FARMERS' CLUBS.

Farmers Are Becoming Interested In One Of The County's Greatest Movements.

Levias is a small place about six miles from Marion, where Charley LaRue holds forth selling goods. The church is called Union and also the precinct, and however small it is that one word 'union' is very applicable to those people there. They believe in union, for you know in union there is strength, and they are not only believers but doers. Last week at the meeting held there, 48 enrolled, with a president and secretary, and the whole shooting match is up and doing.

Right here, before we go any further let us get every body straight on this proposition. These clubs being organized over the county have no connection whatever with the Society of Equity or the Farmers' Union or the Tobacco Growers Association, or any of the organizations heretofore organized for the purpose of buying goods, or pooling tobacco or any of the propositions heretofore thrashed out in the county. These clubs being organized are Uncle Sam's clubs and are for the purpose and object of getting the farmers of Crittenden county in close touch with that part of Uncle Sam's business known as the Department of Agriculture located at Washington City.

But you say why organize? For the simple reason that in this way the greatest good can be accomplished. In this way the County Demonstrator can touch the greatest number. This has been proven to be the best method yet devised in other counties in this State and in other States. This is not a new thing nor a new fad or fancy, this is business and strikes at the vitals of all business in these United States of ours. Just because it is a new thing with us does not prove it to be a new thing everywhere. We continually run across things that we never heard of before and when we investigate we find they are as old as the hills.

Now let us lay aside every prejudice that doth so easily beset us and investigate.

As we proceeded to remark a space or so back, 48 were enrolled and they elected W. L. Taylor President and Charley LaRue Secretary.

The reason for these offices is this: some one has to be at the head of everything. Our County Demonstrator has his hands full and more. Furthermore, your Uncle Samuel says: when one of his Demonstrators takes active charge of—say for instance a fertilizer pool or in buying cream separators; I have no further use for you to avoid the very appearance of evil and that no farmer can criticize the financial acts of his agents, he forbids them to have anything to do with such things, therefore these clubs need secretaries. These clubs are social clubs for the benefit of all who care to be benefited and there are no fees and no charges of any kind. What more could you ask?

Another proposition we will put to you. If you have subscribed and now think there is nothing to it, we will cancel your subscription. If you have not subscribed why kick? You have nothing to lose and all to gain. Try it out and if there is nothing in it for you very well—no harm done.

Last week clubs were organized at two other points: Copperas Spring and at Midway, attendance small.

Another word in behalf of Mr. Bird. Remember there are only 24 hours in a day. He will get to you as soon as he can. There are enough calls right now for two men. Be patient.

Our old farms are crying for help, they are like a worn out horse, willing to feed us and our stock, but not able. We have worked them these long years thinking little that some day they would wear out, now we have worn them out, don't lay the trouble to our land, but its owners. You say how are we to live? We depend on our farm for that, yes, and your farm depends on its owner for a living too. Just try to find out how to farm and live and enrich our soil by that farming. We can do it. If you don't know how, come to the Farmers' Clubs. If you do know how come to the Farmers' Clubs, and tell others how.

Don't forget Mr. J. H. Cosmody will be here Thursday at Dr. Nunn's orchard also Dr. Wolners, to demonstrate fruit growing, Saturday afternoon at Court House 1 p. m.

As Mr. Hardin has a recommendation the Co., over as a teacher we wish to thank you for your interest in our school work, which you have shown through the columns of your valuable paper.

J. B. McNEELY, Teacher.

On January 20th, Mr. E. E. Phillips closed one of the most successful schools ever taught at Walnut Grove school house. The pupils made more rapid progress during Mr. Phillips' school than they were ever known to make before. When Mr. Phillips came he found our school in a dying condition, children not caring whether they learned or not, but after a few weeks of school they did learn that when Mr. Phillips turned around and said: "Now suppose we be a little quieter" it was sure time to be quiet, and after awhile they began to take interest, everyone tried to do just a little more than the other until Mr. Phillips could find hardly anything to do himself.

The last day of school a number of visitor were present, including the parents of most of the children. We had contests in spelling and rapid arithmetic work which showed the visitors more than anyone could have told them. Then the children recited recitations and dialogues which seemed to be greatly enjoyed. Several talks were made by the patrons and afterwards Mr. Phillips passed around a nice treat to everyone.

This closed the Walnut Grove school for 1914 and everyone went home feeling happy because of the marked progress and yet sad to think school had closed and Mr. Phillips would move from our district. He leaves here with everyone wishing him success where ever he may go.—One of his pupils.

The Crittenden Record-Press, Marion, Kentucky.

Gentlemen: I feel greatly gratified at the impression my announcement has made on the public, as shown by the great number of hearty congratulations and voluntary pledging of support that are daily coming in from all sections. Many of these I find are coming through the influence of the announcement given in your individual and most excellent paper.

I feel that the success I have made in life is due more to "printers ink" than any other factor, and I am consequently a strong believer in the power of the press and the influence for good it wields in our country, and my heartiest sympathy has always been, and shall be, with the news-paper fraternity, and all matters pertaining to its welfare.

Any consideration or support you may be able to give my candidacy will be highly appreciated.

Yours truly,
H. H. Cherry.

Bob Burdette on War and Women

I once heard a man say—he had never been a soldier—"If a woman is given the ballot she should be compelled to shoulder a musket and go to war like men."

Such a foolish, cowardly, brutal thing to say! Sometimes the government has to conscript men to make them fight for their country. When has woman ever shrank from going to war? "She risked her life when the soldier was born." She wound her arms around him through all the years of his helplessness. Night after night, when foul disease fought for the soldier's tender life, she robbed her aching eyes of sleep, a faithful sentinel over his cradle. She nourished him on her own life, a fountain drawn from her mother-breasts. She stood guard over him, keeping all the house quiet when he would sleep in the noisy daytime. She stood on the firing line, battling with the foes of uncleanness, contagion, sudden heat and biting cold, protecting her little soldier in the clean sweet fortress of his home. She taught him his first cooing words that some day he might have a mighty voice and brave words of defiance to shout against his country's foes. She taught him his first step—that some day he could keep step to the drumbeat and march with the men in a free swinging stride as they followed the flag. She trained him up to be a manly man, to hate a lie and despise a mean action, to be noble and chivalrous. She built a strong man out of her woman's soul.

And then one day, when the bugles shrilled and the drums beat, she kissed him and sent him forth at the wheels of the guns—her beautiful boy—to be food for the fire-breathing maw of the black-lipped cannon! Her boy! Heart of her heart! Life of her life! Love of her love!

The exultant news flashes over the wire. "Glorious victory," shout the papers in crimson head lines, "10,000 killed!"

And in the long list, there is only one name she can read. It stands out black as a pall upon the white paper—characters of night against the morning sunshine—the name she gave her first born boy.

And that is the end of it all. All the years of tender nursing; of patient training; of loving teaching; of sweet companionship, and of all the little walks and talks; the tender confidence of mother and son; the budding days; the blooming years—this is the harvest. This is war.

When was there a generation since boys were born that women did not go to war? Never a bayonet lunged into the breast of the soldier that had not already cooled its hot wrath in the heart of a mother. While the soldier has fought one battle the mother has wandered over scores of slaughter fields looking for his mangled body. He sings and plays the rough games of out-of-door men in camp for a month and then goes out to fight one skirmish. But every day and night of the 30, the mother has walked through 100 alarms that never were.

She has watched on the lonely picket post. She has paced the sentry beat before his tent. She has prayed beside him while he slept. The throbs of her heart have been the beads of the rosary.

GET SUGAR FROM SAWDUST

Chemically Prepared Material Found by Scientists to Be Valuable Food for Animals.

In the course of a paper read before the London Royal Society of Arts, A. Zimmerman described a process by which sugar might be manufactured from sawdust.

In its natural state, he pointed out, says London Tit-Bits, wood contains no sugar, but when subjected in closed retorts to digestion with a weak sulphurous acid solution under pressure of six to seven atmospheres a very remarkable transmutation takes place, as much as 25 per cent. of the material being converted into sugar. In this Mr. Zimmerman claims that we have a valuable feeding stuff for horses, cattle and sheep.

Draft horses in whose daily ration four pounds of "cacchulose-molasses" were substituted for four pounds of oats were kept under observation for seven months and were all found to have increased in weight, while a colt which was in so weak a condition that veterinary surgeons advised its destruction put on 260 pounds in six months and is now in excellent condition.

Then He Didn't Want Them. Dejectedly twirling his thumbs the clerk sat in the box office of the Frivillity theater. A depressing air of failure hung over the theater, and it looked as though the piece would have to be withdrawn very shortly.

Suddenly he perked up as a commotion in the box office was followed by their three daughters and two sons.

"Have you got seven seats in the middle of the second row for tonight?" asked paterfamilias.

The box office man made a pretense of examining the plan of seats.

"Yes, I find they are vacant, sir," said he, trying to repress his excitement. "Shall I book them for you, sir?"

"Er—no, I think not," said the man from the country. "If you've got those seats on your hands it seems to me the play can't be up to much! Good morning!"

Diagnosis by Electricity.

For the benefit of the nervous cases that come to the doctor, it has been asserted by Scripture that it is just as necessary to know how emotional they are as it is to know how high the temperature is in a case of fever. Moreover, in many cases it is necessary to find out what experiences in the past or present life of the patient produce emotions. For this purpose the patient sits at ease with hands on the electrodes, which may be so concealed in the arms of his chair that he is unaware that the most intimate processes of his soul are being registered as various words are spoken or various topics of conversation are discussed, the galvanometer showing when a sensitive subject has been touched.—Fred W. Eastman, in Harper's Magazine.

Keep Your Bees Dry In Winter.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside a bee expert says that bees have to be protected through the winter not so much from dampness. Good dry earth does not hurt bees. The principal thing to guard against is the getting of water or snow into the entrance of the hive and the freezing of this water, thereby cutting off the air and suffocating the bees.

Beauty in City Life.

William Morris said: "Beauty is, I conceive, no mere accident of human life which people can take or leave as of life. If we are to live as nature meant us to, that is, unless we are content to be less than men."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Longing For The Country.

I am longing for the country where they still eat mush and milk, And where the socks have not yet changed from wool to lustrous silk; Where the good wife still wears calico and 'bout styles never frets, Where girls still smell of wood smoke, not of tale and cigarettes. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

Think of "longing" for the country where the livest thing's the flea, And one goes to bed at sundown and gets up at half past three; Where of eggs and milk and butter you never get enough— They're kept to sell in town; this "longing" is a bluff. —New Era.

How to Write Advertising Copy

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Author of "Do Something! Be Something!"

A SKILLED layer of mosaic works with small fragments of stone—they fit into more places than the larger chunks. The skilled advertiser works with small words—they fit into more minds than big phrases.

The simpler the language the greater certainty that it will be understood by the least intelligent reader.

The construction engineer plans his roadbed where there is a minimum of grade—he works along the lines of least resistance.

The advertisement which runs into mountainous style is badly surveyed—all minds are not built for high grade thinking.

Advertising must be simple. When it is tricked out with the jewelry and silks of literary expression, it looks as much out of place as a ball dress at the breakfast table!

The buying public is only interested in facts. People read advertisements to find out what you have to sell.

The advertiser who can fire the most facts in the shortest time gets the most returns. Blank cartridges make noise but they do not hit—blank talk, however clever, is only wasted space.

You force your salesmen to keep to solid facts—you don't allow them to sell mush with quotations from Omar or trousers with excerpts from Marie Corelli. You must not tolerate in your printed selling talk anything that you are not willing to countenance in personal salesmanship.

Cut out clever phrases if they are inserted to the sacrifice of clear explanations—write copy as you talk. Only be more brief. Publicity is costlier than conversation—ranging in price downward from $10 a line; talk is not cheap, but the most expensive commodity in the world.

Sketch in your ad to the stenographer. Then you will be so busy "saying it" that you will not have time to bother about the gewgaws of writing. Afterwards take the typewritten manuscript and cut out every word and every line that can be erased without omitting an important detail. What remains in the end is all that really counted in the beginning.

Cultivate brevity and simplicity. "Savon Français" may look smarter, but more people will understand "French Soap." Sir Isaac Newton's explanation of gravitation covers six pages but the school-boy's terse and homely "What goes up must come down" clinches the whole thing in six words.

Indefinite talk wastes space. It is not 100% productive. The copy that omits prices sacrifices half its pulling power—it has a tendency to bring lookers instead of buyers. It often creates false impressions. Some people are bound to conceive the idea that the goods are higher priced than in reality—others, by the same token, are just as likely to infer that the prices are lower and go away thinking that you have exaggerated your statements.

The reader must be searched out by the copy. Big space is cheapest because it doesn't waste a single eye. Publicity must be on the offensive. There are far too many advertisers who keep their lights on top of their bushel—the average citizen hasn't time to overturn your bushel.

Small space is expensive. Like a one-flake snowstorm, there is not enough of it to lay.

Space is a comparative matter after all. It is not a case of how much is used but how it is used. The passengers on the limited express may realize that Jones has tacked a twelve-inch shingle on every post and fence for a stretch of five miles, but they are going too fast to make out what the shingles say, yet the two-foot letters of Brown's big bulletin board on top of the hill leap at them before they have a chance to dodge it. And at that it doesn't cost nearly so much as the sum total of Jones' dinky display.

Just so advertisements attractively displayed every day or every week for a year in one newspaper will find the eye of all readers, no matter how rapidly they may be "going" through the advertising pages, and produce more results than a dozen piking pieces of copy scattered through half a dozen papers.

Hens With A Laying Average Of 144 Eggs Per Year

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside appears an interesting account of the American egg-laying contests. In the following extract appears a statement of some of the results:

"The unusually severe winter in Connecticut with frequent periods when the mercury was far below zero gave the contesting hens a serious setback in their winter production. Many excellent records were made, but the aggregate of eggs laid was considerably less than otherwise would have been the case. The average production for 820 hens (10 hens to the pen) was 144 eggs."

VAPOR TREATMENT

LINCOLN, MAN OF HUMANITY IN WAR TIME

By J. A. EDGERTON.
Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.

IT is one of the anomalies of history that the thing which was considered during Abraham Lincoln's administration his chief source of weakness has become his greatest strength. His cabinet and generals complained bitterly of his numerous pardons. To them his inability to refuse requests was the one flaw in his character. To us it seems the brightest jewel in his crown.

The world will not soon forget his service in preserving the Union and liberating a race, but even if it should it could never forget his sentiment. "With malice toward none, with charity for all." Men never yet have measured the conquering power of love. There is nothing so strong as meekness, nothing so enduring as mercy.

Inasmuch as Lincoln embodied these principles, they will render his memory strong and enduring. The world will consider him mightier for having saved life than were all those who destroyed it; that his kindness was more potent than his cannon and that, while his armies conquered the south and freed the slave, his humanity will be potent in conquering the race and liberating all nations. Sympathy wins men unaware, clemency is mightier than power and bail, and the victories gained by forgiveness are permanent.

Lincoln was an elemental being. There were no shams or artificialities about him. He was what he appeared to be, even as the oak or rock is what it appears to be. His first characteristics were love of truth. He was plain because plainness does not deceive. Having nothing to conceal, he was unaffected. He was willing to honor the handiwork of God by letting himself shine forth as God made him. He was unpretentious, for pretense would have dimmed hisuster. He did not accept mere authority, but dug to the original sources of knowledge for himself. He thought much and read little, but what he did read was of the best and was thoroughly digested. He was so utterly honest that he had to be honest, for dishonesty is the most illogical thing in the universe. He was weak in a wrong position, but no man was stronger in the right. He made little profession of religion, but lived it. His second quality was love of man. He could not resist an appeal to his compassion. But he could be immovable when a question of principle was involved. Having made up his mind that a thing was right, no power on earth could budge him. Where no moral issue was at stake no man was more pliable. His heart was tender and he was easily moved to laughter or to tears. His sense of justice was strong, but his charity was stronger yet. Loyal to his friends, forgiving to his enemies, mighty in his wrath but mightier still in his reticence and forbearance Abraham Lincoln was the best exponent of the teachings of the Nazarene that has appeared in our times.

In December, 1863, a lady called on President Lincoln in behalf of a Captain Ross, grandson of one whom she termed the "greatest" of American emancipators, placing emphasis on the word "greatest." It appears that the grandfather, Captain Isaac Ross, freed all his own slaves and sent them to Liberia at great expense to himself. All this the lady recounted, drawing attention to the fact that Mr. Lincoln was only freeing other people's slaves.

So far from being offended at the woman's invidious comparisons, the great war president evinced the most lively interest in the story, granted the request and showed great good nature concerning the incident.

General Augur, when in command of the defenses at Washington, caught a spy whom he regarded as a peculiarly obnoxious specimen of his tribe. There was no question of guilt, and quick work was made of a court martial and conviction. The spy was to be hanged the next morning, and General Augur went to the war department to have the papers approved. It happened that Lincoln and Stanton were both absent from the city, and Charles A. Dana was left in charge. He promptly signed the papers, and Augur and he congratulated each other that this one spy would trouble the Union cause no more. The next morning Dana met Augur and asked about the execution. In a disgusted manner the general said there had been no execution.

Lincoln had reached home at mid night, and before he went to bed the accused man's friends got around the president and secured a pardon. General Augur could never refer to the incident without showing anger.

High Prices for Lincoln Relics.

A record price for a plate was brought at a sale in New York city, $4250 for a pale blue ironstone china plate with a little landscape in the center, a plate with no value as such, but sold as a Lincoln relic. The second record breaker was an old knife and fork, "steel, with bone handles" which started at $20 and went to $5250, the selling price.

The plate was used by Lincoln in his home in Springfield, Ill., in 1837, and the knife and fork at the same time. A tall tin pedestal lamp, with a double-whale oil burner and acorn shaped oil font, with a tall standard and panicle base, used by Lincoln in his law office at Springfield, brought $100, and an old chair of rather pretty shape with rush bottom brought the same price.

These four relics of the martyred president were taken by Dr. Norton with other relics from the Lincoln tower, which was exhibited in New York in 1893, in lieu of fees which were to have been paid him for lecturing at the exhibit.

Booth's Brother on Lincoln Shooting.

A letter to General Adam Sedgwick by Edwin Booth, brother of John Wilkes Booth, assassin of Abraham Lincoln, written only three days after the assassination, was published recently. In part it reads:

"For the first time since the damnable incident, new stimuli me that my brother Wilkes enacted this fearful, hellish deed am I able to write. You must feel deeply the agony I bear in being thus blasted in all my hopes by a villain who seemed so lovable and in whom all his family found a source of joy in his boyish and confident nature. . . . Abraham Lincoln was my president, for in pure admiration of his noble career and Christian principles I did what I never did before. I voted and for him."

Turk Force Routed And Russians Occupy Tabriz.

Paris.—The Turkish forces have suffered a fresh defeat in Persia, following those inflicted upon them north of Erzerum, according to dispatches received by the Matin.

The Turkish right wing which invaded Azerbaijan, the dispatches say, was routed by the Russians who have returned to Tabriz. The Turks are said to be retreating towards Maragna, fifty miles south of Tabriz.

London.—The Paris correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company telegraphs that he learns that the Russians have routed the Turkish troops in Persia and have entered Tabriz, capital of the province of Azerbaijan, which the Turks occupied early in January.

ECHOES FROM MADISONVILLE

Madisonville Happenings Always Interest Our Readers.

After reading of so many people in our town who have been cured by Doan's Kidney Pills, the question naturally arises: "Is this medicine equally successful in our neighboring towns?" The generous statement of this Madisonville resident leaves no room for doubt on this point.

Mrs. Eva Hobbs, N. Seminary St., Madisonville, Ky., says: "No one but those who have suffered from bearing-down pains across the small of the back can appreciate what a boon to kidney sufferers Doan's Kidney Pills are. I used everything that was recommended to me for kidney complaint, but the trouble remained. I tried plasters and different remedies, too, without success. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills. After taking a few doses, I felt their good effect and I continued until all symptoms of kidney disease were removed. My health is now greatly improved.

Price 50 cents at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hobbs had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. 2411

—Stanton.The breach in the Democratic majority in the Senate is not going to be healed by the calling of names—neither will the Administration's desire to have a ship purchase bill enacted at this session be brought nearer to realization thereby. The seven boling Democrats are accountable to their respective States and the final verdict as to their action must come from the people of those States.The thing not to lose sight of is that an increase in American shipping is imperatively needed.
If it is not to be brought about through Government ownership, why can it not be brought about by a repeal of our navigation laws which impose on the owner of an American vessel an annual penalty of 5 per cent. of the purchase cost of an average export cargo vessel for flying the American flag over it? If these laws are repealed, special privileges now enjoyed by organized labor will be abrogated. But the present is not the time to give undue consideration to special privilege.
Unemployed labor and the inability of American producers to get their goods to markets willing to pay three prices for them is the problem to be worked out.
Possibly the seven Democrats who are opposed to Government ownership might find no ground for opposition to a measure granting equal rights to all, special privileges to none. The possibility does not appear to have occurred to the administration or any of the majority leaders.—Louisville Times.Battle In Poland Blood-

IN MEMORIAM.

Sister Ruby Bigham Threlkeld, was born at the Bigham homestead near Chapel Hill Presbyterian church in Crittenden county, Ky., July 20th, 1887.The writer of this tribute to her memory was pastor of that church when she was born, and is still its pastor.All her life—except the last few months—was spent in that community.
I have therefore known her from her birth.She professed religion and united with the Chapel Hill church, Oct. 20th, 1905, and was a faithful member of that church until her death.Her pastor takes pleasure in bearing testimony to her consistent Christian life, and her devotion to her church and pastor, who was often a welcome guest in the home she presided over, with such sweet grace, and loving hospitality.She was married to Reed Threlkeld, Jan. 7th, 1914, in the presence of a large company of relatives and friends.
It seemed that there was before her a long and happy life with the man she loved and chose for a life companion.
But alas for human expectations.After a brief year and one day of happiness in her new life and home, death claimed her, and all the bright hopes and expectations of herself, and her devoted husband came to a sad and untimely end.She died in Arkansas Jan. 8th 1915.
Her heart-broken husband brought her body back to be laid to rest in Chapel Hill cemetery.At one o'clock Jan. 11th, 1915, her funeral was preached by her pastor in the presence of a very large congregation of sorrowing relatives and friends in the church where she had been such a faithful member.At the close of the service we laid her tenderly to rest in the "old churchyard" by the side of her mother, who had preceded her to the land of peace.
Ruby was a very sweet and pretty child. She grew up into a beautiful, exceedingly attractive and lovely womanhood. She was a loving and dutiful daughter, an affectionate sister, a devoted wife, an earnest Christian, and her whole life was characterized by a sweet unselfishness, and died in the triumphs of living faith in Jesus Christ."Precious in the sight of the Lord,

House Destroyed By Fire.

The Residence owned by Dr.
W. E. Cobb on South Main street and in which H. Colfield resided was completely destroyed by fire Friday afternoon. The house was worth about $1,000 and was insured for $500. Most of the contents were saved, but Hayward lost some bedding, provisions and his meat. The house was on an adjoining lot to Anna Smiths house which burned a few weeks ago.

THIS DAY LET LOVERS

FOND ENTWINE

Their Hands, And Bless St. Valentine.

A Violet and a Valentine

By RUBY DOUGLAS EVANS.
(Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.)

VIOLET SARGENT slipped into a pretty kimono and then sought the most comfortable chair her small room afforded. Already her tiny kettle was beginning to sing over its steady blue flame and the miniature table was gleaming with its white cloth and single cup and plate.

It was her custom to eat her evening meal alone in her little hall room. But tonight—it was the eve of St. Valentine's day—she was conscious of a vague longing for companionship.

And not even a lace paper heart had greeted her in the dingy hall below to tell her it was St. Valentine's anniversary. How completely the home folks in the western town had forgotten! It was true, she admitted, she had few home folks left.

She was roused from her reverie by a loud noise on the stairs below. Some bulky. There was no clew to the sender on the envelope.

She tore open the message and held a trunk key folded within a type-written note which said: "This is the key to your valentine."

The inside of the trunk was spacious and composed of many trays and sections, and as the girl opened one after another her color deepened and great tears rolled down her cheeks.

One by one she laid on the couch and chairs all about her the most exquisite of garments, from satin slippers of her own size to a wedding gown of creamy satin. In her wildest dreams in the days when she had been engaged to Bob Saunders, in those happy days before she had decided to come east and make her own way in the world, she had not fancied anything so beautiful.

And who but Bob could have done it? It had been at a Valentine party four years ago that she and Bob had become engaged.

She was startled by a third knock at her door, this time a gentle, feminine knock. "Yes?" called Violet, drying her eyes.

"It's Katie, Miss Sargent," came in the soft brogue of the maid. "Come in, Katie."

The girl opened the door and closed it behind her. She spoke in an awe-stricken voice, and her eyes grew wide with wonder as she beheld the bewildering array of unmistakable bride's finery lying about the room.

"There's—there's a lady and gentlemen below. They want to see you," announced Katie.

"Who are they?" Violet asked, trembling from head to foot.

"They said you'd know and—Miss Sargent, I—they came in a big automobile and—and it's standing outside waiting for them now. The lady whispered to me to have you dress in—in your new clothes before coming down; that they would wait."

For a few moments Violet stood looking helplessly about her, the maid staring. At last, impulsively, she looked up.

"Katie," she said, "please close the door and help me to dress."

"Yes, ma'am, I will," said Katie. It took half an hour to select the dainty clothes and don them.

"Now, Katie, will I do?" asked Violet, flushed and happy. As she dressed she had reasoned it all out logically in her mind, and the situation seemed as conventional as if she had always known this was to be her wedding night.

"Katie, I—I haven't said anything about this to any one. It isn't best in a boarding house where you know no one, but—I'm going to be married. I—I'll return and arrange everything with Mrs. Jordan, but meantime will you straighten my things and pack this trunk and my own with all but my garments to wear?"

When Violet reached the foot of the stairs there stood Bob, his eyes devouring her. He knew by the length of time she had taken that she had understood and was coming down to be his bride. He took the little gloved hand she gave him and led her to the dingy parlor.

"Violet!" cried Bob's married sister. "I have been nearly shaking to death with nervousness. I never heard of such a mad, romantic thing in all my life. Bob has the temerity of a brigadier general. Now let's hurry!"

And Violet was hurried off with her sister-in-law and husband to be to the little church where the minister was in readiness to make her Bob's wife.

"I knew you'd be more apt to marry me in this mad, unconventional way than you ever would in a sane and dignified fashion," said her husband hours afterward. "And I couldn't bear to think of your working here in New York alone any longer, even though you declared to me you loved it and—probably—would never marry me!"

HE TOOK HER LITTLE GLOVED HAND AND LED HER INTO THE PARLOR.

one was bringing up a trunk. Violet wondered whose it might be.

A thundering noise on the door startled her from her first mouthful of dinner. She jumped to her feet and, remembering her attire, opened the door on a crack to tell the expressman he was in the wrong place.

"Miss Violet Sargent," announced the gruff voice of the man, and he thrust open the door and deposited his burden in the only available spot in the room. Then without further words he was gone.

Violet closed the door and stood staring at the trunk. It was new and strong and large. And on it in unmistakable letters was painted her own name, Violet Sargent, with the address. The trunk was securely strapped and locked. Furthermore, it took up the only floor space she had in the room. But she was helpless. She could not unlock it, for she had no key.

A moment after she had climbed over it to resume her dinner there came another knock upon the door.

"Yes?" she called, hoping she might not have to scale the trunk again.

"Miss Sargent!" called a boy.

Violet opened the door to receive a note addressed to her. She signed for it and closed the door again. It was addressed in typewriting and was Old Time Books Instructed Lovers in Art of Writing Love Letters.

"Carvalho's Polite Valentine Writer; or, The Lovers' Repository," a little book published nearly a hundred years ago, contains "a capital collection of all the new valentines and answers"—for the recipient was in duty bound to respond to her lover's assault upon her heart.

The following amorous ditty in script was subjoined to a picture, highly colored, of a girl eagerly stretching out her hand to receive a missive held in the beak of a dove:

A Letter from the Youth I love,
Pray give it me my pretty Dove;
May Cupid both our hearts incline
To grace the morn of Valentine.

Briefly conclusive is this one:
Sweetly smiling, quite divine,
I chuse thee for my Valentine.

A sample of a reply for a girl to use to an unwelcome suitor is this:

Dear sir, you're so foolish
And scented so fine,
I'm not have a man monkey
For my Valentine.

VALENTINE DAY PARTIES.

The 14th of February is becoming specially chosen for children's parties, at which St. Valentine rules supreme. The following hints for table decorations may be of use:

Get heavy red pasteboard hearts of the largest size. Take four of these and tie the points of the hearts together at the top with narrow red ribbon of the same shade; then set them up tent fashion in the center of the table. Through the openings at the bottom of the tent let the same narrow red ribbon extend to each place; on each end of the ribbon inside the tent tie the valentines for each guest. At a given signal you may allow each guest to draw forth his or her individual valentine.

The heart tent can be decorated also with small red hearts, all tied to the ribbon at the top and allowed to hang profusely in every direction at ribbon ends.

ST. VALENTINE AS HYMEN.

Get the Credit For Helping Along Marriages Sixty Years Ago.

Just to show that Valentine's day, with all its significance of betrothals and marriages, was not unappreciated in America in the nineteenth century it might be well to quote an advertisement which appeared in the Democrat of Feb. 3, 1853, in Wooster, O.

"The great increase in marriages throughout Wayne county during the past year is said to be occasioned by the superior excellence of the valentines sold by George Henry. Indeed, so complete was his success that Cupid has again commissioned him as his great high priest of Love, Courtship and Marriage."

Pepys' Valentine Day.

The immortal Pepys, who chronicled the gossip of England in the seventeenth century, wrote one day in his immortal diary, "I am also this year my wife's valentine, and it will cost me £5, but that I must have laid out if we had not been valentines."

LOVE'S TOKEN

SONG FOR SAINT VALENTINE'S DAY

I send my love across the night
To thee that art my heart's delight,
And, though the night be dark, I know
My love will find the way to go,
And, though the path be rough and long,
My love is leal, my love is strong.

What happiness if I might flee
With love across the night to thee!

ARTHUR J. BURDICK

(Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.)

Sweet Love passed through the garden
And plucked a rose for me.
I took it, and I kissed it.
I send it, dear, to thee,
For, though 'tis fair and fragrant,
Its beauty is not mine.
Love, bear it to my dear one
And lay it on her shrine.

The rose is lacking beauty
When 'tis not shared with thee.
Its sweetness is but wasted
If known alone by me.
So Love shall bear it further.
'Tis thine by right divine,
For beauty's stamp is on it
And makes it only thine.

"I SEND LOVE TO THEE WINGING, TO SING WHERE THOU CANST HEAR."

Love paused beneath my window
And sang a tender lay.
I bade him cease his singing
And fare him on his way.
That song, indeed, is wasted
Which falls not on thy ear.
I send Love to thee winging,
To sing where thou canst hear.

And if Love's roses please thee
And if Love's songs are sweet
I've songs to sing and roses
To scatter at thy feet.
And songs will be the sweeter
And roses seem more fair,
Dear heart, if one who loves thee
Can in thy pleasures share.

War Caused First Valentine.
It was at the battle of Agincourt in 1415 that Charles, duke of Orleans, was taken after a fierce charge in a vain attempt to retrieve the French fortunes of the day, and for twenty-five years thereafter he remained a prisoner in the Tower of London until ransomed for 300,000 crowns by Philip the Good of Burgundy. In order to relieve the tedium of his long confinement the captive duke composed about sixty love poems, which, tradition asserts, were the first valentines ever penned.

Everybody's Valentine.
To you—somewhere,
Here—there—
Roses may bloom around you,
May be snow has found you
On land—at sea—
You don't know me,
Nor do I know you,
But feeling blue
I pen this line
To those who have no valentine!

PAYROLL OF CIVILIZATION MET BY FARMER

WANTS NO "DEADHEADS" ON LIST OF EMPLOYEES.

A CALL UPON THE LAW MAKERS
TO PREVENT USELESS TAX
UPON AGRICULTURE.

By Peter Radford

Lecturer National Farmers' Union

The farmer is the paymaster of industry and as such he must meet the nation's payroll. When industry pays its bill it must make a slight draft upon agriculture for the amount, which the farmer is compelled to honor without protest. This check drawn upon agriculture may travel and fro over the highways of commerce; may build cities; girdle the globe with bands of steel; may search hidden treasures in the earth or traverse the skies, but in the end it will rest upon the soil. No dollar will remain suspended in midair; it is as certain to seek the earth's surface

as an apple that falls from a tree.

When a farmer buys a plow he pays the man who mined the metal, the woodman who felled the tree, the manufacturer who assembled the raw material and shaped it into an article of usefulness, the railroad that transported it and the dealer who sold him the goods. He pays the wages of labor and capital employed in the transaction as well as pays for the tools, machinery, buildings, etc., used in the construction of the commodity and the same applies to all articles of use and diet of himself and those engaged in the subsidary lines of industry.

There is no payroll in civilization that does not rest upon the back of the farmer. He must pay the bills

—all of them.

The total value of the nation's annual agricultural products is around

$12,000,000,000, and it is safe to estimate that 95 cents on every dollar goes to meeting the expenses of subsidary industries. The farmer does not work more than thirty minutes per day for himself; the remaining thirteen hours of the day's toil he devotes to meeting the payroll of the hired hands of agriculture, such as the manufacturer, railroad, commercial and other servants.

The Farmer's Payroll and How He

Meets It.

The annual payroll of agriculture approximates $12,000,000,000. A portion of the amount is shifted to for-ign countries in exports, but the total payroll of industries working for the farmer divides substantially as follows: Railroads, $1,252,000,000;

manufacturers, $1,365,000,000; mining, $655,000,000; banks, $200,000,000; mercantile $3,500,000,000, and a heavy miscellaneous payroll constitutes the remainder.

It takes the corn crop, the most valuable in agriculture, which sold last year for $1,692,000,000, to pay off the employees of the railroads; the money derived from our annual sales of livestock of approximately $2,000,

000,000, the yearly cotton crop, valued at $920,000,000; the wheat crop, which is worth $610,000,000, and the oil crop, that is worth $440,000,000, are required to meet the annual payroll of the manufacturers. The money derived from the remaining staple crops is used in meeting the payroll of the bankers, merchants, etc. After these obligations are paid, the farmer has only a few bunches of vegetables, some fruit and poultry which he can sell and call the proceeds his own.

When the farmer pays off his help

he has very little left and to meet these tremendous payrolls he works forced to mortgage homes, work women in the field and increase the hours of his labor. We are, therefore, compelled to call upon all industry dependent upon the farmers for subsistence to retrench in their expenditures and to cut off all unnecessary expenses. This course is absolutely necessary in order to avoid a reduction in wages, and we want,

if possible, to retain the present wage scale paid railroad and all other industrial employees.

We will devote this article to a discussion of unnecessary expenses and whether required by law or permitted by the managements of the concerns, is wholly immaterial. We want all waste labor and extravagance, of whatever character, cut out.

We will mention the full crew bill as

Rheumatism in Joints

Pains Disappear and Swelling Vanishes in a Few Days.

That is what happens if you use Rheuma, the wonderful remedy that Haynes & Taylor and all druggists sell on the "money back if not cured" plan. There is a vast amount of rheumatism in this vicinity, and if you know any sufferer, call his attention to this generous offer.

Rheuma is a quick acting prescription. You will know your rheumatism is leaving 24 hours after you take the first dose. It dissolves the uric acid and drives it from its lodging place.

Mrs. Alice A. Brown, Ithaca, N. Y., writes: "For seven years I suffered greatly with rheumatism in my hip; at night I was scarcely able to sleep. One bottle of Rheuma cured me."

That sounds miraculous, but Rheuma does miraculous things. Fifty cents a bottle.

Dear Friend:—I enclose check to pay my subscription to the Record-Press another year. I don't know just when my time expires, and if I ever forget to renew at the right time, just keep sending it on and send in your bill, for we don't want to miss it, for it gives so much news from our old home.

We are sorry to hear of so many of our old friends and neighbors dying since we left Kentucky. It seems there surely has been more deaths, in the same length of time since we left than there were before.

If you will give me a little space in your good paper I will tell a few things about this country since we came here.

We have been here about eighteen months, since we came here there has been spent in Tempe on Normal school buildings over $100,000 and a $30,000 common school building is under construction now, also the town is having sewers put in at a cost of about $30,000 so you see we are improving some, if we are going in debt for it.

One of the greatest things that has been done, was getting prohibition in the state in November by a good majority. It went into effect the first day of January, and we can sure see the effects of it; before then, at least on the night of a week the darkest Mexican would yell and sing around all night, but since the last night in December they have been exceedingly quiet.

I see in tonight's paper that you are having another cold spell there, we can hardly realize that it can be so cold there while we are having nice pleasant weather here, although I think it was snowing in the mountains here yesterday, I could see some snow on the four peaks just north of the Roosevelt dam, at least fifty miles from here. I was at an orange orchard today. Oranges still on the trees, they are cheap only $1.00 to $1.20 a box.

Grain fields and pastures are about as green here now as they are there in May.

There has been about four days since we came here that the sun did not shine, and all of them but one were in last December. There has been more rain this winter than last and there is enough water stored in the reservoir now to insure a good crop next summer. I am enclosing a clipping from the "Arizona Gazette," from which you will see the lowest temperature we have had this winter was 22 degrees, on the 18th of January, which was only ten below freezing, but if any who read this, ever come this way, don't think you won't need your over-coat for air seems sharp enough to stick in the skin.

I notice Mrs. Newcom, in our sister State, reports her income on chickens. I must tell her about what some of her sisters are doing in the poultry business in the Salt River valley of the baby state. I have been collecting eggs since the first of Jan. There are three routes that I travel and I go over each one twice a week, so there are never over four days between times.

One trip I got 260 dozen eggs from six families, the eggs for four days. One woman, alone, had three cases—90 dozen—besides what she had shipped herself. Yesterday I gathered 270 dozen and left at least 30 dozen that I did not have cases for. Now sister Newcom come across the line into the land of sunshine, or as one writer said about Arizona, the land that God forgot, I think He stopped out on the desert. If any who read this go to the World's Fair via Arizona, don't fail to take the stage at Globe and come over the Scenic Highway by Roosevelt dam and through Salt River valley. I don't know whether it will cost extra or not, but it will certainly be worth seeing. They have auto stages running every day and you can get your ticket routed that way.

The cotton is about all picked now. On account of the war in Europe the price has not been so good this year, it is selling now for about 15c., for the best; they usually get about 20c. Cotton grows fine here but it is like tobacco, on hands too long to suit me. There is a project on foot now to grow sugar cane, it also grows fine here, in fact, I don't think there is a place anywhere that will grow more different crops successfully. It is not a question of how much can be grown, but how much can be sold at a profit.

I can only give a hint of the advantages and disadvantages here if any one wishes something more definite, write me.

Wishing you, and all my friends, health, happiness and prosperity.

I am yours truly,

A. F. WOOLF.

CATARRH OF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Peruna Saved Me

Mrs. A. T. Powers, whose address is given below her portrait, is an ardent friend of Peruna. She says:

"I am thankful to tell you that my old trouble has been cured. I have been suffering from kidney and bladder trouble for twenty-two years. Two years ago I began to take Peruna, and I only took about three bottles and today I can say I am a well person."

Catarrh of the Internal Organs

Mrs. A. T. Powers, R. R. 7, Box 121, London, Ohio, writes: "I write to thank you for the wonderful good your Peruna has done for me. I was a sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble for twenty-two years. Two years ago I began to take Peruna, and I only took about three bottles and today I can say I am a well person."

Catarrh is liable to affect any of the internal organs. This is especially true of the bladder, which is very frequently the seat of catarrh. This is sometimes called cystitis.

Mr. James M. Powell, No. 1629 W. Walnut St., Rosedale, Kansas, writes: "About four years ago I suffered with a severe catarrh of the bladder, which caused continued irritation and pain. I was miserable and could not stand up or walk for any length of time without extreme weariness and pain. I began taking Peruna and it greatly relieved me and in eleven weeks I was completely cured, and felt like a new man."

Those who object to liquid medicine can now procure Peruna in Tablet form.

A WOMAN'S CONFESSION.

BY EFFIE JENNINGS, Desloge, Mo.

You ask if I was happy and was blessed,
With love returned, contentment and the rest
That lends the heart peace, the soul satisfied—
Hopes realized, ambitions gratified.

A delicate question that's true—too true—
Occasioned by a poem handed you,
Of an unloved life—the melancholy—
I had said to another was felt by me.

I regret expressing so much as this
Of my sorrow, yet it may not be amiss
To tell you all, lest you think me incapable Of valuing sentiments of authors so able.

I had, from my childhood, hoped for so much,
A life of usefulness—opportunities such As enables one, if one does their best,
Unselfish, deeds that leaves humanity blest.

But as it is now, or as it has been,
O! God pity us, if it is a sin,
To o'er look the path we have been brought,
And regret a change thy hand hath wrought.

The mistakes are mine, not thine, O Lord,
Condolence I take from thy holy word;
If they will repent and my name adore,
I will forgive "remember their sins no more."

I loved and was loved but it brought little rest,
It was starvation of heart at the best;
I learned when the race was only begun
"That all, all was vanity under the sun."

My best friends are kind, they love me I know,
But that doesn't lessen this sickening woe;
My nature and wishes they cannot read,
Nor give me the comfort I so much need.

To toil and suffer with so little gain,
So little good done with so much pain
I wonder in despair "Can this be all?"
It cheats my faith, life's sweetness turns to gall.

My grief and disappointment I never breathe
Within my own breast it was carefully sheathed Until strength and will was almost broken,
"Of the fullness of the heart the mouth hath spoken."

If I had known this way was so steep
I might have chosen more success to meet;
Yet the paths judgment are in His power,
He'll reward His saints in a gracious hour.

Our earthly needs are easily obtained,
Such hopes and loves are soon attained,
But that isn't all we wish for our friend—
The worthy object of our chief end.

Oh! to make this world a perfect Eden
With sin and its fruits completely hidden
By the blood of Christ, who cleanses all
And makes them able to answer His call.

To hear His voice in the cool of the day
And from its summons not flee away;
But delight in the presence from above,
The only complete and perfect love.

Thy will be done O! Lord and not my own,
I know that some must be hewers of stone;
I'll cheerfully sow the good seeds I may
And joyfully reap the harvest some day.

When I look on the path o'er which I was led,
So thorny and rough I was fearful to tread,
And try to think and feel as I should,
I tearfully say, "O! God thy art good."

Boils Biliousness Malaria Constipation

Perhaps this case may be similar to yours

J. Wesley Tilly of (Box 673,) Selma, Cal., writes:

"Gentlemen:—It gives me much pleasure to be able to send you a testimonial. I by its reaching some sufferer your medicine will do as much for him as they have for me. At the age of fourteen I was troubled with a most severe case of malaria, biliousness, accompanied with the worst sort of constipation. I was persuaded by my parents, who have always been strong believers in Dr. Pierce's medicine, to try the Golden Medical Discovery. I took one bottle and the boils all disappeared, but I did not stop at one bottle, I took three and the malaria all left me and I have had no more boils to this day, thanks to the Golden Medical Discovery for my relief."

"Following an operation for appendicitis two years ago I was troubled very much with constipation and I have been using Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Peppermint Cure for the whole trouble. Thanks again for the Golden Medical Discovery. I have obtained from The People's Medical Company, Buffalo, N. Y., only $1.00 for this 100 page book."

Wheat sold on the Pembroke market Monday at the unusual price of $1.50 per bushel. One crop, that of Rawlins Bros. and Armistead, containing 1,800 bushels, which the owners were wise enough to hold, was turned loose, and one of our local dealers who had purchased several thousand bushels some time ago as a speculation also sold a part of his holding. Sad The Day.

"Sad the day for any man when he becomes absolutely contented with the life he is living; the deeds he is doing; when there is not forever beating at the doors of his soul some great desire to do something larger which he knows he was made and meant to do." These words were once spoken by Phillips Brooks. They can be applied to you. It makes no difference what circumstances you are surrounded by nor the environment that you are living in, you should struggle continually upward. It makes no difference how small your daily task is, always keep in mind that some day you are going to do bigger things. When you have finished your daily work do not lapse into contentment. Understand that the morrow will be used to better advantage and that your task will be more perfectly done than ever before. Build as though you were a master builder, but never consider your handiwork perfect. Making your life bigger, better and broader is one of your tasks. Every day add to or takes from your character. Have a care that your daily acts shall strengthen you. Never attempt to advance at the expense of your brother. And never consider that you have reached perfection. Avoid self contentment as you would a deadly nightmare.—Ex.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Came Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Caron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side."

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand and I gave up in despair."

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down with womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in 35 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

"JESUS HIMSELF DREW NEAR."

Luke 24:13-35—April 12.

"It is Christ that died, yea rather, that was raised from the dead."—Romans 8:34.

TODAY we study one of Jesus' most thrilling manifestations to His disciples after His resurrection. Early that morning He had appeared to the women who came to enshrine His body. They had communicated the news to St. Peter and St. John, who hastened to the sepulcher, but found it empty. The disciples were perplexed. Although Jesus had told them that He would be crucified and would rise from the dead on the third day, they had not comprehended the teaching.

That afternoon, as two of the company were walking home, discussing their disappointment, Jesus overtook them. They knew Him not, because of His resurrection change.

St. Peter tells us that He was "put to death in flesh, but quickened in spirit." This we understand in the light of St. Paul's explanation of the Church's resurrection: "Sown in weakness, raised in power; sown in dishonor, raised in glory; sown an animal body, raised a spirit body."—1 Corinthians 15:42-44.

The same thought is impressed again by the Apostle's statement: "We shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye; for 'flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God.' The change which the Church is to experience is the same which Jesus experienced when He was raised from the dead, a life-giving Spirit—no longer a Man.

Our Lord's title, "Son of Man," still belongs to Him, as does the title, "the Logos." When the Logos was made flesh, the identity was preserved; and likewise when Jesus became a spirit being again. Respecting our Lord's human experiences we read: "A body hast Thou prepared Me"—for the suffering of death. (Hebrews 10:3-10) When He had accomplished that purpose, He no longer had need of human nature; but, as He had foretold, He ascended to where He was before—to the spirit nature and, later on, to Heaven itself.

To assume that Jesus is a fleshly being in Heaven, bearing wounds and scars to all eternity, is to imply that the Father never really exalted Him to the glory which He had before the world was (John 17:5), and is irresponsible. The Scriptures plainly show that the Father highly exalted our Redeemer "far above angels, principalities and powers."

"Jesus Showed Himself." St. Luke declares that Jesus showed Himself alive after His resurrection (Acts 1:3). In every way He manifested the fact that a great change had taken place with Him. He appeared and showed Himself not only in different bodies, unlike each other, but also in different clothing. When He suddenly disappeared, the clothing disappeared also.

The stranger who overtook the two disciples en route to Emmaus inquired, "Why so sad? Astonished that He did not know, they explained that the chief priests and rulers had delivered up and crucified Jesus, a prophet mighty before God and the people. Their hope that He was Messiah had been crushed. Then they told the events of that very morning—that some women of their company had found His tomb empty and had seen angels, who said that He was alive.

This gave Jesus opportunity to explain quietly that their experiences were part of the Divine Plan; that it was necessary that Messiah should thus suffer, in order to become King of Glory and bless mankind. He pointed out from Scripture what God had foretold respecting Messiah's experiences. He probably showed that when Isaac was offered up by Abraham, he fore-shadowed Jesus' death and resurrection; that the smitten rock represented Messiah, who must be smitten in order to give the Water of Life to humanity; that the serpent lifted up in the wilderness typified Messiah's crucifixion; and that the pasover lamb typified Jesus, "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." No wonder their hearts burned within them!

"They Knew Him—He Vanished." When the travelers arrived in Emmaus, something in their guest's manner of speaking the blessing at supper reminded them of Jesus. Their eyes of understanding began to open. Then, having fulfilled the purpose of His materialization, Jesus vanished—clothes and all.

Unable to sleep, the disciples returned to Jerusalem, and there learned that Jesus had manifested Himself to Peter. Then they told their experiences; and faith, hope and joy began to grow in all their hearts.

During the forty days following our Lord's resurrection, He only twice appeared in a form similar to that which they had seen, bearing the marks of crucifixion. On both occasions He appeared and vanished with the doors were shut.

Letter From Mississippi.

Woodville, Miss., Feb. 4, 1915.
Editor, Record-Press,
Marion, Ky.

Dear Marshall:

Please give me a little space in the columns of the Record-Press, that I may speak to my friends—which consists of every reader of the Record-Press, and many many others—about my visit to my old home after being away sixteen months. It is needless for me to say, I enjoyed the visit, for anyone who ever lived in old Crittenden county knows that one being away for only a short time, is always proud to get back, if for only a short visit, (as the case with me) but I can truthfully say it was indeed a source of pleasure to me to be able to clasp hands with so many that I learned to love long ago. The only regret was that I couldn't stay longer and see more of the people. Since I returned home I can count hundreds that I didn't see at all. I thought when I left home I would stay all night or at least take one meal with them. Uncle Willoughby Guess, I fully intended to go to his home to see him, but only got to be with him just a few minutes in Marion, yet, I am so glad I saw him those few minutes for I have but little hope of ever seeing him again in this life; yet I expect to meet him again and he will not cry then, like he did when I met him in Marion, for in heaven it will be joy instead of weeping. And uncle Will Hughes and aunt Leticia, they almost raised me and seemed like a father and mother to me but I only got to be with them a short time at their home, and aunt Sallie Hunt, my grandmother's sister, I didn't see at all. I intended to go back to see my sister, Martha Gass, but couldn't get there, so I missed seeing aunt Sallie and many others that I wanted to see, but I pray God's blessings upon them all and any that looked for me and thought I should have come to see them. I beg your pardon and want to say that I would love to have gone to your home and enjoyed your conversations. My old friend, Geo. W. Cruce, I just saw him as I passed through Crayne. He and several others reached up their hands to shake hands with me but I couldn't reach them all with my hand, but in my heart I reached everyone of them and I said "God be with you til we meet again."

I stopped over at Paducah with my son, Henry, wife and baby, Barbara. God bless and keep them from every harm and lead them by His spirit.

Sunday morning I went to the First Baptist church to Sunday School and preaching and it looked like home to see Bro. W. A. Blackburn, superintendent, and they are doing things there. They have a large Sunday School and all interested and splendid lessons. It made me think of Marion. I took dinner with Mr. Blackburn and family, oh, how I did enjoy their associations and as I left them, deep down in my heart I said God bless and keep them forever.

I left Henry's at 3 p. m., Monday to take the train for Fulton, to be with Bro. M. E. Miller and family and cousin, Sam W. Paris, for two hours and first, to say I enjoyed the two hours' stay; would not express my feelings but it was a joy to me to spend that two hours in the home of Brother and Sister Miller with all the family, and to be with cousin Sam.

I arrived home Tuesday at 4:30 p. m. Found all well, for which I feel to thank God for His protecting care.

Let me say here that I hated worse to leave Marion than I did when I left sixteen months ago because when I left then I had a set time to go back but this time I left without any set time to go back, for that reason I hated much worse to leave.

I had promised several to call them by phone and tell them goodbye but after calling Sister Cora Crider and my sister, Martha Gass, I found the task too great, so I ask all others to pardon me for not calling you. I went to the phone three times to call Vernon Crayne and wife but never could get them, but I am sure they know enough of me to pardon me.

In conclusion I want to ask to be remembered kindly by all who read this and to say to you after about one week write me at Ardmore, Okla. I will be there with my old friend P. S. Maxwell, and when I get there I will write you again, so goodbye for this time, your unworthy friend and Brother in Christ.

—J. FRANK CONGER.
