Well, I-I ain't clean through," was the embarrassed answer—"but I left off for a little spell, as I got a matter I want fixed up, an' I thought this would be the best time of day to ketch you."

"Well, ef it's that little loan, I reckon—"

"No, I ain't after pesterin' you 'bout that, Si," Wesley interrupted, to the other's relief, and tattooing awkwardly on the desk, he blurted out:

"Si, I've come down here to git you to do sump'n I can't do myself, an' that's to write a letter fer me!"

"Oh, that's it, is it?" Silas asked, with a grin, noticing the other's embarrassment. "Well, I reckon I kin 'commodate you," he added, taking his pen from behind his ear. "Who's the lady?"

Wesley suspiciously. "I reckon you know," was the answer, with a responsive grin to hide his embarrassment.

Then as Silas began to draw the school teacher's name, writing it at the same time with many flourishes at the top of the sheet he had spread before him, Wesley grinned broader, and confessed with more blushes that that was the young lady in question.

"Now about the beginning?" was Silas's next question with his most professional air, making ready to start. "You kin make it a little stronger by adding some words on the next line," Silas indicated with his pen the line below the one upon which the lady's name was inscribed, for the benefit of the uninitiated Wesley—"but that's accordin' to your intentions to the young lady." He paused for Wesley to intimate.

"Then you might make it a little stronger," the other suggested sheepishly after a pause.

"To the young lady that has my heart, how is that?" Silas poised his pen inquiringly.

Wesley nodded approvingly. "That's it," he said, and as Silas waited for further instructions he squirmed awkwardly in his seat and began to wipe the perspiration off his face.

"It's kinder hard to know what to say when you ain't exactly certain 'bout the look her in the face, but began to walk at her side, forgetting to offer to take her books as usual, until they had gone some distance and he made an awkward attempt to relieve her, dropping half of them on the ground in his confusion.

As he stopped to gather them up the fateful letter rolled out from between the pages of one of the books, and there was nothing for him to do but to pick it up and hand it to her. A shamed, side-long glance at her face told him that his doom was to be settled. He walked along, waiting for the verdict like a hero.

"Did you tell Jack Crawford to put that letter on my desk?" the school teacher asked, at last.

"Yes, Miss Elmira," was all he could say.

"Then I presume that you want my answer?" was the next question delivered in a suppressed tone.

"I-I—come here to git it," Wesley stammered.

"Then I'll give it to you now, and it's just no!" she said bluntly, not slackening her pace and looking straight ahead of her.

It came like a thunderbolt, even though he was in a measure prepared.

"Miss Elmira, I'm sorry, but—" "I hate Silas Mansur, and he had no business writing that letter," she interrupted.

Wesley hung his head, his face flushed to the roots of his hair.

"I didn't know you'd be able to tell by the writin', 'deed I didn't; I reckon it warn't actin' square," but Silas kin write an—

"I don't care if he can write," she interrupted again. "Do you suppose I'm going to marry a man just because he can write; and after all, I'd rather marry the man I loved if he couldn't write his own name than one I don't care a straw about, even if you are so anxious to make the match for Silas Mansur, and I thought you'd be the last one to—"

She broke off with a sob, turning to dash away the tears that sprang to her eyes.

Wesley felt the earth slipping under his feet, the sky seemed a dazzling, crimson vortex whirling above him through the dark tree tops.

"Miss Elmira!" he cried at last, "did you think that was Silas's own letter? for it warn't, 'deed it warn't!" he panted.

"It was my letter, Miss Elmira, every word of it, only I got Silas to write it for me, 'cause—'cause,—well, I ain't ashamed for you to know now, I can't write my own name."

Wild Geese Killed in Flight.

The southern migration of wild fowl this winter was unusually late and resulted in many disasters. The wild geese are reported from the northwest to have been especially severe sufferers.

The large black-headed goose is a strong, hardy bird, generally remaining on its own native water until the ice forms firmly. In the South it is only a visitor for the winter months. Born on some lake beyond the northern watershed, or perhaps on some inlet in Hudson Bay or the Arctic Ocean, its heart is ever loyal to the land of its birth.

Sometimes, when the cold weather sets in late up North, as in all probability it has this year, the wild geese suffer from their devotion to their native place. They may at this late season fly right into a streak of real winter, with driving snow to blind their vision and bitter frost to halt their flight.

If there is storm, their way leads right through it, until the leader's eyes are closed by the freezing of the snow about its head or its feathers become too heavy weighted. When the sight has gone and the birds are wearied, it is easy to see how misleading is much of the talk about the leadings of an extra sense. Like a ship without a rudder, the V-shaped flock will make for any low places.

Once a flock came tumbling into the street of an Eastern township's village, where the half-blinded things became the easy prey of the boys and the dogs.

In another place a farmer chanced one spring to find the frozen carcasses of more than thirty fine geese in a drift in one of the fence corners. The birds had evidently come to earth in some blinding storm, and imagining they were nearing water, found instead the hard, snow-covered ground.

There are several instances recorded of flocks of geese in a storm running full tilt into the ends or sides of farm buildings. A large brood flew at full speed against the rigging of the whaling steamer Dart this month off the Newfoundland coast. A damp, snow-laden wind was blowing at the time, and eleven dead or dying geese fluttered on to the deck, the others alighting in a half-dead condition upon the ways.

A more pleasing story is of domestic geese in a large, well-appointed farmyard hailing with their heavy honks a short time ago, a passing drove of twenty-two black birds. The strangers came down and followed their tame relations into the stable, where they have since stayed.

Re-Using Old Shoes.

Janitors collect the shoes cast away by tenants and send them to auction rooms, where they are sorted into piles marked "Men," "Women," "Children."

In a recent sale in one of the big cities, says the "Shoe Retailer," several poor people made fair bids, but the auctioneer did not seem eager to sell.

Finally, a red-faced man pushed his way through the crowd and offered to cents apiece or the whole lot. His bid was successful.

"I was killing time with talk waiting for that 'allow,'" said the auctioneer afterward. "He always pays high for these shoes and he does not want them for wearing, either. He wants to beat them out for the leather in them. He gets what material there is, puts it through a process and makes stamped frames, bags, 'pocketbooks, penknife holders, and even chair backs and seats. He finds a ready sale for these novelties and gets a good price for them."

There is a cherry stone at the Salem, Massachusetts, Museum which contains the fac-similes of one dozen silver spoons. They are so small that their shape and finish can only be distinguished by the microscope.

SUCCESSFUL WOMAN BUILDER.

Mrs. Theodosia Beacham, of Michigan, Entertaining Railroad Contractor.

There are few fields of endeavor in which woman has not acquired a foothold. She is conspicuous in the arts, sciences and professions and she makes her presence felt in trade. Yet it is believed that one of the few of her sex to essay and succeed in railroad contracting and construction is a Michigan woman—Mrs. Theodosia Beacham. She is not notable for home-staying or house-keeping qualities, for her business calls for her presence in many parts of the United States and she has to deal with vast engineering problems—felling forests, tunneling mountains, bridging gorges, cutting through hills, filling gulches, setting and tamping ties and laying rails. The work demands that she be a skillful manager of men. She knows man as few women do—she directs their energies, gets out of them the most work possible, pays their wages, employs or discharges them. Men, mules, steam shovels and dynamite are her obedient agents. Necessarily she is a financier, talks and figures in the hundred thousands and the millions as readily as most men talk of dollars. In the parlance of the street she long ago made her stake and today is accounted the richest woman in Michigan and one of the very rich women of the world.

She has made estimates and carried out contracts on some of the longest and heaviest pieces of railroad construction in the country. Though her occupation is strenuous it would do Mrs. Beacham no injustice to say that it has roughened her. There is a certain set of determination and firmness about her features, but her manner is feminine, and so are her tastes. She is such a good judge of men that she rarely has any trouble with them and it is not often that an employer is so genuinely popular with employees as Mrs. Beacham.

Mrs. Beacham has been making and executing railroad contracts for twenty years. She has two sons, Claud and Erwin and her husband, though living is an invalid.

Much of this remarkable woman's work has been done in the southern states where railroad building has gone forward with Titanic strides in the last two decades and where a vast amount of building is now under way. On one contract with the Tennessee Central railroad, Mrs. Beacham's profit was $80,000, and it is calculated that her average annual earnings are about $50,000.

The contract which she is now engaged in executing is the construction of five miles of railroad from Kirby Station, Virginia, westward. It is part of a contract for one hundred miles of the coal mine to sea railroad which was secured by Sands and Oliver of Richmond. These contractors sublet a short stretch of the work to Mrs. Beacham.

At present she is employing only about one hundred and fifty men but the proper control of this force and the purchase of the necessary supplies calls for the exercise of no little executive ability.

Royal Quarrels Over Chess.

King Edward, we are told, is developing an enthusiasm for chess. In that the view of fitting a long-died ward in the house and office, he is only following in the steps of many of his predecessors on the throne, including his namesake, the first Edward. Says the writer:

Whether or not players were more irascible in those old days than now, it is a curious fact that chess was often more stimulating to the royal tempers than is golf in these latter days, and many a game peacefully begun ended in broken heads. When Prince Henry—afterward Henry I—once paid a visit to the court of Louis, the king's eldest son, as he, growing into choleric, called him (a naughty name) and threw the chess in his face, Henry takes up the chessboard, and strake Louis with that force as drew blood, and had killed him had not his brother Robert come in the meantime and interposed himself, whereupon they suddenly took horse and gal away."

King John in his younger days had a similar experience; for a game of chess in which his opponent was one Fulk Warine ended in a royal row, during which Fulk gave the prince "so grievous a blow as almost to slake him on the spot." John never forgot the blow nor forgave his irreconcilable opponent, and punished him when later he came to the throne, by withholding his heritage—Whittington castle—from him.

William the Conqueror more than once lost his temper over the game, and on at least one occasion with serious consequences. He was playing with the son of the king of France when a dispute led to hot words, and culminated in William bringing down the board so heavily on his opponent's head as to render him unconscious.

Louis XIII. of France was so infuriated with the game that wherever he went he was accompanied by his chessboard and men and invariably played it in his coach when he took drives abroad. Charles I. found it so fascinating that he almost literally played it to the foot of the scaffold; and when once his game was interrupted by news that the Scots had decided to sell him to the parliament he proceeded with his half of his muscular power to redress a deficiency that he feared would be an unsurmountable barrier between him and the young school marm.

It was a common enough falling in the neighborhood in which Wesley lived, six months before, the fact that he did not write his own name, would have embarrassed him a great deal.

The school teacher had come into his life, however, it had become a real thing in the flesh. Vainly he struggled with the little lumps of the alphabet in the room by candle light when all the members of the household were asleep in slumber; but the goal of his life was measured a distance that was almost the feverish impatience that possessed him.

Wesley had been trembling on the edge of a proposal many times and had committed himself long ago to this barrier. For the idea of leaving the school teacher in writing had to have fixed itself in his mind as the only method of procedure which he could hope for a reward.

So it was an overwhelming desire to settle his fate, coupled with a consciousness of attaining the educational education of being able to pen his name, that led him to procure the help of another party, upon which he was bound this afternoon.

The party he had decided to utilize was Silas Mansur, postmaster and a groceryman combined; and as he was under obligation to him for a small loan, Wesley thought he might as well have it canceled in this way.

He had chosen a time of the day when would run the least chance of entering loungers about the store, and enough the coast was clear and young lady's feelin'," he stammered. "but I like that beginnin' an' I reckon you kin put it more fancy like; but I want you to be sure to say I'm waitin' for her answer very patient, an' ef she'll say yes, I'll be the happiest man in Chinkapin Hundred, an' ef she says no, it'll drive me to do what it will hurt her. Tell her I'm able to take kere of her, that I'm workin' the place on sheers this year, but pa, he's promised to deed me a strip of lan' down by the far gate, an' ef she ain't a mind to live with the old folks I'll build her a house on my own lan', an' say I'll make her a sober, industrious husband, an' I'll treat her like the apple of my eye, which she is, an' ever will be, even if she don't reciprocate my affections, an' then, you kin win 'up Si," he finished, taking the first breath. "only as I'm partic'lar 'bout folks signin' other folk's name, suppose you, jes say good-bye, my angel, till I hear from you, an' that'll do."

It seemed an age before Wesley had converted all this in a sure enough letter, even taking into consideration the beautiful flourishes with which it was embellished, and he had it in his coat pocket on his way to deliver into the hands of the school teacher. Then it seemed another age after he had entrusted it to the care of one of the school children and watched through the open window to be sure it was laid on the teacher's desk, before school was let out, though at last when he saw the children pouring out the door, the pretty school marm bringing up the rear, a real stage fright possessed him.

The idea of flight presented itself, but he dismissed it with a manly determination to stand his ground. When the teacher came up by him he could not look her in the face, but began to walk at her side, forgetting to offer to take her books as usual, until they had gone some distance and he made an awkward attempt to relieve her, dropping half of them on the ground in his confusion.

As he stopped to gather them up the fateful letter rolled out from between the pages of one of the books, and there was nothing for him to do but to pick it up and hand it to her. She broke off with a sob, turning to dash away the tears that sprang to her eyes.
