Tuesday afternoon when the 3:55 train arrived from the north, Marion's most distinguished citizen who was a passenger, was given a welcome in the way of an ovation the like of which is seldom seen, even in this grand old commonwealth famed the world over for hospitality and loyality. Monday when it first became known that Mr. James would reach home Tuesday afternoon the arrangements were begun and the fact given as much publicity as the short time would permit, but from all sections of the county the people came, in wagons, carriages, buggies and on horse back and some on foot to do honor to the man from Marion who had declined the vice Presidential nomination "the man from old Crittenden who had seconded the nomination of Bryan." the man from the Gibraltor district who was "the biggest man in the Democratic National convention" the man from Kentucky who as Bryan's spokesman at Denver and who divided the honors there with the great Commoner himself—the man—who to all Marion is Kentucky, and he no longer belongs affectionately called Ollie and who to us is still a great big boy - big

Mr. James was escorted to the carriage in waiting and preceded by the banner carriers and Marion Silver Cornet Band and all the crowd, was escorted to the court square. The disappointment of the vast audience was keen when it became known that the congressman's wife did not accompany him home but remained in Evansville to visit a sister.

Justice, they say, is blind, and she certainly is in many cases. She is not only blind, but deaf and dumb. attorney thinks more of winning his case than he does of justice. His reputation depends upon the number he can convict, and in many cases he receives compensation on that basis. He is much more interested in conviction than in getting justice. The law is supposed to make the prosesuting attorney an officer of the court, and his duty is to see that absolute ustice is done both state and defendant, but in nine cases out of ten. It is usually the small offender that gets the limit, and it is a lamentable past that the big offenders has more immunity every year, and therefore get bolder in their work of plunder-

Occasionally some Judge imposes a fine on a trust and it is heralded throughout the length and breadth of the land; in a few months some other court strikes the fine from the books and the trust goes free. These things are daily making anarchists, and night riders out of once law abiding honest men.

UNITY AND ACTION.

Unity and action will bring to the complaint. I am bound to look upon farmer prosperity and power. Ever selves into civilized societies a few union label and the trade tag of the lege of belonging. Are you one of in taxing the majority for the benefit | States. of the few. It is easy to get a few men to unite, especially when they are to receive special privileges or large profits, and it is hard to get the people who pay a little too much here or lose a little too much there to unite in order to keep from being robbed of these littles. It is, however, the union of these small amounts that has caused the great fortunes of all times and the ability of the few to tax the many. When we lose few cents a bushel on wheat, or a cent or two a pound on cattle or hogs, or three or five cents a pound on tobacco, or one cent a quart on milk. we do not realize that the cent or two is just the difference between a profit and a loss for our labor. The fellow who buys our product for speculation has figured out the actual cost of production and the expense of exchange and knows that the profit lies between the actual cost and the amount the consumer is willing to pay, and he knows that united action on the part of the speculators as against individual inaction on the part of the producers will compel the farmers to sell their stuff at any price fixed by the speculators. The Bath County World, of Sharpsburg, Ky., puts the situation in about as few words as is possible. It says:

Vancouver, Wash., J. Editor RECORD-PRESS.

Dear Editor :--- I received a of your paper and was certainly glad to get to read the old paper from home once more.

I am now at Vancouver, Washington, eight miles from Portland, Oregon on the north bank of the Columbia river.

I enlisted in the U. S. Army at P.inceton, Kentucky., March 7th, 1908 and was sworn in at Jefferson Barracks, Missouri, March 14th,

I can't say I liked Jefferson Barrabks so well, although it is a nice post and close to a large city, and life is very monotonous there.

I stayed there drilling for the duties of a soldier until June 6th, when I with one hundred others left for this place, where we arrived June 11th. Of course we saw some interesting scenery for the Missouri river esting scenery for the Missouri river esting scenery for the Missouri river was overflowing the lowlands of
