team played as fast ball as any that has ever represented Marion.

Gossage's work was not as good as usual, but, at that, was far better than the average pitcher, and was all that one should expect of any man. It has become so common for him to pitch two and three hit games, striking out from fourteen to twenty men, that Marion fans almost expect it, every time he steps into the box.

If they will only stop to think how few games of that sort are pitched and how often the hits run from ten to fifteen, they will realize that practically every game he has pitched since he came to Marion has been indeed a star performance.

One of the most agreeable features of the game was the work of Perryman behind the bat. This boy has clearly demonstrated to western Kentucky enthusiasts that there is no position on the diamond he can not fill creditably, and we are convinced that he has found his true position as catcher.

Davis for Mayfield pitched a good game and kept Marion's hits well scattered.
Rochester and Lamb played their usual star game at short and second. The

The second game was an easy victory, much to the delight of the faithful rooters who had seen the boys lose by such a narrow margin the day before.
Stevens for Marion pitched a gilded ball all the way, allowing only one scratch hit and striking out ten men.
The support given him was also better than that given Gossage in his game.
Allison, who was on the mound for the visitors, was touched up considerably, and lacked strength with men on bases.
Bradford played a brilliant game at first for Mayfield, while Dixon played the best fielding game for Marion. But the real feature was Pentecost's hitting, as he drove out three clean single and a two bagger out of four times at bat. Perryman again caught a good game. For further details see the Expression of Sympathy from the Methodist Sunday School to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Terry.

To the finite mind, God's Providence and dealing are often hard to understand.—"For now we see through a glass darkly," and so to our limited understanding and vision, and although we know he doeth all things well, it is hard for loving parents and relatives to understand why God in His infinite wisdom and goodness, should have sent His angels to carry back to Himself little Richard and Robert Terry, twin boys of Henry and Otta Terry, who died in June 1909, but
"Some day, with tearless eyes we'll see
And then, ah then, we'll understand"
For nearly nine months God had sent them to brighten the home and entwine themselves about the lives and hearts of loved ones.

The earthly home circle has been broken, there is the vacant cradle, but think of the little circle begun in heaven.

They were members of the cradle roll of the Methodist church at Marion Kentucky.

We extend to the parents and relatives our fullest sympathy in this deep affliction and point them to the beautiful land where

Sweetest flowers ever bloom
Never more to fade and die,
Where gathered around our Father's throne,

We'll never say goodbye.

U. S. SENATORS PAYNTER AND BRADLEY COMMENDED

BY Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union of America.--In Session June Twelfth, Nineteen Hundred and Nine, at Marion, Kentucky.

Whereas, there is much agitation on the repeal of the six (6c) cent tobacco tax on the farmers tobacco; and,

Whereas, our excellent United States Senators, Paynter and Bradley have made excellent and truthful speeches in our interest; setting forth the facts in the case, showing that the State and National Governments, sit still and allow both home and foreign individuals to come and rob our wives and children of the necessities of life; and those of Kentucky and of other tobacco districts of the United States by their wicked, devilish, and diabolical schemes and combines and with a full purpose of stealing, plundering and robbing our people of their tobacco far below the cost of production.

Therefore be it resolved, That we, the members of the Farmers Educational and Co-operative Union of America in session at Marion, Kentucky, June 12, 1909, in behalf of the 14000 members in Kentucky and most 3,000,000 in the Nation; do endorse the U. S. Senators from Kentucky and their speeches which they made at Washington on the repeal of the tobacco tax.

Resolved Second, That we give them our undivided support in their great efforts for the repeal of same.

Resolved third, That our organization will stand by them regardless of politics as long as they stand for the interest of the farming class.

Be it further resolved, That we will not support any individual or party who does work for the interest of the common people; the farming class. Neither will we support any party or individual for office that tries to connect directly or indirectly the Farmers Union or its officials with the lawless element known as "night riders."

Whereas, our people have suffered long and patiently from the wicked and unfair dealings of tobacco trusts and combines, both home and foreign, and that we can not suffer it any longer and be true to our wives and children, therefore we pray the U. S. Senators to repeal the tobacco tax in our interest.

AUDITOR JAMES ISSUES
REPLY TO STATEMENTS.Regarding the State Finances and Their Probable Condition
Later On.

DEFENDS ADMINISTRATION.

Cost of State House and Expenditures of Last Legislature Not Anticipated.

Frankfort, Ky., June 19.—Auditor Frank P. James has issued a statement in which he seeks to refute the statements published in some papers to the effect that by the time the next legislature meets the state will be $1,000,000 in debt. The Auditor says that he estimates the deficit on June 30 of this year at $520,000, which he says "will be due not to extravagance or mismanagement, but to the fact that the general assembly appropriated $1,366,000 additional funds, with no provision whatever to meet this large appropriation."

In regard to the charge that large sums have been spent on the state militia, the auditor says that it is true since this administration has been in power about $160,000 has been spent in effort to suppress lawlessness, but that amount has been in a measure offset by various state and county officials who were short in their accounts. The auditor says that if the next general assembly will make a slight change in the apportionment of the funds, at the close of this administration the state will be in better shape financially than it was at the beginning. He added it does not appropriate large sums without providing for payment of same.

Auditor James' statement concerning the state's finances is in full as follows:

"Frankfort, Ky., June 8, 1909."

"To the Taxpayers of the Commonwealth of Kentucky:

"For some time a report has been going the rounds through the press to the effect that the present administration has in the short time it has been in power spent the $1,400,000 which was in the treasury December 31, 1907, and in addition thereto has run the state overwhelmingly in debt. The report further alleges that, owing to the extravagance and inefficiency of the administration, the state will be in debt $2,000,000 by the time the general assembly convenes in January of next year, and that it will be necessary for this general assembly to increase the tax rate in order to meet this alleged deficit.

"To my mind this does not present a political question, but a financial question, one in which every citizen of the commonwealth, regardless of party affiliation, is deeply interested, and therefore, I deem it my duty to make a frank statement in order that the taxpayers may know the exact condition of the finances of the state. I have no desire or disposition to criticize our predecessors in office or to sing the praises of the present administration. My whole object in making this statement is to acquaint the people with the facts and remove the erroneous impression that has been made by the public press.

"To begin with let me say that our predecessors left in the state treasury when they relinquished office on the 31st day of January, 1908, in round numbers $1,350,000.00, but they did not pay a lot of bills that were due and which should have been previously paid, all of which have since been settled:

School claims paid Jan. 7, 1900	$587,299.25
Asylums	53,660.82
Penitentiaries	28,232.28
Idiot claims	15,879.97
Trustees jury fund	11,564.05
Criminal prosecutions	18,966.72
Eastern Ky. Normal School	7,500.00
Attorneys fees	2,550.00
Feeble-minded institute	3,410.81
Jefferson county fees	8,352.19
Balance due A. & M. College Dec. 1, 1907	19,614.54
Balance due schools	83,766.88

On Jan. 1, 1908, I drew warrants to pay school claims amounting to $347,570.23. On Jan. 2, 1908, my predecessors paid in school claims amounting to $336,229.65 which should have been paid during the previous year. So that the cash balance on hand Jan. 31, 1908, 24 days after this administration assumed office was only $117,431.32.

"Pursuant to a resolution passed in the senate January 22, 1908, I submitted the above figures to the committee that was appointed to look into the finances of the state, and it was verified by the committee. So that it will be seen that from the 5th to the close of January, 1908, I drew warrants in round numbers for $1,230,000.00, all of which were either unpaid bills left over by the former administration or bills falling due in that month.

"It has been frequently stated that our predecessors built the state capitol, and besides left in the treasury the amount stated above. The statement is not borne out by the facts and besides needs to be amplified. In the first place, the state of Kentucky obtained from the Federal government $1,300,000.00, which it was asserted would build the state capitol. The preceding administration paid in round numbers $1,000,000.00 on the state capitol building but the appropriations necessary to finish this building far exceed the estimate that had been made, for the building when complete will cost in round numbers $2,000,000.00. Already the general assembly has appropriated $1,700,000.00.

"The auditor's report of my predecessors of June 31, 1907, showed a deficit in the general expenditure fund of $476,117.00. To cover this deficit there was borrowed from the sinking fund $500,000.00. The deficit on June 30, 1908, was $150,000.00 and I estimate the deficit on June 30th of this year at $520,000.00. That will be due, not to extravagance or mismanagement, but to the fact that the general assembly appropriated $1,366,000.00 additional funds, with no provision whatever to meet this large appropriation, although the general expenditure fund for the last four years has shown an actual deficit, and since the general assembly adjourned I have drawn warrants to meet those appropriations amounting to $550,000.00.

"It has frequently been said that sums of money have been spent on the state militia. It is true that since this administration has been in power about $160,000.00 have been spent in an effort to suppress the lawlessness in this state, but that amount has in a measure been offset by various state and county officials who were short in their accounts, either through negligence or embezzlement. This administration has not spent a dollar that has not gone in the proper channels and had value received therefor.

"It has frequently been said that at the close of the year 1907 there was considerable over a million dollars in the state treasury. This is true. The same thing was true, however, at the close of the year 1908, and I estimate that the close of this year there will be in cash on hand something like $1,200,000.00, but as is always the case it will be necessary to pay this sum out in the early part of the year 1910. The time to estimate the conditions of the state finances is at the close of the fiscal year and not the close of the calendar year.

"As to the statement that by the time the general assembly meets in January of next year the state will be $2,000,000.00 in debt, I wish to say that there is no foundation in fact, for such a statement. The truth of the matter is, if the next general assembly will make a slight change in the apportionment of the funds, that at the close of the administration the state will be in better shape financially than it was at the beginning, notwithstanding the tremendous amount of money appropriated by the last general assembly, provided the next general assembly does not follow in the footsteps of the last one and appropriate large sums of money without making any provision to pay same.

Auditor of Public Accounts.

Educational.

The article to follow is highly educational. It is a practical lesson teaching what may infallibly be accomplished by co-operative effort. I shall pass the article on to members without comment, contenting myself with a casual remark like this— "Members of the Stemming Association may learn from the history of the article of Belle Isle almost choked with icebergs and floating field ice, thus cutting off the short and direct route of the trans-Atlantic steamers between the ports of the St. Lawrence and Liverpool, another chapter is added to the history of the ice blockade.

Ordinarily at this season the straits are free from ice, opening up a straight course for the steamers. This spring, however, the ice is displaying an inclination to hover in the vicinity of Anticosti Island, making it necessary for the vessels to go miles out of their way and encircle the southern coast of Newfoundland. It is believed that the steamers will be obliged to follow the long route until the 1st of July.

From early in June until November, Montreal and Quebec are two of the largest shipping ports on the Atlantic sea coast, and the effect of the ice blockade in Belle Isle will be a serious handicap to commerce, as it will mean the loss of about a day on each trip.

I have kept this remedy in the house for the past five years and I consider it worth its weight in gold. I was subject to backaches for a long time and the affliction caused me many sleepless nights. I took various remedies but did not find relief. I was finally persuaded to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a supply at Haynes & Taylor's drug store. They gave me prompt relief and in less than a week the pains in my back had vanished as if by magic. Los Angeles, Cal., June 19.—A special dispatch to the Times from El Centro, says:

All Imperial Valley is excited over reports of a mysterious alrship which is making nightly flights over Salton sea. At first the ship appeared to be stationary at a point directly over Salton sea, near the intake of the Alamo and New rivers. Then it began a rapid flight, passing directly across Salton sea and disappearing on the shadows of San Jacinto mountains.

ELM HAS A CANCER.
(From the Boston Herald.)

The famous Bertram elm in Salem has a cancer. It was noticed for some time that no cavities showed on the Bertram elm, which is near the library. This was proof to the experienced eye that there was decay inside the tree.

An investigation showed that the elm had a cancer on the inside, which, if allowed to grow, would kill the tree in a few years. Incisions were made, and portions of the inside were found to be punk. Tiny roots had begun spreading inside this growth. Efforts are now being made to remove the cancer.

This elm is famed for its size and beauty. The trunk measures 27 feet in circumference, and its age has been reckoned as 100 years. The estate was formerly the home of Capt. John Bertram, one of Salem's famous merchants of olden days.

Springfield, Ill., June 19.—Hostility against her husband during his life is said to have prompted Mrs. Sarah Richman's alleged act of stealing the flowers from his grave and using them for decorative purposes. The charge was made by her brother-in-law, Carl Ferguson, who stated he planted the flowers on the grave Decoration day and missed them this morning when he went to the cemetery. Passing Mrs. Richman's house on the way home, he claims he saw them in a vase on the front porch.

Laxative for Women Free

There is a great difference in the purposes to which a laxative should be put. Tablets and pills, salts, etc., are usually violent purgatives or cathartics, and altogether too powerful for the average person.

A woman at all times needs only a mild laxative. In fact, none other is needed as long as she is young and healthy. For the object is simply to move the bowels and if a gentle laxative will do it, what is the use of a violent one?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has earned a well-deserved vogue among women and children and old folks—people who must necessarily be careful of what they take. It is the gentlest, most effective and admittedly the greatest stomach, liver and bowel remedy before the American people. The price is only 60 cents or $1 a bottle, as it comes in both sizes, and all druggists sell it. Its pleasant taste and gentle action make it an ideal remedy for women in constipation, torpid liver, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn and such like digestive complaints. Its use for a short time will remove the trouble and thoroughly so that future medication will be unnecessary. Its tonic properties build up the stomach and intestinal muscles so that they act naturally again. That this is so is the experience of many heads of families, like Mrs. E. E. Alvarado, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. J. E. Blackmore, of New York City; Mrs. J. E. Blackmore, of New York City; Mrs. J. E. Blackmore, of New York City.

If the remedy is new to you and you want to make a trial of it before buying, send your name to the doctor's address as below and a free test bottle will be sent you. Then, if results are satisfactory you can buy it of your druggist.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service.

GALLANT EFFORT TO RESCUE WIFE FAILS.

Mrs. Louis Cohen Jumps Into Niagara River.

Husband Follows and Struggles for an Hour.

WOMAN DIES IN HIS ARMS.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 19.—Louis Cohen, of Buffalo, saw his young wife leap into the swirling river between Second and Third Sisters Islands at 5 o'clock this afternoon, only 150 feet above the brink of the cataract. Without a moment's hesitation he followed her, caught her hand and struggled desperately with Representative James S. Simonds and three other men, carrying ropes.

Three times they threw the rope before it fell within Cohen's grasp. When he did catch it he was too weak to tie it about his own or his wife's waist. The two were twenty feet away from shore and it was extremely difficult, owing to the precarious nature of the footing, to make a good cast.

Pinned against the tree stump by the terrific rush of water all the strength he had was gone and he had been unable to keep his wife's face above water.

Once Cohen had hold of the rope the men on shore began to pull and Officer Martin, who was in the front, have stopped short of the cataract and might be rescued by men daring enough.

William Barnett and Hugh Brown, who had joined the searchers, finally pulled the body before 7 o'clock. It was held fast by a rock about 100 feet above the brink. Without ropes Brown and Barnett waded out into the stream, and moving carefully over the slippery rock, reached the body. Just as Brown touched the body, the current caught it again and it whirled around an eddy. It was with the greatest difficulty that the men brought the body to land. Life was quite extinct.

Cohen says that worry over the fact that she was unable to suckle her infant depressed his wife greatly and probably caused her desire for death. He, a robust man, quickly recovered from the shock of his experience.

DAUGHTER RETURNS HOME AFTER SIXTEEN YEARS.

She Was Supposed to Have Been Drowned When a Mere Child.

LEWIS, Ky., June 19.—A most remarkable occurrence has produced the greatest excitement in the neighborhood of Buffalo, twenty miles south of Louisville, on the Big Sandy river. A comely young lady, probably twenty years old, has made her appearance at the home of Tip C. Iers, a well-to-do farmer, and declares that she is the long-lost daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Childers.

For sixteen years they had mourned as dead a daughter who suddenly disappeared one Sunday in May while the family were at dinner. The house stood on the river bank and it was supposed the child had fallen into the water and drowned. Days were spent in searching for the body, but without success. The child was nearly four years old.

The young woman claims she was swimming on the front side when a man came along and kidnapped her. She was taken to Kansas and cared for by him until recently, when he became very sick and thought he was going to die. He then told her what her father's name was, and arranged to send her home. She arrived unannounced and told her story, but the parents would not believe it. Finally she reminded them of having buried a doll at a certain place in the garden, and, going there, they dug into the ground and found the indestructible parts of the doll. It is said this convinced them and they are overjoyed.

perately to save her.

Mrs. Cohen probably died in her husband's arms. Before it was possible to bring efficient help an hour had passed, during all of which Cohen was making frantic attempts to reach the shore. But the struggle against the current—at this point it is about twenty miles an hour—was beyond his power.

Fortune aided him. With his wife tightly clasped to him he felt himself bump into a tree stump, and on this he got a grip with his one free hand. He instantly shouted for help and word was carried to the reservation police, but it was nearly an hour after Mrs. Cohen jumped into the river that Officer James Martin slipped and fell into the stream, but quickly regained his feet. When within fifteen feet of the shore Cohen lost his grip on his wife's body and it was carried off down stream and was lost to view.

Cohen was so far gone when his rescuers got him on shore that he could not speak for ten minutes. His first words were, "She is out there. Go and get her. She is dead; she died in my arms."

Meanwhile a crowd had gathered. Supt. Perry and Chief Shoebridge skirted the Goat Island shore, looking for the body, but could see nothing of it. Cohen joined them, always insisting that the body must be there, is now upon the moment of realization, says the Hartford Herald. The railroad locomotive is now steaming at the verge of our city limits! The Madisonville, Hartford and Eastern railroad is rapidly nearing a reality. The track-layers are now within a short distance of the site for the railroad depot, just east of the court house, and will reach here to-morrow.

A force of 125 hands is at work laying track and they are making splendid progress. A steam track-laying machine is employed in the work, which is a great feature. While rain does not fall they lay on an average of one-half mile of track per day. The steel used is of the large standard size, and the road, when completed, will be one of the best in the country. Of course it will take some weeks or months for the track to get fully settled, to get it ballasted up to the proper solidness, but it will be only a short time until schedule trains will be running through Hartford, and traveling the entire route.

Work on the big railroad bridge to span Green river at Smallhouse began yesterday. It will take about two months to complete this. But in the meantime track-laying will be in operation on either side. The piers to support the bridge are said to be the finest specimens of this kind of work which have been put into any river, and the bridge will be of the same character as the piers. It is about thirteen miles from Hartford to Smallhouse and after passing here the track-layers will reach that point in due time.

The three players shown above played an important part in winning the American league flag for their team last season. Reading from left to right they are as follows: Davy Jones, Ty Cobb and Capt. Herman Schaefer.

BIG LEAGUE SCOUTS WATCH WINNING TEAMS OF MINORS.

Most Desirable Men Are Those Who Have Played on Flag Winning Clubs.

It's great to be a member of a pennant winning club in the minor leagues, for it is the winning teams that the big league scouts pay the most attention to, and, as a result, it is the members of championship clubs that secure the opportunity to get a trial with the big leagues. It may be that the recruits will not make good, but nevertheless they do not lose much at that. When drafted or bought by the big leagues in the fall, they are generally tendered a contract in excess of what they received in the minor leagues. Then, in the event of their going back to the bushes, the club acquiring them has to assume their big league contract for that year at any rate.

The crop of minor league pennant winning players that was bought and drafted by the big leagues last year was a large one, numbering about fifty or sixty men. Of this number over twenty are still carried on the major league rosters. Cleveland has three in St. Louis, who was with the Jacksonville and Nashville pennant-winning clubs of the South Atlantic and Southern leagues last season; Easterly, who helped Los Angeles win the bunting in the Pacific Coast league, and Goodie, whose batting and base-running aided Akron to take down the O. and P. league championship.

New York Americans have six men who were with minor league champions in 1923. Vaughn of Scranton, Cree and Warhop of Williamsport, Knight and Schmidt of Baltimore, and Quinn of Richmond. Detroit has a pair in Bush of Indianapolis and Beckendorf of Scranton. Connie Mack has only one, Paddy Livingston of Indianapolis. French of the Evansville club is Boston's pennant-winner, while St. Louis has two in Griggs of San Antonio and Justus of Lancaster. Neither is a regular. Gray of the Washington club is from the Los Angeles champions.

The national league champion recruits are as follows: New York, Marquard and Durham of Indianapolis; Pittsburgh, Miller of Wausau; Cincinnati, Wacker of Evansville, and Oakes of Los Angeles; St. Louis, Catcher Ludwig of Springfield, Ill.; and Outfielder Ellis of Los Angeles; Boston, Pitcher White of Lancaster, O.; Chicago, Pitcher Hagerman of Topeka; Philadelphia, Infielder Shean of Williamsport; Brooklyn, Outfielder Kustus of Evansville, and Third Baseman McIlveen of Nashville.

Passing of Jack Taylor. The release of Pitcher Jack Taylor who helped to keep the Columbus club up in the race in the American association last year, means the passing of Jack Taylor from the big leagues, for it is not likely that any other club in the association will take a chance on him now that Columbus has passed him up. Taylor has been a notable pitcher for the past 12 years and he was considered one of the mainstays in the Chicago club for quite a while. Taylor started out as a big minor league pitcher with the Milwaukee club about 1895, when Connie Mack secured him from down in Ohio.

Athens Games Next Year. The efforts of the Athens Olympic games committee will assure contests in the Stadium next year. The Greek government will bring in a bill authorizing the issue of commemorative postage stamps, and out of the sales the sum of $50,000 will be set aside toward the cost of the games.

SEVERAL DETROIT STARS HAVE BROTHERS IN GAME.

Younger Members of Families Striving to Win Fame and Money on the Ball Field.

It is a singular fact that nearly half of the members of the Detroit ball club have brothers who are striving with great ambition to win a place in the big leagues. Up to date but one has attracted big-league attention. He is Paul Cobb, brother of Ty Cobb. St. Louis Americans drafted him at the close of the 1923 season. He was not even tried out this spring with the majors, and Manager Jimmy McAleer is now trying to sell him to a minor league club. Charley Schmidt has a brother, a catcher, also, with the Memphis club, and, from all accounts, he promises to develop into a good ball player. In fact, Memphis has turned him over to a Carolina Association club for development.

Davy Jones has a brother who aspires to follow in the footsteps of his famous brother. Eddie Lafitte has a brother, a tall, rangy chap, who would like to become another Charley Bennett or a Johnny Kling. He looks promising, also. Charley O'Leary's brother is an infielder of class, but a weak hitter. He was with Rockford in the Three-I. league until recently, when he was sold to the Oshkosh (Wis.) club.

George Moriarty's brother is trying for a berth in the Wisconsin league and bids fair to win out. He wrote his brother the other day and remarked: "There is another fellow trying for the same job that I'm after. I've learned one thing while sitting on the bench, and that is to run bases." It is a remarkable fact that in baseball the name of Jennings only harmonizes when Hughey prefaces it. In the big Jennings family only two played ball, one with great distinction and remarkable success. The other only played for the pastime it afforded him. Yet six other husky Jennings boys are in various other professions, with no baseball inclinations.

KNOWS HOW TO HIT.

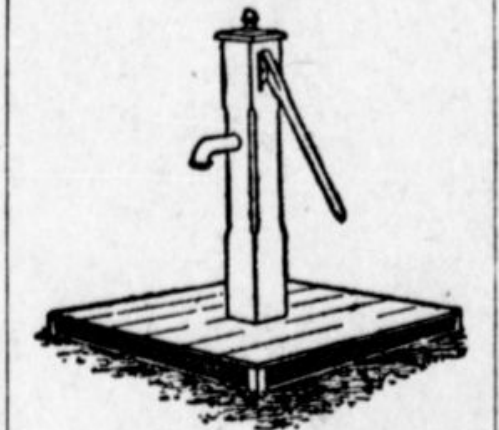

Sherwood Magee, left fielder for the Philadelphia National leaguers, has been for several years one of the star sluggers of the big leagues. He bids fair to equal his past performances this season.

lowing a space two to six inches between the top and bottom parts of the sides. This space is covered on the inside with a fly screen to keep out dirt and insects, and outside of this with a larger meshed screen to keep out large vermin. This gives good ventilation to the well, which never becomes foul. In the winter I cover the platform with straw and snow.

CARE AND FEEDING OF TEAM.

As a General Rule Farm Horses Do Not Receive the Proper Attention Due Them.

Perhaps no subject is of more importance to the average farmer than the proper care and feeding of the teams that are relied upon to do the farm work, and as a rule I do not believe that these horses receive the care and consideration that they should, says B. Lara. A good horse used in a common sense manner should live to an old age and be in condition to perform good work at all times.

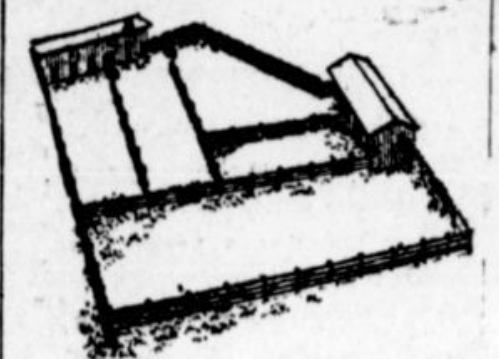

The essential requisites for a working horse are good size, quick action and strength. A high-spirited animal or one of great value is not the most desirable animal for the farmer. What we need is a good walker, as much of the usefulness and efficiency depends upon that quality. This faculty is quite as much a matter of education as inherited qualities.

Under ordinary circumstances it is judicious to use mares for working teams upon a farm. Except for a short time during the period of parturition and immediately after they are fully as well adapted to farm work as are geldings. They also possess the advantage of annually bringing colts, and in event of their being incapacitated by accident or labor they may still be kept with profit as breeders.

changes into the larger field shown at the bottom of the sketch, which is a timothy and clover pasture. It is better to have pigs in separate quarters in small bunches, for in this way they can be better attended to and the growths are more uniform.

NOTES ABOUT SHEEP.

The man who goes into the sheep business has a reasonable assurance that good prices for mutton and wool will continue for some time.

Much of the business of feeding sheep must be learned by associating with the stock and studying their habits and characteristics.

The most careful man will devote much time to the study of his sheep, and it is unwise for a man without experience to undertake the sheep business on a large scale.

The safest way is to buy, say, 25 choice ewes and an excellent ram, and secure your education with a minimum amount of expense.

Pasture that is ideal for cattle will not be ideal for sheep. Sheep will thrive better on shorter and finer grass than on coarse grasses.

There are very few farms but what would be better by having a few sheep on them.

USEFUL LIVESTOCK NOTES.

Pigs may be pastured on rape with a certainty of their rapid growth. If fed some protein food at the same time it is still better.

Hogs finished for market at seven or eight months old and weighing 250 to 300 pounds, are the most profitable to the grower.

Sheep can be fattened on grain alone without any close fodder what-ever.

Woolf-Carter.

Wednesday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Carter, near Levia's their daughter, Miss Katie, was united in marriage to H. C. Woolf, of Beres, by Rev. Thomas C. Carter, the bride's uncle. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple took a carriage for the depot at Marion and departed on the 11 train for Louisville, on a bridal trip, which will embrace also a stop at Lexington and Frankfort. After July 1, they will be at home in Beres, where the groom is manager of the telephone exchange and also conducts a profitable insurance and timber agency.

Mr. Woolf is a son of J. T. Woolf of Tolu, one of the county's best citizens, and is himself one of the finest boys, and his many friends will congratulate him on his good fortune in winning for his life partner one of the state's handsomest girls.

The bride is the third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Carter and is one of a family of beautiful girls and is endowed by nature and education with many noble traits of character. She is a niece of Mrs. H. M. Cook and Rev. T. C. Carter of this city and is universally loved for her graceful manner and sweet disposition.

White-Bebout.

Last Tuesday a fine looking and enthusiastic young fellow called at the office of the Record-Press and subscribed for the paper one year for Mrs. A. H. White, of Nashville, Tenn. The editor, always anxious to be acquainted with his callers (and subscribers as well) ventured the remark that he did not know Mrs. White and inquired who she was. "One of our county girls who has located there I presume," he suggested. The visitor blushingly admitted she was not there yet, but "she will be to-morrow barring accident" he said.

"You see its like this, I am A. H. White and to-morrow morning, Wednesday,) at 9 o'clock, Miss Kate Bebout and I will be married at her father's home at Sheridan and we will take the 11 o'clock train here for Nashville, Tenn., my home, and we want her home paper so we can keep up with the news of her old home," and out he went and took a carriage, with a party of friends, for the home of the bride, at Sheridan. The ceremony was said by Rev. W. R. Gibbs in his happiest style and most impressive manner, and the happy couple with a large party of friends immediately drove here and

CHAPTER XXVI.

In Which We Find Treasure.

We began to dream of treasure as soon as the fierce winds ceased and the waves fell. The lust for wealth, partially blunted by the requirements of hardship and peril, revived within us the instant nature granted a temporary respite. The memory of the three million pesos that might be stowed away below began to haunt our imaginations, and the story of it found utterance on our lips. The negro blurted it forth, his eyes rolling, and De Nova came direct to me, asking, in behalf of the men, the privilege of making search. There was no excuse for refusal, even had I desired to find one, as the decks were cleared of the debris left by the storm, and the Donna Isabel rode her course easily to a lashed helm. Leaving Dade above to keep a watchful eye on the weather, I willingly led the others into the steward's pantry, where we pried open the door leading down into the lazarette.

That same intense cold of the Antarctic smote us the moment the creaking hinges yielded, and we stood peering down through the aperture. We waited impatiently for the first frigid breath to escape, huddled about the stove in the cabin, and recalling various sea tales of treasure seeking, which only served to whet our appetite for the coming adventure. Now and then I lifted my eyes, meeting Doris' questioning glance, and assured that I understood her mood.

At last, but well wrapped in our mufflers and bearing a candle aloft to cast its flickering yellow light through the pitchy darkness, we ventured below, scrambling down the short ladder. Cole held the grim, his black face shining, the whites of his eyes conspicuous as he stared eagerly about. We found innumerable boxes and barrels, crates, bottles and wicker flasks, some open, the packing straw strewn about, others tightly nailed, piled everywhere, evidence that the galleon had been amply provisioned for a long voyage, and that her crew had never perished of starvation. It had been the cold, the loneliness, the awful agony of their hopeless condition that had left the Donna Isabel a charnel ship. We handled this collection rapidly, contenting ourselves with merely testing the weight of each package, quickly convinced that none was heavy enough to conceal precious metal. This job must have occupied more than an hour, handicapped as we were by the poor light, and several times I glanced through the open trap overhead to observe the faces of the women framed there as they watched us silently. Once Dade stared down, bringing word the sky was thickening

They Came Howling About Me Like So Many Wolves, Eager to See.

In the west, and lingering to observe our operations until I had to order him back upon deck.

A solid, nail-studded, oaken door appeared in the forward bulkhead, and so soon as we had succeeded in handling every article stored within the lazarette, I had a passage cleared to it, the men working with feverish impatience. When finally reached, the door was locked and seemingly as solid as the bulkhead itself, nor did a search of the after state-rooms reveal any keys. No doubt they were in Salvatore's pocket, many a league astern. But Kelly and McKnight brought down the cleaver and an iron bar, and proceeded to burst it open, the rest of us crowding about, too cold and excited to keep still, but very confident the treasure awaited us within. My own heart beat fiercely with anticipation, and I heard De Nova swearing in French, quite unable to control himself. It seemed to me that door would never yield; but at last Johnson managed to get a purchase low down, and with Cole heaving at his side, they fairly tore the wood asunder. Through the considerable opening thus made, there burst a torrent of icy water into our very faces, extinguishing the light, and sending us stumbling backward to the ladder, up which we swarmed almost in panic. Anything unexpected in that ghostly made cowards of us, and we fought our way forth into the daylight in a suddenness of terror almost ludicrous, swearing and shouting at each other like madmen.

It required another hour for the ledge of water to drain away through the deck, after which we ventured below again, the relighted candle revealing slash-ice everywhere, with a considerable trickle still gurgling through the hole in the door. However, we had an opening to work at, and soon succeeded in tearing most of the obstruction away piecemeal, only to be confronted by a solid barrier of glittering ice fully five feet thick, leaving a space at the top of the door barely sufficient for a man's body to pass through. De Nova, cursing as if he had gone crazy, hoisted me to the top of it, where I clung precariously, holding the sputtering candle aloft, and peering about over the gleaming surface and through into the black shadows. Good Lord, but it was cold, repellent, frightful! The beams supporting the deck, huge, black timbers, were within easy reach of my hand, and forward the spectral glow of daylight streamed in through the rift in the deck-planks above. But from one bulging side to the other extended this solid mass of ice, the congealed draining of a century of waves that had dashed their salt spray down the opening ripped by the wrecked mainmast. No wonder the old bulk head sizzled with all that load below!

I crawled forward as far as the silvery butt of the mainmast whence I could look up through the splintered deck to the narrow strip of sky overhead. There was a bulkhead forward, but the ice extended solidly to the wood. I could hear the ceaseless swell of the sea pounding against the sides, the groaning of timbers, the flapping of the jib's canvas, and realized more than ever before the sickening, sudden roll of the laden hull. The level surface of the ice told plainly enough its story of formation; when all that water came through, the vessel had been upon an even keel, imbedded firmly, no doubt, in the ice-pack. I crept back as cautiously as I had advanced, the rolling of the wreck rendering the slippery surface dangerous to travel over. The men watched me anxiously as I slid down into the lazarette.

"What did you find, sir?"

"Nothing except ice, solid ice clear to the forward bulkhead. It looks as though we had reached the end of our treasure-hunt, my lads."

There was a sullen growl of profanity, McKnight viciously slashing at the ice-front with his cleaver. Twice he struck, with no other object except the venting of his ungovernable anger, his forehead heaved, the great muscles of his arms standing out like whipcords. A considerable chunk sealed off, falling thumping to the deck, and causing him to spring backward to escape injury. As if maddened by this, he drove in the blade of the ax again—it clanged against metal! We all heard it; we all witnessed the rebound.

"By God, mates, there's one of 'em, anyhow!" roared a voice, hoarse from exploding excitement. But I was already upon my knees, feeling blindly into the ice cavity.

They came howling about me like so many wolves, eager to see with their own eyes, but I crowded them back, snatching the candle from De Nova's fingers and throwing the flickering light down level with the deck.

"It's a brass-bound chest, men," I cried, straightening up and facing them. "But it is going to require some hard digging to get it out. About all I can see is the handle of it." I never comprehended before how the passion and lust for gold can express itself upon men's faces. Tense, motionless, breathing heavily, their features drawn, their eyes gleaming feverishly in the yellow flame, they stared at me and then at that ice-front, demented and speechless. No one thought of where we were—castaways, our lives the sport of winds and waves. A sudden wreck under us, our nearest port a thousand miles away across a stormy sea; all we realized at that moment was that there, just before us, under that mantle of ice, lay buried three million pesos. God! the collar of my jacket seemed choking me; I breathed as if a man's fingers clutched my throat, and I saw McKnight's burly form, shaking as if he had an ague fit. Three million pesos! The hot blood rushed to my head, a lava stream, and De Nova's face, white as chalk behind his little black mustaches, seemed dancing before me ghostlike. Damn him! the fellow made me think of Salvatore, the man who, just above, frozen and dead, had guarded this treasure for 126 years. I cast the suggestion aside with a curse and a laugh, grasping Kelly by the shoulder to steady myself—to realize these were real men, this task before us real work. It was like coming forth from under an anesthetic, leaving me weak as a child, yet with brain and faculties aroused to action. Johnson thrust forward the cleaver.

"Let me get in there, sir; I'm the man for a cuttin' job."

I stepped aside, and the broad blade fell slashing against the front of the ice.

"Only two of you men can work here at once," I put in hastily. "Hold on, Johnson, until we get this ship-shape. An axman, with a helper to haul back the ice out of the way, is all we need. Any more would only be in the way; besides, some of us ought to be on deck. It is going to require hours, maybe days, to get that chest out, and meanwhile we must sail this vessel and keep her right side up. The thing to do is to arrange relays, and keep at it steady. Johnson, you and Kelly go to work first. The rest of us will climb up into the cabin, and figure it out."

They went along with me up the ladder as though they were prisoners, casting the last lingering glances below, where the weird flame of the candle flickered yellow, the blows of the cleaver echoing sharply as they battered about the stove, welcoming the warmth of it. It had been frigid below decks, although we had been scarcely conscious of it in our excitement. But now we stood shivering, gazing into each other's faces and actually afraid to talk lest the whole occurrence should prove a dream from which a chance word might awaken us. Three million pesos—here, actually here; almost within reach of our hands; they were digging for them just below; even then, in the silence, we could hear the faint echo of blows being struck against the ice. Three million pesos!—and it was all ours, our very own!—to divide, to spend, to do with exactly as we pleased. We had dreamed about all this before, on the decks of the ill-fated Sea Queen, but now we sought to grasp it as an actual existing fact, and our minds seemed paralyzed by the knowledge. I even forgot that Doris was present until she touched me gently on the shoulder, and I looked down into her questioning eyes.

"Do you not know what we have just discovered below?" I asked, still tingling to the marrow of it. "The treasure, the Spanish treasure!"

"Oh, yes," but the soft voice seemed tinged with sadness. "Yet it does not greatly interest me. Money seems so little here, so utterly valueless." The simple words, the tone of their utterance brought me to myself as though I had received an electric shock. She was still smiling, yet all at once I noticed how white her face was, how dark the shadows beneath her eyes. The lure of the gold vanished from my mind, as if some wizard's wand had waved it away. I thought of the treasure-house sea with the life and death struggle before those dreary legends separating us from home. My hands clasped hers, the expression of love in my eyes deepening her face instantly.

"That is so much better, Jack," she said tenderly. "I knew it was only the madness of a moment which caused you to forget. Come out on deck with me until you lose all memory of it—until I bring you back to real life again."

"I do not need it, sweetheart," and I bent low, looking into her eyes. "The fever has left my blood. I hardly know how it ever laid such hold upon me, but the thought of all that wealth below drove me as mad as the others. You see how much I need you."

"Oh, no; you would have recovered without my help, although it might have required more time to complete a cure. But I fear there is no hope for the men."

"I certainly shall not spare you to minister to them."

She laughed, her happiness of disposition returning. "That would be useless; they are of different stamp. The fever for sudden wealth is in the blood of all of us. See how excited Celeste is. Perhaps if I had ever experienced poverty I might be crazed also. But it is so foolish here—here," and she swept her hands about in comprehensive gesture, "when we know it can be ours only for a day, or at most a week."

"But we have not given up hope," I protested. "Why should we? The Donna Isabel seems stanch beneath us."

"Even in case of that miracle I want nothing to do with this treasure," she said gravely. "It seems to me, Jack, there must be a curse upon that gold below. It will never do good to any human being. It was stolen by the sword, won for Spain by the shedding of blood, and has since cursed this ship and all who sailed in her. The living and the dead guarded it, and now we have come into its evil clutch. It is not superstition but fact which makes me say this—the Donna Isabel will never make port; that gold below will never do a soul on board anything but harm. I wish it could be left where it is, buried in the ice."

"At such a suggestion the men would mutiny."

"I suppose so," she acknowledged sadly, "and the end will be the same in either case. But I want you to be different. Let them build their air castles; but do you come out on deck with me, where the sea and sky will give us other thoughts."

Comprehending only vaguely what she meant, yet beneath the witching spell of her presence I went gladly enough, forgetting utterly that useless treasure imbedded in the ice below.

The Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Sirach, or Ecclesiasticus; VIII. Baruch; IX. The Song of the Three Holy Children; X. The History of Susanna; XI. The History of the Destruction of Bel and the Dragon; XII. The Prayer of Manasse, King of Judah; XIII. 1 Maccabees; XIV. 2 Maccabees. The Apocryphal books, which are supposed to occupy an intermediate position, were called "books read," or "ecclesiastical," though the latter title was also applied to the canonical Scriptures. The primary meaning of Apocrypha, "hidden, secret," seems toward the close of the second century, to have been associated with the significance "spurious," and ultimately to have settled down into the latter.

SERMONETTE.

"Above all things truth beareth away the victory."

Truth is still winning its victories in the world to-day.

Truth is the expression of God in the world. It is the one abiding thing before which all that is false and unreal must ultimately give way.

God is spoken of as a God of truth, and the visible expression of God to the world, "the Word which was made flesh and dwelt among men," is declared to have been "full of grace and truth."

Moses is said to have delivered the law, but Jesus is declared to have given the real expression of that law because grace and truth came by him.

Jesus made the open declaration that he was the "way, the truth and the life," and as he was taking leave of his disciples before the crucifixion he promised them that the Spirit of Truth should come unto them and guide them into all truth.

All this clearly emphasizes the fact that truth is a part and expression of the eternal God.

Men should seek to know the truth. They should never be afraid of it because it shatters perhaps the conceptions and ideas of previous years.

Truth is revolutionary. It tears down that which stands on false foundations in order that that which is enduring may remain.

With the Psalmist David, we should all "desire truth in the inward parts," and should earnestly and honestly choose the way of truth, but we should remember two dangers which threaten the seeker after truth.

First, that the cold, intellectual search after truth, without that warmth of love and faith from God which can make of that truth a real live factor in the lives of men is to really hold the truth in error.

Truth cannot find its real and full expression apart from love. God is first love, and then truth, or rather he is truth because he is love. He could not be truth apart from love and love could not manifest itself except as it was grounded in truth.

Therefore, cold intellectualism can never measure the full meaning of truth. They can make an idol of truth itself, and can develop a consuming passion for the search for truth as they measure and weigh everything in life, and in the very doing of it they can miss God himself. For truth is not the sum total of God, but truth is found in God; is a part of God.

And the second danger is the half truths which seize hold upon the heart and sway the life as though all the truth were known and understood. Half truths are always full of peril.

THE STORY.

THREE young men stood outside the entry way to the private apartments of the king in earnest conversation. A great feast had been held in the palace for all the princes of Media and Persia, and now King Darius, wearied with the ray and festive scene, and filled with the dainty viands which had been spread upon the banquet tables, had withdrawn to his apartments and was seeking refreshment in sleep upon the royal couch. And while he slept these three young men who were of the royal guard, stood without, keeping watch that nothing should disturb or harm the sacred person of the king.

"The heart of the king was merry," said one whose name was Zorobabel, "and great was his delight in his prince and the thought of the power of his nation. But what of our people who are in distress in Jerusalem?"

"Ah," sighed another of the group, "that he might have a thought for them."

"I have a plan which will stir the heart of the king to earnest thought, perchance, and give us the opportunity we seek of pleading for our people," again spoke up Zorobabel.

"Tell us," eagerly cried his two companions.

"It is this: Let every one of us speak a sentence. He that shall overcome, and whose sentence shall seem wiser than the others, unto him shall the king, Darius, give great gifts, and great things in token of victory. And when it shall be so, the one who thus wins the favor of the king shall choose for our people the help they need."

"Agreed," the other two cried.

Then every one wrote his sentence, sealed it and won the consent of the king's private chamberlain to place the writings near his couch where he would see them upon first rising.

So it came to pass that when the king had risen and had opened the writings, he read what the first had written, namely: "Wine is the strongest."

And the second read: "The king is the strongest."

And the third read: "Women are the strongest; but above all things truth beareth away the victory."

And when he had summoned all his princes and governors and captains, and had sat down in his judgment hall, he commanded that the young men who had pronounced the riddles should be brought before them, that they might declare their writings.

"For," said the king, "by all the power of my kingdom he who proves the declaration of his writing shall receive favor from the king."

Then began the first, who has spoken of the strength of wine, and said:

"O ye men, how exceeding strong is wine! It causeth all men to err that drink it. It maketh the mind of the king and of the fearless child to be all one; of the bondman and of the freeman; of the poor man and of the rich. It turneth also every thought into folly and mirth, so that a man remembereth neither sorrow nor debt. And it maketh every heart rich, so that a man remembereth neither king nor governor; and it maketh to speak all things by talents. And when they are in their cups, they forget their love both to friends and brethren, and a little after draw out swords. And when they are out from the power of the wine, they remember not what they have done. O ye men, is not wine the strongest, that enforceth to do thus?"

Thus spake the first young man, and the king beckoned to the second to rise and address the assemblage, which he did, as follows:

"O ye men, do not men excel in strength, that bear rule over sea and land, and all things in them? But yet the king is more mighty; for he is the lord of all these things, and hath dominion over them; and whatsoever he commandeth them, they do. If he bid them make war the one against the other, they do it. If he send them out against the enemies, they go, and break down mountains, walls and towers. They slay and are slain, and transgress not the king's commandment. If they get the victory, they bring all to the king, as well the spoil, as all things else. Likewise for those that are no soldiers, and have not to do with wars, but use husbandry, when they have reaped again that which they have sown, they bring it to the king, and compel one another to pay tribute unto the king. So all his people and his armies obey him. O ye men, how should not the king be mightiest, when in such sort he is obeyed?"

Thus spake the second, and ceased. Then Zorobabel stood forth and lifted his eyes to the king declared his riddle, as follows:

"O ye men, it is not the great king, nor the multitude of men, neither is it wine that excelleth. Who is it then that ruleth them, or that hath lordship over them? Are they not women? Women have borne the king and all people that bear rule by sea and land. A man leaveth his own father who brought him up, and his own country, and cleaveth unto his wife. Many also have perished, have erred, and sinned for women. And now do ye not believe me? Is not the king great in his power? Do not all regions fear to touch him? Yet did I see him and Apame the king's wife, sitting at the right hand of the king, and taking the crown from the king's head, and setting it on her own head. She also struck the king with her left hand in her mirth, and he spake no harsh word unto her. O ye men, are not women strong? Great is the earth, high is the heaven, swift is the sun in his course, for he compasseth the heavens round about, and fetcheth his course again to his own place in one day. Is he not great who made these things? Therefore great is Truth, and stronger than all things. Wine is wicked, the king is wicked, women are wicked, all the children of men are wicked, and such are all their wicked works. But as for truth, it endureth, and is always strong. It liveth and conquereth for evermore. Blessed be the God of Truth."

And a great shout arose as he ceased and the people cried:

"Great is truth, and mighty above all things."

Then said the king unto him:

"Ask what thou wilt."

Then spake Zorobabel unto the king:

"Remember thy vow, which thou hast vowed, to build Jerusalem, in that day when thou camest to thy kingdom, and to send away all the vessels that were taken out of Jerusalem."

Then Darius the king stood up and kissed Zorobabel, and calling for his scribe he wrote letters for him unto all his treasurers, and lieutenants, and captains, commanding them to do all that he, Zorobabel, should desire.

Alcohol not needed

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is not a strong drink. As now made, there is not a drop of alcohol in it. It is a non-alcoholic tonic and alterative. Ask your own doctor about your taking this medicine for thin, impure blood. Follow his advice every time. He knows.

We publish our formulae. We banish alcohol from our medicines. We urge you to consult your doctor.

Ask your doctor, "What is the first great rule of health?" Nine doctors out of ten will quickly reply, "Keep the bowels regular." Then ask him another question, "What do you think of Ayer's Sarsaparilla?"

AND SO IT DOES.

My little girl in the early stages of her education asked me what a-b-i-o and u were. I told her they were called "vowels." With a look of astonishment she replied, "Mother, I think they should be called stomachs; that other word sounds vulgar."—The Delineator for July.

HE COMPROMISED.

Boyd always stuck to his convictions. One day he said, "Mother, I see a needle on the floor." When she said, "No, it is a pin," the argument began. Finally Boyd hopped from his mother's lap, and upon picking up the pin exclaimed: "Oh see! it is a needle with a hat on!"—The Delineator for July.

PARENTAL TERRORS.

At evening, when we heat the milk for which our darling cries, We watch her put it swiftly down with fond and loving eyes. And then we go to bed, but not to sleep a single wink, Ah no! we lie awake till morn and think and think and think.

Suppose the cow who gave the milk was suffering from mumps? Suppose the farmer had forgot to add salt to the milk? Suppose—ah dreadful! is the thought that grips like iron bands! Suppose the hired man had scorned to manure his hands!

Suppose the grass had grown too rank; suppose the creek was green; Suppose the dairy was not washed that morning, white and clean! These are fears that fill with woe life's variegated page. When baby's had a drink of milk of unknown parentage.

NOT SLIGHTED.

A minister's little daughter was visiting a family in a parish which her father had recently left. One day she explained to her hosts that he hoped the people of the church would not send for him to conduct funerals, but would have the present pastor of the church. Thinking perhaps she might have given offense she looked up with a bright smile and added, "But of course he would be very glad to attend your funeral."—The Delineator for July.

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle 'was cured.' Mrs. ALVENA SPEERLING, 11 Langdon Street, Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

HALF SAVAGE MAN IS FOUND ROAMING WOODS

ROBBED, BEATEN AND LEFT FOR DEAD, HE LIVES ON SUGAR, SAP AND BARK FOR WEEKS.

Cumberland, Md. — Richard Goff, aged 52 years, was found starving in the woods of West Virginia near Trowbridge Ferry. He was half a savage when discovered and fled at the approach of aid. He had lived for weeks on the bark of the elm and larch trees and sap from the sugar tree. He had shrunk from a big man weighing 192 pounds to a mere skeleton, whose trembling legs were scarcely able to support him. The story reads like "The Man Who Was," but it is true in every detail.

Early in March, Goff, with two companions, set off through the woods from Caddell, W. Va. They were lumbermen. Goff, at least, was an employee of the Kingwood Lumber Company. Just what happened on that terrible tramp will never be known. The scars of Goff's face are mute witnesses of a struggle in which the one man went down before the two. They robbed him, and thinking him dead, left him in the wilderness. Goff, however, was not dead. He was warmly clad in his lumberman's clothes and so did not freeze to death.

After several hours he came back to semi-consciousness. He had nothing to eat, nothing to drink. He was wounded, bleeding, freezing, starving. But Goff did not give up. Instinct came to his aid. He scratched the bark of a sugar tree and sucked the sap; he eased his hunger on the bark of other trees; he crawled to a ledge of rocks and found a half cave as a home.

There he lived for days, weeks, no one, not even Goff, knows how long. He lost all track of time. He came to have confidence in his trees and his cave and to dread the sound of any moving thing. At every noise he thought his assailants were returning to kill him. So when help was at hand, he tried to flee, stumbling over the rocky path to his clay home. Kindness is bringing back his manhood, but he can tell little of his companions. They came from Pennsylvania; that is all he knows. Little by little he is again growing familiar with the face of man, sloughing his newly acquired wild man habits. But he still begs for a few drops of sugar sap and craves pieces of bark to chew.

Man Cuts Off Injured Finger. Philadelphia. — Acting as his own surgeon when he smashed his finger while working in a machine shop the other afternoon, Thomas Tolen cut off the injured member and continued to perform his work. When the mills had closed for the day, he walked to the Polytechnic hospital, had his wound dressed and then left for his home.

Tolen was lifting a sheet of metal when it slipped and fell on the index finger of his right hand, badly crushing it. The man was advised by the foreman to go to the hospital immediately, but he refused, and instead cut the finger off with a jack knife.

At the hospital it was said by the physicians that Tolen's act might be more costly than would have been the loss of his time, as there is danger of blood poisoning because of the dirt on the wound due to the nature of the work he was performing when the accident occurred.

Four Sparrows Fight a Man. Chester, Pa. — William Duffee, a telephone lineman, was attacked by a flock of sparrows. On opening a switchboard along the Chester pike he found that some sparrows had built their nest therein. The birds resented the intrusion and made a strong defense.

Four sparrows flew at his face and made an effort to peck his eyes, compelling Duffee to cover his face with his arm while he forced the sparrows from the box with a pair of pliers, killing one of the birds.

His Arm in Snake's Coil. Allentown, Pa. — H. S. Reinhard, chief engineer of the State Homeopathic hospital, the other morning went to a brook back of the boiler house, near a lot of brush, when a blacksnake six feet long made a dash for him.

He grabbed the snake near the middle of the body, when it quickly wound itself around his arm. With one hand he clutched the head, and then, assisted by other employees, he succeeded in untying the snake, which was then secured with a rope and tied up, mad all over.

THE THRONE OF GRACE

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D.,
Pastor of the Chicago Ave. (Moody's) Church, Chicago.

Text:—"Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast to our profession. For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."—Hebrews 4:14-16.

This Scripture brings us into the throne of grace in which are the crown jewels which we may not only view but possess. They are seven in number and each one of us may have them all. Access to God's Power.

A throne means power. Back of it stand the army and navy, the wealth and prestige of the realm, the life of every patriotic citizen and all the alliances with friendly powers. The throne of grace means that God is now ruling in the power of his love and we have access to that power. Righteousness, justice, holiness all combine in Christ to support the claim of grace.

Steadfastness of Confession.

"Let us hold fast our confession." The lamp was lighted, but under a bushel. The flag was in camp, but not in the breeze. We may be doing business, but the sign over the door has fallen down and we have neglected to replace it. The tree was alive, but without leaves. Through the living Christ we hold fast our confession. In the picture "Christ or Diana?" you see the beautiful young woman to whom friends are appealing and begging her to offer incense to the heathen goddess, but you can see from the firm yet peaceful expression of her face that the living Christ is with her making it possible for her to hold fast her confession.

Sympathy with Weakness.

Jesus is touched with a feeling of our infirmities and his grace enables us to be touched with a feeling of each other's infirmities. Note the difference between infirmity and sin. Infirmity is the weakness of a good thing like weak faith, weak love, weak hope, a weak body. Sin is always an evil, not to sympathize with but to destroy.

Sinless Temptation.

Christ "was tempted in all points as we are yet without sin." He died that we might live, and he conquered, that we might conquer. If evil assails me, I turn to Christ not to help me in the battle but to fight it for me. Ancient wars were decided by duels as in the case of David and Goliath. So all my battles are to be duels between my enemies and Christ. Not only Satan but every enemy of my soul is a conquered foe.

Courage Toward God.

"Let us come boldly," more literally "with liberty of speech." When we lose our liberty of speech to men we have lost our testimony. When we lose our liberty of speech toward God, our prayer life has declined. We need great boldness toward God in asking all he has promised. "Whatsoever ye desire when ye pray believe that ye receive it and ye shall have it." "If ye shall ask anything in my name I will do it, that the Father may be glorified in the Son." Do you desire health or wealth that you may wish to glorify God? Ask it. "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

Willingness to Receive Mercy.

"That we may obtain mercy." A learned man who had received honorary titles wrote after his own name "S. S." which he said meant "Sinner saved." We are proud ready to receive honors, but the proud heart shrinks from the confession of sin which receiving mercy implies. "Only a sinner saved by grace" is all there is of Christian experience, but it is the foundation on which everything else is built.

Seasonable Supply.

"That we may find grace to help in the time of need." The literal translation is "That we may find grace unto seasonable help." We need grace not only enough, but at the right time and administered in the right way. Walking with God we need grace for one little step at a time. The heart needs only one breath at a time. For food we need only one meal at a time. For living we need only one heart-beat at a time. The living Christ ever to it that we have all that we need at the time we need it and administered in the way we need it.

Our Christian Duty.

Christianity is a confession—a proclamation of God's love, grace and promise to a sinful world. The message which Christians should bear to the world is the message of education or spiritual life.

The present condition of Marion and Salem road is a convincing argument for co-operation of hauling contractors and the county court. Hundreds of dollars have just been expended by the county in grading this road. Heavy hauling while it was wet made the road almost impassable. All that work and expense thrown away because the contractors did not co-operate with the county in its efforts to provide good roads. A few days lay-off would have secured a good road, both for the contractors and the traveling public. Why not work together? It would have been a saving to the contractors themselves to have waited a few days for the road to dry.

OPEN LETTER

To All Ministers in Kentucky—Second Whirlwind Campaign.

The Second Whirlwind Campaign for public education in Kentucky will be conducted from Monday, June 28th, to and including Saturday, July 3rd. The entire State will be covered by speakers of exceptional ability. You know something of the great awakening last year; the results have been very gratifying.

I am asking you to have a vital part in the campaign, for the schools' need is great. To this end I designate Sunday, June 27th, to be "Public School Sunday," and I ask that every clergyman in the Commonwealth—minister, pastor, rector, preacher or whatever his title may be—will deliver, on this day, in his own church, at least one address on "Public Education in Kentucky."

I hope that your churches will be especially decorated, that special music will be rendered, that all the children will be invited to be present, and especially that you will invite the parents and the business and professional men of the community. It seems to me that you could do no better service to your church, to your community, and to society, than to participate enthusiastically thus in this educational campaign.

The regular speakers will begin their active work Monday, June 28th. Each county will have a special "Rally Day," an all-day, open-air meeting, with an additional special speaker for the occasion. The campaign is booming, the fight is on, the reports are more than encouraging. Remember our slogan: "For the Boys and Girls and the Commonwealth!"

For an advance educational movement in Kentucky, Now, I am,
Very truly yours,
J. G. CRABBE, Sup't.

Spider in Beres.

Louisville, Ky., June 15.—A spider swallowed by Katherine Degen, the six-year-old daughter of H. C. Degen, is believed to have caused the little girl's death. At dinner she ate a spider of the house and while eating the fruit remarked at the table that she thought she had swallowed something. Two hours later she was taken ill and died despite the efforts of physicians to save her. The doctors believe the poisonous insect caused her death.

According to the child's grandmother, the strawberries were being prepared for the table when she discovered a spider in the fruit. The berries were washed several times but the spider was not found. The grandmother believes that the insect was among the berries served to the little girl.

The Language of The Bar.

"If I were to give you an orange," said Judge Foote, of Topeka, to D. G. Gray, "I would simply say, 'I give you this orange,' but should the transaction be entrusted to a lawyer to put in writing, he would adopt this form: 'I hereby give, grant and convey to you all my interest, right, title and advantage of and in said orange, together with its rind, skin, juice' pulp and pits, and all rights and advantage therein, with full power to life, sick or otherwise eat the same, or gave away with or without the rind, skin, juice, pulp or pits, anything hereinbefore, or in any other deed or deeds, instruments of any nature or kind whatsoever, to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.'"—Ex.

From Cairo to The Sea.

President L. B. Davis, of the Roanoke Retail Merchants' Association, has received a letter from J. W. Goode, president of the Cairo and Norfolk Railroad company at New York in which he states that active construction of about 500 miles of the line will be engaged in during the present summer, embracing the road from the Mississippi river as far as the western boundary of Virginia.

The road is to run from Cairo, Ill., to Norfolk, and will traverse country a part of the way not now touched by a railroad.

Storm of Protest.

The following article on the salary of President LeBus, of the Burley Tobacco Society, was published in last Saturday's issue of the Farmers' Equity Journal.

There is a storm of protest from the men that have to foot the bill of the extravagant salary awarded President LeBus for acting as president of the board of control. It is now in order for an indignant meeting to request or demand the resignation of every officer who voted to give LeBus $36,000 for his part in forming a pool to advance the price of tobacco. From an old time religious standpoint President LeBus could have given his services free of charge to so deserving a cause, namely: Liberating an army of poor farmers from the grasp and greed of a merciless trust.

The Farmers' Equity Journal has fought the battle for the farmers against all adversaries and spent its cash with the printers and has received less than $25 for it, giving the remainder for the good of the cause. $36,000 seems mighty big to us.

MAY LOOK INTO HIS OWN GRAVE.

Friends Dig A Grave For A Man And Arrange Funeral—But He Declines To Occupy It Just Now.

Mr. Vernon, Ind., June 17.—Some unknown person living at New Haven, Ill., played a serious joke on the friends of Sherman Aldredge, formerly of this county, last Monday by sending word from New Haven that Mr. Aldredge had died in an accidental manner and that his remains would arrive at Union Station west of this city Tuesday afternoon on the 1 o'clock train.

Immediately upon receiving the message the relatives of Mr. Aldredge began to prepare the grave in which to lay the remains of Mr. Aldredge. A grave was made at the old Beech cemetery and everything was in readiness to lay Mr. Aldredge in his last resting place. A large crowd of his relatives and friends were at the station when the train pulled in and all of them expected to see the box which contained the remains pushed off the train. When the train came along it did not even stop at Upton, but the engineer gave a loud blast of the whistle and the fast train sped on toward this city. The pallbearers and relatives were somewhat surprised when Clarence LaDuke, a well-known farmer of the neighborhood who was one of the party telephoned to New Haven and wanted to know why the remains of Mr. Aldredge did not arrive on the train and asked when they would come. The men at the other end equally surprised and wanted to know of Mr. LaDuke was in his right mind. Explains began to follow and Mr. LaDuke was informed that Mr. Aldredge was sound and well, and that his remains would not be shipped to Upton for some time to come.

Electrical Road to Traverse Western Kentucky.

Paducah, Ky., 18.—The Kentucky and Ohio River Railroad Company, which projected an interurban line from Paducah to Cairo, Ill., is now contemplating an extension to Henderson and a line to Memphis, it will go to Barlow and Wickliffe, and Cairo will be left out.

At a meeting of Directors in the East it was decided to reorganize in July and incorporate for $5,000,000. The company eventually intends to cross the river at Henderson and make connections with railroads at Evansville, Ind. By going to Henderson the line would traverse rich coal fields and the company has in object freight business more than passenger traffic. It is said an English syndicate is behind the move.

Drops 3,500 Feet And Yet He Lives

Berwyn, Neb., June 16.—U. Sorensen, a local blacksmith, while making an initial ascension in an aeroplane of his own construction fell 3,500 feet without serious injury to himself, although his machine was broken in every part. Sorensen says he will try it again as soon as he builds another machine on the same principles. Sorensen has been working on his aeroplane for some months and the entire town went out to see the trial.

The aeroplane was attached to a balloon in order to secure a start. The balloon carried the man and aeroplane 3,500 feet in the air before Sorensen was able to cut loose. When he succeeded in getting the fastenings cut he discovered that the rudder was jammed and the aeroplane not only refused to fly but began turning over and over in a sheer fall to the earth.

Sorensen was unconscious when he picked up and was bruised over his entire body. But there are no serious injuries.
