It is Your Tongue

It is your tongue; it belongs to you, and is the only one for which you are responsible.

Your neighbors tongues may need care also, but that is their business; this is yours. See that it is properly attended to. Watch your tongue, it needs watching. It is an unruly evil, watch it. It is a fire, watch it. It is a helm which guides the vessel; let the helmsman keep wide awake.

It can bless or it can curse; it can poison or heal; it can pierce hearts and blight hopes; it can sow discord and separate chief friends—watch that tongue. No one but you can take care of that tongue; you are its only ruler. Your neighbors may hate it or fear it, or wish they could bridle it, but they can not do it. You have the power—watch that tongue. That tongue has already got you into trouble; it may do it again. It burns up peace, blessing, reputation and hope. It causes sad days, weary nights, tearful eyes and heavy hearts: "For he that will love life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil and his lips, that they may speak no guile."

Watch that tongue. NAAMAN.

SAM JONES ON CHICAGO PREACHERS

He Was in the Windy City Last Week and Unloaded on the Preachers and Manuscript Sermons

Marion people will remember Sam Jones who lectured in the opera house several years ago.

By this time he has a national reputation and a two edged tongue.

Last week he was in Chicago and among other things said:

"A lot of Chicago preachers spend all week getting up manuscript sermons. What does a preacher want with a manuscript, anyway? A preacher should be like a beer keg—he should run anywhere you tap him.

Politicians have no more heart than a Florida alligator or a society woman. I'd just as soon shake a fish's tail as a society woman's kid-gloved hand.

When God gives a man a good wife and fifteen children or so, he's all right; when the devil gives him a society woman and a poodle dog, he's in a bad way.

Canada has had 768 divorces in her history; the United States has had nearly a million. What do you think of the figures?

Chicago preachers are running the devil out of town the same way as a dog I once saw was running a hog out of a field. The dog was running ahead and the hog couldn't keep up.

Partisan politics and religious sectarianism have about done up this country."

Sam Jones is nothing if not original.

Terry-Wiggins

On Thursday night of last week Mr. Markam Terry and Miss Hettie Wiggins, of the Sheridan neighborhood, were married at Elizabethtown, Ill.

Mr. Terry is a son of the late G. A. Terry and is a prosperous young man. Miss Wiggins is the daughter of Joe Wiggins and is an attractive young lady.

THE RECORD joins their host of friends in wishing them a happy life.

Don't Dawdle.

Rush on and up, for he who hesitates is lost. Let your strength be expended in achievement, not fear and regrets.

SERVICES HELD LAST SUNDAY

At the Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist Churches

SERVICE AT MOUNDS SUNDAY

The Rev. Charles Young, of Memphis
Filled the Pulpit at the Baptist Church Sunday Evening

PLANS FOR NEW CHURCH ACCEPTED

Rev. J. H. Butler filled the pulpit at the Baptist church Sunday morning. He used as his text Nehemiah 2:17-18. "Then said I unto them, ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned by fire. Come, and let us build up the walls of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach. Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the King's words that had spoken unto me and they said, 'Let us rise up and build.' So they strengthened their hands for this good work."

His subject, "Building of the Walls of Jerusalem," was divided into four thoughts:

1. Preparation for the work.
2. Work begun.
3. Work carried on.
4. Work completed.

He preached a good sermon. There will be services next Sunday morning and evening.

Sunday school at 9:30 o'clock.

The sermon at the Presbyterian church last Sunday morning was on the first question in the catechism. What is the chief end of man? The scriptural text was taken from 1 Cor. 10:31. "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Man's chief end is to glorify God and enjoy him forever. Some people cannot give a good excuse for the purpose of their living upon earth. This teaches us the true principle of life and those who fall short of this idea miss the high work which God has set for their aim in life. The subject falls into three divisions. Man lives for the future life. Man must glorify God. The glory of God man's chief end.

The plans for the new Baptist church have been accepted and we understand the contract will be let in a few days and work will be pushed to completion at once. The administration of the Lord's supper will be observed on the third Sunday in this month at the First Presbyterian church. All the members of the church are urged to be present, and the friends of the congregation are invited to participate.

Rev. Chas. Young, of Memphis, preached at the Baptist church Sunday evening. His text was 1 Cor. 15:19: "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable." He preached a good sermon to a good audience.

The hour of service at the Presbyterian church has been changed. Prayer meeting at 7:30 o'clock. Sunday evening service at 7:45 o'clock.

WALKER & OLIVE IS NOW OLIVE & WALKER

The Last Shall Be First and the First Shall Be Last.

OLD MARION BUSINESS MAN RETURNS

Mr. Jesse Olive and Miss Nelle Walker Purchase the Hardware Stock of Hina & Cox.

Walker & Oliver has been transposed to Olive & Walker by the ledgerman of time, circumstances and money.

There are very few people in Crittenden county but remember the old furniture firm that did business in Marion for years under the firm name of Walker & Olive. It became a household name. But time, that wonder worker, passed the name on down the corridors and now, in this year of 1906, we find it bobbing up again a little transposed but still in the ring.

Olive & Walker is the name of the new Hardware firm. The members of the firm are Mr. Jesse Olive and Miss Nell Walker, long and favorably known to our little business world here in Crittenden county. They need no introduction. They are well known.

They have bought the hardware stock of Hina & Cox, formerly known as the Hina-Babb Hardware Store, and propose to do a legitimate business in a business way.

They will gladly renew old acquaintances and trust they make new ones at the stand where this stock has been so long.

The Great Show

The great Cochran & Pickens' show is now going on at their place on Main street.

You will see among the caged animals birds of Paradise, white bear, brown bear and eagle, they also have an elephant, a trained horse, a camel and a large snake.

If you will go inside the tent you will find:

One Asiatic monkey wrench,
"American buck saw,
"Camel hair brush,
"Cuban rat trap,
"Deer foot pocket knife,
"Herd Buffalo robes,
"Troop Lion brand exploders,
"Family large fish hooks,
"Kangaroo razor strap,
"Troop of Clowns.
One hundred horses can be fitted at this great show.

FREE TRADE VS. PROTECTION

Do Our Farmers Want to Return to '93 and '97

REFRESH YOUR MEMORIES

We Fully Appreciate the Desperate
Condition that Existed in the Land of Plenty Those Years

WHAT CAUSED THIS CONDITION

The United States is on the eve of a contest within herself of

Free Trade vs. Protection.

For the benefit of the sober hard-working farmers of Crittenden and adjoining counties, we ask do you want to return to the last era of Democratic rule from 1893 to 1897? Do you remember those years? If you do not, refresh your memories. Why should you be for protection or against protection?

Who said tweedle-dee? Who said tweedle-dum? Do we need protection or do we not need protection?

To the average man the observation of Josiah Frank Fritts would be very appropriate. Mr. Fritts made a few vigorous remarks to our friend and fellow citizen, Charles Eugene Doss, and everybody in the first district knows what it was.

But Mr. Average man cannot shift this responsibility. He will vote one way or the other.

Listen at the words of Senator Vest speaking in the United States Senate May 25, 1897.

No more consistent and courageous Democrat in the Senate at that time than Vest, of Missouri.

For himself and his Democratic colleagues, he said:

"We fully appreciate the desperate condition of the country. We know how many ruined homes, how many broken hearts, how many blasted hopes, now surround the Congress of the United States, and if prosperity can come from any source, even from our political opponents, we shall welcome it; and not only welcome it, but bless the moment in which it comes."

What caused this desperate condition? Was it the effort to rob the country of its protective tariff?

"My State is a large agricultural State—one of the largest in the Union. In my life, now verging upon three score years and ten, I have never seen in that land of plenty such ruin and depression as exists today."

Did prosperity return under Republican rule?

Listen at Senator Bate, of Tennessee, an Ex-Confederate soldier who declared July 6th, 1897

"There comes on the wind from every section of the country the wail of an impoverished people."

Listen to a Kentucky son, Mr. David Highbaugh Smith, who said on March 31st, 1897

"Stagnation and depression rule with despotic sway in every department of business life. Able, enterprising and cautious men have been swept into the vortex of hopeless and irretrievable insolvency. Want and penury are visible in the faces of countless thousands, who wander up and down the streets of the great metropolitan cities in search of employment that cannot be had at any price, and in numberless homes, erstwhile radiant with the glow of success and contentment, there is now the sadder hues of discontent and destitution."

Do Crittenden county farmers want to return to the days of 1893 to 1897?

Mamie Love Entertains

Little Mamie Love entertained a number of her friends Friday evening. Contests were engaged in, Orlin Moore and Fannie Blue won the prizes, which were two nice boxes of candy.

Refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served.

Those present were: Misses Madeline Jenkins, Maude Flannery, Nannie Rochester, Frances Blue, Katie Yandell, Mira Dixon, Mildred Moore, Katie Stephenson, Florence Teer, Clatie Stephenson, Eva Daniel and Grace Taylor. Masters Robert Jenkins, Elmer Franklin, Roy Hurley, Galen Dixon, Orlin Moore, John Butler, Homer Moore, Emmitt Clifton, Ira Sutherland and Ray Love.

Fifth State Development Convention

The Executive Committee of the State Development Association met in Louisville Monday and set October 10, 11, and 12th, 1906 as the time of the Fifth State Development Convention at Winchester. Active preparations have been begun in Winchester for the Convention and will be pushed from now on until the meeting in October. It promises to be the largest and most important gathering of the year in the state. A plan for a permanent organization will be presented to the Convention for adoption, which it is believed will make the Association a stronger organization and give it greater power toward carrying out its objects.

Kentucky is far behind what it can be in its position as an industrial and commercial state, its resources having been neglected and its commercial and manufacturing advantages overlooked.

The State Development movement was started by business men with the patriotic desire to see the State forge ahead and grow to be among the first of states in her industrial importance.

During the four years of its existence, the Association has done much good along the line of advocating needed commercial legislation, and the shaping of policies that have helped our manufacturing and other business interests.

Much of interest to the business people of the State will be discussed at the Convention at Winchester, and plans mapped out for its work. Speakers of national reputation and specialists on particular subjects of agriculture, mining, manufacturing etc., will address the Convention.

Delegates to the Convention will be named by the County Judge of each county, mayor of each city, and by each commercial club organization.

Anyone who wishes to attend the Convention can be appointed a delegate direct upon application to the Secretary of the Convention. Last year at Louisville about 500 delegates were present, and some 60 counties of the State represented by business men of the county.

We hope that some of the most active and best business men of this county will go as delegates to the convention, and will go prepared to thoroughly present our resources. Industries, products and etc, and to be able to tell what we need in the way of industrial development and have to offer to investors and prospective citizens.

These matters should be looked into and a carefully prepared statement made for use at the Convention.

Judge J. H. Denton, of Winchester, was elected Vice Chairman of the executive Committee, and P. J. Altizer, of Winchester, is Secretary of the Convention.

The Last Shall Be First and the First Shall Be Last.

OLD MARION BUSINESS MAN RETURNS

Mr. Jesse Olive and Miss Nelle Walker Purchase the Hardware Stock of Hina & Cox.

Walker & Olive has been transposed to Olive & Walker by the ledgerman of time, circumstances and money.

There are very few people in Crittenden county but remember the old furniture firm that did business in Marion for years under the firm name of Walker & Olive. It became a household name. But time, that wonder worker, passed the name on down the corridors and now, in this year of 1906, we find it bobbing up again a little transposed but still in the ring.

Olive & Walker is the name of the new Hardware firm. The members of the firm are Mr. Jesse Olive and Miss Nell Walker, long and favorably known to our little business world here in Crittenden county. They need no introduction. They are well known.

They have bought the hardware stock of Hina & Cox, formerly known as the Hina-Babb Hardware Store, and propose to do a legitimate business in a business way.

They will gladly renew old acquaintances and trust they make new ones at the stand where this stock has been so long.

FREE TRADE VS. PROTECTION

Do Our Farmers Want to Return to '93 and '97

REFRESH YOUR MEMORIES

We Fully Appreciate the Desperate Condition that Existed in the Land of Plenty Those Years

WHAT CAUSED THIS CONDITION

The United States is on the eve of a contest within herself of

Free Trade vs Protection.

For the benefit of the sober hard-working farmers of Crittenden and adjoining counties, we ask do you want to return to the last era of Democratic rule from 1893 to 1897? Do you remember those years? If you do not, refresh your memories. Why should you be for protection or against protection?

Who said tweedle-dee? Who said tweedle-dum? Do we need protection or do we not need protection?

To the average man the observation of Josiah Frank Fritts would be very appropriate. Mr. Fritts made a few vigorous remarks to our friend and fellow citizen, Charles Eugene Doss, and everybody in the first district knows what it was.

But Mr. Average man cannot shift this responsibility. He will vote one way or the other.

Listen at the words of Senator Vest speaking in the United States Senate May 25, 1897.

No more consistent and courageous Democrat in the Senate at that time than Vest, of Missouri.

For himself and his Democratic colleagues, he said:

"We fully appreciate the desperate condition of the country. We know how many ruined homes, how many broken hearts, how many blasted hopes, now surround the Congress of the United States, and if prosperity can come from any source, even from our political opponents, we shall welcome it; and not only welcome it, but bless the moment in which it comes."

What caused this desperate condition? Was it the effort to rob the country of its protective tariff?

"My State is a large agricultural State—one of the largest in the Union. In my life, now verging upon three score years and ten, I have never seen in that land of plenty such ruin and depression as exists today."

Did prosperity return under Republican rule?

Listen at Senator Bate, of Tennessee, an Ex-Confederate soldier who declared July 6th, 1897

"There comes on the wind from every section of the country the wail of an impoverished people."

Listen to a Kentucky son, Mr. David Highbaugh Smith, who said on March 31st, 1897

"Stagnation and depression rule with despotic sway in every department of business life. Able, enterprising and cautious men have been swept into the vortex of hopeless and irretrievable insolvency. Want and penury are visible in the faces of countless thousands, who wander up and down the streets of the great metropolitan cities in search of employment that cannot be had at any price, and in numberless homes, erstwhile radiant with the glow of success and contentment, there is now the somber hues of discontentment and destitution."

Do Crittenden county farmers want to return to the days of 1893 to 1897?

Fifth State Development Convention

The Executive Committee of the State Development Association met in Louisville Monday and set October 10, 11, and 12th, 1906 as the time of the Fifth State Development Convention at Winchester. Active preparations have been begun in Winchester for the Convention and will be pushed from now on until the meeting in October. It promises to be the largest and most important gathering of the year in the State. A plan for a permanent organization will be presented to the Convention for adoption, which it is believed will make the Association a stronger organization and give it greater power toward carrying out its objects.

Kentucky is far behind what it can be in its position as an industrial and commercial state, its resources having been neglected and its commercial and manufacturing advantages overlooked.

The State Development movement was started by business men with the patriotic desire to see the State forge ahead and grow to be among the first of states in her industrial importance.

During the four years of its existence, the Association has done much good along the line of advocating needed commercial legislation, and the shaping of policies that have helped our manufacturing and other business interests.

Much of interest to the business people of the State will be discussed at the Convention at Winchester, and plans mapped out for its work. Speakers of national reputation and specialists on particular subjects of agriculture, mining, manufacturing etc., will address the Convention.

Delegates to the Convention will be named by the County Judge of each county, mayor of each city, and by each commercial club organization.

Anyone who wishes to attend the Convention can be appointed a delegate direct upon application to the Secretary of the Convention. Last year at Louisville about 500 delegates were present, and some 60 counties of the State represented by business men of the county.

We hope that some of the most active and best business men of this county will go as delegates to the convention, and will go prepared to thoroughly present our resources. Industries, products and etc, and to be able to tell what we need in the way of industrial development and have to offer to investors and prospective citizens.

These matters should be looked into and a carefully prepared statement made for use at the Convention.

Judge J. H. Denton, of Winchester, was elected Vice Chairman of the executive Committee, and P. J. Altizer, of Winchester, is Secretary of the Convention.

Honor Thy Father and Mother

I flatter myself that I live in a town that is as free from wickedness as any on earth. I don't say that it, and every person living in it, is perfect, but I do say that it is as good a town as any of which I know.

And yet I fear that many of the Holy Ten are broken very often, and no one broken oftener, than the one which you see at the head of this article. You, if you are very observant, cannot fail to see it shattered all to bits many times a day, thoughtlessly most of the time, but not always.

"Johnny," calls a mother to a child on the lawn, "will you go for the mail, please?"

"No, shan't!" responds "Johnny" as he proceeds with his game, and the mother says no more.

"I'm going over to Mabel's," I heard a small girl announce to her long suffering mother.

"I wouldn't, dear," her mother pleads, but the daughter is already on her way, and the yielding parent calls after her, "Don't stay over an hour." The evening passes away, and only the night fall sees the returning child enter her own home.

You repeat the sacred commandment and deplore the depravity of childhood but did you ever ask yourself where the blame should be placed? Is the child, alone, at fault?

I may be wrong, but it seems to me that no one is more to be blamed than the parent. Why is a child disobedient? Sometimes it is illness, sometimes the child may be a born "black sheep," but rarely. Some other reason must account for it.

If you were an employee and your employer was a man in whom you could place no trust, utterly inconsistent, giving punishment in the wrong place and equally at fault in his rewards, placing no confidence in you or himself, could you honor him? How could you be expected to honor a man to whom no honor is due?

Place yourself in the child's position a moment, in the position of a child who has not been taught to obey, who has been allowed no chance to respect his parents. Would it be human to "honor" them?

It is very hard on a youngster to be obliged to honor a father who does not honor himself. It, to say the least, is difficult for a girl to obey a mother who has never shown that she desired obedience.

I believe in parents showing kindness and love, but I also believe that they should mix a little firmness in with those qualities, but even the firmness can be overdone.

The parent who does things by spasms; whips Johnny at the breakfast table because he laughs and slaps him afterwards because he frowns, and who "wipes the earth up with him" before he leaves for his work, because the child can't find the hat that he himself has misplaced; and then comes home at night to watch the child do a series of acts that "causes the angels to weep" without even a correcting word, this parent is very common. I am not surprised to hear his children speak of him with disrespect, I am not surprised to find that they do not know right from wrong. They cannot learn it at home and even if they have the right teaching imparted to them elsewhere, we are very apt to find that the words have fallen on dulled ears, into unbelieving minds.

A child comes into the world with not only the features but the vices and virtues of his parents. It is the God given duty of those unto whom the child is given to cultivate the virtues and by a careful process to weed out the vices, and I believe that the parents who fail to try to do this are committing as great a sin as is the child who because of their neglect fails to honor them.

A father's duty is not done when he provides a home, food and clothing for his little ones, a mother has more to do than seeing that the children's clothing is well and neatly made, and their food properly cooked. They have a life time of effort before them, efforts toward right living for themselves, efforts to give the right training to their offsprings.

A child who believes that his parents know what is right, that they are always truthful, ready to give sympathy when his childish woes prove too much for him, grieved when he does wrong but ready to give a punishment which will fit the deed, eager to see that he enjoys his life and spends it profitably, is very apt to honor them. But when he catches them in falsehoods and finds that he can do as he pleases because he will get punished any how very likely, when he is never told about his rights and their relations to the rights of others, when he never hears about God and the commandments except in a dreamy far off when he attends church, then I do not see how he can be expected to do otherwise than as we see him, doing every day. Dickens may have known Oliver Twist in real life but I doubt it, I am sure he could not have developed from any of the children whom I know.

I do not expect to see perfect parents any more than I expect to see perfect children, but when I see the first I'm sure I'll see the second.

Parent's frailties do not give license to children's vices but don't always place all the blame on the children, when they fail to "honor their father and mother."

MILK SEPARATION.

Principles Governing the Extraction of the Butter Fat from the Milk.

The force that is used to separate the milk is known as centrifugal force, says Edwin H. Webster. This force may be described as the pull that is felt when a weight attached to a string is whirled about the hand. It is the pull outward, and the faster the weight is whirled the stronger the pull becomes.

In the old system of creaming, the separation is caused by the action of gravity. The fat globules, being lighter than the other portions of the milk, are forced to the top; that is, gravity acts stronger or pulls harder on the heavier portions than it does on the lighter, and the milk is gradually arranged in layers, the lighter portion at the top and the heavier portion at the bottom.

The forcing action in the separator has precisely the same action on the milk, but acts outwardly from the center of the bowl the same as gravity acts downward from the surface, only many thousand times stronger, accomplishing in a few moments and far more completely what it takes gravity several hours to do.

As the milk goes into the bowl it is at once thrown to the outermost parts and fills the bowl completely until an opening is reached where it will flow out again.

The surface of the milk is on a line parallel with the center, or axis, of the bowl, and is exactly in line with the cream outlet.

A cross-section through the bowl from this surface to the outside presents much the same appearance as would a pan of milk after the cream has been raised by gravity.

The cream is on the surface, which might be called the top, and the heavier portions of the milk at the point farthest from the center, which would represent the bottom.

With this understanding of the arrangement of the milk in the bowl there are a number of things to be observed which influence the separation.

The difference in length of time it takes to separate cream by gravity and by centrifugal force shows plainly that the time varies with the amount of force applied. The shorter the time the greater the force must be.

Skim-milk from the separator contains less fat than that secured by the gravity system, showing that the greater force causes more perfect separation.

From the above statement the following conclusions regarding the use of the separator may be drawn:

1. If the amount of milk that passes through the separator in a given time is a fixed quantity, any increase in the speed of the machine will tend to cause closer skimming because of the greater force exerted.

2. If the amount of milk that passes through in a given time is increased and the speed remains the same the skimming will not be so perfect, for the centrifugal force is not exerted on the milk so long a time.

It is evident, therefore, that the closeness of skimming is the result of two factors—time and force. If either of these is decreased, the result will be poorer work. If either is increased, better work will result.

ture, and thus be sheltered from any showers or storms that may occur. In winter such protection is even more essential where stock is accustomed to run out more or less through the day, and it is also just the place under which to feed sheep. The cut, taken from the Farm and Home, shows how a shed for this purpose may be built. It can be made elaborate and nice, of course, but when constructed of plain material is not near so costly and just as serviceable.

COW SLIPS.

It pays to be amiable in the cow stable. Sell the butter-fat and feed the skim-milk.

Never strike a cow. Never speak roughly to her.

For dairy cows, lover hay is worth more than timothy.

A good, properly kept cow stable has no offensive odor.

Land plaster should be used freely in the stables to absorb odors.

Pet the cows; pet the heifers; give them a little sugar with the salt.

Sugar will help gentle any cow that is inclined to be nervous and wild. Try it.

Use small tin pails or buckets for the calves, and wash and scald the pails daily.

Are you feeding a cheese cow trying to get butter? Use your scales and Babcock test and find out for sure.—Farm Journal.

More calves die from scours caused by drinking from filthy pails where all sorts of germs multiply, than from any other cause.

The Breath of Life.

It's a significant fact that the strongest animal of its size, the gorilla, also has the largest lungs. Powerful lungs means powerful creatures. How to keep the breathing organs right should be man's chiefest study. Like thousands of others, Mrs. Ora A. Stephens, of Port Williams, has learned how to do this. She writes: "Three bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery stopped my cough of two years and cured me of what my friends thought consumption. O, it's grand for throat and lung troubles." ROAD AND FARM IMPROVEMENT

WHAT IS A GOOD ROAD?

A Discussion by Edward K. Parkinson, and Comment by Editor Country Gentleman.

The best roads that have ever been built were those constructed by the Romans ten or fifteen centuries ago, and which are to-day almost perfect examples of what roads should be. Their roads had a width of 30 feet, and pavements of heavy stone at the bottom, and often one or more layers of stone bedded in cement to make the road waterproof. The two cuts show the best types of ancient Roman roads.

It has been argued that such roads would cost too much to build in these days of high wages. To be sure, the initial cost would be enormously greater, but the final cost would, on the other hand, be much less.

Some of the Roman roads are 1,600 years old, and are still in fair condition. I will say, for the sake of argument, that a modern macadam road will last 20 years without having to be extensively repaired; at the end of that time, however, the road will have to be practically reconstructed, at least to the extent of half the original cost. So a new road will be built and paid for every 40 years. Therefore in 1,600 years, the age of some of the Roman roads, we shall have built and paid for 40 poor roads. Even granted that a mile of Roman road could cost 40 times as much as a mile of our macadam road, which it doesn't, wouldn't the loss of money from obstructed traffic and inconvenience be sufficient reason for building roads that would last at least 100 years? The old excuse, that the conditions are so different and our climate so hard on roads, does not seem to have much weight.

The truth is, we build our roads in such a hurry, and oftentimes with so little judgment on the part of the engineers, that the wonder is, not that they don't last long, but that they last as long as they do.

Macadam, who was one of the best modern road-builders, constructed his roads on the idea that when any road is thoroughly underdrained, so as to remain permanently hard, crushed stone alone may be used, the pavement of Roman practice becoming unnecessary. Please note—thoroughly underdrained, and crushed stone may be used. The point is, how many macadam roadbeds are thoroughly underdrained, so that they remain permanently hard? I feel safe in saying not one in ten; in fact, the roads built outside of cities and suburbs are not, as a rule, underdrained in any way.

In France, which has perhaps the finest roads in the world, the roads are divided into sections, and one or two men are put in charge of a section to keep it in perfect repair. They are required to go over the road every day, and in every section there is a toolhouse, with a quantity of stone ready for repair work always on hand. The result is the cost of maintenance is very low and the roads last for years.

Edward K. Parkinson.

In commenting upon the above argument by Mr. Parkinson, the editor of the Country Gentleman says: Mr. Parkinson has broached a subject that certainly deserves most earnest consideration. If a macadam road becomes rutted and gutted the first winter, it may be questioned whether it is very much better in the long run than the mud-bank it replaced—that is, it will shortly revert to a condition about as bad.

On the other hand, the weight of expert opinion seems at present to be against the attempt to build Roman roads in this country. Not only is the expense excessively great, but such solidity is unnecessary, with ordinary care in draining. Thus Mr. W. P. Judson, in his book on roads and pavements, says that the Roman roads "were remarkable for their strength and durability, and for little else. If anyone were so unwise as to attempt to build similar roads now, the cost would be from four to eight times the present cost of our most expensive modern pavements, which are, in every way, better for modern uses, and upon which the cities of the United States are estimated to have expended half a billion of dollars."

TELEPHONE 136

FRIDAY, SEPT. 7, 1906.

BITS OF BYPLAY.

The rounder exchanged greetings with Mr. Jesse Olive last Friday in the Court House yard and inquired when he proposed to move.

"Move where?" he said.
"Move back to Marion of course. Are you not ready to come back home?"

Jess signified that he was, but would have to have something to do if he came back here.

In conversation we learned that he is traveling for the Louisville Broom Company.

Last week was hot. Mr. Olive was in Memphis. While perspiration trickled Jess scanned the list of broom buyers and waxed hotter.

"My grip is this high and this wide," he declared, measuring off distances that would indicate a box car, "and will weigh about as much as a box car. Say did you know there is nothing on earth that gets next to a fellow like carrying a grip that takes the second hitch to get it off the ground? I went into the hotel that night and received a letter from Mrs. Olive that the best cow was sick. Something wrong with her bag. My! what a fine excuse to get home on. I took the next train. Yes," he said in answer to a question, "The company I travel for manufacture their brooms in the Eddyville penitentiary and make about six hundred dozen brooms per day. All or nearly all the broom corn is bought in Oklahoma."

Mr. Olive looks hale and hearty as well as home sick. The old Marion land marks appeal to him we think. He says not and vows he would as soon live in Eddyville, but on that point we are from Missouri.

Since the above was penned, Mr. Olive has decided to move to Marion, has selected his business, has bought the stock, is looking for a house to live in, and we mistake not has resumed his normal Marion existence as though he had never moved away.

Archibald Davidson, commonly called "Arch," is of the Levias settlement and eats corn, cabbage and beans from a small farm near that place. Arch has been here a long time. His experiences have been many and varied. When you see him next you will observe that he carries saddle bags and strokes his beard contemplatively. He has a habit of pinching off the end of his nose with his left thumb and his left index finger. By this you ought to know him. The tale we have in the telling machinery just now happened to Arch long years ago. A certain tall, cadaverous individual owed Mr. Davidson a debt. Time after time he had promised to pay and time after time he had failed. One day with a vigorous resolute look he said "Mr. Davidson if you will meet me at six o'clock next Thursday morning at a certain house in Fords Ferry I will pay you what I owe you." Needless to say Mr. Davidson arose betimes. In fact he arose before betimes for he had a fifteen mile journey to make by six o'clock. He made the journey. He looked at his watch as his horse cantered down Main street in Fords Ferry and it was six o'clock. With a wonderful sense of relief we experience when we collect money, Mr. Davidson drew rein in front of a high porch on which sat the tall cadaverous individual. Without any formality and without a word of preface his individual unjointed long legs and arose in the air rethanking: "Mr. Archibald Davidson the good book says 'an open confession is good for the soul.' I can't pay you that money this morning." And he didn't. Last Saturday Mr. Davidson said "it has not been paid to this day."

You are just as bad off as you think you are, so says the christian scientist. Therefore when the lazy microbe gets busy think yourself quite ill and take a rest.

Bryan is said to have made $1000 per week with his pen while away on his tour around the world. Mr. Bryan can afford to run for president.

Marshall H. Weldon is without doubt one of the handsomest men in Crittenden county. Before we finish this bit of by play you will agree. Mr. Weldon is tall and straight, he has regular features, an aquiline nose and his hirsute appendage constantly keeps the dust off his lower vest button. Mr. Weldon does not neglect his apparel nor his razor and when he goes to camp meeting he dons the best he has. All this preliminary business is written for a reason that will be apparent before we conclude and is merely to show the whyforeness of the is.

Last Sunday August 26th Mr. Weldon went to camp meeting at Hurricane. Mrs. Weldon did not go. After he had been there quite a while he became tired and sat down on a log beside a very prominent and promising young attorney. All of a sudden there was the sound of the "swish" of skirts and like a cyclone a beautiful woman rushed up to Mr. Weldon and encircled him with her arms. She joyously exclaimed, "oh I have got you, guess who it is," and then she dextrously held him so he could turn neither to the right nor to the left. It seemed to be Mr. Weldon's move, so he said, "who is you honey?" About this time the lady's husband came around to the front where he could get a good look and while a sickly pallor spread over his face he shouted, "Turn him loose you got the wrong man."

Many years ago there lived in Crittenden county one known as red headed Jim Mayes. He was "like all newspaper men" very unfortunate. No matter into what he embarked or into what venture he tried his hand it all went the wrong way. Judge Moore related a few days ago that Mr. Mayes one season became innoculated with broom corn fever. He talked broom corn and thought broom corn during his waking moments and dreamed broom corn at night. He bought the seed and planted twenty acres. Early and late he labored both in the field with the hoe and on the highway or by the fireside with his neighbor telling him of the fortunes made in broom corn. That fall it had to be cut and housed. The seed had to be threshed and he took in a partner or hired him and they set to work to build a machine to extract the seed. Late next spring it was completed. The broom corn was threshed and bunched and fixed and it was now summer. A crop for the present year was abandoned. He did not even plant a garden. The twenty acres of broom corn took two men two years and they shipped it. They anxiously waited and watched for the returns. One day a letter came from the commission man. It contained a check for $22. That was all. It broke them up. Mr. Mayes moved from here to Kansas and died.

Doctors O. H. Young and A. J. Driskill, visited the poor house a few days ago and relate a fact almost unprecedented. It appears that there is an inmate there by the name of Steve Marvel who has had only one pair of shoes in 21 years. He said he had never had any other shoes on his feet during that time. The shoes are brogans and look like they were made of undressed rawhide. They have been kept well oiled. If the balance of Crittenden county residents could get their shoe bill down to one pair in 21 years Marion merchants would nearly be out of business.

It has been said that perseverance and a few other things will accomplish wonders. A good illustration of this is found in the two frog story. An optimistic frog and a pessimistic frog fell into a pail of milk, and both were in danger of being drowned. Very soon the pessimistic frog gave up the ghost and sank to the bottom, while the optimistic kept swimming round. He became very tired and was tempted to give up the struggle, but swam on, and on. And eventually he found himself sitting comfortably on a pat of butter.

A team of mules slowly dragged a wagon through Marion streets last week. A little boy was on the seat and held the strings. The wagon contained a dab of spar as well as the boy. His name is Benton McMillan Lynch. If he lives up to the promise of his name he will yet be governor of, and senator from Kentucky.

Our old friend and fellow helper, Rustic, has sent in a poem to be published, entitled "The Lay of a Setting Hen." We have laid it away until we can be informed whether or not a setting hen will lay. When we get time we will try and get an expert's opinion.

Blake Terry is a hunter of the old school and carries a gun made back in ante bellum days. It is one of those long barrel old timers and shoots a great distance. It is related that he usually salts his shot. He kills game at such a distance it might spoil before he could get to it.

Honor Thy Father and Mother

I flatter myself that I live in a town that is as free from wickedness as any on earth. I don't say that it, and every person living in it, is perfect, but I do say that it is as good a town as any of which I know.

And yet I fear that many of the Holy Ten are broken very often, and no one broken oftener, than the one which you see at the head of this article. You, if you are very observant, cannot fail to see it shattered all to bits many times a day, thoughtlessly most of the time, but not always.

"Johnny," calls a mother to a child on the lawn, "will you go for the mail, please?"

"No, shan't!" responds "Johnny" as he proceeds with his game, and the mother says no more.

"I'm going over to Mabel's," I heard a small girl announce to her long suffering mother.

"I wouldn't, dear," her mother pleads, but the daughter is already on her way, and the yielding parent calls after her, "Don't stay over an hour." The evening passes away, and only the night fall sees the returning child enter her own home.

You repeat the sacred commandment and deplore the depravity of childhood but did you ever ask yourself where the blame should be placed? Is the child, alone, at fault?

I may be wrong, but it seems to me that no one is more to be blamed than the parent. Why is a child disobedient? Sometimes it is illness, sometimes the child may be a born "blacksheep," but rarely. Some other reason must account for it.

If you were an employee and your employer was a man in whom you could place no trust, utterly inconsistent, giving punishment in the wrong place and equally at fault in his rewards, placing no confidence in you or himself, could you honor him? How could you be expected to honor a man to whom no honor is due?

Place yourself in the child's position a moment, in the position of a child who has not been taught to obey, who has been allowed no chance to respect his parents. Would it be human to "honor" them?

It is very hard on a youngster to be obliged to honor a father who does not honor himself. It, to say the least, is difficult for a girl to obey a mother who has never shown that she desired obedience.

I believe in parents showing kindness and love, but I also believe that they should mix a little firmness in with those qualities, but even the firmness can be overdone.

The parent who does things by spasms; whips Johnny at the breakfast table because he laughs and slaps him afterwards because he frowns, and who "wipes the earth up with him" before he leaves for his work, because the child can't find the hat that he himself has misplaced; and then comes home at night to watch the child do a series of acts that "causes the angels to weep" without even a correcting word, this parent is very common. I am not surprised to hear his children speak of him with disrespect, I am not surprised to find that they do not know right from wrong. They cannot learn it at home and even if they have the right teaching imparted to them elsewhere, we are very apt to find that the words have fallen on dulled ears, into unbelieving minds.

A child comes into the world with not only the features but the vices and virtues of his parents. It is the God given duty of those unto whom the child is given to cultivate the virtues and by a careful process to weed out the vices, and I believe that the parents who fail to try to do this are committing as great a sin as is the child who because of their neglect fails to honor them.

A father's duty is not done when he provides a home, food and clothing for his little ones, a mother has more to do than seeing that the children's clothing is well and neatly made, and their food properly cooked. They have a life time of effort before them, efforts toward right living for themselves, efforts to give the right training to their offsprings.

A child who believes that his parents know what is right, that they are always truthful, ready to give sympathy when his childish woes prove too much for him, grieved when he does wrong but ready to give a punishment which will fit the deed, eager to see that he enjoys his life and spends it profitably, is very apt to honor them. But when he catches them in falsehoods and finds that he can do as he pleases because he will get punished any how very likely, when he is never told about his rights and their relations to the rights of others, when he never hears about God and the commandments except in a dreamy far off when he attends church, then I do not see how he can be expected to do otherwise than as we see him doing every day. Dickens may have known Oliver Twist in real life but I doubt it, I am sure he could not have developed from any of the children whom I know.

I do not expect to see perfect parents any more than I expect to see perfect children, but when I see the first I'm sure I'll see the second. Parent's frailties do not give license to children's vices but don't always place all the blame on the children, when they fail to "honor their father and mother."

The best way to make the institute best is to do your very best.

The institute is a miniature school of five days duration, with grown up pupils.

The institute is a vacation spell of the right sort—a change of work and faces.

Be your work intensive and extensive—intensive in the vigor you put into your task; extensive in the limit of those with whom you come in contact and touch.

There is magic in "touch." Not necessarily the physical act, but that deeper soul touch.

But we shall say what we started out to say. We need an educational column. Education is important enough to demand an avenue of expression. Why not let this bear the official stamp of the teaching body by having an editor chosen by the teachers of the teachers? By this it will mean more and do more supposing it to represent the educational opinion of the country. Let's take some action in regard to this newspaper work of education.

HORTICULTURE

BUDDING FRUIT TREES.

Wherein the Process Differs from Grafting—The Proper Way of Doing the Work.

Budding differs from grafting in that only a bud with a small piece of bark attached is used in place of the scion. Budding can be done with the greatest success towards the close of the period of growth, but it should not be delayed until growth has stopped, as then the bark of the stock will be firmly attached to the wood, making it difficult or impossible to raise the bark so that the bud can be inserted. Stocks from one to three years old are best for budding.

The scion may be cut as soon as the buds have developed on the new growth, generally in July or August, and the leaves are cut off, so that a little of the petiole remains as at 1. A T-shaped cut is made in the bark. Usually the vertical cut is made first and in making the transverse cut the

THE METHOD OF BUD GRAFTING.

Budding: (1) Cutting out the scion; (2) separating from the bark; (3) ready for insertion. Budding the stock: (4) bud for the bud; (5) bud inserted; (6) ready for competition. knife is given a downward slope, so that a slight twist will loosen and raise the corners of the bark, permitting the entrance of the bud.

In cutting the bud the knife is placed about five-eighths of an inch below the bud, and a cut is made which will pass upward and beneath it, taking a shaving of the wood, to a point three-fourths of an inch above the bud.

For most fruits, except the cherry, it will be found best to remove the wood from the bud, leaving only the bark. To do this, make a cross-cut one-half inch above the bud, taking pains to cut through the bark without cutting in the wood. Then by taking hold of the leaf-stalk and giving a slight twist, the bark will separate, leaving the wood attached to the bud-stick as shown at 2.

In the case of a few varieties of pears, as well as the cherry, the removal of the wood injures the bud, and then the cross-cut should be deep enough to pass through the wood beneath the bark. If the bark on the stock was in proper condition, and the cuts have been properly made, there will be no difficulty in inserting the bud and pushing it well down into place. If necessary, the corners of the bark may be lifted with the point of the knife blade, or the end of the knife handle. For trying the bark down upon the bud, raffia is most commonly used, although many prefer common cotton twine. Care should be taken not to cover the bud, and the bark should be securely bound in place. In 4, 5 and 6 the last steps are illustrated.

SPRAYING THE APPLE.

Bordeaux Mixture or Copper Sulphate Solution Necessary to Fight Pests.

The apple is the most important fruit grown in the United States. It is assailed by many insects and fungous enemies, most of which can be controlled by spraying. Before the buds start, it is well to spray with strong Bordeaux mixture or with copper sulphate solution. The Bordeaux mixture is best. This is made by combining five pounds copper sulphate, five pounds fresh lime unslacked, 50 gallons of water. This is considered safe and effective. It is essential that the lime should be of good quality, well-burned and fresh. Be sure and get pure copper sulphate, as some of the stuff sold on the market under that name is badly adulterated. Slack the lime and dissolve the copper sulphate separately. The copper sulphate will dissolve much more quickly if hot water is used. The copper sulphate can be kept for a long time without deteriorating, and the lime can be kept for about four weeks, if it is kept covered with water. The solutions must be well stirred before being used. Do not mix the solutions in concentrated form, caution the Farmer's Review, but pour them into a barrel partly filled with water. It is necessary to strain the lime through a cloth or strainer, and the copper solution should also be strained. This is to prevent the spraying nozzle from being clogged.

The second application of the spray should be given as soon as the apple blossoms fall. Then two or three more sprayings should be given at intervals of two or three weeks.

Tree Planting Popular.

Tree planting is becoming more popular every year, especially on the plains country, where the lack of trees is fully realized by the inhabitants, most of whom have come from parts of the country where trees are numerous. These greater efforts are being made than ever before to fill the land with trees.

WORDS IN OKLAHOMA'S NAME

Belief That It Was Taken from Comanche Tongue Refuted by Student of Indian Lore.

Oklahoma City, Ok.—The Rev. J. S. Murrow, of Atoka, who is a deep student of Indian lore and an authority on such matters, refutes the statement made recently by the Indian Leader that "Oklahoma" is a Comanche Indian word meaning "land of the fair god."

He asserts that it is a Choctaw word and means simply "red people," the Indian word "okla," meaning people, and "homma" meaning red. In joining the two words one m is omitted. The name was given to Wright, chief executive of the Choctaw Nation in 1866, when the United States government negotiated with all of the Five Tribes to effect a treaty.

At that time the present boundary of Oklahoma and Indian Territory was outlined, and it was proposed to erect a regular territorial form of government with a view of finally making it a state to be controlled by the Indians. But the Indians themselves did not consent to that part of the proposition.

When the matter of a name for new territory was mentioned by the secretary of the interior to the assembled Indian governors, Mr. Wright spoke instantly and said: "Call it Oklahoma." "What does that mean?" asked the secretary. "It means 'red people,'" answered Governor Wright, and the matter was settled.

Later Indian Territory was separated from the Oklahoma, and now the original boundaries are to be restored with the name as given by Governor Wright of the Choctaws, and the original state as contemplated will soon take its place in the sisterhood, though in this new state the Indians will not be the controlling element, as they might have been had they acted as the Government desired in 1866.

Remarkable Citizen.

All the people of Lempster, N. H., do their hats and make straight his path when William Welch travels in the street. And well they might accord this mark of respect to William Welch, for in all its wild environs Lempster has no greater citizen than this man, who at 106 years of age is undoubtedly the oldest veteran of the civil war and the oldest Mason of the United States.

"Why so?" "Because he describes my diamonds as being the size of hen eggs."—Chicago Daily News

EVERY PROMISE TO BE FULFILLED.

Kentucky State Fair at Louisville, September 17-22.

Excursion Rates On All Railroads for the Fair.

Kentucky's Citizens Proud of Her Achievements.

Purses of $600 for the Daily Trotting Races—Live Stock Exhibits to Eclipse All Previous Fairs—Floral Mail a Thing of Beauty.

The work of classifying and arranging exhibits for the Kentucky State Fair, which will be held in Louisville during the week of September 17-22, is now well under way, and every indication points to the success of the Fair, which will bring an added glory to the State and present Kentucky's products to the world in a most attractive form.

The Fair will be held at Churchill Downs, the property of the New Louisville Jockey Club, over whose classic course the most famous thoroughbreds that this country has ever known have raced. Many improvements are being wrought at this beautiful spot, and when the gates are thrown open on the first day of the Fair a bewildering scene of beauty will be presented to the eye. An immense glass building, to be known as Horticultural Hall, will be filled with the choicest selections from the florists' hot-houses. Kentucky's products of tobacco, wheat and corn will be displayed in their best form. There will be hundreds of interesting and instructive exhibits for the farmers who have come to see and learn and exchange ideas with their neighbors.

In the woman's department there will be splendid specimens of needlework, and the housewife will find choice lot of jams and preserves which would delight the eye as well as the palate.

In front of the grand stand the kings and queens of the horse world will be on parade. There will be the fashionable five-gaited saddlers, while the walk, trot and canter horses with their docked tails will be in contrast with the more showy American saddlers with their long, beautiful, waving tails.

In the cattle sheds there will be splendid specimens of Herefords, Polled Durhams and other beef cattle, while in others there will be the sleek and mild-eyed Jersey and other classes of dairy cattle. In another section of the ground will be quartered the hogs, and a splendid representation of every breed will be in the pens reserved for their use.

In still another part will be the snow-fleeced sheep, the Southdowns, the Merinos, Shropshires and other standard breeds.

Farm Implements.

The agriculturist will be greatly interested in the big exhibits of farming implements and machinery. The latest inventions in machines will be there to be closely examined and their working explained by experts. The space for general exhibits is generously provided for on the grounds, and the managers have seen to it that the Fair will be a credit to the State and worthy of Kentucky, granted as the most favored by nature of the States of the Union. The patriotism of every son and daughter of Kentucky should be aroused by the State Fair. Though later than her sister States of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois in providing for this annual exhibition, the State government has now done its part, and it will be the pleasure and duty of every son of the Commonwealth to build up the State Fair until it stands where it belongs—at the head of all State Fairs—by sending products of field and farm, horse, cattle, and by coming himself to see what Kentucky has produced.

The State will be represented by the best Kentucky has to exhibit to the world, and the world will be there to see what the State is doing along the lines of progress. The State Fair is an educator, helping the farmer and stock-breeder to improve his methods, and at the same time educate the world in what Kentucky has to offer. Kentucky has reason to be proud of its achievements, and the State Fair should be made a gala occasion. The railroads are offering greatly reduced rates from every part of Kentucky. The State Fair management has provided entertainment, amusement and instruction for every one who attends, and it is expected that the benefits accruing from this great exhibition will be of lasting value to every county in the State.

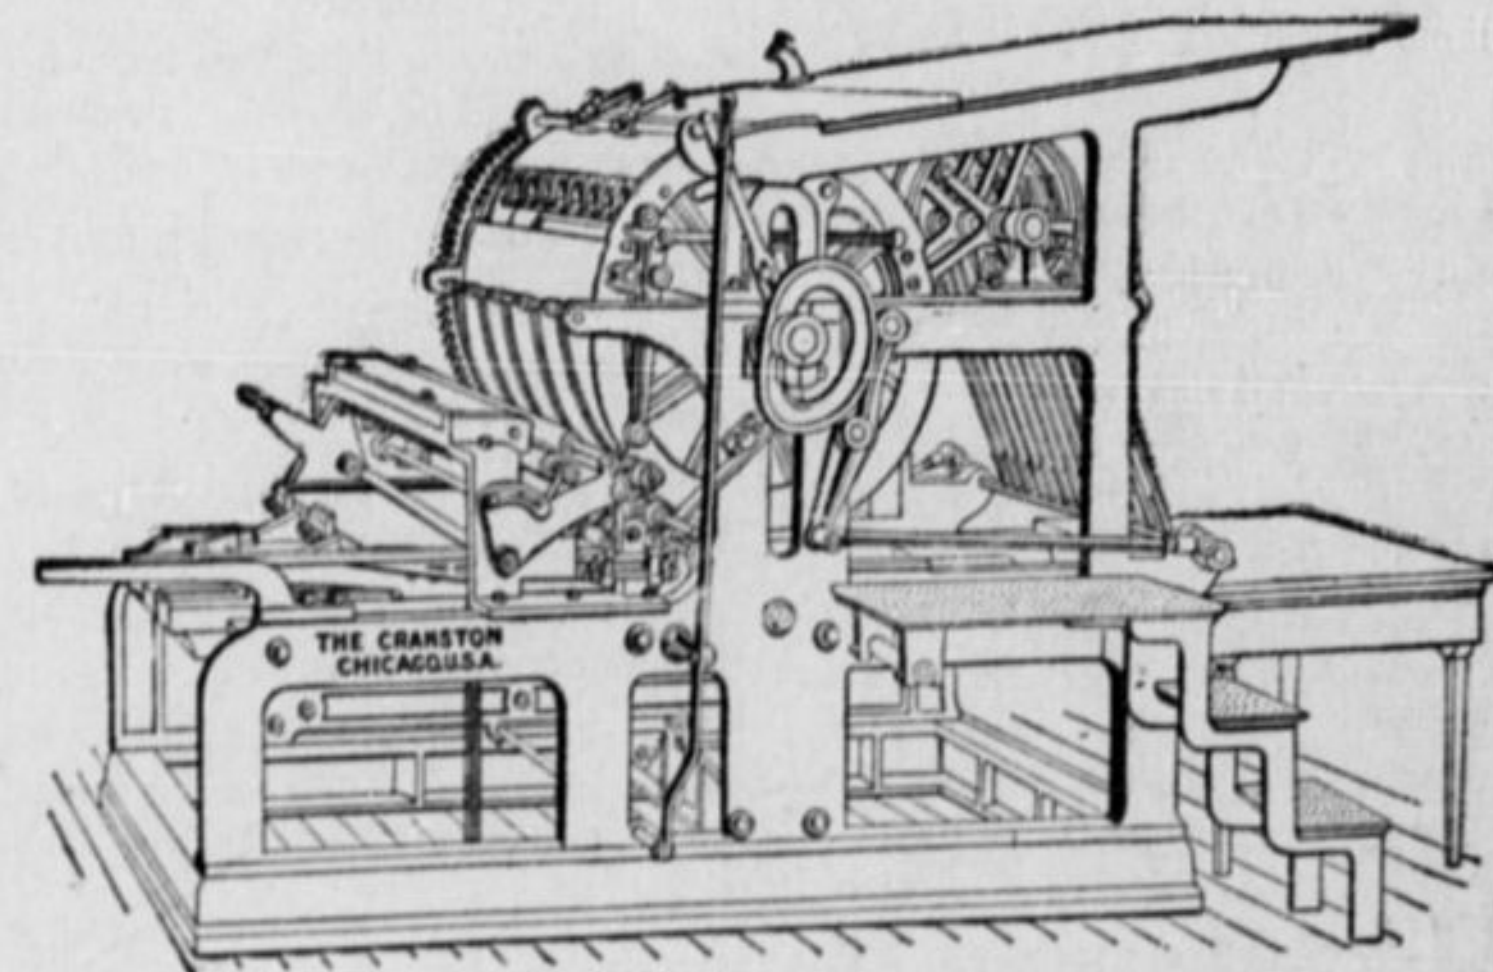

Full information in regard to the prize list for any department of the Fair can be had from J. B. Bowles, Secretary, at Fourth and Main streets, Louisville, Ky. Over $25,000 has been offered in purses and premiums, it being by far the largest amount that has ever been offered at a Kentucky State Fair. Four races will be on the program each afternoon, one for trotters or pacers and three for running horses. Purses in the running races will be $250 each and in the harness races $600 each. Scores of outside attractions have been provided, including fifteen shows of a prominent carnival company, all of which will be absolutely moral. Music will be furnished by a band of international prominence, and will play during the day and will give special concerts each evening.

WILL BE BETTER THAN IT EVER WAS

In Its Third Year The Record's Circulation Exceeds the Expectations of Its Publishers and Friends.

With the issue of July 13th, 1906, THE CRITTENDEN RECORD started in on the third year of its existence. A part of that voyage has been tempestuous and part of it bright.

On the 28th day of March, 1905, a conflagration destroyed the greater part of Marion and in that destruction THE CRITTENDEN RECORD went down. THE CRITTENDEN RECORD did not miss an issue on account of the fire nor for any other cause. For over a year it struggled along without any machinery, but now it is fully equipped and prepared for any and all kinds of newspaper and job work. Below is a cut of the new Cranston press installed July 6th, 1906, and also a cut of the engine that drives all the machinery.

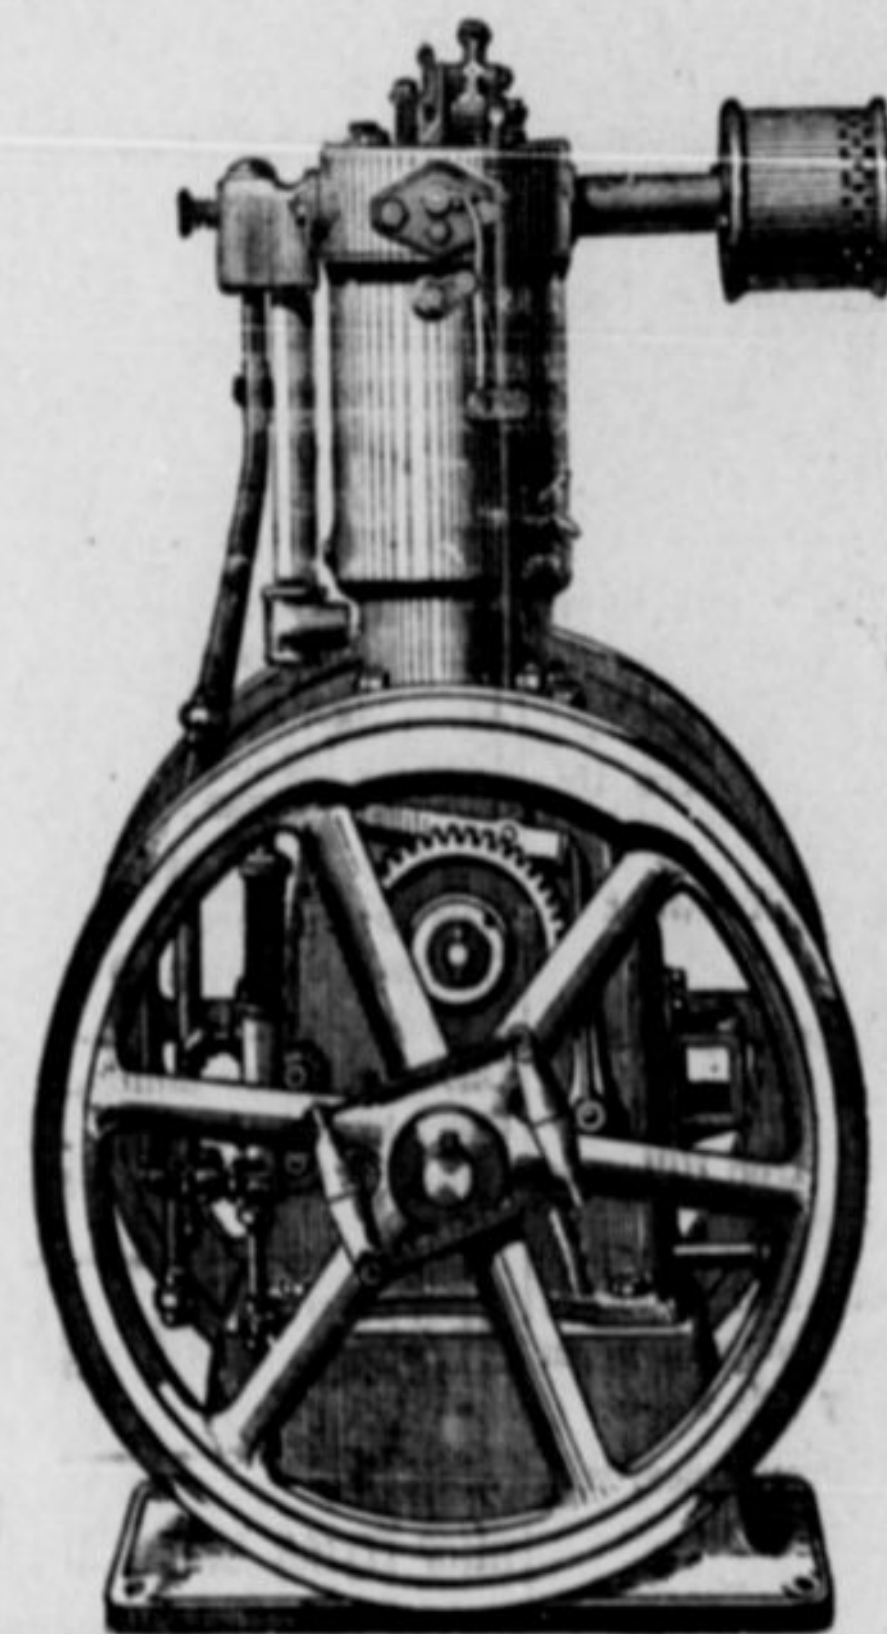

In the past two years the circulation of THE RECORD has grown beyond all expectations and now exceeds that of many much older county papers, in fact few reaches many homes.

A special continued effort is now being made to still further enlarge the number of papers that go out from this office.

THE RECORD will be made better than ever before, both as a newspaper and advertising medium, and it will ever be a friend to enterprise, industry and education and will be of interest to every member of the family.

We thank our friends for liberal patronage and assure them that we shall endeavor to merit the same.

REMEDY FOR HAY FEVER

After Trying Other Treatments Mr. Forbes Used Hyomei With Perfect Success

Before the discovery of Hyomei the only advice a physician could give to hay fever patients was to go away from home; but now if Hyomei is used any one who is subject to this disease can stay at home without fear of the annual attack of sneezing, the watery eyes and other discomforts.

Mr. J. F. Forbes, a well-known western railroad man, of McCook, Neb., writes: "I never had any relief from any hay fever remedy even temporarily until I discovered the merits of Hyomei. I always recommend it when occasion presents."

There is no offensive or dangerous stomach dosing when Hyomei is used. This reliable remedy for the cure of all diseases of the respiratory organs is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes in every outfit, so that the air breathed into the throat and lungs is like that of the White Mountains and other health resorts where hay fever is unknown.

The fact that we agree to refund the money to our hay fever customers if it fails to relieve, should inspire confidence in every sufferer.

A complete outfit costs only $1.00, extra bottles 50c. For sale by Haynes & Taylor, Marion, Ky.

There was a lot of wheat hauled to the Lola mills last week. W. F. Paris, the proprietor, haid the farmers 67 to 70c per bushel for it, so when in need of flour call on him he can supply you.

ELECTRIC BITTERS THE BEST FOR BILIOUSNESS AND KIDNEYS

CONQUERING SQUASH BUG.

Best Methods of Protecting the Vines from the Ravages of This Pest.

After the squashes, cucumbers and melons are well started the squash bug makes its appearance. Those who have a garden know the flat, rusty-black creature with its vile odor. In spring or early summer the eggs are laid on the leaves and stems of plants, sometimes singly, but usually in groups of from 12 to 50. They are brownish-yellow and easily found. Fortunately the insect confines its attention almost entirely to cucurbitaceous plants.

As the bugs grow they scatter over the leaves, molting five times before they reach maturity. Naturally the plant is weakened by such attentions. A leaf that has nourished many bugs will turn yellow, and if the pests are numerous enough the whole plant may be killed. It is sometimes claimed that the bug stings the leaf and kills it, but it would be more to the point to say that the leaf is tapped and its life-blood sucked out. In autumn the adult bug crawls under a board, stone or rubbish and remains till spring.

The Nympha may be killed by a spray of kerosene emulsion or tobacco water, as their bodies are soft and unprotected. But the old bugs are proof against this kind of treatment. Their hard-shelled backs protect them.

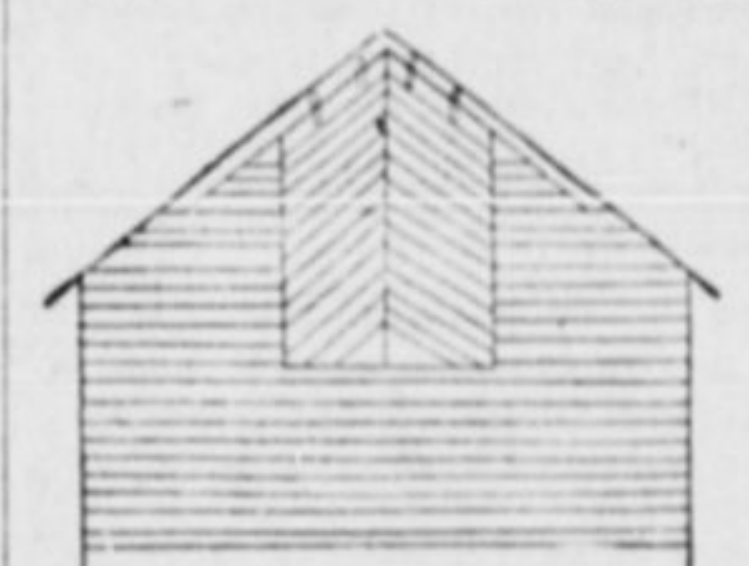

The most practicable remedy thus far seems to be hand picking, says the Orange Judd Farmer. It should begin with the first bug and be repeated at short intervals. The best time for it is in the morning while it is cool and the bugs sluggish. A convenient way is to drop the bugs into a can containing water with a little kerosene. The bugs will swim in clear water, but the film of oil on the surface is sure death. Boards or shingles placed on the ground are an assistance in gathering the bugs. They will seek these shelters in mid-afternoon and remain dormant till it is warm in the morning, when they can easily be gathered. Crushing the eggs on the leaves is a preventive measure that should not be neglected.

So far as my experience goes, the best way to guard against the bug is to plant the vines among potatoes. It has rarely found them there. I have grown good crops of squashes in this way and found few or none of the insects, though in other places they were numerous.

HAY DOORS IN BARN.

Placing Tracks for Them on an Incline Will Facilitate Opening Them.

There has been great trouble in finding a suitable method of hanging doors for unloading hay with fork or slings from the outside of building. The GOOD HAY BARN DOOR. method described by my diagram we think the very best. Place your track on an incline with the roof, and put on rollers on the doors at the same incline. They will open very easily, says Rural New Yorker, and shut hard, but they can easily be managed from inside.

MUZZLE FOR CORN PLOWING

Necessary Protection When Cultivating the Growing Crop.

This wire muzzle is very easy to make and is much better than the nail muzzle. For cultivating corn or drilling wheat in corn muzzling is always necessary, says a correspondent of the Farm and Home, and I have made muzzles out of smooth wire, like cut, which have proved first class. They do not scratch the moss of the horses or trouble their breathing as do cloth bags, etc.

JOTTINGS.

Try to harrow as soon after plowing as possible.

Two good stalks of corn in a hill is the best number.

An even stand of three stalks of corn to the hill is desirable and will give better results than more or less.

Most farmers take their chances on the germinability of seed. This fact is the cause of much loss every year.

The quickest way to start sprouts of Irish potatoes is to cut them in small pieces, lay in flats, cover with sand, and place them in a light, warm place.

Why spend much time in trying to make the bean poles set firmly? Just tie them together at the top in groups of four and so form pyramid-shaped stakes.

The Water Supply.

It is fine to have plenty of good water on the farm for everything, and some means should be resorted to to get such a supply if it is lacking. The gasoline engine simplifies this proposition very much.

Have Straight Rows.

Don't be satisfied with crooked rows. Nothing adds to the appearance of a field more than straight rows, besides they are more easily cultivated.
