EXPLOSION KILLS THREE

Man Places Twenty Pounds Dynamite Under Cooking Stove Which Explodes While Eating Dinner

FIRE FOLLOWS AND HOUSE DESTROYED

The people all over the county were shocked to learn of the sad disaster which occurred near Springerton, February 28, about noon. From reports as best we could learn that Charles Tittle, a young and prominent farmer, placed about twenty pounds of dynamite under the cooking stove while Mrs. Sarah Tittle was preparing the noon meal. While eating dinner the dynamite exploded instantly killing Rev. John D. Tittle, Charles Tittle, Mrs. Charles Tittle and injuring two children, a little girl and a little boy, who are reported some better, and hopes are entertained for their recovery.

The older child, a boy of six years, is the only survivor who can tell anything about the accident, and all he can say is that the house was blown down.

The house, a one story frame, was completely demolished parts of it being blown hundreds of feet away. Flames consumed all that remained.

Fatalism seems to have pursued the Tittle family, as Cleveland Tittle, a younger son of Rev. Tittle, was accidentally killed last May while stretching a barbed wire fence. The widow of Rev. Tittle is in a very precarious condition as a result of the shock caused by the death of her husband and stepson, and it is feared that she may lose her reason.

The bodies of the four who were in the house at the time of the explosion were blown in different directions and all were found several feet away from the house, the bodies of the two men were blown through the east end of the building, while the woman was blown through the south side. The little girl was found lying on the body of her mother, while the little boy was lying across that of his father. Most of the clothing was blown from the bodies of the victims. The mirror of the dresser was found intact and its frame on the floor of the house.—Carmi Times.

Siclone ...Clark

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

Copyright, 1900, by Frank H. Spearman

HERE goes a fellow that walks like Siclone Clark," exclaimed Duck Middleton. Duck was sitting in the train-master's office with a group of engineers. He was one of the black-listed strikers and runs an engine now down on the Santa Fe. But at long intervals Duck goes back to revisit the scenes of his early triumphs. The men who surrounded him were once at deadly odds with Duck and his chums, though now the ancient enmities seem forgotten, and Duck, the once ferocious Duck, sits occasionally among the new men and gossips about early days on the West End.

"Do you remember Siclone, Reed?" asked Duck, calling to me in the private office.

"Remember him?" I echoed. "Did anybody who ever knew Siclone forget him?"

"I fired passenger for Siclone twenty years ago," resumed Duck. "He walked just like that fellow, only he was quicker. I reckon you fellows don't know what a snap you have here now," he continued, addressing the men around him. "Track fenced, ninety pound rails, steel bridges, stone culverts, slag ballast, skyscrapers—no wonder you get chances to haul such nobs as Lilliohalani and Schley and Dewey and cut ninety miles an hour on tangents."

"When I was firing for Siclone the roadbed was just off the scrapers, the dumps were soft, pile bridges, paper culverts, fifty-six pound rails, not a fence west of Buffalo gap and the plains black with Texas steers. We never closed our cylinder cocks. The hiss of the steam frightened the cattle worse than the whistle, and we never knew when we were going to find a bunch of critters on the track."

"The first winter I came out was great for snow, and I was a tenderfoot. The cuts made good windbreaks, and whenever there was a norther they were chuck full of cattle. Every time a train plowed through the snow it made a path on the track. Whenever the steers wanted to move they would take the middle of the track single file and string out mile after mile. Talk about fast schedules and ninety miles an hour. You had to poke along with your cylinders spitting and just whistle and yell—sort of blow them off into the snowdrifts."

"One day Siclone and I were going west on 59, and we were late. For that matter, we were always late. Simpson, coming against us on 60, had caught a bunch of cattle in the rock cut just west of the Sappie and killed a couple. When we got there, there must have been a thousand head of steers mauling around the dead ones. Siclone—he used to be a cowboy, you know—Siclone said they were holding a wake. At any rate, they were still coming from every direction and as far as you could see."

"Hold on, Siclone, and I'll chase them out," I said.

"That's the stuff, Duck," says he. "Get after them and see what you can

"He stood out there with a shovel and kept the whole bunch off me."

do. He looked kind of queer, but I never thought anything. I picked up a jack bar and started up the track."

"The first fellow I tackled looked lazy, but he started full quick when I hit him. Then he turned around to inspect me, and I noticed his horns were of the broad gauge variety. While I whacked another the first one put his head down and began to seep and paw the ties. Then they all began to bellow at once. It looked smoky. I dropped the jack bar and started for the engine, and about fifty of them started for me."

"I never had an idea steers could run so. You could have played checkers on my heels all the way back. If Siclone hadn't come out and jolted them, I'd never got back in the world. I just jumped the pilot and went clear over against the boiler head. Siclone claimed I tried to climb the smokestack, but he was excited. Anyway, he stood out there with a shovel and kept the whole bunch off me. I thought they would kill him. But I never tried to chase range steers on foot again."

"In the spring we got the rains—not like you get now, but cloudbursts. The section men were good fellows, only sometimes we would get into a storm miles from a section gang and strike a place where we couldn't see a thing."

"Then Siclone would stop the train, take a bar and get down ahead and sound the roadbed. Many and many a washout he struck that way which would have wrecked our train and wound up our ball of yarn in a minute. Often and often Siclone would go into his division without a dry thread on him."

"Those were different days," mused the grizzled striker. "The old boys are scattered now all over this broad land. The strike did it, and you fellows have the snap. But what I wonder often and often is whether Siclone is really alive or not."

Siclone Clark was one of the two cowboys who helped Harvey Reynolds and Ed Banks save 59 at Griffin the night the coal train ran down from Ogallala. They were both taken into the service. Siclone after awhile went to wiping."

When Bucks asked his name, Siclone answered, "S. Clark."

"What's your full name?" asked Bucks.

"S. Clark."

"But what does S stand for?" persisted Bucks.

"Stands for Cyclone, I reckon. Don't it?" retorted the cowboy, with some annoyance.

It was not usual in those days on the plains to press a man too closely about his name. There might be reasons why it would not be esteemed courteous.

"I reckon it do," replied Bucks, dropping into Siclone's grammar. And without a quiver he registered the new man as Siclone Clark, and his cheeks always read that way. The name seemed to fit. He adopted it without any objection, and after everybody came to know him it fitted so well that Bucks was believed to have second sight when he named the bare-brained fireman. He could get up a storm quicker than any man on the division and, if he felt so disposed, stop one quicker.

In spite of his eccentricities, which were many, and his headstrong way of doing some things, Siclone Clark was a good engineer and deserved a better fate than the one that befell him, though—who can tell?—it may have been just to his liking.

The strike was the worst thing that ever happened to Siclone. He was one of those big hearted, violent fellows who went into it loaded with enthusiasm. He had nothing to gain by it—at least, nothing to speak of. But the idea that somebody on the East End needed their help led men like Siclone in, and they thought it a cinch that the company would have to take them all back.

The consequence was that, when we staggered along without them, men like Siclone, easily aroused, naturally of violent passions and with no self restraint, stopped at nothing to cripple the service. And they looked on the men who took their places as entitled neither to liberty nor life.

When our new men began coming from the Reading to replace the strikers, every one wondered who would get Siclone Clark's engine, the 313. Siclone had gently sworn to kill the first man who took out the 313, bar no body.

Whatever others thought of Siclone's vaporings, they counted for a good deal on the West End. Nobody wanted trouble with him.

Even Neighbor, who feared no man, sort of let the 313 lie in her stall as long as possible after the trouble began.

Nothing was said about it. Threats cannot be taken cognizance of officially. We were bombarded with threats all the time; they had long since ceased to move us. Yet Siclone's engine stayed in the roundhouse.

Then, after Foley and McTerza and Sinclair, came Fitzpatrick from the east. McTerza was put on the mails, and coming down one day on the White Flier he blew a cylinder head out of the 416.

Fitzpatrick was waiting to take her out when she came stumping in on one pair of drivers, for we were using engines worse than horseflesh then. But of course the 416 was put out. The only gig left in the house was the 313.

I imagine Neighbor felt the finger of fate in it. The mail had to go. The time had come for the 313. He ordered her fired.

"The man that ran this engine swore he would kill the man that took her out," said Neighbor, sort of incidentally, as Fitz stood by waiting for her to steam.

"I suppose that means me," said Fitzpatrick.

"I suppose it does."

"Whose engine is it?"

"Siclone Clark's."

Fitzpatrick shifted to the other leg.

"Did he say what I would be doing while this was going on?"

Something in Fitzpatrick's manner made Neighbor laugh. Other things crowded in and no more was said.

No more was thought, in fact. The 313 rolled as kindly for Fitzpatrick as for Siclone, and the new engineer, a quiet fellow like Foley, only a good bit heavier, went on and off her with never a word for anybody.

One day Fitzpatrick dropped into a barber shop to get shaved. In the next chair lay Siclone Clark. Siclone got through first and, stepping over to the table to get his hat, picked up Fitzpatrick's by mistake and walked out with it. He discovered his change just as Fitz got out of his chair. Siclone came back, replaced the hat on the table—it had Fitzpatrick's name pasted in the crown—took up his own hat and as Fitz reached for his looked at him.

Every one in the shop caught their breaths.

"Is your name Fitzpatrick?"

"Yes, sir."

"Mine is Clark."

Fitzpatrick put on his hat.

"You're running the 313, I believe?" continued Siclone.

"Yes, sir."

"That's my engine."

"I thought it belonged to the company."

"Maybe it does, but I've agreed to kill the man that takes her out before this trouble is settled," said Siclone amiably.

Fitzpatrick met him steadily. "If you'll let me know when it takes place, I'll try and be there."

"I don't jump on any man without fair warning. Any of the boys will tell you that," continued Siclone. "Maybe you didn't know my word was out?"

Fitzpatrick hesitated. "I'm not looking for trouble with any man," he replied guardedly, "but since you're disposed to be fair about notice it's only fair to you to say that I did know your word was out."

"Still you took her?"

"It was my orders."

"My word is out. The boys know it is good. I don't jump any man without fair warning. I know you now, Fitzpatrick, and the next time I see you, look out." And without more ado Siclone walked out of the shop, greatly to the relief of the barber if not of Fitz.

Fitzpatrick may have wiped a little sweat from his face, but he said nothing, only walked down to the roundhouse and took out the 313 as usual for his run.

A week passed before the two men met again. One night Siclone, with a crowd of the strikers, ran into half a dozen of the new men, Fitzpatrick among them, and there was a riot. It was Siclone's time to carry out his intention, for Fitzpatrick would have scorned to try to get away. No tree ever breasted a tornado more sturdily than the Irish engineer withstood Siclone, but when Ed Banks got there with his wrecking crew and straightened things out Fitzpatrick was picked up for dead. That night Siclone disappeared.

Warrants were got out and searchers put after him, yet nobody could or would apprehend him. It was generally understood that the sudden disappearance was one of Siclone's freaks. If the ex-cowboy had so determined he would not have hidden to keep out of anybody's way. I have sometimes pondered whether shame hadn't something to do with it. His tremendous physical strength was fit for so much better things than beating other men that maybe he himself sort of realized it after the storm had passed.

Down east of the depot grounds at McCloud stands or stood a great barnlike hotel, built in boom days and long a favorite resting place for invalids and travelers en route to California by easy stages. It was nicknamed the bar-racks, and the new engineers liked it because it was close to the roundhouse and away from the strikers.

Fitzpatrick, without a whine or a complaint, was put to bed in the barracks, and Holmes Kay, one of the staff surgeons, was given charge of the case. A trained nurse was provided besides. Nobody thought the injured man would live. But after every care was given him we turned our attention to the troublesome task of operating the road.

The 313, whether it happened so or whether Neighbor thought it well to drop the disputed machine temporarily, was not taken out again for three weeks. She was looked on as a hoodoo, and nobody wanted her. Foley refused point blank one day to take her, claiming that he had troubles of his own. Then one day something happened to McTerza's engine. We were stranded for a locomotive, and the 313 was brought out for McTerza. He didn't like it a bit.

Meantime nothing had been seen or heard of Siclone. That, in fact, was the reason Neighbor urged for using his engine, but it seemed as if every time the 313 went out it brought out Siclone, not to speak of worse things.

That morning about 3 o'clock the unlucky engine was coupled on to the White Flier. The night boy at the barracks always got up a hot lunch for the incoming and outgoing crews on the mail run, and that morning when he was through he forgot to turn off the lamp under his coffee tank. It overheated the counter, and in a few minutes the woodwork was ablaze. If the frightened boy had emptied the coffee on the counter he could have put the fire out, but instead he ran out to give the alarm and started upstairs to arouse the guests.

There were at least fifty people asleep in the house, traveling and railway men. Being a modern building, it was a quick prey, and in an incredibly short time the flames were leaping through the second story windows.

When I got down men were jumping in every direction from the burning hotel. Railroaders swarmed around, busy with schemes for getting the people out, for none is more quick witted in time of panic. Short as the opportunity was, there were many pretty rescues, until the flames, shooting up, cut off the stairs and left the helpers nothing for it but to stand and watch the destruction of the long, rambling building. Half a dozen of us looked from the dispatchers' offices in the second story of the depot. We had agreed that the people were all out when Foley below gave a cry and pointed to the south gable. Away up under the eaves at the third story window we saw a face. It was Fitzpatrick.

Everybody had forgotten Fitzpatrick and his nurse. Behind, as the flames lighted the opening, we could see the nurse struggling to get him to the window. It was plain that the engineer was in no condition to help himself. The two men were in deadly peril. A great cry went up.

The crowd swarmed like ants around to the south end. A dozen men called for ladders, but there were no ladders. They called for volunteers to go in after the two men, but the stairs were long since a furnace. There were men in plenty to take any kind of chance, however slight, but no chance offered.

The nurse ran to and from the window, seeking a loophole for escape. Fitzpatrick dragged himself higher on the casement to get out of the smoke which rolled over him in choking bursts and looked down on the crowd. They begged him to jump—held out their arms frantically. The two men, again side by side, waved a hand. It looked like a farewell. There was no calling from them, no appeal. The nurse would not desert his charge, and we saw it all.

Suddenly there was a cry below keener than the confused shouting of the crowd, and one running forward parted the men at the front and, clearing the fence, jumped into the yard under the burning gable.

Before people recognized him a larriat was swinging over his head. It was Siclone Clark. The rope left his arm

Hand over hand Siclone Clark crept up, like a slugshot and flew straight at Fitzpatrick. Not seeing or confused, he missed it, and the rope, with a groan from the crowd, settled back. The agile cowboy caught it again into a loop and shot it upward, that time fairly over Fitzpatrick's head.

"Make fast!" roared Siclone. Fitzpatrick shouted back, and the two men above drew taut. Hand over hand Siclone Clark crept up, like a monkey, bracing his feet against the smoking clapboards, edging away from the vomiting windows, swinging on the single strand of horsehair and followed by a hundred prayers unsaid.

Men who didn't know what tears were tried to cry out to keep the choking from their throats. It seemed an age before he covered the last five feet and the men above caught frantically at his hands.

Drawing himself over the casement, he was lost with them a moment. Then from behind a burst of smoke they saw him rigging a maverick saddle on Fitzpatrick, saw Fitzpatrick lifted by Clark and the nurse over the sill, lowered like a wooden tie, whirling and swinging, down into twenty arms below. Before the trainmen had got the engineer loose the nurse, following, slid like a cat down the incline, but not an instant too soon. A tongue of flame lit the gable from below and licked the horsehair up into a curling, frizzling thread, and Siclone stood alone in the upper casement.

It seemed for the moment he stood there the crowd would go mad. The shock and the shouting seemed to confuse him. It may have been the hot air took his breath. They yelled to him to jump, but he swayed uncertainly. Once, an instant after that, he was seen to look down; then he drew back from the casement. I never saw him again.

The flames wrapped the building in a yellow fury. By daylight the big barracks were a smoldering pile of ruins. So little water was thrown that it was nearly nightfall before we could get into the wreck. The tragedy had blotted out the feud between the strikers and the new men. Side by side they worked, as side by side Siclone and Fitzpatrick had stood in the morning, striving to uncover the mystery of the missing man. Next day twice as many men were in the ruins.

Fitzpatrick while we were searching called continually for Siclone Clark. We didn't tell him the truth. Indeed, we didn't know it, nor do we yet know it. Every brace, every beam, every brick, was taken from the charred pile, every foot of cinders, every handful of ashes sifted, but of a human being the searchers found never a trace, not a bone, not a key, not a knife, not a button which could be identified as his. Like the smoke which swallowed him up, he had disappeared completely and forever.

Is he alive? I cannot tell. But this I know:

Years afterward Sidney Blair, head of our engineering department, was running a line, looking then, as we are looking yet, for a coast outlet.

He took only a flying camp with him, traveling in the lightest kind of order, camping often with the cattle men he ran across.

One night away down in the Panhandle they fell in with an outfit driving a bunch of steers up the Yellow Grass trail. Blair noted that the foreman was a character—a man of few words, but of great muscular strength, and, moreover, frightfully scared.

He was silent and inclined to be morose at first, but after he learned Blair was from McCloud he mellowed a bit and after a time began asking questions which indicated a surprising familiarity with the northern country and with our road. In particular, this man asked what had become of Bucks and, when told what a big railroad man he had grown, asserted, with a sudden bitterness and without in any way leading up to it, that with Bucks on the West End there never would have been a strike.

Sitting at their campfire while their crews mingled, Blair noticed in the flicker of the blaze how seamed the throat and breast of the cattleman were. Even his sinewy forearms were drawn out of shape. He asked, too, whether Blair recollected the night the barracks burned, but Blair at that time was east of the river and so explained, though he related to the cowboy incidents of the fire which he had heard among others the story of Fitzpatrick and Siclone Clark.

"And Fitzpatrick is alive, and Siclone is dead," said Blair in conclusion. But the cowboy disputed him. "You mean Clark is alive and Fitzpatrick is dead," said he.

"No," contended Sidney. "Fitzpatrick is running an engine up there now. I saw him within three months." But the cowboy was loath to convalesce.

Next morning their trails forked. The foreman seemed disinclined to part from the surveyors, and while the bunch was starting he rode a long way with Blair, talking in a random way. Then, suddenly wheeling, he waved a goodby with his heavy Stetson and, galloping hard, was soon lost to the north in the ruins of the Yellow Grass.

When Blair came in he told Neighbor and me about it. Blair had never seen Siclone Clark and so was no judge as to his identity, but Neighbor believes yet that Blair camped that night way down in the Panhandle with no other than the cowboy engineer.

Once again, that only two years ago, something came back to us.

Holmes Kay, one of our staff of surgeons, the man, in fact, who took care of Fitzpatrick, enlisted in Illinois and went with the First to Cuba. They got in front of Santiago just after the hard fighting of July 1, and Holmes was detailed for hospital work among Roosevelt's men, who had suffered severely the day before.

One of the wounded, a sergeant, had sustained a gunshot wound in the jaw and in the confusion had received scant attention. Kay took hold of him. He was a cowboy, like most of the rough riders, and after his jaw was dressed Kay made some remark about the hot fire they had been through before the blockhouse.

"I'd been through a hotter before I ever saw Cuba," answered the rough rider as well as he could through his bandages. The remark directed Kay's attention to the condition of his breast and neck, which were a mass of scars.

"Where are you from?" asked Holmes.

"Everywhere."

"Where did you get burned that way?"

"Out on the plains."

"How?"

But the poor fellow went off into a delirium and to the surgeon's amazement began repeating train orders. Kay was paralyzed at the way he talked our lingo—and a cowboy. When he left the wounded man for the night he resolved to question him more closely the next day, but the next day orders came to rejoin his regiment at the trenches. The surrender shifted things about, and Kay, though he made repeated inquiry, never saw the man again.

Neighbor when he heard the story was only confirmed in his belief that the rough rider was Siclone Clark. "I give you the tales as they came to me and for what you may make of them."

I myself believe that if Siclone Clark is still alive he will one day yet come back to where he was best known and, in spite of his faults, best liked. They talk of him out there as they do of old man Sankey.

I say I believe if he lives he will one day come back. The day he does will be a great day in McCloud. On that day Fitzpatrick will have to take down the little tablet which he placed in the brick facade of the hotel which now stands on the site of the old barracks, for as that tablet now stands it is sacred to the memory of Siclone Clark.

The Ostrich's Mistake.

A trained ostrich recently disconcerted its exhibitor at a music hall by continually endeavoring to break away from all restraint and to climb over the footlights into the orchestra.

The widely advertised act came to a sudden end, and the professor emerged from behind the curtain and apologized for the actions of his pet in about these words:

"Ladies and Gentlemen—Hi ham very sorry to disappoint you this evening. We are compelled to cease our engagement until the management engages a new orchestra leader."

"The one at present hempened 'ere 'as no 'air on top of 'is 'ead, and my bird takes it for a hegg"—Titi Bits.

When Father Has the Grip

Poor mother wears a worried look,
And sister wears a frown;
And if I venture up the stairs
They send me straightway down.
I'm going to the drug store now
Upon a hurried trip,
To get some other kind of dope,
For father has the grip.

I heard him groaning in the night—
He said his head would split;
And then he thought his back would break;

In just a little bit,
He told us that his legs were sore,
And soon it was his hip;
It seems that everything is sick
When father has the grip.

The doctor came to-day and left
Some capsules, and he said
To take one each three hours until
The pain had really fled.
Says pa: "That means twelve hours before

I give this pain the slip;
I'll bet he'd find a faster dope
If he had got the grip."

And then he told us that he thought
That he was going to die;
And ma says so, that isn't so,
An' gave the reason why.
Then pa got mad and told her that
He didn't want her lip.
Oh, there's no comfort in our flat
When father has the grip.

Crino Laxative Fruit Syrup stimulates the liver and thoroughly cleanses the system and clears the complexion of pimples and blotches. It is the best laxative for women and children as it is mild and pleasant, and does not grip or sicken. In Memoriam.

The wife of Phil Butler died at her home near Charleston, Mo. Her age was fourteen years.

She departed this life February twentyfourth, she leaves a husband and a little baby, mother, father, brother and many friends to mourn her loss. Her remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Charleston for a while, her remains will be brought to her old home at Crooked Creek and laid to rest until the resurrection morning.

Sister Uala was a sweet little follower, and loved by all who knew her, but yet we hope to meet her when the day of life is fled when in Heaven with joy to greet her where no farewell tears are shed. Weep not dear friends God knew best to transplant in the heavenly realms where it will bloom forever. Weep not dear husband, your loss is a heaven's gain, your darling Uala will sleep but not forever, there will be a glorious dawn, you can meet to part no never on the resurrection morning.

Men and "Love Stories."

When a man has passed through the cycle of emotions called love he has had his adventures; other people's sense to have a personal bearing, and he anticipates nothing further from them.

It is not so with the young man and woman who, as the proverb says of the young bear, have all their troubles before them. The world of love, so full of mystery for them, has become to the maturer man translated into the concrete terms of domestic life, and the relations of man and woman pass into the domain of fact that can be tested by experience.

Yet novelists do not seem to understand this psychology of the mature man, and they continue to make the love story their chief staple, so that they are read chiefly by young men and women as callow as their own heroes and heroines. Peculiarly they are of course catering for a larger market. The number of the immature by age and the immature by nature are always the larger part of mankind.—London Saturday Review.

Rising From the Grave

A prominent manufacturer, Wm. A. Fertilizer, of Lucama, N. C., relates a most remarkable experience. He says: "After taking less than three bottles of Electric Bitters, I feel like one rising from the grave. My trouble is Bright's disease, in the Diabetes stage. I fully believe Electric Bitters will cure me permanently, for it has already stopped the liver and bladder complications which have troubled me for years." Guaranteed at Haynes & Taylor's drugstore, Price only 50c.

Pale-Hued Shoes.

Among the most noticeable whims of fashion this year has been the entire relegation into the background of everything black; the numerous new colors are so lovely that they have for the time quite extinguished our old favorite. This now applies to our shoes and stockings even as much as to our frocks, and they are dyed all manner of beautiful colors to match or blend with the gowns they are worn with. Judiciously indulged in this latest idea is an unquestionable success, and curiously enough is seen to the greatest advantage at the two extremes of our attire—in the evening or with the clothes one wears during a country visit.

Wise Counsel From the South

"I want to give some valuable advice to those who suffer with lame back and kidney trouble," says J. R. Blankinship, of Beck, Tenn. "I have proved to an absolute certainty that Electric Bitters will positively cure this distressing condition. The first bottle gave me great relief and after taking a few more bottles, I was completely cured; so completely cured that it becomes a pleasure to recommend this great remedy." Sold under guarantee at Haynes and Taylor's drug store. Price 50c.

Artificial Flowers Trim Gowns.

One of the newest and most desirable trimmings for an evening gown this season is artificial flowers. The possibilities of this decoration are endless for the reason that the flowers lend themselves to lines suited both to stout and slim figures. Put on independent effect they lengthen one inclined to being short, while a tall woman can afford to do what a short one cannot and decidedly cut her length by running the flowers across. A feature of this season is that small flowers are little seen. Without exception they are large, and roses are favorites. Plentiful use of foliage adds green to the general color scheme.—New York Telegram.

Topic Thoughts

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles, and little kindnesses and small obligations given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort.—Sir H. Davy.

The man who continuously knocks on a town or another man's business, nine times out of ten is a back number in business and has soured on the world.

Be sure it is high enough to test your best powers. Trust God, at the outset, and all the journey through, to bring you to your destination in spite of all perils by the way. Then, go forward, with a prayer in your heart and a song upon your lips.

Success is an eminence to be attained only by hard climbing. That holds good in all cases, but for some the road is steeper and rougher than for others. Yet those who face the sharpest slope are often the first to reach the heights above. Fix your eye upon the point you would attain.

A man's ideal is the measure of his success. To succeed means "to come up to something," and the something we come up to is what we set out to be, or to do, in the world. This much accomplish, we lack the incentive to go farther. A high ideal is, therefore, the first condition of real success.—Exchange.

The Gentlemanly Cheetah. India's hunting leopard, the cheetah, has a reputation as one of the most gentlemanly of beasts. Three Calcutta visitors to northern India were out on a tramp when they were overtaken by a thunderstorm. They espied a cave in the side of a hill and into it they rushed. When the rain stopped they came out and found a cheetah sitting licking the heavy wet off his waistcoat and his paws. It was his cave, but rather than deprive his visitors of their shelter the polite creature had sat outside in the driving tempest. With a friendly mew and gracefully wagging his tail, the cheetah bade adieu to his guests and walked with dignity into his house.

Safe, Sure and Speedy.

No external remedy ever yet devised has so fully and unquestionably met these three prime conditions as successful as Alcock's Plasters. They are safe because they contain no deleterious drug and are manufactured upon scientific principles of medicine. They are sure because nothing goes in to them except ingredients which are exactly adapted to the purposes for which a plaster is required. They are speedy in their action because their medicinal qualities goes right to their work relieving pain and restoring the natural and healthy performance of functions of muscles, nerves and skin. Alcock's Plasters are the original and genuine porous plasters and like most meritorious articles have been extensively imitated, therefore always make sure and get the genuine Alcock's.

Of Interest to Women.

Every woman naturally should be healthy and strong, but a great many women, unfortunately, are not, owing to the unnatural condition of the lives we lead. Headach, backach and a general tired condition are prevalent amongst the women of today, and to relieve those conditions women rush to the druggists for a bottle of some preparation supposed to be particularly for them, and containing—nobody knows what. If they would just get a box of Brandreth's Pills, and take them regularly every night for a time, all their trouble would disappear, as these pills regulate the organs of the feminine system. The same dose always has the same effect, no matter how long they are used.

Brandreth's Pills have been in use for over a century and are sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar-coated.

Neighbors Got Fooled

"I was literally coughing myself to death, and become too weak to leave my bed; and neighbors predicted that I would never leave it alive; but they got fooled, for thanks be to God, I was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery. This King of cough and cold cures, and healer of throat and lungs, is guaranteed by Haynes & Taylor, Druggist 50c.

Health in the Canal Zone

The high wages paid make it a mighty temptation to our young artisans to join the force of skilled workmen needed to construct the Panama Canal. Many are restrained however by the fear of fevers and malaria. It is the knowing ones—those who have used Electric Bitters, who go there without this fear, well knowing they are safe from malarious influence with Electric Bitters on hand. Cures blood poison, too; biliousness, weakness and all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Guaranteed by J. H. Orme druggist, 50c.

Dangers of Pneumonia

A cold at this time if neglected is liable to cause pneumonia which is so often fatal, and even when the patient has recovered the lungs are weakened, making them peculiarly susceptible to the development of consumption. Foley's Honey and Tar will stop the cough, heal and strengthen the lungs and prevent pneumonia. La Grippe coughs yield quickly to the wonderful curative qualities of Foley's Honey and Tar. There is nothing else "just as good." J. H. Orme.

Neglected Colds Threaten Life

"Don't trifle with a cold," is good advice for prudent men and women. It may be vital in the case of a child. Proper food, good ventilation, and dry, warm clothing are the proper safeguards against colds. If they are maintained through the changeable weather of autumn, winter and spring, the chances of a surprise from ordinary colds will be slight. But the ordinary light cold will become severe if neglected, and a well established ripe cold is to the germs of diphtheria what honey is to the bee. The greatest menace to child life at this season of year is the neglected cold. Whether it is a child or adult, the cold slight or severe, the very best treatment that can be adopted is to give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is safe and sure. The great popularity and immense sale of this preparation has been attained by its remarkable cures of this ailment. A cold never results in pneumonia when it is given. For sale by Haynes & Taylor.

Biliousness

"That sallow, yellow look, those terrible headaches, that dulled brain; all these things spell biliousness, which is the direct result of a liver which fails to perform its functions in a natural way. Before you can destroy that bilious condition you must get your liver in form and nothing will accomplish this so quickly or so thoroughly as

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

This remedy is the most valuable one obtainable for all liver and kindred troubles, possessing properties which drive it directly to the affected parts.

Better than pills, oils, salts and nauseous purgatives which aggravate conditions and leave the sufferer in worse condition than before.

Former afflicted ones, now well and strong, pay eloquent tribute to its efficacy and power.

DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN can be obtained in both dollar and half-dollar sizes from all druggists.

Your money will be refunded if it does not benefit you.

I'm Happy.

I'm sitting by the fire tonight,
With baby on my knee.
The coals are glowing hot and bright,
I'm happy as can be.
I'm waiting for the man I love,
Whose footsteps firm and strong
Are music to my waiting ears,
I'm happy all day long.

I'm happy as I work all day
And singing as I go,
My baby on my arm sometimes
While working to and fro;
The kettle singing merrily,
The lamps and windows bright,
And supper hot and tasty
When papa comes at night.

Don't talk to me of 'Suffrage,'
Of 'politics,' or plan;
Give me a fireside cozy,
A baby and a man;
The ancients may have been quite wise,
The modern very sweet,
But without these requirements
Life is not quite complete.

I hear the engine whistle now
As he goes rushing by,
He waves his lantern merrily,
I hold the lamp up high;
The baby crows and hallooos
And waves a 'how-de-do,'
And papa throws her kisses
And the baby throws one, too.

Oh! monster of the strength and steam
Be careful of my love,
Protect and guard him kindly
I pray to God above,
From all the ills and dangers
That are in a railroad life,
And send him home in safety
To his baby and his wife.

—Mrs. Agnes Ten Voorde, in R. R. Trainmen's Journal.

Croup can positively be stopped in 20 minutes. No vomiting—nothing to sicken or distress your child. A sweet, pleasant, and safe Syrup, called Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure, does the work and does it quickly. Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is for Croup alone, remember. It does not claim to cure a dozen ailments. It's for Croup, that's all. Sold by Haynes & Taylor.

ACTUALLY CURES CATARRH.

Haynes & Taylor's Faith in Hyomei is so Strong They Sell it Under Guarantee.

Haynes & Taylor back up their faith in Hyomei as a cure for catarrh and bronchial troubles with a positive guarantee that if it does not cure the money will be refunded. Hyomei is based on nature's way of curing catarrh. It contains concentrated healing oils and gums of the pine woods, prepared in such form that they can be brought into your own home though you lived out of doors in the Adirondacks, and in this way you can be cured of catarrh and affections of the nose, throat and lungs while at home or at work.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1.00, extra bottles, if needed, may be obtained for 50c. With Hyomei catarrh can be cured pleasantly and at small expense with no risk of the treatment costing a penny unless it cures.

Beware of Remedies for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by druggist. Price 75c. per bottle.

Do not Crowd The Season

The first warm days of spring bring with them a desire to get out and enjoy the exhilarating air and sunshine. Children that have been housed up all winter are brought out and you wonder where they all came from. The heavy winter clothing is thrown aside and many shed their flannels. Then a cold wave comes and people say that gripe is epidemic. Colds at this season are even more dangerous than in mid-winter, as there is much more danger of pneumonia. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, however, and you will have nothing to fear. It always cures, and we have never known a cold to result in pneumonia where it was used. It is pleasant and safe to take. Children like it. For sale by J. H. Orme, the leading druggist in western Ky.

Situations Guaranteed.

We do not guarantee situations to prospective students in order to get their patronage. Schools of merit do not resort to such dishonest practices. Fake schools "guarantee" situations in order to secure students, because they have no other inducements to offer. Our work is so thorough that a guarantee is superfluous. Business men are to be got to get competent help here that a large percentage of our students take positions before they graduate. See us before making arrangements for your business and shorthand education at some inferior, fake school. We will take pleasure in telling you all about the "holes in the position guarantee" of dishonest schools. Catalogue free.

MARY

By Byron Williams.

When Mary spansk th' butter in th' spring-house by th' crick,
She looks almight lovely—twic't as purty an' as slick
As them gals daown t' th' city with their funny struttin' walk;
An' i hang around an' putter, jest t' hear Miss Mary talk.

She has eyes that haunt a feller in th' middle o' th' night;
Eyes that sort a' makes th' v'lets hide their petals out o' sight.
Wish that I could git up courage jest t' ask her fer a wife;
Fer with Mary spankin' butter—well I guess that would be life!

Mary's arms are round and rosy and her cheeks is blushin' red;
Jest t' gaze upon her featur's sort a' goes right t' yer head!
Then she spats her butter mad-like, sez: "Git out you lazy thing."
Keeps on spattin' and a hummin' like th' water in the spring.

Then I sneak away a laughin' jest t' hide th' love I feel;
Go out yonder t' th' orchard with my senses in a reel!
When I think o' Mary spankin' of her butter by the spring,
Seems like Heaven is some nigher, an' th' stars, an' everything!

CHARLES GALLOP'S 'BUS

By Byron Williams.

I wonder where Charles Gallop is—"Twas him that druv the 'bus
Back yonder where I uster live, a little country cuss!

Charles Gallop he was big an' tall. His 'bus was long an' stout
Th' winders rattled scandalous like, but never onct fell out!

I wonder now where Charlie is? Why, that sleek span o' his Could travel like th' very wind when they got down ter biz!

And Charlie went to all the trains by day or in th' night;
All over town you'd hear him go jest at th' break o' light!

He'd sit high up there on th' 'bus an' "Gid ap!" to th' bay!
An' then he'd sit up straighter yit an' "Gid ap!" to th' gray!

Then, mister man! th' teams he'd pass with rattling, jingling pace—
An' sometimes he would let 'em run, rejoice in a race!

Most always lots o' people come to our old town by train,
An' Gallop knew 'em every one on secin' 'em again!

The travellin' men would say, "Hullo!" an' "Gallop, how are you?"
While actresses would smile an' smir an' giggle, "How-d'-do?"

Then Charlie'd holler, "All aboard!" an' pull th' door strap tight,
An' drive like Tam O'Shanter did, across the bridge that night!

One time I went away from home to seek my fortune new;
I rode on top with Gallop then—Gee whiskers, how we flew!

On Jan. 20th, 1907, the funeral services, of Charles Samuel Bennett, was held in the Baptist church at Fredonia, Ky., by the pastor.
He was born May 12th, 1890,
and departed this life Jan. 18th, 1907. And the morning he left his home in good health and full of vigor of youth, in company with another young man in a little boat went out in the back waters of the Mississippi river to kill some birds, the boat was overturned and Charles was drowned.
It seems so hard to his parents and grand parents to see him go thus, may our God give them grace to bear up under it and to live closer to him. His father and mother, Mr.
and Mrs. Will Bennett, now live in Miss, but this being the home of his grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. C.
Bennett. His remains was brought back here and was placed in our cemetery to await the resurrection morning.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is Both Agreeable and Effective

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has no superior for coughs, colds and croup, and the fact that it is pleasant to take and contains nothing in any way injurious has made it a favorite with mothers.
Mr. W. S. Felham, a merchant of Kirkville, Iowa, says: "For more than twenty years Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been my leading remedy for all throat troubles. It is especially successful in cases of croup. Children like it and my customers who have used it will not take any other." For sale by J. H. Orme, the leading druggist in western Ky.

A Legal Rector.

In a suit recently tried in a Virginia town, a young lawyer of limited experience was addressing a jury on a point of law when, good naturedly, he turned to opposing counsel, a man of much more experience than himself, and asked: "That's right, I believe,
Colonel Hopkins?"
Whereupon Hopkins, with a smile of conscious superiority, replied: "Sir, I have an office in Richmond, wherein I shall be delighted to enlighten you on any point of law for a consideration."
The youthful attorney, not in the least abashed, took from his pocket
a half-dollar piece, which he offered
Colonel Hopkins with this remark:
"No time like the present. Take this, sir, tell us what you know and give me the change."—Richmond Times-

Epilepsy Fits St. Vitus Dance

Are nerve diseases, and unless checked, lead to destruction of both mind and body. The weak, shattered nerves must have something to strengthen and build them back to health.
Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a remarkable nerve tonic and stimulant. It strengthens the nerves, relieves the nervous strain, and influences refreshing body-building sleep and rest. Persistent use seldom fails to relieve these afflictions.

"I was taken with epileptic fits; had eleven in less than 12 hours. My father sent for our family physician, but he could do very little for me, and I grew worse every day, and at last they had three doctors with me, and I still got worse. My father heard of Dr. Miles' medicines and bought a bottle of Nervine and a box of Nerve and Liver Pills. I had taken only a few doses until I began to feel better.
I took 12 bottles, and it cured me sound and well. It has been worth all the world to me. I recommend it to anyone who is afflicted with these troubles. I am enjoying the best of health, and feel that my life and health is due to this wonderful medicine." LEVY WILLIAMS.

A prominent business man of Hempstead, Texas, writes: "I have used your liniment. Previous to using it I was a great sufferer from Rheumatism and Neuralgia. I am pleased to say that now I am free from these complaints. I am sure I owe this to your liniment." J. H. Orme

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package.

For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with our children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison-marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simple refuse to accept any other. You Will Want This Save it!

Have you Rheumatism now? Did you ever have it? Anyhow you may, or some of your friends may. Better save this prescription. It comes from Dr. George Edmund Flood, the well-known specialist on Rheumatism, which is sufficient guarantee of its value. By permission of the doctor we publish for the benefit of our readers his prescription for Rheumatism. It is as follows:

Fluid Cascara Aromatic, half ounce. Concentrated Barkola, one ounce. Fluid Extract Priekly Ash Bark, half a drachm; Aromatic Elixir, four ounces.

Take one teaspoonful after each meal and before going to bed. Dr. Flood also strongly advises in connection with this prescription the drinking of large quantities of pure water. Any druggist will fill the prescription at a nominal cost or you may get the ingredients and mix at home.

Be very careful of your bowels when you have a cold. Nearly all other cough syrups are constipating, especially those containing opiate. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup moves the bowels—contains NO opiate. Sold by J. H. Orme.
