KENTUCKY'S NEXT GOVERNOR

A Historic Review of Old Men In Public Life And Public Service—Patterson on McCreary.

The opinion is sometime expressed that men who have occupied prominent places in affairs and have done great things are incapable of doing effective service after they have passed the traditional three-score years and ten. That this is a fallacy a few instances, and they might be multiplied manifold, will show.

Augustus was more capable of empire at 76 than when he defeated Antony at Actium forty years before. Gladstone conducted with brilliant success his most strenuous political campaign when over 80. William I. and Von Moltke won the victories of Sedan and Gravelotte and laid France prostrate in the dust when over 70. Queen Victoria laid down the burden of empire when in the full maturity of her powers when over 80; and the veteran Emperor of Austria holds the reins still with a steady hand, though already four-score. Marshal Radetzky annihilated the army of Charles Albert on the fatal field of Novarra when 82 years of age; and Voltaire was crowned amid thunders of applause in the Theater Francaise, when his "Irene" was placed upon the stage at 78. Humboldt completed his immortal Cosmos at 90. Chief Justice John Marshall was in the full vigor of his powers at 80, and Chief Justice Roger V. Taney at 87. Justice John M. Harlan, one of the most distinguished of living Kentuckians, wrote recently an opinion dissenting from the deliverance of the Supreme Court on the Standard Oil decision, characterized by a wealth of legal learning, a powerful grasp of detail and a soundness of logical process unsurpassed by any of his contemporaries or any of his predecessors, and this at the age of 78. Joe Jefferson never appeared with more dramatic power than in Rip Van Winkle at 75; Tennyson wrote "Crossing the Bar" when past 80. LaPlace completed his "Traite de la Mecanique Celeste" at 76, a work which takes front rank in intellectual vigor, in scope and profundity with the Principia of Sir Isaac Newton and the Quaternions of Sir William Rowan Hamilton. Henry Clay brought forward and carried when 73 years old, the greatest political measure of his life, the famous compromise act of 1850. Daniel Webster and John C. Calhoun were still full of fire of former years when they died, the former at 70 and the latter at 68 years of age. Gregory VII., whose contest with the German Emperor reached its climax in the humiliation of Henry IV, at Canossa, was nearing 70 when he brought his antagonist to his knees; and Paul III., one of the most imperious of the pontiffs, did not hesitate, when nearing 70, to fulminate his bull of excommunication against Henry VIII. John Wesley, when nearing 90 was still the most indefatigable and eloquent preacher in England. Michael Angelo produced one of his famous masterpieces, "The Last Judgment," when three-score years and ten; and Titian at about the same age completed his famous painting of "The Battle of Lepanto."

And in these latter years, Justin S. Morrill, of Vermont, and William B. Allison, of Iowa, added luster and dignity to the Senate when past 80. Within a few months Dr. James B. Angell, when past 80, retired from the presidency of the famous University of Michigan, after a service of nearly forty years, and Mathew H. Buckham, president of the University of Vermont, was still vigorous and active at the time of his death, though nearly 80. Instances of great mental vigor at an advanced age might be multiplied by dozens and by scores, but these will suffice to show that many men are capable of great feats of mental power between 70 and 90 years of age.

While not a politician, I am greatly interested in the good government of the State. In addressing this letter to you and through you to the people of Kentucky I do not wish to be understood as disparaging the claims or the abilities of any candidate for the office of governor. I wish only to record my estimate of the one whom I prefer.

Few men have had experience so wide and so varied in the management of public affairs as James B. McCraery. He has been before the public more than forty years of continuous service in the field, in the halls of legislation and in executive duties. He made an excellent record as a gallant soldier and a capable officer. During the trying ordeal of the Civil War he evaded no duty and quailed before no danger. After his return to private life he represented his constituency in three successive national Democratic conventions. He represented his county in three successive sessions of the State Legislature, during the last of which he was Speaker of the House. He represented his district in Congress for six successive terms, namely 1885 to 1897, and represented Kentucky in the Senate of the United States from 1903 to 1909. From 1875 to 1879 he was governor of this Commonwealth. While a member of Congress he was appointed one of the Commissioners of the United States to the International Monetary Congress at Brussels, where he maintained with dignity and with credit the reputation of his country.

From the foregoing it will be seen that his whole life has been spent in the public service. His experience has been wide and varied in the field, in the halls of legislation, State and National, in administrative and executive duties, and in dealing with some of the most difficult problems which confront the political economist in national international finance. No mere tyro can bring to the discharge of public duties one tithe of the capacity for intelligent work in legislative and executive duties. His collegiate and legal education well fitted him for these manifold and varied activities. In all of these relations he has borne himself with conspicuous ability, fidelity, dignity and courtesy. As Speaker of the House his rulings were prompt and impartial. As Governor his acts were all conceived and executed in the interest of the whole people of the Commonwealth. Partisanship was subordinated to the public good. In his legislative career in Congress, extended over a period of eighteen years, every measure supported and every vote cast was upon national and not sectional lines. An able, upright, experienced, clean, good man, no breath of suspicion, so far as I know, has ever attached to any of his acts, either public or private.

If elected Governor of Kentucky, he will bring to the discharge of his du-

FIRST LEGAL ELECTROCUTION IN KENTUCKY AT EDDYVILLE.

Eddyville, Ky., July 8.—Calmly, without the support of any one, Jim Buckner, the 18-yr-old murderer of Policeman John Roby, of Lebanon, Ky., walked into the death chamber at the branch penitentiary here at sunrise this morning, and sixteen minutes later his lifeless body was being prepared for burial.

The first execution of a condemned prisoner by electrocution in Kentucky was a pronounced success, in speed, painless and the absence of the horrible features attendant upon public hanging.

Forty-five people, officials, ministers and newspapermen, witnessed the death of Buckner, and among all the assembled officials and spectators, Buckner was the least moved. From all indications his heart was neither accelerated or retarded a beat or his breathing or color affected.

He walked into the room between former Chaplain J. B. Woodson and guard Block, but neither of them touched him. When he turned around and seated himself the action was so natural that every person in the room at the instant thought of one seating himself in a barber's chair.

Buckner might have rehearsed his part in the performance with the officials, who undoubtedly were letter perfect in their roles, so exactly did he conform to the requirements of the occasion. After sliding back comfortably in the bulky death chair, he moved his feet together, laid his arms out along the arms of the chair, ready to be strapped ped, threw his head back against the rest, almost with the air of one, who feels himself about to be relieved of some dreadful suspense, and never quivered until the first shock of electricity doubled his hands into fists. His lips were seen to mutter a prayer just as the cap was gently pushed down over his head. That was all.

Previously, during the death watch, he had requested them to "tell mother I hope to meet her in heaven." He had been baptized by Rev. J. H. Holden and he spent the hours of the night reading his Bible.

Just before the execution both the Rev. J. H. Holton and the Rev. J. B. Woodson offered prayer for the repose of the doomed man's soul.

When everything had been adjusted and the prayers said, at a signal P. W. Depp touched the button and one rigor of the body in the chair showed that the current had gone home. A moment and then 2,300 volts shot through the body, producing no perceptible effect.

The End

That was at 4:13 this morning. Five minutes later Doctor Moss pronounced Buckner dead. However, two minutes afterwards he thought he discovered a slight pulse, which was gone in another minute and returned no more.

Jim Buckner had paid the penalty of his crime.

He killed Policeman Roby, of Lebanon, stabbing him thirteen times in most fiendish fashion.

ties a ripe experience extending over forty years, an experience of incalculable value in troublous times, when the hand of a safe, conservative man is needed at the helm. The State needs just now a policy of conciliation, not a policy of adventure, the policy of a statesman, not of politician, a policy justice, not of expediency or opportunism.

I think I might well close by a verse from the forty-fourth chapter of the book of Ecclesiasticus: "Let us now praise famous men and our fathers who begat us." Respectfully,

JAMES K. PATTERSON,
President Emeritus, State University of Kentucky.

MORE SCHOOL TALK.

Mr. Editor, here I am with some more school talk. I have just completed my annual report to the State Superintendent, and among other things that does not look good for Crittenden Co. in the average daily attendance. There were 4306 pupil children in the census report last year with a daily attendance of 1523, making something like one fourth attendance. There was collected and spent in the county for school purposes, building, repairing etc., included $25170.47, making a cost of more than $16 per pupil in school. Should we have had a full attendance the cost would have been less than $6. Now, this cost must go on from year to year. It costs just as much to supply the schools for this one fourth of our children as it does for the whole number. At a little more expense to the county this year, we are going to have a school at every house in the county. This will give every child in the county a chance to attend a school without much complaint as to distance. I know there are parents and guardians who do not send their children to school from simple neglect or indifference. For their benefit I wish to quote some extracts from the Kentucky Statutes.

Section 177, School Law—Every parent, guardian or other person in the State of Kentucky, having the control of any child or children between the ages of 7 and 14 years shall be required to send such child or children annually, at least eight weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive to some private or public day or night school for children."

"Any parent guardian or other person failing to comply with the provisions of this act shall forfeit to the use of the schools in the city, town or common school district in which such child resides, a sum not less than $5. nor more than $20. for the first offense and not less than $10.00 nor more than $50.00 for the 2nd and all subsequent offences."

The trustee of each sub-district is the truant officer and should he fail to see that this law is carried into effect he is subject to a like fine.

The requirements of the teachers are increasing and the cost of teaching is going higher all the time, and the attendance must come up, or the cost will exceed the profit.

By the goodness of the Editor you will find the program for the Institute in these columns next week.

Yours very truly,
E. JEFFREY TRAVIS,
Superintendent.

BOQUET FOR POGUE.

The Legislative Committee on Saturday, June 17, met in Salem and there being no other candidate for Representative from Crittenden and Livingston counties, Hon. Marion F. Pogue was unanimously nominated and declared the nominee for representative of the two counties.

This was a compliment well deserved, as Marion is one of the old-time Democratic boys who merits recognition. He has made a good representative in the past, and we feel confident that no cause for regret will ever be given by him.—Smithland Banner.

Crittenden County For Franks First, Last And All The Time.

The County Convention called by the Republicans, met in pursuance of said call last Saturday after indorsing Taft's and Wilson's administrations, instructed Crittenden County delegates to vote for Franks first, last and all the time, in the state convention which met at Louisville, Tuesday July 11.

O'REAR WINS

THE REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR GOVERNOR.

Judge Edward C. O'Rear, of Montgomery county, swept Kentucky in the race for the Republican nomination for Governor last Saturday, receiving enough instructed votes to insure his nomination on the first ballot. The returns are not yet complete but enough have been received to make O'Rear's nomination absolutely certain.

O'Rear's instructed vote alone is almost twice as much as the combined votes of E. T. Franks and Lieutenant Gov. W. H. Cox. With the returns complete, O'Rear is sure to have close to 1,500 votes.

With only six out of 119 counties to be heard from O'Rear's is 1,394, Cox's 427, and Frank's 364. Eight counties, having a total vote of 120, send uninstructed delegations, all but two of which will probably line up with the Franks and Cox combination.

LATER, Wednesday noon O'Rear was nominated on 1st Ballot this morning and his nomination was made unanimous.

WANTED A TRUE STORY.

Graham White, a bright and attractive child who lives at Helena, Arkansas, "way down south" on the Mississippi River, arrived this month to spend the hot weather and to hear D. Woods, her grandfather, tell stories, which he does with much pleasure.

A few evenings since after he had almost exhausted his fund of stories the little maid said, "Grandpa, I am tired of these old make up stories, I want you to tell me a real story, something which you know is true or which happened to you when you were a young man—something sure enough!" Her grandpa assented with his usual smile and closed his eyes for a moment to study and then began as follows:

"When I was a little boy my father lived near Clay Lick creek, in Livingston county, on a farm. I did not relish farm life much so I secured a position as clerk in my uncle's store at Marion and worked for him for several years. Uncle Jack was very kind to me as well as every one else, and would sometimes let me go on a fishing or hunting trip, provided I would always bring him a good mess of fish, or squirrel or whatever game I killed.

"One Saturday he said to me, 'Davy, its a little dull, suppose you go down to Livingston county to see your father and the other folks and take your fishing pole and gun along with you and bring us in a mess of fish or game on your return trip Monday.' Well it didn't take much persuading to get me to go, for although I did not like the work I did enjoy visiting the old home and seeing all the folks on the farm. On my return trip early in the morning I stopped at the best pool I knew of on Clay Lick creek to fish some but had not much more than put my hook in the water when I noticed a big fat coon in a tree just over me; I reached for my gun and took a shot at him and he rolled out of the tree dead. I looked up another tree and there was another coon, and one crack of my rifle brought him down, I looked around and saw three more coons in as many trees and soon killed them, making five in all—"

At this point in the story Graham, whose eyes were as big as little moons and who was horror stricken, interrupted her grandpa by saying, "Grandpa, didn't I ask you to tell me a true story? Do you expect me to believe that you really killed those innocent coons? What had they done to you? I cannot believe grandpa that you would do such a thing."

The fat and rotund banker explained to the interested little Miss that it was customary to kill coons in those days and that he had killed many a one, and that everybody in the country killed coons when they run up on them.

"Well," said Graham, "Down at Helena, we have lots of coons, they live on all the back streets in cabins, but they are good and kind, and work and wash for white people and I never knew any body in Helena to kill one of them just for nothing. Grandpa, I'm glad I didn't live in those old days when people shot coons just for the fun of it and had you not told me yourself grandpa I never would have believed you could be so cruel."

DIAMOND DUST

Marion 16 Dawson 6

Marion defeated Dawson June 29th by the one sided score of 16 to 6. Dawson started out as if they would be returned winners, scoring two runs in the first on one hit and a couple of errors, and four in the second on three hits and two errors. After this, Lamb held them without a hit or run. Marion scored one in the second on a hit by Cannan, Guess and Lambs sacrifices, and Givens and Dixons hit. They made two in the third on a combination of errors and passed balls. The score went along 6 to 3 until the sixth, when Marion started in to batting Swindler viciously, making two hits and three scores in the sixth, and four hits and five scores each in the seventh and eighth. Givens, Dixon and Guess did the best batting, getting four out of five and three out of four respectively. Cannan, Rochester and Dieckman got two hits each.

Lamb pitched his first match game, and showed strong, especially in the latter part of the game. Cannan, Givens and Dixon starred in the field for Marion.

FAKE SOAP.

During the first of the spring a man, who said his home was in Madisonville, sold a large quantity of laundry soap called "Naptha Monia." The sample shown to prospective purchasers was almost as large as a piece of "Pretty" soap and had the appearance of being a fine laundry soap. The man who sold the soap said that he was selling it at five cents per cake, but that when the grocers got hold of it the price would be ten cents.

He "delivered the goods" not long afterwards and it was "fresh from the factory" and should be laid away to harden." This was done and it shrunk to less than half the size and as a soap for any purpose is worthless. The wrapper that covered each cake does not bear the name of the manufacturer or where it was made. The grand jury will look into the matter before it finally adjourns.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

Over Two Million and Half Flies Are Captured in One Day.

The work of screening the market house was completed yesterday afternoon, and today for the first time the meat stalls of the market house are protected from the army of flies by screens. The windows have box screens to permit the windows being opened as they swing on pivots, while the doors are provided with screens with strong springs to keep them closed as much as possible.

After the work was completed yesterday afternoon fly paper was spread thickly in the market, and 2,567,210 flies were entangled on the sticky traps, and the fly population decreased. Today the number of flies was small in the market house. Every afternoon the city board of health will use a scientific method of killing what few flies enter the market house during the day while the doors are open. The treatment will be used after the butchers have stored away their meat, and the fly pest at the market house will become a nuisance of the past.—Paducah Sun.

SNOW LINIMENT

It neutralizes poisons, subdues inflammation, relaxes contracted muscles and restores healthy conditions. For healing cuts, wounds, burns or scalds, there is nothing like it in the whole list of curative agents. It cures by a mild power that is more effective than the strong, harsh liniments. When rubbed in for rheumatic pain, neuralgia or sciatica, its wonderful penetrating and relieving influence is very gratifying. Cavanagh,

The Great Conservation Novel

CHAPTER XVIII.
A CALL FOR HELP.

ON the following morning, while they were busy packing for the journey to Sulphur, Redfield rolled up to the door in company with a young man in the uniform of a forester.

"Go ask Reddy to come in," commanded Lize. "I want to see him."

Redfield met the girl at the door and presented his companion as "Mr. Dalton, district forester." Dalton was a tall young fellow with a marked southern accent. "Is Cavanagh, the ranger, in town?" he asked.

"No," Lee replied, with effort; "he was here a few days ago, but he's gone back to the forest."

Redfield studied the girl with keen gaze, perceiving a passionate restraint in her face.

"How is your mother?" he asked politely.

Lee smiled faintly. "She's able to sit up. Won't you come in and see her?"

"With pleasure," assented Redfield. "But I want to see you alone. I have something to say to you." He turned to his superior. "Just go into the cafe, Dalton. I'll see you in a moment."

Lee Virginia, hitherto ashamed of the house, the furniture, the bed—everything—led the way without a word of apology. It was all detached now—something about to be left behind, like a bad garment borrowed in a time of stress. Nothing mattered since Ross did not return.

Lize, looking unwontedly refined and gentle, was sitting in a big rocking chair with her feet on a stool, her eyes fixed on the mountains, which showed through the open window. All the morning a sense of profound change, of something passing, had oppressed her. Now that she was about to leave the valley its charm appealed to her. She was tearing up a multitude of tiny roots of whose existence she had hitherto remained unaware. "I belong here," she acknowledged silently. "I'd be homesick anywhere else on God's earth. It's enough and dry bit and all that, but so am I. I wouldn't fit in anywhere that Lee belonged."

She acknowledged an especial liking for Redfield, and she had penetration enough, worldly wisdom enough, to know that Lee belonged more to his world than to her own and that his guidance and friendship were worth more, much more, than that of all the rest of the country, her own included. Therefore she said: "I'm mighty glad to see you, Reddy. Sit down. You've got to hear my little spiel this time."

Redfield, perched on the edge of a tawdry chair, looked about (like the charity visitor in a slum kitchen) without intending to express disgust, but it was a dismal room in which to be sick, and he pitied the woman the more profoundly as he remembered her in the days when "all outdoors" was none too wide for her.

Lize began abruptly: "I'm down, but not out. In fact, I was coming up to see you this afternoon. Lee and I are just about pulling out for good."

"Indeed! Why not go back with me?"

"You can take the girl back if you want to, but now that I'm getting my chance at you I may not go."

Redfield's tone was entirely cordial as he turned to Lee. "I came hoping to carry you away. Will you come?"

"I'm afraid I can't, unless mother goes," she replied sadly.

Lize waved an imperative hand. "Fare away, child. I want to talk with Mr. Redfield alone. Go—see!"

Thus dismissed, Lee went back to the restaurant, where she found the forester just sitting down to his lunch.

"Mr. Redfield will be out in a few minutes," she explained.

"Won't you join me?" he asked in the frank accent of one to whom women are comrades. "The supervisor has been telling me about you."

She took a seat facing him, feeling something refined in his long, smoothly shaven, boyish face. He seemed very young to be district forester, and his eyes were a soft brown, with small wrinkles of laughter playing round their corners.

He began at once on the subject of his visit. "Redfield tells me you are a friend of Mr. Cavanagh's. Did you know that he had resigned?"

She faced him with startled eyes. "No, indeed. Has he done so?"

"Yes. The supervisor got a letter yesterday inclosing his resignation and asking to be relieved at once. And when I heard of it I asked the supervisor to bring me down to see him. He's too good a man to lose."

"Why did he resign?"

"He seemed very bitter over the chief's dismissal. But I hope to persuade him to stay in the service. He's too valuable a man to lose just now, when the war is so hot. I realize that his salary is too small. But there are other places for him. Perhaps when he knows that I have a special note to him from the chief he will reconsider. He's quite capable of the supervisor's position, and Mr. Redfield is willing to resign in his favor. I'm telling you all this because Mr. Redfield has told me of your interest in Mr. Cavanagh, or, rather, his interest in you."

Forest

Sam Gregg, entering the door at this moment, came directly to the forester's table. He was followed by the sheriff, a bearded old man with a solid collar and a dim eye.

Gregg growled out, "You'd better keep your man Cavanagh in the hills. Mr. Forester, or somebody will take a pot shot at him."

"Why, what's new?"

"His assistant is down with smallpox."

"Smallpox?" exclaimed Dalton. Every jaw was fixed and every eye turned upon the speaker.

"Smallpox?" gasped Lee. Gregg resumed, enjoying the sensation he was creating. "You, that Basque border of mine, the one up near Black Tooth, sent word he was sick, so I hunted up an old tramp by the name of Edwards to take his place. Edwards found the dago dying of pox and skipped out over the range, leaving him to die alone. Cavanagh went up and found the dago dead and took care of him. Result is he's full of germs and has brought his appendage down with it, and both of 'em must be quarantined right where they are."

"Good heavens, man," exclaimed Dalton, "this is serious business! Are you sure it's smallpox?"

"One of my men came from there last night. I was there myself on Monday; so was the deputy. The sheriff missed Tom this morning, but I reached him by phone, and Cavanagh admitted to us that the Basque died of smallpox and that he buried him with his own hands."

The sheriff spoke up. "The criminal part of it is this, Mr. Dalton—Cavanagh didn't report the case when he came down here, just when about leaving a trail of poison. Why didn't he report it? He should be arrested."

"Wait a moment," said Dalton. "Perhaps it wasn't pox; perhaps it was only mountain fever. Cavanagh is not the kind of man to involve others in a pestilence. I reckon he knew it was nothing but a fever, and not wishing to alarm his friends, he just said it was down and out again."

A dash of light, of heat, of joy, went through Lee's heart as she listened to Dalton's defense of Cavanagh. "That was the reason why he rode away," she thought. "He was afraid of bringing harm to us." And this conviction lighted her face with a smile even while the forester continued his supposition by saying, "Of course proper precautions should be taken, and as we are going up there the supervisor and I will see that a quarantine is established if we find it necessary."

Gregg was not satisfied. "Cavanagh admitted to the deputy and to me that he believed the case to be smallpox and said that he had destroyed the camp and everything connected with it except the horse and the dog, and yet he comes down here, infecting everybody he meets." He turned to Lee. "You'd better burn the bed he slept on. He's left a trail of germs wherever he went. I say the man is criminally liable and should be jailed if he lives to get back to town."

Lee's mind was off now on another tangent. "Suppose it is true!" she asked herself. "Suppose he has fallen sick away up there, miles and miles from any nurse or doctor?"

"There's something queer about the whole business," pursued Gregg. "For instance, who is this assistant he's got? Johnson said there was an old man in ranger uniform pottering round. Why didn't he send word by him? Why did he let me come to the door? He might have involved me in the disease. I tell you, if you don't take care of him the people of the county will."

The forester looked grave. "If he knew it was smallpox and failed to report it he did wrong, but you say he took care of this poor shepherd, nursed him till he died and buried him, taking all precautions. You can't complain of that, can you? That's the act of a good ranger and a brave man. You wouldn't have done it?" he ended, addressing Gregg. "Sickness up there two full miles above sea level is quite a different proposition from sickness in Sulphur City or the Fork. I shall not condemn Mr. Cavanagh till I hear his side of the story."

Lee turned a grateful glance upon him. "You must be right. I don't believe Mr. Cavanagh would deceive any one."

"Well, we'll soon know the truth," said Dalton, "for I'm going up there. If the ranger has been exposed he must not be left alone."

"He ain't alone," declared the sheriff. "Tom phoned me that he had an assistant."

"Swenson, I suppose," said Redfield, who entered at this moment. "Swenson is his assistant."

Ranger

"I didn't see him myself," Gregg continued, "but I understood the deputy to say that he was an old man."

"Swenson is a young man," corrected Redfield.

The sheriff insisted. "Tom said it was an old man—a stranger to him—tall, smooth shaven, not very strong, he said—peared to be a cook. He had helped nurse the dago, so Tom said."

"That's very curious," mused Redfield. "There isn't an old man in the service of this forest. There's a mistake somewhere."

"Well," concluded Gregg, "that's what he said. I thought at first it might be that old hobo Edwards, but this fellow being in uniform and smooth shaven"—His face changed; his voice deepened. "Say, I believe it was Edwards, and, furthermore, Edwards is the convict that Texas marshal was after the other day, and this man Cavanagh—your prize ranger—is harboring him."

"What nonsense!" exclaimed Redfield.

The sheriff banged his hand upon the table. "That's the whole mystery. I see it all now. He's up there concealing this man. He's given out this smallpox scare just to keep the officers away from him. Now you've got it!"

The thunder in his voice drew toward him all those who remained in the dining room, and Lee found herself rigid about by a dozen excited men, but she did not flinch. She was too deeply concerned over Cavanagh's fate to be afraid, and, besides, Redfield and the forester were beside her.

The supervisor was staggered by Gregg's accusation and by certain circumstantial facts in his own possession, but he defended Cavanagh bravely. "You're crazy," he replied. "Why should Ross do such a foolish thing? What is his motive? What interest would he have in this man Edwards, whom you call a tramp? He can't be a relative and certainly not a friend of Cavanagh's, for you say he is a convict. Come, now, your hatred of Cavanagh has gone too far."

Gregg was somewhat cooled by this dash of reason, but replied: "I don't know what relation he is, but these are facts. He's concealing an escaped convict, and he knows it."

Dalton put in a quiet word. "What is the use of shouting a judgment against a man like Cavanagh before you know the facts? He's one of the best and ablest rangers on this forest. I don't know why he has resigned, but I'm sure—"

"Has he resigned?" asked Gregg eagerly.

"He has."

"A good job for him. I was about to circulate a petition to have him removed."

"If all the stockmen in the valley had signed a petition against him it wouldn't have done any good," replied Dalton. "We know a good man when we see him. I'm here to offer him promotion, not to punish him."

Lee, looking about at the faces of these men and seeing disappointment in their faces, lost the keen sting of her own humiliation. "In the midst of such a fight as this how can he give time or thought to me?" Painful as the admission was, she was forced to admit that she was a very humble factor in a very large campaign. "But suppose he fails?" Her face grew white and set and her lips bitter. "That would be the final tragic touch," she thought. "To have him come down of a plague from nursing one of Sam Gregg's sheep herders." Aloud she said: "His resignation comes just in time, doesn't it? He can now be sick without loss to the service."

Dalton answered her. "The supervisor has not accepted his resignation. On the contrary, I shall offer him a higher position. His career as a forester is only beginning. He would be foolish to give up the work now, when the avenues of promotion are just opening. I can offer him very soon the supervision of a forest."

As they talked Lee felt herself sinking the while her lover rose. It was all true. The forester was right. Ross was capable of any work they might demand of him. He was too skilled, too intelligent, too manly, to remain in the forest, heroic as its duties seemed.

Upon this discussion Lize, hobbling painfully, appeared. With a cry of surprise Lee rose to meet her.

"Mother, you must not do this!"

She waved her away. "I'm all right," she said, "barring the big marbles in my slippers." Then she turned to Dalton. "Now, what's it all about? Is it true that Ross is down?"

"No. So far as we know, he is well."

"Well, I'm going to find out. I don't intend to set here and have him up there without a cook or a nurse."

At this moment a tall, fair young fellow, dressed in a ranger's uniform, entered the room and made his way directly to the spot where Lee, her mother and Redfield were standing.

"Mr. Supervisor, Cavanagh has sent me to tell you that he needs a doctor. He's got a sick man up at the station, and he's afraid it's a case of smallpox."

He turned to Lee. "He told me to tell you that he would have written, only he was afraid to even send a letter out."

"What does he need?" asked Redfield.

"He needs medicine and food, a doctor, and he ought to have a nurse."

"That's my job," said Lize.

"Nonsense!" said Redfield. "You're not fit to ride a mile. I won't hear of your going."

"You wait and see. I'm going, and you can't stop me."

"Who is the man with him?" asked the forester.

"I don't know—an old herder, he said. He said he could take care of him all right for the present, but that if he were taken down himself—"

Lee's mounting emotion broke from her in a little cry. "Oh, Mr. Redfield, please let me go too! I want to help! I must help!"

Redfield said: "The telephone to Sulphur City and ask Brooks to get a nurse and come down as soon as possible. Meanwhile I'll go out to see what the conditions are."

"I'm going, too, I tell you," announced Lize. "I've had the cursed disease, and I'm not afraid of it. We had three sieges of it in my family. You get me up there, and I'll do the rest."

"But you are ill."

"I was, but I'm not now." Her voice was firmer than it had been for days. "All I needed was something to do. Ross Cavanagh has been like a son to me for two years. He's the one man in this country I'd turn my hand over for—barring yourself, Reddy—and it's my job to see him through this pinch."

In spite of all opposition she had her way. Returning to her room to get such clothing as she needed for her stay in the hills, she waited for Redfield to send a carriage to her. "I can't ride a horse no more," she sorrowfully admitted.

Lee's secret was no secret to any one there. Her wide eyes and heaving breast testified to the profound stir in her heart. She was in an anguish of fear lest Ross should already be in the grip of his loathsome enemy. That it had come to him by way of a brave and noble act made the situation only the more tragic.

Tom Fuller and Dick Rustin, of Mexico, were through this section Sunday.

Harvesting oats and hay is the order of the day in this vicinity.

Friday June 30th, the children of Mrs. Fannie Travis, of the Emmaus community, assembled at the home of their mother and enjoyed a pleasant day together.

There are eight children and they were all there; all of her grandchildren living, were there except two. In the afternoon Miss Miriam furnished us with some fine music on the organ after which the children returned their homes except Mrs. T. J. Wring and children. The children enjoyed this day with their dear mother perhaps it may be the last one that they will ever be permitted to enjoy together in this life, for as the poet has said, "We only meet to part again in this life; after death, thy joys shall be lasting as eternity. Though cast down we are not forsaken though afflicted not alone, thou didst give and thou hast taken. Blessed Lord thy will be done."

Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity of both body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs.

It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the basic trouble, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances. It is first of all necessary to keep the bowels open and then to tone the digestive muscles so as to get them to again do their work naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful, and something mild will do the work just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and pills and waters of various kinds, and have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, then try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative tonic that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and yet is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist, who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before spending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will gladly send you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy is rapidly displacing all other forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowel trouble, and families like Mr. O. F. Wisner's of Syracuse, Ill., and Mrs. Carrie Miller's of 325 N. Notre Dame street, South Bend, Ind., are now never without it in the house. They have tested it and know its grand value to every member of the family.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R. 500 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

TOBACCO TIDINGS.

BY R. F. WHEELER.

Look After Your Interests

Saturday, July 22, is Association election day. To the tobacco growers of this district it is the most important election of the year.

You will not be too busy to attend the election of state officers next fall; yet to you, as an individual, that election does not mean as much as the annual election of county committeemen of the Stemming District Tobacco Association.

We are not writing this merely to occupy space. Every man who has pooled his tobacco in Association should attend this election and see to it that only men of mature judgment, honest, discreet and, above all, true, loyal Association men are elected. It would be inexcusable in us if after past experiences, we should elect any one on the county board who would let a personal ambition prevent him performing a public duty, or cause him to be untrue to a public trust.

Most men have at least some sense of honor and integrity, but unfortunately, there seems to be some exceptions to the rule.

But few men will espouse a cause, and while pretending to advocate that cause betray it. Yet Judas Iscariot did.

But few men, while acting as an officer in the army of their country, will betray the confidence placed in them, by their countrymen and act the traitor. But Benedict Arnold did.

But few men would seek to be elected to an office in an organization, and use the influence and prestige thus gained, to try to disrupt the organization that had honored them, but there are a few men who will do this.

So we say that in the light of past experiences, if we should this year elect a man who will not remain true to the trust, placed in him, our action, in the matter will be inexcusable.

The Louisville Times has this to say: Ollie James will be the next Senator from Kentucky, the withdrawal of Senator Paynter leaving Mr. James a clear field in the primary and a certainty of a Democratic majority in both branches of the General Assembly, insuring his election. Though still a young man, he already occupies a recognized place as a factor in national politics. Whatever of success has come to him has been won through his own merit. A large measure of opportunity is before him, both by reason of his ability and experience and because of the virtual certainty that he will be one of the most thoroughly equipped men in the upper house of an Administration, Democratic in both its executive and legislative branches. Always a strict party man, Mr. James' loyalty to his convictions and to his State, his personal integrity and his capacity for work have been abundantly proved. Possessed of these qualities and soon to be graduated from the best of all training schools for senatorial service, the look ahead for Kentucky's next Senator, is one of large promise both to himself and to the State he is to represent.

Economy of Good Roads.

The economic loss due to bad roads is beyond computation and the indifference of the general public toward any projected improvement of our highways is not easily understood. Each owner of property must be held accountable for the condition of the highways of this locality.

Of our public works the condition of none reflects our business status more accurately than the condition of our highways. To make good roads so that products of the farm are easily and quickly brought to market is to increase the value of every farm along those roads and is practically to increase the farmers' facilities and lessen their expenses; at the same time making this town a bigger and better market for farm produce.

If every citizen could see in actual money the financial return on his investment in good roads he would contribute his share with alacrity. The actual returns on any investment in improving the roads to market are just as direct and even more prompt than are those from farm drainage and improved farming methods.

In these days of automobilizing good roads open up a much wider range of vision for the rural inhabitants and the same conditions that enable our residents to visit other sections induce residents of other communities to visit this locality. This intercommunication results in a kind of advertising that inevitably increases the value of property by bringing in desirable purchasers. In fact, the results accruing from the building of good roads comprise an endless chain of benefits to the community that builds the roads.

PRINCETON'S VERSION

"MARION WHIPPED US

Princeton "Home Boys" Aggregation Couldn't Cope With The Marion Hirelings.

Sam Koltinsky's team mustered into line Tuesday morning early, with good intentions for a fourth of July celebration, and boarded the 7 o'clock train for Marion. They were accompanied by a number of loyal fans, eager to see the Crittenden Co., nine larruped as of old.

The fact that Tuesday was the record day for heat meant something; the unpracticed Princeton boys bared their dainty white arms and delicate throats to a July sun and waded into a mid-season contest against a team of men in mid-season form. Net results: Marion 5 tallies, Princeton 1. The Marion battery was not Marion's, it was Evansville's. One Mr. Sullivan, said to have been formerly a Central League idol, performed on the mound for Marion, notwithstanding the second ball he pitched got smashed squarely on the nose and floated clean out of the park over a distant warehouse while Mark Goldnamer trotted in Princeton's only run. In Marion's half of the same inning the score was tied and in the second inning, the Marion lads piled up four more while the one-time reliable Princeton Grays were falling over themselves in effort to field measly pop-ups and easy grounders. Joe Crayne for Princeton pitched winning ball, with ordinary support he could have won his game. With the exception of the right fielder, Fay, of Hopkinsville, Princeton's team was home-made.

The line up was: R. Stevens C.; Joe Crayn P.; Greer 1B.; H. Moore 2B.; K. Miller 3B.; Goldnamer S. S.; G. Stevens LF.; R. Davidson CF.; Fay RF. The game was called at the end of the seventh to allow Princeton to catch train.

Among the rooters were: J. W. Jewell, Dr. R. W. Ogilvie, F. K. Wylie, Butch Koltinsky, Claude Tapp, H. W. Blades, Raleigh Young, John McGeehe, Clein Marquess, Misses Katie May Landrum and Virginia Mayes, of Princeton. H. C. Rice, Guy and Howard Rice, R. I. Rice and wife, Isabel Howerton, John Rice and J. T. Moore, of Fredonia. Dr. W. B. Moore and wife, Misses Mary D. and Ida Clay Turley, of Crider. The Crider and Fredonia people lined up in their autos, and of course, were for Princeton, win or lose." —Caldwell County News.

Hot dry weather continues 100 degrees in the shade. Corn crops suffering; gardens a failure; and still but very little prospect of rain.

There is a great deal of sickness in our neighborhood.

Mrs. Walter Wigginton who was carried to Dr. Bailey's sanitarium at Fredonia, and was operated on by Drs. Bailey and Spickard, of Fredonia; and Dr. Fox, of Crayne, for appendicitis, was able in ten days to return to her home, but other complications coming up, has left her in a critical condition. Some talk of another operation necessary.

Richard Thompson's 5 months old baby has been dangerously ill with cholera infantum, but at this writing is much better and under the treatment of Dr. Spickard. We have hopes of her recovery.

The wheat and oat crops are all threshed. The wheat is good quality and the yield very satisfactory. Oat crop was all heads from the ground up, but not very high up. Tobacco crop is having a hard struggle to live, much less grow. Pastures would burn where there is enough left to stick a match to.

Now, we think that those boys that got the Record-Press out two weeks ago, a half a day a head of time; and last week a day and a half, ahead of time, and if they continue at that rate we will soon be reading the Record-Press at least a week before its regular time to come out. We say boys push her out for we are always glad to get it. This is a fast age any way.

In spite of the hot weather, and so much sickness, our Sunday School was well attended Sunday.

Bro. Wycoff, of Illinois, filled Bro. Oakley's pulpit at Fredonia Sunday and preached an old fashion Holy Ghost sermon. He believes we will have to return to the old paths, time, place and religion, but doesn't believe in the holding up finger salvation, but does believe we must be born again.

Now, wishing the Editor, his noble paper and his good boys much success, I will ring off.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Venner left Wednesday for Corydon Ind to visit at their old home for a week after which they will go to New York and the seashore, to be absent until in August on a well earned rest.

GOSSIPING ABOUT GIRLS.

A few days ago a father in Illinois shot and killed a young man of the community for alleged remarks made about his daughter. One or two days later a Missouri father shot a young man for the same reason. Probably both will plead the unwritten law, and judging from the circumstances as published in the daily press, juries will free them both. It is hard to say whether these man-slaughters are justified or not. Gossip by evil-minded young fools about one's daughter is undoubtedly a great provocation. No matter whether the stories told are true or not—and generally they are not—a father would be a mighty poor parent if his blood did not boil when these things reached his ears.

The fact remains that young men, as a rule, are too careless in their remarks about young women. It is usually the idle youth who stands on the street corner and fires the imagination of his acquaintances with his opinion regarding the chastity of this and that girl which happens to pass along, growing worse and worse as the details are told.

Never make slurring remarks about a young woman, no matter what you have heard; never repeat the evil remarks that have come from the lips of others. It is hard for a young woman to keep her reputation at the best, as every act is apt to be mis-constructed by wicked-minded men. Every shred of gossip is bound to find lodgment in the mind of someone.

If you have a sister, think how quickly you would revenge an insulting remark about her. Yet your sister is no better than anyone else's virtuous sister.

Once a young man with dissolute inclinations, but of an excellent family, loafed on the street corner, and as a young woman passed by made a remark that would have caused her ears to burn with shame and anger.

"What if some one made such a remark about your sister?" the young man was asked. In a moment he was boiling with rage and was on the verge of striking his questioner a blow.

"Why, that girl," he said, referring to the subject of his brutal remark, "is only a working girl."

There is another failing that young men have. Some very foolish persons, whose sisters are not compelled to earn their own living, imagine that moral degradation is the natural companion of a girl's employment. This is a very foolish view of life. Some of the most glorious examples of womanhood, wifehood and motherhood have come from the class of girls who were compelled to earn their own livelihood.—Watchman Advocate.

Electric Bitters

Succeed when everything else fails. In nervous prostration and female weaknesses they are the supreme remedy, as thousands have testified. FOR KIDNEY, LIVER AND STOMACH TROUBLE it is the best medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter.

CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Made Safe by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

LETTER FROM LAWTON, OKLA.

Lawton, Okla., June 17, 1911.
—Mr. Jenkins—Dear Sir: As I have been a reader of the Press since the first year of its existence it seems too much like home folks now to not have it in our Oklahoma home, as I look forward to Saturday for my home news. Weather is dry and warm, but the wind blows all the time. Corn, cotton and maize are looking fine. Not much wheat or oats was threshed.

I have seen some of this country—have traveled about five thousand miles with my husband in the buggy. Don't know when my time expires but don't want to miss a copy. Find enclosed money order for one year.

Wishing you success, I am as ever a friend and well-wisher,

Mrs. A. J. Crim,

TIME PASSES BY.

A full week passed away, and the benedict Turk, With a broad, happy smile, went right on with his work; From morning till ev'ning, with scarcely a stop, He carried up bricks to the Man-At-The-Top. And his happy young wife, the fair-faced Imogene— She detested the sight of a writing machine— Passed the time away sweetly with household affairs— The making of pies and the dusting of chairs. "Turk's a blam'd lucky scamp," said the bald-headed boss, As he figured over his profit and loss, And his words were address'd to the Hard-Pounding Green, As he punch'd, as for life, on his writing machine. "That's a fact," answered Green; "he's more lucky than I; But I'll get it all back on you, sir, by and by! And to tell you the truth, sir, to lose Imogene Hurt me worse, a blam'd sight, than to lose that machine!" "I did all that I could for you, Green," said the boss; "And besides, did not I, too, feel deeply the loss? Tho' you punch fairly well on a writing machine, You are blank, I must say, as an ornament, Green! "Besides, Green—ha! ha! ha!" laughed the Bald-Headed Man, "If you want to succeed, you must know how to plan! 'Twas in not knowing this, sir, you lost Imogene, And lost also—ha! ha!—that new writing machine!" "Five o'clock!" cried the Man-At-The-Top. "No more work! Down, trowel and hod! Not another brick, Turk!" And so off went Joe briskly, pass'd by Pounder Green, And was soon near his home and his sweet Imogene. And his wife, who was waiting for Joe to arrive— For she knew he would lay down his hod just at five— Had the pies on the table—arrang'd just for two— And the two fell to eating, like hungry folk do! "This pie is just splendid!" said Joe. "Imogene, I'm so glad it was I—not that long-hungry Green! Most pies are such horrid, non-eatable stuff; But this pie—pass it round!—I just can't get enough!" When supper was over, "Joe, dear," said his wife, "Will you 'carry the hod' all the days of your life? Oh, Joe! What if some day a stray brick should drop Square down on your head from the Man-At-The-Top? 'It would kill you—(boo-hoo!) crush (boo-hoo!) out your life! Then what would become of your poor (boo-hoo!) wife? I'd be forced (boo-hoo!) back to the writing machine, Or else marry that great, gangling, gawky gump, Green! "Ah that's kind, Joe, to so wipe away my poor tears; And now, just for once, won't you 'lend me your ears'? For I lent you mine once, being dictated to— May not I, in return, Joe, now dictate to you?" (TO BE CONTINUED)

Narrow Escape When.

Wagon Goes Over Cliff.

Horse Cave, Ky., July 12. —About 20 young people of this place had a narrow escape from instant death while picnicing near Hick's Spring on Green river yesterday. They had driven to the Spring in a big wagon and after unhitching the team, they were sitting in the wagon preparing lunch. Some of the men playfully started to back the wagon, which was near a 50-foot-embankment, overlooking the river.

They pushed it too hard and before they could stop it had gone over the cliff. All of those in it, however, had succeeded in jumping out before it went over.

BUSINESS HONESTY.

Business men should not be Christians only when they say their prayers, but all the time. The confidence of the people is necessary for the real success of any business, and the surest way to gain this confidence is to deal honestly, tell the absolute truth, hide nothing and convince the people that they are getting a square deal. Justice is a virtue which prompts us to pay what we owe to our neighbor. It is the foundation stone of social order and of business intercourse, for if we did not believe that men had a sense of justice we would have no confidence in their integrity, and without this confidence commercial life would be paralyzed.—Cardinal Gibbons.

Holiday Game

Marion 5 Princeton 1

Marion won the Fourth of July game, due largely to the excellent work of Sullivan in the box; his pitching, together with a few timely hits and some costly errors on the part of Princeton, resulted in an easy victory for Marion. Only once did the game seem to be going the wrong way, and that was when Mark Goldnamer, first up in the first inning, was lucky enough to meet one of Sullivan's speedy shoots squarely and put the ball far over the warehouse into the old cemetery for a home run. Princeton's rejoicing over this was short lived, however, as Sullivan showed his class by fanning the next three men, and thereafter Princeton never had a chance.

Marion tied up the score in the first by clean batting; Sullivan landed on one for two bases, Rochester sacrificed him to third with a neat bunt, and Cannan placed a pretty hit into right field for the tying score. In the second Marion made four runs on two hits and four errors; Lamb landed on one which went to left field, and was good for two bases, but Guy Stevens lost it in trying to make the throw in, Lamb coming on around. Christian was safe on Miller's fumble. Then Sullivan found a curve to his liking, and with a mighty swat sent the ball over the ditch for a home run. Marion's last score was made when Rochester, next up, made first on Greer's error, stole second; then third, and came home when Roy Stevens threw the ball over third base in trying to catch him there. After that there was nothing doing for either side. Marion had one on second and third in the sixth inning with one out, but the next two men fanned. In the seventh Sullivan led off with another two-bagger, but was caught trying to steal third. Princeton never had a chance after Goldnamer's homer, none of their players after that reaching third. Sullivan had speed, curves and control, and none of the heavy hitters could touch him. Princeton's only other hit was a drive to right by Moore in the second. Sullivan fanned fourteen, an average of two to the inning, and had all Princeton's best batters looking like town lot batters before Mathewson. Dugger caught a nice game for Marion, particularly when it is remembered that he is a pitcher. Marion's infield and outfield had very few chances, but showed up stronger than Princeton. Guess did good work at third, and Givens Dixon handled the only outfield chance in fine style. Crain, pitcher for Princeton, works for Paducah in the Kitty League, but showed nothing of any consequence except control.

Will you please see too, that we have a good wide awake up-to-date teacher? Our pupils have had a disease called "sparking" and we want a teacher, who has an unfailing remedy for it, and who is not too timid to apply the remedy.

NEW SALEM.

Everyone complaining.

Crops are practically ruined unless rain falls in the next week. The corn crop will not make 10 per cent of a crop. Gardens burned up. Pastures dried up, and to sum the whole matter up in a nut shell, the people are facing one of the worst droughts, in many years.

Men who have been over the county tell us that not over 50 per cent of a tobacco crop is out. July 10th, and 10 per cent of that set is worthless.

Mr. Rice, of Joy, is threshing wheat in this section this week.

Mrs. Dave Wolford, of Rosacaire, Ill., was a pleasant caller in this section last week.

What little fruit that was left from the frost in the spring, is drying up on the trees.

Mr. and Mrs. John Loftess spent Saturday and Sunday the guests of their daughter, Mrs. William Belt, near the Memphis mines.

We are glad to report Mrs. Hallie Baker improving after a serious spell of sickness.

We don't know about ever striking oil in this section, but as for gas, there is lots of it on top of the ground.

A poor man with a large family on a rented farm with his worldly affects mortgaged for the rent that goes about singing and seems happy, is the one that trusts in Him who has promised a seed time and a harvest.

From the noise made by some parties that passed up and down the Salem and Marion road Saturday night, we thought that some of that stuff that broke lose in Georgia, had broke lose in our section.

Right in your busiest season when you have the least time to spare you are most likely to take diarrhoea and lose several days' time, unless you have Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand and take a dose on the first appearance of the disease. For sale by All Dealers.

Corner Stone Services.

Dr. Mather was called to Sturgis on Wednesday of last week to lay the corner-stone of the New Methodist Church which is being built in that city. At 10.15 a. m., Dr. Mather preached a sermon in the old Church building, where a large congregation had assembled, using as his text that part of the Apostles' Creed which reads: "I believe in the Holy Catholic Church, the Communion of Saints". The sermon was a timely presentation of the universal mission of the Church upon earth, and a strong call to men everywhere to recognize its unspeakable value to civilization. Immediately proceeding the laying of the Corner-Stone Dr. Mather delivered an address on "Character-Building", which many of those who have heard it desire to possess it in a permanent form. Through the courtesy of one of our leading citizens we have been able to secure the Doctor's manuscript, and will have pleasure in giving it to our readers in next week's issue of the Press.

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Lula Walden, of Gramlin, S. C., followed this advice. Read her letter: "I was so weak when I first began to take Cardui, that it tired me to walk just a little. Now, I can do all the general housework, for a family of 9." Try Cardui for your troubles. It may be the very remedy you need.
