STOP TO TELL A DIAMOND.

Walter Penn for Contes Ross and Morris.

The Janitor made a small cut, like a round hole, with a needle and thread around the diamond. He then inserted it in the hole and tied it around the thread. This is how he removed the diamond from its setting.

Through the diamond the dirt had forced its way, and the Janitor had not been able to remove it. He was able to do so by using a small tool.

The diamond was transferred to three diamond setters, who would remove the dirt and replace it with new pieces. The diamond was then returned to the Janitor, who would set it again.

The Janitor then cleaned the setting, and the diamond was ready to be returned to the owner.
