Strikes Pier of Bridge And is Broken Apart. Three Persons Drowned.

Clarksville, Tenn., Feb. 18.—Striking a pier of the Cumberland river bridge at Clarksville, shortly before dawn Saturday, the towboat Chancy Lamb, Captain J. B. Smith, of Paducah, sank in 20 feet of water.

Three negroes, two men and a woman, of Metropolis, Ill., were drowned. Their names could not be learned. All the remainder of the crew escaped unhurt.

So sudden was the collision and so quickly did the boat sink that there was no time to lower life boats and the crew made their way to land by swimming.

The Chancy Lamb is owned by Paul Ryman. He bought her for the Ryman Line of Nashville. Until recently she had been leased by the Rampendahl Lumber Company, of Metropolis, Ill. She was on her way to Nashville when the collision occurred. Pilot Newman was at the wheel.

The Lamb was built in 1892 at Dubuque, Ia. Her port was at Nashville, Tenn. She was 136 feet in length, 28.8 feet in width with a 4.5 feet hold. Her gross and net tonnage was 194. She was equipped with 200 horse power engine. Her crew consisted of 17 men. The Lamb arrived at Paducah last Sunday night with a big tow of empties and tied up there until Wednesday, when she departed for Nashville.

One Of Our Boys.

Another one of our Marion boys has received recognition in adopted home in the far west. This time it is Warner Thomas, who was elected city clerk of Redlands California, which really comprises two other offices as well and the fact that he was elected as a democrat over an older and well known Republican in a city which is largely of the latter faith, only goes to prove how he stands with all the people regardless of politics. Warner according to our exchanges stood for good government and opposed to liquor and merited all the votes he received. He and his mother, Mrs. Carrie Thomas, now reside there and we are glad to know they are loved and respected there as they were here.

COMPARES OLLIE TO NEW YORK CITY

Says Both Are Wonders.

New York, Feb. 3, 1911. Dear Mr. Jenkins,

Marion, Ky.

Over in Washington the other day the writer told Ollie James that he certainly earned his salary if he climbed up that long lingering flight of capitol steps once a day. Congressman James said "why don't you take the elevator?" And so I might if I had known it. Really there is so much in knowing how, where and when, I reckon the congressman knew of the elevator and used it in his successful flight against the Louisville outfit as told in the Press last week. It rather seems as though he had been using elevators and limited trains ever since he left off the knickerbockers although that's not so many years ago, the way he has made time in the

Look Out For Peddlers.

The Muhlenberg Argus, published at Central City says:

Look out for peddlers these days, especially those dirty Asiatics who have come in from Christian and Hopkins counties, where the State Board is attempting to prevent the spread of smallpox. Keep these peddlers off your premises. There are already several cases of smallpox in the western part of this county. A spread of the disease is to be dreaded. Beware of strangers, but especially dirty peddlers who have been in Christian and Hopkins counties.

Great Throgs See

Archbishops Remains.

Philadelphia, Feb. 15.—More than 175,000 people today viewed the body of Archbishop Ryan as it lay in full pontifical vestments in front of the altar in the cathedral. Eighty-five thousand children from the parochial schools first viewed the body, while the adults marched four abreast and continued to pass the casket until long after midnight.

political race. I don't know why one should compare the congressman from the first Kentucky district, with the great city of New York without in their respective ways both have done things worth while and both are keeping at it.

It is interesting to know that this little spot on a new hemisphere, known as the old world, has 4,800,000 people, that its railways every sixteen days carry 16,000,000 passengers which is equal to the combined population of Denmark, Sweden, Norway and the Netherlands.

There is so much in New York that is strange to the ordinary American, the little things that are noticeable to an observant eye. Passing along on the sixth Avenue, elevated one notices a sign over a well constructed block "cat and dog hospital, separate rooms for patients," why not hospitals for these sick canines and felines when their value is so wonderfully great. Imagine buying a dog for $6500 and a cat for nearly as much.

I heard a story at dinner this evening about an old colored man who occasionally acted as purveyor of food for a gentleman who liked to live pretty well. Wild turkeys were plenty and had been served rather often on his table. So he asked Sam if he could get him a nice fat domestic turkey for the following Sunday. Yes sir, course I can, replied Sam I know just where to get it. The turkey was duly delivered, dressed and drawn nicely and came to the table a nice delicious plump looking brown bird. In carving it, several shot were found in the breast and the inference drawn was that Sam had palmed a wild turkey off for a tame one.

The next day Sam was called down by the angry epicure who said, "you rascal, you brought me a wild turkey, I know for I found a lot of shot in it."

"Now look here, boss, said Sam, you is entirely wrong that was surely a tame turkey and those shot, well now those shot were just intended for me."

D. C. Roberts.

THE EYE OF THE NATION IS ON HIM NEXT U. S. SENATOR FROM KENTUCKY.

First in War, First in Peace, First in The Hearts of His Countrymen.

Congressman Ollie M. James, whom we all know and love, was selected from among the many good Democrats in the lower house to preside in the place of Speaker Cannon while the Canadian reciprocity treaty was under consideration. His selection marked the establishment of a precedent. Cannon's avowed reason was that he wanted to select the most thorough-going Democrat in congress in order that the Democratic party might be thereby committed to the principal embodied in the treaty.

Just a week or so ago, Senator Paynter, also of Kentucky, and a candidate against Mr. James for the senate, was selected from among the Democratic senators in the upper house of congress to lead the Democratic defense of Senator Lorimer, whom the nation believes was elected through the bribery of the Illinois legislature. Lorimer is the representative of corporate interests whose charters are registered in New Jersey and whose business is carried on throughout the United States. Therefore, the selection of Mr. Paynter brought into sharp contrast, one with the other. James was selected for his principles, Paynter for other reasons.

Upstate people sometimes think it strange that Ollie James has the hold on the people of his district at he possesses. In the light of just such signal honors as that accorded by Cannon's action, it is reasonable to think that he has the same hold on his confreres. Big in mind, body and heart, Ollie James is a man among the people. Mr. Paynter is a man from among the interests, Ollie James, it is true, has sought the limelight, while Paynter has avoided publicity. Here we have another contrast, for there is less likelihood of dubious things being done by the man in the limelight than by the man in the dark. The records of Ollie James has been a battle against the very things that Paynter champions with his defense of Lorimer. The one ambition of James is to accomplish things for Democracy and the people. The ambition of Paynter seems to be the protection of those things that James has fought against. The two men are diametrically opposite in all of their inclinations and ambitions. The one is passive, the other militant. Paynter is defensive always, James is aggressive.

As both ask to be elected to the United States senate, these contrasts are extremely interesting, and as the nation needs aggressive rather than passive men, it would appear that Mr. Paynter is to be made content with one term in the senate.—News Democrat.

From The Alva Oklahoma Paper "Renfrew's Record" We Clip, A Big Sale At Jesse F. Bruce's.

Col. W. W. Campbell reports the biggest sale of the season at J. F. Bruce's south of Hopeton, Thursday, February 2nd.

Nearly 1000 men were present. Stock sold well. Cows went extra high and horses which have been a drag in the market recently, went at good figures. The sale amounted to $3300.00, $1500.00 being cash in hand, and over-run the best estimate by several hundred dollars. Mr. Bruce is highly pleased with the result of the sale, and will soon go to the northwest coast with a view of locating. We regret to lose such popular citizens as Mr. Bruce.

Rev. G. B. McDonald of Greenville, preached two fine sermons at Sugar Grove, at 2:30 Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. He had good congregations at each service and his sermons were much enjoyed.

NEW FIRM

Brown & Carleton have bought out J. F. Dorroh at Crayne and will add many new lines besides increasing those previously carried. The firm is composed of J. C. Carleton a well known citizen and Alva E. Brown the I. C. agent at Crayne. They have ample capital and are men of sterling character and will make a valuable addition to the Crayne mercantile circle. They will inaugurate a premium system in their store and already have them on display.

On The Site Of The Old

"Press Office"

Last week during those bright sunny days, Rev. M. E. Miller broke up his garden spot part of which is located on the lot occupied by the "Press" the year after the fire. While digging and laying off he found a silver coin which the owner may have by describing and identifying. Its denomination was such that it will buy several packages of garden-seed for the Reverend gentleman if not called for.

Bear Elopes With Her Hobble Skirt

Monticello, N. Y., Feb. 21.—Miss Amelia Yeoman of No. 312 Macon street, Brooklyn, visited her summer home on Kiamesha Lake yesterday. She unpacked some clothing, and when she found traces of moths in a hobble skirt hung the garment on a line in the back yard. When she went to get the skirt this morning it was gone.

Tracks in the snow about the place where the skirt had hung made Miss Yeoman suspect that a tramp had been prowling about the house. When Wash Bailey and Charles Smith saw the footprints they didn't tell her otherwise but made haste to get their guns. Since early this morning they have been trailing the bear that really was the thief.

When Miss Yeoman was asked this evening if the skirt had been found she said it hadn't.

"And," she added, "if the bear finds it as hard to climb a tree with that skirt on as I did once, it will be a divided skirt when it does come back."

Bailey and Smith have already come across several places where the hobble bear stopped to use language.

Crayne School Closed.

We take this method of thanking Prof. J. C. Hardin for his many kindnesses and the interest he took in our school. Mr. Hardin certainly is a fine teacher and we have had the best school here we have ever had.

School closed with a grand exhibition and every body enjoyed it fine, and we invite Mr. Hardin back again to teach our fall term.

Development of Coal Lands

Near Providence.

A four hundred thousand dollar coal deal, in which men of Henderson and vicinity are interested, has just been consummated.

It is the sale of forty thousand or more acres of coal land to a syndicate composed largely of wealthy Frenchmen.

The deal was put across by L. S. Jackman, of Henderson; J. T. Edwards, of Providence; Wm. Lynch of Dawson Springs; L. B. Henry, of Dixon, and their associates.

The coal land is some of the best in the rich coal fields of Western Kentucky. It is located in Hopkins county, between Providence and Dawson Springs.

This is part of the big coal rights that has occupied the attention of Mr. Jackman and associates for the past year or two and is not the first deal that has been put over. The French capitalists were brought here last fall and were shown over this tempting coal tract. They returned again a few days ago, and that they were impressed favorably is self-evident from the fact that the papers were signed up consummating the deal.

This vast tract of coal land is bought for the purpose of development in the near future.

It has been reported that the Arcadia Hotel at Dawson Springs is in this deal, but this is denied so far. However, it has been repeatedly published lately that the Hollomans will turn over the property to new men at a price that will mean a fortune to them.

Inventor Refuses Offers.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Feb. 15.—W. R. Bowles, the local photographer who has invented an improved lamp box for enlarging pictures, making negatives by artificial light and for general purposes in photography has been granted a patent on it. He will now proceed to apply for patents in several foreign countries, and believes he has a fortune in his grasp if he can protect himself. Even this early Mr. Bowles is having a multitude of applications from wholesale houses to handle his machine, and from firms and individuals to buy his patent right but as yet he has turned a deaf ear to all such.

J. L. Stewart Marions up to date city photographer was one of the first to secure the above mentioned machine. He now has it and it works like a charm and he is delighted with it.

McCreary Should Get Off.

The Bowling Green Messenger has never declared its choice for governor. In fact, the Messenger dislikes immeasurably to be compelled to take a stand for or against a candidate within the party before the party authorities have spoken.

In the exercises of what we considered a public duty, we have heretofore given some reasons why we thought ex-Senator McCreary should not be made the Democratic standard-bearer, and why, even if made the governor of Kentucky, it would not redound to the glory or the credit of the commonwealth. In saying this, we have not been actuated by private or mercenary motives. The election of one man over another will not affect the Messenger and its editor any more than it will affect any other Kentuckian.

The recent withdrawal of Hon. Ben Johnson from the race for Democratic nomination for governor more than ever justifies our position and makes it all the more obligatory upon the Democrats of Kentucky to retire Senator McCreary from the race, and let us agree upon some man who can win, and after winning occupy the governor's chair with credit to himself and honor to the commonwealth.

Among the rank and file of the Democracy of Kentucky there is no fanatical religious prejudice. Washington county, for instance, where more than a majority of the Democratic voters are members of the Catholic church, has not sent a Catholic to the legislature for a quarter of a century. McCreary county, on the other hand, where there are but a few hundred Democratic Catholic voters, has sent a Catholic to the legislature for two terms and would send him again if he would serve.

That there has been a systematic and industrious attempt to inject the doctrinal religious phase into this campaign, there can be no doubt. That it was done by persons favorable to the candidacy of Senator McCreary is difficult of proof, but is easy of surmise. It has been talked in this county by McCreary supporters. It was attempted to be injected into the Methodist conference at Russellville last fall. Mr. Johnson says in his card of withdrawal that it has been insidiously circulated throughout the state.

The editor of the Messenger is not a Catholic. He is a Methodist, as his people were before him. But he decries any attempt to inject a religious phase into a political campaign.

The men who did it were not actuated either by religious or political motives, except such as might issue to private ends. The men behind it are as reprehensible as the present Republican Senator Bradley, who joined the A. P. A.'s in Louisville and told political friends in Paducah that he expected to die in the arms of the "Mother church."

If Senator McCreary is not responsible for this altogether unwise thrusting of this matter into the Democratic campaign, then he is letting other people do his managing for him. He must call them off, or get off himself. The Democratic party is the party of freedom of thought and opinion, and a few members of a political kitchen cabinet ought not to violate this principle. —Bowling Green Messenger.

Wanted—Church Statesmanship.

In the broad, strategic ideal it is evident that nothing less than full intercommunion between all Christian churches, and nothing short of economic and efficient administrative organization can meet the religious demand of modern civilization. For ours is not merely the age of democracy it is the dawn of a new era of social cooperation. If individualism is not to be swamped in some devastating flood of socialism, it will be because the individual shall be saved in a Christian fellowship and co-working. The ideal of Church unity—the strategic plan—is comprehension of diversities; not uniformity, but conformity of one to another and of all the members together in a common service, as one body doing and getting done the Lord's will on earth.

The recent simultaneous action of two large religious bodies in this country has great promise for the coming unity of the Church. The General Convention of Protestant Episcopal Church, which was held in Cincinnati in October last, appointed a large and representative commission to arrange as the "next step towards unity" for a conference of Christian communions throughout the world. At the same time the National Council of the Congregational Churches in Boston appointed a committee, as their representatives, to consider any overtures that might come to them from the Episcopal Church. The noble language in which the call of the Episcopal Church to other Christian communions is conceived, as well as the spontaneous response at the same time by the Congregationalists—the two messages passing each other on the way—lift the whole movement up to a high plane of endeavor, while the work of the commission will at once give to it definite efficiency and practical aim. Time will be needed; but with statesmanlike wisdom and patient persistence on the part of representatives of the churches in the proposed conferences a beginning of the end of the divisions of the one Church may be made, and the Christian people of the world be providentially led on and to happier issues than a year ago any of us might have dared to hope. —Newman Smyth in The North American Review.

Restaurant Held Up By A

Chicago Bandit

$3,000 Secured At A Late Hour.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Rector's restaurant, one of the best known of Chicago's down town cafes, was held up today and the cashier robbed of $3,000 by a masked man, who pointed two revolvers at the employees, secured the receipts of Saturday night and escaped. There were no patrons in the cafe during the holdup.

The robber took the time when the restaurant would have the fewest persons present and the largest sum of money on hand of any time during the week and for this reason is believed to have been some one familiar with the customs of the place. The cashier, John P. Adams, who was forced to hand over the money, believes him to have been a former employee.

The restaurant is owned by the Rector corporation, of which Charles E. Rector, of New York, is an official. It is in the downtown theater district and has a large patronage of after-theater diners.

Sunday morning the combined Saturday afternoon and night receipts are kept in the safe. The robbery took place soon after 6 o'clock, when only the head waiter and the cashier were in the main dining room. A well dressed man entered and enquired for a man whom he said was a former employee. Before Cashier Adams could answer the robber drew two revolvers from his pocket and ordered both to hold up their hands. He then ordered Adams to give him the money from the cash drawer.

After handing the robber several packages of bills, Adams said that was all he had, but was forced to open the safe and take out other money. The robber then backed out of the place, still keeping both men covered with the revolvers. Over $1,000 in currency in a drawer in the cashier's desk was overlooked.

A scrubwoman, who entered the main room during the robbery and saw the revolvers pointed at the men, fainted. The police, who immediately began a search for the bandit, believe the robbery the work of some professional crook who had planned it for some time.

J. S. G. Green of Fredonia arrived in the city Friday, and left for home Monday at noon, after a pleasant visit to his many friends here. Mr. Green is looking well and is enjoying life and is always a welcome visitor to Marion.

The play of "Sis Perkins" has that snap and go to it that marks it as one of the plays of the day, no long tire-some waits and you are interested all time. There is something in the play that seems to hold you in a good humor all the time and when it's all over you leave the theatre feeling like the little boy who had his first good stick of candy,—"I want more." Opera House Monday, Feb. 27th.

We have received notice that Bro. N. A. Palmer, D. D., of Louisville, Ky., field secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, will spend Sunday next Feb. 26th, in our city, and that he will preach at 11 o'clock at the Methodist church and at 7 o'clock at the Baptist church. Dr. Palmer is an eloquent speaker and ought to be greeted by large congregations at both services.

All special scenery and mechanical effects are carried by "Sis Perkins" Company. The play is on the order of "Way Down East" and "The Old Homestead." It's worth your while to take advantage of this opportunity and do not make a mistake, but see this great play. Opera House, Monday, Feb. 27th

Did you ever sit on a mossy bank and look at the sun-kissed brook as it merrily dances in glee around the protruding pebbles and feel glad that you are alive? Well, that is the same sensation that you experience when you go to see "Sis Perkins" the clever show that is soon to be here. It is a laughing, bubbling pure heart and home story. When the curtain drops on the last act you have been refreshed by a drink of good cool spring water. One night only, Monday Feb. 27 at the Opera House.

Thursday the fire alarm was sounded and soon a throng was hurrying to the residence of Henry Young on east Depot street. The fire proved to be only a minor one and was soon extinguished. It caught in the kitchen flue. The damage which was less than $50.00, was settled Saturday by Bourland & Haynes, with whom Mr. Young carried insurance and the settlement was satisfactory.

S. C. Bennett of Fredonia, died Monday of Tuberculosis, of which he had suffered for several years. He is survived by his wife and two sons. Mr. Bennett has been a merchant at Fredonia for a number of years and had lived in that vicinity all his life. He was a life-long member of Baptist church.

When you buy the American Field Fence, you get 200 lbs. more fence to the 100 rds. than you get in any other fence made. Why not buy the best?
T. H. Cochran & Co.

"Sis Perkins" this season carries a brand new company of carefully selected dramatic artists, vaudeville specialties, and all special scenery and electrical effects for the entire production. It's got plenty of comedy, rural simplicity and the serious and better side of life filled to overflowing with all that is unique, bright, odd, unusual and startling. "Sis Perkins" is a mirthful musical comedy. It's all blended in one long holiday. Something doing all the time. Opera House, Monday, Feb. 27.

Attorneys L. H. James and Allie Moore, of Marion, were in the city Tuesday and Wednesday taking depositions in the divorce proceeding of Mrs. Willis Yarbrough against Mr. Yarbrough. Mr. James is representing the defendant and Mr. Moore the plaintiff. Mrs. Yarbrough is seeking divorce and alimony in the sum of $3,000. The case will be tried out at Marion.
Providence Enterprise.

If any one has any important letters they wish delivered promptly, send them by W. S. Jones. He carried some to Sturgis recently and when he got back, his wife found them tucked away in the same pocket she put them in before he left home.

Since C. Jar Smith first produced "Sis Perkins" he has had the play rewritten each season and each year sees the good clever comedy with a new coat of action but with the same name. Mr. Smith has this year engaged an exceptionally strong cast and is carrying special scenery with the show which is all new every year. It will be one of the best shows here this season. The public wants good things to be amused with and Manager Frisbie has it with "Sis Perkins." It's a good thing, something doing all the time. At the Opera House, Monday, Feb. 27th.

Wednesday evening, at the home of the brides mother at Repton, Miss Ada Samuel was united in marriage to Mr. J. H. Newcom, by Rev. W. T. Oakley in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives. The bride is a beautiful brunette and is a daughter of the late Joe Samuel and grand-daughter on her mothers side of the late Squire W. H. Arher, and is a fine young woman. The groom is a son of the late Wm. Newcom and is a sterling young farmer. Both belong to fine families and they start on lifes journey with bright prospects. We extend them our heartiest congratulations.

The pretty play of "Sis Perkins" teems with quips of human nature and one is brought very close to humanity without its civilized frill, without its passions subdued by dissimulation, with all of its faults and some of its vices. The sentiments are pure, clean and wholesome, with a constant reminder of your boy and girlhood days that brings just a suspicion of moisture to the eyes at times. Remember the date and be one of the happy throng to see "Sis." Opera House, Monday, Feb. 27th.

Washington's Birthday Party.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hayward, at their palatial home on Walker street, entertained at cards Tuesday evening. The guests were seated at seven tables, with five at each to enjoy the fascinating pastime. Hatdeths and cherries were in evidence every where in honor of the date in history, this detail being carried out also in the delicious refreshments which contained candied cherries in the Cream, cake and other confections.

Mr. and Mrs. Hayward proved themselves delightful hosts, the warmth of their welcome and the bright and beautiful interior of the home contrasting very strongly with the bleak wintry scene outside.

Among the guests were noted the following: Mr. and Mrs. Murray Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Haynes, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Haynes, Mr. Robt Cook, Edward Hayward, Jr., Mesdames: Emma Hayward Stella Haynes, Ida Henry, Henrietta Cameron, Lemah Nunn, Misses Lizzie and Ruby James, Mary F. Cameron, Kittie, Fannie and Ellis Grav, Allie May Yates, Della Barnes and Martha Henry.

The prizes were awarded as follows:

1st ladies prize, Mrs. W. M. Sanders, Cut glass bowl.
2nd ladies prize, Mrs. W. N. Russell Pair embroidery scissors.
1st Gents prize, J. W. Wilson, Silver match case.
2nd Gents prize, George P. Roberts, Pair silk suspenders.

CHAPTER II.
THE FOREST HUNGER.

LEE VIRGINIA was awakened next morning by the passing of some one down the hall calling at each door, "Six o'clock!" She had not slept at all till after 1. She was lame, heart weary and dimmed, but she rose and dressed herself as neatly as before. She had decided to return to Sulphur. "I cannot endure this," she had repeated to herself a hundred times. "I will not!"

Hearing the clatter of dishes, she ventured with desperate courage into the dining room, which was again filled with cowboys, coal miners, ranchers and their tousled families and certain nondescript town loafers of tramp-like appearance.

Slipping into a seat at the end of the table which offered the cleanest cloth, Lee Virginia glanced round upon her neighbors with shrinking eyes. All were shoveling their food with knife blades and guzzling their coffee with bent heads. Their faces scared her, and she dropped her eyes.

At her left, however, sat two men whose greetings were frank and manly and whose table manners betrayed a higher form of life. One of them was a tall man with a lean red face, against which his blond mustache lay like a chalk mark. He wore a corduroy jacket cut in Norfolk style, and in the collar of his yellow shirt a green tie was loosely knotted. His hands were long and freckled, but were manifestly trained to polite usages.

The other man was younger and browner and of a compact, athletic figure. On the breast of his olive green coat hung a silver badge which bore a pine tree in the center. His shirt was plain colored and rough, but his head was handsome. He looked like a young officer in the undress uniform of the regular army. His hands were strong, but rather small, and the lines of his shoulders graceful. Most attractive of all were his eyes, so brown, so quietly humorous and so keen.

In the rumble of cheap and vulgar talk the voices of these men appealed to the troubled girl with great charm. She felt more akin to them than to any one else in the room, and from time to time she raised her eyes to their faces.

They were aware of her also, and their gaze was frankly admiring as well as wondering, and in passing the ham and eggs or the sugar they contrived to show her that they considered her a lady in a rough place and that they would like to know more about her.

She accepted their civilities with gratitude and listened to their talk with growing interest. It seemed that the young man had come down from the hills to meet his friend and take him back to his cabin.

"I can't do it today, Ross," said the older man. "I wish I could, but one meal of this kind is all I can stand these days."

Mrs. Wetherford, seizing the moment, came down to do the honors. "You fellows ought to know my girl, Virginia, this is Forest Supervisor Redfield, and this is Ross Cavanaugh, his forest ranger in this district. You ought to know each other. My girl's just back from school, and she don't think much of the fork. It's a little too coarse for her."

Lee flushed under this introduction, and her distress was so evident that both men came to her rescue. The older man bowed and said, "I didn't know you had a daughter, Mrs. Wetherford." And Cavanaugh, with a glance of admiration, added, "We've been wondering who you might be."

Lize went on: "I thought I'd got rid of her. She's been away now for about ten years. I don't know but it was a mistake. Look's like she's grown a little too fine haired for us doughies out here."

"So much the worse for us," replied Redfield.

This little dialogue gave the girl time to recover herself, but as Cavanaugh watched the blush fade from her face, leaving it cold and white, he sympathized with her—pitted her from the bottom of his heart. He perceived that he was a chance spectator of the first scene in a painful domestic drama—one that might easily become a tragedy. He wondered what the forces might be which had brought such a daughter to this squalor, this virgin, to see a maid of this delicate bloom thrust into such a place as Lize Wetherford's "hotel" had the reputation of being roused indignation.

"When did you reach town?" he asked, and into his voice his admiration crept.

"Only last night."

"You find great changes here?"

"Not so great as in my mother. It's all—"

She stopped abruptly, and he understood.

Lize being drawn back to her cash register, Redfield turned to say: "My dear young lady, I don't suppose you remember me, but I knew you when you were a tot of five or six. I know your father very well."

"Did you?" Her face lighted up.

"Yes, poor fellow; he went away from here rather under a cloud, you know."

"I remember a little of it. I was here when the shooting took place."

"So you were. Well, since then much has happened to us all," he explained to the ranger. "There wasn't room for a dashing young blood such as Ed Wetherford was in those days." He turned to Lee. "He was no worse than the man on the other side—it was dog eat dog, but some way the people rather settled on him as a scapegoat. He was forced out, and your mother has borne the brunt of it since. Those were lawless days."

More and more Lee Virginia's heart went out in trust toward these two men. Opposed to the malodorous, unshaven throng which filled the room, they seemed wondrously softened and sympathetic, and in the ranger's gaze was something else—something which made her troubles somehow less intolerable. She felt that he understood the difficult situation in which she found herself.

Redfield went on. "You find us horribly uncivilized after ten years' absence?"

"I find this uncivilized," she replied with fierce intensity, looking around the room. Then, on the impulse, she added: "I can't stand it! I came here to live with my mother, but this is too—too horrible!"

"I understand your repulsion," replied Redfield. "A thousand times I repeat, apropos of this country. 'Where every prospect pleases and only man is vile.'"

"Do you suppose it was as bad ten years ago?" she asked. "Was everything as dirty—as mean? Were the houses then as full of flies and smells?"

"I'm afraid they were. Of course the country isn't all like this, and there are neat homes and gentle people in Sulphur, but most cattlemen are—as they're always been—a shiftless, happy-go-lucky lot at best, and some of them have been worse, as you know."

"I never dreamed of finding my mother in such a place," she went on. "I don't know what to do or say. She isn't well. I ought to stay and help her, and yet—oh, it is disheartening!"

Lize tapped Redfield on the shoulder. "Come over here, Reddy, if you have finished your breakfast. I want to talk with you."

Redfield rose and followed his landlady behind the counter and there sat in earnest conversation while she made change. The tone in which her mother addressed the supervisor, her action of touching him as one man lays hand upon another, was profoundly revealing to Lee Virginia. She revolted from it without realizing exactly what it meant, and, feeling deeply but vaguely the forest ranger's sympathy, she asked:

"How can you endure this kind of life?"

"I can't, and I don't," he answered cautiously, for they were being closely observed. "I am seldom in town. My domain is more than a mile above this level. My cabin is 9,000 feet above the sea. It is clean and quiet up there."

"Are all the other restaurants in the village like this?"

"Worse. I come here because it is the best."

She rose. "I can't stand this air and these flies any longer. They're too disgusting."

He followed her into the other house, conscious of the dismay and bitterness which burst forth the instant they were alone. "What am I to do? She is my mother, but I've lost all sense of relationship to her. And these people, except you and Mr. Redfield, are all disgusting to me. It isn't because my mother is poor, it isn't because she's keeping boarders; it's something else." At this point her voice failed her.

"Let us go out into the air," suggested the ranger presently. "The mountain wind will do you good."

She followed him trustfully, and as she stepped from the squalor of the hotel into the splendor of the morning her head lifted. She drank the clear, crisp wind as one takes water in the desert.

"The air is clean, anyway," she said. Cavanaugh to divert her pointed away to the mountains. "There is my domain. Up there I am sole ruler. No one can litter the earth with corruption or poison the streams."

She did not speak, but as she studied the ranger her face cleared. "It is beautiful up there."

He went on. "I hate all this scrap heap quite as heartily as you do, but up there are sweetness and sanity. The streams are germless, and the forest cannot be devastated. That is why I am a ranger. I could not endure life in a town like this."

He turned up the street toward the high hill to the south, and she kept step with him. As she did not speak, he asked, "What did you expect to do out here?"

"I hoped to teach," she replied, her voice still choked with her emotion. "I expected to find the country much improved."

"And so it is, but it is still a long way from an eastern state. Perhaps you will find the people less savage than they appear at first glance."

"It isn't the town or the people; it is my mother!" she burst forth again. "Tell me! A woman in the car yesterday accused my mother of selling whisky unlawfully. Is this so? Tell me!"

She faced him resolutely, and, perceiving that she could not be evaded, he made slow answer. "I don't know that she does, but I've heard it charged against her."

"Who made the charge?"

"One of the clergymen, and then it's common talk among the rough men of the town."

"But she's my mother!" wailed the girl, coming back to the central fact. "She has sent me money—she has been kind to me. What am I to do? She needs me, and yet the thought of staying here and facing her life frightens me."

The rotten board walks, the low rookeries, the unshaven, bear-eyed men sitting on the thresholds of the saloons, the slattern squaws wandering abroad like bedraggled hens, made the girl stare with wonder and dismay. She had remembered the town street as a highway filled with splendid cavaliers, a list wherein heroic deeds were done with horse and pistol.

She perceived in the ranger the man of the new order, and with this in her mind she said: "You don't belong here? You're not a western man?"

"Not in the sense of having been born here," he replied. "I am, in fact, a native of England, though I've lived nearly twenty years of my life in the States."

She glanced at his badge. "How did you come to be a ranger—what does it mean? It's all new to me."

"It is new to the west," he answered smilingly, glad of a chance to turn her thought from her own personal griefs. "It has all come about since you went east. Uncle Sam has at last become provident and is now 'conserving his resources.' I am one of his representatives, with stewardship over some 90,000 acres of territory, mostly forest."

She looked at him with eyes of changing light. "You don't talk like an Englishman, and yet you are not like the men out here."

"I shouldn't care to be like some of them," he answered. "My being here is quite logical. I went into the cattle business like many another, and I went broke. I served under Colonel Roosevelt in the Cuban war and after my term was out naturally drifted back. I love the wilderness and have some natural taste for forestry, and I can ride and pack a horse as well as most cowboys; hence my uniform. I'm not the best forest ranger in the service, I'll admit, but I fancy I'm a fair average."

"And that is your badge—the pine tree?"

"Yes, and I am proud of it. Some of the fellows are not, but so far as I am concerned I am glad to be known as a defender of the forest. A tree means much to me. I never mark one for felling without a sense of responsibility to the future."

Her questions came slowly, like those of a child. "Where do you live?"

"Directly up the South Fork about twenty miles."

"What do you do?"

He smiled. "Not much. I ride the trails, guard the game, put out fires, scale lumber, burn brush, build bridges, herd cattle, count sheep, survey land and a few other odd chores. It's supposed to be a soft snap, but I can't see it that way."

"Do you live alone?"

"Yes, for the larger part of the time. I have an assistant, who is with me during part of the summer months. Mostly I am alone. However, I am supposed to keep open house, and I catch a visitor now and then."

"Do you expect to do this always?"

He smiled again. "There you touch my secret spring. I have the hope of being chief forester some time—I mean we all have the prospect of promotion to sustain us. The service is so new that any one with even a knowledge of forestry is in demand. By and by real foresters will arise."

She returned abruptly to her own problem. "I dread to go back to my mother, but I must. Oh, how I hate that hotel! I loathe the flies, the smells, the people that eat there, the waiters—everything!" She shuddered.

"Many of the evils you mention could be reformed, except, of course, some of the people who come to eat. I fear several of them have gone beyond reformation."

As they started back down the street she saw the motor stage just leaving the door of the office. "That settles one question," she said. "I can't get away till tomorrow."

"Where would you go if you broke camp—back to the east?"

"No. My mother thinks there is a place for me in Sulphur City."

"Your case interests me deeply. I wish I could advise you to stay, but this is a rough town for a girl like you. Why don't you talk the problem over with the supervisor?" His voice became firmer. "Mrs. Redfield is the very one to help you."

"Where does she live?"

"Their ranch lies just above Sulphur, at the mouth of the canyon. May I tell him what you've told me? He's a good sort, is Redfield—much better able to advise than I am."

Cavanaugh found himself enjoying the confidence of this girl so strangely thrown into his care, and the curious comment of the people in the street did not disturb him except as it bore upon his companion's position in the town.

At the door of the hotel some half a dozen men were clustered. As the young couple approached they gave way, but a short, powerful man, whom Lee Virginia recognized as Gregg, the sheepman, called to the ranger:

"I want to see you before you leave town, Mr. Ranger."

"Very well. I shall be here all the forenoon," answered Cavanaugh in the tone of a man accepting a challenge. Then, turning to the girl, he said earnestly: "I want to help you. I shall be here for lunch, and meanwhile I wish you would take Redfield into your confidence. He's a wise old boy, and everybody knows him. No one doubts his motives. Besides, he has a family and is rich and unburied. Would you like me to talk with him?"

"If you will. I want to do right. Indeed, I do."

"I'm sure of that," he said, with eyes upon her flushed and quivering face. "There's a way out, believe me."

Life Saved at Death's Door.

"I never felt so near my grave," writes W. R. Patterson, of Wellington, Tex., as when a frightful cough and lung trouble pulled me down to 100 pounds, in spite of doctor's treatment for two years. My father, mother and two sisters died of consumption, and that I am alive today is due solely to Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me.

Now I weigh 187 pounds and have been well and strong for years. Quick, safe, sure, its best remedy on earth for coughs, colds, lagrippe, asthma, croup, and all throat and lung troubles. 50c & $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Jas. H. Orme and Haynes & Taylor, Marion, Ky.

SENSIBLE MAN.

Wants Split In Church Healed

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Union of the Methodist Episcopal church and the Methodist Episcopal church, South, was urged strongly by John A. Patterson, Chattanooga, Tenn., chairman of the book committee of the Methodist Episcopal church.

"There is no reason," Mr. Patton said, "why there should be more than one Methodist church in America today."

The split in the church occurred in 1844 over the question of slavery and Mr. Patton insisted that church leaders above and below Mason and Dixon's line believe the time has come when the breach between the sections can be healed permanently.

Sedentary habits, lack of outdoor exercise, insufficient mastication of food, constipation, a torpid liver, worry and anxiety, are the most common causes of stomach troubles. Correct your habits and take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be well again. For sale by all dealers.

BOUND TO SEE MOTHER

Paducah, Ky., Feb. 15.—Mother lure led Paul, Runal, and Pearl Lear, orphans of Jack Lear, to slip away from their grandmother's home at Pinckneyville, Ky., and start down the Cumberland River in a skiff.

They were forced to land in the darkness at Vicksburg, where they were found before they awoke next day, and were taken home. Their mother lives at Brookport, Illinois, and it is presumed they were going to her.

A Suggestion.

A church house in a certain rural district was sadly in need of repairs. The official board had called a meeting of the parishioners to see what could be done toward raising the necessary funds. A middle-aged man, known to be one of the wealthiest and at the same time one of stingiest of the adherents of that church arose and said that he would give five dollars, and sat down.

Just then a bit of plastering about three feet square, fell down from the ceiling and hit him square upon the head. Whereupon he jumped up, looked confused, and said: "I—er—I meant I'll give fifty dollars!" then again resumed his seat.

After a brief silence a voice in the back of the room was heard to say: "O Lord, hit 'im again."

Free Child's Remedy

What mother is not looking for something that will help her children in the little ills of life, something for the stomach trouble and the bowel trouble? Long ago she probably has become convinced that a child cannot readily swallow a pill or a tablet, and that to "break them in half and crush them" is an annoyance; that usually they work too drastically, and are nauseating and too powerful for the little one's stomach. Any mother who will take the trouble of sending her name and address can obtain a free sample bottle of a remedy that thousands of other mothers are using and now paying for. This remedy is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and the offer of a free trial bottle is open to any mother who has not yet used it. Having used it and convinced yourself that it is what you want, you can obtain it in the future of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, just as so many others are doing, the free sample being simply to convince you of its merits. It is the best way to begin on it. Mrs. L. Davis of 137 W. Harrison street, Chicago, and Mrs. Mary Belford, 1719 Coke street, Louisville, Ky., both started with a free sample and now they write that they have never been without a bottle in the house since.

It is undoubtedly a great family remedy, as it is adapted to all ages, being mild and pleasant to take and yet thoroughly effective. It is especially the ideal remedy for children and women and old folks, who need something pure, mild and natural. It has the advantage of being a thorough laxative and yet containing no toxic properties. Use it for the most stubborn constipation, indigestion, liver trouble, sick headache, sour stomach and such complaints with a guarantee that it will cure.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. I explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R. 500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.
