DEBATING TEAM AT WORK

Busily Preparing for Big Inter-Collegiate Event in April.

The University Debating Team has at last been selected and have now gotten down to hard work, preparing itself for the coming debate with Central for the inter-collegiate championship of the state.

Owing to a misunderstanding with Central's representatives on the Executive Committee of the Debating Association, there has been considerable delay, working greatly to our disadvantage, but from the energetic manner in which the boys are getting into harness, we have great hopes of their bringing the championship back where it rightly belongs.

Our debaters are W. C. Shultz, a Senior education student from Ohio county, J. F. Bruner, also a Senior in education, from Daviess county, and J. O. Gill, a Junior law student from Marion Crittenden county. None of the men have been members of the Inter-collegiate team before, but all are experienced public speakers, Mr. Shultz and Mr. Gill both having won previous oratorical and declamatory contests and Mr. Bruner being his class orator with quite an enviable record in his Literary Society. All three are industrious, capable students and we need feel no hesitancy in trusting the banner of the University in their hands. They are being coached by Professor J. T. Noe, one of the ablest and best equipped men in the state for such a task.

The debate is to be held here in the latter part of April. The subject is, "Resolved, That the Amendment to the Constitution of the United States proposed by the Sixty-first Congress and granting to the Federal Government the power to lay and collect an income tax according to the principle of uniformity, should be ratified by the states."

State, having the choice of sides, took the negative, and we confidently expect a clear demonstration or the inadvisability of the adoption of the amendment, "when Greek meets Greek" in the University chapel next month. The Idea. University of Kentucky.

John Parr of Fredonia, one of the old land marks of that section was here last week as jolly as ever.

The Road Problem.

The local papers throughout the state are discussing the good road proposition from every angle imaginable. The road problem is being handled as successfully as it will ever be under the present system in Kentucky, and until it is entirely divorced from the county and fiscal court, except as to the furnishing of the funds necessary for the roads, there can be no improvement in the road working. The roads of a county ought to constitute a separate and distinct department of the local government, presided over by a single officer who has no other official duties. A county judge is not in a position officially to look after the roads as they should be. He can not leave his office to go about over the county investigating complaints. He appoints the best men it is possible to get to accept the position of overseers of roads, but it is impossible for him to ascertain by personal observation as to their success as such officials. A county supervisor of public highways, with the right man in the place, it appears, would be an improvement over the present system, as he could be and should be required to give the roads his individual attention, and then be held responsible for their proper maintenance. — Boone County Recorder.

SHADY GROVE MILLINERY

We have now all of our goods in. Latest fashions in Hats. Novelties from the best markets.

Mrs. B. C. Birchfield, Shady Grove, Kentucky.

He was eighty-five years old, the last of his generation of the family so distinguished in the annals of the state.

Maj. Shelby was preceded to the grave many years by his wife, who was Miss Mary Steele, of Chicago. He is survived by eleven children—Mrs. Godfrey Darbshire, lately of England; Mrs. Shelby Sanders, of Louisiana; Mrs. P. M. McRoberts, of Stanford; Mrs. Will Lawmill, of Danville; Mrs. Kingsland Fisher, of St. Louis; Alfred Shelby, of Oklahoma, and Isaac Shelby, Jr., George Shelby and Misses Mary, Florence and Tevis Shelby, of this county.

In early life Maj. Shelby lived in Fayette county with his father, and later went to Chicago, where he married. He enlisted in the Confederate army and rapidly rose in rank through distinguished service. For the past decade or so he had lived the quiet life of a country gentleman on part of Gov. Shelby's original homestead, "Travelers' Rest."

Somebody Head Him.

Herbert G. Whitney of Water Valley, Miss., has been keeping the wires hot since Saturday March 25th at 1:08 P. M. when the stork "lit" at his house with Miss Virginia Louise Whitney a beautiful little lady of eight pounds weight. He notified all his friends from President Markham, of the I. C. R. R. down, and is being congratulated on all sides. He thinks he is entitled to a raise in salary and a general promotion and we agree with him and think he will get it.

Woman of Seventy

Goes To College.

Spokane, Wash., Mar. 28.—Mrs. W. C. Price, seventy years of age, widow of a veteran of the Civil War, will be graduated with a class of young men and women in a local commercial college this spring, her diploma showing she is a competent stenographer and typist. She began her studies last September, attending school five days a week, and up to today she has been absent from only one session.

At the home of her son, Wray R. Price, 218 Cleveland avenue, Mrs. Price said she will take up a homestead in Oregon after graduating and expects to open an office in a neighboring town, making a specialty of stenographic work and collecting to support her while acquiring 160 acres of land. Mrs. Price has been the second woman to register in Spokane when the ballot was given to the women of Washington. She is opposed to the tactics employed by the militant element in England and elsewhere, believing the method is wrong.

BACK TAXES PAID AS

A MORAL OBLIGATION

Heirs Of Rich Boston Man Make Good With City Treasury.

Boston, March 25.—Purely as a moral obligation and not on account of any legal liability, back taxes on the estate of the late Quincy A. Shaw, amounting to $492,000, on property overlooked by the assessors in 1908 and 1909 have been paid into the city treasury, according to a statement issued by the finance committee. The committee finds that the assessors were at fault in not exhausting all means of obtaining information regarding this taxable property, and that the city was unable to enforce collection in full.

The beneficiaries under the will of Mr. Shaw were asked to pay the amount as a moral obligation and they have not only done so in the case of the city of Boston, but have also paid to the city of Beverly, where Mr. Shaw had a summer residence, $70,000 in additional taxes, Shaw was Boston's heaviest individual taxpayer.

John C. Green of Salem, one of Livingstons most enterprising farmers was here last week.

MARION MAN

FOR GOVERNOR.

E. T. Franks Takes The Lead In Race For Nomination.

Owensboro, Ky., March 27.—E. T. Franks, of Owensboro, one of the best known and most popular among prominent Republicans of Kentucky is first in the field as a candidate for gubernatorial nomination of his party.

He came to Louisville yesterday and made his announcement late last night. Mr. Franks has been regarded as a probable candidate since the pot began to boil. His decision to offer himself followed the receipt of hundreds of letters from every section of the state urging him to take the step. Not a Congressional district was unrepresented in these communications, and the sentiment expressed was so enthusiastic that resistance seemed impossible.

Mr. Franks realizes that he will have probably strong rivalry for the nomination, and, in the event of success, a strenuous campaign against the Democratic choice, but he is ready for the contest, and his ability as a campaigner is well known.

Few men in the state are readier or more forceful on the stump. His following in Western Kentucky is powerful and loyal, and he enjoys the confidence and admiration of Republicans in general.

Ed Franks has many admirers and loyal friends in this county who would be proud to see him in the Governor's chair.—EDITOR.

Kentucky in Doubt Politically.

The 1910 census reveals a very significant fact concerning the political complexion of Kentucky. During the last ten years, the population of the state has increased 142,692. Fifty-one counties that gave Republican majorities in both 1907 and 1908, gained 127,204 while the sixty-eight Democratic counties gained only 15,488. Thirty-five Democratic counties lost in population while only eight Republican counties showed a decrease. The Republican counties have 24,554 greater total population than the Democratic counties. These figures indicate that Kentucky is in a doubtful state.—Warsaw Leader.

THE CLOD HOPPER AND THE BALD-HEADED MAN

A STIRRING TALE OF LOVE AND BUSINESS.

Written for the Record-Press by ROBERT C. HAYNES, Author of "This Funny World," "Dark Days and Bright," Etc.

I.

Joe Introduced.

A man once there was who of "hopping the clods"
Grew tired and became then a welder of hods.
Joseph Turk was his name and there scarcely could be An all-around workman found better than he.

"I'm tired of the farm and of farming," said Turk;
"I prefer a new job and a new kind of work.
Almost any profession, I think, at all odds,
Would suit me much better than hopping the clods.

"I'm tired of the shovel, the rake and the hoe;
Of the ax and the pitchfork, the spade and the froe;
Of sowing and reaping; of steering the plow;
Of driving the mules and of milking the cow."

So Joe left the farm, for the city he hied,
And, joining a union, for work he applied.
"Could we give you a job? Yes, I think, Turk, we can;
For, to 'carry the hod' we are needing a man."

"That suits me exactly, and to it I'll stick!
To carry up ladders the mortar and brick,
When compar'd to clod-hopping, is playing," said Turk;
"For the man at the top, after all, does the work."

So the bargain was finish'd, and Joe went to work;
While the man at the top shouted, "Give us brick, Turk!"
"Ah! this is much better than turning the sod," Murmur'd Joe, greatly pleased, as he shoulder'd his hod.

II.

Joe Falls In Love.

Now Joe loved a maid—sweet, bright-eyed Imogene—
And an expert was she on the writing machine.
And so day after day—as such was the plan—
She was dictated to by a bald-headed man.

When the days work was over, however, and she
From the bald-headed man and dictation was free,
She thought it so nice—and perhaps it was so!—
To sit with and talk to and listen to Joe.

And Joe, when the man at the top ceased to work,
And cried, "Time is up! not another brick, Turk?"
Thought it was just splendid—and so 'twas, I ween!
To sit and converse with his sweet Imogene.

And so the time pass'd, and Miss Imogene Moss—
Still dictated to by her bald-headed boss—
At eight and at five, and the hours between,
Was pounding away on the writing machine.

And Joe, far remov'd from the turning of sod,
Continued his job—that of weilding the hod—
From morning till ev'ning, with scarcely a stop,
He carried the bricks to the man at the top.

And the bald-headed man—pretty Imogene's boss—
Mused, figuring over his profit and loss,
"What scoundrelly fellow will dare come between My bright-eyed expert and her writing machine?"

III.

The Bald Headed Man Forestalls Trouble.

The lights were turned on in the parlor when Joe,
One evening, walked out toward Middleton Row.
He had laid down his hod, for not once did he shirk,
Till the man at the top shouted, "Lay it down, Turk!"

Imogene in the parlor sat waiting for Joe—
Impatiently waiting—why was he so slow?
While across in the store of her boss could be seen
The silent and grim-visaged writing machine.

Down the street walked Joe proudly and briskly, his mind
At peace with himself and the rest of mankind,
When a voice came in greeting: "Say Joe," it began,
"To what point are you steering?" 'Twas the bald-headed man.

"I am late, must get on, sir, as fast as I can;
I've no time to converse with a bald-headed man," Answered Joe, while the distance was less'ning between Himself and the home of his dear Imogene.

"The impudent clod-hopping scamp," mused the boss.
"If the rascal succeeds it will be to my loss;
I must therefore break up this affair, if I can—
And will do it, else I'm not a bald-headed man!"

"There's something a-brewing—a confab between My boss and my Joe!" laughed the fair Imogene;
"A social confab—will it be to my loss?—
"Twixt the clod-hopping Joe and the debt-hopping boss."

"I WANT MY DREAM AGAIN."

The little boy smiled in his sleep that night.
As he wandered to Twilight Town:
And his face lit up with a heavenly light
Through the shadows that drifted down;
But he woke next morning with tear-stained eye
In the light of the gray dawn's gleam,
And out from the stillness we heard him cry,
"I've lost my dream—my dream."

And he told us then in his childish way,
Of the wonderful dream he'd known:
He had wandered away from the land
of play
To the distant land of the Grown;
He had won his share in the fame
and fight
In the struggle and toil of men;
And he sobbed and sighed in the breaking light,
"I want my dream again."

As the years passed by the little boy grew
Till he came to the land of the Grown;
And the dream of his early youth
came true,
The dream that he thought had flown;
Yet once again he smiled in his sleep—
When those near by might have heard him weep,
"I want my dream—my dream;"

For he dreamed of the yesterday of youth,
And the smile on a mother's face;
A hearth of old-time faith and truth
In the light of an old home place:
He had won his share of the fame
and fight
In the struggle and toil of men—
Yet he sobbed and sighed in the
breaking light,
"I want my dream again!"

"Sure Cure"

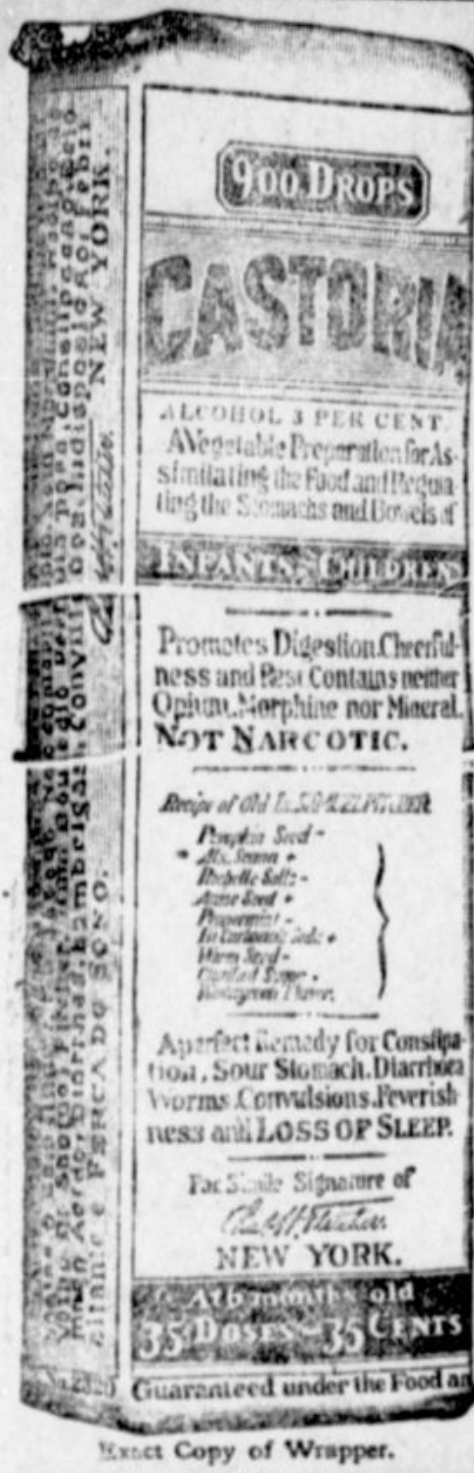

"I would like to guide

writes Mrs. R. E. Mercer, of Frozen Camp, W. Va.
"I have found no med-time, until I would be nearly crazy. I took Cardui and now I never have the headache any more."

Fox as a Gambler.
Charles James Fox, the English statesman, was even more notorious in the gaming world than he was famous in the world of politics. He had squandered $250,000 before coming of age. He became one of the most profligate gamblers of the vicious days in which he lived. Some of his finest displays in debate were sandwiched between excitement such as would unnerve most men who had no serious business on hand. Walpole has given a glimpse of a typical passage in this extraordinary man's life. He had to take part in the discussion on the thirty-nine articles in parliament on a certain Thursday. He had sat up playing hazard from Tuesday evening until 5 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. An hour before he had recovered $50,000 that he had lost and by dinner time, which was 5 o'clock, ended losing $50,000.
On Thursday he spoke in the debate, went to dinner at past 11 at night; thence to a club, where he

"McCADDEN'S DREAM."

(From Samuel Schwed, 409 E 52nd St. N. Y. City.)

Wallace McCadden had been appointed vice-consul at Haw-wei on the Si-Kiang. How he managed to secure that position was more than he knew, for as traveling salesman for the products of Robert Hastings, Ltd., U. S. A., he had not been a shining success.

He had drummed Peking, Canton and Macao and had reached Hong-Kong on his route, without calling a single order home. He was stopping at the "American House" when this cablegram reached him:

"John Wellington called," it read. He turned to his code book.

"John," he translated, "Your services," "Wellington," "not wanted any longer," called, "return to San Francisco at once."

Well—McCadden did not return, for the Celtic blood in him would not acknowledge a defeat.

"Messrs. Robert Hastings, Ltd., can go to the Adaman Islands as far as I am concerned," he muttered angrily, as he tore the cablegram to pieces.

Rather heated language, you will admit, but Hong-Kong is situated in a rather torrid zone of climate and activity.

He waited for weeks for something to turn up. Slowly his little stock of cash dwindled until his sole possessions were about twenty-five Mexican dollars, which sum you know cannot carry you far in Hong-Kong, but that never seemed to bother McCadden a wee bit, for he would always sing the jingle:

"Everything comes to him that waits. Waits, waits."

In Hong-kong!

Wait, wait, wait.

In Hong-kong!

"Gram for Melican genilman," grinned the Chinese bell-hop, waiter and cook, at McCadden.

"Ah Sing, you're O. K. even if you are a slint-eyed walamongoose of a Celestial," replied the delighted McCadden, as he slipped Ah Sing a minor coin of the empire.

Ah Sing placed the coin in a slit behind an ear, an Oriental imitation of American money-madness (having money on the brain, or near it), grinned his thanks and closed the bamboo door—from the outside.

Feverishly McCadden tore open the envelope of the cablegram.

"McCadden, Hong-kong, report to consul at Haw-wei on the Si-Kiang, for duty, at once." Signed "William T. Hayes," it read.

McCadden walked up and down the floor in perplexity. Having never had the pleasure of seeing Mr. William T., or had experience in things diplomatic, he could not recollect him.

It did not occur to him that a Wallace O. McCadden had arrived from the States only a day ago, on the P. & O. liner "Mongolian," and that the message was intended for that gentleman's vision instead of his own. Somebody had blundered!

"Everything comes to him that waits. Waits, waits."

In Hong-kong!

So it's good to

Honk, honk, honk!

While you

Wait, wait, wait.

In Hong-kong!" he jingled merrily as he packed his trunks.

Eight hours later found McCadden floating up the Si-Kiang river on board of a junk that was hiking it to Haw-wei as fast as the tide would allow.

McCadden being from St. Louis, U. S. A., the sight of the muddy water reminded him of the Missouri.

Not a breath of wind stirred the air and the heat became oppressive, something uncommon for a Missourian. He went into the shade of the cabin on the stern of the junk and reclining on a bale of jute he could hear the patter of the boatmen's slippers as they paced the deck.

The oarsmen, for the wind having died down, making it necessary to use the oars, and the ruddermen at the rudder, would now and then burst into a chant that sounded to McCadden like this:

"Yokahom-O-saka-Yokahoma, Y! Pekin-Hakodate-Ma put-ran, Ho."

Evening was descending upon the town of Haw-wei as McCadden landed upon the bamboo pier that stretched out in the Si-Kiang at that point.

He had no more than stretched his legs upon terra-firma when he saw two coolies approach with a chair on their shoulders.

"Melican genilman enter?" said one of the coolies, as he nodded toward the chair for McCadden to seat himself (200 lbs. avoirdupois) in it.

Mentally McCadden thanked the consul for his foresight and accepted the invitation. The coolies again put the rods of the chair on their shoulders and walked up the winding main street, past the padogas.

In the distance he could see the American Consulate, lit up, and the moonlight shone upon "Old Glory" as it waved in the breeze, on the lawn in front of the consulate.

McCadden, intent on seeing the consulate, had not noticed the motley crew that gathered about him.

Bang! Something hit McCadden on the top of his head and he saw stars. The Celestials, that grinned at the foreign devil after they had tied his hands behind him and gagged him, would have done justice as models for the Imps of Perversity.

They were the Boxers! Now that they had the foreign devil on their hands they would take their toll. They dragged him into a vacant hut and tying him to a stake with leather thongs, squatted in silence around him.

"Drop! Drop! Drop!" the water splashed on McCadden's head from above.

"Drop! Drop! Ddrop!" drop after drop until it seemed to him as though he had undergone a century of torture.

"Drop! Drop! Drop!" He tried to release himself from the stake. The more he tried the more the thongs would enter and cut into the flesh of his arms.

He gazed in mute appeal to the human devils in front of him, but as his agony became more and more apparent, they only nodded to each other in delight.

"Drop! Drop! Drop!" came from above.

McCadden shivered internally as the water flowed down his back.

Drop! Drop! Drop!

Minutes turned to hours of torture and McCadden's mind wandered and he became unconscious as he saw a glimpse of khaki uniforms entering the doorway.

The rain came down in torrents and the wind whirling its way across the roof-tops dashed the raindrops pitter-patter against the window panes.

Wallace McCadden, junior member of the firm of Robert Hastings, Ltd., lay asleep reclining on a comfortable Davenport chair, and a library lamp shed its rays around.

On the table lay a book he had been reading before falling asleep, "The Late Boxer Troubles" by Charles Douglass, M. P., was the title and author's name.

McCadden opened his eyes and yawned. He roused himself to a sitting position and looked about him.

There upon the library floor lay a porcelain Buddha broken to pieces.

He pressed a hand to his forehead and withdrawing it saw the water on it.

Gazing upward at the ceiling he saw the water dripping through.

There was a "leak" in the roof.

"That was a nasty dream. No more reading of 'The Late Boxer Troubles' by myself," he exclaimed, as he placed the book on its shelf and rang for his housekeeper to remove the debris.

Dedication At Sturgis, Ky.

Sunday, March, 19, was an ideal day for a church dedication, crystal clear, balmy, delightful. It seemed that God made his face to shine upon the congregation of the Presbyterian Church at Sturgis that day. It was an ideal occasion. The weather was all that could be desired, a splendid audience, delightful music, a soul-thrilling sermon, an offering more than asked for, the ceremony of dedication impressive. This church has had its severe struggles, but with all these it has had its victories. After the union of the Presbyterian and Cumberland Presbyterian churches this was the church made prominent in Kentucky as bearing the brunt of the lawsuit brought by the Cumberland Presbyterian church against the officers of this congregation for the church property. After the litigation was ended the Court of Appeals having decided in favor of the union, and the members had a little breathing spell, they decided that a new church was a necessity. The building was planned last June and the work began. It is a fine church plant, built of pressed brick, with beautiful art windows, lecture room, Sunday-school rooms, ladies parlor, folding chairs for the lecture room and little red chairs for the elementary department. It has an elegant auditorium, with tile floor in the main entrance, a lovely carpet which cost approximately $400., furnished by the Ladies Aid Society, a well arranged choir platform and a gem organ, pipe-topped and pipe-toned. The auditorium seats about 450. It was tastefully decorated for the occasion with a profusion of superb flowers. The music was exquisitely rendered. The order of service was rich and impressive. The dedication sermon was preached by W. J. Darby, D. D., Evansville, Ind. He was at his best. His theme was "The Uplifting Church." It was indeed a grand presentation of the Son of God in the practical work of the church. Then came the offering. The officers of the church, asked for about $450.. Dr. Darby took the offering and in a short time secretaries announced $975. The members of the church were delighted at the result. The fund was then formally set apart to the worship of God in a beautiful service, the dedicatory prayer being offered by the Rev. Dr. Darby.

The Christian Endeavor Society had a splendid rally at 6:30. The statement was made that in two years and two weeks, the time since the organization of the Society, it has grown from eighteen to seventy-two, from one praying member to a score or more. But that the best results were not to be calculated in outward show, but were realized in the lives, experience and Christian development of its members. A nice memento was presented to Mrs. Hurst, whom they style their "Christian Endeavor Mother."

At 7:30 the building was again filled with an appreciative audience. Another inspiring service closed the exercises for the day.

This church was never in a more prosperous condition than to day. It has an official board that for business capacity, devotion to the church and spiritual enthusiasm is scarcely equalled. It is well organized in its various departments, having a live Sunday-school and most of the societies that you will find inherent in a small church. There is love, harmony and good will among all its members. The pastor, Mr. Hurst and his wife, have done a splendid work here. It is with the kindest feelings between pastor and people and the best wishes for each other that the present pastor leaves this work and goes to another field. Rev. J. F. Claycomb, Pontoon, Ill., the pastor-elect will be on the field April 1st, With an energetic pastor and a responsive people and co-operative people, the future of this church is radiant with hope.

Kentucky May Lose Portion

Of Government Fund.

Washington, March 21.—Kentucky is in danger of losing its share of the $11,000,000 authorized by congress at the recent session to purchase an Appalachian forest reserve. Unless the Kentucky legislature meets in special session and passes a law enabling the federal government to hold land in Kentucky, citizens of the Bluegrass state will not get their share of the vast sum of money congress has authorized poured into the states that have land within the contemplated reserve.

Kentucky, it has just been discovered, is the only one of these states that has not passed a law permitting the federal government to hold land within the state. It is an odd situation, and one that calls for the early attention of Governor Wilsons.

PRINCESSES AT CORONATION.

Daughters of Powerful Rulers to See George Crowned.

Among the royal throng that will be present at the coronation of King George V. next summer will be three princesses whose fathers are leaders among the great rulers of the earth. One is the Princess Victoria Alexandra, the only daughter of England's ruler, who is now fourteen years of age; consequently the ceremony will be of greater interest to her than to Princess Olga of Russia or Princess Victoria Louise of Germany.

The eldest daughter of the czar is now sixteen, while the kaiser's youngest girl is nineteen. All three are considered good looking and with traits of amiability to match their beauty.

It is rumored in Europe that both the Russian and German princesses are about to be engaged and that the coronation may be made the occasion for the announcements.

RISE OF LADY GODIVA.

The ride of Lady Godiva, around which so much romance has been centered and into which so much fiction has been injected, is the most picturesque of all rides, even in its unadorned telling. This ancient legend is celebrated in the annals of the city of Coventry in Warwickshire, England.

Godiva was the wife of Leofric, earl of Chester, in the middle of the 11th century. She was wondrously beautiful and as good as she was fair. Her piety and benevolence caused her name to be blessed in the church, and endeared her to the poor people.

And the wickedness of the earl, her husband, caused the virtue of the saintly lady to shine the brighter by contrast.

There came a time, under Leofric's rule, when the people of Coventry groaned under the heavy taxes which the cruel lord imposed, and Lady Godiva interceded in their behalf. She begged and pleaded with her husband to relieve Coventry of the burdensome toil. He was obdurate, but at last gave mocking consent to grant the petition—with this infamous proviso: That the lady was to ride uncovered through the streets on horseback in the broad light of noonday.

Lady Godiva accepted this shameful condition, and, having publicly proclaimed her purpose, asked all the townspeople to close their shutter and remain within doors while she fulfilled her vow for mercy's sake.

The story of Lady Godiva's ride—periodically celebrated in Coventry with festival and pageant up to within a recent period is best told in the familiar lines of Tennyson:

"Then she rode forth, clothed on with chastity.

The deep air listen'd round her as she rode.

And all the low wind hardly breathed for fear,

The little wide-mouth'd heads upon the spout

Had cunning eyes to see; the barking cur

Made her cheek flame; her palfrey's football shot

Light horrors thro' her pulses; the blind walls

Were full of chinks and holes; and overhead

Fantastic gables, crowning, stared; but she

Not less thro' all bore up, till, last she saw

The white-flowered elder-thicket from the white field

Gleam through the gothic archway in the wall

Then she rode back, clothed on with chastity."

Other poets and prose writers have discoursed on his side, and Mascagni, the Italian composer, but recently finished an opera on the subject, which he has called "Ysobel."

The simplest, and apparently the oldest, form of narrative is given by Roger of Wendover. It is he who quotes Leofric as saying: "Mount your horse naked, and pass through the market of the villa, from one end to the other, when the people are assembled, and on your return you shall obtain what you ask."

"Accordingly," he says, "Godiva, attended by two soldiers, rode through the market place, her long hair down, so that no one saw her. Leofric, struck with admiration, granted the release of the "villa" toll.

The chronicle ascribed to John Brompton, of the late 14th century, gives a briefer account, omits the escort, and the market, and asserts without qualification, that no one saw her.

The celebration of this ride by the people of Coventry was begun on May 31, 1678, upon which occasion a young man represented Lady Godiva. The original procession was official. Leofric died on August 31, 1057. How long Godiva survived him is not known. A rosary of gems, worth 10 marks of silver, she left to be placed around the neck of the image of the Virgin in the abbey church at Coventry. In one of its two porches she was buried, her husband lying in the other.

Most people lead average lives because they are average men and women, but there is no reason why the average itself should not be higher. That can be brought about not by genius, but by placing before one a higher ideal and then striving earnestly and intelligently to reach that ideal. Even if the goal is not quite reached the honest effort put forth will have its refining and strengthening effect, not only on the one making the effort but on all who come in contact with that ambitious person.

Congressman James, hale, hearty and prosperous looking, dropped in home Monday and spent the day. He is feeling in fine spirits as to his race for U. S. Senator to succeed Senator Paynter. He left Monday afternoon to visit some points in the First district and will return to Washington in time for the convening of the special term which meets next Monday, April 3rd.

Where Is Our Dupont?

Has Crittenden County no "Colie" Dupont within her borders? We note in our eastern exchanges where "T. Coleman Dupont, president of the Dupont Powder Co., of Wilmington, Delaware, will build at his own expense, a boulevard 200 feet wide to extend from the northern to the southern limits of the state, a distance on an air line, as the road is to be run, of 103 miles at a cost of $2,000,000.00. To our mind no grander project has ever been conceived for the betterment of the commonwealth thus served. Not even a railroad with its bands of steel is of as much benefit as such a great roadway will be, and when built as proposed how easy and at what small cost, can collateral lines be extended from the remotest point in the state to connect with the outside world. There is no greater civilization than good roads. They enable the people to get about, see each other, market their products and enjoy life.

Suppose some of our capitalists who are piling up their money were to put it in circulation during their lives for instance in building a turnpike from Livingston Creek to Fords Ferry, from Shady Grove to Salem, from Rodney to Dycusburg and from Piney Fork to Tolu. These four could soon be added to, with branches, to reach those sections not touched by the main lines. If each pike centered at Marion the above lines would not exceed 103 miles which one man offers to build for his native state and if ours were built 20 feet wide, the above mentioned lines could be built, turn-piked and metalled for $100,000.00 and when completed would add one million dollars to the value of our county.

Have we not 100 men in Crittenden County who will give $1,000.00 each to this enterprise. Could a more enduring monument be built to any man than to put on the first mile stone this inscription, "this mile of high-way was built and donated to his native county by

Don't all speak at once, give Henry Bros., time to make the mile stones. It may be that some of our readers do not know that the Dupont referred to, got his first training in Western Ky., and is personally known to many of us. For many years he has charge of the Central C & I Co.s, business at Central City, Hamilton, Guylena, Mercer, McHenry and other mining properties which the Duponts own, and no doubt his big-heartedness which in part is natural was increased by his stay on the soil of old Kentucky. Twenty-five years ago we remember when he brought his bride from the East and lived in the home he had built for her in Central City.

His conception of Dupont Boulevard proves that he is one of the broadest minded men of the age, and will write his name high on fames escutcheon.

Mail Carrier Robbed

James Thomas
Relieved of $1000, In Silver.

Monday morning, Marion and the vicinity here about was treated to a genuine sensation in the way of high-way robbery like unto those we have all read about which occur so frequently in the wild and wooly west. The scene was on the Salem and Marion mail route about 8 miles west of Marion and near the Union Baptist Church. James Thomas the mail carrier was in his hack alone and the team was jogging along as usual when at a deep cut in the road which has woods on each side, two men sprang from the left hand side of the road and leveling double barreled shot guns at his head demanded the money he had. Thomas at first demurred to this treatment and denied having any money but they claimed to know better and demanded that he unload, which he did promptly. While one of the bandits guarded him the other searched for the package containing the money and when he found it they directed Thomas to drive on and not look back on penalty of being exterminated. Thomas obeyed implicitly, not stopping, until several houses had been passed, to telephone the news of the hold-up to Sheriff Pickens. The robbers wore common, store 'false-faces and white cotton work gloves thus preventing Thomas from knowing whether the bandits were white or colored. Thomas proceeded to Salem with the mail and returned here in the afternoon at five o'clock. As soon as the robbery was reported here City Marshall, Cannan, telegraphed for bloodhounds and the Chief of Police and deputy jailer of Morganfield arrived with their famous dog King on the four o'clock train where carriages were waiting to convey them to the scene. They were accompanied by a large crowd from here many of whom went armed to the teeth to capture the bold high-waymen. They reached the scene long before dark, but the dog refused to take any trail and after repeated efforts he was returned to Morganfield Tuesday morning.

The money in question was $1,000 delivered to Thomas by the American Express Company at Marion for the Salem Bank. It came here by express, Saturday, but Mr. Venner refused to accept it and the route agent returned it here Monday morning in time for delivery to Thomas, who departed with a big cargo about 8:30 a. m. His trip was uneventful until about 10 o'clock when he was confronted with the four shining barrels, to which he surrendered.

Revival At Salem.

Rev. S. M. Baile, Pastor M. E. Church South, closed a successful revival at Salem Union Church, Saturday night, March 19th. The meeting continued for twelve days and a good interest was manifested by both the christians and the irreligious.

Rev. E. Watt Smith of Smithland, did the preaching to the delight and edification of all who heard him. Bro. Smith is an earnest, forceful preacher and made many friends while here. All denominations attended these meetings and took part in the services. There were eight professions and nine additions to the church.

May the revival spirit here and elsewhere continue to grow and may it spread from ocean to ocean and from shore to shore till all are brought to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ.

Puzzling Problem.

A man had two dollars and wanted a ticket that cost three dollars at the depot. Finding that he couldn't stand off the agent he took the two dollars and went to the pawn shop and pawned it for a dollar and a half. Then he met a friend and sold the pawn ticket for a dollar and a half. With this three dollars jingling in his pocket he went to the depot and got his ticket. Who is the loser?—Harrodsburg Herald.

Last week Henry & Henry erected a nice monument in the Freedom grave yard for the wife of Mr. J. H. Joiner and also inclosed the lot with a handsome iron fence, which adds much to the looks of the Freedom grave yard.

All the grasping and the greed of this world come from not regarding our fellows as our neighbors. One doesn't trample his neighbors. He works with them to a common end. We must do away with the idea of classes. There isn't any justification for class lines in America. They are unjust, unwholesome, unrighteous and un-American. Why should we have class lines here in this country and one man despise another just because he has been lucky enough to make a little more money? A man has some right to be proud of what he makes with his own hands and his own brain, but he hasn't any business putting on airs over what he is merely trying to spend, which the old man accumulated.

A New Game.

An exchange says they have invented a new kind of social amusement. It is called an "avoidupois party." All the girls are weighed, and the weight of each written on a piece of paper and put into a hat and the young man must go to supper with the girl whose weight he draws, and must pay for her supper at one-fourth cent per pound. It is very exciting, so far as the young men are concerned.

In The Land of Flowers, Fruits And Sunshine.

Upland, Cal., Mar. 18, 1911. Mr. S. M. Jenkins,

Marion, Ky.

My dear friend Jenkins: I wish you would say to your many readers of the Record-Press, that we made the trip in good shape. While we passed hills, mountains, valleys, plains and many, many miles of desert, we rolled into the beautiful little city of Upland Friday morning at 7:45. We were met at the station by our old friend Ramsey and daughter and his father-in-law, Bro. Bennett. We were soon in the parsonage with our feet under the table and what we did for beefsteak and other good things, was a plenty.

The parsonage is located on one side of a two acre lot, the whole of the lot except where the house and little barn sits, is covered in orange trees and most of them are hanging full of oranges. We had not been there thirty minutes until William and Eva were under a nice tree with both hands full of the finest oranges you ever put your two eyes on. I can't tell just when they are going to get full, they began yesterday and are still eating. I am sitting here in my room writing, with the door open toward the north; looking up I can see the beautiful oranges, grape fruit and flowers and every thing looks like mid summer, then raising my head I can see the mountain with its lofty head all covered in snow. So you see its summer in the valley and winter on the mountain.

Upland is just forty miles from Los Angeles in the Pomona valley. We will be here two weeks then go to Pasadena and from there to Los Angeles and on as long as we can stay. We are well pleased with this country. Dr. Fowler, of Boston, Mass., is doing the preaching, he is a very fine preacher. We had our first service last night and the large house was well filled. Everything points to a great meeting.

Blessings upon all my friends ever and always your friend and Brother.

W. B. YATES.

Highest Farm Wages Paid In Forty-five Years.

Higher wages were paid to American farm laborers during 1910 than at any time in the last forty-five years according to statistics just made public by the Department of Agriculture. The average wage for the country was $27.50 per month during 1910, while twenty years ago it was only $18.33. With board, the average wage was $19.21.

In some parts of the country the rate of wages of farm laborers was higher than in others. The highest was in Nevada, where the rate was $54.00 while in Montana and Washington it was $50.00, South Carolina paid the lowest rate, $16.50 per month.—Warsaw Leader.

A Helpless Invalid

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is, it would almost seem, to blame for her own wretchedness. Read what this woman says:

Richmond, Mo. — "When my second daughter was eighteen months old I was pronounced a helpless invalid by specialists. I had a consultation of doctors and they said I had a severe case of ulceration. I was in bed for ten weeks, had sinking spells, and was pronounced to be in a dangerous condition. My father insisted that we try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought me six bottles. I soon began to improve, and before it had all been taken I was as well and strong as ever. My friends hardly recognized me so great was the change." — Mrs. Woodson Branstetter, Richmond, Mo.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what another woman says:—

Jonesboro, Texas. — "I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for myself and daughter, and consider it unequalled for all female diseases. I would not be without it for anything. I wish every mother in America could be persuaded to use it as there would be less suffering among our sex then. I am always glad to speak a word of praise for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and you are at liberty to use this testimonial." — Mrs. James T. Lawrence, Jonesboro, Texas.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit. If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice—it is free and always helpful.

Hard Time Getting Sleep.
A terrible denunciation of New York hotels has been made by a traveler, by name Oswald Flannagan, owner of a bird store in Kookuk, Ia. Flannagan complains bitterly because he could get no rest. This was not because he frequented Broadway, rather through the short-sightedness of the hotel men in failing to furnish beds for tall men. Flannagan, it may be remarked, is more than six feet in height, most of which is legs. "Proprietors who take money from tall travelers should be prepared to accommodate them properly," quoth Flannagan to one hotel clerk. "All the beds I tried average about five feet, and that left a lot of me hanging over. I put my feet through the brass rungs, and every time I got to sleep I dreamed I was sitting down." "You're supposed to curl up in a New York bed," suggested the clerk. "Space is very valuable in this city."

Reversed the Proposition
Robert Wickliffe Woolley, the writer, found it necessary not long ago to take a trip west. On the dining car of the train he saw that he had in his pocket 10 cents in change, his smallest bank note being one for $50. He handed this to the porter, who went to the end of the car for a conference with the conductor. "I'm very sorry about this," said the conductor, standing in front of Woolley and toying with the big bill, "but we haven't the change for $50. We'll just take your address and send you the change." Woolley calmly reached over and took possession of the banknote. "You've got nothing on me," he said. "I'll take the address of the railroad and send the price of the meal." — Chicago Record-Herald.

OBITUARY.

Samuel Collin Bennett, died of chronic diarrhea at his home in Fredonia, Ky., Feb. 20th, 1911, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. He lived and died in a few miles of the place of his birth and here he spent his whole life except some a few months during the war. So the writer feels in penning these few words he is not introducing a stranger to the public for few men in all the country was better known.

It was known too, by all, that in him were centered many traits of character that are essential to noblest manhood. He was thoroughly sincere and perfectly frank. He was positive in character, always taking his stand for or against a measure, but always standing, as he believed, on the right side.

He was a plain honest man, large hearted, given to hospitality, his house was always opened and rare was the time when it was not full. He loved his kin and kind. What he possessed was shared freely with them. His friends were many and to them he was faithful and true. Many a tired and discouraged minister of the Baptist church found his home a haven of rest and not a few of them retained vivid recollections of his liberality.

He was truly a success in life, his business ability was of a high order and his courage was of that kind which never shirks. Few men indeed could take the farm where he raised his family and make the success he did. Then in the evening of his life when he could no longer cultivate his land, he sold out and entered the mercantile field, where his trade grew and stock enlarged until the last hours of his life. In his strong young manhood, he professed religion and united with Caldwell Spring church, and after a few years was elected one of their deacons in which position to the close of his life he "adorned the doctrines of Christ his Savior."

In his twenty-fourth year, he was united in marriage to Miss Bettie Boaz. To this union there was born three children, one of which died in infancy, two remain, W. T. Bennett, of Louisiana, and Ira C. Bennett, of Fredonia, Ky.

When at last informed by his physician that he could not live much longer, he went to making preparation, "to set his house in order." This he did with the same care, from a business standpoint that had characterized him in all his business relations. After he was done he said to friends, "I am now ready to go, ready to stay, the Lord's will be done."

As the last night he lived drew on, he was perfectly conscious it was his last night, he said to his family, "I won't take any more medicine, it might keep me a few hours with you all but you know how I suffer, let me go, then he thought of his little grand son, who was to him as dear as his own life. "Put him carefully to bed don't let him know what transpires here tonight, he will know all in the morning."

Then with perfect unflinching trust he resigned himself into his Father's hand, feeling that all was well. Just as the clock struck two that night like a tired child he sank to rest with fair visions of the beyond.

He is now forever free from the sorrow of earth. He has indeed triumphed, and to those who stand on this side of the brink and look and long and weep, I would mention the mercy seat.

Every farmer that uses a John Deer Planter or drill, will tell you it is perfection, nothing can be better. See it at, Olive & Walker's.

AUSTRIAN HEIR IN A RAGE.

Denial of Precedence For Morganatic Wife Causes Furor.
A royal row is reported from Vienna between the venerable Emperor Francis Joseph and his son and heir, Archduke Francis Ferdinand, which, it is predicted, will cause great trouble in the court of Austria before it is adjusted. The cause of the trouble is the archduke's morganatic wife, Duchess Sophie of Hohenberg, and her claims to precedence. As a result of the affair the archduke and his wife absented themselves from the first court ball of the season. It is known that the archduke had a stormy interview with his father the morning of the ball, demanding that his wife be accorded precedence over all the archduchesses. This was peremptorily refused, and the heir to the throne left in a fury and at home found his wife putting the finishing touches to her court gown. The news caused tears, of course.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

CHAPTER VII.

TWO ON THE VERANDA.

REDFIELD met his young guest in dinner coat, looking extremely urban, and presented his "friend and neighbor, Mr. Enderby."

Enderby turned out to be the owner of the voice with the English accent which Lee Virginia had heard in the hall, but he was very nice, and a moment later Mrs. Redfield entered with Mrs. Enderby, a large lady with a smiling face. Then a voice she knew spoke from behind her: "I don't need a presentation. Miss Wetherford and I have already met."

She turned to meet Ross Cavanagh, the young ranger.

"How did you get here?" she asked in wonder.

"I rode across the hills. It's not far."

He, too, was in evening dress, and as she stared at him in surprise he laughingly protested. "Please don't scrutinize this coat too closely. It's the only one I've owned for ten years, and this is the only house in which I'd dare to wear it."

One of the guests was State Senator Bridges, a farmerlike elderly man wearing a badly fitting serge suit. He was markedly western. So was his wife, who looked rather uneasy and hot.

Virginia and Ross, being the only young folk at the table, were seated together, and Enderby remarked privately, "Ross, you're in luck."

"I know I am," he replied heartily.

He was as Redfield had said, highly susceptible, made so by his solitary life in the mountains, and to be seated close beside this maid of the valley stirred his blood to the danger point. It was only by an effort of the will that he kept in touch with the conversation.

"I hadn't the least thought of seeing you here," said Virginia. "How did you happen to come?"

Redfield telephoned me at the mill, and I came at once. I haven't been here since May, and I just thought I'd take a half day off. Luckily my understudy was with me. I left him 'on the job.'"

He did not tell her that she was the principal reason for this sudden descent upon Elk Lodge, and no one but Redfield knew the killing ride he had taken in order to be in at the beginning of the dinner. The girl's face and voice, especially her voice, had been with him night and day as he went about his solitary duties. Her life problem had come to fill his mind to a disturbing degree, and he was eager to know more of her and of her struggle against the vice and vulgarity of the Forks.

"How is your mother?" he asked a few minutes later.

"Not at all well. Mr. Redfield is to take the doctor back with us tomorrow. The ecstasy died out of her face, and the flexible lips drooped with troubled musing. "I am afraid she suffers more than she will admit."

"She needs a rest and change. She should get away from her seat at that cash register and return to the open air. A touch of camp life would help her. She sticks too close to her work."

"I know she does, but she won't let me relieve her, even for an hour. It isn't because she doesn't trust me; she says it's because she doesn't want me sitting there—so publicly. She doesn't oppose my housekeeping any more."

"You certainly have made the old hall into a place of miraculous neatness."

She flushed with pleasure. "I have done something, but not as I'd like to do. I really think if mother wishes to sell she could do so now to much better advantage."

"I've no doubt of it. Really, I'm not being funny, Miss Wetherford, when I say you've done something heroic. It's no easy thing to go into a place like that and make it habitable. It shows immense courage and self reliance on your part. It's precisely the kind of work this whole country needs."

His praise, sincere and generous, repaid her for all she had gone through. It was a great pleasure to hear her small self praised for courage and self reliance by one whose daily work was heroic. All things conspired to make a conquest of her heart, for the ranger bore himself with grace and dealt with his silver deftly. His face, seen from the side, was older and sterner than she had thought it, but it was very attractive in line.

Redfield appealed to the ranger. "Ross, you're all sorts of a reactionary. What do you say to this? Senator Bridges is opposed to all federal interference with state forests and state game."

The forester's eyes lit up. "But are they state forests and state game? What makes them so? They are lands which the whole people purchased and which the whole people defended."

"Heah, heah!" cheered Enderby.

Bridges bristled with anger and went off into a long harangue on state rights and the dangers of centralization, to which Enderby replied: "Boah! The whole trouble with your bally government is its lack of cohesion. If I had my way I'd wipe out the senate. You're such blooming asses over here. You don't know enough to keep a really big man in your presidential chair."

This fussing about every four years is plain rot. Here's Roosevelt gets in the midst of a lot of the finest kind of reforms, you know, and directly you go and turn him out. Then if you get a bad man you've to wait four years till you can fetch him a whack. Why not arrange it so you can pitch your president out the minute he goes wrong? I say your old rag of a constitution is a ball and chain on your national leg. England is immeasurably better off so far as that goes."

Ross turned to Virginia, leaving the political discussion to go on over his head. "I was back in the old island a couple of years ago, and you've no idea how small it seemed to me. It surely is a 'right little, tight little island.' I couldn't help wondering whether the men in parliament were as important as they seemed to think they were and whether England is not really an empty shell of empire, a memory of what it once was. I couldn't settle down there some way. I was homesick for the mountains in a month. But what scared me most was the pauper population of the old place—one in every thirty-seven had to be helped. I came back to the States gladly. 'I guess I'm an American,' I said to my sisters."

To Lee Virginia the talk of "the curse of democracy" and "the decay of empire" was unexciting, but when Cavanagh told of the sheepmen's advance across the dead line on Deer creek and of the threats of the cattlemen owners she was better able to follow the discussion. Bridges was heartily on the side of law and order, for he wished to boom the state (being a heavy owner in a town site), but he objected to Redfield's ideas of "botting up the resources of the state."

"But we're not," retorted Redfield: "we're merely defending them against those who would monopolize them. We believe in their fullest use, but we see no reason for giving away the resources when the country needs the revenue."

Mrs. Redfield rose as soon as the coffee came on. "You gentlemen seem bent upon discussing matters of no interest to us," she said, "so we'll leave you to fight it out alone. I'm sure you'll all agree with Hugh in the end. Like General Grant, he's a very obstinate man."

No sooner were they seated in the big living room than Mrs. Enderby began to relate comical stories of her household. Her cats had fits and ran up the wall. Her dogs were forever getting muddled by reason of foolish attacks upon porcupines, or else they came home so reminiscent of skunks that they all but smothered the cook.

"Invariably they return from encounters of this kind just as we are sitting at dinner," she explained. "Furthermore, Enderby's ditches are habitually getting clogged and overflowing the lawn and filling the cellar, and he stands in terror of his cowboys. When I think of all these irritations and distractions England's order and routine seem heavenly. But Charley finds all this amusing, more's the pity, and leaves me to set things in order. Most ludicrous of all to me is his habitual claim that the ranch is paying. I tell him there's an error in his bookkeeping somewhere, but he assures me that his receipts exceeded his expenditures last year, which is quite too incredible. You've no idea how high wages are and how little we raise."

"Oh, yes, I have," laughed Mrs. Redfield. "And my cat had a fit too. Hugh says it's the high altitude. I tell him it's melancholia."

Cavanagh showed himself. "I hear so much laughter I'm coming in. We're all so incessantly political out here, and, besides, I came to see the ladies, and I can stay only a few minutes longer."

"You're not going back tonight?" exclaimed his hostess.

"I must be on my own precinct by daylight," he replied. "The supervisor has an eye on me."

Mrs. Redfield explained to Lee Virginia, "He rode fifty miles over the mountains."

"Thirty," corrected Ross. "But what does that matter when I'm in the company of such charming ladies?" he added gallantly.

"And now he's going to ride all the way back tonight."

"Think of that!" gasped Mrs. Enderby. "And no moon!"

"How can you find your way?" asked Mrs. Bridges, to whom this was a mortally dangerous journey.

"Oh, it's quite simple! If you don't bump against a tree or fall into the creek you may be quite sure you're on the trail," laughed Ross.

Mrs. Redfield knew the true reason for his coming and was not at all pleased, "for with all Lee's personal charm," she said to her husband, "she is socially beneath Ross Cavanagh even in a state where social barriers are few."

"Come out on the veranda," suggested Cavanagh, "and I'll show you the hills I must climb."

Lee accepted innocently, but as the young people left the room Mrs. Enderby looked at her hostess with significant glance. "There's the lady Ross rode down to meet. Who is she?"

"Her mother is that dreadful old creature that keeps the Wetherford hotel in Roaring Fork."

"No!" exclaimed Mrs. Enderby.

"Yes; Lee Virginia is Lize Wetherford's daughter."

"But the girl is charming."

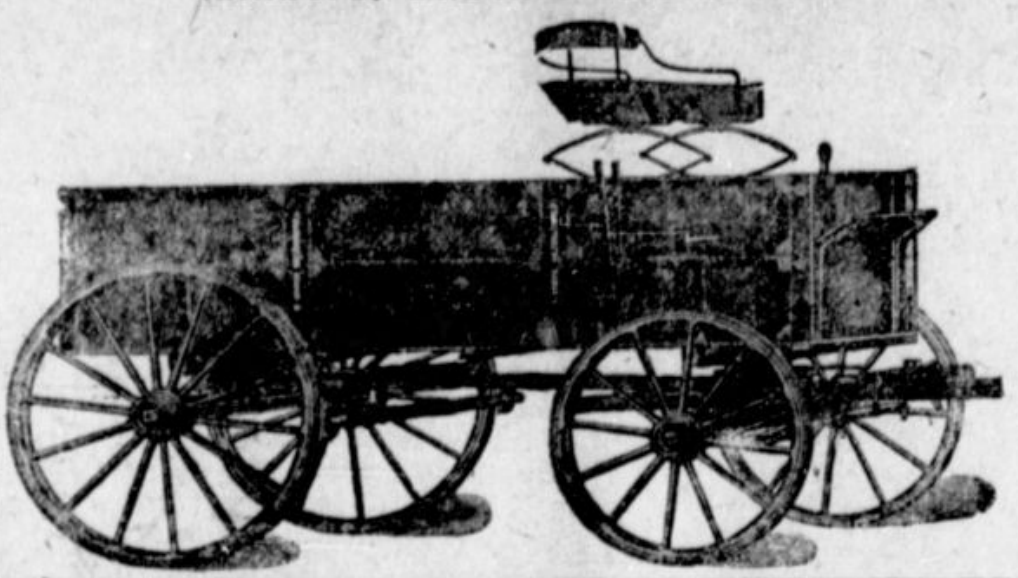

"I cannot understand it. Hugh came home a week or so ago full of her praise"—And at this point her voice dropped lower, and the other drew closer.

GO TO THE RESCUE

Don't Wait Till It's Too Late—Follow The Example of a Marion Citizen.

Rescue the aching back.

If it keeps on aching, trouble comes. Backache is kidney ache.

If you neglect the kidneys' warning. Look out for urinary trouble—dropsy. This Marion citizen will show you how to go to the rescue.

J. O. Tabor, Marion, Ky., says: "I was afflicted with kidney trouble for about six years. The pains in my back were severe at times and when I was stooping or lifting, sharp twinges passed through my loins. My back always ached more intensely at night and in the morning I felt very lame. I tried easily, was languid and nervous and had headaches. The kidney secretions also passed too frequently and caused me annoyance. I took the contents of one and a half boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Haynes & Taylor's drug store and they rid me of every symptom of my trouble. I am now in good health."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Some men seem to think they have nothing to do in this life but to sit idly by and let some one else do their part of the work for them. But the bible says that every man shall give an account of himself to God. And we fear that many will not be able to render much account for the way they have discharged their duty toward the church building here. Many have done nothing, others have not worked enough to get weary. But the promise is to the faithful. And so our church is moving on just the same.

Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity of both body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs.

It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the basic troubles, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances. It is first of all necessary to keep the bowels open and then to tone the digestive muscles so as to get them to again do their work naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful, and something mild will do the work just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and pills and waters of various kinds, and have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, then try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative tonic that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and yet is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist, who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before spending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will gladly send you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy is rapidly displacing all other forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, and families like Mr. O. F. Wisler's of Syracuse, Ill., and Mrs. Carrie Cullen's of 315 N. Notre Dame street, South Bend, Ind., are now never without it in the house. They have tested it and know its grand value to every member of the family.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. Back To Nature.

A hen is not supposed to have much common sense or tact, yet every time she lays an egg she cackles forth the fact.

A rooster hasn't got a lot of intellect to show, but none the less most roosters have, enough good sense to crow.

The mule, the most despised of beasts, has a persistent way of letting people know he's around, by his insistent bray.

The busy little bees they buzz, bulls bellow and cows moo, and watch-dogs bark and ganders quack and doves and pigeons coo.

The peacock spreads his tail and squawks; pigs squeal and robins sing, and even serpents know enough to hiss before they sting.

But Man, the greatest masterpiece that Nature could devise, will often stop and hesitate before he'll AD VER TISE!

FAMILY REUNION

Of Orr And Brantley Families
And Birthday Celebration
Held At Blackford.

On Wednesday, March 8th, there was assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Brantley in Blackford, members and relatives of the Brantley and Orr families, numbering more than thirty people.

Those gathered there made the visit as a surprise party, it being the seventy-second birthday of Mrs. Ibbie Brantley, who is a sister of the late J. W. Orr, of this city, Dr. E. A. Orr, of Caldwell county, and Kelly Orr, of Crittenden county.

This reunion brings to mind a rather unusual relationship existing among the Orr and Brantley families, which are two of the pioneer families of this section of Kentucky, both having located here, the Orr family in Crittenden county, and the Brantley family in Crittenden and Webster counties, in the early part of the last century.

There were four intermarriages in the two families, and yet there was no marriage of blood relations.

The two original families were those of Joshua Orr and James Brantley, the descendants of the latter, and the sons and daughters of William and Jesse, being the ones who married into the Orr family.

First L. D. Brantley, son of William Brantley, married Margaret Orr; next, Kelly Orr married Laura Brantley, daughter of Jesse Brantley; then followed the marriage of John W. Orr and Nellie Brantley, brother and sister of Kelly and Laura, and then to even up the score, Ben Brantley and Ibbie Orr were married, which made the four weddings in the two families.

Those present at the birthday reunion celebration were Mrs. J. W. Orr, Miss Katie Orr, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Orr, John Thomas, wife and son, Mrs. Rich Corbett, Providence; Mrs. John B. Easley, Al Easley and son, Marion; Miss Georgia Kuykendall, Clay, Mrs. John Stuart and son, Piney; Mrs. Margaret Pickens, Mrs. O. S. Travis and daughters, John R. Travis, Piney, and Mrs. Dolly Walker, Marion.

Together with those mentioned above Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Brantley represent four generations of both the Orr and Brantley families.

The survivors of the older generations of the two families are as follows: Dr. E. A. Orr, age 78; Kelly Orr, age 74; Mrs. Ibbie Brantley, 72, sons and daughter of Joshua Orr, and Mrs. Bernice Gilbert, 85, Thomas Brantley, Daniel Brantley, B. P. Brantley, Mrs. Laura Orr, Mrs. Rebecca Babb, sons and daughters of Jesse Brantley.

I try to treat all alike and fair, and promise to do all in my power to deliver the desired goods. Give me a chance and I'll appreciate it and can't believe you will ever regret it. Mares from a distance kept reasonable. My motto is "No Colt No Pay."

On Saturday Sept. 2nd 1911, I will give a colt show for the foals of 1911. Will offer three liberal prizes for three best colts sired by any one of my three stallions, Chester Denmark, King Eclipse, or George.

A 3rd prize for the third best colt by either stallion.

One prize for the best mule colt by either of my jacks.

Now I expect to continue these colt shows each fall, so keep your colt in good condition and continue to breed with T. Y. ORDWAY, if you haven't tried him, get in the BAND—WAGON and always be happy.

Yours to Please.

A beautiful picture of the new Methodist church is on view in the show window of J. H. Orme's drug store.

Myrtle Schwab was here Wednesday and while here received a telegram announcing the death of his brother, Authur Schwab, a former Marion resident, in the west.

Henry Hammack, who has lived here for several years on Salem street, will move to the McMurray house on Walker St.

Mrs. Stella Haynes went to Dawson last week. Her husband, R. F. Haynes, joined her there Sunday afternoon, and together they will spend the week at that popular resort.

Dr. and Mrs. Waddell and her brothers, Earl and Hershel Butler, of Salem, were here Monday on a shopping trip and while in the city were the guests of Ernest Butler and wife on College street.

Rev. T. N. Compton of Owensboro, assisted by the pastor in charge, Rev. E. B. Blackburn began a meeting in March at Clay which was carried on two weeks. It was a fine meeting and resulted in a number of additions.

Immediately after this meeting closed Revs. P. H. Davis and Mitchel conducted a meeting at the Methodist two weeks and were assisted by Rev. W. T. Oakley of this city and they brought the remaining sinners into the fold, making a clean sweep of the city.

Fiscal Court.

The Fiscal Court met in regular session Tuesday and in looking after the county's business methods, decided to create a new office—a county treasurer and it fixed his salary at $300.00 per annum. Under the law the sheriff must settle with the treasurer every sixty days and it is argued by those who advocated the above change, that the county will save largely more in interest than the salary named and it will soon put the county on a cash basis.

"It Cured My Back"

"For twenty-nine years I have been at intervals a great sufferer from rheumatism. During that time, no telling how many gallons of the various kinds of liniments and oils I have used and with but little relief. Recently, I was confined to my bed helpless. I tried Sloan's Liniment and used it with such satisfactory results that I sent for two large bottles, and I have up to this time used about half a 50 cent bottle with splendid success."—JAMES HYDE, Beebe, White County, Ark.

WORK MEANS SUCCESS.

If you would succeed—work. There is no word in the English language which has more vital meaning and holds more of promise than that little word "work."

Be content to do what you know how to do. Keep at it until you can do that particular work better than anyone else can do it. Then you are a master.

Whether your business is making sausages, or painting pictures, is of no importance. People succeed in both. Are you making the best sausages that can be made, or painting the pictures that most please?—that is the real question.

Develop the talent that is yours to the utmost and then seek constantly to make it most effective.

Canova could cut a pat of butter into a perfect lion. But a lion in butter is valueless. He learned to cut his lions in marble, and became the master sculptor of his age. The same Canova was in them both, but the difference between butter and lasting marble is the difference between obscurity and fame.

The amount of money received does not always indicate the real worth of a man's work. There are other rewards more satisfying. The chief pastry cook in a certain big hotel gets a larger salary than the president of Harvard college.

It does not follow that pies are of more value than educational influence. But it does show that even the man who can do nothing better than make pies, but makes them better than anybody else, does not need to take a back seat.

When a medicine must be given to young children it should be pleasant to take. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is made from leaf sugar, and the roots used in its preparation give it a flavor similar to maple syrup, making it pleasant to take. It has no superior for colds, croup and whooping cough. For sale by all dealers.

ADVICE TO BOYS.

Replying to a recent inquiry Mr. Bryan said:

There is no new advice to give boys, and there are no new boys to advise. The boy is the same that he has been and is not likely to change much in the years to come. His impulses are the same that they were centuries ago; the dangers that confront him confronted his father and grandfather when they were boys. If I were suggesting a warning to boys I would not suggest a better one than embodied in the text, "The wages of sin is death." That is the law and it cannot be repealed. The honest, truthful, industrious boy will succeed in proportion to his intelligence, but go intelligence can make up for lack of honesty, truthfulness or industry—Especially so it is impossible to substitute anything for honesty and truthfulness. Laziness will limit one's accomplishments whatever his other good qualities may be, but he can outgrow laziness just as he can lack of education or intelligence, but it is much more difficult to outgrow a lack of honesty or truthfulness.

Possibly I ought to suggest that patience is a virtue which should be added to the ones already mentioned. Impatience has led many young men to ruin; they have not been willing to wait for a fortune to come through legitimate accumulation, and through their haste to get rich they have fallen. The boy should "learn to labor and to wait." Character is built slowly, but it can be lost in a day. The farmer must wait from seed time until the harvest, however long it may seem, before he can gather his crop, and so the boy must be willing to plant in springtime of life for the harvest that he will gather when he is grown.—The Commoner.

IN UNION THERE IS STRENGTH

Roman Catholics Total 14,618,761.

The Official Church Directory Fixes Figures for the United States.

KENTUCKY HOLDS 147,607.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 3.—There are at present 14,618,761 Roman Catholics in the United States, according to the 1911 Wiltzian Official Catholic Directory, which is now in press. The figure given does not include the Catholics in the Philippines, Porto Rico or Hawaiian Islands, for these were added the number of Roman Catholics under the Stars and Stripes would be nearly 23,000,000.

Although the United States religious census of 1,06 credits the Roman Catholic faith with only 12,079,142, the Wiltzian figure is not exaggerated, as the Census Bureau deducted 15 per cent of its total count for children, counting only communicants.

According to the directory there are in the United States 17,084 Catholic priests and 13,461 churches. Of the number 9,017 have resident pastors. Catholics also control 4,972 parochial schools with an attendance of 1,270,131. In addition to this there are 225 colleges for boys and 696 academies for girls, and eighty-two ecclesiastical seminaries.

According to the Wiltzian publication, the States of the Union having the largest number of Catholics are:

New York, 2,758,171; Pennsylvania, 1,527,239; Illinois, 1,446,409; Massachusetts, 1,380,921; Ohio, 624,721; Louisiana, 557,431; Wisconsin, 540,956; Michigan, 536,107; New Jersey, 495,000; Missouri, 452,703; Minnesota, 441,081; California, 391,500; Connecticut, 378,854; Texas, 295,917; Maryland, 260,000; Kentucky, 147,607; Indiana, 223,078.

These figures are regarded as official in Catholic circles as the information is furnished direct from the various Catholic chancery offices.

On the account of not being prepared to take care of the large amount of eggs that I am now getting from my poultry which is about twelve hundred to fifteen hundred eggs monthly, and I am only prepared to take care of five hundred every twenty one days, in my incubators, so, I concluded to offer these eggs from High Class Birds, to parties near home rather than to advertise them in papers out of my own State at a remarkably low price of seventy-five cents per setting of fifteen, delivered at the following places in Crittenden and Livingston counties.

MARION, TOLU, SHERIDAN, SHADY GROVE, SALEM, CARRSVILLE, SMITHLAND, PINKNEYVILLE, LOLA AND HAMPTON.

The above price is hardly one half of what these eggs would cost you should you purchase them from poultry people in other states who have the full blood, and if I was prepared to take care of them all, not a penny less than one dollar and twenty-five cents would buy them. I would be pleased to have any one call and investigate my stock, if they so desire to see for themselves whether I have what I claim in this line or not. Write or Call.

paper. After acting in this capacity for about a year Mr. Hill again joined the editorial staff of The India Rubber World and with the exception of a period of about fourteen months in 1894-5, when a protracted period of illness compelled him to give up editorial work, he has been continuously identified with this paper. When the paper was purchased by Mr. Henry C. Pearson, in the spring of 1900, Mr. Hill became identified with it as associate editor, the position he occupied until his death.

In October, 1886, Mr. Hill married Miss Lillian Sawyer, of Frankfort, Kentucky, who survives him. He also leaves twin boys nineteen years old and a daughter of twelve. The interment was in Greenwood Cemetery.

More than twenty years of intimate association with Mr. Hill only served to intensify the impression of his unusual force and capacity. Possessed of a marvelous memory, coupled with a love of learning for learning's sake, his store of knowledge was encyclopaedic. His long training in every department of daily newspaper work, together with a natural genius for it, gave to his writings not only an orderly, logical arrangement, but rare dignity and polish. Possessed of a passion for exactitude, no labor was too great if it resulted in the verification or illumination of facts.

For breadth of view, sense of proportion and instant appreciation of news values, he ranked with the great editors of the day. Only a singular distaste for the trammels and disciplines incident to great publications kept him from a career in which his talents would have been broadly recognized.

As a conversationalist he held one's attention by his inexhaustible fund of information and wealth of illustration. Always courteous, generous to a fault, intensely patriotic, not in a local but a truly American sense, he held the esteem of all, while those who were able to penetrate the most bashful reserve with which he enshrouded his inner self, found a soul of rare sweetness and strength.

What The India Rubber World owes to his intelligence and constant service, especially during its formative period, can hardly varied and servicable information.

Mr. Hill's first employment away from home was as a teacher in the public schools of his native county. After one term as a teacher he moved—being then about 21 years old—to Maysville, Kentucky, where he had secured employment upon the local paper. While serving in this capacity he acted as correspondent to various daily newspapers in Cincinnati, Ohio, Louisville, Kentucky, and other cities. His work soon attracted the attention of the metropolitan editors and in the spring of 1879 Mr. Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, offered him the position of "Kentucky State News Editor." In this position Mr. Hill soon became one of the best known newspaper men in Kentucky.

After serving several years on the Courier-Journal he resigned his position to become city editor of the Louisville Commercial. He was soon advanced to managing editor of that paper and served in that capacity until he decided in 1887 to try his fortunes in New York. His first connection in the metropolis was with the New York World, where he served in various capacities until 1889, when, on account of an unsatisfactory condition of health, he decided to give up the strenuous daily work and cast in his lot with trade journalism. He became associated with The India Rubber World at its inception. Mr. Hill remained with these same interests when later on they founded Hardware and also when The Engineering Magazine was established. When Hardware was sold Mr. Hill severed his connection with this firm to become editor of that

CHAPTER VIII.

THE CASE OF LEE VIRGINIA AND ROSS. LEE and Ross stood in silence on the Redfield veranda. There was no moon, and the mountains rose darkly, a sheer wall at the end of the garden, their tops cutting into the starry sky with a dull edge, over which a dim white cone peered.

"That snow peak is Wolftooth and thirty miles from here and at the head of my 'beat,'" said the ranger after a pause as they leaned against the railing and looked away to the south. "I go up that ridge which you see faintly at the left of the main canyon and through that deep notch which is above timber line."

The girl's eyes widened with awe of the big, silent, dark world he indicated. "Aren't you afraid to start out on such a trip alone—I mean, don't you dread it?"

"I'll be sorry to start back, yes, but not because of the dark. I've enjoyed my visit here so much it will be hard to say good night."

"It seems strange to me that you should prefer this wild country to England."

"Do you like the east better than the west?"

"In some ways; but, then, you see, I was born out here."

"So was I—I mean to say I was regenerated out here. The truth is I was a good deal of a scapegrace when I left England. I was always for hunting and horses, and naturally I came directly to the wild west country, and here I've been ever since. I've had my turn at each phase of it—cowpuncher, soldier, rough rider and finally forest ranger. I reckon I've found my job at last."

"Do you like it so much?"

"At the present time I am perfectly contented. I'm associated now with a country that will never yield to the plow. Yes, I like my work. I love the forests and the streams. I wish I might show them to you. You don't know how beautiful they are. The most beautiful parks in the world are commonplace to what I can show you. My only sorrow is to think of them given over to the sawmill. Perhaps you and your mother will come up some time and let me show you my lakes and streams. There are waters so lovely they make the heart ache. Hugh is coming to come up soon; perhaps you and Mrs. Redfield will come with him."

"I'd like it above everything," she responded fervently. Then her voice changed. "But all depends on my mother's health."

It hurt him to hear her call Eliza Wetherford mother. He wanted to forget her origin for the moment. He was not in love with her—far from it! But she was so alluring, and the proprietress of the Wetherford House was not nice, and that made one doubt the daughter.

She broke the silence. "It seems dreadfully dark and mysterious up there." She indicated his path.

"It isn't as bad as it looks. There is a good trail, and my pony knows it as well as I do. I enjoy riding by night."

"But there are bears and other wild things, are there not?"

"Not as much as I wish there were."

"Why do you say that?"

"I hate to see all the wild life killed off. Some day all these forests will have game refuges like the Yellowstone National park. They are coming each year to have greater and greater value to the people of the plains. They are playgrounds, like the Alps. If I should ever settle down to a home it would be in a canyon like this, with a great peak at my front door."

"It is beautiful," the girl said in the tone of sadness with which we confront the perfect night, the perfect flower, the flawless landscape. "It is both grand and peaceful."

This tone of sadness pleased him. It showed her depth of perception, and he reflected that she had not uttered a vacuous or silly phrase since their first meeting. "She is capable of great development," he thought. Aloud he said: "You are a strange mingling of east and west. Do you realize it?"

"In what way?" she asked, feeling something ardent in his tone.

"You typify to me at this moment this whole state. You fill me with enthusiasm for its future. Here you are, derived from the lawless west, yet taking on the culture and restraint of the east so readily that you seem not in the least related to it."

He checked himself at this point, and she said, "My mother is not as rough as she seems, Mr. Cavanagh."

"She must be more of the woman than appears or she could not have borne such a daughter. But do you feel your relationship to her? Tell me honestly, for you interest me."

"I didn't at first, but I do now. I begin to understand her, and, besides, I feel in myself certain things that are in her, though I think I am more like the Wetherfords. My father's family home was in Maryland."

Ross could have talked on all night, so alluring was the girl's dimly seen yet warily felt figure at his side, but a sense of danger and a knowledge that he should be riding led him at last to say: "It is getting chill. We must go in, but before we do so let me say how much I've enjoyed seeing you again. I hope the doctor will make a favorable report on your mother's case. You'll write me the result of the examination, won't you?"

"If you wish me to."

"I shall be most anxious to know."

They were standing very near to each other at the moment, and the ranger, made very sensitive to woman's charm by his lonely life, shook with newly created love of her. A suspicion, a hope, that beneath her cultivated manner lay the passionate nature of her mother gave an added force to his desire. He was sorely tempted to touch her, to test her, but her sweet voice, a little sad and perfectly unconscious of evil, calmed him. She said:

"I hope to persuade my mother to leave the Forks. All the best people there are against us. Some of them have been very cruel to her and to me, and, besides, I despise and fear the men who come to our table."

"You must not exchange words with them," he all but commanded. "Be aware of Gregg; he is a vile lot. Do not trust him for an instant. Do not permit any of those loafers to talk with you, for if you do they will go away to defame you. I know them. They are unscrupulously vile. It makes me angry to think that Gregg and his like have the right to speak to you every day, while I can see you only at long intervals. I wish my station were not so far away. But I'll ride down as often as my duties will permit, and you must let me know how things go. And if any of those fellows persecute you you'll tell me, won't you? I wish you'd look upon me as your big brother. Will you do that?" His voice entreated, and as she remained silent he continued: "Roaring Fork is one of the worst towns in the state, and a girl like you needs some one as a protector. I don't know just how to put it so that you will not misunderstand me, but, you see, I protect the forest, the streams and the game. I help the settler in time of trouble, I am a kind of all round big brother to everybody who needs help in the forest. In fact, I'm paid for protecting things that can't protect themselves, and so—here he tried to lend his voice the accent of humor—"why shouldn't I be the protector of a girl like you, alone—worse than alone—in this little town?"

She remained dumb at one of two points where he clearly hoped for a word, and she was unable to thank him when he had finished. In this silence a curious constriction came into his throat. It was almost as if he had put his passion into definite words, and as the light fell upon her he perceived that her bosom was heaving with deep emotion.

"I am lonely," she faltered out at last—"horribly lonely. And I know how how people feel toward my mother, and it hurts me—it all hurts me. But I'm going to stay and help her." She paused to recover her voice. "And you do seem different. I—I trust you."

"I'm glad you understand me, and you will let me know if I can help you, won't you?"

"Yes," she answered simply.

"Good night," he said, extending his hand.

She placed her palm to his quite frankly, but the touch of it made further speech at the moment impossible.

They went in with such telltale faces that even Redfield wondered what had passed between them.

Excusing himself almost at once, Cavanagh left the room, and when he looked in a few moments later he was clothed in the ranger's dusty green uniform, booted and spurred for his long, hard ride. Mrs. Redfield followed him into the hall and out on the doorstep to say: "Ross, you must be careful. This girl is very alluring in herself, but her mother, you know, is impossible."

"You're needlessly alarmed, as usual," he smilingly replied. "She interests me, that's patent. But beyond that, why, nonsense! Good night."

Nevertheless, despite his protestations, he went away up the trail with his mind so filled with Lee Virginia's appealing face and form that he would certainly have ridden over a precipice had it not been for his experienced pony, which had fortunately but one aim, and that was to cross the range safely and to reach the home pasture at the earliest moment.

Left alone, Lee Virginia thought over her past. She was not entirely without experience as regards respectful courtship. Her life in the east had brought her to know a number of attractive lads and a few men, but none of these had become more than a good companion or friend, and, though she wrote to one or two of these youths letters of the utmost friendliness, there was no passion in them, and she felt as yet the sting of nothing more intense in her liking for Cavanagh. But he meant more to her now than she was lonely and beleaguered.

That he had ridden all that long, rough way merely to see her she was not vain enough to believe, but she had nevertheless something of every woman's secret belief in her individual charm. Cavanagh had shown a flattering interest in her, and his wish to be her protector filled her with joy and confidence.

She heard a good deal more about this particular forest ranger next morning at breakfast. "He is throwing himself away," Mrs. Redfield passionately declared. "Think of a man of Ross' refinement living in a mountain shack miles from anybody, watching poachers, marking trees and cooking his own food! It's a shameful waste of genius."

"That's as you look at it, my dear," responded Redfield. "Ross is the guardian of an immense treasure chest which belongs to the nation. Furthermore, he is quite certain, as I am, that this forest service is the policy of the future and that it offers fine chances for promotion, and then, finally, he likes it."

THE TOUCH OF IT MADE FURTHER SPEECH IMPOSSIBLE.

"That is all well enough for a young man, but Ross is at least thirty-five and should be thinking of settling down. I can't understand his point of view."

"My dear, you have never seen the procession of the seasons from such a point of view as that which he enjoys."

"No, and I do not care to. It is quite lonely enough for me right here."

Redfield looked at Lee with comic blankness. "Mrs. Redfield is hopelessly urban. As the wife of a forest supervisor she cares more for pavements and tramcars than for the most splendid mountain park."

"I most certainly do," his wife vigorously agreed, "and if I had my way we should be living in London."

"Listen to that! She's ten times more English than Mrs. Enderby."

"I'm not, but I long for the civilized instead of the wild. I like comfort and society."

"So do I," returned he.

"Yes; the comfort of an easy chair on the porch and the society of your forest rangers. This ranch life is all very well for a summer outing, but to be tied down here all the year round is to be denied one's birthright as a modern."

All this more or less cheerful complaint expressed the minds of many others who live amid these superb scenes. When autumn comes, when the sky is gray and the peaks are hid in mist, they long for the music, the lights, the comfort of the city. But when the April sun begins to go down in a smother of crimson and flame and the mountains loom with epic dignity, or when at dawn the air is like some divine flood descending from the unstained mysterious heights, then the dweller, in the foothills cries out: "How fortunate we are! Here are health and happiness! Here poverty is unknown!"

Mrs. Redfield was becoming more and more interested in Virginia, who had not merely the malodorous reputation of her mother to contend with, but the memory of a traitorous sire to live down, and when the girl went to her room to pack her bag the wife turned to her husband and said:

"Ross is terribly smitten with her."

Redfield coughed uneasily. "I hope not. Of course he admires her, as any man must. She's physically attractive, very attractive, and, besides, Ross is as susceptible as a cowpuncher. He was deeply impressed the first time he saw her; I could see that."

"I didn't like his going out on the veranda with her last night," continued Mrs. Redfield, "and when they came in her eyes and color indicated that he'd been saying something exciting to her. Hugh, Ross Cavanagh must not get involved with that girl. It's your duty as his superior to warn him."

"He's fully grown, my dear, and a bit dictatorial on his own part. I'm a trifle timid about cutting in on his private affairs."

"Then I'll do it. Marriage with a girl like that is out of the question. Think what his sisters would say!"

Redfield smiled a bit satirically. "To the outsider a forest ranger at $900 a year and find himself and horses is not what you may call a brilliant catch."

"Oh, well, the outsider is no judge! Ross Cavanagh is a gentleman, and, besides, he's sure to be promoted. I acknowledge the girl's charms, and I don't understand it. When I think of her objectively as Lize Wetherford's girl I wonder at her being in my house. When I see her I want her to stay with me. I want to hug her."

"Perhaps we've been unjust to Lize all along," suggested Redfield. "She has remained faithful to Ed Wetherford's memory all these years—that is conceded. Doesn't that argue some unusual quality? How many women do we know who are capable of such loyalty? Come now! Lize is a rough piece of goods, I'll admit, and her lunch counter was a public nuisance, but she had the courage to send her girl away to be educated, denying herself the joy of seeing her develop by her side. We mustn't permit our prejudices to run away with us."

The girl's return put a stop to the discussion, which could end in nothing but confusion anyway.

Don't Wait Till It's Too Late—Follow The Example of a Marion Citizen.

Rescue the aching back.

If it keeps on aching, trouble comes. Backache is kidney ache. If you neglect the kidneys' warning. Look out for urinary trouble—dropsy.

This Marion citizen will show you how to go to the rescue.

J. O. Tabor, Marion, Ky., says: "I was afflicted with kidney trouble for about six years. The pains in my back were severe at times and when I was stooping or lifting, sharp twinges passed through my loins. My back always ached more intensely at night and in the morning I felt very lame. I tired easily, was languid and nervous and had headaches. The kidney secretions also passed too frequently and caused me annoyance. I took the contents of one and a half boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Haynes & Taylor's drug store and they rid me of every symptom of my trouble. I am now in good health."

Puzzling Problem.

A man had two baskets of apples, one of which he was selling two for five cents, the other, three for five cents. He mixed the two baskets of apples and sold them all at five for ten cents.

When he figured up his sales he found that he had received five cents less than if he had sold them all in the original way. Where did the loss come in?—

Free Remedy For Weak Bowels

There are two forms of bodily cleanliness, the external and the internal. The one is for your pride in yourself; the other for your life and health. Both are important, but of vastly more importance in the long run is the internal cleanliness.

This is one point that all should watch about their bodies—the cleanliness of the bowels. Keep them clean and free from obstructions. To do this you must have one or two movements of the bowels each twenty-four hours. If your system does not do this naturally, in the process of eating and drinking, then you must obtain aid of some kind. After finding out that cathartics, salts and such things relieve you for a day, but bind you up worse than ever the next day, then try a simpler and more natural remedy like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

For the skeptical the best way to begin is to send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell for a free sample bottle. Use it as directed and if it convinces you that a brief continuance of its use will relieve you permanently—that it will train the stomach and bowel muscles to again work naturally at certain hours—then buy it of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, just as so many others are doing. They begin with a sample bottle, then bought a fifty cent bottle, and now, fully convinced of its merits, they buy the one dollar family size. All the members of the family can use it down to the very youngest.

A brief use of this grand laxative tonic will cure constipation in its worst form, indigestion, liver trouble, sick headache, sour stomach and such ailments and keep you in continuous good health at a very small cost. Such is the correct use of many families like that of Mrs. Oscar Plesner, Unionville, Ind. J. F. Daniel, Brown, Tex., and hundreds of others that could be named.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. R. Caldwell, R. 500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

FOUND POT OF GOLD

Lyon County Youth Plows It Up—
Said To Have Contained
$4,000.00.

A story which smacks considerably of the problematic comes from, near Dycusburg, over the bridge in Lyon county. The story runs thus: Charlie Peek, son of Curran Peek, had a dream in which he was the finder of a pot of gold in a field where he was plowing. An indian appeared at his side just as he turned over the rotten stump and exposed the pot full of shining gold and forbid him taking but one $20.00 gold piece. The indian directed him where to bury the remainder and told him before disappearing, that the money was put there by himself 77 years ago and that ten years afterward the indian died without revealing the hiding place of his buried treasure to any of his family and it had lain there ever since. When Charlie awoke from his dream and told members of his family about it they laughed at him and thought nothing of it, until he did turn over an old stump with his plow and unearthed a pot of gold. His dream and the indian loomed up before him and true to the injunction of the redman, he took one $20.00 piece and buried the rest. The surprise and shock rather unsettled the boy's mind and he is now unable tell where it was that he buried the treasure, but from what he does say, there must have been about $4000.00. He has the $20.00 piece to show for his find, so the story goes.

NEW SALEM.

Jacob Kirk and Herman Ladd, each, have a sick child. No corn planted yet. The farmers generally, are ready to plant corn when the winter breaks up. The knowing ones say that the outlook for tobacco plants is very slim. Mont Davenport and family visited relatives near Crayne last week. Henry Threlkeld, of near Tolu, visited relatives in this section last week. Judge Stevens, chief police, of Salem, and N. R. Farris, of Salem, were in Marion last week. If we were as bald headed as some men we know we swear we would never pull our hats off when the sun is shining. Our section had quite an excitement last week over the robbery, but everybody is assuming a normal condition again. It would have been quite a pull back to the crap shooting fraternity had the hundred dollars in nickles not been found. Nearly everyone says they knew just how the robbery would turn out—Annanias still has a few followers on earth yet. We reckon everybody saw the big snow March 31st, so we wont mention it.

Texas Is Roomy.

JAMES THOMAS REPENTS.

The sensational robbery story of James Thomas, the Salem mail carrier had rather a sudden and equally as sensational ending last week when it became known that the money had been returned to the Salem Bank. The facts as best we can gather them is that Mr. Thomas confessed to Lacy Moore after the reputed hold up that he had yielded to the tempter and had secreted the money and had become sorry and did not want it and desired the help of his friends in getting the money to whom it belonged and told him where it was. Lacy went at once to Jeff Clement to ask Jeff what to do. If it had been a cow, or steer, or hog, he would have known; but money—in bags—and nearly a hundred pounds of it Lacy would not go about it unless Jeff said so. They soon got Pres Maxwell and Tom Cochran and confided the secret and it was soon agreed for all four to go post haste to the hiding place designated and if the money was there take it to the owners. The hiding place, a culvert, near the old Jeff LaRue homestead. Right on the public road the money was found intact, none of the seals were broken and it was taken quickly to the Salem Bank. Mr. Thomas was arrested that afternoon when he returned with the Salem mail but promptly gave bond in the sum of $600. His examining trial was set for Monday but he waived it and was bound over to the June term of the Circuit Court to await the action of the grand-jury. H. C. Paris had the misfortune to get his leg broken Wednesday morning on the road to Ferds Ferry about two miles north of town, by his mule slipping and falling on him. Drs. were hastily summoned and set the member and he is said to be resting very well.

Joe's Visit.

Joe at last reached the house—he had been there before. So pass'd on thro' the gate and walk'd up to the door; It was open'd, of course, by his dear Imogene. And a vision more lovely Turk never had seen. "How are you this evening, my fair Imogene? You look well dear, apart from that writing machine," Joe observ'd, with a smile and a satisfied air. As he sat with legs cross'd, in a big parlor chair. "Oh, I feel just delightful," replied Imogene. "Due in part, there's no doubt, to the writing machine. And you, Joe, look well, too—and yet it seem odd To see you away from your partner, the hod." "Oh, that work just suits me—I scarce like to stop! For to carry up brick to the man at the top Is really pleasant—much more so, I ween, Than to always be pounding a writing machine." "There's no nicer music, you 'toter' of brick, Than the writing machine's click-click-a-click; And besides," she continued, "just find, if you can, Any one that's more 'cute' than the Bald-Headed Man." "So you see, therefore, Joe," still went on Imogene, "Just betwixt you and me—and the writing machine—I've found my life work—when my hair has grown gray I'll just still be a-punching and pounding away!" Owing to lack of space we have been forced to leave out a part of this week's installment of "The Clodhopper and The Bald-Headed Man." A full installment of the story will be published next week.
