"Mr. Dupuy is downstairs," announced Durkin.

The managing editor could not suppress a sour expression which crept across his face. "Dupuy, eh?" he grunted half audibly. "Wonder what he wants around here now? He's a regular buttinski."

McHenry knew Dupuy in a business way, knew he was counsel for several of the big mercantile establishments which advertised in the Advance and that the lawyer had represented various corporations at the state capital. "Well. I suppose I'll have to see him." be finally resolved. "Show Mr. Dupuy in," he called to the boy.

Dupuy was right in his estimate of McHenry's weakness. The lawyer lobbyist was playing in rare fortune, indeed, to discover in his opponent a man who dared not stand for the right. > Dupuy fell back as though struck by a violent blow. And, indeed, he and his interests would have every reason !. believe, he now knew full, well, that they had in all truth a new enemy to combat, an enemy that would cost them dearly if he were to be vanquished.

> "You-you are Jerry Dolan, and you own the Advance." The inwyer cried chokingly. "What are we coming to next?" he finally managed to say after a desperate effort to calm himself.

Jerry Nolan, for none other than the old time strike leader it was, enriched by his mining operations in the rock ribbed Nevada hills, thrilled with the realization that he was now in a position to strike terror into the hearts and souls of those who had attempted to destroy him and his loved ones. He knew that he had in his power the men who had almost succeeded in their designs against him twelve years be-

McHenry, at first even more puzzled than Dupuy and who was bending forward, with an expression of deepest interest and concern implanted on his features, began to understand the situation more clearly when he heard his new employer say in a voice that pulsated with determination: "Yes, Ed Dupuy, I am Jerry Dolan. and I am back in the old town to pay my respects to my friends and-and"- his voice shook-'to my enemies." The whole truth now dawned upon the amazed McHeury and also upon Dupuy, who had been dealing with men long enough to know that his only successful pose at the present momentous time would be a conciliatory one. He must at all hazards smooth over this dangerous factor in the city's affairs, the returned Jerry Dolan, and persuade him that be was now his friend. "Well, well," Dupuy began ingratiatingly," simulating a sickly smile. "this is a most interesting meetingmost interesting, indeed." He laughed as loudly as the nervously contracting muscles of his threat would permit "But it is time now to let bygones be bygones, eb. Mr.-er-ab"- He again thrust forward the hand that the newspaper proprietor had refused to

"Nolan," answered the newcomer in his deep, strong voice, "N-o-l-a-n, with an 'N' and not a 'D' on the front end of it. That's my name now. I had to change it." He stopped abruptly and again directed his dark eyes menacingly on the face of the man opposite him. After a few moments he continued: "You see, Ed Dupuy, I was blacklisted as Dolan. Likely you'll remember that too."

Nolan reached out and, seizing Dupuy's hand, held it firmly. McHenry, at one side, witnessed with a distinct shock what he understood as Nolan's sudden resolve to, as Dupuy had suggested, let "bygones be bygones," else why should be shake hands with the man? Dupuy also felt a thrill of pleasare, even of triumph, as the one time thairman of the Street Railway Workers' union warmly shook his band Dupuy smiled and, bowing pleasantly. essayed to withdraw his hand from Nolan's grip and step away. But his smile turned to a wrinkled contraction of his facial muscles, indicating acutest pain. The giant hand of the ex-striker, ex-miner, was closing with crushing force around the lawyer lobbyist's fingers and knuckles. It did not cease to crush, try as Dupuy might to wrest his hand free. At the moment when he felt that he must scream in his pain or else cringingly plead for mercy Nolan's grip partially relaxed, and he swrng Dupuy to onside. A grim smile made a way into the furrows, won by suffering and pri vatton in the Nevada mining camps and desolate gold regions, that marked Noian's visage. "You see, I'm stronger than you now. Ed Depuy, just as you was stronger than me twelve years ago-you and escaped him as he finished.

Dupuy, now having freed his hand, rubbed it smartly with the other to restore the circulation to the flattened veins. He wheeled away to pick up his overcoat.

Nolan now addressed McHenry, who had seated himself at his desk.

"You're the managing editor?" "Well, I just want to tell you that that was a true article you had about and outer when this morning." he stated to McHenry. "Have another tomorrow and stronger." Another idea came to bim. and he added, "Who was it got up that Henry's rescue. "A young man who has since resign "Yes, it was ed." he interjected for the managing the street car editor. Both McHenry and Dupuy strike, and you were growing uneasy at the trend Nolan's thoughts and words. A g!impse into the craniums of them both at this moment would have revealed the same thought to be predominating: "What is he driving at?"

Nolan appeared distinctly surprised at two things-first, that the writer of the story had resigned; second, that Dupuy should be so familiar with the matter. He took a step toward the

"Resigned?" he asked in reverberating tones. "How do you know?" Before Dupuy could answer Nolan wheeled on McHenry. "Is it so, what Dupuy says?" he asked of the managing editor.

We move in ruts. Getting accustomed to one kind of work, we are unfitted for another. Let a husband ask his wife to buy him a few cigars and the wrappers will likely be paper colored, to look like tobacco leaf. Let a wife ask her husband to hire a maid and, though she may be comely, she will have to be got rid of instanter.

One would suppose that all soldjering is alike. Nothing of the kind. An infantryman knows nothing about cannon; an artilleryman knows nothing about the signal service.

These remarks are a preface to the recital of an attempt to make a fighter out of a musician-an army musician. Jacob Gobeler was a bugler in one of the regular regiments. When the regiment was preparing to go to Cuba at the time of the Spanish-American war he became ambitious to be a real soldier instead of a tooter. His sergeant told him that he had better stick to his bugle, but Jacob said that when a bugler was killed in battle there was no glory in his death. He preferred to die with weapons in his hands instead of a bugle.

So Jacob became a soldier and was in the first battle fought after the troops lauded near Santiago. Unfortunately it was his first fight, and he was rattled. Men were being shot down beside him by an enemy they could not see. Some of the corps were getting back; others were standing. Jacob got it into his head that he should sound a retreat. Putting his hand back to grasp his bugie, he found a revolver instead. Futting the muzzle into his mouth, he tried to blow. In his exger, for he was brought to his senses by feeling something warm on his jaw, and, putting his hand there, he found The wonder was that the builet had not gone through the vertebrae at the back of his neck and killed him. He must have blown through a corner of

Jacob was in a hospital till pretty near the end of the war. It would have been better for him to return to the duties of a bugler, but the hole in his cheek didn't close up, and an attempt to blow a bugle would send face instead of through his bugle.

When Jacob returned to duty be found it impossible to explain to his comrades how he came by the hole in his cheek. The story got out, and he was laughed at. This fired bim with a desire to redeem himself. He longed for an opportunity, and the opportunity came. There was no lack of fighting around Santiago. True, the standing off from one another, but there were sorties and charges. One day Jacob was in some very thick with his bugler at his heels blowing his orders when suddenly the bugle dropped from his hand and he fell from his horse. The colonel, seeing his bugler knocked out, looked about for another, but there was none at hand. The captain of Jacob's company, realizing his predicament, cried out:

"We've got a bugler here, colonel. Gobeler, get up there on that horse!" Gobeler, obedient and forgetting that he had been disqualified to blow orders by his wound, picked up the bugle, mounted the horse and placed himself directly in the colonel's rear. The Spaniards were preparing to crush American troops on that part of the field. The colonel saw a brigade of the enemy swinging round on his right to get in his rear and gave Jacob an order to signal a change of front. Jacob put his bugle to his lips and blew, but there was no sound. All the wind was going out through the hole

The colonel looked at him in surprise and anger. Jacob clapped his hand to ing the wind through the bugle. Shut-$1.75 ting his mouth, he put the bugle to the hole in his cheek. Since no wind could get out through his mouth it went through his cheek. At any rate, enough of it got through the bugle to faintly sound the colonel's order. *But Jacob's delay gave the enemy an adcapture of the regiment. It was saved only by support coming in the nick of time. When the fighting was over is good the grain yield is vast, but the colonel called out to Jacob's cap-

"Keep that man in the ranks, captain. He's no good for a bugler." "He was a good bugler, colonel, but he insisted on going into the ranks. The first thing he did was to try to blow a signal on his pistol and shot a hole in his cheek. Now he's no good

After this episode Jacob was so ridihimself killed in order to escape their jokes. To make matters worse it seemed that all the buglers in the army were getting shot, and the command ing officers were always sending for men who could sound the calls. It was constantly: "Say, Gobeler, you can blow a bugle, can't you? Oh, I forgot. You ruined your wind trying to blow fied, you can have your money back. down the muzzle of a pistol." These and other references to his misfortune so worked upon Jacob that he gave up trying to be a hero and concluded to Breathe Hyomei (High o-me) and complete outfit cost but $1.00 and sink into an inferior bugler. Going to consists of a hard rubber inhaler that the hospital, he secured a hot water bag and turned it into a wind bag, making a close connection with rubber bands between its mouth and that of his bugle. Then he offered himself to his colonel to sound calls, and, there being no one else to fill the place, Jacob was accepted. As soon as the war was over he was discharged.

OF ALL.

Should be Satisfied Here-Vast Proportions of West.

Hepner, Oregon, Dec. 23. - Dear Calmes-1 have been thinking for some time that I would write you something of the Northwest which perhaps might be of interest to some of the farmers readers of The Herald,

I shall speak mostly of Oregon, as I have seen more of this State than any of the Northwest. It is said that Oregon has the largest territory with-Oregon has the largest territory with-Union. From the termination of one of our branch lines freight is hauled by wagon farther than any other place in the United States. I think the distance is three hundred miles or core. Both the Hill and Harriman lines are building roads into the interior of the State. .

vast size of this State, we will com pare it with the State of Kentucky, Oregon has a total area of 94,560 square miles and Kentucky an area of 40,000 square miles. Oregon is more than two and one-third times citement he must have pulled the trig- the size of Kentucky. The census of 1960 shows Kentucky's population to be 2,147,174, and Oregon's at blood pouring from a hole in his cheek. that time 413,536. I think she claims 600,000 now, but even at this figure you can see the vast difference in the population. Any one who has not traveled, through the far West cannot realize how sparsely settled this country is. There are 15,000,-000 people crowded together in some of the New England States, on an area equal to what 600,000 are living on here. Two hundred and fifty five thousand of this 600,000 population are in the city of Portland.

In this great State most any conditions may be found, ranging from the ideal climate a d rich soil of some of the little villages which have Spanish and American forces were the appearance of an Eden, to the sandy deserts where neither animal or vegetable life exists, which is apt fighting. The colonel was racing about to bring to your mind, on a July day, thoughts of the infernal regions. All kinds of land may be found from the well improved fruit farm which is valued at $1,500 an acre, to land that is hardly worth one dollar per one thousand acres. The greatest difficulty in central and eastern Oregon is the scarcity of water, for it rains but very little east of the Cascade Range during the summer season. There are some places where the rainfall is only three or four inches a year. Most of the soil is very rich, all that is lacking is the > Stock raising and wheat growing are the cheif pursuits in the central and eastern parts of the State. Here we find great herds of cattle and sheep-often as many as 5,000 head in one herd. In some of the valleys especially in the Willamette we find diversified farming, but no corn is produced on account of light rainfall and cold nights.

> I shall now try to give you some idea of grain growing and farm life of eastern Oregon. When the season this is the only crop the farmer bas, so when it fails, he has nothing else to depend on.

The railroad company I am with here has one feeder here 45 miles long which runs through a great wheat belt.

Three years ago there were 1,000 car loads of wheat shipped off this short line. The last two years have been almost failures for the grain crop in Oregon on account of the drouth. One man told me he sowed 1,000 acres last year and reaped only 800 sacks. They sow in both fall and spring here and harvest from July to September. They do not bind and shock as we do in Kentucky, but run either a header or a combine. If a combine, the grain is cut and threshed all in one operation. It takes from thirty to forty five horses to draw one of these large combines.

Now I shall try to give you a slight idea of how a great many farmers have to live out here. Mr. Kentucky

Evan Wilder was a bard worker and a despiser of every one who was not wrapped in his or her daily occupation. "I'm a practical sort of fellow," he used to say, "and don't go much on sentiment." It did not occur to him tical and the ideal. One who could look out far into space at a spiral nebula-a forming universe-and be filled with contempt for a transaction in cotton yarn Evan could not understand. He would call such a person an idiotic star gazer.

On Evan's thirtieth birthday he said to himself: "I have accumulated sufticient funds to have a home. There can be no home without a woman. She is needed to run the household. will marry."

And so he married. He was careful in his selection to secure a practical girl like himseif. He asked her friends if there was any nonsense about her, and they all replied in the negative. He talked "practical" to ber, and she convinced him that she was more practical than be. In planning for the wedding he told her that honeymoons served no other purpose than to make brides and grooms tired of each other. They would come home at the end of

They had no sooner settled themselves in their seats on the train after the wedding than Mrs. Wilder took a book out of her hand bag and began to read. Evan turned and looked at her curiously. She paid no attention to him, but went on reading, and he turned away to the window. For the first time in his life he had felt a desire to say something tender. But there was little encouragement to "talk soft" to a woman deeply interested in wife told her bushand that she was very tired after the _re_arations for the wedding and wished a room to herself at the hotel. Evan sat down to breakfast alone, He had pictured that first breakfast that I did not hear of this remedy and wondered how he would ever get scener, as it would have saved me through it. He would read his paper and his wife would object. He would tay it aside and try to say something agreeable to ber and she would pout. She had relieved him of her presence at this undesirable first breakfast, and he was at perfect liberty to read his paper as he liked. He strolled during the morning over the beach thinking of how different was the reality from what he had conceived. He had expected to be bored, but in a different way. An old joke about the waning of the boneymoon wherein the bride had wished for some friend and the groom even for an enemy occurred to him. FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE

The Angel of the Crimea Autumn of her life in an invalid chair, lives a white-haired, sweet-faced, kindly-voiced noble woman, whom the world knows as Forence Nightingale. Born in 1820 in Florence, Italy, the daughter of a wealthy Englishman, under his loving tutorship she mastered the classics and literature, became a good musician and learned severa! languages. She had a genius for helpfulness, a consecration to humanity that found expression in sweet ministrations of love and care of the sick and suffering. In nursing she saw a noble career for women and in 1849 went to a Protestant school for nurses, on the Rhine. On her return to England she assumed management of a sanitarium for invalid governesses. In 1854 England was roused to a white heat of indignation by the revelations of the horrors of the hospital service of the Crimea. Government incompetency, imbecile red tape, rascally dishonor and criminal neglect in treating the sick and wounded soldiers made mere war itself a paradise of mercy by contrast. Dante's Inferno seemed a mild bit of imagination in the face of the real horrors at Scutari, with four miles of beds huddled in one three-story house. Florence Nightingale volunteered to lead a band of women to transform the hospitals in the name of humanity, and in November, 1854, with thirtyeight nurses she reached Scutari. Her magic touch brought order out of chaos; the sunshine, sweetness and soothing peace of woman's work filled the rooms; the ghastly mortality was reduced to a minimum; soldiers wounded and dying kissed the shadow of the angel of the Crimea as it fell across their counterpanes or reverently touched the hem of her garment as she passed near them. Often for twenty hours at a stretch she stood giving her orders-the noble leader of her little army of peace; and her kindness, wisdom, sweetness, energy, influence and inspiration seemed inexhaustible. For two years she kept up the fight and with health impaired returned to England, shunning all publicity. The £50,000 testimonial tendered her by the people, she refused, but finally accepted to found a training school for nurses. By penny subscriptions the soldiers secured enough to erect a statue to her memory, but this, too, she rejected. For nearly fifty years she has been an invalid, and yet this "Grand Old Woman of England," at the age of eighty sevenis still serene, sweet, helpful and contented, with a name that will be hallowed as long as the British army and the British nation shall endura-
