The Steamship of The Future

E. CORTRELL, C. E., SC.

Steamships of the Future Will Make Those of To-day Look Like Tugs.

WHEN the rising generation is big enough to spend its honeymoon, or to incur the disagreeable necessity of escaping the attentions of peccary servers, it will travel on steamships which will make those of to-day look like tugs. To be more specific, not more than forty-two years hence the great twenty steamships in existence will have these average dimensions: length, 1,000 feet; breadth, 100 feet; draught, 33 feet; gross tonnage, 30,000. The average dimensions of the present largest twenty are, length, 640, breadth 68.9, draught 32.1, and gross tonnage, 17,151. It will be seen that the steamships will have to do some tall towing.

These confident predictions are made by Elmer Lawrence Cortrell, B. A., M. E., Dr. Sc., of New York and Chicago. Mr. Cortrell is not a professional prophet, but an engineer who has done a considerable part of the world's work in steamships, and is still engaged in some of the most important undertakings, his predictions regarding the future of the world's commerce are of the liveliest interest.

Mr. Cortrell played an important part in convincing Congress in 1874 of the wisdom of authorizing the construction of the famous Eads jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi, and was engineer in charge of the construction of the jetties, which increased the depth of water in the South Pass from nine feet to more than thirty feet. He made surveys for the Tehuantepec Ship Railway in 1880, and subsequently, by means of a number of notable addresses delivered in the principal cities of the United States, attracted the world's attention to the project. He built bridges over the Mississippi river at Hannibal, Mo., and St. Louis, Mo., and at New Orleans. He planned and executed the harbor improvements at Tampico, which increased the depth of water from eight feet to twenty-six feet and made that port the second port in Mexico. He received the nebulous idea of the Chicago World's Fair to a tangible proposition by solving the engineering problems of that great undertaking, and subsequently carried out some important works that were instrumental in making the Fair a success. He was also one of the leading spirits in organizing the International Engineering Congress, held during the fair. Ten years ago the works of various kinds constructed under Mr. Cortrell's supervision footed up an aggregate value of $100,000,000. In 1898 he represented the United States government at the International Congress of Navigation at Brussels. He was also at the Congress in 1900 and at the Milan Congress in 1905. At present he is assistant and chief engineer of the company which is making important improvements in the harbor of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, the difficulties of which have baffled some of the world's foremost engineers. He is a member of everything like a score of scientific societies in America and Europe.

In 1898, when Mr. Cortrell's first prediction was made, the number of steamships in existence was 11,271, having a gross tonnage of 17,889,006. He predicted that in five years this number would increase to 12,002, with an aggregate tonnage of 20,801,205. The actual number in existence in 1903 was 13,381, representing a tonnage of 26,158,358. The average tonnage of steamships in 1898 was 1,587. Mr. Cortrell predicted that the average would increase to 1,704 by 1903. In reality the average at the end of five years proved to be 1,955 tons. The average dimensions of the largest twenty steamships in 1898 were: Length, 640 feet; breadth, 61 feet; draught, 29 feet; gross tonnage, 10,717. He predicted an increase in the next five years to a length of 686 feet, a breadth of 64.8 feet, a draught of 29.4 feet and a gross tonnage of 13,374. When the five years had elapsed the actual dimensions were found to be: Length, 640 feet; breadth, 68.9 feet; draught, 32.1 feet; gross tonnage, 17,151. Steamships of 500 feet or more in length had increased from twenty-two to ninety-three—an increase of 323 per cent. Now Mr. Cortrell predicts that in 1948 there will be a total of 16,685 steamships, representing a total tonnage of 45,000,000, or an average of 2,700 tons. The average dimensions of the largest twenty steamships will be: Length, 1,000 feet; breadth, 100 feet; draught, 33 feet; gross tonnage, 30,000.

Other interesting features of Mr. Cortrell's predictions, which are based on the developments of the past, are that the speed of the fastest steamships in 1948 will be thirty knots, that the total number of sailing vessels will have decreased from 56,281 in 1873 to 10,000 in 1948, and their tonnage from 1,000,000 to 3,241,000. The weight of some of the commerce in 1948 will have increased to 435,000,000 tons, and the value of the combined exports of the leading nations of the globe will have reached the stupendous total of $10,000,000,000.

In discussing the outlook for the future Mr. Cortrell said:

"There is no reason why steamships should not continue to increase in size, and there is every reason why they should do so. It is unnecessary to repeat the arguments of commercial men regarding the reduction in the cost of transportation by increasing the size of the mass to be moved. The natural outcome of the present tendency of transportation, both on land and water, is to increase the volume to be moved; larger cars and longer trains and more powerful locomotives to move them on the land, and larger ships and greater power on the sea. The competition of countries and ports with one another, and the necessity of reaching the markets of consumption by distant producers all serve to increase the freight capacity of steamships; and the longer the course the greater the demand for size.

"A very important feature of the subject is the urgent necessity of increasing the draught of steamships. The length and breadth have far outstripped the draught, of course, is rigidly limited by the depth of water in channels and at docks.

"The reasons insistently and persistently stated by naval architects for increased draught, not only for greater stability, speed and generally better proportions of steamships, but for greater capacity and greater economy of transportation are of the strongest and most convincing character. As the displacement of a steamship is increased by increasing the draught, the power required to drive a ton of displacement at a given speed is reduced. Some instances of the limitations of draught may be cited to show how important is the question of providing greater draught and greater depth of channels to meet this draught. The Deutschland, one of the largest vessels of to-day, like all the swiftest mail steamers, carries very little freight because of the limits imposed by her draught. It has been stated that this great ship of more than 23,000 tons displacement can carry only 500 to 600 tons of cargo. If her draught could be increased one foot, about 950 tons more cargo could be carried, and two feet increase would represent about 1,800 tons more cargo. The freight earning capacity would thus be nearly trebled for one foot extra draught, or made five-fold for two feet, with a very trifling loss of speed, even at a deeper draught.

"The Moldavia, of the Peninsular and Oriental Line, on a draught of 27 feet 4½ inches, carries about 3,000 tons of cargo. Each additional foot of draught gives an increased carrying power of about 650 tons. Three feet increase would, therefore, add about 2,000 tons, or 66 per cent to her freight earning capacity. There would be some decrease in speed, but nothing sensibly affecting her time on passage. Facts such as these explain the insistence of shipbuilders and ship owners in urging the necessity for greater depths.

"As to the cost of fuel in large and small steamships, theoretical calculations and actual practice agree in showing that the consumption of coal per ton miles is about 8 to 4.4. It has been shown that a 300 foot ship and a 750 foot ship, the one having a loaded displacement of 8,640 tons and the other 26,158 tons, the one with a draught of 24 feet 4½ inches and the other 32 feet 4½ inches.

"The operation of the law controlling the development of steamships, particularly in respect to their draught, is incontestable. The naval architect and the steamship companies feel its effects in all, because behind them is the world's commercial requirements.

the demand for cheaper transportation. In spite of the apparent lethargy of maritime powers, national and local, awakening to the situation of port requirements, the size and draught of vessels are still increasing.

"A detail of navigation requirements not often referred to is the depth needed under vessels in the entrance channels. A ship moving at even low speed, say 8 knots an hour, will have a greater draught than in deep water. As is said in nautical language, she 'squats.' The water between her and the bed of the channel is driven out, and often the ship will actually drag on the bottom, while if stationary there would be a foot and a half of water under the keel. In the entrance channels of New York harbor this is a well known fact. For this reason alone, to say nothing of the usual requirement of considerable space between the ship's keel and the bottom due to vertical movement of the ship, a seaway, there should be not less than a half foot in the entrance channels between the deepest draught vessels and the bed of the channel.

"The ports of the world must meet the commercial requirements of the age, a marked and continual enlargement of facilities, and those who control the policy should study carefully the requirements of steamships and, looking to the future, lay their plans adequate and wisely to meet these ever increasing requirements."

[Data collected by Mr. Cortrell to show what is being done to provide a suitable depth of water for larger vessels shows that there are 138 ports which now have a depth of entrance channel of less than thirty feet at low water, and 70 which have a depth of more than thirty feet. When all the channels are deepened, as now proposed, the number having more than thirty feet in the channels at low water will be increased to 91. Ninety-five ports now have less than thirty feet of water in the entrance channels at high water, and 113 have more than thirty feet. When improvements now underway are completed the number having more than thirty feet at high water will be 136.

The most fortunate port in the United States in this respect is Tacoma, where the entrance channel is five hundred feet deep and the depth at the wharves is forty to forty-eight feet. Seattle comes next with a channel two hundred feet deep and a depth at the wharves of thirty-seven to forty-four feet. New York will be third when the Ambrose channel is completed to give a depth of forty feet at mean low water, and New Orleans will be fourth with a depth of thirty-five feet.

CHAPTER VI.

Prologue, after the legal separation from Dumbarton, became a successful author. He returned to London and by letter makes plans for money. Her cousin, Valerius, a man of independent wealth, who has been with her since early youth, calls to say that he is starting on a trip to Egypt. A fortnight later Dumbarton is found in her library, alone, over the dead body of her husband. The body of the murdered man is lying on the floor. George Bostock, the solicitor, offers to aid Mrs. Dumbarton.

CHAPTER VII.

murmur of a restless crowd, the noise of jurymen in their places, the whispering of reporters, the quick tread of men passing to and fro, the rustle of papers, and the banging of doors; an absolute silence fell as Olive Dumbarton took the stand in front of the unhappy woman, dressed in black and heavily veiled. Her solicitor, George Coris, and her husband, George Bostock, were in an adjoining room, considered desirable that each should be examined out of the presence of the others. The preliminaries, including the reading of the indictment, the testimony of the deceased, and the statement of the cause of his death given by the coroner, he said, were all over. It was now time to hear the evidence of the jury. Dumbarton came to his feet, and in a low, earnest voice, said: "I am not here to tell you how the jury should decide, but to tell you, as far as I am able, by whom that death was caused."

"It is, therefore, my duty to commit you."

increased, David Dumbarton, had been years ago married a lady whose life began in happiness, it was overclouded by misery. After a time in which it would be too painful to describe, David Dumbarton deserted his wife, and she was left to earn her own living. He had earned independence and fame in the literary world. A compromise was then arrived at between husband and wife. For a certain sum he agreed that a legal separation should be made, and he had received this, and returned to England, promising never to molest her again.

Unfortunately for himself, this promise was not kept, for after a little more time, he returned to her, and immediately wrote a letter to her, in which he said that he would be back in the course of a few days, and that he would be able to give her a letter, as they would see each other. He contained more of a demand than a promise.

The next and principal fact was that on the night of the 21st of September Dumbarton entered his wife's room in the Hexton Road, St. John's, and was there found dead at her feet. They being the sole occupants of the room where the tragedy occurred, the knife which undoubtedly caused the death was seen in her hand. They heard the evidence, and it would be sent to another court or not. Olive Dumbarton was called. She gave a low, and without hesitation, answered the questions addressed to her in the corner, in this manner telling the story of the scene which ended in her husband's tragic death. Then she quavered, and she replied to the queries that touched the case closely, to all of which she replied clearly, ingeniously.

The maid was next summoned, who had been struck, and soon after a man's voice called for help. She had rushed to the room where the noise proceeded, there she found Mrs. Dumbarton with a knife in her hand, and she was bending over the deceased, who was lying on the floor. Witness came out of the house in search of the man, with whom she returned. The man, Martin, the policeman, Dr. Quave, and Detective Inspector Mackworth, having been cross-examined by Dumbarton's solicitor, he proceeded to his defence; and he, being recognized as one of the cleverest men in his profession, the jury settled itself to hear him with expectation and interest.

The case before them, George Coris said, in a low, earnest voice, and with plain, impressive manner, was one of the most extraordinary that had ever come before that or any other court; extraordinary not merely because of the circumstances under which the crime had been committed, and of the suspicions which these same circumstances cast upon an innocent woman. Inasmuch as none of those who gave evidence had actually seen the blow dealt to the deceased by which he had lost his life, their testimony was therefore entirely circumstantial.

There was no need to dwell upon the unhappy married life led by the deceased and his wife, save to point out the vicious career he had followed.

If a man could not only alienate the affections, but injure, deceive and abandon his wife, his best friend, the mother of his child, how badly could he behave toward others of his sex? He had for years led a wandering and misguided life among companions as reckless as himself; and, what was more probable than that he had been guilty of one of those wrongs which the law is slow, if not powerless, to punish, but which, touching men on the tenderest points of their affection and of their honor, they are sure to avenge.

Here was the probable key to the mystery surrounding the crime. Some man who considered himself injured beyond endurance had sought and found revenge for his wrongs. It was lawful to presume that while approaching his wife's house the deceased had met with the avenger, when to seek help and refuge David Dumbarton had rushed through the garden and into the presence of his wife, who, on his asking for aid, had drawn from his breast the knife with which an unknown hand had stabbed him.

The whole bearing of the case would point to such a conclusion and to the innocence of the woman who was the unhappy victim of suspicion. As she had stated, she neither knew nor suspected that he would call upon her that evening. Had he desired to have an interview with her, there was no reason why he should not have gone to the hall door instead of rushing across the grass and flower beds to enter by an open window.

Then, as regards the knife by which the murder had been committed: The servants in their cross-examination had sworn that they had never seen it before the night of the tragedy. It was surely impossible to think the weapon had been bought and secreted by this lady for the purpose of assassinating her husband at such a time and under such circumstances as would favor the deed. No; the knife belonged to the person who had struck the blow to avenge himself for wrong perpetrated by the deceased.

Indeed, there was not sufficient motive apparent for suspecting this injured woman of committing this horrible act. Nothing could have been more easy than for her to have obtained a divorce had she so wished. There was no necessity for her to seek freedom by causing his death. Mrs. Dumbarton was a woman of blameless life, and all who knew her could bear witness that hers was not the wicked, depraved and malignant heart that had conceived and carried out such a crime.

There was no necessity to say more to any enlightened body of men, and he would ask the jury, as men of judgment and lovers of justice, to return a verdict which would free this suffering lady.

George Coris sat down at the conclusion of his speech with a sense of satisfaction at having done his best for his client, but likewise with the knowledge that his case was weak and his arguments inconclusive.

The coroner then summed up the evidence. Evening had come before he had finished his remarks, and the jury had retired to consider their verdict.

Olive Dumbarton, sensitively conscious to all that went on around her, preserved a calmness that she felt was unnatural, her emotions were frozen, the tide of her life seemed to stand still. Those around her, George Bostock, her solicitor, Dr. Quave, betrayed their excitement by their restlessness and by the anxious manner with which they regarded her. It was a relief to her and to her friends when the jury once more entered the court.

In another moment the foreman of the jury declared that they were unanimous in their opinion that David Dumbarton had met his death by being stabbed in the breast, and that the fatal blow had been struck by his wife.

The verdict was received in profound silence, broken by the coroner's voice as he proceeded to explain the difference between murder and manslaughter, with a view to helping them to their decision as to which form of crime had been committed by Olive Dumbarton.

Without quitting the box, the jury gave it as their opinion that the case before them was one of manslaughter. The coroner then, turning toward the black-robed, immovable figure which was the center of all observation, said:

"Olive Dumbarton, the jury have inquired into the cause attending the demise of your husband, and have come to the conclusion he met his death at your hands. It is, therefore, my duty to commit you to the next assizes, to be held at the Old Bailey, there to take your trial upon that charge."

CHAPTER VII.

It was late one evening—while Olive Dumbarton and her daughter were in the drawing-room, when Valerius Galbraith was announced. Both started at sound of his name, and, looking up, kept their eyes fixed on him with something of surprise in their expression, for even in that first glance they saw how changed was the man before them from him who had parted from them little more than a week before.

The freshness and buoyancy which had been his chief characteristics had given place to an expression of pain and anxiety; his prominent blue eyes, which had ever sparkled with pleasure, were now clouded by grief; lines were for the first time visible in his face, that sedulous care of his personal appearance which formerly gave the impression of elegance was now conspicuous by its absence, and he looked every year of his age.

"Olive!" he exclaimed, grasping her extended hand in both his own. "I knew you would come back, and I am glad you have," he said.

"Of course I returned the moment I heard of—of this terrible affair," he replied. "I sent a telegram to Paris the day after it happened."

"I had left by then. It was in Brindisi I first read of his death. You can imagine the shock I received. I have hardly slept since. Then I came back as soon as I could, and only reached town a couple of hours ago."

"I suppose you have heard all?" "All that the newspapers could tell me."

"About the Coroner's Court and the verdict?" she said, in a troubled voice. "Yes, yes," he answered, struggling with his emotion. "It's terrible to think that you should suffer thus—you who would not injure any living thing; you have steadily earned so much."

"Tell me, Valerius," she said in a hesitating voice, "did you at first, even for a moment, think I was guilty?"

"You guilty?" he cried out. "Never, never! I knew you were innocent."

"It makes me almost happy to hear you say so, to know that my friends don't believe me guilty. You are aware, of course, that circumstances are all against me?"

"So I gather. But let me hear all." "There is little to tell that you have not already read," she began by saying, and she went over the details of the case which were ever present in her mind, dwelling on the narrow compass which surrounded the case, and seemed to fasten the guilt upon her.

"Then there's no absolute clew?" "Not that I know of, at least," Olive Dumbarton replied.

"Except the knife," suggested Veronica. "The knife?" Valerius repeated, turning toward the girl.

"I had forgotten that," Olive remarked. "Mackworth, the detective, hopes it may help him to discover the owner."

"But is there nothing else to go upon?" he asked. "Nothing at present," Olive answered, and something in the sound of her voice and in the expression of her face betrayed the depths of that despair to which at moments she was driven.

"Ah, Olive," he said suddenly and vehemently, as if carried away by an irresistible impulse, "if you had listened to me long ago, how much pain might you and I have been spared; how much happiness might we have known?"

"Valerius!" she exclaimed, reproachfully. "Forgive me. I don't know what I am saying to-night. I did not mean to blame you now, least of all, when you suffer most. I cannot control myself to-night, but I will leave you at once. Good night! I have no desire to add to your vexations. Good-night."

"Good-night," she replied, holding out her hand. As he took it in his own a quiver passed through his frame. He turned from her almost abruptly, but before he reached the door Veronica entered and said:

"Doctor Quave cannot come to-night, mother."

"Very well, dear."

"But Quinton is here," Veronica said, somewhat shyly, "and says he would like to see you, mother."

"In the dining-room."

"Ask him to come here. You remember Quinton Quave," Olive said to her cousin as Veronica quitted the room. "Yes, very well."

"He has taken his degrees and gives great promise of being a very clever doctor. He and his parents have been most kind to me since—since that terrible night."

Valerius remembered that Dr. Quave and his son were among the first who had come upon the scene of the tragedy, and he felt interested in seeing the young man, with whom, on his entering the room, he shook hands.

FEATS OF DEPRIVATION

There are three men alive who have gone without food for thirty-three days, and one who has denied himself any nourishment for forty-five.

The latter record holder is Hurr Sacco, who has publicly fasted in Vienna for forty days and nights, in London for forty-five and in Paris for forty-two. Inclosed in a ventilated glass chamber, so as to be under observation all the time, watched day and night by witnesses, he took no food for 1080 hours. In that time the average man would have taken about one hundred and thirty-five meals.

However, this is not a real record for complete abstinence, for Sacco allows himself plenty of mineral water and cigarettes, which are in his contract.

WITHOUT FOOD AND DRINK!

Going entirely without food and drink is a very different thing, and the average strong man's life before death overtakes him, is under six days. The record for a trained "faster," allowing nothing at all to pass his lips during the trial, was made at San Francisco in 1896 by John Culpepper, a British subject, who was most carefully watched during the fast. He undertook, for a stake of $1,000, to hold out for ten days, with $20 for each day over that limit. He did not give in until the end of the eleventh day, and it was likely that any human being will ever hold out so long again.

The greatest length recorded of enforced starvation, by shipwrecked men or castaways, belongs to an Irish seaman named Molebly, who was cast adrift in an open boat alone, at the foundering of the bark Pamela, in the Pacific, eight years ago. It is certain that he had no food or water with him, and he was picked up seven and a half days later by an American ship.

SLEEPLESS FOR SIX HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-TWO HOURS.

Existing on food and no liquid is a very different thing from taking liquid and no food, as Sacco did. The former trial is much the worse of the two, and the record time for which any man has held out in such a case is fourteen days. Cramer, a German, did it once at Munich.

The average length of time during which an ordinary person in a healthy state can go without sleep is seventy-four hours, and this has been found the limit that men can reach in emergencies, such as disasters at sea and imminent peril that make it absolutely necessary not to relax vigilance. Between seventy and seventy-five hours is the record, and the toughest man can keep awake no longer, and will fall asleep, even though his life depends on wakefulness.

A Frenchman named Deroalde, in one of the Paris hospitals, is recorded to have suffered twenty-eight days and nights of complete wakefulness, but at the end of it he died of exhaustion, and so the record cannot stand. There is one man, of twenty-nine years, now living in England, who has never slept since he was born; his case has frequently been described in the papers and by doctors, but this example is strictly a "freak," and cannot be compared with ordinary records.

Fidgety people will regard with horror the achievement of Angela de Silva, a Spanish girl who, partly for stakes and partly as an advertisement, remained in a sort of cage at the Argyll Rooms in London, some nine years ago, for fifty-five days and nights without moving hand or foot, or changing her position, seated on a chair. She was attended and fed by her sister, and various wagers having been made on the performance, she was kept a watch over, day and night, by independent witnesses.

WORSE THAN PENAL SERVITUDE.

There is no great merit in the performance, perhaps, but it is an exceptionally trying one. The notable point was that the lady was not in a trance of any kind, but in full possession of her senses.

Trances are very different affairs, and the principal one recorded lasted nine weeks. The subject was an English lady, Miss Naomi Smythe, of Norton, who lay in a state of complete unconsciousness during the whole of that time, and was visited by over a dozen distinguished medical men interested in the case. Nourishment was artificially given, as the trance naturally caused much anxiety for the life of the patient, who, however, was finally restored to consciousness and recovered. In this case life remained almost suspended throughout the nine weeks.

But apart from trances, all Europeans are easily beaten at the game of remaining motionless, by an Indian fakir or "holy man," named Chundra Dalf, of Benares, who was strapped in an upright position to an open framework, eighteen years ago, and has never moved since. He is daily fed and tended by his "disciples."

WHERE MAN BEATS ANIMAL.

All warm-blooded life is supposed to perish in a temperature of 85 degrees below zero, and the majority succumb a long way short of that. A strong man, if sufficiently clothed, may just exist at the temperature, but only just. However, a Russian named Karkoff, in one of the few experiments of this kind tried, actually survived an artificial temperature of 90 degrees in the St. Petersburg laboratories, after several Arctic species of animals had proved themselves unable to stand it. In the Arctic regions the lowest natural degree of cold ever registered is 74 degrees below zero. In such cold as this a piece of iron will burn the flesh as if the metal were white-hot.

Too Much to Say

"For goodness' sake, Dorothy," exclaimed mamma impatiently, "why do you talk so much?"

"I guess," replied the little girl, "it's because I've got so much to say."

An Irishman asked a Scotchman one day why a railway engine was called "she." Sandy replied, "Perhaps it's on account of the horrible noise it makes when it tries to whistle."

NEW IN SUMMER ORNAMENTS

Belt Buckles of Carved Rose Gold a Novelty

They Give a Smart Touch to the Summer Costume—Silver Collar Slides and Sets of Enamelled Studs for Tailored Waists—Season's Vogue of Chatelaine Bags.

Among the things which add a smart touch to the summer wardrobe is the belt buckle and back ornament made this year of rose gold colored almost to a deep orange tint, shading toward old rose. These buckles, clasps and ornaments are designed in beautifully carved patterns representing roses and other flowers and in conventional designs.

The other day a woman who hung over a counter on which these goods were displayed, trying in vain to decide between two equally beautiful sets, finally ended in taking both.

One had a back ornament fully five inches tall by two and one half inches broad and a double front clasp less than three inches tall and about four inches wide, both done in a rose leaf design.

The other set had a front clasp about two inches deep and five inches broad, and a back ornament of irregular shape almost four inches square, both in a raised design dotted with miniature roses.

A second smart adjunct useful as well as ornamental, is the collar slide of silver, as thin almost as the featherbone which they replace. The slide is finished at the ends with a tiny rhinestone or pearl set head, which alone appears on the right side of the collar. Thus, supposing half a dozen slides are used to hold up one collar, a row of pearls or rhinestones will appear at the top and bottom of the collar.

Sets of shaded enamelled studs are provided to finish the front and cuffs of the new white tailored blouse waists. There are green, blue, pink and mauve studs, and unless the smart summer girl sticks to a distinctive color, the better plan is to have a set of each, so that the ruling color in her hat and parasol may be matched in her studs.

Silver chatelaine bags have sprung into a vogue somewhat puzzling, considering the comparative cheapness of the metal. A woman in showing her purchase the other day—a five by six inch bag, which cost $15—explained that a gold bag, jewel mounted, such as she ordinarily carried in town, did not go well with summer morning costumes.

"We sell almost as many of the German silver as of the real thing, and to persons of wealth, too," said a clerk. "They cost only about one-quarter the price of the finer silver bags, they wear well and look almost as smart. The key lining in most of them is adjustable, and may be removed and cleaned."

A novelty in metal collars designed after the fashion of the strings of pearl dog collars, is made of perhaps twenty or thirty strands of flexible silver chain as slender as fine wire, fastened at the front, back and sides against very narrow, two and one-half inch long silver bars. One inch wide jeweled collars worn with collarless waists are considered almost a necessity by some women. Few real jewels are used in these collars, the better liked varieties showing gold of open work pattern, alternating with oblongs and squares of colored stones.

Lest He Go Hungry.

Miss Mary S. Anthony, who is continuing the work of her distinguished sister, the late Susan B. Anthony, said recently apropos of marriage:

"It is selfishness, boorish selfishness, that, more than anything else, lies at the root of unhappy unions. Sometimes it is the wife who is the selfish one. Sometimes it is the husband. I think you'll agree with me, though, that it is the husband more often than the wife."

"A happening of a day or two ago presents a vivid and sad picture of too many marriages."

"An old couple came in from the country with a big basket of lunch to see the circus."

"The lunch was heavy. The old wife was carrying it. As they crossed a crowded street the husband held out his hand and said:

"'Gimme that basket, Hannah.'"

"The poor old woman surrendered the basket with a grateful look."

"That's real kind of ye, Joshua," she quavered.

"Kind?" grunted the old man. "Gosh, I wuz afraid ye'd git lost."

I PUBLISH the greatest Farm Paper in the World—"The Metropolitan and Rural Home." Before I was a publisher, I was a farmer. Now I am interested in both. I believe farming and publishing are the greatest and going. Sometimes I even think farming beats publishing.

And now—just to show you how I feel toward farmers, I want to give you each one of these Pocket Books. If you are a farmer, I want to give you to give you one of these Pocket Books so you can show it to your friends and neighbors. And now—just to show you how I feel toward farmers, I want to give you each one of these Pocket Books. If you are a farmer, I want to give you to give you one of these Pocket Books so you can show it to your friends and neighbors.

Now you don't pay anything for the Pocket Book. It's FREE. I send it and don't ask you a cent. But to show you that you are willing to be just as liberal with you, I want you to send me 20 cents for The Metropolitan and Rural Home. Now don't say, "that's what I expected." Wait a minute and read the rest. You to the most liberal part of my offer yet. Read this announcement all through, much for you, if you were me and I were you. If you will do as I ask, I will have and address printed on the inside of your Pocket Book, so, if it gets lost, it to you at once. When I send it to you, I will also send you some sample copies of the Metropolitan and Rural Home and I will continue to send the paper to you for three months. That gives you the paper three months FREE—to say nothing of the fine Pocket Book. Now—what do you think of my offer?

A Great Big Illustrated Magazine I send you, The Metropolitan and Rural Home is a great big Magazine Paper. It is printed in clean, plain type on nice paper and of pictures every month. I just mention these things because they are extra—it's the stock, dairy and farm news, and good make my paper the best farm paper in the world.

If you don't tell me at the end of the three months to stop the paper, of course, I'll keep your subscription—enter your name and send you The Metropolitan and Rural Home for a full year.

Now I'm sorry I haven't got more of these Pocket Books, but there are only 5,000 to give away, so you'll have to hurry a one. They are such good Pocket Books, that they'll go like wild fire and you ought to stop right here, fill in the order blank, and send it to me at once, so as to be sure and get one of these Pocket Books. I put that blank in here so you needn't hunt for paper and want to. Use a lead pencil, fill out the blank, enclose twenty cents (stamps or silver) and mail it to me just as quickly as you can. Right away, so the Pocket Books won't be gone when I get your subscription.

JAMES B. FRANKLIN PASSES FROM EARTH

SUCRUMBS TO CONSUMPTION AFTER A YEAR OF SUFFERING

He Expressed a Readiness to go and Selected Text and Songs for Funeral

WAS A MEMBER OF UNION CHURCH

James B. Franklin died at the home of his parents, near Levia, Sunday morning, Sept. 2nd, in his 23rd year.

The question of every body around here almost every day since last Christmas has been "how is Jimmie Franklin?"

Last year he was forced to give up his position as agent for a railroad in Mississippi on account of his health. Since that time all that medical skill and motherly nursing could do for him has been brought to bear on his case. He made a brave, patient, submissive fight in which all his friends joined, helped and cheered all they could.

He professed faith in Christ and joined Union Church in 1895. He often expressed himself as willing to go, only regretting that he had not done more for Christ who he felt had done so much for him.

He approached death as "one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

He made requests concerning his funeral, selecting as a text, "Thy Will be done," and songs, "Nearer my God to Thee," "There is a fountain filled with blood," etc.

One of the largest congregations from all parts of the country gathered at Union church Monday to his funeral services. It was indeed a grief stricken assembly. The stricken parents, brothers and sisters have the sympathy of the entire community in their sore loss.

The services were conducted by the writer assisted by Elder W. R. Gibbs, pastor of the church. "We weep not as those who have no hope."

R. A. LARUE.

W. A. James Dead.

W. A. James died Monday Sept. 3rd, 1906, of locked bowels. He was sick only a few days, and was fifty years, four months and twenty-three days old. Mr. James married several years ago Miss Lucy Clark a sister of Lem and Rev. J. R. Clark and is survived by his wife and five children. He was a Primitive Baptist in belief and had been a member at Pleasant Hill for twenty-five years. He was a brother of Berry F. and Eli James, and of Mrs. Sarah Conner. His remains were laid to rest in the Pleasant Hill cemetery Monday afternoon and his services were conducted by Elder W. F. and J. L. Paris, and were attended by a large gathering of the friends of the deceased.

EQUAL TO PITTSBURG.

Is What a Mining Expert Thinks of the Number Eight Co. Found at Provident.

Mr. T. L. Lee, representing an Alabama coal syndicate, has been prospecting in the vicinity of Providence for several days and the Enterprise learns that he is secured options on several hundred acres of coal land south-west of the city that is easily accessible to the Kentucky Valley railroad.

This may or may not be the nucleus for another large coal mining plant for Providence. Mr. Lee failed to enlighten any one as to his intentions but enough was learned to know that he is highly pleased with his observations here and that further investigations will be made. A test for coal is now being made on the Newt. Smith farm, near the city. Mr. Lee places a great value upon the No. 8 vein of coal and all other strata and he was heard to remark that he believed the No. 8 coal found in Providence was equal to Pittsburgh coal.

Curious as it may seem, no particular attention is being given to the strata of coal that passes Mr. Lee so well. None of the various mines here are working the vein. Providence Enterprise.

INTERESTING ITEMS ABOUT THE MINES

MANY MINES RUNNING DAY AND NIGHT

Mines all Over this Section Showing Good Increases. Every Mine is Being Worked Scientifically

Mr. C. S. Nunn, of the "Ky." is "on the go" early and late. Thus it is that that Company is able to produce and ship more ground spar than ever before, saying nothing of lump.

We note quite a quantity of zinc carbonate is being brought in from the "Hodge Mine."

"Why don't some one take up the abandoned Leander white spar mine," was asked last week. "It was a good producer." Boys hustle a little and don't let a good thing go to sleep. Some one can make some more good money there.

Mr. Davis, of Keys-Davis mine, is hauling the zinc, carbonate, mineral during the winter, to the Marion market.

Monday it looked like old times to see the string of teams hauling from the Memphis! The wagon train reached through the city from limit to limit.

It is reported that the Marion Zinc Company will begin work on the Redd property adjacent to the Polk place. This is a fine gravel spar proposition and only a little time and money is needed to develop it into a dividend payer.

The Cullen mine is again running full time. The Nancy Hanks has a day crew and a night crew. And is using them working day and night. "The business is here boys. Get busy!"

Mr. Chas. Fox is arranging to plaster the last cottage erected at the Riley mine. This makes four cottages the company has now completed for its employees at this mine.

Extra teams were put on to haul spar from the Redd and the Riley mines to Crayneville this week.

It is reported that A. H. Reed has accepted a position as engineer of the great coal property acquired by J. P. Morgan and associates in Webster and Union counties.

The Fairview mine is producing a car of lead every six weeks, which is shipped via Golconda, Ill., and the I. C. R. R. This mine has also a twenty-five foot breast of high grade flour spar and is shipping five cars every other day, fifteen cars a week of this mineral.

Capt. Haase's example of placing on exhibition the large lumps of spar from the Asbridge is commendable. Let others do likewise, soon the traveling men who come into the district will advertise as free.

With two good hotels this soon should be a "Sunday town" for the traveling public. Crittenden Springs is a short hours drive and is as fine a place as anybody has and is adjacent to some of the finest mining properties in the district, which can be readily visited. We have two good livery stables, with rigs at our disposal. Invite your friends to come and see us, stop "knocking" and get ready to hustle. Remember a good horse and want a part of it.

Aren't you that A. H. Cardin open up some of his farm near prospects on his farm near

The Ohio Mining Co., Grant Davidson, Superintendent will continue to sink its shaft in the Lynn property. The shaft is now down to 50 feet.

Jas. Henry has opened up for the Stegar, Dollar & Cruce Company a fine view of Lead and Fluor spar near Alta Pass, Ills.

Today there are more orders on the books of the various mining companies doing business in this district than for a year past. This certainly looks bright for all interested and should shut up the knockers.

Mr. Johnson Crider, of the Marion Mineral Co., reports work progressing nicely at the Pogue mine in sinking and preparing to establish two or three stops at the 170 foot level.

Robt. Hodges and others, to J. D. Hodges, 75 acres near Crayneville, $60.

John L. Rogers, to Henry Holoman, 3 acres on Dry Fork, $50.

Daniel W. Jones, to Wm. F. Jones 70 acres on Hurricane Creek $1,200.

Mary J. Franklin, to Chas. E. Davidson, lot in Levia, $25.

B. L. Yates, to Chas. E. Davidson, land near Levia, $180.

Geo. W. Howell, to J. C. B. McMeen, 140 acres on Crooked Creek, $1000.

R. H. Kemp, to C. E. Doss, 104 acres on Crooked Creek $193 50

T. F. Harris, to Daniel W. Jones, 70 acres on Hurricane Creek, $12,00.

Walter McConnell is now sole proprietor of the Parlor Barbershop, having bought out his partner, Walter Burns, who left last week for Dexter, Mo., in search of health and happiness in the west. Mr. Burns was accompanied by his wife.

New Baptist Church.

The building committee of the Baptist church here have, we are informed, accepted the plans of Messrs. Harris & Shopbell, of Evansville, and will let the contract soon for their elegant new church on the corner opposite the court house. The bid will be asked at once.

THE LOCAL OPTION PETITION WITHDRAWN

Pending the Testing of the Constitutionality of the County Unit Measure in Courts.

The committee representing the petitioners asking that a vote be taken in Hopkins county under the provisions of the County Unit Law appeared before the county court Monday and withdrew the petition.

It is understood that the reason for this action is that some test cases involving the constitutionality of the act of the legislature in enacting what is known as the County Unit Law have been made up in two or three counties in the state and will be settled by appeals to the court of appeals in due time. It was thought to wait until the court had passed upon these cases and clearly determined the legal questions involved.

The petitioners asking for separate elections in Madisonville, Dawson Springs and Nortonville were also withdrawn by these having the matter in charge, and there will be no controversy over the liquor question in Hopkins county this year.

It is understood that a close point is involved owing to the wording of the constitution on the subject. The constitution provides that the legislature shall make provision for taking the sense of the people of counties, cities, precincts and towns on the question of local option. It is contended therefore that the legislature has no right to enact a law making a county the unit as such action would destroy the local option contemplated to each county, city, district or town as mentioned in the constitution.

The court of appeals will pass upon this point and until that time the whole question will remain in abeyance in Hopkins county.—Hustler.

Development Convention.

Mayor Blue has appointed T. H. Cochran, T. A. Frazer, W. S. Nunn, G. M. Crider, Jas. Henry, E. J. Hayward, R. L. Moore and S. M. Jenkins as members from the city of Marion to the Development Convention which meets in Paducah Oct. 5. This movement is a commendable one and should result in much benefit to the counties of the first district.

LAST WEEK'S LOCALS

Chas. Larson, the Levis merchant, was in the city Wednesday.

W. S. Jones, of Repton, the merchant, was in the city Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Tucker returned from Kelsey Tuesday evening.

Miss Mildred Haynes is visiting friends in Webster county this week.

Miss Hazel Pollard is spending the week in Elkhart, Ky., visiting relatives.

Melvin Roberts, of "Eclipse Mine" was in the city last week on business.

Sylvan Price and Archie Davidson are spending this week at Dawson Springs.

J. D. Hopewell, of Sturgis, was here Monday in the interest of his mining properties.

C. S. Knight, of the Marion Zinc Co., was in Princeton a few hours Monday on business.

Miss Nell Clifton, of Dycusburg, arrived in the city Tuesday to visit her brother and sister here.

John Baker and mother, of Annapolis, Md., are in the county visiting at George Roberts in Iron Hill section.

Col. and Mrs. D. C. Roberts, of Carthage, Tenn., arrived Thursday, and were guests at the New Marion Hotel.

Do you want bread like your "mother used to make" at old home in the happy by gone days? If so call on MORRIS & YATES.

Miss Blanche Haase left last night for Curleau Springs where she and her mother have spent most of the summer.

Mrs. D. E. Woods and children, have returned to the Crittenden Springs where they have spent several weeks.

Mr. L. C. Newman and family have moved to Eddyville, where he will take a position on the Lyon County Herald.

Mrs. Geo. F. Rock, of Springfield, Ohio, who has been the guest of her parents F. M. Daniels and wife, left today for her home.

W. S. Jones, the Repton merchant was here last week. He carries a large general stock at that place, which is in a good neighborhood.

Mrs. G. M. Russell, will leave in a few days for Cobb, Ky., for a visit, after which she will visit her sons Joe and Schuyler Davis at Abilene, Texas.

The Juvenile Missionary Society of this city will give and ice cream supper on Thursday evening in the court house yard. All are cordially invited to attend.

Dudley Noggle, the bright and interesting little son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Noggle has returned from a visit to his grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Noggle.

Major F. M. Clement, who has been visiting his children at Anderson, Ind. Ter., for several months, returned home last week. He was much benefitted by the trip.

George Thomas has accepted a position with the Marion Ice & Storage Co., at a fine salary. George is a deserving conscientious worker and will give his new employers honest work.

R. M. Franks, who was delegate from Crittenden county to the Sunday school convention at Ashland, Ky., returned home Friday morning and left immediately for Hurricane camp-meeting.

C. C. Young, of Memphis, was in the city Tuesday. He was en route to Livingston county to visit old friends and relatives. He was accompanied by his brother, S. A. Young, of Lyon county.

Prof. Geo. L. Witherpoon, of Monroe, Texas, who has spent the month of August visiting old friends and relatives in different parts of this State, returned home Monday via Curleau Springs.

Mrs. H. D. Pollard and little daughter, Lucile, left Monday for Elkhart, Ford county, where the latter will re-enter school for the fall and winter. Mrs. Pollard will return home in a few days.

Duke Bettis, of College Park, Ga., and his family, who have been attending Hurricane camp-meeting and visiting the old scenes of childhood, left Monday afternoon for home, going via Nashville and Chattanooga.

Henry Bros. put up two white marble monuments for Rev. J. O. Smithson, of Carversville, in the New Cemetery here this week. Brother Smithson has two little boys buried here. The work done for him by Henry Bros. is an excellent job.

FIFTY CENTS

In some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion is very rapid. For this reason we put up a fifty-cent size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children. In other conditions the gain is slower—health cannot be built up in a day. In such cases Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment; a food rather than a medicine. It's a food for tired and weak digestions.

S. A. Young, of New Bethel vicinity, Lyon Co., was here Tuesday. He was raised in this county but has not been here many times in the past half century. He is related to many of our citizens among them Mrs. M. H. Jones, John Pickens and W. D. Haynes.

Mrs. Lola Davidson is now in the East selecting her millinery stock. She will return soon, and next week will secure a most elegant line of hats. Mrs. Davidson will have a trimmer from the city again this season, and will be better prepared than ever to serve her patrons.

R. H. Kemp is considerably nonplussed about a name for his new boy who put in an appearance last Thursday evening. Bob is a great admirer of Ollie James and had made up his mind to name the little stranger Governor James, but learning that Ollie would not be governor this time he is now "at sea" as to what to do. He thinks that Governor James would sound about right.

Free Scholarships in Nurse Training.

The Philadelphia School for Nurses has purchased large properties at 2219-25 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, and will extend the benefits of the Free Course in Nursing to young women of every rural community and of the smaller towns and cities throughout the entire country.

The Course is two years, but may be shortened to eighteen months by six months' reading and study at home.
The School provides room, board, nurse uniforms, gives full instruction, and pays the student's fare home at the end of the Course.

A special short course is provided for those who cannot spend two years in the study but who wish to quickly prepare themselves for self-support. The object of those who are providing the funds for the work is to ultimately extend the benefits of skilled nursing to every village and township in the land.
Nearly 200 Free scholarships will be available this year.

Men Past Fifty in Danger.

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of prostate gland. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger as it corrects irregularities and has cured many old men of this disease. Mr. Rodney Burne, Rock Port, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for twenty years, although I am now 91 years old." ### In Memory

Of Susan Pierce who departed this life Aug. 11, 1906, aged fifty-eight years. She leaves seven children, three brothers and one sister and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. She had been in ill health for some time and became seriously ill only a few days before she died. She was loved by all who knew her. She suffered much before death came to her relief, yet no murmuring ever escaped her lips, but with fortitude and patience she bore her afflictions.
To her loved ones we would say while we can not call her back, yet it is our privilege to go to her on the shores of the other side of the river of death where no death or separation shall ever come. She waits to welcome us there. In this sore trial as in all others cast your cares upon Christ for he careth for us.
Now you are laid beneath the sod. They form with us, thy soul with God. Called home by one who knew best. By loving hands laid to rest.
We grieved, we sorrowed, we were sad.
To think the day had come at last, When we had to say good bye love, You answered farewell, my home's above.

Every time dear we open our door, We look around to find you there But fail to find you anywhere.
But why is it we miss you so When Jesus called you had to go, Oh yes, we well knew then 'Twas God who called you unto him.
We have often said what will we do Everyone of us miss you, But we must quit grieving so For we know it was best for you to go.
The mother, the sister, the darling one Of our family has gone To answer the summons well done Enter now into the joys of home.

KENTUCKY'S FAIR A BIG SUCCESS

Exhibition to Be Held Next Week at Louisville.

Opens September 17 and Closes
Night of September 22.

TROTTING AND RUNNING
RACES EVERY DAY

Premiums and Purses Amount to More Than $25,000—Band Concerts and Scores of Other Attractions.
Visitors Will Be Well Entertained.

Everything is in readiness for the State Fair, which will begin next Monday at Louisville. The grounds having been beautified and put in perfect shape, the exhibits are being received and assigned to their proper quarters, and hundreds of little details are being attended to and preparations practically completed, and will undoubtedly prove the greatest Fair ever held in the state of Kentucky. In many respects the Fair will be a surprise to those who attend, as it will give unmistakable evidence of the great advance that has been made by Kentucky in the past few years, and will show to the world the extent and value of her products, the pre-eminence of her horseflesh and magnificence of her other live stock. Splendid specimens of tobacco from her fields and grain from her farms will be displayed in abundance. Complete evidence of the industry and thrift of her housewives will be shown.

The State Fair deserves and will doubtless receive the hearty and untiring support of every loyal son of the commonwealth. It is a state institution, belongs to the citizens of Bell and Calloway counties as well as to the residents of Jefferson. It is the fair of the Mountains, the Blue Grass, the Pennyridge and Purchase. It is a place where Kentuckians meet on equal ground, interested alike in the upbuilding of the state. To make it a success and build it up from year to year will be the pleasure and the duty of every Kentuckian. The State Fair must be made to rank with those of Kentucky's sister states which have been longer established. Kentucky has the citizenship and natural resources and stands pre-eminent in the breeding of horseflesh, and has nothing to ask when thrown in competition with the agricultural or stock breeding interests of other states.

Managed by State Board.

The State Fair affords an opportunity to the men who are developing Kentucky's mineral resources to advertise the untold wealth that lies in her mountains. The State Fair will be held under the management of the Board of Control, appointed by the State Board of Agriculture, Immigration and Forestry. W. T. Harris is chairman of the Board and J. E. Bowles of Bardonia is secretary. Prize money amounting to more than $25,000 will be distributed during the week. This is an unusually large sum, the $15,000 appropriated by the state having been supplemented by more than $10,000 in addition. Much of this has been contributed by business organizations and public-spirited citizens of Louisville. The entire amount has been appropriated approximately as follows:

|   |              |
|---|--------------|
| Horses                                  | .....$5,500 |
| Cattle                                  | .....5,000   |
| Mules and Jack stock                    | ... 400      |
| Women's department                      | ... 800      |
| Field seed, tobacco, horticulture, etc. | .....2,500   |
| Hogs                                    | .....1,500   |
| Sheep                                   | .....1,500   |
| Purses for the races                    | ... 8,500    |

The large amount of prize money offered has attracted the highest class of entries both from Kentuckians and other exhibitors. The show rings will be worthy of the Fair and of the state in every respect. In every department the exhibits will be better than have been hoped for by the management or the outsider.

The added attractions of the Fair will be of the highest class. The music will be furnished by a band of sixty musicians, composing one of the most famous organizations now touring the United States. The Fair management having felt justified in going to great expense in securing this band, believing that the patrons of the Fair are entitled to the very best of everything. The carnival company will have fifteen shows upon the grounds, all of them strictly moral, and there will be none permitted that are not suitable in every respect for women and children. No gambling devices will be permitted, and special precaution will be taken to protect every visitor from swindlers and thieves.

The gates of the Fair will be open each morning at 9 o'clock, when the showing of horses, cattle and live stock will begin. The show rings will be continued throughout the afternoon, with occasional intervals, during which the races will occur. The Fair will be open at night until 11 o'clock, the attractions being concerts by the band and shows of the carnival company. Every day will be featured especially, and the first day will be as good as the last.

Pain from a Burn Promptly Relieved by Chamberlain's Pain Balm.

A little child of Michael Strauss, of Vernon, Conn., was recently in great pain from a burn on the hand, and as cold applications only increased the inflammation, Mr. Strauss came to Mr. James N. Nichols, a local merchant, for something to stop the pain. Mr. Nichols says: "I advised him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and the first application drew out the inflammation and gave immediate relief. I have used this liniment myself and recommend it very often for cuts, burns, strains and lame back, and have never known it to disappoint." For sale by Woods & Orme. The leading drug store in western Kentucky.

After discussing the matter with Mr. Bacon, Mr. Miyazaki agreed that it was not a case to cause an international incident, and that it was similar to other clashes that have occurred between citizens of one country on the soil of another.

The following contains the main features of the dispatch of Solicitor Sims, sent to the department of commerce and labor, and which was called by Acting Secretary Bacon to Ambassador Wright at Tokyo: "Four seal rookeries, St. Paul Island, were raided by crews of Japanese schooners, July 16 and 17. About 200 seals were killed, but raiders were eventually repulsed as a result of courageous action of Chief Agent Lemby and Assistant Agent Judge as head of native guard. Five raiders were killed and 12 captured, two of latter being badly wounded. Three boats and some small arms also captured. Force protecting rookeries suffered no casualties. The schooners were first observed on July 16 and were close to shore, easily within 3 mile limit. On this day a boat's crew of six men, which had landed at northeast point, were surprised and captured by Agent Lemby and native guards without casualty on either side. On the morning of July 17 two native watchmen shot and killed two and wounded one of an armed landing party. Crews of schooner, under protection of a dense fog, shot seals in water close to shore most of day. During this time shotgun firing, which could be easily heard from shore, was frequent. Unknown how many seals were killed in this manner, but number must have been considerable."

Acting Attorney General Russell has given no instructions to the United States attorney at Valdez, where it is presumed the Japanese poachers will be tried. Whether the department takes any part in the matter will depend entirely on developments. The United States attorney there is under general instructions to prosecute all violators of the law, and it is presumed at the department that he will proceed under these instructions. The active agents of the United States government in the conflict which resulted in the killing and wounding of the Japanese poachers are Walter I. Lemby of Philadelphia and James Judge of Columbus, O. Lemby is the chief agent at the fur seal fisheries of Alaska and Judge is one of his assistant agents. Both are located on St. Paul Island of the Fribourg group.

Lemby has been in the service about 15 years. He is held in high regard by the officials of the department, who say that he is able, conservative and thoroughly trustworthy. His business is to guard the seal rookeries, particularly during the breeding season, which is also the killing season, between May 1 and Sept. 15. Judge has been in the service about 12 years and is a very competent official.

The native guards referred to in the dispatch of Solicitor Sims are Indians who reside on the island. Congress makes an appropriation for their support and they practically are wards of the government. The Indians eke out an existence by working for the North American Commercial company, skinning the seals which the company is permitted to take under its concessions from the United States. There are 115 of these guards on St. Paul Island.

Victim of Burglar.

Wooster, O., Aug. 11.—Perry Bristow, an aged farmer of considerable wealth, died of injuries inflicted by an unknown burglar, who struck the old man a number of blows on the head a few years ago while trying to make Bristow tell him where he had his wealth secreted. Bristow lingered between life and death many weeks, and although he finally got so that he was able to get around, he never recovered from the effects of the murderous blows.

A Clear Complexion and Bright Eyes.

In most cases a sallow, blotched complexion and dull heavy eyes are due to poor digestion and inactive liver. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup aids digestion and stimulates the liver and bowels and makes the complexion smooth and clear. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup does not nauseate or gripe and is mild and pleasant to take. Refuse substitutes. Woods & Orme.

HELPS TO STUDY.

The Jews wished to honor the one they considered their real high priest, Annas, and took Jesus before him first. He held a preliminary examination in which he questioned Jesus about the doctrines he taught and about those whom, he supposed, disseminated these doctrines. Jesus answered the high priest in unmistakable terms, showing him that he had fair opportunity of knowing his doctrine both personally and by what others could tell him. One of the officers near smote Jesus with the palm of his hand for this plain and positive reply. Jesus did not resent it, but appealed to the principle of right for vindication. Doubtless partly through vindictiveness that Jesus did not ponder to his questioning, and partly because he did not want him to escape, he had him bound and sent to Annas.

To hasten matters they sent out runners to notify the members and had an irregular meeting of the Sanhedrin before day. It was against the rules of the Jewish law to hold a session of the Sanhedrin, or high council, for the trial of capital offenses by night. Doubtless Nicodemus, Joseph of Arimathea, and others in sympathy with Jesus, were not summoned.

The Sanhedrin was composed of 70 members; or chief priests, that is, the heads of the 24 priest-by-classes; scribes, that is, rabbis learned in the literature of the church; and elders, who were chosen from amongst the most influential of the laity. The priests were there, whose greed and selfishness he had reproved; the elders, whose hypocrisy he had branded; the scribes, whose ignorance he had exposed; and the skeptical Sadducees, whose empty claims he had victoriously confuted.

They were anxious to prefer a charge that would insure his death. But this was difficult. His life had been spotless and spent in doing good. They must have two witnesses to testify to the same fact. Their testimony anxious as they were to condemn him, did not agree. At last two witnesses went back three years, and gave a false testimony in regard to his destroying the temple (Jno. 2:19). Their testimony was false, because the facts were not correctly reported. Jesus did not say that He would destroy the temple, but he said, "Destroy their temple." It was false because his words were misapplied and perverted. He referred to his body; they applied to the temple. After two hours trial and apparent failure, the high priest went down into the open space where Jesus stood and tried to browbeat him into criminating himself. The impressive silence of Jesus was irritating to the high priest. At the last the high priest asked him if he were the Christ. Jesus could not deny his Messiahship, but said, "I am." Now, if they put him to death, they must kill their Messiah. Would it not be better to walk cautiously and examine his claims before they go further? But blind prejudice does not want to see. He rent his clothes, both inner and outer garments, not in sorrow but in rage. The legal punishment for blasphemy was death (Lev. 24:16; Dent. 18:20).

Peter followed Jesus afar off, apparently to keep his word that he would die with Christ, but more positively to fulfill the predictions of Christ that he would deny. Through the influence of John he was admitted into the trial chamber. The first denial was early in the trial. The cock crew after the first denial. It seems that this ought to have awakened Peter to consciousness of the Master's predictions. But when suddenly dropped down in the midst of sinful surroundings, we seem to lose the consciousness of the danger that awaits us. Soon after Peter denied his Lord again. An hour was given to Peter to think over the warnings that had been given him. The third time Peter denied Christ with oaths and curses. The cock crew the second time. Peter came to himself and turned his eyes to Christ. Christ looked upon him with that look of kind rebuke and tender sympathy that went to Peter's heart. He threw his mantle over his head and rushed out into the darkness—not into the darkness of despair, but into the darkness of repentance. Those bitter tears only proved too well the anguish of his heart.

To make their proceedings legal, in the eyes of their own law, they called the Sanhedrin together after daylight and had the third ecclesiastical trial. This was a mere ceremony. They had already condemned him in their hearts. This time Christ went a step further and claimed to be the Son of God. They passed the formal sentence of condemnation and rushed him to Pilate.

TOPICS FOR STUDY.

1. Sanhedrin. 2. Chief priests. 3. The high priest. 4. Annas.
5. Caiaphas. 6. The three ecclesiastical trials. 7. Peter's denials.
8. The building where Christ was tried.

SEARCH QUESTIONS.

1. Who was Annas? 2. Why did they take him to Annas? 3. What kind of a trial was held before Annas? 4. Why was he sent to Caiaphas? 5. What was the form of trial? 6. What difficulties were in the way? 7. What remarkable episode occurred during the trial? 8. Why did they meet in the morning? 9. Mention the Sacred book of some other religions? 10. How far have the so-called "Bibles" been responsible for the deplorable condition of the countries that hold to them?

An Ounce of Prevention.

is worth a pound of cure. There are many poor sufferers. Consumptives who are hopeless of getting well—who, if they had taken care of themselves, would now be well. A cough is the foundation of Consumption. Ballard's Horehound Syrup will cure that cough. Mrs. S., Great Falls, Montana, writes: "I have used Ballard's Horehound Syrup in my family for years—my children never suffer with coughs."

Rescue of a Merchant.

A prominent merchant of Shongo, N. Y., J. A. Johnson, says: "Several years ago I contracted a cough which grew worse and worse, until I was hardly able to move around. I coughed constantly and nothing relieved my terrible suffering until I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. Before I had taken half a bottle my cough was much better, and in a short time I was entirely cured. I surely believe it saved my life. It will always be my family remedy for colds." Cures Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Blood disorders and Malaria; and restores the weak and nervous to robust health. Guaranteed by Woods & Orme, druggists. Price 50c.

Picquart, the Hero

French Officer Who Exposed the Dreyfus Plot and Suffered Imprisonment and Disgrace in Defense of an Innocent Man.

THIRTEEN years ago Alfred Dreyfus had not been heard of. Twelve years ago he was the best known, the most hated, man in France. For eleven years the world talked of him as the martyr of the century. Today he is a hero. Restored to honor and rank in the army of France, he, though a Jew, has followed the injunction of Christ. "I forgive my enemies," he says. "I want no revenge, no indemnity, only my honor." Not only to Dreyfus, but to France, has honor been restored. To this happy outcome no one contributed more than Georges Picquart, who, forced from the army because he would not join the "syndicate of treason," returned to it a brigadier general.

One day in 1894 a scrubwoman in the German embassy in Paris picked up a scrap of paper. She read enough of it to know that some one in the French army was communicating with "the enemy." She took the paper to the French war office. Du Paty de Clam was put on the case. He detected a resemblance between the writing on this paper and that of Captain Dreyfus, the only Jew in the general staff. Du Paty de Clam disliked Jews. He reported to General Mercier, minister of war, who was looking for a chance to make a "grand stand play," that Dreyfus was the traitor. Mercier ordered Dreyfus' arrest and when the court martial was about to acquit him dramatically appeared and submitted a batch of forgeries, upon which Dreyfus was convicted. He was degraded publicly and sent to Devil's Island, apparently for life. But Lieutenant Colonel Picquart came to the head of the intelligence bureau of the general staff. He soon became convinced that Dreyfus had been wrongfully condemned.

GEORGES PICQUART.

He went to General Goussier, his superior, and told him so, also that Count Esterhazy was the real traitor. Goussier advised him to keep his mouth shut. Picquart was the youngest lieutenant colonel in the army. His military career had been splendid; everybody predicted his rapid rise. Like Dreyfus, he was an Alsatian, but he was not Dreyfus' friend; he was of another race, another faith. To ignore Goussier's advice was to invite ruin, but Picquart could not be silent when injustice was being done. He denounced Esterhazy from the house. He was superseded by Colonel Henry, but continued to accuse Esterhazy. He was for this dismissed from the army and thrown into jail.

Esterhazy demanded a court martial "to clear his honor." It was a farce, of course. Esterhazy was exonerated, but by this time many Frenchmen were beginning to suspect that Dreyfus was innocent. The Matin got hold of a copy of the "bordereau" found in the German embassy and published transcripts from it, besides specimens of Esterhazy's writing. The chirography was identical in both.

Colonel Henry forged more documents, which the staff got General Canvaillac, then minister of war, to read to the chamber of deputies. Then Henry went to jail and killed himself. Picquart spent ten months in prison. When he emerged he renewed his fight for justice. Zola came to his aid and was driven from France, but the ghost of Dreyfus would not down. He was brought back from his tomb and retried at Rennes, where Picquart was his foremost champion. Dreyfus was convicted of treason "with extenuating circumstances" and pardoned. Still Picquart was not satisfied. He would be satisfied with no less than absolute justice. Now he has won. Henry is dead, Canvaillac is dead, Esterhazy is a fugitive, Du Paty de Clam has disappeared, Mercier is disgraced. Goussier only recently made a last desperate attempt to rehabilitate himself by challenging Picquart. His shot missed. Picquart fired in the air. The "syndicate of treason" is no more, while Picquart stands before the world as the perfect type of French chivalry, a modern Roland.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 6, 1906

We are authorized to announce W. F. COWPER, of Smithland, as a candidate to represent the counties of Crittenden and Livingston in the next General Assembly, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

PAUL STENLAND the Chicago Bank wrecker has been captured in Tangier Morocco, and has consented to return peacefully to Chicago for trial.

Several important communications, news, etc., were crowded out this week. Send your communications so they will reach us not later than Tuesday morning to insure their publication.

If the people of Marion, Crittenden county want more investors here why don't they pay more attention to our county roads and do some substantial work before the fall rains set in. The bad roads in winter give the district a "set back" every year.

Elsewhere in this edition will be found an interesting item from the pen of J. W. Bigham of Bartow, Fla., entitled a hero of the war of 1812. The article is brim full of that humor for which the writer is famous and will be enjoyed by his many admiring friends.

THE clerk who is always a few minutes late getting to the store and first one to leave when the work of the day is supposed to be done, is not the one who in time becomes the head of the firm. He always remains a clerk, that is unless he loses his job. So it is with all the trades and professions. It is not the shirker who rises, but the one who is not afraid he will work a few minutes over time or that he will do just a little more work than he will get paid for. There is room at the top for the one who pushes and room at the bottom for the shirker.

The Editor returns thanks to John T. Woolf, of the "Tolu Milling Co." for a sack of the best flour turned out at that excellent mill. It is pronounced by the cook to be as good as she ever put her hand to, and the biscuits made from it just melt in ones mouth, and reminds you of the bread mother used to make in "Ye Good old Days."

No one is so independent as the farmer and with the improved machinery he now has in use there is no earthly reason why he should not have an eight hour day and such leisure for reading and study as would soon make him one of the best informed men in any calling. Why should not each of our farmers be this and more? Surely he has the possibilities.

WORDS OF ENCOURAGEMENT.

If the editor felt that he needed any recompense, other than the mere subscription as a remuneration for the arduous three years task and fierce struggle to increase the subscription to the "Press" and enlarge its scope of usefulness, under his management, he feels largely overpaid in the deluge of friendly letters and assurances of appreciation which comes to us in every mail, we thank you all.

One friend says, in the letter "I think the Press is the best paper published in the United States. Everybody in our family from grandpa down to the little boys looks for it each week with keenest interest."

Another subscriber wrote recently "Please change my paper from to and don't miss a single copy. Please send me a copy of last week's Press as the House girl tore mine up before I had read it."

A third one writes us this week "keep the Press a-comin'." I don't want to miss a copy, even if I should live a thousand years. Please send last week's issue as I lost the one I received.

Tilene, Ky., Aug. 28 1905.—
Dear Editor—

My husband has been a subscriber to your paper for several years. He liked the paper so very much that now since he has passed into the "Haven of Rest," I am very unwilling for the paper to quit our home, so I enclose $1.00 for its renewal. May success attend you and your paper.

Yours truly,

MRS. A. L. CHARLES.

CRITTENDEN PRESS,

Gentlemen—Your edition of Thursday duly to hand and the writer wishes to compliment you on it. It is fine and you ought to get good results from it. Please advise us if our bill for advertising has been settled. We would like to have you put in our ad. Yours very truly,

JAS. CLARK, JR., & Co.

Such kind messages give us courage and endurance to surmount any difficulties perchance may come in our way.

Show me a woman who reads advertisements in the Press, and I'll show you a woman who is a helpmeet to her husband.

Showered With Bouquets.

J. B. Champion, Jr., who was called to Dyousburg, Ky., last week, to represent the town in the prosecution of several cases before Judge Yates, was at the conclusion of his eloquent argument, presented with quite a number of beautiful bouquets, by the ladies of Dyousburg, as a token of their appreciation of his success in the conviction of the parties before the court.

McConnel—Allen.

Clyde McConnel and Miss Ora Allen, a daughter of Dare Allen, of Hoxie, Kansas, were married last Sunday at Elizabethtown, Ill. It was not an elopement, the young couple going to Elizabethtown only for the romance connected with that trip. Mr. McConnel went to Kansas two weeks ago, after his bride and she consented to return with him, and they arrived here last Wednesday. The prospective bride immediately began the arrangements for her trousseau, and having it completed. Sunday both concluded that there was no reason for any further delay, and accordingly planned the trip to Elizabethtown Sunday.

Graveyard Notice.

All persons interested in the cemetery at Cisco's Chapel, are requested to meet there on Saturday before the first Sunday in Oct. to clean off same. Bring tools prepared to work and baskets well filled. Services at 11 o'clock by G. R. Little.

Those present were—Anna Stenbridge, Leona Miller, Nannie Miller, Juliet and Lucile Pope, Birdie and Velda Travis, Mendoza Thomas, Nellie and Louise Vaughn, Elizabeth and Virginia Rochester, Jamie Rhea McConnel, Helen Hurley, Joana Rankin, Mary Dollar, Beulah Rankin, Edwina Rankin, and Masters Ray Travis, James Rankin, Herman Johnson, Elbert and Orville Wilson, Clifton and Darwood McNeely.

Miss Mamie Love gave a delightful lawn party at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Love on Walker street Friday evening, Aug. 31st, to which were invited the following of her friends: Misses Nannie Rochester, Fannie Blue, Katie Landell, Mira Dixon, Madeline Jenkins, Maude Flannery, Grace Taylor, Katie and Clatie Stephenson, Florence Tears, Eva Daniels, Mildred Moore, Messrs. Robt. Jenkins, Emmet Clifton, Homer Moore, Elmer Franklin, Johnnie Butler, Orlin Moore, Galen Dixon, Roy Hurley, Ira Sutherland, Ray Love. Refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served and many childish games were engaged in such as cross questions and silly answers, simple Simon and also an amusing contest which was consisted of making the words out of one big word, Miss Fannie Blue won the girl's prize, a box of candy, and Orlin Moore the boy's prize a box of candy. A most delightful evening was spent and one long to be remembered.

Wants More Money.

How to Keep Cool During the Hot Weather

By G. ELLIOTT FLINT,
Physical Instructor and Author.

OW to keep cool is a vexed question these days. We have worried, hurried and excited ourselves vainly during the past few months; let us now take things easier. We shall then be cool, or, at least, much cooler.

But how shall we not worry? Simply, don't.

Don't hurry. Rise early, thus giving yourself ample time to dress, and, when you go out, walk leisurely. If you miss a car, wait coolly for the next one, which will carry you to your destination only a few minutes later.
The hurrying habit is more heating than the alcohol habit.

Don't get excited. If you do you will feel literally "hot around the collar." If you are angry and wish to make the other fellow "hot," you will do this most effectually by keeping cool.

Don't study the thermometer, for your temperature is likely to rise with the mercury.

Wear loose-fitting clothes, easy around the neck, and a lightweight straw hat. Women, if they must wear corsets, should affect only the light, flexible kind. In view of the recent agitation against the so-called peek-a-boo waists, I dare not recommend them. The utmost I can advise is that they be neither wholly holey nor wholly holly—betwixt and between.

Our diet in hot weather should be light and nutritious. No stimulating drinks should be taken in the hot season; lemonade may be, but the best drink is cool water, with meals, between meals, and before retiring at night. A large quantity of water and sufficient fruit will keep the bowels open, remove waste also through other channels, and cool the body through radiation. The deleterious effect on the system of alcohol, particularly in torrid times, is well known. Most cases of prostration and sunstroke can be attributed indirectly to this cause.

Effect of Acting Impassioned Love Scenes

By SARAH BERNHARDT.

women to analyze the various emotional expressions of their beings the same as they would study the technique of a painting or an architectural plan.

As for me, I have never endeavored to reduce to a scientific formula the emotions which move us.

I have been asked if I think the repeated interpretation of emotional and impassioned roles eventually has an effect upon the everyday life of an actress. We must remember that first of all an actress is a woman, and while she is portraying a certain sort of emotion, she is but picturing in dramatic art what might be possible in her own character if placed in the same situation off the stage.

It is true the great dramatic artist lives the part she is playing—she becomes the character so thoroughly that she forgets entirely that other self which carries on its life without the theater walls.

When I see Duse or Margaret Anglin or any great actress I do not ask: "Does she really feel those emotions in her private life?"
It is carrying analysis too far. I do not think that people who are capable of analyzing their emotions feel them so intensely. There is a subtle difference between the portrayed emotion on the stage and what it would be in the actress' real life. While we weep real tears and feel sincere emotions it is through forgetfulness of our real selves, but not total elimination of our personality.

The ridiculousness of thinking that an actress is entirely swayed in her private life by the role she portrays is shown by the fact that the great artist is not limited to one line of acting. The strongest statement I could make on the effect of acting on the emotions is that no woman who interprets the roles that call forth the great play of emotions can remain a cold and impassive creature—that is, if she is an artiste with a soul.

Vacation Privileges for All Classes

By THOMAS B. FITZPATRICK.

It has its foundation and being in the evolution of industrial conditions and in the relation which these bear to the human system. A hundred years ago the mode of traveling was by means of the old-fashioned stage coach; to-day it is replaced by the "lightning express," moving at the rate of 60 miles an hour. Contrast for a moment the mental and physical strain of the drivers of the two.

But the railroad engineer, the chauffeur on the automobile, the mechanic at the lathe, the spinner at the loom, and the operative at the sewing machine, are not the only ones subjected to this increased draft upon their nervous powers. Those engaged in professional, mercantile and banking pursuits feel the strain as well. Therefore, shorter hours of labor have gradually been introduced, and the vacation has become in principle a thoroughly recognized institution.

I, for one, would like to see it become universally so in practice.
If we give the salesman, bookkeeper or packer in our employ a vacation, there is no reason why the same principle should not apply to the good people who cook our meals and work in our houses or stables.
This latter class, constantly employed at our homes in occupations for our greater comfort, are the last who should be forgotten when arranging for vacations.

It may be said that this is reasoning from an ethical standpoint.
Granted so. Surely humanitarian considerations are not to be ignored in the discussion of a subject of this kind. It has its practical side also. As a result of the improved devices in all classes of machinery and their capabilities for increased production, it is plain to see that the needs of the community do not require the long hours formerly followed.

JOY OF HOUSE BOATING.

Complete Freedom in Nature's Romantic Retreats.

He who would live the simple nomadic life in complete freedom and independence in the very heart of nature's most romantic retreats must live in a house boat. I mean, of course, a roomy craft that possesses its own motive power, that will go wherever the will of its owner directs, that will be small enough and sufficiently light of draft to explore the secret passages, the inmost lagoons of the watery wilderness, where nature most royally entertains her guests.

What an idle, lazy, luxurious, romantic life this is, to be sure! It is impossible to enthuse too strongly on the merits of such an unfettered existence.
A camping launch big enough to accommodate one's family and a man of all work, a combination of guide, cook and pilot, is the ideal craft and crew for the majority. It provides a comfortable habitation, a tight roof and a dry bed in all weathers and carries all the supplies needed for an extended journey in the wilds.

There are those who prefer the joys of tramping through woods and over mountains, carrying their tents, canoes and supplies on their backs, but their labors are very much greater than those who are luxuriously carried about in their floating camp. Its very rest-fulness is the sedative required by the man of strenuous life. Reclining in deck chair or hammock, he sails among the most beautiful vistas of shimmering water and woodland scenery, changing his surroundings every hour
if need be—Outdoors.

THE CAMEL.

He Has a Dangerous Temper, and His Bite is Vicious.

The camel is a dangerous animal to ride—a much more dangerous animal than the horse—for the reason that,
with his serpentine neck, he can reach round when annoyed and bite his rider.
Camels are not at all the patient, quiet, kindly creatures they are painted. They have nasty tempers. A caravan crossing the desert is always noisy.
The loud and angry snarls of the camels make the waste places resound.

A camel's bite is a serious matter.
The strong teeth lock in the wound and a circular motion is given to the jaw, around and then back, before the teeth are withdrawn again. The wound is a horrible one. There are few camel drivers without camel scars.

Dr. Nachtigal, the celebrated African explorer, once said to a youth who expressed a sentimental desire to cross the Sahara on camel back:

"Young man, I'll tell you how you can get a partial idea of what riding a camel in an African desert is like.
Take an office stool, screw it up as high as possible and put it along with a savage dog into a wagon without any springs. Then seat yourself on the stool and have it driven over uneven and rocky ground during the hottest parts of July and August, being careful not to eat or drink more than once every two days and letting the dog bite you every four hours. This will give you a faint idea of the exquisite poetry of camel riding in the Sahara."—St.
Louis Globe-Democrat.

The King's Page of Honor.
The post of page of honor to the sovereign does not carry with it, as it used to do, the right to a commission in the guards without examination of any kind, but it is still a coveted office, with privileges attached to it which are much appreciated by the sprigs of noble houses who are lucky enough to receive the appointment. It is not, for example, an unpleasant experience for a fourth form boy at Eton or Harrow to be summoned up to London on a "whole school day" for a court at Buckingham palace or other state pageant while his schoolfellows are toiling at their books. Such summonses are, of course, of the nature of royal commands, which must be obeyed.—
London Modern Society.

Persian Tears.
The Persians still believe that human tears are a remedy for certain chronic diseases. At every funeral the bottling of mourners' tears is one of the chief features of the ceremonies. Each of the mourners is presented with a sponge with which to mop off his face and eyes, and after the burial they are presented to the priest, who squeezes the tears into bottles, which he keeps. This custom is one of the oldest known in the east and has probably been practiced by the Persians for thousands of years. Mention is made of it in the Old Testament.

Beneficial Pearls.
The pearls found on the gulf coast of Lower California are said to exhibit a greater variety of colors than those of any other part of the world, and the business of pearl fishing there is growing. The chief colors are black, gray, red, bluish green and yellowish. The red pearls rank among the most valuable. They possess a fine luster, and many of them are large and of the most perfect shape. They are, however, found only occasionally.

The Real Test.
Even the man who says he doesn't care a rap what other people think hesitates about carrying a pair of his wife's shoes to the cobbler to have them tapped without doing them up inside a piece of wrapping paper.—
Somerville Journal.

Alike.
Husband—What has become of those indestructible toys you got last week?
Wife—They are out on the scrap heap, along with the indestructible kitchen stencils.—Life.

Obstinacy is the mask under which weakness hides its lack of firmness.—
Panin.

Hero of the War of 1812

By J. W. B.

In the year 1856, Marion, Ky., was only a "straggling" village of perhaps three hundred souls. The court house then an humble one, was built of brick, about thirty feet square with lower room for the sittings of the court, while the upper story served for jury rooms and sheriff's office. The lower floor of brick was worn by tramp of feet into valleys, rendering it difficult to walk, steadily. The "bar" and judge's bench was elevated some four feet above the paved floor, encircled with wooden banisters and rendered accessible by a flight of narrow steps on either side.

Lawyers and litigants thronged the modest "brick tavern" from surrounding counties in the "circuit" and the unsettled titles to lands in that early day together with the general use, and universal popularity of Kentucky whisky, then as now a most fruitful source of bad temper, and worse behavior filled the docket, of tribunals with endless litigation, and gave the courts and lawyers a fruitful field for prosecutions and defense of offenders, against the peace and dignity of the commonwealth.

We are in these latter days sometimes shocked, and disgusted by the reckless statement of some over-impulsive moss-back that the "old times" of free whisky and "fist-fights" were the best days. God forbid, no one of sufficient age to remember the revelry and disgraceful broils, and bloody fistfights on the county and circuit court days of "ye olden time" will be deceived by the unwarranted vapors of the aforesaid "moss-back"—who regretfully contrasts the "good old days" with the more orderly and law-honoring conduct of our citizens under the more desirable police regulations of this age of higher civilization; and modern progress.

Among the notables, usually in attendance upon the first days session of circuit court in Marion, Ky., one Samuel McCormack, who bearing the scars of "battle" received in the service of his country, at the battle of the "Horse Shoe" and other sanguinary engagements, delighted to recount the thrilling adventures experienced by him while in the thick of the fight. And when his eloquence and powers of imagery were heightened by frequent potations of Kentucky "corn juice," (of which he was inordinately fond,) the listening crowd would give frequent expression to their admiration by hitherto applause.

"Uncle Sam" as he was familiarly called was also made to feel the exalted admiration entertained for him, by frequent solicitations to "ambite" which he never declined, so long as his powers of locomotion were not too seriously weakened by previous potations. He delighted to boast of his courage, and his eloquence found its chief success in his denunciations of the coward, while a majority of his acquaintances accepted without question his boastful statements of valor and self possession under fire, so frequently made, there were some who entertained doubts of their entire creditability, and it was decided that our venerable warrior should be put to the test. The opportunity for such a trial was not slow to arrive. There were those among the genial citizens of the village who were ever on the alert, for "fun" and tempted by the prospect of real "side-splitting" amusement, would not hesitate to engage in even a "daring exploit."

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

The children cannot possibly have good health unless the bowels are in proper condition. A sluggish liver gives a coated tongue, bad breath, constipated bowels. Correct all these by giving small laxative doses of Ayer's Pills. All vegetable, sugar-coated.

Such an individual was John S. Fowler, then engaged in the useful and lucrative business of a saddler and since passed to his reward. His shop was frequently the council room for those bent on fun, and on the search for plans by which to reach the desired end.

R. W. Wilson, then a young merchant, C. C. Bingham, long since gone to the beyond and Alexander Hodge, each of whom greatly enjoyed a "good time" of innocent amusement, were usually the prime movers in matters of real entertainment. Accordingly it was arranged that a sham duel should be brought about between one of these young men and the dour warrior—"Uncle Sam. And while the venerable soldier and patriot, having freely imbibed of "red liquor" was vociferously expatiating upon his valorous achievements it was rather abruptly suggested to him that his accounts of such personal heroism were not entirely credited such an intimation, rendered the old hero, furious, and with blood in his eye he declared his readiness to wipe out the indignity offered, in the "gore" of the offender, inquiring of each and every one the name of the man, so reckless as to incur the wrath of "Uncle Sam."

Upon being informed that C. C. Bingham was the guilty and presumptuous individual, our veteran "Uncle Sam" dispatched a challenge forthwith to mortal combat.

John S. Fowler, consenting to act as second, or next friend for McCormack. Bingham replied through his next friend, Alexander Hodge, and while regretting the painful necessity of shedding human blood, yet in defense of his honor and vindication of his doubts as to the real valor of the challenger, he accepted the challenge, and having the choice of weapons, being the challenged party, he chose pistols at six paces, thinking it possible to intimidate our hero.

The statement was made that Bingham was "dead game" and a "sure shot," but all this was without avail. The old soldier remained undaunted, the place was fixed, (a back room of one of the village stores) and the hour agreed upon.

When the duellists, attended by their chosen seconds, arrived upon the scene all was in readiness. The weapons (old six-barrel, self-cocking revolvers known as pepper box pistols) were loaded with powder, wood-ashes and saddlers hair, such as was then used for stuffing horse collars and the padding in saddles.

Remonstrances in most earnest and eloquent terms were made by Bingham and his friends against the necessity of the useless shedding of blood, hoping that "Uncle Sam" would at last show the white feather. But no, bearing his weather beaten bosom McCormack declared "here let your deadly aim be made and from this dauntless heart let its warm blood flow, but McCormack never turned back to foe."

The duel was on, and by pre-arranged plan, Bingham fired quickly, of course without effect. Our veteran showed great deliberation. Lifting his weapon, he poised it long, while his blue eye, now dimmed with age, glanced along its gleaming barrel; his wrinkled finger firmly pressed the trigger, the fateful hammer rose. "Bang!" The deafening report awoke the echoes of the night while smoke, ashes and saddlers hair filled the air. The awful pause of one moment followed.

When the cloud from the shot lifted there, fallen upon the bare floor, writhing in apparent agony, lay Bingham, the unfortunate victim, as McCormack supposed, of his deadly aim.

The vision was enough; the consciousness of guilt came upon him and doubtless the awful dread of punishment and our hero fled precipitately, dropped his weapon in flight and notwithstanding a zigzag course his legs made, unsteady by "red licker," he was soon lost in the darkness. Bingham had regained his feet and together with his jolly comrades participated in the uproarious laughter indulged in in consequence of the utter collapse of the boasted courage of our hero.

The old man did not soon return to town and when at last his thirst for corn-juice drove him to the village he proposed to treat the crowd if they would say no more about it.

The poor old man never recovered from the bondage of appetite for strong drink and after deep potations one cold winter night his poor old body, stiff frozen and dead, was found by the writer lying in an old deserted school house which stood near where the Methodist parsonage in Marion now stands.

The years have slowly passed away and many, who were then fond associates in youthful pleasures, bear now the furrows of time and locks of gray and some alas, are sleeping the last long sleep, and intemperance has its victims yet. Bartow, Fla.

Situations Guaranteed.

We do not guarantee situations to prospective students in order to get their patronage. Schools of merit do not resort to such dishonest practices. Fake schools "guarantee" situations in order to secure students, because they have no other inducements to offer. Our work is so thorough that a guarantee is superfluous. Business men are so eager to get competent help that they pay a large per cent. of our students like positions before they graduate. See us before making arrangements for your business and shorthanded education at some inferior, fake school. We will take pleasure in telling you all about the loopholes in the "position guarantee" of dishonest schools. Catalogues free.

Chas. Larue,
The Leading Merchant, Levias, Ky.

and Mr. J. R. Newsum gave a premium for the best colts from his horse.

Messrs. V. F. Summerville and Wm. Hughes were the judges. There were twenty-three colts entered the ring and out of that number five were horse colts. The one that were the blue ribbon belonged to John Sullivan near Matton.

We are glad to learn that our old friend F. D. Brightman was not downed as reported. He says that he knew it was a mistake when he heard it.

STARR.

There was no mail Monday.

The sad news of the death of W. A. Jones reached here Monday. Mr. Jones died Sunday night Sept. 2nd. He lived in the Pleasant Hill neighborhood and was buried there Monday in the presence of a large circle of relatives and friends.

Albert Hamby, of Illinois, is visiting his mother, Mrs. S. A. Hamby of this community.

Mr. Smith Hamby has returned from Washington. He visited several al states and has now come back to make Kentucky his future home.

Rev. J. W. Vaughn filled his regular appointment at Piney Creek last Saturday and Sunday.

A portion of the tobacco crop will be housed this week. It is of a very large growth and will be a fine crop.

The Belmont people we learn are planning to build a new house.

Messrs. Ed Riley and Smith Hamby have each bought a new buggy.

Miss America Woolridge, of this community has accepted a position on the Crittenden Record and is doing nicely.

Hina-Caz Hardware Co. Sell Out.

The above firm has sold its stock and good will to Jesse Olive and Miss Nellie Walker. Mr. Olive will move here and give his personal attention to the business which insures its continued success and prosperity.

We have not learned what the members of the firm will engage in, but both are fine citizens and good business men and we trust they will meet about and do something to their liking in Marion and stay with us.
