CLAIMED BY DEATH

MRS. W. N. ROCHESTER VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

Had Been Ill Only a Few Days
—Was Sister of Mrs. Ollie
M. James.

Mrs. Kate Rochester, wife of W. N. Rochester, a well known farmer living about one-half mile out on the Shady Grove road, died Saturday, Jan. 24 at 9:50 a. m. of pneumonia. She had only been sick a little more than a week and no one thought that she was in a very dangerous condition until she became unconscious Tuesday night and remained in that condition until her death, the following Saturday.

Because no one realized that she was so near death's door, her relatives were not notified in time for them to reach here before her death, with the exception of her youngest daughter, Vivian, who is attending school in Tennessee. A telegram reached Vivian Tuesday morning, but when she got here her mother did not recognize her.

Mrs. Rochester leaves surviving her husband, W. N. Rochester and three children; one son, Wm. H. Rochester, who recently married Miss Katie May; and two daughters, Margaret Elizabeth and Vivian Gray Rochester.

Mrs. Rochester was the daughter of R. Y. Thomas, one of the pioneer Methodist preachers of Kentucky and who served as a chaplain in the Federal army during the Civil war. She was born at Bradfordsville, near Lebanon, Ky., in 1864 and was in her 56th year. She has one brother, R. Y. Thomas, Jr., who is in Congress representing the Second district of Kentucky and two sisters, Mrs. Ollie James, wife of the late United States Senator, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Lola Hackett of Livermore, Ky.

Mrs. Rochester was a member of the Methodist church, South, and has been since early childhood and had spent her life in the extension of God's kingdom. She was always loyal to her church, never shirking from any responsibility and took delight as well as interest in the various societies of the church.

She had a host of friends in this community and was well known throughout the state and every one that knew her will be grieved at her sudden death.

Among those from out of the this community and was well city who attended her funeral were: Mrs. Calmes, former owner of The Record-Press, and Mrs. Seagraves of Sturgis; Mrs. Ruby Gordon, sister of Ollie James and wife of Judge Gordon of Hopkinsville; Mrs. Berry of Madisonville; Mrs. Bessie Cash of Princeton; Mrs. Ollie James of Washington and Mrs. Lola Hackett.

NEW LAUNDRY AGENT

The White Swan Laundry agency has made its monthly change. Lee Vick has sold it to Fred White of near Salem.

H. A. HAYNES IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Mr. R. F. Haynes received a telegram from Deland, Fla., stating that his brother, H. A. Haynes, was in a critical condition and that they were looking for him to die at any time. Mr. Haynes was in bad health when he left here three years ago, and has been on the downward road in health since then. He is just suffering from a general breakdown.

Mr. Haynes was circuit clerk in this county for 23 years and then he took over the management of the Kentucky Flour Spar company, which position he held until he was forced to leave on account of his health. He is 63 years of age.

MISSIONARY HERE

Rev. W. C. Taylor of Pernambuco, Brazil, was in Marion last Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

He filled the pulpit of Rev. J. B. Trotter Sunday, both morning and evening, speaking to a large and appreciative audience at each service.

Mr. Taylor is a brother to Boise A. Taylor and has been a missionary in Brazil for some years. He is in this country only long enough to regain his health, when he will return. He tells many interesting stories and customs of the Brazilians and also of the struggles the against catholicism.

The Second Baptist church held no services to permit their members to hear Mr. Taylor Sunday and a large number availed themselves of the opportunity.

Mr. Taylor spoke at the school chapel exercises Monday.

TELEPHONE SYSTEM DAMAGED BY SLEET

Telephone service was even worse than usual this past week on account of the fact that the sleet and ice had put many lines out of commission. In a number of places the poles were down as well as the wires. The service has not been restored to all points as yet but troublemen are working to restore it as soon as possible.

Some damage was done in Marion but not many lines were out.

QUIETLY MARRIED

Walter Hilliard and Miss Rubie Towery were happily married Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Rev. W. T. Oakley. A few friends attended the ceremony.

Mr. Hilliard is a returned soldier and an industrious farmer. Miss Rubie is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Towery and a favorite of the Tribune section.

Representative R. E. "Bob" Wilborn

Makes Splendid Offer to the People.—Come to Your County Clerk's Office at Marion and See All The Bills as Introduced in the House And Senate at Frankfort, Ky.

I am in receipt of a letter from our Representative, Bob Wilborn, now at Frankfort, which in part reads as follows:

"I am sending you two or three bills which may interest the folks there. Also the Legislative Digest which I will send you every two or three days, so that persons interested in the Legislature may know what bills are being introduced. I will gladly send a copy of any bill to any person requesting same. If the people will avail themselves of the opportunity of coming to your office and looking over the Legislative Digest, requesting and studying bills, and advise me their opinions of same, it would be of great service to me in helping me to vote for the wishes of the people at home, whom I want to serve to the best of my ability."

Alright Bob, we thank you heartily for the generous offer. Now, therefore, I hereby extend a cordial invitation and hearty welcome to each and every man and woman and to all school boys and girls to come to my office, and avail yourselves of knowing exactly what is going on in our Legislature. And let us all feel free to call on Representative Wilborn for a copy of any bill or bills in which we may be particularly interested, and give him our opinions of these bills, and thereby enable him to serve his people well, as he wants to do, and as a Representative indeed and in truth.

Your friend,

After the ceremony the couple were taken to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Wheeler where a ten o'clock luncheon was served consisting of cake, hot chocolate and grape juice.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews contemplate making their home with Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler for the time being.

OKLAHOMA VISITORS

Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Clark of Tishomingo, Okla., left Tuesday for their home after spending a week with Mrs. Clark, mother of the doctor and J. W. Blue, brother of Mrs. Clark. They will spend a few days with Mrs. E. B. Krausse, sister of Mrs. Clark.

Dr. and Mrs. Clark moved from here to Tishomingo sixteen years ago and this is the first time Mrs. Clark has been back. Dr. Clark came back for a short visit about nine years ago. They found many changes in the town since they left but say they can see a real improvement. They enjoyed greatly the meeting with their old friends and looking over the improvements in the town.

Dr. and Mrs. Clark have been fortunate in their new home. He is one of the most prominent and popular physicians in his section and has a large and lucrative practice. As is generally the case with the medical fraternity he has taken an active interest in politics and was honored several years ago by being elected to the legislature from his district and made an enviable record during his service.

Mrs. Clark is now a member of the school board in Tishomingo and takes an active interest in school and church affairs and is very popular with all classes in her home town and section.

Any county in Kentucky may levy 30 cents on the $100 tax for school purposes. Last year out of 109 counties reporting, 22 levied 15 cents or less; 68 levied 16 to 20 cents; and 19 levied more than 20 cents. Only 14 levied 30 cents.

SCHOOL STATISTICS.

Kentucky has a very large state school fund as compared with other states, but only six cents out of each dollar paid for elementary teaching, in rural districts, outside of the city and graded school districts, comes from local taxation, county or district.

Kentucky's state fund almost exactly equals the total amount paid by counties and districts for all school purposes. In the United States the average is one dollar from the State to five dollars from local taxation. In the three states with which we are comparing ourselves the ratio is one dollar from the State to ten dollars from local taxation. If our local taxing units came up to the national standard we would have about $12,000,000 added to our total school fund.

Any subdistrict may, by vote, levy upon itself a tax not to exceed 25 cents on the $100 for school purposes; but it is so rarely done that very few know of this means of securing funds for payment of teachers and other forms of school improvement.

The average annual salary paid rural teachers in Kentucky in 1916-17 was only $301.28 or $43.04 per month. Is it strange that we had that year to employ 1,676 wholly inexperienced teachers; that 9,357 persons taught in our schools with nothing higher than a county certificate as evidence of qualification to teach; and that we occupy a shamefully low place among our sister states when compared with them in those matters which measure the efficiency of our school system?

Let every teacher in Kentucky, and every friend of education, stand out boldly for the rights of our children and the teaching profession, and fight for local taxation, better salaries, more adequate equipment and better attendance until our State holds a position of which we need not be ashamed. Correction not explanation is the great need. We must have trained teachers well paid, working in houses that are comfortable and sanitary, with equipment suited to the needs of the school, and in harmony with a community which will send its children with regularity and pay its school bills with gladness of heart. Let us have for our battle cry the motto of Kentucky's great educator, Ruric N. Roark, "The Best is Hardly Good Enough."

"JEFF" GETS BUSY

STARTS HIS LONG PROMISED ROAD COLUMN

Look For It Every Week Now
—The Job is His—Make Him Keep It Up.

(By E. Jeffrey Travis.)
There are always three things necessary in bringing about any good and beneficial achievement for public benefit and public utility—advertising, agitating, then action.

I have been asked by our good editor to write a good roads column for The Press, and I am glad to do so, especially at this particular time as this will come under the head "agitating" and this is about all that can be done to the Crittenden county roads just now.

They cannot be traveled, nor worked; complimented, nor praised—Nothing but "cussed" and discussed. We might put in our time agitating a better system for maintaining our dirt roads, or some plan for building hard roads, or getting ready to fix our old dirt over again in the spring as we have been accustomed to do since Noah came out of the Ark or Adam out of the Garden.

I have been trying for a month to find away down deep in my heart, or some where in the back of my head, a good word to give out to my faithful overseers concerning their work on their section for the spring but have failed to get any kind of response to my most serious cogitations.

I felt a little better today when I saw Harry Perry and his faithful few working on their road.

Mud roads need no comment whatever, neither nor nor con, but we do have some real encouragement to offer the Good Road man, as well as gossip for the kicker, and comment for the objector. Mr. W. N. Rees of Frankfort is here now, making a survey of the Marion and Princeton road with a view of building a pike—a rock road—if you please from Marion to the Caldwell county line. Mr. Rees is working for the state and the work done by him will not end like that done on the same road a few years ago. I know we are made, a great many times, to think of "John and the wolf and the sheep" concerning things of this kind, but we are made to hope by those in authority that some real work will be done on this particular road this year. We hope, a good deal of road will be finished this year. After the Princeton road has been surveyed, the Shady Grove road and the bridge at FishTrap will be next surveyed. This will all be done this winter, so that if money matters are just right we will do some real road building this summer.

The surveying for the Federal highway is being done by a different corps of surveyors. They began their work at Louisville and are coming this way. They have been at work since October. I was informed by County Judge Wells of Owensboro that work had been completed to the Davies county line and that work began there on Tuesday, January 20th, so we may expect the Federal survey about April. It takes patience, as well as work and money, and a great many other things that some folks don't have.

I. N. YOUNG WRITES.

In a letter from I. N. Young, now of Wellsford, Kansas, he asks us to remember him to his many friends through the columns of The Press. He says they are all well and are having a fine winter. Most of the farmers who are putting out oats are plowing for them. Prospects for wheat very poor.

Mr. Young had just been to a poultry show at Hutchinson where they claimed they had 1000 birds on exhibit. R. C. Dowell took three firsts, first on hen, first on rooster and first on pen. Must have been some mighty fine chickens.

—LOST—$5.00 bill between Marion Bank and postoffice on Wednesday morning. Finder please return to The Press office.

INFANT SON OF BELTS' IS BACK

Tower Belt left Tuesday for Evansville to accompany his mother and little brother home from the hospital. Mrs. Belt has been at the hospital for some time with her baby who is supposed to have had small pox.

The baby was sick here for some time and the local doctors pronounced the case erysipelas. After every thing had been done to save the life of the child and all hopes of its recovery were gone Mrs. Belt rushed the child to an Evansville hospital where they pronounced it smallpox and she and the baby were sent to the city detention hospital which is about three miles out in the country. The baby got along nicely and is now practically well, but the one amusing thing is that the doctors have changed their decision again and say that the baby never had smallpox, but whatever disease affected the child is of secondary consideration to the many friends of this fine family—the fact that the baby is restored to health is what is of vital interest to them.

CANNING FACTORY WANTS LOCATION

The Canning Factory Co., of Evansville, wants to locate in a good town where they can get the farmers to raise at least 100 acres of tomatoes for them. They say in a letter to Postmaster Olive that they are not looking for any bonus or are not trying to sell any stock just want a good place to can tomatoes.

Marion could stand several good industries—but they are not likely to come as long as insurance rates are as high as they are here—Waterworks the remedy.

PUBLIC HEALTH WORK

One of the poorest paid forms of public service is the work done by health officers and boards of health. For instance in the state of Indiana, salaries paid to local health officers average the munificent sum of two cents per year for each inhabitant. After a man has paid out hundreds of dollars for sickness in his home, and perhaps left his best hopes under a desolate little mound in the cemetery he begins to realize that it is worth more than two cents a year to have his health protected.

Many towns that consider themselves progressive will get along with health officers serving purely from public spirit or else paid some trifling sum. While public spirit does lots of good things, getting something for nothing is no better business proposition in the public health business than in any other line of work.

While the public health work has been fairly well done in this county, the amount spent is inadequate. The appropriations should be sufficient to carry on thoroughly the following lines of work: Reports and quarantine of contagious diseases, inspection of sanitary conditions and the authority to compel them removed, measures for baby welfare, inspection of the schools and school children, and educational public work carried on.

MRS. BURGESS DIES

WAS HERE ON A VISIT FROM CALIFORNIA

Was a Guest at the Home of Her Father, Jack Alexandria on Depot St

Mrs. Alice Burgess of Sacramento, Cal., died at the home of her father, Jack Alexander, on West Depot street Tuesday morning at 8:45 o'clock from neuralgia of the heart.

Mrs. Burgess was born and raised here, but after her marriage to Mr. Burgess she moved to Sacramento where she has made her home since. She was here on a visit and was planning to go home Saturday after a stay here of six weeks. She began feeling badly Monday evening and continued to get worse until her death the next morning. No one thought that she was in a serious condition until about an hour before her death as she was subject to these attacks.

Mrs. Burgess leaves four sisters who were all raised in this county. Mrs. Lou Worley, lately widowed by the death of her husband J. D. Worley; Mrs. Chester Grissom, whose husband was formerly a merchant at Rosiclare, Illinois; Mrs. Dick McConnell of Cave in Rock, Illinois and Mrs. George Conyer of Morley, Missouri.

Mrs. Burgess had bought the home of her widowed sister, Mrs. Worley, in the west suburbs of Marion and given it to her father and was going to take Mrs. Morley and her two children, Mildred and Coleman back to California to live with her, but all these charitable and mother-like plans were thwarted in the twinkling of an eye when the grim reaper of mankind laid his hands on the chosen one.

TOBACCO SALES IN PROVIDENCE

Tobacco sales on the Providence Loose Leaf Floor to date aggregate more than a half million pounds of the weed and the farmers have been paid more than one hundred thousand dollars. The average is higher than at any other market in that section.

Owing to the high water and bad weather which has prevailed nearly ever since the warehouse was opened, the deliveries have been slow and it may be said that the market has only started there.

The average of all sales on that market has been $19.78.

$42 HIGHEST AT HENDERSON

Last Friday a Henderson tobacco house sold 22,070 pounds for $3,182.17. The top prices were all for unfired tobacco. A basket of leaf weighing 475 pounds sold for 42. N. J. Barnett of Fords Ferry sold 640 pounds at -20 average.

C. W. Haynes has gone to Deland, Fla., to be with his father, who is very ill.

BAD BLOOD

Tennessee Folks Testify

Allen Park, Tenn.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has done me a world of good. A few months ago I became all run-down in health, and suffered from loss of appetite. I lost in weight, was weak, my blood was impoverished and bad, and my complexion was sallow. I also had catarrh very badly. All this made me miserable. I was advised to take the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I have only taken two bottles but am now feeling like a new person. I have a good appetite and have gained in weight; my cheeks have a rosy look and my general health is so much improved in every way that I cannot praise 'Golden Medical Discovery' enough for what it has done for me."—MRS. BERRY NICHOLS, 107 Rogers St.

Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., stands behind this standard remedy. When you take Golden Medical Discovery, you are getting the benefit of the experience of a doctor whose reputation goes all around the earth.

Tonic and Blood Purifier

Memphis, Tenn.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a splendid blood purifier and tonic. I took it at one time when my blood was impoverished and I became dropsical, my feet and limbs became swollen to the knees. Six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' cured me of all this and I have not been troubled with a dropsical condition since that time, which was fifteen years ago."

"I have also found the 'Pleasant Pellets' excellent for sluggish liver and constipation. They are effective and do not gripe. I can recommend these two of Dr. Pierce's medicines because they have certainly benefited me."—MRS. LIZZIE NEFF, 200 Market St.

HEADACHE

Often Caused by

Acid-Stomach

You, indeed, more often than you think, because ACID-STOMACH, starting with indigestion, heartburn, belching, food-repelling, blood and bile, if not checked, will eventually affect every vital organ of the body. Severe, bilious, spitting, headache, dizziness, of frequent occurrence as a result of this upset condition.

Take EATONIC. It quickly banishes acid-stomach with its sour, bloated, pain and gas. It aids digestion—helps the stomach get full strength from every mouthful of food you eat. Millions of people are miserable, weak, sick and all because of ACID-STOMACH. Poisons, created by partly digested food that has turned into acid, are absorbed into the blood and distributed throughout the entire system. This often causes rheumatism, migraines, cirrhosis of the liver, heart trouble, ulcers and even cancer of the stomach. It robs the victim of their health, undermines the strength of the most vigorous.

If you want to get back your physical and mental strength—be full of vim and vigor—enjoy life and be happy, you must get rid of your acid-stomach.

In EATONIC you will find the very help you need and it's guaranteed. So get a big box from your druggist today. If it fails to please you, return it and he will refund your money.

FATES ATTEND BABY'S BIRTH

Peculiar Superstition That Has Strong Hold on the Poorer Classes of Greece.

Almost every nation has some particular superstition or belief about babies, and these result in actions which vary all the way from the utterly absurd to the terrible tragic.

The peasantry of Greece firmly believe that the future of every child is determined by three fates, known as the Moral. In the popular mind these fates are three old women, whose habitation is a mountain cave and they come together to a house where there is a newborn child. In preparation for them, all furniture is set aside, that their tottering footsteps may not be impeded, and refreshments in the shape of honey, bread, cakes and wine are set out for these important though invisible guests. Money, too, is placed on the table, as a bribe, for it is believed that in the gift of these fates are all good things as well as bad.

Under no circumstances must a child's beauty be alluded to while the Moral may be in the house, or they will certainly make its good looks disappear.

Joe, Frank and Warren were discussing Christmas in Eastern avenue.

"I've been working all day decorating our house for Santa Claus," said Warren, with a knowing wink at Frank.

"Yes, sir," quickly exclaimed Joe, the youngest of the three, "Santa will fix our tree. We've got service at our house."—Detroit Free Press.

"That proves nothing on him in the way of a big appetite. So does a bird."

Imagine his consternation, my wife's horror, and the shouts of laughter from the passing car, as he pushed the wrong button and turned the powerful lights of our car full on my wife's thinly clad form.

At the first night's camp we drove to the East and camped along the way.

The first night's camp was made in a field along a side road, far enough from the main road to avoid many passersby.

However, in the midst of our bedtime preparations a car with bright lights turned off the main road and came toward us. My wife, who was tending the rear seat of our car for her husband, gathered her kimono about her, and ran around in front of our machine in case the spotlight from the other car should be turned in our direction.

DANDRUFF WILL GET EVERY HAIR IN HEAD

Let "Danderine" check nasty scurf and stop hair falling out.

To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair usually stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Soon every hair on your scalp shows new life, vigor, brightness, thickness and more color.—Adv.

Head Stuffed From CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness, No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed up with a cold or nasty catarrh.—Adv.

Why DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Novelty in Spring Blouses

IN BLOUSES and smocks, as in everything else that has been presented so far for spring, variety is a most noteworthy feature of the displays; variety in styles, in materials, in design. It is probably due to the growing demand for "exclusive" styles on the part of many people who have grown exacting within the last year or two. They appear to be willing to pay long prices for "something different." Blouse and smock designers, therefore, are following the lead of the milliners and excursions into all sorts of by-paths that lead a little way off the main traveled road. But there is room for some generalizing in summing up the styles. Blouses and smocks interest women much earlier than suits and coats for spring. Many of the choicest ones are made at home, and even when this is not the case, the assembling of blouses for spring and summer wear begins early and takes time.

Short peplum styles and short sleeves appear over the horizon for summer wear. There are plenty of Russian blouse models and plenty of long sleeves—the latter greatly varied in design; there are many overblouse models, there are collared and colored models—the former in the majority. There are tailored and there are untrussed types, but taken altogether it may be said that blouses and smocks were never more beautiful than they are today.

A handsome smock of georgette crepe with a cape collar is designed in a way to set off very prettily the abundant embroidery in silk floss that adorns it. The collar, sleeve and skirt of the smock are encircled with this work, which usually is done in colors, one like that in the crepe and one contrasting. In the smock pictured the sleeves are three-quarter length—a safe choice, since it is possible to shorten them for mid-summer, and a novel feature appears in the narrow velvet ribbon threaded through eyelets in the embroidery.

For confining the smock at the waist line the choice lies between narrow girdles of the same material as the garment or silk cord and tassels like that shown in the picture, which seems an appropriate finish for a smock so richly embroidered.

Styles in Children's Frocks

CHILDREN'S clothes for spring reflect the same simplicity of design and painstaking workmanship that rules in the styles for grown people. Wherever this reaction toward simple things came from and however much we may welcome it in the apparel of grown people, it is even more welcome in children's clothes. Gentlemen applaud it—the exquisite neatness and finish that are dearer than all else to them are the things that give character to the new styles. After these items it is noticeable that ingenuity in the management of details, is depended on to furnish points of interest in the composition of garments.

There are two gingham frocks for little girls, shown in the picture above. To begin with, the patterns of the gingham are of the simplest kinds, checks and crossbars so good that they have always been produced. We are not running after strange goals in cotton fabrics this spring, but instead are pinning our faith to old favorites. The dress at the left, of which both front and back views are pictured, is suited to a girl from eight to twelve years old and is made of shepherd's check in a light brown and white gingham. The bodice, extended below the waistline at the front, forms a folded giraffe that merges into a sash tied into a bow, with short pointed ends at the back. It has a rounded sailor collar and deep cuffs inlaid with plain light brown. One of those ingenuities and pleasing finishing touches appears in the crescent-shaped pockets.

For a smaller girl a pretty crossbar gingham is cut with plain bodice on the bias of the material and skirt on the straight. A white frill about the neck and white facing on the odd pockets give class to this simple little frock. The body and skirt are set together and a narrow belt of the gingham finishes up the dress.

About New Frocks.

Many of the new frocks are combinations of flowered georgette and taffeta. These dresses are very youthful, the georgette forming an overdress, the taffeta matching the predominating shade in the crepe.

Hats for Formal Wear.

Ultra smart hats for formal wear are surprisingly trimmed with aigrettes and paradise plumage—surprising, because the cost of such trimmings is now almost prohibitive.

For Novelty Spring Wraps.

There are many plans on foot for the novelty spring wraps. Many have the short side effects with the long front and back.

A Simple Help.

When stitching a long seam on the machine, use wire paper clips to hold edge.

Versatile Blue New Color.

Versatile blue is one of the new evening colors.

The KITCHEN CABINET

No king or nobility or other person or class can give a government which is best for the people, simply because nobody can give you what is best for you for that which is best for you is what you work out for yourself. A benevolent monarch can give his subjects everything except the one thing needful—responsibility.

The most precious, God-given privilege of a man is his right to make his own mistakes, to stub his own toes and burn his own fingers. Only so he learns and grows.—Dr. Frank Crane.

MISCELLANEOUS DESSERTS.

How to keep the house attractive, the table supplied with appetizing viands, and the members of the household in perfect health has been a problem since the days of Eve. With the increasing severity of domestic labor, the question of getting the necessary work done is becoming acute. Good cookery and dainty meals are of vital importance, but no woman who "has a soul above buttons" cares to spend the best part of her time cooking. To simplify our living at less cost of energy without too great loss of the seemingly important things is the need of the day.

It is possible to have wholesome food and attractive desserts made with but little time. As expense must enter into the account of 95 per cent of the American housewife's plans it is not so easy to have things good, inexpensive and easy to prepare, together with variety.

A steamed pudding, which may be made just before dishing up the dinner and allowed to steam 15 minutes, is:

Fifteen-Minute Pudding.—This pudding meets all of the qualifications, is good, attractive in appearance, not expensive and is easy to prepare. Sift a cupful of flour with a teaspoonful of baking powder and a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt; add half a cupful of milk; beat well and drop a spoonful into buttered custard cups; add a tablespoonful or two of canned cherries, juice and all, or any juicy rich fruit; add another spoonful of the batter and place the cups in a pan. Pour in boiling water to come up halfway on the cups, cover and cook 15 minutes without uncovering. Serve with cream and sugar, poured round the unmolded pudding.

"It's terrible brave to try to save a girl on a runaway horse; You could do that of course; But did you ever think of trying To keep from crying When you're tired and hungry and cross; You couldn't do that of course."

POTATO DISHES.

Beginning with soup and ending with dessert, one may have potatoes in every course in the meal. One would hardly care for such a meal, but it is interesting to note how valuable the potato is as a food.

Potato Cream Soup.—Take a cupful of boiled mashed potatoes; scald one quart of milk, and two slices of onion in a double boiler. Rub the potatoes through a sieve, and add the milk, removing the onion; put into a double boiler to heat. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, mix and pour some of the hot mixture over the thickening, and cook until smooth. Add to the soup with a little chopped parsley.

Mashed Potatoes.—Chop cold boiled or baked potatoes into small bits. Season with salt and pepper and chopped parsley. For one quart of chopped potatoes, add three tablespoonfuls of butter. Beat the butter and turn in the potatoes; stir until they begin to brown, then add one-fourth cupful of thin cream, and set back to brown on the back of the stove. Fold like an omelet, and serve with the brown crust on top. Garnish with parsley. Do not put potatoes through a meat chopper for this dish, as the bits should not be at all mushy. A good hash should always be chopped in the chopping bowl. Meat loaf is much better done so, rather than ground in the meat grinder.

Potato Cake.—Cream together one cupful of sugar and half a cupful of butter substitute; add the yolk of an egg and beat again; add one cupful of hot mashed potato, half a cupful of sweet milk or cold water alternately with two cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix two squares of grated chocolate in the hot potato before adding it to the mixture. Add one-third of a teaspoonful each of cinnamon, cloves and grated nutmeg and one-third of a cupful of chopped walnuts. Fold in the beaten white of the egg. Bake in a loaf or in layers. This cake will keep moist for weeks.

Potato Candy.—Bake two medium-sized potatoes, and while hot remove from their skins into a warm mixing bowl. Mash until all the lumps are removed, then add three pounds of powdered sugar, a half cupful at a time. The amount of sugar will depend upon the size of the potatoes. When thick enough to mold add flavoring, nuts, fruit or any color.

Cleaning White Paint.
Spirits of ammonia used in sufficient quantities to soften the water and ordinary hard soap will make a white painted surface look white and clean with half the effort of any other method. Care should be taken not to have too much ammonia.

Her Cordial Indorsement.

$2.00 PER YEAR AFTER FEB., 15th., 1920.

On and after February 15th, 1920, the price of The Crittenden Press will be $2.00 per year.

The sheet of paper on which your paper is printed costs us 1 1-2 cts. in Memphis, and the price of everything we use seemingly has no limit upwards.

We will accept new subscribers and renewals at $1.50 until the above date but no one will be allowed to pay for more than two years in advance at this rate.

And we will try to make the paper worth the money.

W. F. and W. P. HOGARD

THE CRITTENDEN PRESS

Marion, Ky., Jan. 30, 1920.

W. F. and W. P. HOGARD,
Editors and Publishers.

Entered as second-class matter February 9th, 1918, at the postoffice at Marion, Kentucky, under the Act of Congress of March 3rd, 1879.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

$1.50 per year cash in advance.

THE CRITTENDEN PRESS

When my son and I bought the paper we hoped only to make a good living and expected to have to work hard to do that. Had conditions not changed materially we had planned to place the subscription price at one dollar per year—and did try it for one month. We have been gratified that with little effort on our part in the way of soliciting our list has grown steadily.

In the past six months conditions have very materially changed. Paper has advanced 300 per cent and so has all the material we use advanced. Labor has advanced as well, so has cost of living. So it places us in this position—either advance the price of The Press or discontinue its publication. The latter we cannot afford to consider for a moment. We have a conviction that The Press is one of the necessary institutions of the country.

No reasonable man will for once ask us to publish the paper at a loss. Now fellow citizens you can't ask us to keep the price of the paper down to one dollar per year as it was when paper could be bought for two cents a pound and we have to pay six times that much now. Then I labored day after day for fifty cents for ten or twelve hours work. Now we are compelled to pay more than six times that amount for nine hours work. In those days it was a fortunate farmer that received more than 25 cents a bushel for his corn. Now he gets $2.00 or more.

I write this as an explanation so the friends of The Press might know the reason for advancing the price. Country papers all over the country are doing it—they must.

Now we are not discouraged, but encouraged. We have had a rocky road to travel since we took over the paper. The fire burned us as you know. We saved the key to the front door. Since then we have been so crowded that we have fallen far below our ideal of what we hope to make The Press. But we are certainly gratified that our friends have been lenient and forbearing in our unfortunate condition and also with our blunders. And we wish to thank our patrons for any and all interest you have shown in our welfare. We face a rising sun and are going eastward in search of light.

Sincerely your friend,
W. F. HOGARD.

MUD

Public roads are next to impassable.

Surely the citizens of this great old county will not suffer this to continue much longer.

No wonder the splendid young men growing up go elsewhere to make their homes. The road conditions hinder all progress. Churches are deserted—they become like martin boxes in the winter season.

The public schools are of little profit because of road conditions. Teachers are discouraged and seek other occupations.

All business has been paralyzed for weeks and this has been allowed to go on for all these years WITH NO IMPROVEMENT. There's plenty of material on every hand. If this is allowed to go on it will continue to prevent enterprising men to come here and invest capital and more than that our enterprising citizens will continue to leave the county and we will be left with a care—nothing, know-nothing, DO nothing citizenship.

From which may the good Lord deliver us.

This writer heard a man say: "I won't allow a newspaper in my home—would not be informed. All such are headed toward anarchy—already in heathendom as far as he is concerned."

The good roads question has not been agitated too soon. Let's agitate and work and pay money—anything to get good roads, not only on paper but begin construction during 1920.

W. F. HOGARD

OUR SCHOOL

There is nothing of more importance to any town than its school system.

Not even waterworks or electric lights should come first in the thoughts of our citizens.

It is a well known fact that the local graded school is overcrowded—and has been for some time.

It is also pretty generally known that the school board owns one of the most beautiful sites in the state of Kentucky—on which it is proposed to build a new high school.

Just why every one concerned in this matter—and that should be every citizen in this county—has seemingly lapsed into a state of coma on this proposition is too deep for The Press to fathom.

No one will dispute the fact that a new building is sorely needed for the high school.

If money is lacking to start this building program it is a simple matter to vote a bond issue for the necessary funds.

And The Press would not be carried through the mails if we said what we think about anyone who is so small and pusillanimous that they would oppose such a bond issue on the ground that it would increase the tax rate—or any other reason.

Let's start some agitation for this new high school NOW. The columns of The Press are open to the public for discussion.

Let's show the outside world that we can do something at least. We may be the laughing stock of this end of the state because we haven't waterworks—because we can't settle the electric light proposition—because we get mud to our ears before we get outside the city limits—because the local paper carries more Fredonia advertising than it does of local merchants—anyway let's get a school plant that is adequate for the needs of our children.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING

A few years ago anyone who advocated "vocational" training in schools was considered a faddist. The majority of people did not then know what the word meant. In a few schools where they set up forges and other simple equipment, the idea was laughed to scorn by so-called "practical people."

Yet this idea of vocational training is rapidly spreading over the country. Young men are taking courses in such trades as automobile repairing, plumbing, machinists' work, tool making, electricity, drafting, pattern making, etc. Young women are studying domestic science, millinery, dressmaking, and other crafts. In the country towns the young people study agricultural methods.

Some people say it is not the business of schools to teach these trades, which they can learn when they begin to work. Yet those that have this training will succeed much better.

The young man without trade education is likely to have to do one thing over and over again so he never gets a general knowledge of his trade. The one with the vocational education knows his work thoroughly, he has higher standards and he knows how to accomplish the most in the least time.

Business interests are generally in favor of this form of school work. They know it will add to their taxes. But it will give them more efficient producers and help them build up bigger businesses.

The town or state that provides agricultural instruction in rural schools will turn out more successful farmers than the one that doesn't. A state that lags behind blocks the way to its own progress.

TWO SPOTS

The best fair price committee is the enterprising business man who advertises in The Press.

Anyway the "wets" will be permitted to have intoxicating music.

Some of the people who talk the most about the wrongs of labor have more callouses where they sit down than they do on their hands.

The capitalist's indignation against his striking employees is somewhat mitigated when he finds he can pass on their demands to the public with a little additional profit.

It is getting so a girl can't buy a fur coat without being taken for a ten a week stenographer.

And if you buy a $15 silk shirt it is pretty sure you are working for wages and not a salary.

While the world has been standing still for several months waiting for an agreement to be reached on the peace treaty, it is consoling that the dignity of the Senate is being preserved by avoiding hasty action.

Traveling man complains that barbers cut your hair too hastily nowadays. Probably he offered them no opportunity for conversation.

It was of course merely a coincidence that the miners found out how their sufferings called for a strike just at the time when the public began to need the coal to avoid freezing.

Being told by Thomas Carlyle and other philosophers that they should cultivate hero worship, the present generation adores movie stars and football players.

While coal may be very short before the winter is over, one can feel confident that there will be sufficient coal smoke to soot up a large number of houses painted last year.

Formerly people threw away their shoes when they began to wrinkle. At present prices they discard 'em when the stockings get too conspicuous through the holes.

Lem Bozeman says there is nothing new in the community center idea. The barber shops have been providing this feature of modern enlightenment and intellectual exchange for many years.

The popular girls at a dance usually have to spend several hours the next day cleaning the hoof prints off their white shoes.

People who are selling the wood alcohol whiskey should be made to demonstrate the virtues of the beverage by drinking it themselves.

All people want nowadays is the eight hour day—with Saturday afternoons, one nap and a couple of smoking periods, wash up on the boss' time and a holiday every other week.

Many of the kickers on high living costs continue to telephone to the stores to have the highest priced goods delivered to their back doors.

That is of course IF they can get the store on the telephone.

But it don't cost anything to hope that some day we shall have good telephone service.

A Chicago store committee says a man's suit of clothes should sell for $24.50. When it finds a good one selling for that it should appoint a traffic cop to keep the sidewalk and doorways clear.

The favorite sons who are fooling with presidential bees are going to get stung.

DAUGHTER HAD TO QUIT WORK MOTHER SAYS

Inactivity Would Have Lasted Longer, Had Not Trutona Brought Aid.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 23.—Because it has relieved her daughter of troubles which kept her from her work for five long months, Mrs. Josephine Brown, a well known Louisville woman of 721 Washington street recently made the following interesting statement regarding Trutona, the perfect tonic:

"My daughter had been suffering with stomach trouble and nervousness for several months. In fact, the trouble became so severe that she couldn't work for five months. It seemed that everything she ate would sour in her stomach, causing gas formations and a bloating feeling. The gas seemed to form around her heart, causing her much pain.

"My daughter's nerves were so unstrung that she could hardly sleep at night and she would get up in the mornings almost as tired as when she went to bed. But Trutona has steadied her nerves and she's at last able to rest well at night. This medicine has relieved her of the indigestion, too, and her bowels are regular now. We think Trutona is a great medicine."

Trutona is now being introduced and explained in Marion at J. H. Orme's drug store. Adv

Just A Word of Warning to OWNERS OF DOGS!

Every person in Crittenden County, owning or harboring a dog is supposed to procure a license and tag for such dog, and upon failing or refusing to comply with the dog law, such person so offending, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be adjudged to PAY A FINE of not exceeding ONE HUNDRED $100.00 DOLLARS, or to undergo an imprisonment of not exceeding THREE "3" MONTHS, or both, at the discretion of the Court

I see from the Clerk's records, that up to February first of last year, he had sold ONE THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-SEVEN dog license, and this year up to January the 20th, he has only sold three hundred and fourteen. Now it is not just and fair to this small number of 314 who have paid out their money for their dog license, that the overwhelming majority of dog owners over the county violate this law and not suffer the penalty. So when you are brought before the Court to pay the penalty, you have no one to blame, save yourself.

THE MEANS-ANDERSON COMPANY.

Many a deep lesson has been taught, many a sermon delivered all the more effectively because it came in the guise of a story or a song, while the heart has been opened with laughter or transported on the wings of melody.

The Means-Anderson company are offered with no claim except that of being musical entertainers par excellence. Their personnel and program are especially designed to fill that place in the Lyceum, and never has it been filled better.

The charming personalities of these three young ladies animate their art and quickly kindle the fires of good cheer in every audience. Their versatility insures a program so varied and rich in contrasts, so full of startling surprises, of humor and pathos, of beauty and power, that every chord of the human heart is touched. Many larger organizations come far short of the entrancing appeal and wholesome delight of the Means-Anderson company.

Edna Means, entertainer, formerly dean of the College of Oratory of Highland Park university, is more than an ordinary artist. She is a young woman of exceptional intellectual power and wide experience. Her mastery of her art, her charming manner and joyous good nature have won her audiences from east and west.

Eva Anderson, violinist, character singer, pianist, as a violinist possesses a beautiful tone and reliable technique. She does not try to win her audiences by pyrotechnical feats. For four seasons her splendid musicianship has enabled her to make a lasting impression with her listeners. She puts personality into her playing. She wins first by her personal charm; then with her music she leads her audiences to increased delight. Miss Anderson is unusually versatile and contributes largely to the program with her character songs.

Hilda Brady, dramatic soprano and pianist, with a voice of rare power and refreshing sweetness, has the gift of singing into the hearts as well as the ears of her audience. Though one of the younger singers on the platform, she has stepped into a place of distinction and has the promise of a glorious future.

CHILLS, COLDS, FEVERISHNESS

Black-Draught Is Used by Virginia Lady for Colds, Fever and Other Troubles With Fine Results.

Rocky Mount, Va.—Miss Mae Chittwood, of this place, recently stated: "I have used Black-Draught for colds and stomach trouble and certainly have found it very satisfactory.

When I would feel bad and feverish, as though I was taking a fresh cold, I would make a good cup of Black-Draught tea and it would soon set me all right.

I can recommend it as a splendid laxative and gladly do so. You may publish my statement."

When you feel chilly, tired, feverish, headachy and fear that you are taking cold, take a good dose of the old, reliable, liver medicine you have heard so much about—Theodor's Black-Draught. It is made from purely vegetable ingredients, acts in a gentle, natural way, and by helping to drive out poisonous waste matter from your system, it will often, if taken in time, prevent a chill from developing into a cold.

Thousands of people, during the past 70 years, have found Black-Draught of benefit in such cases.

Try it, the next time you chill or sneeze.—Adv.

Extravagance a la Mode.
"I understand that Isobel Gilmere entertains regardless of expense."

"I should say she does. She doesn't care what a dish costs if she wants it. Yesterday, when she gave a lunch to her dancing club, there were two hard-boiled eggs in the center of the table, and every guest got a slice."

The office boy had made his hundredth mistake. The boss sent for him.

The Boss—Have you anything to say for yourself? If I made mistakes like you I'd never be where I am.

The Boy—Yes, but if we were all like you, you wouldn't be where you are, either.

(The boy is still on the job.)—Boys' Life.

MR. OR MRS. DYSPEPTIC

Get rid of Indigestion and Stomach Worries with "Pape's Diapepsin"

"Really does" put weak, disordered stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness due to acid fermentation—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach antacid and regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments and turns sour, you belch gas and eructate undigested food or water; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness. A box of Pape's Diapepsin tablets costs so little at drug stores too.—Adv.

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP.

A cold is probably the most common of all disorders and when neglected is apt to be most dangerous. Statistics show that more than three times as many people died from influenza last year, as were killed in the greatest war the world has ever known. For the last fifty-three years known, Boschee's Syrup has been used for coughs, bronchitis, colds, throat irritation and especially lung troubles. It gives the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectation in the morning. Made in America and used in the homes of thousands of families all over the civilized world. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

MISS. GOVERNOR IS INAUGURATED

LEE M. RUSSELL IS INDUCTED INTO OFFICE AS CHIEF OF GREAT STATE.

MESSAGE IS BUSINESS LIKE

Weather Was Perfect and Ceremonies Were Smoothest and Most Auspicious Known For Many Years.

Jackson, Miss.—The day of the inauguration of another governor of Mississippi in the person of Lee M. Russell passed into history as probably the most enjoyable, the smoothest and most auspicious of the series remained clear and the temperature mild. While the attendance from out of town was not notably large, the turnout of local people and the interest manifested by them was greater than usual.

The series of functions concluded with a brilliant reception in the capital rotunda, followed by the inaugural ball at the Edwards Hotel.

There is no note of pessimism to be found in the inaugural message of Gov. Lee M. Russell delivered to the body of law-makers elected to office along with him.

Among the recommendations made by the new governor are: Creation of a bureau of markets and publicity, either as a branch of the A. and M. college work, or as an independent organization to cooperate with county agricultural agents in finding markets for farm products and exploiting the resources of the state.

Adoption of the budget system for handling the state's finances. Establishment of a board of uniform legislation, similar to that in the state of Wisconsin, consisting of not exceeding three first-class lawyers to meet three months prior to each legislative session, and to whom all measures shall be referred before being submitted to the legislature.

Formation of a department of labor, with powers similar to the federal department of the same name, to which should be added the duties of factory inspection.

Employment of a purchasing agent by the state, whose duty it shall be to buy supplies for all state institutions. The governor believes this would save many thousands of dollars each year.

Adoption of a policy of reforestation for the cut-over pine land districts. Establishment of at least four new state charity hospitals, one in the delta in North Mississippi, one in East Mississippi, and one in South Central Mississippi, and enlargement of hospitals now supported by the state.

Retention of state board of pardons, and taking pardoning power out of the hands of the governor by constitutional amendment.

Building of state armory and adequate appropriation for the national guard.

BIG BLIZZARD AT CHICAGO

Storm Hits Northwest—Wire and Railroad Service Paralyzed—Street Cars Stopped.

Chicago.—Chicago was held in the grip of the most severe blizzard of the winter. The storm came out of the northwest and sheets of snow were driven across Lake Michigan by a 25-mile-an-hour gale. Railroad and telegraph service was crippled over a wide section of country. In the city street car traffic was demoralized. Great Lakes shipping was imperiled by the storm.

MARSHAL FOCH TO SURVEY SITUATION

DOUBT EXPRESSED HERE OF REPORT HE WILL PLAN MILITARY DRIVE.

WILL ADVISE THE POLES

Military Situation in Baltic States Also Expected to Come Under Scrutiny of the Great French Commander.

Washington.—Officials here are confident that Marshal Foch of France, reported as about to leave Paris for Warsaw, will not go to Poland to arrange an allied drive against the Russian Bolsheviks. While official confirmation of the plan of Marshal Foch has not yet been received, it has been expected for some time.

The understanding here is that the former allied-American commander-in-chief is merely going to Warsaw and the present eastern fighting fronts to make a general survey of the situation, primarily with a view to determining what Poland requires for her army in the way of military equipment, ammunition and other supplies.

It is expected Marshal Foch also will visit the Denikine front and probably Roumania, since there is a prospect that the Bolshevik army also may seek to wrest Bessarabia from Roumania. The military situation in the Baltic states also is expected to come under the scrutiny of the great French commander.

There have been no intimations whatever, however, that the supreme council has determined to take aggressive military action against the Bolsheviks, certainly not unless the red army attempts to smash the Polish army. Poland has perhaps a half million troops and properly armed and equipped it is believed they will be more than able to hold their own against any forces the Bolsheviks may send against them. The Poles, even without adequate equipment with few men in uniform and many in rags, so far have not yielded to the Bolsheviks at any important point.

Marshal Foch is expected to advise with the Polish authorities regarding the advisability of drawing in the fighting front to a point which approximates the frontier of New Poland as tentatively outlined at Paris. The Polish army now is far from the border of Poland and one reason for a possible Bolshevik military onslaught against it in force would be to push the line off Russian territory, the advance into Russian territory was made at least in part against the advice of the supreme council, but in connection with the forward movement of Denikine's forces when it appeared the Cossack commander would succeed in eliminating the Bolshevik forces.

Mayor Paine said that the small number of cases reported and the clearing weather are both hopeful indications, and he hopes that within a few days the closing order can be abated.

HOLLAND WILL NOT GIVE UP WILHELM

HOLDS THAT PEACE TREATY IS NOT BINDING ON THE NETHERLANDS.

ANSWERS ALLIED POWERS

Constituent Laws of Country Have Made It Refuge for the Vanquished in International Conflicts.

Paris.—Holland's reply to the allied demand for the surrender of the ex-saizer for trial is an unqualified refusal. The reason for rejection of the allied demand as set forth in the official note signed by Van Karnebeck, minister of foreign affairs, is that the right of sanctuary has been a tradition of the Dutch nation for centuries and that in addition the laws of the nation forbid the surrender to an outside power of any person who has sought refuge within its borders.

Among other things, the reply says: "The queen has the honor to observe, first, that obligations which for Germany could have resulted from article 228 of the treaty of peace cannot serve to determine the duty of Holland, which is not a party to the treaty."

"The government of the queen, moved by imperishable reasons, cannot view the question raised by the demands of the powers except from the point of view of its own duty. It was absolutely unconnected with the origin of the war and has maintained and not without difficulty, its neutrality to the end. It finds itself then face to face with facts of the war in a position different from that of the powers."

"It rejects with energy all suspicion of wishing to cover with its sovereign right and its moral authority violations of the essential principles of the solidarity of nations; but it cannot recognize an international duty to associate itself with this act of international policy of the powers."

"Now, neither the constituent laws of the kingdom, which are based upon the principles of law universally recognized, nor a respectable secular tradition which has made this country always a ground of refuge for the vanquished in international conflicts, permit the government of Holland to defer to the desire of the powers by withdrawing from the former emperor the benefit of its laws and this tradition."

"Justice and national honor of which respect is a sacred duty, oppose this. The Netherlands people, moved by the sentiments to which in history the world has done justice, could not betray the faith of those who have confided themselves to their free institutions."

"WE MUST GET THERE IN TIME TO SAVE HIM."

Synopsis.—Hilary Askew, a young American, inherits from an uncle a hundred square miles of forest in Quebec. Upon taking possession, he discovers all sorts of queer things. Lamartine, his uncle's lawyer, tells him the property is comparatively worthless and tries to induce him to sell. Lafa Connell, the mill foreman, tells him his uncle has been systematically robbed. Morris, his manager, is associated with the Ste. Marie company, a rival concern owned by Brousseau, the "boss" of the region. Madeleine, the beautiful daughter of Seigneur Rosny, original owner of Askew's land, is pursued by Brousseau, who has her father in his power. The hero decides to stay and manage the property. He dispatches Morris and makes Connell manager. He whips "Black" Pierre, foreman of a gang of Brousseau's men cutting on his land. He defies Brousseau. Leblanc, his boss jobber, deserters to the enemy. From Father Lucien Askew learns the story of Marie Dupont, daughter of the captain of a lumber schooner. The girl's mother, now dead, had been betrayed and she herself is looked on askance and has few friends. Marie knows the name of her mother's betrayer, but has never revealed it to her father. Askew finds Madeleine Rosny hostile to him. Askew and Connell visit Simeon Duval's dance hall in Ste. Marie. Revenue officers raid it and Askew is blamed for the raid. He and Connell rescue Marie Dupont. Askew saves Madeleine Rosny when her horse runs away. She gives the warning, "Look to your son!" and then the mill boom breaks and Askew's logs are carried away to the Ste. Lawrence. Who saved the boom? Baptiste, the jealous lover of Marie, deserters Askew. Brousseau brings about a strike of Askew's mill hands. Askew and Connell part in anger over the strike. Askew starts to stop Louis Duval from opening a saloon in Ste. Marie. Madeleine asks him not to go. Askew breaks up the liquor selling and runs into a trap, where he fights four of his enemies.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

Pierre reeled, and once again Hilary leaped and caught him under the chin. But this time he was not quick enough to repeat his former maneuver. Leblanc struck at him from behind. The upward thrust of the blow penetrated his heart and it struck where Leblanc intended; but, by a miracle of luck, it passed between Hilary's arm and his body, only just grazing a rib. The point of the blade caught in the lining of the coat and, before Leblanc could withdraw his arm, Hilary pressed his own left arm against his body, catching Leblanc's hand there and imprisoning it.

This movement swung him round, forcing him to release Pierre, and the ensuing bovine rush which the outlaw made threw them both against the embrasure of the second window, on the opposite side of the door. Men were yelling outside, and a furious hammering was maintained, but none of the fighters was conscious either of the shouts or of the blows. As Hilary and Leblanc fell against the window-sash, the rattled wood broke inward. The second lamp toppled and then crashed down beside them, going out as the first had done, and leaving the stable in complete darkness. With a swift movement Hilary managed to draw Leblanc's arm further through his. With the pressure of his combined biceps and triceps he could hold it there indefinitely, if he had only Leblanc's content with. But he could not use his right hand to force Leblanc's open and take the knife, which the jobber was making frantic efforts to use. He needed his right hand for Pierre; and Leblanc managed to twist the knife so that its edge was against Hilary's side, and with the sinews of his fingers he was scraping it backward and forward, ripping open the coat lining and inflicting a succession of scratches and little punctures under the heart.

Hilary lacked suddenly, jarring Leblanc's spine against the edge of the window shelf. Leblanc groaned and made a frantic effort to twist himself free, hucking at Hilary's shins and shouting to Pierre to finish the job. Pierre's forward rush had flung him between the two. Hilary felt him groping in the darkness, trying to gauge the position in which he was leaning; Pierre was evidently puzzled by the position of the two, and by the termination of Leblanc's shoulder against Hilary's. Hilary sensed that Pierre had finally satisfied himself and had raised his right arm to strike. He flung away the revolver, which he still held, reached up and seized the hand as it was about to descend.

Thus holding the right wrist of each of his assailants, he plunged forward, bringing them to the floor. He let go suddenly and sprang to his feet. Pierre's knife grazed his sole; as Leblanc tried to rise Hilary caught him beneath the chin with his foot. Leblanc groaned and his head went back on the floor.

That left only Pierre in action. Hilary withdrew a step or two. He heard the outlaw breathing heavily as he crouched in the darkness. For the first time he began to be aware of the knocking at the door. It sounded now as if a crowbar were being applied. The yells of the lumbermen came to his ears; but the absurdity of his position did not dawn on him, nor the fact that, when he had settled with Pierre he would have to reckon with the mob outside. He meant to deal with Pierre as he had dealt with the others. But in the darkness he could guide himself only by Pierre's breathing, which sounded now on one side of him and now on the other. Further away Leblanc was moaning.

Out of the darkness Pierre leaped forward. The knife blade flashed past Hilary, who got Pierre by the arms. They began to wrestle as they had done that day in the woods. Here Pierre was Hilary's superior; his physical strength was greater, though he had no force in his blows; and, though Hilary had beaten him that day at the camp, it was by a stratagem which could not be repeated successfully. Gradually the strength of Pierre's arms began to tell. The two panted, straining together, but Pierre winning. The knife arm was surely slipping out of Hilary's clutch. It reached upward. But at the moment when it was evading him Hilary dropped Pierre's left hand and struck the outlaw between the eyes. As he did so he heard the breathing on the other side of him.

Pierre staggered, and in a flash Hilary had both his hands upon Pierre's right wrist, leading the veins and sinews till the fist opened. The knife clattered upon the floor. Hilary stooped and seized it.

That was the precise instant when

him. You will do all you can to save him, will you not, Mr. Connell?" asked the girl, looking earnestly at Lafa. As their eyes met Lafa realized suddenly that her agitation had more than an impersonal cause behind it. The swift knowledge came home to him with a shock; it cleared up many things, among them the folds of rancor that had clouded his mind.

"I'll do everything that's in my power, Mademoiselle," he said. "I'll stand by him—I'll fight for him if there's any fighting."

"There will be none," said Father Lucien. "But Mademoiselle Rosny understands now what Brousseau is. She knows his character and his evil mind. And she has learned, fortunately, before it is too late."

Not another word was spoken. The buggy descended the hill and rolled toward St. Boniface. As it crossed the rickety bridge they heard the sound of distant shouting in Duval's saloon. About the front of it was gathered the entire male population of St. Boniface, gesticulating and chattering.

They fell back in dismay as the cure leaped from the buggy and assisted Madeleine Rosny down. Lafa followed. He tried to urge the girl to remain in the rig, but she paid no attention to him. She listened with anxious intensity as the cure addressed the crowd, her lips compressed, her bosom rising and falling quickly. All eyes were fixed on Father Lucien, but each, as the priest turned to him, tried to shrink back behind his neighbor.

They were pointing inside the saloon. The cure hurried through the doorway, Madeleine Rosny immediately behind him, and Lafa following them. The saloon, though lit by an oil lamp, was empty, as seemed to be the dark stable beyond it, seen through the open doorway.

Father Lucien snatched down the lamp and carried it hastily toward the stable door. He raised it and looked in, then turned and tried to bar Madeleine from entering. But she pushed past him, saw, cried, wrung her hands, and ran into the middle space between the rows of stalls. Lafa, following her, saw her seated upon the floor, and Hilary, covered with blood, lying stretched out and motionless, his head in her lap. She bent over him and Lafa never forgot the look of anguish in her eyes, or the tension of the white face.

Still supporting Hilary's head, she began tearing long strips of her petticoat, frantically, as if she hardly knew what she was doing. Hilary's clothing was so drenched with blood that it was difficult to determine where the wound lay. There were livid bruises about his mouth and cheeks, and on his forehead, as if his assailants, after stabbing him, had kicked him.

Father Lucien half turned him over and, uttering an exclamation, pointed to the shoulder, from which fresh blood was slowly welling. Lafa saw that Hilary was alive; he breathed very faintly, but his face was the color of death, more bloodless than that of Madeleine. The cure began cutting away the coat, then the lining, which would not come with it; then the shirt. He looked up.

"Bring some water," he said.

Lafa hurried out, the few curious lumbermen scattering in panic and scurrying before him. As he stood among them, shouting, a window in a nearby house went up, and a woman handed out a pail, three parts full. Lafa took it, as if he resented the shanty crowd slowly gathered behind him again. He hurried into the stable. The cure took a strip of the girl's petticoat, dipped it in the pail and began to cleanse the wound, pursing his lips and shaking his head the while. Lafa could see that the wound, while not long, was terribly deep, and it was still bleeding. It was impossible to do more than clean it superficially, owing to the need for haste. Having done this, Father Lucien made a pad and placed it in position, while Lafa looked on.

significant afterward that, wild though her words were, and untrue, he did not then deny them.

Madeline looked up and, meeting his eyes, grew calm. Lafa stepped forward, bent down and gently raised Hilary's head from her knee. He placed his hands beneath the shoulders, supporting them, while Father Lucien lifted the lower part of the body, and thus they carried the stricken man through the shanty street toward the buggy.

The cure made a motion to Lafa to enter. "You and Mademoiselle Rosny will drive to my house," he said. "As there is no room for me, I walk. I give you the key, because my housekeeper is gone to bed and must not be frightened."

"No, to the Chateau," said Madeline Rosny. "Do you think he shall go anywhere else, monsieur, when he is like this?"

Her voice rang proudly, the tone admitted of no opposition. The cure was silent.

Lafa drew Hilary into the bottom of the buggy and crouched there, supporting the head and the upper part of his body. But Madeleine, watchful, uttered a low cry. A little blood was leaking through the bandage. She hastened to the other side of the rig and began adjusting it, while the cure turned toward her, which was looking on in panicky silence, broken only by low words and mutterings.

"This is a bad night's work that you have done," he cried. "You shall pay for it, every man here, and the assassins too. I know them all."

The man who stepped forward was the foreman of the mill, by name MacPherson, a decent workman and a descendant of one of Wolfe's Highlanders who had settled along the coast and perpetuated their names and something of their stanch character, if nothing else of their race survived.

"We are not all guilty, Monsieur Teaser," he said. "I knew nothing of this until the deed was done, or I should have used every effort to prevent it. These people asked me to speak for them. They say that they broke down the stable door and saved his life when he was about to be cut to pieces."

"His life!" cried Father Lucien, scornfully. "His life hangs by a thread; and if he dies his murderers shall hang for it. And you are guilty equally," he continued, addressing the crowd, which seemed to melt under his burning tones. "You left him lie there and bleed to death. And listen further. You think that Monsieur Askew brought the revenue officers to Ste. Marie. Do I not hate Ste. Marie more than he? Yet even I would not bring the officers here until I had used every means to clean up the evil there. It was Monsieur Morris who brought them here, for he told me so."

There was a sensation at the priest's words. An excited bubble broke out, and the bandaging, halted with one foot upon the step of the buggy and turned to the lumbermen.

"Yes, you left him to die!" she cried in scorn. "You were afraid, and you forgot that strangers who come upon our land, upon our seignior, are under our protection." Her eyes blazed as she denounced them. "You have forgotten your ancient loyalty in these days, Messieurs. You have no memory of your Seigneur and what you owe to him—still your Seigneur, although you no longer grind and hew for him! You have forgotten!"

There was another movement among the crowd. Her words seemed to stir them even more than the priest's had done. "No, no, mademoiselle!" cried several voices. "No! We have not forgotten!"

MacPherson came forward again. "They thought," he said, "Mademoiselle, that Monsieur Brousseau's enemies were yours."

Lafa saw the girl stagger as if she had received a blow. She put her hand upon the buggy wheel and leaned thus for a moment, staring into MacPherson's face. Then, without a word, she stepped in, took up the reins and began to urge the horse, very slowly, along the road. The cure came to the side of the vehicle.

"I shall come to the Chateau, then, Mademoiselle Rosny," he said.

Madeline did not answer him. Presently Lafa, crouching in the bottom of the buggy, heard her sobbing again, low, heartbroken sobs that she could not check for a long time. Sometimes she took her eyes from the road to look for a moment into Hilary's face, and once she stopped for a moment.

"How is he?" she asked.

"He is living, Mademoiselle," said Lafa. And that was all he dared to say.

There was no lantern, and Madeleine needed all her watchfulness to avoid the stones and ruts in the road. Luckily the moon was bright and the horse steady. Once, as the buggy swung round a bend, Lafa, looking out, saw the cure trailing behind, shaking his head. He heard Madeleine still sobbing. His own heart was heavy enough. He cautioned himself for Hilary's misfortune. He should have stood by him. And he had meant to do so. But he had not calculated that Hilary would walk so fast or go to St. Boniface so soon.

The trees fell away, disclosing the Rosny chateau. The buggy stopped before the door in front of which the Seigneur and the old retainer were standing, with anxious faces. Madeleine bent swiftly over Hilary and raised his limp hand; then she turned her eyes to Lafa, mutely asking him that question which could not be spoken.

"He is no worse," said Lafa.

The Seigneur and his man came toward them. "MacPherson telephoned to the post office and they brought me the news," he said. "You did quite right, Madeline. Gently, now, Monsieur," he added, addressing Connell, and together they raised Hilary from the buggy floor. "Remember the steps. Now, I will go backward—so."

They were inside the Chateau, carrying their burden between the rows of portraits into a room which had been a drawing room in bygone days, furnished with spindle-legged furniture, gilt mirrors and ornate cabinets. A bed in a corner showed that its use had been converted, probably because the upper part of the Chateau was no longer habitable.

Madeline Rosny came in with her arms full of bed linen, diffusing the scent of wintergreen. Lafa and her father got Hilary to bed. He was stirring now, beginning to toss his arms and mutter in delirium. The pulse was stronger, but the flush which had supplanted the pallor denoted fever. Presently the cure entered and went straight to the bedside. The three men looked at Hilary and at each other.

"I have seen men who were wounded worse recover," said Edmond Rosny. "He has bled much, but the heart is uninjured, and unless the lung is gravely hurt . . . well, we shall see to it that he gets well," he ended abruptly.

There was nothing more Connell could do. He would have stayed, but he felt that he must await the issue in patience. Madeleine was already established at Hilary's bedside.

Lafa went in softly. "I shall come early in the morning," said Mademoiselle Rosny. "I want to say—about what you said to Father Lucy time and the gang's back on the job."

"You paid them two dollars?"

"Not a cent more," said Lafa triumphantly. "They asked to go back to work, and you ought to see them working! I guess they feel that they haven't given you a square deal, and Mr. Rosny's been having a few words with them. I hear. Anyway, they know now it's Morris who tipped off the revenue people, in order to make trouble for you, and the result is this part of the country has grown too hot for him. So he's gone away. I hear he had a quarrel with Brousseau over the share of their plunder, and they almost came to blows over it. Well, that's the first of the gang out. And MacPherson has turned out a trump, working overtime and making the hands work, and it begins to look to me as if we'll win out after all."

This was good news. It was now September, and in little more than a month the snow should extend considerably their cutting area.

So they discussed their plans, until Madeleine, coming in, drove Connell away. Hilary would not ask him about his assailants, and Lafa was glad to avoid the subject. It was Father Lucien who took it up later, when Hilary was convalescent.

He hummed and hawed a good deal, and finally the truth came out. It would be easy enough to get the police up from Quebec, but the quarantine would have to be laid by the heels before the advent of winter made further action impossible for months. Of the four, Pierre had disappeared. Leblanc was said to have gone into the woods for the winter to trap, having apparently abandoned his pretense of a sub-lease on the Ste. Marie limits. Simeon Duval was running his saloon wide open, and swearing that Hilary having assaulted him, he had struck with his knife in self-defense, while in a half-stunned condition. Little Louis, his brother, snarled out of his wife, had been to see the cure with a view to making his peace.

Hilary had no desire to punish Louis any further, though he meant to deal with Pierre and Leblanc when the opportunity arose. He meant to rid the community of them and Simeon; but he had a strong man's reluctance to call upon the law to avenge a physical assault. In the end the cure went away with the understanding that Louis was forgiven, and with no decision taken as to further action.

"But what strength! What power, monsieur!" he said admiringly, clenching his hand over the muscles of Hilary's arm. "Do you know, monsieur," he continued thoughtfully, "I have often thought that a priest in such a district as this needs the muscularity almost as much as the goodness! Ah, Monsieur Askew, if I were your age, and of your strength, what would I not do!"

To Hilary his convalescence was a foretaste of paradise. Edmond Rosny came in only for formal visits now, twice or three times a day; but it was wonderful to see Madeleine, whom he knew that he loved with all his heart, about his bedside all day long, and then about his chair, waiting on him, anticipating his wishes, until he felt ashamed to be so helpless, her pride gone, her scorn gone, her enmity as well. When Hilary learned of the part that she had played in his rescue, and thanked her gratefully, she could not meet his eyes.

Then came the first day on which he was permitted to leave his room. Leaning on Madeleine's arm, he had gone out to feel the wonder of the sunshine and the crisp autumn air. The garden had originally been laid out more than a century before, in imitation of the formal gardens of France of the period, with terraces and statuary. Everything was in ruin; and yet Hilary had the sudden, inexplicable sense of having come home.

"Mademoiselle Rosny," he said, "we are going to be good friends in future, aren't we? The good-will goes with your kindness, even if it does not go with the trees."

"Now I've got some good news," he said, when Hilary persisted in asking about the work. "We've got that shipment off, and Dupont will have both vessels back in a few days for the next. The mill's working over-

PHRASES SOON LOSE VOGUE

Writer Using Once Familiar Expressions in Illustration Builds on an Unstable Foundation.

The sad conviction is forced upon the Nomad that Dickens and all Dickensian expressions are now obsolete, as far as the popular knowledge of them is concerned. "The Nomad" observes in the Boston Evening Transcript. He writes the phrase "in a pickwickian sense," and it is rendered "in a pickwickian sense" by the intelligent typewriter. Showing that the word "pickwickian" is unknown to a man who has lately been educated in the public schools. Since it is of no use to a writer to employ a phrase which is not understood, it will be necessary henceforth to discard all those once-familiar expressions. So it is a long and a sad farewell not only to the beloved Pickwick, but to Mr. Micawber, and to Siles Wegg and his wooden leg, and to Mr. Weller and his vidlers, and to Sairy Gamp and Mrs. Harris, and to Barks and his willingness, to J. B. and his "devilish stiness," and to Mr.umble and Mr. Chubbland, all the blessed rest of them! So passes away the glory of the world. It will be sorry to see and know them no more. Not only were they delightful in their personalities and their lives, but they were most useful (as long as they lived) for purposes of illustration. No one can quite take their place.

For that matter, the writer who is in the habit of employing characters, stories or expressions from popular works for purpose of illustration, always builds on a foundation of sand. The world moves on; the familiar book is forgotten; and the writer who has used its expressions finds that he is talking Greek. There was a time when "Alice in Wonderland" was so well known that any illustration from tonight—I mean it was my fault. I guess I'm the only one to blame. I ought to have stood by him, and I went away. You did more than me, mademoiselle, and it wasn't up to you. I mean, it wasn't your business to save him."

"No!" whispered Madeleine, raising her eyes to his. And Lafa felt like a blundering fool.

"You'll save him," he said. "We can't lose him. We want him—we all want him. I guess I didn't realize how white he was till—till this happened."

He was half way to his boarding-house before he stopped as a thought struck him.

"I guess Father Lucy does get results in his own way," he said.

CHAPTER XI.

Dreams and Dangers.

Thanks to a constitution injured by hard work and healthy living, Hilary improved rapidly under Madeleine's nursing, aided by her father's skilled treatment of the wound. On the second day Hilary was conscious, on the fourth Rosny announced that the crisis was past; upon the ninth the patient was sitting up in bed and demanding solid food.

Lafa was the happiest man in the world when, at last admitted to the bedside, he asked and received absolution for his desertion.

"Now I've got some good news," he said, when Hilary persisted in asking about the work. "We've got that shipment off, and Dupont will have both vessels back in a few days for the next. The mill's working over-
