PRESIDENT WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT

TAFT AND SHERMAN ARE INAUGURATED

NEW PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT TAKE OATH OF OFFICE.

WASHINGTON THROGGED

Details of the Notable Ceremonies in the Senate Chamber and on the East Portico of the Capitol.

BY EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington, Mar. 4.—William Howard Taft is now president of the United States and James Schoolcraft Sherman is vice-president.

President Taft took the oath of office shortly after noon on the east portico of the Capitol in the presence of one of the greatest throngs that ever gathered in the chief legislative city of the nation to witness the ceremonies attending the inauguration of a chief executive. The vice-president took the oath of office in the senate chamber immediately preceding the administering of the oath to the president-elect.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Taft has been in civil pursuits all his life, the military display which accompanied his induction into office was greater than that which marked the inauguration of the militant rough rider president, Theodore Roosevelt, four years ago. Washington was filled with civilians and soldiers and sailors. From the earliest daylight hour the streets were crowded with people. Pennsylvania avenue, the center of all things in Washington, was packed with the crowds, every man and woman in which sought, by an early arrival, to obtain a place of vantage from which the great procession, which for hours passed through the broad thoroughfare, could be seen. Every window and every balcony overlooking the avenue had been preempted for weeks by persons willing to pay great sums to get an unobstructed view of the passing marchers.

Decorations Are Beautiful.

The scene was one of constant movement and constant color. The red, white and blue floated from every flagpole and fell as drapery from every cornice. The inaugural committee succeeded this year in outdoing all previous efforts at decorative effect.

In the line of march leading from the Capitol up Pennsylvania avenue, past the great treasury building and White House there were nearly 4,000 regular troops and twice as many members of the National Guard of the different states and independent military organizations. The civic features of the parade were many. The trades, the professions and all kinds of business activities were represented by thousands of persons who came to Washington to do honor to the country's new civil chief.

Early in the day the president-elect met the outgoing president in the White House. About an hour before noon, the congressional committee of arrangements, consisting of Senators Knox, Lodge and Bacon, and Representatives Burke, Young and Gaines, arrived at the executive mansion and informed the president and the president-elect that congress was in readiness for the ceremonies of the actual inauguration. At half-past eleven President Roosevelt and President-to-be Taft entered a carriage. Mr. Taft sitting at the left of Mr. Roosevelt. In the carriages immediately following were the members of the congressional committee of arrangements. A body of veterans of the civil and Spanish wars acted as an escort for the outgoing and the incoming chiefs of state.

All the morning long the crowds had been waiting the coming of the two officials. The cheering was constant and the names of both Roosevelt and Taft were intermingled with the shouts of applause. The drive to the Capitol was made slowly in order that the veterans acting as a guard of honor might not be distanced. The president and the president-

VOTERS OF CALDWELL TO NAME CANDIDATE

Pursuant to a call made by W. E. Bourland, who by the party law is chairman of the Democratic Committee of the Fourth Senatorial District, the said committee met at Marion, Ky., at 1 o'clock p. m., Saturday March 6th., 1909.

The Committee was called to order by the Chairman W. E. Bourland, of Webster county and he was unanimously elected by the committee as permanent chairman. C. S. Nunn, of Crittenden county, was elected Secretary.

On motion the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the Democratic party of the Fourth Senatorial District of Kentucky has adopted the custom of rotating the nomination to the several counties composing the district, and it now being the time for Caldwell county to furnish the said Democratic nominee, therefore be it resolved by the Democratic Committee of the said Fourth Senatorial District of Kentucky, that the Democratic Committee of Caldwell county be and is hereby empowered and authorized to call such Convention or Primary election as shall seem best to said County Committee for the purpose of selecting a candidate for the Democratic nominee for the said Office of State Senator for said Fourth Senatorial District, and to certify said choice of said county to the chairman of said Fourth Senatorial Committee, after which said Senatorial Committee shall be called to meet and ratify said nomination by said County of Caldwell, and declare the nominee for said office.

Chairman 4th. Senatorial Dis. Com.

Attest:
C. S. NUNN, Secretary

May Be A Candidate.

J. R. Catlett, of the Princeton Leader, will probably seek the nomination for State Senator from the Fourth Senatorial district, composed of the counties of Crittenden, Caldwell and Webster. Mr. Catlett is eminently qualified for the position as he has had several terms experience as an official of the State Senate. He is a staunch Democrat and would make the district a most creditable representative. In observance of a time honored custom, it is now Caldwell's time to furnish the Senator.—Providence Enterprise.

West Kentucky Coal Company's Improvements.

The West Kentucky Coal Company will in the near future build seventy-five additional barges at Paducah. Their reason for constructing them at Paducah being that fleet lands, dry docks, etc., and located at that point, as well as minor economical reasons that offset the Caseyville project. Barges are not under contract and we are not yet in position to advise the amount of money involved, but it will give employment to quite an amount of labor. They are also considering the opening of two additional mines in Webster county. They have as yet made no final decisions in these improvements and no contracts have been let. What the expenditure will be for these improvements the company does not know at present.—Sturgis News Democrat.

INFLUENCE OF FARMERS' ASSOCIATION

English Writers Admit The Increased Cost of Raw Material, — And Accurately Ascribed The ADVANCE IN PRICE TO FARMERS' Co-operation.

For some weeks past the following clipping has been awaiting reproduction. It is from the London Times, financial and commercial supplement, and is a fragment from a very comprehensive article discussing tobacco commerce in general, with special comment on and consideration for, farmer's co-operative associations and the significance of the same affecting tobacco barter in Great Britain.

To my mind the disclosures revealed in the following similar articles recently, from time to time, reproduced herein, mirroring the English estimate of the situation, supply to Kentucky Association men matter of the utmost comfort and encouragement.

For note,

First—English writers at length admit the increased cost of raw material, and accurately ascribe the advance in price to farmer's co-operation.

Second—English writers are persuaded increased cost of raw material, must be reckoned with by English manufacturers for the future—wherefore:

Third—English writers point out to English manufacturers the cost of raw material must be passed on to consumer, or Fourth—English writers advocate a reduction in English duties.

Slow to learn, as are all. Radical Conservatives, English writers after five years' attitude of supercilious incredulity inferentially concede the theory of co-operation is unassailable; and, what is far more comfort and encouragement concede that that theory has been put into successful practice by the Stemming District Tobacco Association.

And following the advice of English economist writers, English manufacturers are rapidly adapting their business to the new order of things, as is evidenced by their dealings with Kentucky farmers through co-operative associations.

Here is the excerpt:

"The true economic solution of the difficulty would be to pass the burden of the increased cost of raw material on to the consumer, but a ready stated, it is accepted by the great majority of the trade that the working man must have his tobacco at 3d. per oz. whatever may be the cost. In the event of the further advance of the wholesale price of the manufactured article, however, it would appear to be imperative that price should be raised to the consumer.

INFLUENCE OF FARMERS' ASSOCIATION

"So far as can be seen at present, there is little prospect of an early fall in the price of tobacco leaf. While the crops of tobacco have of late years been the small side, the more immediate cause of the present high level of values is undoubtedly the action of growers in forming themselves into associations to pool their crop and hold it for higher prices. The difficulty experienced the outset of getting many farmers to join the associations encouraged buyers in a skeptical attitude, but the effective, though somewhat forcible, methods of handling the recalcitrants adopted speedily changed the aspect of affairs. From time to time whispers have

STORM PLAYED HAVOC IN THE EAST

Thousands Prevented From Reaching Washington—Twenty-two Trains Stalled

PEOPLE FROM NORTH WAITED HOURS FOR TRAINS

Baltimore, Md., March 4.—The storm of last night and early today seemed to center in Baltimore and vicinity. Train service between Baltimore and Washington and Havre de Grace, on the south side of the Susquehanna river, was crippled so that great crowds of persons from Philadelphia, New York and other northern cities were stranded at railroad stations unable to proceed to the capital and witness the inauguration ceremonies and parade.

At 5 a. m., twenty-two trains were stalled between Baltimore and Washington. As soon as the railroad and telegraph and telephone people realized the havoc wrought they got their wrecking gangs to work with the result that by noon the tracks were cleared up enough to permit slow traffic.

Arms of telegraph and telephone poles were placed in an upright position along the lines of the railroads and a single emergency wire was strung up in an effort to get the city in communication with the outside world.

The people at the stations from the north, who were unable to proceed to Washington, waited for hours for trains to take them to their homes.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S STRONG ADDRESS

INAUGURAL DELIVERED BY NATION'S NEW CHIEF EXECUTIVE.

EXTRA SESSION IS PROMISED

Congress Will Meet March 15 to Take Up Tariff Revision—Adequate Army and Navy Urged—Panama Canal Heartily Approved—Southern Race Problem and Labor Legislation Discussed.

Washington, Mar. 4. — President Taft, having been sworn in as chief executive of the nation, delivered an inaugural address that was listened to with great interest. In part it was as follows:

My Fellow Citizens: Any one who takes the oath I have just taken must feel a heavy weight of responsibility. If not, he has no conception of the powers and duties of the office upon which he is about to enter, or he is lacking in a proper sense of the obligation which the oath imposes.

The office of an inaugural address is to give a summary outline of the main policies of the new administration, so far as they can be anticipated. I have had the honor to be one of the advisers of my distinguished predecessor, and as such, to hold up his hands in the reforms he has initiated. I should be untrue to myself, to my promises and to the declaration of the party platform upon which I am elected to office, if I did not make the maintenance and enforcement of those reforms a most important feature of my administration. They were directed to the suppression of the lawlessness and abuses of power of the great combinations of capital invested in railroads and in industrial enterprises carrying on interstate commerce. The steps which my predecessor took and the legislation passed on his recommendation have accomplished much, have caused a general halt in the vicious policies which created popular alarm, and have brought about in the business affected a much higher regard for existing law.

More Legislation Needed.

To render the reforms lasting, however, and to secure at the same time freedom from alarm on the part of those pursuing proper and progressive business methods, further legislative and executive action are needed. Relief of the railroads from certain restrictions of the anti-trust law has been urged by my predecessor and will be urged by me. On the other hand, the administration is pledged to legislation looking to a proper federal supervision and restriction to prevent excessive issues of bonds and stocks by companies owning and operating interstate commerce railroads.

Then, too, a reorganization of the department of justice, of the bureau of corporations in the department of commerce and labor, and of the interstate commerce commission, looking to effective co-operation of these agencies, is needed to secure a more rapid and certain enforcement of the laws affecting interstate railroads and industrial combinations.

I hope to be able to submit at the first regular session of the incoming congress, in December next, definite suggestions in respect to the needed amendments to the anti-trust and the interstate commerce laws, and the changes required in the executive departments concerned in their enforcement.

Promises Extra Session.

A matter of most pressing importance is the revision of the tariff. In accordance with the promises of the platform upon which I was elected, I shall call congress into extra session, to meet on the fifteenth day of March, in order that consideration may be at once given to a bill revising the Dingley act. This should secure an adequate revenue and adjust the duties in such a manner as to afford to labor and to all industries in this country, whether of the farm, mine or factory, protection by tariff equal to the difference between the cost of production abroad and the cost of production here, and have a provision which shall put into force, upon executive determination of certain facts, a higher or maximum tariff against those countries whose trade policy toward us equitably requires such discrimination. It is thought that there has been such a chance in conditions since the enactment of the Dingley act, drafted on a similarly protective principle, that the measure of the tariff above stated will permit the reduction of rates in certain schedules and will require the advancement of few, if any.

Money Needed for Big Projects.

The putting into force of laws which shall secure the conservation of our resources, so far as they may be within the jurisdiction of the federal government, including the most imporelect were escorted by the congressional committee into the senate wing of the capitol through the historic doorway of bronze in the east side of the building. They went directly to the president's room where they remained until the committee of arrangements came to them and announced that the senate was in readiness to receive them. Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft then walked to the senate chamber, taking the seats reserved for them in the first row directly in front of the vice-president's desk.

Vice-President Fairbanks and Vice-President-elect Sherman drove to the capitol together and went directly to the room of the vice-president. In turn they were escorted to the senate chamber as the two chief figures of the occasion had been escorted before them. Mr. Fairbanks went at once to his place as presiding officer of the senate and Mr. Sherman took a seat at the left of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft, just across the center aisle of the chamber.

Mr. Sherman Takes the Oath.

Edward Everett Hale, the veteran chaplain of the senate and one of the most picturesque figures in the United States, offered prayer. Immediately following the prayer, the oath of office was administered to Mr. Sherman by the outgoing vice-president, Mr. Fairbanks. The new vice-president next delivered his inaugural address, and then at once, as the first duty of his new office, he administered the oath to the newly elected senators of the United States.

Present on the floor of the senate chamber were many former senators of the United States, who have the privileges of the senate at all times owing to the fact of once having held membership in the body. The speaker and the entire house of representatives were present and with them were the chief officials of the district government, the chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court, the heads of the executive departments of the government, the governors of the states and territories, the chief of staff of the army, and his aides, Admiral Dewey of the navy and his aides, and several veteran officers of the army and navy who, having received the thanks of congress for gallantry in battle, are entitled to the privileges of entering either branch of congress during session time. Among them was Gen. O. O. Howard.

Procession Through Rotunda.

As soon as the senators-elect had been sworn into office, a procession was formed to march from the senate chamber through the rotunda of the capitol to the platform on the center portico of the east side of the building. The sergeant-at-arms of the senate and his fellow officials of the house of representatives led the way. They were followed in order by the marshals of the District of Columbia and of the supreme court; the chief justice and associate justices; the congressional committee of arrangements; the president and the president-elect; the ambassadors to the United States; the ministers plenipotentiary; the vice-president and the secretary of the senate; the senators and ex-senators; the speaker of the house and the representatives in congress.

The platform upon which President Taft took the oath of office extended well out from the portico until it overhung the broad plaza to the east, where directly to the front were gathered the cadets from the military and naval academies, to the rear of whom were the other military bodies.

President Taft Inaugurated.

The white-haired chief justice of the United States, Melville W. Fuller, administered the oath of office to Mr. Taft, who, when he had taken it, bent and kissed the Bible held in the hand of his country's chief jurist. Immediately following the taking of the oath, President Taft delivered his inaugural address.

The president's speech frequently was interrupted by applause and at its close the great assembly broke into cheers. The president was congratulated by those who were close to him, including the retiring president and the other chief officials. President Taft then entered a carriage which was at once surrounded by the members of the Black Horse troop of Cleveland, O., which formed the special guard of honor. The president's carriage was driven north and then down the hill by the senate wing of the capitol until Pennsylvania avenue was reached. From that point the president drove slowly to the White House along the thoroughfare filled, save for its center, with crowds of his cheering fellow citizens.

INDIGESTION.

Misery From Your Disordered Stomach Goes in Five Minutes.

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of a case of Indigestion or Dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach if you will occasionally take a little Diapiesin after eating. Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes Belching, dizziness, a feeling of fullness after eating, Nausea. Indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), Bloatingness, Heartburn, Water brash, Pain in stomach and intestines or symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapiesin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach can't. Each triangle will digest all the food you can eat and leaves nothing to ferment or sour.

Get a large 50 cent case of Pape's Diapiesin from your druggist and start taking today and by tomorrow you will actually brag about your healthy, strong stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and Gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives or any other assistance.

Donald is fond of Bible stories. His aunt was relating to him the story of Moses in the basket of bulrushes, when he earnestly inquired: "Did he ever grow to be a man?" "Yes," he was told. HIGH-O-ME.

That's the Way to Pronounce Hyomel, the Money-Back Catarrh Cure.

As doubt exists in the minds of many readers of the Crittenden Press let us say that the above is the proper pronunciation of America's most wonderful catarrh cure. Haynes & Taylor are the agents for Hyomel in Marion and they will sell you an inhaler, a bottle of Hyomel, and full instructions for use, for only $1.00.

And if it fails to cure acute or chronic catarrh, asthma, bronchitis, croup, hay fever or coughs and colds, they will give you your money back. The person who suffers from catarrh after such an offer as that, must like to snuffle, spit and wheeze, and be generally disgusting.

Read what Mr. G. F. Lowe says: "I have used Hyomel for a case of nasal catarrh which had bothered me for a long time. I can say that Hyomel killed the germs of the disease and gave me the much sought and needed relief. From this experience I know Hyomel to be a reliable remedy, and I give it the praise and recommendation that it deserves."—G. F. Lowe, R. F. D. No. 7, Allegan, Mich., September 13, 1908.

THE SISTER WAS GRATEFUL.
"Little Gladys, age four, was being taught to express thanks when the occasion demanded. When she did not do so some member of the family would ask, 'What do you say, Gladys?' which would bring forth the desired results. One evening Gladys and the young man who is to marry her sister were in the parlor. 'Well, Gladys,' said the young man, 'I guess I'll marry Bertie and take her away. What do you say?' 'Thank you,' replied the little girl politely.—The March Delineator.

INAUGURAL PARADE FINEST EVER SEEN

Regulars, Sailors and Marines from Atlantic Fleet, National Guardsmen and Scores of Civic Organizations.

BY EDWARD B. CLARK.
Washington, March 4.—Seldom has the national capital witnessed a parade that equaled in extent and magnificence that which followed President William H. Taft from the capitol to the White House immediately after his inauguration. As soon as the president's carriage started up Pennsylvania avenue the parade was formed. The details of the military part of the procession were arranged by Brig. Gen. John A. Johnson, chief of staff to Gen. Bell, and by Maj. Samuel D. Sturgis, who acted as adjutant general. The guard of honor attending President Taft was followed immediately by a mounted police guard and a full military band. Then came Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of the general staff of the United States army, who was the parade's grand marshal, and his staff. The military division had the right of way after the president's escort. At its head were the West Point cadets in their gray uniforms, marching with the perfect alignment for which the military students are famed. Behind the striding soldiers came the striding sailors, the midshipmen from the naval academy at Annapolis. The cadets of both schools were cheered, as they always have been cheered at every inaugural parade in which they have taken part. Immediately behind the future officers of army and navy came the regulars of the military service, veterans most of them, who had seen service in Cuba and in the Philippines, and, many of them, upon the plains in the days before the Indians had left the war path for the ways of peace.

In the line were the 2,600 men who had formed the Cuban army of pacification, and who had just left that island in pursuance of the policy of the United States to withdraw its troops as soon as the Cubans gave evidence that they were capable of governing themselves. In the force of regulars were cavalrymen, infantrymen and artillerymen, the yellow, the blue and the red of the service lending their colors, and something of the pomp and circumstance of war, time to the parade.

In the waters of Hampton roads for ten days the fleet which had made its the fleet steamed around the Chesapeake. The battleships, the cruisers, the destroyers and the torpedo boats were drawn up in line to give the sea service an adequate representation in the inaugural ceremonies. There were 1,000 sailors from the Connecticut, the Illinois and the other ships of Sperry's fleet in the parade. The marines followed the sailors. There was a full regiment of them, men from that branch of the service which has taken the initiative in many of the beyond-the-sea troubles in which the forces of this country have been engaged—in Korea in the late '60s, in Cuba in 1898, and in China in 1900.

Regulars and Sailors.

The regulars of the government service led the way, their conceder right. Behind them came the men who, in time of war, form first the reserve force, and later when brought into real soldiers' shape, the backbone force of the government's army—the National Guardsmen of the states of the union. The Guardsmen showed by their bearing, their marching, and their evolutions the result of the deeper interest which in recent years has been taken in the military service by the civilian soldiers. The regulars and the guardsmen are closer together to-day in sympathy and in efficiency than ever they were before. The appearance of the state soldiers in the inaugural parade proved the truth of what many army officers have held recently—that to-day it is but a step from the discipline and the morale of the militia to the discipline and morale of the regulars.

Scores of Clubs in Line.

In the rear of the military division came the civic organizations. There were in line more than 100 clubs and political associations from all parts of the country, nearly all of them wearing some unique and distinguishing uniform. The American club of Pittsburgh acted as personal escort to Thomas P. Morgan, chief of the civic organizations' committee.

Among the organizations which had a place in the parade were several from President Taft's state—Ohio. Among these were the Citizens' Taft club and the Stamina Republican club of Cincinnati, Uniform Rank Knights of Macabees, Cleveland; the Republican Give club and the Buckeye Republican club of Columbus.

Veteran Organizations.

As a special honor to Vice-President James S. Sherman came the Conkling Unconditionals, a veteran marching political club, and the Sherman Scouts, both of Utica, N. Y., the home town of Mr. Sherman. New York being Mr. Roosevelt's state, as it is that of Mr. Sherman, contributed an unusual number of marching clubs to the ceremonies of the inauguration. Mr. Roosevelt's neighbors from Long Island paraded 250 strong. There were three Republican clubs from New York city, a political organization of colored men, from Brooklyn, and several other political associations from different cities of the state.

Middle West Well Represented.

Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kentucky, Minnesota and other states of the middle west and of the south were represented by associations of citizens, political clubs, and by prominent state, county and municipal officials. Many veterans of the civil war who served in the ranks of the union or in the ranks of the confederacy were present in the parade. There were more former confederates in line than were present at any previous inauguration of a Republican president.

Luncheon in White House.

As soon as President Taft reached the White House he entered and was greeted by the members of a specially invited presidential party, including the governors of several states, prominent federal officials, personal friends of the president and the members of the presidential family to a remote degree of relationship. A light luncheon was served in the great state dining-room, and as soon as it was over the president walked across the grounds of the White House to the presidential reviewing stand built on the south side of the avenue directly in front of the main entrance to the White House and facing Lafayette square. The president took his place on the reviewing stand, and with him were the members of the presidential party. Vice-President Sherman stood on the immediate right of the chief executive. Across Pennsylvania avenue directly in front of the president was a huge stand for spectators occupying the entire length of one side of Lafayette square.

Parade Passes in Review.

As soon as the president appeared on the reviewing stand the leading band of the post band which had been invited to accompany the parade of Mr. Taft, began to play "March of the Chief." Gen. Bell gave the order to pass in review, and the great procession, having its head at the white house, moved forward to pass before the chief magistrate. As body after body of soldiers, sailors and civilians passed, they saluted and the president saluted in turn.

It took the procession three hours to pass the reviewing stand. It was a great sight, full of interest and color. Under the direction of the trained military chieftains who had given their time to the perfection of details, the parade passed quickly and in perfect form. When in front of the reviewing stand some of the civic marching clubs showed their proficiency in drill by performing evolutions. The regulars and National Guardsmen, however, swept by in perfect military precision. The parade was worthy of the occasion that called it into marching line.

AUSTIN'S SPECIALTY 1000 N. 2nd St., Room 5

tant work of saving and restoring our forests, and the general improvement of waterways, are all proper government functions which must involve large expenditure if properly performed. While some of them, like the reclamation of arid lands, are made to pay for themselves, others are of such an indirect benefit that this cannot be expected of them. A permanent improvement, like the Panama canal, should be treated as a distinct enterprise, and should be paid for by the proceeds of bonds, the issue of which will distribute its cost between the present and future generations in accordance with the benefits derived. It may well be submitted to the serious consideration of congress whether the deepening and control of the channel of a great river system, like that of the Ohio or the Mississippi, when definite and practical plans for the enterprise have been approved and determined upon, should not be provided for in the same way.

For Army and Navy.

Then, too, there are expenditures of government absolutely necessary if our country is to maintain its proper place among the nations of the world, and is to exercise its proper influence in defense of its own trade interests. In the maintenance of traditional American policy against the colonization of European monarchies in this hemisphere, and in the promotion of peace and international morality, I refer to the cost of maintaining a proper army, a proper navy and suitable fortifications upon the mainland of the United States and in its dependencies.

We should have an army so organized, and so officered, as to be capable in time of emergency in co-operation with the national militia, and under the provisions of a proper national volunteer law, rapidly to expand into a force sufficient to resist all probable invasion from abroad and to furnish a respectable expeditionary force. If necessary, in the maintenance of our traditional American policy which bears the name of President Monroe.

Our fortifications are yet in a state of only partial completeness and the number of men to man them is insufficient. What has been said of the army may be affirmed in even a more emphatic way of the navy. A modern navy cannot be improvised. It must be built and in existence when the emergency arises which calls for its use and operation.

Asiatic Immigration.

The admission of Asiatic immigrants who cannot be assimilated with our population has been made the subject either of prohibitory clauses in our treaties and statutes, or of strict administrative regulation secured by diplomatic negotiation. I sincerely hope that we may continue to minimize the evils likely to arise from such immigration without unnecessary friction and by mutual concessions between self-respecting governments. Meantime, we must take every precaution to prevent, or, failing that, to punish outbreaks of race feeling among our people against foreigners of whatever nationality who have by our grant a treaty right to pursue lawful business here and to be protected against lawless assault or injury.

Monetary Laws Need Change.

One of the reforms to be carried out during the incoming administration is a change of our monetary and banking laws, so as to secure greater elasticity in the forms of currency available for trade, and to prevent the limitations of law from operating to increase the embarrassment of a financial panic. The monetary commission lately appointed is giving full consideration to existing conditions and to all proposed remedies, and will doubtless suggest one that will meet the requirements of business and of public interest. We may hope that the report will embody neither the narrow view of those who believe that the sole purpose of the new system should be to secure a large return on banking capital or of those who would have greater expansion of currency with little regard to provisions for its immediate redemption or ultimate security. There is no subject of economic discussion so intricate and so likely to evoke different views and dogmatic statements as this one. The commission in studying the general influence of currency on business and of business on currency, have wisely extended their investigation in European banking and monetary methods.

The incoming congress should promptly fulfill the promise of the Republican platform and pass a re- pealed savings bank bill. It will not be unwise or excessive paternalism.

The promise to repay by the government will furnish an inducement to savings deposits which private enterprise cannot supply, and at such a low rate of interest as not to withdraw custom from existing banks. It will substantially increase the funds available for investment as capital in useful enterprises. It will furnish the absolute security which makes the proposed scheme of government guaranty of deposits so alluring without its perilous results.

Panama Canal All Right.

The Panama canal will have a most important bearing upon the trade between the eastern and the far western sections of our country, and will greatly increase the facilities for transportation between the eastern and western seaboard, and may possibly revolutionize the transcontinental rates with respect to bulky merchandise. It will also have a most beneficial effect to increase the trade between the eastern seaboard of the United States and the western coast of South America, and, indeed, with some of the important ports on the east coast of South America reached by rail from the west coast. The work on the canal is making most satisfactory progress. The type of the canal as a lock canal was fixed by congress after a full consideration of the conflicting reports of the majority and minority of the consulting board, and after the recommendation of the war department and the executive upon those reports. Recent suggestion that something had occurred on the isthmus to make the lock type of the canal less feasible than it was supposed to be when the reports were made and the policy determined on, led to a visit to the isthmus of a board of competent engineers to examine the Gatun dam and locks which are the key of the lock type. The report of that board shows that nothing has occurred in the nature of newly revealed evidence which should change the views once formed in the original discussion. The construction will go on under a most effective organization controlled by Col. Goethals and his fellow army engineers associated with him, and will certainly be completed early in the next administration, if not before.

South and the Negroes.

I look forward with hope to increasing the already good feeling between the south and the other sections of the country. My chief purpose is not to effect a change in the electoral vote of the southern states. That is a secondary consideration. What I look forward to is an increase in the tolerance of political views of all kinds and their advocacy throughout the south, and the existence of a respectable political opposition in every state; even more than this, to an increased feeling on the part of all the people in the south that this government is their government, and that its officers in their states are their officers.

The consideration of this question cannot, however, be complete and full without reference to the negro race, its progress and its present condition. The 13th amendment secured them freedom; the 14th amendment due process of law, protection of property and the pursuit of happiness; and the 15th amendment attempted to secure the negro against any deprivation of the privilege to vote, because he was a negro. The 13th and 14th amendments have been generally enforced and have secured the objects for which they were intended. While the 15th amendment has not been generally observed in the past it ought to be observed, and the tendency of southern legislation to-day is toward the enactment of electoral qualifications which shall square with that amendment.

Laws for Labor's Benefit.

There is one other matter to which I shall refer. It was made the subject of great controversy during the election and calls for at least a passing reference now. My distinguished predecessor has given much attention to the cause of labor, with whose struggle for better things he has shown the sincerest sympathy. At his instance, congress has passed the bill fixing the liability of interstate carriers to their employees for injury sustained in the course of employment, abolishing the rule of fellow-servant and the common law rule as to contributory negligence. It has also passed a law fixing the compensation of government employees for injuries sustained in the employ of the government through the negligence of the superior. It also passed a model child labor law for the District of Columbia. In previous administrations an arbitrary law for interstate commerce, and laws for the application of safety devices to save the lives and limbs of employees of interstate railroads had been passed. Additional legislation of this kind was passed by the outgoing congress.

I wish to say that in so far as I can, I hope to promote the enactment of further legislation of this character. I am strongly convinced that the government should make itself as responsible to employees injured in its employ as an interstate railway corporation is made responsible by federal law to its employees.

Injunctions in Labor Disputes.

Another labor question has arisen which has awakened the most excited discussion. That is in respect to the power of the federal courts to issue injunctions in industrial disputes. As to that, my convictions are fixed. Take away from the courts, if it could be taken away, the power to issue injunctions in labor disputes, and it would create a privileged class among the laborers and save the lawless among their number from a most needed remedy available to all men for the protection of their business against lawless invasion. The proposition that business is not a property or pecuniary right which can be protected by equitable injunction is not only without foundation in precedent or reason. The proposition is usually linked with one to make the secondary boycott lawful. Such a proposition is at variance with the American instinct and will find no support in my judgment when submitted to the American people. The secondary boycott is an instrument of tyranny, and ought not to be made legitimate.

The issuing of a temporary restraining order without notice has in several instances been abused by its inconsiderate exercise, and to remedy this, the platform upon which I was elected recommends the formulation of a statute of the conditions under which such a temporary restraining order ought to issue. A statute can and ought to be framed to embody the best modern practice, and can bring the subject so closely to the attention of the court as to make abuses of the process unlikely in the future.

DISCIPLINE.

To wield supreme power is an exalted prerogative. He who appoints thereto expects capability, and he who receives it has honor; but let him remember also that a lofty position badly filled is a greater dishonor than none at all. To govern well, happily and easily, you must first of all establish your sovereignty, and to maintain this good government you must maintain this sovereignty. To establish and continue the exercise of this power by brute force alone, or cruelty, is tyranny, and is as unwise as it is wicked, for it is certain to create in the children a disposition to rebel against your authority on the first occasion that offers hope of success. This is universally true, whether the subject be a child, a heathen or a grown man. The exercise of control is easy if you have secured the love, esteem and confidence of your subject, and this extinguishes all disposition to revolt. The best means of securing this, is therefore, of greatest importance. Personal experience is worthless, unless we remember and utilize it. The rod hurt me and made me afraid, when I was a child, but it never won my love or esteem.

The pious lectures of my little teacher, Miss Grace Machen, who has long since gone to her reward, such as "I do this because I love you," "I do this for your good and is my duty," were very disagreeably mysterious to me, both to my young mind and my body. I did not understand them then and do not believe them now. I used to wish that I had no good, she no duty, and that she either did not love me or had a more agreeable way of letting me know it. But she kept me straight, certainly she did. I did not learn much, for I had only one eye for my book, as the other had to keep a lookout for her. She was nervous—we will call it that now. I was a boy and could not help it. She often lost her temper and I as one found it. She died, as I have before stated. She rested from her labors, and so did I, and her works followed me no more. But I still remember her, though forty years ago, with all her faults (and we all have them) she made many lasting impressions on me—almost immortalized herself in my mind and on my well checked body.

The next school I attended was taught by Miss Mollie Rice. She was a fair blonde, with a sweet bright face, and a sweet, Christian disposition. She had learned in another school, and was learning still, though we know it not. We all expected another attack, and were intrenched against "Our good and her duty and love." Three dreadful foes with soft and pious name. We were mistaken in her tactics. She advanced and captured us all without a shot or loss of life, and gained with our full consent the more sovereign's seat. How? She patted our curly heads. Helped us with our sums. Leaned over us, held our rough, naughty hands in hers and shaped the difficult pot hooks; then praised and gave us all the credit. She strolled the wood with us, explained the wild flower's curious make-up, helped us build our swings and sat on her chair at the tree-root and watched our vigorous game of ball. Oh, how we learned! Oh, how dearly we loved her! We loved to go to school great and good girl! The first ripe peach or the sweetest and best apple was hers, of course it was, for she understood sovereignty, and taught me what I shall repeat to you on these pages.

The theory of letting pupils do as they may list, in order to gain good will, is foolish, and no government at all. But to rule thoroughly, and with full and free consent of the ruled, leading always upward, is true government. Good will you must have, and having it, see that it is wisely used.

If you claim to be a sovereign, see that you are indeed such. Superior in all capability you need not publish it, for if it is true, others and everything will soon find it out, and if it is not true, whatever your pretensions and declarations, they will not believe it. Everything is at first afraid of you, but it is not fear you want, but esteem, respect and confidence. Make yourself worthy and you will gain all. Do not debase yourself to win esteem, for this is foolish and contradictory. Through the vast range of your mighty realm, from your peer in every respect, down to the dog in your yard, or the pig in his sty, be good to every creature and they will love to serve you.

Be good to everything and everybody for you can afford to do so. Nothing except your pupils are your pupils in God's account nor should it be in your own. You cannot afford to tarnish your title by ignorance or unworthiness of any kind, for the meanness of your pupils will see it and you cannot conceal it from them. They will and should despise you, for it is a degradation to have a mean and contemptible master. There is more real honor in being a great and good man's faithful servant, than in being the debased pupil of a corrupt and mean teacher. Let us, fellow teachers, do all we can to control the boys and girls of our schools in ways that will make them see the real value of life and the worth of their minds to this great world of ours. If we do this, we will be rewarded, if not by the sweet by and by. For He who crowned us with sovereign power will search our hearts and lives and all our ways, and His rewards are rich, and His benedictions great.

This Town Has Its Share of Dread Disease, Which is Said to Yield to Recipe.

To relieve the worst forms of Rheumatism, take a teaspoonful of forms of bladder and urinary meal and at bedtime.

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

These harmless ingredients can be obtained from our home druggists, and are easily mixed by shaking them well in a bottle. Relief is generally felt from the first few doses.

This prescription forces the clogged-up, inactive kidneys to filter and strain from the blood the poisonous waste matter and uric acid, which causes Rheumatism.

As Rheumatism is not only the most painful and torturous disease, but dangerous to life, this simple recipe will no doubt be greatly valued by many sufferers here at home, who should at once prepare the mixture to get this relief.

It is said that a person who would take this prescription regularly, a dose or two daily, or even a few times a week, would never have serious Kidney or Urinary disorders or Rheumatism.

Cut this out and preserve it. Good Rheumatism prescriptions which really relieve are scarce, indeed, and when you need it, you want it badly.

"THE MOST WONDERFUL WOMAN IN AMERICA."

(From Hampton's Magazine for March.)

"The most wonderful woman in America" Wu Ting Fang called her. Why? Possibly because, though a woman, she operates a famous anvil factory. Mrs. Clark Fisher, of Trenton, New Jersey, came into active management of the Fisher and Norris Anvil Works two years prior to her husband's death. He, having become incapacitated by illness, invested his wife with the power of attorney, thus enabling her to transact the entire business. After Mr. Fisher's death, seven years ago, she assumed the full responsibilities, and has made a success.

Wu Ting Fang and Mrs. Fisher met a year ago at the dinner of the National Association of Manufacturers in New York. Mrs. Fisher, by the way, being the only woman representative. The Chinese Minister learned of Mrs. Fisher's business sagacity and of her brilliant achievements in the manufacturing world, and when he returned to Washington after the banquet made further inquiry concerning her. Later, in writing to a friend, he praised her as "the most wonderful woman in the world."

The Mrs. Fisher of luncheons and drawing-rooms and the Mrs. Fisher of the foundry are two utterly different persons. Her men swear by their "boss." Her troubles are theirs, and vice versa. When the management of the business first fell upon her shoulders Mrs. Fisher went into the factory and learned every detail of the work. In the beginning the men did not take her seriously, and whispered it about that she would not last long, but as she went on, making changes here and improvements there, they began to see that she knew her own business best. Their respect grew, and the respect grew, and the respect grew. Her acquaintances, men and women, became the more friendly were the relations between them. To the faithfulness of her employees Mrs. Fisher ascribes a large portion of the success which the business has attained.

SUE HAD TESTED THE OYSTER.

Dora, the pet of the household, was very fond of oysters, and after eating her lunch of oysters and crackers she thought of her dear mother busy at her sewing-machine. She selected a nice large oyster, put it in a plate and carried it to her mother, who, pleased with her little daughter's thoughtfulness, ate the oyster and said:

"It is most as good as my little girl."

"Yes," answered Dora, "I know it is good 'cause I licked it all the way from the kitchen."—The March Delineator.

Stomach Muscles In Old Age

How Old People May Retain or Restore Good Health

Usually the bowels are not so active in middle or advanced years as in youth. Just as the eyes grow dim, the skin wrinkled, the hair gray, the muscles flabby, so do the internal organs show their age if we could but see them.

However we sometimes find a person whose age is near the meted three-score and ten and yet his step is sprightly, his eye keen, his flesh firm, his appetite good and his bowels regular, and upon close questioning you will find a life's history of right-living, good food, keen appetite, perfect digestion and regular bowel action.

Regular bowels and proper digestion of the food we eat is absolutely necessary to the enjoyment of good health by old or young. If the readers of this article are interested, we are glad to tell them how they can restore good health and prolong their lives.

Step into a drug store and purchase a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It will cleanse the bowels of any waste matter that has clogged them up and restore to them strength and nerve force for regular natural daily action. It aids digestion by stimulating the stomach and digestive glands to a proper and sufficient secretion of the fluids necessary to perfect digestion. It acts on the liver and kidneys in a mild, quiet yet effective manner. Rev. A. J. Fletcher, of Rutherford, Tenn., is 80 years old, and it cured him of 60 years of dyspepsia. W. W. Sterling, Sioux City, Ia., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best medicine I ever used and I am 83 years old." B. P. Thompson, Shenandoah, Ia., says: "I suffered 15 years with dyspepsia and it cured me." It is certain and effective in the most obstinate old cases, and yet mild and safe for the most delicate woman or child. All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Pepsin Syrup Co., 304 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill., is glad to send a free sample to any one who has never used it and will give it a fair trial.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dowell and children are still seeing the sights in sunny southern California, and are enjoying themselves immensely. Mr. Dowell on a companion to a friend here says the thermometer registers 80 in the shade and it is still uncertain as to what is the highest thing in California, the mountains, the palm trees, the thermometer reading, or the hotel rates, but was rather of the opinion when last heard from, that the latter took the prize for altitude.

CHAPTER IV.

Pedro Rodrigues' den stood somewhat back from the narrow lane it fronted, flanked and concealed by taller buildings on either side. It was a ramshackle, wooden affair, sagging badly at one corner, the half dozen steps leading to the open door being only dimly lighted. As it was a well-known resort, frequented almost entirely by foreign seamen who would scarcely be safe on the streets such a night as this, it was no surprise to discover the taproom densely crowded with sailor-men, and to distinguish a voice singing loudly in vigorous English, to an accompaniment of glasses, pounding upon the round table. Indeed, a wild, Irishman, mobbed me loudly as I pressed aside the heavy curtain and stepped within. I cast a quick, comprehensive glance over the faces, upturned through the enveloping haze—Swedes and Finns

UNITED STATES INVADES CANADA!

Secretary Bacon's Big Coup—British Embassy, Canadian Government and Washington

IN WILD EXCITEMENT OVER MISTAKE

Washington, Feb. 23.—Secretary of State Robert Bacon has at last justified his appointment. By a brilliant stroke of diplomacy he not only effected an armed invasion of Canada but further secured the withdrawal of the expedition with the loss of a man or gun and without an open declaration of hostilities by the government of Great Britain.

At one time, however, it looked bad, and the combined efforts of the Wabash railroad, the General Staff, the Department of State, the British Embassy at Washington, the United States Embassy at London, the Canadian government, and the British Foreign office were required to avert disaster to the American army of invasion.

And at the end of the drama, similar to many others, enter Theodore Roosevelt.

Only Small Army.
To begin with, the army of invasion was weak numerically, consisting merely of two light batteries of artillery from Fort Russell at Cheyenne, Wyoming, without infantry or cavalry support.

The expedition into Canada was not in the original plans, but merely an incident to the battery's trip from their American post to the Philippines. These troops being among those affected by a recent general order which considerably strengthens the United States garrisons in the Orient. As a matter of fact, the entire army is just now being given what in New York police parlance would be called a "general shake-up."

The Quartermaster's Department, which has to do with the transportation of troops, was notified by the general staff last fall which troops were to go where.

Among other things it was called upon to provide transportation for two batteries of light artillery from Cheyenne to the transport Kilpatrick, which will sail from New York to the Philippines via Suez on Monday, February 15. Bids were advertised and the Union Pacific as the lowest bidder, was awarded this contract. The battery packed up, told its respective girls good-bye, prayed for war with Japan and was ready to move.

outed Through Canada.
In the meantime some astute individual connected with the War Department discovered that the Union Pacific had routed the train from Chicago to Buffalo through Detroit over the Wabash, and that the train bearing United States troops fully armed, uniformed and thrifling for gore, would pass through Canada from Windsor to Niagara. He called this fact to the attention of the Secretary of War, who wrote a nice letter to the State Department asking it to fix it up.

Enter now, Robert Bacon, with a business-like brevity, acquired at Broad and Wall streets, N. Y., where he was a partner of J. Pierpont Morgan, he sent Secretary Wright's note with a real nice note of his own to the British Foreign Office. He merely asked if the British Government would mind a few United States soldiers, a very few, he repeated, going across a very small corner of the British domain.

What happened in Downing street is not a matter of record. But it is unofficially reported that Downing street, shortly, severely and individually had a fit, and that the third Undersecretary of State, said to the fourth Deputy Keeper of the Seal, in a fit of anger: "My word, what an extraordinary proceeding!"

At any rate, Mrs. Bacon's little missive was dated January 9. About January 10 the State Department and utterly forgotten the incident, otherwise attention might have been called to the matter by the large mobs of silence which marked the succeeding days, as far as the British Foreign Office was concerned. The silence grew even noisier as the time wore on. In the meantime, the afore-said armed expedition went calmly about its business of going to the Philippines. The batteries were en-trained, and not until they were speeding across the fertile valleys of Michigan did the affair begin to climax.

Excitement in Canada.
When the advance freight manifest of the Wabash train was submitted to the Canadian collector of customs by the Detroit freight agent things began to happen.

"Guns," the collector said. "My word, that won't do at all. You can't import guns into Canada. Fawcett that!"

When he was further told that 200 odd United States soldiers went with the guns he was moved to order several brandy and sodas, and in un-British haste moved on the telegraph office and told Ottawa all about it.

What he reported to Ottawa and what Ottawa reported to Downing street will some day be known. It is not known now because it generally takes a British administrative officer several weeks longer than anyone else on earth to do business.

But in the meantime, the Wabash freight agent at Detroit wired his boss in Chicago:

"This copy layout of blue noses won't let passengers on our 2783 take their baggage into Canada. Fix it up," or words to that effect.

Then the wires and cable got into

"I recommend Cardui to all sick women," writes Mrs. A. C. Beaver of United, Tenn. "I suffered with headache, bearing-down, pains, feet swollen, pains in shoulders and many others. At last I took Cardui, have gained 20 pounds and have found it the best medicine I ever used for female troubles."

play. In twenty-four hours Secretary Bacon had it all fixed up. His expedition, safely through Canada, and to-day he proudly informed the War Department that his long-missing expedition had arrived in Jersey City.

Soldiers Bonded Through.
Investigation, however, reveals the fact that the troops went through Canada in bond, if that customs word may be used to cover the movements of animate objects. They were looked in their cars, and their guns were taken from them and put in a separate car and sealed with the "Broad Arrow" during the period of transit. It has since occurred that it would have been possible for the Union Pacific to route the troops via the Lake Shore, and the general rumormongers kicked up so much dust that it attracted the attention of Theodore Roosevelt, who has found an even more interesting "might have been."

The President in the course of his rides had noticed the four troops of the Thirteenth Cavalry at Fort Myer, across the Potomac from this city, were packing up for the Philippines, and were to leave this month via San Francisco. He was much interested.

When his attention was called by the various Secretaries to the Canadian invasion imbroglio it occurred to him that the department was moving troops to the Philippines in a rather expensive fashion—that is, by sending them from Cheyenne to Manila via New York, and from Washington, D. C., to Manila via San Francisco. He now wants to know why, and the War Department is scratching its official head for an answer. The real one is that, like the overlooking of the Constitution in the Knox case, somebody "just forgot."

The Family Physician

The best medicines in the world cannot take the place of the family physician. Consult him early when taken ill. If the trouble is with your throat, bronchial tubes, or lungs, ask him about taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Then take it or not, as he says.

We publish our formulae. We banish alcohol from our medicines. We urge you to consult your doctor.

Bilious attacks, sick-headaches, indigestion, constipation, dizzy spells—these are some of the results of an inactive liver. Ask your doctor if he endorses Ayer's Pills in these cases. The dose is small, one pill at bedtime.

YOU AND WE.

(By Alfred Austin.)
Alfred Austin, the English poet laureate, in sending the following poem to Hampton's Magazine for March, wrote the accompanying letter:

I trust the enclosed will be what you would like to have from me. It represents the universal feeling in this country and we all believe that it represents the feeling of the best and most influential citizens of your land. I am yours faithfully,

We only claim to hold our own;
For this we arm, for this we keep

LATEST STORM DOOR.

Electric Device Which is Constantly in Motion.

The very latest thing in storm door installation is an electrically operated device which is always in motion, making about six revolutions per minute and having a capacity of 4,320 persons in each direction per hour. The door is operated by a motor of one-quarter horse-power and has a number of advantages over those which are moved by the persons passing through it. They prevent congestion and accident and are a great convenience to women and others who happen to have their hands filled with bundles. It is possible for a woman with a number of packages and a small baby coach to pass through without the least trouble or delay and without using her hands in any way whatever for the purpose. The compartments of this door are much larger than those usually encountered, and there is room in the center for a large show-case. Each of the six revolving wings is so arranged that when the wings come in contact with a person, or catches a person between the edge of the wing and the circular wall, the wing will flex back out of the way, or slide past the person obstructing it. Each wing is also arranged so that it will spring in the reverse direction under pressure, so that in case of a panic people can pass out at each side of the center. —Philadelphia Record.

Rosie and Ethel, though only five and seven, were bitter enemies and quarreled continually. One day I overheard a conversation between them. "I've got dimples," said Rosie. IS OBLIGE TO LEAVE BOSTON

It is announced that Miss Helen Keller has been obliged to leave the immediate neighborhood of Boston to escape the attentions of those attracted to her home by her famous triumph over her triple affliction of deafness, blindness and inability to speak. She will seek the comparatively rural retirement of a small town in Maine, where she will have a chance to "have a good time with her mind," as she quaintly expressed it while a student at Radcliffe.

Mark Twain said that the two most remarkable characters of the nineteenth century were Napoleon and Helen Keller. Certainly the greatest military genius the world has known never fought and prevailed against odds more desperate than this young woman.

John S. Thomas is putting up a new wire fence along the road above Silver Heights. He bought the wire but made the holes and the posts, and later on the road will be made wider and better, and next year you men who pool your tobacco don't try to haul it all the same day, especially if it is a rainy day; it will be better for the roads, better for the Association and better for the farmers, and there still be less cussin'.

been heard of internal dissensions in the associations. For instance, at a recent meeting of the Green River District Tobacco Growers' Association of the Green river district met with considerable opposition. Even now the growers' associations in Kentucky are carrying a large quantity of leaf in pursuance of their policy of holding it for their own price, and it is contended that, if they have to shoulder another crop, great difficulty will be experienced in financing it. In considering this aspect of the question, however, slight must not be lost of the large purchases at record prices of Kentucky tobacco by the British and American 'combines' last year. The true history of the purchase of the entire 1907 crop of the American Society of Equity in Henderson, Union, Webster, Hopkins and Crittenden counties by the Imperial Tobacco Company at a price only previously paid in time of war, has never been told, but the incident was significant as showing that too much dependence was not to be placed on the view that the associations would be allowed to accumulate tobacco until it broke their backs. The associations are doing all in their power to induce planters to restrict the acreage planted, but it is not yet by any means clear what success they have met with in this respect.

From all of which I submit much of comfort is to be gleaned by Association members.

From more recent articles than the above I learn our cousins over the water are comforting themselves in the belief or pretense of belief, that Kentucky co-operative associations will be wrecked by internal dissensions. JAMES N. BANKS, Sec'y.

Deliveries And Pooling.

Now, during a shut-down to last until further notice—I am particular to express it that way as a warning to those members who tacitly assume deliveries will be welcome at all the factories again next Monday—which assumption may prove true of all or some of the factories; or take it from me this way—the shut-down will last until further notice. The factory men are working all the labor available in caring for the soft tobacco now cumbering the floors of the factories.

There are, members in all fairness should reflect, two sides to this question of deliveries. The purchasers under their contracts may decline tobacco high in order. It follows, then, if, out of consideration for members, purchasers do unload wet tobacco, why, then, purchasers will, whether members like it or not, take care of the tobacco so received to prevent heating in bulk.

A little reflection will serve to show just what has worked a hardship on both purchasers and members, namely, a plethora of seasons ever since the first day of January, during all of which period of time the weather has been continuously such as to keep tobacco soft and high in order.

It results, therefore, that during January and February deliveries have been unprecedentedly heavy. Throughout the district deliveries, I now record here on the first day of March, total, say, in round numbers, a close approximation, twenty-two million pounds—six millions of which has gone into association factories. How much of the crop is undelivered?

I, for one, don't know. A wide inquiry I hazard some estimate one third of the crop is yet to come in. In that case the total 1908 stemming district crop will go to thirty-three million pounds.

But assume one fourth of the crop only remains to come in. In that case the total production will come approximate twenty-eight million pounds.

THE POOLING.

A glance at my headline persuades me a repetition is necessary. The following from a good staunch member explains itself:

My Dear Sir:—No. 1 met at Poole, Ky., Feb. 26th, 1908, with sixteen members present, as follows: R. B. Cravens, J. C. Allen, A. J. Thornberry, J. L. Gentry, H. G. Allen, W. C. Dixon, Ira Melton, W. Williams, T. A. Crowley, A. J. Crowley, T. W. Dixon, W. P. Pritchett, M. J. Jewel, Isaac Whitehead, W. H. McClanary and Ed Bridwell. All pooled except Mr. Ed Bridwell. Please put this in Tobacco Tidings. We want people to know who pools and who don't.

Readers of this column, mainly the members of this association, are entitled to know what is going on and so I publish the above.

Slaughtersville is keen to pool up for three years.

Columbia local is ready and willing to pool up for three years.

Fifteen out of sixteen members of gallant old Poole No 1 sign up with alacrity.

Peons and peasants and coolies, the slaves of kings and emperors and czars, are and have been for centuries in a pitiable state of degradation, spiritless, hopeless, contemptible degradation.

Before the days of this Association the farmers of this district were in a state of degradation. Co-operation is lifting the farmers of this district out of a state of contemptible degradation.

Will they continue to co-operate? Slaughtersville, Columbia and Poole will be large majorities.

In The Spanish-American War.

During the Spanish American War, many of our soldiers suffered severely from cramp in the stomach and bowels, due in most cases to the change of climate and the water they were obliged to drink. M. George A. Lake, of Dennison, Texas, gives an interesting account of how he came to the relief of some of the men in his regiment:—"Just as I was starting for the war," says Mr. Lake, "Mr. Davis gave me a large bottle of Sloan's Liniment. I used it in our troop at Camp Mobrey for cramps and dysentery among the men. It took finely and lots of the boys of Troop L, 1st Tex. Cav., U. S. V., will never forget the name of Sloan's Liniment. One case in particular was our bugler, Fred Ormsley; he was cramped until he could hardly stand it. I gave him a dose of Sloan's Liniment and in five minutes he was up and ready to go on with the troop."

Every druggist carries Sloan's Liniment in stock. You can get it in 25c., 50c., or $1.00 size bottles. It's a good thing to have in the house for rheumatism, toothache, sore throat, asthma and any pain or stiffness.
