A Dollar That Can't Be Spent
By HERBERT KAPMAN

No dollar spent is a dollar that can't be spent. It is not a dollar that the owner has lost. It is a dollar that has been spent for the public good. Advertising and job security are the public good. Advertising and job security are the public good.

Pensions and insurance policies that make people feel secure are the public good. When a man spends for the public good, he is making himself feel more secure. He is making society more secure. He is making the entire economic structure of the world more secure.

Those of Middle Age Especially

When you have had no remedy for the ills that age brings, and when you have found that no one has a cure, you may get the most out of life by working for those who are in need. The labor of the hands does not make for the public good. The labor of the hands does not make for the public good.

From Mrs. Horning, Buffalo, N.Y.

Dear Mr. Kapman, I am writing to you just to let you know how much your help has been. I have had no remedy for the ills that age brings, and when you have found that no one has a cure, you may get the most out of life by working for those who are in need. The labor of the hands does not make for the public good. The labor of the hands does not make for the public good.
