M'AFEE CHANGED TO LOUISVILLE.

Goes to West Broadway Church in That City--Many Other Changes Made by the Conference.

REV. ELGIN OUR NEW PASTOR

The Louisville conference of the M. E. church south which convened last week at Central City was presided over by Bishop E. R. Hendrix, who will be remembered by Marion people as a parliamentarian of marked ability, a gentleman and a scholar. His visit here three years ago, when he presided over the conference, marked an epoch in Marion's history. It is not every town that has so distinguished a visitor at any time within its history. Bishop Hendrix and his cabinet have again controlled the destinies for the coming year of the ministers composing the Louisville conference and, while there is always regrets at saying good-byes and parting with old friends, it has become a custom and usage in the church and the people have learned to submissively concur in all these changes, which are always made for the good of His cause.

The following appointments and changes will be of interest to our people:

J. R. McAfee from Marion to West Broadway, Louisville.
Virgil Elgin from presiding elder to Marion pastorate.
Robert Johnson, Carrsville.
W. F. Hogard to Greensburg.
J. A. Walker to Adairville.
T. V. Joiner to Franklin.
W. H. Haselwood to Salem.
R. C. Love to Shady Grove.
J. O. Smithson from Carrsville to Smithland.

E. D. Boggess to Tolu.
R. T. McConnell to Bradfordsville.
E. S. Moore to Lebanon Junction.

The transfer of Rev. J. R. McAfee from this place to Louisville will be much regretted by his friends here but is nevertheless a great compliment to him and is a recognition of his ability. In Louisville he will have a field for his energy and magnetism and he will use it in such a way that Marion will hear of it later with pride.

Rev. Virgil Elgin, the new pastor, needs no introduction to Marion people. He and his estimable family have lived here for the past year and have many warm friends. In the readjustment of the districts two were absorbed by others. The Princeton district was one of these and thus it was that Marion was assigned to Rev. Elgin.

Marion Minister Moderator.

Fulton, Ky., Sept. 28.—The annual meeting of the Paducah Presbytery is now in session in this city at the Walnut street Presbyterian church. The opening sermon was delivered by the Rev. R. E. C. Lawson, of Henderson, Ky. Th. Rev. Benjamin Andres, of Marion, was elected moderator, and the Rev. C. N. Wharton, of Morganfield, was elected clerk. At the service yesterday morning the members of the Presbyterian church, of this city, called for the services of the Rev. Frank Morton Hawley for every Sunday morning and evening, which was granted by the Presbytery.

Heretofore, the Rev. Hawley has just been given morning services in Fulton, and going to neighboring towns for evening service. The installation service of the Rev. Hawley took place Thursday night. Other business was in the form of a resolution to the synod.

The Presbytery took action in regard to home missions, which will mean much to the Presbytery if granted. The meeting will continue throughout the entire week. There are a large number of prominent ministers of Kentucky in attendance.

New Sanitary Measure.

Marion graded school is always in the lead in all things. The latest innovation is a sanitary one adopted by the school board at the last meeting. Each child is requested to bring a cup for his or her own use and keep it in the desk so that no one else can use it. Disease germs are often circulated by the general use of one cup or dipper and the board proposes to reduce the chances of contagion in this direction to the minimum. Every parent should assist them to the extent of supplying each child with a cup which costs only two cents.

FATAL ACETYLENE GAS EXPLOSION

Tank Lets Go and One Man Is Killed. ---Fire Follows And Building Is Wrecked.

Indianapolis, Oct. 2.—While twenty Republican precinct leaders of Hancock county were holding a caucus in the town hall last night at New Palestine, a town fifteen miles east of Indianapolis, the acetylene gas tank exploded, killing one man, William Toon, and injuring eight others.

The gas to light the hall was stored in the acetylene tank and when this exploded the building was left in darkness and the twenty men assembled found themselves among the debris in the darkness. The building was almost completely wrecked and took fire. Toon's body has not yet been recovered.

GULF COAST SWEEP BY FIERCE WEST INDIAN HURRICANE.

Great Damage Inflicted to Life and Property--Marion People all Reported Safe.

Press reports from Mobile and other gulf points indicate great loss of life and property in the hurricane that passed over the southern coast Friday night. It is estimated that the loss of life will reach fifty, five thousand homes damaged and $3,000,000 worth of property destroyed. Great damage has been done to stocks of goods by the rains that have fallen almost continually for a week.

MARION PEOPLE SAFE.

When the news of the hurricane first reached here great anxiety was felt by friends and relatives for the Marion boys in Mobile and other coast points. Letters, which reached here after numerous delays, bring the news that Ernest Melton, Carl Trisler, Curtis Asher and Hayward Williams, all well known here, are safe and sound.

Roy Elgin, son of Rev. Elgin, was in Pensacola. He was at the leading hotel and all in the building escaped, though they passed a sleepless night.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Crider were in Biloxi, Miss., during the storm. The early dispatches stated that Biloxi was wiped out and great alarm was felt here by the relatives of the couple. Later telegrams and also letters to Judge Kevil, Mrs. Crider's father, brought the glad tidings that the city was not damaged so badly as first reported and that Mr. and Mrs. Crider were safe.

TWO ARE VICTIMS OF PAINFUL ACCIDENTS.

Miss Gwendoline Ford Thrown From Horse and Crawford Hughes Meets With Accident While Hunting.

Miss Gwendoline Ford was seriously hurt by being thrown from her horse last Friday evening on the road from her school to her home. Her father had gone for her and soon after they started her horse became frightened and threw her violently to the ground. Altho bruised and scratched a little we learn that she is not hurt badly enough to necessitate her giving up her school, but on the contrary she will go right ahead with her work.

INJURED WHILE HUNTING.

Crawford Hughes met with a painful accident last week while out hunting. He slipped on a rock and fell, striking another rock and cutting a deep gash several inches long in his forehead which reached the bone or skull and his gun struck something which discharged it, the load passing near the head of a companion, who was hunting with him, but fortunately not hitting him. Crawford came to town and had the wound dressed and is getting along alright.

A Sad Death.

Zoah James, daughter of Aaron James died Friday Sept. 28th, at the home of her parents near Fords Ferry. She was seventeen years old and had been afflicted with typhoid fever for three weeks, and from the first her condition was considered critical.

The funeral to place Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock at Dunn Spring Rev. Benjamin Andres, of the Presbyterian church of this city officiating.

ESTIMABLE LADY DIES WEDNESDAY MORNING

Death Was Not Unexpected.—Interment Will Take Place this Morning At 10 O'clock

Wednesday morning at 6 o'clock Mrs. Sarah Ann Carnahan, widow of the late W. C. Carnahan, died at the residence of her son, W. G. Carnahan, on Bellville street.

Mrs. Carnahan had been in feeble health for a considerable length of time and her death had been expected for several weeks. She was born May 8th, 1827 and was therefore in her 80th year.

She is survived by two children, W. G. Carnahan and Mrs. Julia Wheeler, both of this city. She was a sister of G. G. Hammond, of this city, and Mrs. James Cruce, of Livingston county, and Mrs. Mary Kimmy, of Winfield, Kan., the latter being three years her senior.

The funeral will be held at the New Cemetery at 10 o'clock this morning, the Rev. Jas. F. Price officiating.

Mrs. Carnahan was baptised by Rev. Price during her last illness.

Teachers' Institute.

The teachers institute will be held in Marion October 15 to 19. Pupils in the various common schools of the county who are nearing the completion of the common school course are earnestly solicited to attend the institute. They could not spend a week more profitably. Patrons of the common schools are cordially invited to attend.

Most of the teachers have received communications in regard to their topics. Those who have not, their topics are so plain as to need no explanation. Those not receiving communications will be allowed five minutes on their topics.

I make a special request that each teacher prepare a list of the best ten books for children to read from the first to the seventh grades and another list of the best ten books for eighth grade pupils and high school pupils. J. F. PRICE.

Baby Girl at Ardmore.

Senator Maxwell received a telegram Thursday announcing the arrival of a baby girl at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Strachly at Ardmore, Indian Territory. The many friends of the couple here will extend them heartfelt congratulations. Another message received later says mother and child are both getting along nicely.

New Question in Insurance

A newspaper in Higginsville, Mo. tells this story: "A young fellow bought 2000 extra fine cigars and had them insured for their full value smoked them up and demanded the insurance, claiming that they had been destroyed by fire. The case was taken to the court and the judge decided in favor of the young man. The insurance company then had the young man arrested for setting fire to his own property and the same judge ordered that he pay a fine and go to jail for three months."

Princeton Presbytery.

Jack Alexander Hurt.

While loading logs on I. C. flat cars near the Marion roller mills last Monday, Jack Alexander was seriously hurt by a log rolling down on him and catching him between the log and his wagon wheel. His hip mashed and he was otherwise bruised. His wounds are very painful and he may be crippled for life, but his friends hope and believe that his hurts will not be fatal but that he will be up in a few weeks.

A Marion Boy Honored.

Archie Davidson, who is attending the Central University law department, has been chosen secretary and treasurer of the "Proctor Knott debating society," which is a position of honor and trust. In the junior law class Archie was voted for president and came within one vote of being elected, which was indeed complimentary as this is his first term there. His opponent was Jay Harlan, a cousin of Chief Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court.

THE MOOSE WHO TRIED TO PLEASE EVERYBODY

There was once a young moose who was brought up far away from his kind. When his horns began to sprout he went about among all his playmates asking them what they thought of the new venture. The bear told him that it was perfectly ridiculous to have hard things growing out of your forehead that way. "I've never had anything of the sort," said Bruin, "and look at me—I am the king of the forest, and when I roar everybody obeys."

HE FOUND OUT WHAT HIS HORNS WERE MADE OF STRONG FOR.

The moose told her he thought he would go out of the antler business at once. "Gump!" grunted Old Lady Moose. "You let those horns alone. You'll be glad enough when they grow out."

By and by the horns began to show big scabby surfaces, different from anything the moose had ever seen, for he was brought up away from other moose. He asked the deer what they thought about such horns as his, and they told him it was a great mistake, his horns should come in prongs like theirs; they advised him to get some one to break them apart or file them down.

"Gump!" said Old Lady Moose. "Your horns are made thus so as to scoop off the snow, that you may graze in the winter." When he came a little later and wanted his horns taken off entirely because some of the creatures thought them too big, she told him she was going to take him to the moose grazing ground in the spring and then he would find what his horns were for.

When they went to the moose grazing ground they met any number of young moose, who concluded that they would try a fight with the new moose that had come. Then, oh, then, he found out just what his horns were made so big and strong for. And when he had whipped all the other moose he and his mother lived there in peace and comfort—Worcester Post.

The Handsome Gobbler

"What an insignificant little thing you are!" exclaimed the big turkey gobbler as he strutted past a puny chick who was taking its morning meal in the barnyard. "I am so very thankful that I am not such a babe as you."

"I am glad you are pleased with yourself," answered the little chick.

"Pleased with myself? Why, certainly I am, and why shouldn't I be?" ex-was taking its morning meal. claimed the big gobbler. "Look at me; handsome and graceful, and large and fat. When I pass the turkey hens all gaze at me in admiration and the other gobblers look on in jealousy."

"But it doesn't always benefit you to be large and fat and handsome," said the little chick.

"Oh, yes, it does!" replied the gobbler. "Here comes the farmer now. We will see what he says."

Just then the farmer came along. "My, my! What a magnificent gobbler!" he cried. "I shall kill him tonight for dinner tomorrow."

And he did.—Atlanta Constitution.

The Striped Leopard

"What an ugly creature you are!" said the circus tiger one day to the zebra, who was trotting around outside of the leopard's cage.

"I am sorry to hear you say that," declared the zebra.

"And I say it only as a friend and for your own good," asserted the leopard. "I do not want you to become so

"DO MY EYES DECEIVE ME?" vain as to imagine that you are good looking. That would only cause people to make fun of you."

"Well," said the zebra, "I never thought I was absolutely pretty, but I did have an idea that I was not real bad looking."

"Oh, you are, though," continued the leopard. "Those horrid stripes with which you are covered are enough to make all the other animals turn from you with disgust. Stripes are not becoming to you. In fact, I might say that they are not becoming to any one. How do you suppose I would look in stripes? A perfect fright, I am sure."

"And isn't that curious?" said the zebra.

"Isn't what curious?" asked the leopard.

"Why, I always thought your stripes were perfectly lovely," answered the zebra.

"My stripes?" exclaimed the leopard in astonishment. "Why, what do you mean? I have no stripes."

"Do my eyes deceive me?" cried the zebra. "You seem to have stripes."

"Indeed I have not," declared the leopard. "What you see are the bars of my cage."

"Mercy me," said the zebra, "that is too bad! After all, I believe it is better to have these stripes of mine than your cage stripes." And he winked his left eye and trotted off to have a talk with the bearded lady in the side show.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

THE PIGS AND THE BUTTERMILK

There was once an old pig who had five young ones. Every day she went to the farmer's to get a jug of buttermilk, and she told her children to bar the door and keep it barred while she was gone.

"When I come back I'll pour a little of the buttermilk under the door edge,

"LET ME IN, CHILDREN," and you may know me by that," she said. "Don't open the door, for life's sake, till you see the buttermilk coming under."

One day when the old pig was gone, as usual, a wolf came to the door. "Let me in, children," he whined in as close an imitation of the old pig's voice as he could manage.

"No, indeed. You're not our mother. We have a sign that we know our mother by," answered the oldest pig.

"Well, tell me what that sign is," roared the wolf.

"Indeed, and we'll not tell you," said the second pig.

Just then the old pig came up with her jug of buttermilk, and the wolf, now thoroughly enraged, turned on her to fight her. "Let me in, children," she screamed, but the fourth little pig squealed, "We want to see the sign first!"

It would have gone hard with the old pig then if in her struggles she had not kicked over the jug of buttermilk. As it ran under the door the fifth little pig let her bar down, his mother rolled in away from the wolf's cruel jaws, and all five of the little fellows helped to bar the door.—Worcester Post.

Negroes Locked In Box Car Three Days.

Bloomington, Ill., Sept. 23:—Samuel and Fannie Mason, colored, brother and sister, residing in Louisville, were rescued from a freight car in the Big Four yards in Kankakee county after being locked up for three days without food or water, having traveled a distance of 300 miles. The man is a cotton picker and the woman a cook. They entered the car in Louisville planning to secure a ride to Cincinnati. They were unaware that the door of the car had been sealed and their efforts to attract attention were unavailing until the end of the third day. They were furnished with food and water and soon recovered from their unpleasant experience. The car was like a furnace, according to their statement, and they almost suffocated on account of the heat. The two were given assistance in getting back to their home.

Obituary.

J. C. Turley died in his 60th year at his home in Crittenden Co., near Caldwell Springs, the home which he inherited from his father Green Turley, and at which he has lived since childhood. Sept. 10th, 1906, he was buried at Caldwell Spring cemetery by the side of his first wife. Mr. Turley was twice married, first to Miss Olive McElroy, of Crittenden Co. and last to Miss Lillie May Bell, of Lyon Co. He leaves eight children, three by his first marriage and five by his last. Mr. Turley was a man who had many friends as was manifested by the large number of friends and neighbors who thronged his home during his sickness and followed his remains to the last resting place. Although considered irreligious during his life, it is believed that in his final illness he became reconciled to the will of his master and his spirit passed out to a home of rest. His widow, children and neighbors will sadly miss him from among them and can only look forward to a reunion beyond the grave. A FRIEND.

The Pain Family

You know them; they are numerous, and make their presence felt everywhere. The names of the family are Headache, Toothache, Earache, Backache, Stomach ache, Neuralgia, etc. They are sentinels that warn you of any derangement of your system. When the brain nerves become exhausted or irritated, Headache makes you miserable; if the stomach nerves are weak, indigestion results, and you double up with pain, and if the more prominent nerves are affected, Neuralgia simply makes life unendurable. The way to stop pain is to soothe and strengthen the nerves. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do this. The whole Pain family yield to their influence. Harmless if taken as directed.

"I find Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills an excellent remedy for overcoming headache, neuralgia and distressing pains of all sorts. I have used them for the past seven years in this capacity with the best of results."

MRS. JOE MERRILL, Peru, Ind.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first package will benefit. If it fails, he will return your money. 25 doses, 25 cents. Never sold in bulk.

Jury Commissioners.

Monday Judge J. F. Gordon appointed jury commissioners to fill the jury wheel for the next year, as follows: Squire C. R. Stevens, L. F. Mitchel and A. L. Locket. They at once began their duties and finished up Tuesday. No better men could have been selected for the place and certainly only sober, discreet and honorable men will be found on the juries, and the record of the past kept up.

Thursday Oct. 4th, 1906

We are authorized to announce W. F. COWPER, of Smithland, as a candidate to represent the counties of Crittenden and Livingston in the next General Assembly, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

Judge Aaron Towery was in the city Monday from his home near Trade water river. He says the oldest inhabitant never saw that stream as full of water in Oct. before, in fact it has been high enough every month this year except one to swim a horse, at the various fords. The Judge came to attend to some business before the fiscal court and is looking as if he enjoyed life on his fine farm north of Shady Grove.

John Sedbery who is one of the chessterfields of the city in his manners, received a considerable jar, Monday after noon when he very kindly and politely tendered his services to assist a lady in finding the right store, the lady in question was knocking at the "Old Hickory headquarters" next door to the Palace barber shop, and John walked up and offered to show her where to find the millinery stores and ventured to ask what place she was looking for, she assured him she was at the right place and as no one answered her knock she went inside and soon emerged with something resembling Old Hickory. John is still wondering if some member of her family had been bitten by a snake.

Mayor Blue has received from the I. C. R. R. for distribution a number of pamphlets entitled "How to make good dirt roads" and they deal with the matter in a plain and sensible way and prove conclusively that good roads can be had in this county if our over-seers will do their duty. Mr. Blue hopes that ever road overseer or citizen interested will call at his office and get one of the little books and study the contents, which are in deed instructive and if followed, sure to be of incalculable benefit to our public highways.

A Correction.

In last weeks Press we published the letter of Rev. P. L. H. Walker, which we were informed was addressed to the Hon. Jno. W. Blue Sr. We learn since that the letter was addressed to Rev. John S. Henry. Next week we will publish Bro. Henry's reply which also appeared in the Press over 25 years ago. We did get have room for it this week.

'Twas the Printer's Fault.

In last week's Press in an article entitled "New Teacher Added in Marion school" we should have said in the last two sentences "The school is progressing splendidly and a spirit of harmony prevails throughout. With the exception of two teachers, and they bid fair to be quite successful, the entire faculty is composed of the true and the tried who inaugurated and are maintaining the high standard of proficiency and thoroughness for which the school has become famous".

By omitting the period after the word "throughout" the printer made the article read "a spirit of harmony prevails throughout, with the exception of two teachers, etc." when it should have read as above.

CHURCH NOTES.

Rev. Andros of the Presbyterian church addressed his people last Sunday on the subject of "The Divinity of Christ." The text was taken from the Gospel of John the 14th chapter the 11th verse, "Believe that I am in the Father and the Father in me; or else believe me for the very works sake." These words teach us that the works of Christ prove that he is divine. The works of Christ as recorded in ancient and modern history affirm his divinity, and a brief review of the most important events will bring the student to this wise conclusion. The reason this doctrine is rejected by many people is because it cannot be committed to human reason. The infinite can no more be contained in the finite than that the world could be stuffed in a grain of bird shot, and this is one of those great doctrines that God has given men not to understand but to believe. Christ was so great a man that he became the pivot of history. All the works of man are recorded from the date of his birth, either it is B. C. or A. D. before or after Christ. Christ was a prophet, he foretold the manner of his death and the destruction of Jerusalem, which occurred as he predicted. His teachings are superior to all other works of man. He was the great miracle worker, and this was an evident token of his divinity. Since Christ has ascended into heaven his work has gone on through the efforts of his disciples. His power is exerted over man the same today as it was when he was upon earth. Christianity has done more for Japan than any other religion that has entered her realm. It has done more for woman than all the pagan religions ever dreamt of and can do wonders for the individual today that surpasses all human knowledge. These are the things that teach us that Christ is divine. Christ pronounced a woe upon the cities of Galilee because they had not taken heed to him when he had done so many mighty works in their midst, and they had not repented at his words. Christ is the son of God, and his works testify to that fact today as well as in days of old.

There was no services at the Presbyterian church at night because the pastor was called out to conduct a funeral.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Pres. Church will meet at the home of Mrs. Miller, next Thursday afternoon at the usual hour.

Rev. L. O. Spencer, of Elizabethtown, Ky., will preach at the Pres. church next Sunday. Rev. Spencer was the minister who organized this church. He will be glad to see all of his old friends again.

Misses Emmie and Bertha Scott, of Frankfort, Mrs. Tucker's guests were entertained this week by Miss Dell Barnes at the residence of Mrs. Mary Hibbs on Salem street.

Entertained at Euchre.

Mrs. Sayre's euchre party last week was a most delightful entertainment given in honor of Miss Emmie and Bertha Scott, of Frankfort, who are the guests of Mrs. O. Tucker. Delicious refreshments were served. The prizes were elegant. Mrs. Geo. Roberts won first prize, Miss Martha Henry second prize and Miss Kitty Gray the consolation. Those in attendance were the members of the Euchre Club and an enjoyable evening was spent.

A Delightful Dance.

Mrs. J. W. Wilson entertained at dancing Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. Tucker's charming guests the Misses Scott, of Frankfort. There was a full attendance of those who enjoy the maizes of the dance and the evening was declared by those who attended to have been a complete social success. The hostess had prepared in her own dainty way refreshments, elegant and appetizing and they were served during the evening. The house was decorated with cut flowers and evergreens and made a scene bewitchingly beautiful when blended with the myriads of tinted lights. For want of space we can not publish a list of those present.

The Place of the "Three R's" in Modern Education

By WILLIAM H. MAXWELL,
Superintendent of New York City Schools.

THE public schools have been a good deal criticised for what is said to be a neglect of the "Three R's" and the tendency to special courses. As a matter of fact, the so-called "Three R's" have probably never been more carefully taught than now. I know that there are many people who would return to the barren instruction of 60 years ago, despite modern educational methods. It is said that children to-day do not spell and cipher as well as those of half a century ago, and great has been the lamentation over the change.

But the facts are quite different. It is not generally known that actual tests have been made by submitting the examination questions of 60 years ago to the children of to-day in similar grades. In the test made in Springfield Mass., it was found that whereas in 1846 there were but 40 per cent. who spelled in the test correctly, in 1905 there was 51 per cent. In arithmetic the contrast was even more remarkable. Sixty years ago 29 per cent. of the class had solved the problems correctly, while in 1906 65 per cent. were correct.

So much for Springfield. The tests made in Brooklyn, N. Y., were even more striking. The questions were given to boys and girls in the eighth year of the elementary schools, where the children were much younger than in the tests made in 1846. The percentage of correct answers at that time had been 29, while in Brooklyn it was 71 per cent. In the arithmetical tests in 1846 the percentage of pupils who received 70 per cent. or more was 17, while in Brooklyn it was 35. Sixty years ago more than two per cent. missed every word and more than ten per cent. spelled but one word correctly. In the Brooklyn test there was not a pupil who missed every word nor one who spelled but one word correctly. Again, in the test in 1846 some 27 per cent. missed 17 words or more, while in the Brooklyn test but a trifle more than one per cent. spelled so badly. The figures speak for themselves.

Very positive conclusions may be drawn from these figures. Instead of neglecting the three R's, it will be seen that our pupils are twice as proficient as were the children of 60 years ago, for all their oldtime brain tiring and uninteresting drill. Meanwhile our modern course has been extended to include execution and expression in improving those attainments that depend chiefly on judgment and memory. The acquisition of skill in any intellectual or bodily function develops a reserve of intellectual power to be drawn upon when occasion requires.

The work is becoming less theoretical and more practical along all lines.

Small Investor Dabbling in Real Estate

By DAVID A. CLARKSON,
President of New York Real Estate Board of Brokers.

It was railroad stocks. That was when the great west was being interlaced with railroads and the undeveloped riches of the country was making big dividends for the new ventures.

Later it was the mining stocks that tempted the small investor, and millions of dollars went into holes in the ground, most of which never came back.

Then the industrial stocks became the fashion, and the small investor rushed in neck and crop pellmell into the market wherever he could purchase stocks of all the tempting-looking propositions that were to revolutionize trade.

The big successes in several incidents lent fuel to the flame of investment, and they bought outright or on a margin, as the case may be, till there was nothing to be talked of but industrials. Then the publicity of how some of them were handled caused a pause, and they stopped to think it over.

Just then the announcements of the progress of the electrification of transit lines began to appear, and that took the mind's eye to fields and pastures and snug little villas only a brief ride from the city, where croquet lawns and a place for the dog were as common as the door mats in the flats, and then a couple of big transactions in suburban real estate appeared, which occurred at the psychological moment in which the small investor was wavering.

College Campus Becoming Idlers' Paradise

By PROF. WILLIAM G. HALE,
Head of Department of Latin, University of Chicago.

American colleges to-day nourish loafing and develop idlers. The students are allowed too free a rein in scholastic work and are permitted to encourage a new conception of the university as a place of social and athletic activities, placing "fun" above study. The system has become too tolerant and the remedy lies in the elimination of the elective course.

I no longer am able to repress the fear that a changed conception of the purposes of a college course, first growing up in men's colleges in the east, is making its way westward, and already has reached us, though it has not yet seriously affected the universities still farther west. There never was a time, of course, when there were no idlers in college, but there was a time when colleges were less patient with idlers.

A new idea has arisen on the part of the students, to take the place of the older one that a college is a place for study. It is thought that a college is a place for social and athletic activities. A man, it is held, must "do something" for his college in order to win an honorable position. But it is only the social leader, the athlete or the editor who is thought to "do something."

Keeping up the traditions of the scholarship of an institution of learning, preparing oneself by faithful work for the business of life, is doing nothing for it. And so these precious four years, the fairest in a man's three score and ten, years in which study and reading and social intercourse and the fresh play of joyous young life may go hand in hand perfectly well, are being wasted.

The remedy lies with the faculties. What they insist upon having done, students will do. Our system has become too tolerant.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

The Wolves and the Cougar

Once there were two wolves who had a chicken tree, in which fowls were very fond of roosting. One day when they went down to the chicken tree to get each of them a bird they heard a snarly snarly sound and found feathers all around the tree, while every bird for a mile around was either eaten or scared away.

"Who has been robbing our chicken tree?" cried the wolf brothers together. "Your chicken tree?" snarled the cougar, who lay, gorged full, at the bottom of the tree. "Who gave you this chicken tree? Who gave you anything? Who are you, anyhow?"

The wolf brothers made haste to say that nobody had given them the chicken tree, that nobody had given them anything and that they weren't anybody and didn't count anyhow, but their hearts were hot and sore while they said it.

As they were scuttling away they met Bruin, the bear. And when he heard their story he told them of a trap which the hunters had set for the cougars down by the brookside.

"Lead him there," said Bruin, "and you may have your revenge, also you may have the trapped chicken trees as you can, George."

So the wolves went trembling back and told the cougar that they had found a much finer chicken tree for him. When they came to the spot where Bruin had told them the trap was they stepped aside and said they could not walk ahead of so great a person, that he must lead the way and let them follow.

Snap went the trap on the old cougar's foot. "There," said the eldest wolf brother, "that will teach you not to insult people after you have robbed them."

WHAT MADE THE DIFFERENCE

The Bengal tiger and the clown in the show had a lively dispute one day as to which of the two was superior. "Pooh!" said the tiger. "There is not the slightest doubt about it. Look at my great strength. Why, with one blow from my paw I could crush out your puny life. You poor little weakling, I pity you. Your voice is weak, your arms are weak. What chance would you have in a contest with me? You wouldn't hold out for a moment."

"Very well said," replied the clown, "but I carry something in my little think box that can match all your brute strength."

"What do you mean?" growled the tiger.

"I mean," said the clown dryly, "that if you had what I've got and you lack you wouldn't have walked into that trap in the jungle."

At this the tiger began to roar with rage until the cage shook. But the clown seized his little whip and dealt him blow after blow through the bars. The tiger tore madly from end to end of his cage in a frenzy of anger. He threw himself with all his strength against the iron bars, but the clown smiled and whipped him still.

"You villain!" roared the tiger. "If I could only get at you!"

"Ah, that's exactly it!" smiled the clown. "You can't, my friend, and so I win."

"What do you mean?" said the tiger. "That brains, which put up those bars to keep you in, are worth all your brute strength. That's all."—Detroit Journal.

The Publisher's Claims Sustained

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained. It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

The Deceived Dogs

"I believe that our mistress thinks more of me than of any of you," said the spaniel to the other dogs who occupied places on their mistress' lap.

"No, she cares most for me," said the pug.

"You are both wrong, for I am her favorite," chimed in another dog.

"Why should you dispute this matter among yourselves when it is easy to be seen that I am uppermost in her affections?" added a shaggy coated little poodle.

And so it was that the discussion waxed warm between them, and they actually grow angry and snarled and snapped and made ugly faces, all because each of them was sure that he was the best beloved and because they could not convince each other of their respective claims to the affections of their mistress.

MR. ELEPHANT TRIES TO TAKE ADVICE

"Be a man! Be a man!" cried the papa elephant to his eldest son. And the son decided that he would take this advice.

"How can I be a man?" he asked the baboon.

"Well, in the first place, you must wear a man's clothes," replied the baboon.

So Mr. Elephant bought himself a suit of clothes and a hat.

"Oh, my, they are uncomfortable!" he declared. "But I shall wear them."

MR. ELEPHANT SAT DOWN.

"If you are going to be a man," the baboon interrupted, "you must walk on your hind legs."

And so Mr. Elephant wobbled around on his hind legs until he was about played out.

"Goodness me!" he exclaimed. "This is tiresome. What does a man do when he is tired?"

"Why, he sits down," said the baboon.

So Mr. Elephant sat down to rest, but he was not satisfied.

"It is almost as tiresome sitting down as standing up," said Mr. Elephant. "What does a man do when he gets tired sitting down doing nothing?"

"He takes a smoke," said the baboon.

Then the elephant got a pipe and tobacco and tried to smoke, but he made a wonderful fizzle of it.

He got smoke in his eyes, in his nose and his throat, and he was in a pretty predicament.

"I don't want to be a man!" he cried, while tears streamed down his cheeks. "I am going to try to be a good elephant instead."

"That's what I meant in the first place," said his father.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The World's Coal.

The total known coal production of the world is something like 700,000,000 tons per annum. Experts state that even at this rate of production there is sufficient coal to last for thousands of years. Some faint idea can be gathered from these figures of the enormous quantity of coal there is on this planet. At the same time there is the statement made by Sir Robert Ball that all the coal on the earth would not supply the sun's heat for one-tenth of a second.

He Changed.

"Greyman's wife brought him home a suit of clothes, but I understand he mustered up the courage to tell her that he had made up his mind to change it."

"Did he change it?"

"Oh, yes; he changed his mind."

DEAN'S SCHOOL HOUSE.

Since our last writing the Death Angel has visited our midst and carried away one of the beloved mother's of our community. Mrs. Lucy Ford departed this life Saturday, September 29. Mrs. Ford was a good christian woman and leaves a family of four sons and two daughters to mourn their loss. Her funeral was preached at the residence by the Rev. Ben Andres and she was laid to rest at the family graveyard. This makes the second member of that family to die within the month of typhoid fever. Owing to an oversight we failed to record the death of her son, Joseph Ford, an amiable young man, loved and respected by all who knew him. May God in his infinite love and mercy comfort the hearts of this stricken family.

Dear sir:—If you haven't any correspondent from Blackford, I would be very glad to furnish the dear old Press with the news and happenings of our thriving little town. Of course our town is not situated in Crittenden county, but its is in the shadow of her little mountains. And your paper finds its way into many homes here, the readers of which would be more than glad to see her represented in the news columns of your paper. And if you can not find space for these few lines, drop them over in that handy waste basket which I can see in a vision as I write, and I will go ahead about my business and disturb you no more.

We having plenty of rain, after so long a dry spell.

Some say a town goes dead when whiskey goes out, but our merchants say their sales are a great deal better now than they were when it was sold here. Of course some people get it into their heads that a town isn't very lively unless there is about a dozen piled up on the streets drunk, and the rest gathered around them yelling for the marshal. Come to Blackford if you want to see a quiet place.

BIG CANCER IN EACH BREAST

IN WOMAN'S BREAST ANY LUMP IS CANCER

Troy, Ill., Sept. 26, 1906.

Mrs. D. V. Gregory, a wealthy, prominent lady near here, who was thought to be dying with cancer, has been cured of a very large cancer of her breast, side and arm pit, with only two weeks treatment, with that most wonderful island plant remedy used by Dr. and Mrs. Chamlee, of 64 Chamlee Bldg., cor. Pine & 12th streets, St. Louis, Mo. This same doctor cured a Mrs. Henderson and a Mrs. Smith of this place, just 34 years ago of breast cancer. Also recently cured Capt. G. W. Suesberry, of such wonderful fame in the civil war; Mrs. C. Borts, Mrs. Sarah Mueller, Mrs. John W. Miller and Mrs. S. D. Duell, all of this section so noted for cancer. He is the doctor who cured our Captain John Mason, the first man to carry the news of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln to our Gen. Lew Wallace. Captain Mason's cancer was caused by an injury received that memorable night. All the leading papers and scientific journals have been full of reports of their almost miraculous cures. Honesty is their policy—they treat without knife or pain, charge nothing until cured, and offer $1,000 if they ever fail to cure any cancer they treat before it has poisoned any deep glands. They have probably the best 130-page book of testimonials and symptoms ever printed on cancers; sent free to those who describe their case. It contains proof that ANY LUMP IN WOMAN'S BREAST IS CANCER; also that any tumor, lump or sore on the lip, face or anywhere six months is cancer. Dr. Chamlee is declared by his patients to be one of the most honest and conscientious doctors they ever knew. He is the best authority in America on the cure of cancers, having cured more in thirty-four years than any doctor living.

Man Flight Next!

we get fly through the air as we flash across the continent to-day, many times more quickly, and more profitably and economically than the men of the civilized portions of the world are now pretty generally doing. A few decades ago, however, a single man, or, at least, a small number of men, were firm in the belief that we would yet sail by steam, and send messages by dots over wires, actually riding over wires, in horseless carriages, and receive messages over wires of miles of space without the intervention of wires! And the word that a great many of us use to our lips when we hear a man, orthodox in all things, solemnly declare that we will never fly is "Impossible!" you exclaim in tones of disgust at such a vision.

It is the very word the great body of people employed when, at one time or another, a single man, or, at least, a small number of men, were firm in the belief that we would yet sail by steam, and send messages by dots over wires, actually riding over wires, in horseless carriages, and receive messages over wires of miles of space without the intervention of wires! And the word that a great many of us use to our lips when we hear a man, orthodox in all things, solemnly declare that we will never fly is "Impossible!" you exclaim in tones of disgust at such a vision.

It is not float, mind you. The balloon float in the air now. The dirigible does not. We have been floating in the air, lo! these many decades.

The balloon is a floating bag. It is true of both the dirigible and the balloon types. In each case the gas that gets the balloon up in the air keeps it suspended there is gas. As every one knows, is a substance lighter than air, and so it is capable, when used in sufficient quantity, to float in air, the ropes, the woven material, and whatever else goes into the construction of the contraption we call a dirigible.

But the invention that is to give us mastery of the now uncharted highways of the air will travel along these highways on its own initiative. It will be an active, not a passive, sojourner in the realm of overhead.

In this feature it will be like unto the bird, and again, like the bird, it will be heavier, many times heavier, than the air itself. A vulture's body is a thousand times heavier than the air it dis-places; the machine in which man will prove to the world the complete practicability and utility of air travel will be—how many hundreds of times heavier than the substance filling the unseen and boundless sea through which it will shoot with speed outrivalling the homing pigeon's, with the steadiness and docility of an old family horse?

And our flight through space will be in conscious imitation of the flights of the birds.

Every bird, every flying thing, flies because its flight is based upon the resistance offered to the air by its wings. In other words, we shall never attain flight by merely displacing air, as we do when floating in the straight out balloon or the so-called airship of to-day.

Further, we will fly as does the pigeon. It, "in full flight, raises itself by each of its rapid wing beats, an almost imperceptible distance, and shoots forward through each flap along a plane of very slight inclination, downwards by just the amount the wing beat raises it, and forwards a considerable distance—the result being rapid flight."

Our flight, then, will be a gradual gliding down an inclined plane and a constant recovery by upshots. In some forms of flight these two actions occur almost simultaneously. So will they in the perfected flying machine, insuring a delightful sense of safety to the passenger, nonchalantly defiant of the law of gravitation, he knowing full well the machine's ability constantly and arbitrarily to correct the position of the center of gravity, bird fashion, thus insuring permanent stability in the air.

The wisest of men declare all this; still, you say, a dream—a phantasmagoria of the brain?

Surely not when man has already flown in or flown machines as the pigeon flies!

Time after time the aerodrome—air runner—invented by the late Prof. E. P. Langley, of the Smithsonian Institution, glided on an inclined plane forward through the air, recovered itself and glided again. Though the public has not yet seen it in action, there are many trustworthy men who have testified to having beheld the flying machine of the Wright brothers, of Ohio, gliding through the air like a bird. Any scientist who has paid any attention whatever to aeronautics will tell you that Picher's gliding machine acts in the air just like a bird in flight. And there are others.

Like a bird in gliding flight have they traveled overhead for varying distances. No bag of gas lifted them in the air and kept them suspended therein, while a motor or an engine of some sort furnished driving power to a propeller, as in the case of the Santos Dumont and other airships. Like a bird they have sailed, remained in the air by reason of their own initiative, the power furnished by motors or engines causing the mechanisms to offer the necessary bird-like resistance to the air, with the result of actual flight.

But, alas, because we do not yet possess the full knowledge of the principle of flight, as does the meanest of birds and flying insects, those flying machines which have justified their name, in part at least, have been wont to play queer tricks at the most inopportune moments on their inventors and an anxiously watching and waiting world. And so, though the greatest ambition of the world to-day seems to be to fly, many of us have come to say, with a regretful shake of the head, "We will never fly."

Right here, up steps the greatest wizard of his day, Thomas A. Edison, to say that man ought to be ashamed of himself for not having solved the problem, in all its phases, long ago.

"I was down in Florida, and one day I watched a big bird—I think it was a vulture—that floated about in the air a whole hour without moving its wings perceptibly. When God made that bird He gave it a machine to fly with, but He didn't give it much else. He gave the bird a very small brain with which to direct the movements of the machine, but He gave to man a much larger brain in proportion to that of the bird."

All this is paraphrased in the one word "Shame!"

"Here," says Edison of the vulture, "is a natural flying machine which is a thousand times as heavy as the air it displaces. There is nothing but a machine and a small brain, and it is not a very remarkable machine, either." And then in self-evident disgust: "Why is it that man cannot make a flying machine as efficient as a bird?"

"A lot of people say that it was never meant that man should fly, that if nature had intended such a thing man would have been provided with the necessary machinery in his body, such as is now possessed by the bird. But you might as well say that it was never intended that man should ever have any light aside from the sun and the moon and stars which were originally provided for him, or that he should not move about faster with the aid of wheels because no wheels were supplied to him by nature."

Through further study of the bird and its method of flight man will discover how to fly, says Mr. Edison, and all others who have given the subject any serious thought agree with him fully. But, Mr. Edison adds, somewhat paradoxically, he who solves the problem of flight "will find out nothing new. Powerful motors of wonderful compactness will be applied to a framework of extreme lightness, and that will be all there is to it."

"Doubtless this framework will be something similar to the physical structure of a bird. I do not believe it will be difficult, because we have many mechanical devices now which are superior to the devices used by nature in human beings and animals, and I do not see why we may not put together a contrivance which will at least be equal to the machine and brain of the bird."

So, if man-flight is such an easy matter as Mr. Edison makes it out to be, why have we not been navigating the air these many years? For one thing, we have only recently, in our attempts to fly, left off trying to be original and endeavored to copy the bird, the handiwork of nature. It is a significant fact that only since we have looked to the bird for the secret of flight has there been built a machine with an indisputable record of flying ever so small a distance. Only since we have begun to imitate the bird have the wise men become convinced that we will yet fly. And some day—some day—ah, who would not like his name to go rolling down the ages as the inventor of the first machine to demonstrate beyond the shadow of a doubt the complete conquest of the air by man?

Though man, when he flies, will fly like the birds, it does not necessarily follow that the flying machine, on account of its structure, might be taken for some long surviving antediluvian inhabitant of the air. Indeed, not a few scientists who have been busy with aeronautics declare that, once man has discovered the principle of flight, his wonderful ingenuity will enable him to construct a machine that will incorporate the principle and at the same time have nothing about it resembling wings in the slightest degree. Propellers there will be, and a rudder, doing the work of wings and tail. But it will be flight without wings—and we have been taught from childhood that even the angels need wings to fly. Other scientists, however, believe that there will be great planes, two or more, mechanically worked like wings, in conjunction with propellers and rudder.

Again, in their perfected state, propellers and rudder will do more than to give flight. Once more man will improve on nature, and the mechanisms of his ingenuity will drive the good air machine through gales that the strongest bird could not face, will keep it serenely on its course, while birds, caught in the swirling, clashing, battling currents, will be hurled miles out of their path, to be brought down in the friendly, strange country.

Will the shell of the steel? Certainly of the material equally strong, many times heavier than places.

The shape of the machine that of a bird's body—like structure, with one the other blunted somewhat, taking their cue from have been picturing it years now.

What will drive it? High miraculous power, lighter in weight than the material of such power as just as the automobile is infinitely lighter than only a few years ago mighty engines of the greyhound are lighter than the wings of fifty odd years.

And the motors will be born of this motion, offering resistance and flight will be sustained the case of the bird, and for a short time with aerodrome.

How fast will we travel, with a brain more portion than man's, has flight, of from two hundred miles an hour, not journey through this speed, we who the universe! A mile in twelve seconds, the average single night, an afternoon dinner trip between Chicago, a run of minutes the metropolis to the

What will give life to the chinery? There is a opinion, but all are agreed will be very small, its a little will go a very haps, say the most daring flies, will snatch the power from space, and veayances there will be semble the giant fuel ocean greyhounds.

if they as one and the same?" "I cannot," answered Quinton. "One question more, sir. Is Mr. Bostock a friend of yours?" "I have known him for some time." "And like him?" "And like him," the young man replied. "Good-night, sir," said the inspector shortly, as he turned away; then, as if acting on a second thought, he added: "Remember, sir, not a word of this. I may be right, or I may be wrong in my suspicions, but let no incautiously dropped word of yours help to divert the course of justice."

"You can rely on my silence," said Quinton stiffly.

In the road outside Mackworth joined Martyn.

"Well," he said abruptly, "have you made up your mind?"

"I have," the policeman replied, promptly and decisively.

"Then out with it and don't keep me waiting."

"That's the same man who came running up to tell me some one was calling for the police."

Mackworth paused in his walk and eyed his companion fixedly.

"Are you quite sure?" he asked. "Certain."

"Remember how much may depend on your word."

"I knew him the minute I clapped my eyes on him again," the policeman said eagerly.

"Are you ready to swear he is the same man?"

"I am."

"That's enough," said Mackworth, with evident relief.

CHAPTER X.

Throughout the days following the return to town of Valerie Galtbraith, all his energies were expended in striving to penetrate the mystery which surrounded David Dumbarton's death. Hours of his time were spent in consultation with George Coris and the counsel instructed by him; while Valerie had several interviews with Mackworth, who listened to his suggestions without revealing his own ideas regarding the man he suspected of the motive he believed to have caused the crime.

And no day was allowed to pass without Olive Dumbarton seeing her cousin, whose sympathy in this hour of need was welcome to her, whose efforts to give her hope and bring her cheer she gratefully appreciated; and that he now made no reference, as he had often done in recent times, to the affection he felt for her, or dwelt on all that might have been had she long years ago accepted his love, she felt more grateful still.

He was to her a friend, her next of kin, and nothing more, and as such she willingly accepted the services he placed at her disposal, the companionship he gave her.

It was Galtbraith's habit to avoid Bostock when possible, but it happened one afternoon when the former was spending the afternoon with his cousin, that the publisher called. Valerie, who was too well bred to show discourtesy toward a guest of his hostess and his kinswoman, rose and greeted Bostock formally and with an air of restraint of which Olive was painfully conscious, and of which the publisher was likewise aware.

Olive Dumbarton sat in a deep chair beside the fire, her black dress contrasting the pallor of her face, her thin hands with their long, sensitive fingers lying listlessly in her lap, her large, gray-blue eyes fixed absently on the fire when not raised in question to those with whom the conversed. Valerie, seated at a little table apart, made tea for their visitors.

George Bostock was narrating the latest literary gossip to his hostess, for, knowing the interest she always felt in her fellow-workers, he strove by this means to banish for awhile the dark and troubled thoughts that forever haunted her. Mrs. Dumbarton moved her head until she faced the window, the blind of which had not been drawn. As she did, she started violently, her eyes became fixed, her face grew ashy white, and her hands clutched the arms of her chair.

They who stood beside her saw with fear the sudden change which had come upon her, and without questioning her turned simultaneously in the direction in which her gaze was yet fixed. And as they looked they were startled by the sight of a face pressed close against the glass, its outlines lost in the darkness surrounding it, the eyes large, dark and luminous, filled with a fixed determination and eager purpose there was no mistaking.

The second of profound silence which followed seemed an age, during which they suffered from a stupefaction which held their senses in abeyance; then Valerie, who was first to recover, rushed from the room and out of the house. As he did the dark eyes, which had noted his movements, withdrew from the window and disappeared in the blackness without.

As if relieved from a gaze that had fascinated her against her will, Olive Dumbarton drew a long breath, closed her eyes and rose to her feet. "Mother, dearest, who can this be?" Veronica asked, in a frightened, appealing voice.

"God knows," Olive Dumbarton replied, in the tone of one ready to meet whatever calamity fate had yet in store for her. (To be continued.)

A Little Story of Married Life.

An Ohio farmer had a "hired man," a steady, phlegmatic worker, who was always on time and had not missed a day in more than a year. One morning he appeared in his Sunday clothes and announced that he had "to go to his wife's funeral." The following day he appeared as usual and went about his work in his careful, methodical manner. Less than a fortnight later he again came before his employer in his black suit and asked for a day off.

"I hate to refuse you, but you know we are pretty busy now. Wouldn't it do just as well next week?"

"Aber I denke nicht," said Jake; "may be I better be here. It been my wedding still."

"What! Your wedding? Why, you buried your wife only week before last."

"Ja," returned Jake calmly, "but I don't hold spite long."

DELICACIES FOR EARLY FALL

Mush Fritters.—Heat one pint of milk in a double boiler, and just before it begins to boil sprinkle in half a cup of granulated white meal. Cook, stirring constantly, for ten minutes. Then cover and cook slowly for thirty minutes. Add a level teaspoonful of salt and turn into tin molds. Stand aside to cool. When cold, cut into slices a half inch thick, dip in egg, roll in bread crumbs and fry in hot fat.

Sautéed Celery.—Select six small, solid stalks of celery. Wash and cut them into length of one and a half to two inches. Soak them in cold water for half an hour and throw them into boiling water. Add a teaspoonful of salt and boil rapidly five minutes. Drain again. Now toss them in a napkin until thoroughly dry. Put two tablespoonfuls of oil or butter in a frying pan. Add a teaspoonful of chopped onion, and when hot put in the celery, a small quantity at a time. Stir or toss over a very hot fire until slightly browned. Lift with a skimmer and drain on brown paper. When ready to serve sprinkle over two tablespoonfuls of catsup and send at once to table.

English Beef Soup.—Make a plain soup stock by boiling a shin of beef well seasoned. When cold remove the bone from the stock and cut the meat into neat small pieces. Put a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan with the meat, and after mixing to gether without browning add one quart of the beef stock and season with one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet. Bring to the boiling point. Now add the meat blocks and one hard-boiled egg chopped fine. Throw into the soup half a lemon cut into thin slices and then into quarters. Serve at once.

Panned Baked Apples.—Wash and core the number of apples required, but do not pare. Cut them into parts, eight parts to each apple. Put a layer in a baking dish, cover with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, then another layer of apples, and so continue until the dish is filled. Add to each quart of these a cupful of water, cover the pan and bake in a quick oven until soft, or about fifteen minutes. They must be tender, but the parts must remain quite whole—that is, not becoming mushy. Serve warm in the pan in which they are baked.

Steak en Casserole.—For this choose a round steak, and have it cut at least one inch thick, and then into small pieces about two inches square. To each pound of steak allow one-half pint of small new onions, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one good-sized carrot, one turnip, one teaspoonful of salt, and a saltspoonful of pepper. Peel the onion, cut the carrot and turnip into fancy shapes, and put a layer of the mixed vegetables in the bottom of a casserole or earthen dish. Heat an iron pan and rub the bottom with suet. Throw in the small pieces of steak, let them heat quickly on both sides. Now lift and put them in the earthen dish over the vegetables. Cover with the remaining vegetables, add the seasoning and two cups of boiling water. Cover the dish and stand in a quick oven to bake for an hour. Serve in the dish in which it is cooked.

Rice Jelly.—Cover a quarter of a box of gelatin with half a cup of cold water and soak for half an hour. Wash a quarter of a cup of rice in cold water, boil for thirty minutes and drain. Stir or toss it with a fork until it is light and dry. Whip a pint of cream, stand it in a pan of ice water and sprinkle over with sugar and then with the rice. Stand the gelatin over hot water, and when melted strain over it the warm mixture. Stir at once and continuously until the whole is thoroughly mixed and the rice remains on top of the cream. Turn into a mold and stand in a cold place.

Creamed Baked Macaroni.—Boil four ounces of macaroni twenty minutes and blanch ten. Put a layer of macaroni in the bottom of a baking dish, then a sprinkling of cheese, a dusting of salt and pepper, and so continue until all the ingredients are used. Rub a tablespoonful of butter and a tablespoonful of English Beef Soup.—Main a plain flour together. Add a cup of milk and stir over the fire until boiling. Pour this carefully over the macaroni and bake in a moderate oven thirty minutes.

Scotch Stew.—Cut two necks of mutton into small pieces. Put two tablespoonfuls of suet into a saucepan and shake over the fire until it is nearly melted. Remove the frizzled pieces, put in the pieces of mutton and shake until they are seared on all sides. Add two tablespoonfuls of flour to the fat and mix. Cover the pan and simmer gently for one and a half hours. Serve with boiled rice or baked onions cooked in cream.

Chocolate Souffle.—Put two ounces of chocolate into a saucepan. When melted add one cup of milk and stir until hot and well mixed. Moisten three tablespoonfuls of flour in four tablespoonfuls of cold milk. Add to the hot milk and stir until smooth and thick. Take from the fire, add the yolks of four eggs. Cook a minute longer, take again from the fire and fold in carefully the well beaten whites of the eggs. Turn at once into a baking dish and bake twenty minutes. Serve with cream and vanilla sauce.

Green Corn Gems.—Score and press the corn from half a dozen ears. Beat the yolks of two eggs and add one cup of milk and then the corn. Sift one and one-half cups of flour with one rounding teaspoonful of baking powder. Stir this into the corn mixture and fold in the well beaten whites. Bake in gem pans in a quick oven thirty minutes.

Codfish Souffle.—Pick apart half a pound of salt cod and wash well in cold water. Now cover with boiling water and let stand for half an hour. Drain and press dry. Have ready two cupfuls of cold mashed potatoes that have been beaten until light. Stir in the codfish, add a saltspoonful of pepper, the yolks of two eggs and finally fold in the beaten whites. Put this into a baking dish and bake until a golden brown.

Pumpkin Custard.—Make a biscuit crust and roll it out thin, using two cups of flour, a rounding teaspoonful of baking powder, a level teaspoonful of salt, and moisten with two-thirds of a cup of milk. Line a deep baking dish with this thin crust. Have ready stewed sufficient pumpkin to make one pint or two cupfuls when mashed and pressed through a sieve, being careful that it is not too watery. While the pumpkin is warm add a tablespoonful of butter, stir in two eggs well beaten, and add a pint of milk. Season with nutmeg, turn into baking dish and bake in a moderate oven for one hour.

FACTS FROM MANY LANDS

Italian railroad authorities are experimenting with a device for use at railroad stations, by means of which all tickets are printed, and stamped with their price in the presence of the passenger, a record of each sale being at the same time made on a roll of paper inside the machine. Each machine is equipped for printing tickets to more than four hundred stations.

A great canal which drains the two Italian provinces of Mantua and Reggio and discharges into the River Po has just been opened. For five years six thousand men have been employed in digging the big ditch.

The first turbine steamship ever built in the United States was launched at the Roach shipyard at Chester, Pa., in April last. It was christened "Governor Cabot," and will ply between Boston and New Brunswick. It is 200 feet long and contains one hundred and seventy-five staterooms.

According to the Machinists' Monthly Journal, more men are killed in Allegheny County, Pa., every year than fell in many of the great battles of history. Last year nine thousand men were killed and injured in the steel and iron mills and blast furnaces. In other mills the casualties numbered four thousand. Railroad employes killed or injured in the county during the same year numbered four thousand three hundred, making a grand total of seventeen thousand seven hundred on the roll.

The oldest school in the world is the "School for the Sons of the Empire" at Peking, China. The names of its 60,000 graduates are carved on 320 stone pillars.

The production of aluminum in the United States has increased tenfold in as many years. In 1883 the total production was eight-three pounds. In 1904 it was 8,600,000 pounds.

A lighthouse that has neither lamp nor keeper is located at Arnish Rock, Stornoway Bay, in the Hebrides, Scotland. It is a conical beacon with a lantern, which has a mirror and an arrangement of prisms at its summit. Across the channel, 500 feet away, on Lewis Island, stands a lighthouse which throws a stream of light on the mirror in the lantern, which in turn reflects it on the prisms. The rays of light are converged to a focus outside the lantern and then diverge in every direction, making a serviceable lighthouse, fully adapted to the requirements of its locality.

The money value of the Vatican, the Pope's palace at Rome, and its treasures is estimated at $150,000,000.

At New Haven, Conn., Yale University is building a reinforced concrete stadium which will have a seating capacity of 40,000.

Newspaper despatches from Denver announce that it has been decided to adopt electricity as the motive power of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad.

electricity to be generated by mountain streams along the line. It is added that electric engineers report enough water going to waste within the state to run all the railroads inside its borders.

The czar of Russia is the possessor of a bullet-proof automobile, devised not for safety alone, but for comfort as well. It is fitted up with a chest of drawers, cabinet, easy chairs, etc.

Mohair is likely to become an important produce in the United States. At present, however, there are probably not more than 1,000,000 pounds of the substance grown here. It comes from the back of the Angora goat, three or four pounds being secured from each animal. The price of mohair varies from 25 cents to $1.25 a pound.

Chinese graft, which is proverbial, finds an excellent opportunity in the lighting of Peking. Annually $8,000,000 are appropriated for the purposes of street illumination. After the money has sifted through the hands of various officers a wick and some oil are left. One of the numerous beggars of the capital drinks the oil.

Ballooning has a curious effect on the vision. The pressure on the visual organs decreases and the sense of sight becomes so keen that at an altitude of 6,000 feet a bottle dropped to a body of water below may be observed in detail as it disappears beneath the surface.

A policeman's club with an electric light in the handle is a late invention. If it proves a success the searchlight lantern may be dispensed with.

A Hungarian chemist has produced a fluid optical lens at a moderate cost. The largest lens used for astronomical work has hitherto cost thousands of dollars and taken several years to produce. A few weeks' time and an expenditure of $500 is all that is now required.

For the purpose of raising the Mikasa, the sunken flagship of Admiral Togo, the Japanese have constructed an exact model of the wreck. As a hole is repaired in the Mikasa, a corresponding patch is placed on the model. The progress of the work may thus be measured at a glance.

The Canadian Pacific railroad has constructed, between Montreal and Winnipeg, a distance of 1,400 miles, a telegraph system. One wire does double work at once, so that a telegraph and a telephone message may be transmitted simultaneously. The company will install this system over all its lines. The work of dispatching trains, it is believed, will be revolutionized.

The national capital has the largest collection of anthropological specimens on the face of the globe. Four thousand to five thousand skulls and skeletons are here preserved. Two hundred are arranged in jars. These are arranged with those of animals for the long defile of comparison.
