MILLER HUGHES

Republican Candidate for Congress
From First District Addresses
Crowd at Court House

Miller Hughes, of Wickliffe, Republican nominee for Congressman from the First Kentucky Congressional District, addressed a crowd of Crittenden county voters at the court house Monday afternoon. While the usual large County Court day crowd was in town, the attraction of horse trading and airplane exhibitions came in competition to that of the speaker and drew away part of the crowd.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. T. A. Frazer, who in his characteristic way called the attention of the audience to the momentousness of the issues of the campaign.

Mr. Hughes stated that he had no unkind feelings for his Democratic hearers. He was born in Ballard county, the Gibraltar of Democracy, and reared in a Democratic household. It was the leaders of that party that he had it for, as they are all demagogues and tricksters. Their policies and spider-like workings being but metaphorical molasses to catch unsuspecting flies. He admitted Grover Cleveland because he kept us out of war with England, but severely criticized Woodrow Wilson, not because he got us into war—that was all right and unavoidable—but because he was elected in 1916 on the "He kept us out of war" slogan. He also criticized the President's Mexican policy.

The speaker opposes the League of Nations—the whole thing, with or without reservations. If enacted he said, Article 1 would doubtless get us into war.

RED CROSS COURSE

"Instruction in the principals of Home Nursing is now within reach of every woman and girl in Crittenden County," said Miss Margaret Wall, representative of the Lake Division of the American Red Cross, who visited last chapter officials recently.

More than 100,000 women and girls in the United States have had this instruction by means of classes in home hygiene and care of the sick, which are conducted by a graduate Red Cross Nurse under the auspices of the local Red Cross Chapter.

Crittenden County Red Cross Chapter has decided to have this instruction for the women and girls in this county and hopes that they will take advantage of his big opportunity. During the influenza epidemic there was the greatest need of Doctors and Nurses, and the appalling lack of knowledge in the simplest principles of care for the sick was completely displayed. We all need to know how to take care of our own sick.

There are fifteen lessons in the course and two lessons will be given weekly to each class. Every woman and girl is urged to join a class. The county will be divided so that a class will be in reach of every one.

Mrs. Deboe, Chairman of local Home Service work has been appointed to take charge of organizing the classes, and will be glad to give any information concerning the course offered.

MISSOURI COUPLE GET MARRIED

Miss Glenn Marie Richmond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Richmond of 535 Linden Avenue, Clayton, Mo., was married to Mr. Ralph V. Davidson of Henderson Ky., at 8:30 P. M. October 2 at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives, by the Rev. George Hulbert.

The bride was charmingly dressed in a silken gown trimmed with chantilly lace and her veil of tulle fell from a lace cap, forming a graceful train. She carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. Mrs. W. T. Short was her sister's matron of honor and sole attendant. She wore a royal blue velvet gown and carried a bouquet of American beauty roses. Mr. Tonia Tate of Evansville was Best man.

The home was beautifully decorated with ferns and evergreens.

Immediately after the ceremony a delightful reception was given, after which the bride and groom left for the south. After November 1, they will be at home to their friends in St. Louis.

TEACHERS MEETING

The association of the teachers of Division 2 met at Glendale October 1, 1920, was called to order by the Supt., J. L. F. Paris.

Prof. Hall of Tolu conducted the Devotional exercises in a very impressive way.

Quite a number of the teachers were present and all had a pleasant and profitable day. Dr. Frazer was on the program and responded with a very earnest and helpful address on the beauty and importance of "Nature Study."

Prof. Jagers of Marion discussed the consolidation of schools in a common sense, practical way. His address was much enjoyed by all present. We are glad to have such a man in the county and feel that he is going to be a great help to us. Judge Nunn made a talk in which he stressed what was said by Prof. Jagers, especially did he insist on the elimination of the poor lighting of most of the schools in Crittenden county.

Some supervised play was given by Miss Carrie Morse and the pupils of Caney Fork. The games were well played and enjoyed by the large crowd.

The exhibits were judged and blue ribbons were awarded to the following: Dora Terry of Forest Grove, best apples and sweet potatoes; Adie Hughes and Rodell Belt of Glendale, best Irish potatoes and corn. Pink ribbons were given to Ollie Lucas of Colon for Irish potatoes, and William Lester Terry of Forest Grove for corn.

NEW PASTOR AT M. E. CHURCH

Rev. G. P. Dillon, the newly appointed pastor of the Methodist church at Marion held his first service here Sunday, preaching two sermons morning and evening to large congregations. Rev. Dillon has just vacated the pastorate of the Methodist church at Madisonville and succeeds Rev. H. R. Short.

ORGANIZE AN ASSOCIATION

The teachers of Crittenden county met at the Marion school building Saturday October 9, and organized an Educational Association. Prof. Jagers was made president, the vice presidents consist of the presidents of the four county divisions, Miss Gladys Graves, secretary and Miss Stella Elkins, treasurer.

The object of this association is to arouse the people of Crittenden county to a greater interest in educational affairs. The meetings will be held every second Saturday in the school auditorium. The public is not only invited but urged to become members of this association and help Crittenden raise her standard. A survey of the county's wealth will be made, also health and along other lines.

PRESBYTERY MEETS

The Princeton Presbytery of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church met at Shiloh church, near Lisman, Tuesday for a three days session, closing Thursday at noon.

Delegates from nearly all the churches within the bounds of the Presbytery were present, as well as many visitors.

Rev. J. R. King was chosen Moderator and Rev. F. L. McDowell was retained as Stated Clerk.

Rev. C. C. Miller, the retiring Moderator, preached the opening sermon. Rev. Virgil Stone of the Methodist Church South, was transferred from that church to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Rev. E. J. Ramer, of Owensboro, delivered the Sacramental Sermon Wednesday. The Woman's Missionary Society was held Wednesday evening.

The Presbytery closed Thursday at noon with sermon by Rev. Virgil Stone.

A number of Marion people attended the meetings.

SERIOUSLY ILL

Mrs. Lizzie Pope received a telegram Tuesday morning stating that her aunt, Mrs. Mary E. Hodge, was dangerously ill at her home in Ft. Worth, Tex., and that no hope of her recovery was entertained. Mrs. Hodge formerly lived in this county and is a sister of William Fowler, Mrs. S. A. Wilborn and Mrs. Ann Gilbert, of this city.

FARRIS-WOODALL

Mr. John A. Farris and Miss Lucile Woodall were married Sunday evening, October 10, at 3 o'clock at the residence of Rev. Hoses C. Paris, who performed the ceremony. The bridegroom is a son of John R. Farris of Salem, and the bride is the daughter of J. R. Woodall, of this county.

Mr. and Mrs. Farris will make their home on the bridegroom's farm in Livingston county. Many congratulations are extended.

FARM FOR SALE

In Repton Valley, 115 acres; 80 acres bottom land, good improvements land that has grown 75 bu. to the acre and two tons of hay. Handy to school, churches and railroad station. For a quick sale would sell at a bargain. This offer will not appear but once.

JOHN C. HARDIN

A NEEDED IMPROVEMENT

It is ordered by the City Council that the public well on the south side of the Court House, which has been long in a state of disuse, be cleaned out and put in good condition for use. A new pump will be installed. Mr. J. C. Elder was given the contract for the work and $20 was allowed him for compensation.

WENT TO HEAR LUX

The following Marion people went to Princeton Friday to hear Gov. Cox speak. A number of others, whose names we failed to get, also went from her to attend the speaking: Mr. and Mrs. Walter McConnell, Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Gilchrist, Jesse Olive, James Hicklin, C. W. Kohlman, A. M. Ford, Gus Taylor, W. M. Pittillo, S. H. Pittillo, Mr. Will Clifton, Mrs. Katie Goodloe, W. T. McConnell, G. W. Swisher, Harry Vaughn, Harry Johnson, Ted Boston and Arnold Driskill.

MINERS WANTED

A large number of miners wanted to mine fluor spar on contract, near Sheridan, Ky., for further particulars see W. S. Lowery in person. W. S. LOWERY, Marion, Ky. Salem Star Route 1-23

SHOOTING AFFAIR IN LIVINGSTON

On Sunday morning of last week, near Smithland, in Livingston county, while quarrelling over their hogs getting into each others field, Lawrence Crawford, 25 years old, was shot and seriously wounded by a neighbor, Jim Green, also 25 years old. Crawford was struck in the face and front part of the body, the weapon used being a shot gun loaded with number 5 shot. He was taken to Smithland and his wounds dressed by Dr. J. E. Fox, who found that Greer was arrested and taken to Smithland, placed under $1,000 bond for his appearance at the examining trial set for next Monday.

SENATOR DEBOE AT EDDYVILLE

Former Senator W. J. Deboe addressed a big crowd of Lyon county voters at Eddyville Monday, discussing the issues of the campaign in behalf of the Republican Presidential candidates. Every seat in the big hall was occupied by interested voters, men and women, and much applause was given the speaker while he ripped the League of Nations up the back and told of other alleged delinquencies of the Democratic administration at Washington.

SPELLING CONTEST

In Educational Division 2, of which Miss Emma Terry is president and Miss Sue Moore, secretary, there will be a spelling contest at Crooked Creek church on Friday, October 22, from 10:30 A. M. to 3:00 P. M. A good attendance is expected.

A MIGHTY GOOD MULE

Mr. Hugh McConnell, of Ford Ferry was in the city Saturday on business and while here he naturally dropped into the Press office. Mr. McConnell is a good farmer and has a number of fine mules on his farm near the Ferry. In coming to town he chose as a saddle animal one which, though he can't travel, perhaps equal to an airplane, he gets there and though the mule is some 30 odd years old, Mr. McConnell considers him the best in the county.

HURRICANE TO REBUILD CHURCH

Ag all day meeting with dinner on the ground was held at Hurricane Camp Ground Saturday, its object being to arrange plans for the erection of a new church building and also a new tabernacle to take the place of those recently burned.

A good-sized crowd was present and a number of addresses were made. It was decided that a new and handsome church should be erected on the site of the old building as soon as possible and a building committee was chosen to raise funds and look after the other matters pertaining thereto. The good and enterprising people of the Tolu circuit, irrespective of church affiliations will come to the aid of this committee.

It was also agreed at this meeting that later on a new tabernacle should be built that the annual camp meetings may continue. Rev. O. M. Capshaw is pastor on that work.

ARE STUMPING THE COUNTY

In a sweeping campaign of education local spellbinders, both Republicans and Democrats, are stumping the county by school districts in an untiring effort to enlighten the voters of Crittenden county, both men and women, on the momentous issues before the people. Audiences, anxious to be set right or more firmly established in their opinions on the subject, leave their fire-places and come out to hear the speakers.

If enacted will the League of Nations bring permanent peace or everlasting war? "It will bring everlasting war," cry the Republican orators. (Thunderous applause and "you betcher" from the Republican hearers.) Will it cause our sons to stay at home or drag them into the battlefields of Europe? (Much scratching of heads and "doghins" from the Independent voters.)

IS 84 YEARS OLD

Mrs. P. A. Beard, of Shady Grove spent Monday in the city, the guest of the family of her brother, J. M. McChesney. Mrs. Beard is 84 years old, is still remarkably strong, hearty and healthy, and does her own cooking and other household work.

MRS. SAM ASHER IS IMPROVING

Mrs. Sam Asher, living in the Tradewater section in this county, who on Sunday of last week was thrown from her buggy and run over by two buggies and a horseback rider, is slowly improving. Other facts than those given in the Press last week would indicate that there was no lack of pure cussedness or inexcusable carelessness on the part of those buggy drivers and horseback rider.

It seems that the boys were running a race on the public highway and while Mr. and Mrs. Asher were returning from church in their buggy, the boys overtook them, the foremost buggy which was driven by Lester Rabb, struck the Asher vehicle, overturning it and throwing both occupants out into the road. The second buggy, which was driven by Ben Herrington, then dashed by, running over Mrs. Asher before she had had time to get to her feet. The horseback rider, who was Dan Goben, followed closely behind the buggies, also running over the prostrate body of the woman.

Mrs. Asher was seriously injured, both wrists being broken and her body a mass of bruises. Mr. Corbett Herrington, an older brother of Ben Herrington, came over, it is said, to the Asher home and offered to buy Mr. Asher a new buggy to replace the old one, and to pay the physician for his medical attendance on Mrs. Asher. Next morning, however, he returned and told Mr. Asher that he would have to withdraw his proposition, as the boys had left during the night for parts unknown to him.

Mr. Asher received only slight injuries.

KY. REUNION IN CALIFORNIA

If a Marion citizen had been visiting in Echo Park in Los Angeles, California last Sunday he would have received quite a surprise. He would have thought that Marion had been moved out on the Pacific Coast. There was a reunion of Marion folks now residing in Los Angeles. The following were present: Jas. M. Freeman, wife and grand-daughter, Martha; Percy Noggle, wife and grand-father Noggle; Ernest Canavan, wife and children, Harry and Jack; Jas. L. Travis, wife and children, James and Carrie; Bob Wilson, wife (who was Bettie Dorr) and son Mason; John Parish and wife and children, Reba and Walter; John Rice, wife and son; Mrs. Mary Travis, Miss Sarah Travis and Miss Anna Liza Johnson.

They had an old time Kentucky dinner including everything from "hot dogs" to hot coffee. The event of the day was the eating contest which ended in a tie between Jim Travis and Anna Liza Johnson, Mag Noggle running a close second. Jack Canavan required the most attention as the fish in the lake attracted him, very much. John Parish took all the kids on the lake without any mishap. Sarah Travis and Mag Noggle were the heavy weights, while Jim Freeman was at peace with every one (while he was eating).

Other Marion people who live in Los Angeles and were not present: all the Dorr family; Frank Dorr and wife, John Sidberry, Agnes Travis, Miss Fleta Barnes and several others. It is a great pleasure for these Marion people who live in the far west to be able to get together and talk of old times back in Marion and when other people from Kentucky decide to visit the Pacific Coast, be sure to drop into Los Angeles and join one of these reunions.

A MARIONITE.

REPTON

Ben Duvall was in Louisville a few days last week.

Jeff Brantley was in Louisville and Evansville the last of the week.

W. J. Foster and wife and little Miss Betty Lee Foster of Evansville accompanied by their aunt, Mrs. Dr. Foster were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Foster this week.

Mrs. H. Sullivan is visiting her son, L. E. Truitt.

Little Foster Truitt fell from an apple tree Sunday, fracturing his arm above the elbow.

Jeff Slaten of Paducah visited Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hardin the week end.

Little Miss Carrie Slaten and Master J. T. Slaten are visiting their father in Paducah.

Dr. Edgar Hardin and wife of Madisonville are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hardin.

Ray Small has returned from Evansville.

Mrs. D. E. Brantley of Stockford visited relatives here this week.

THE SACRED SPOT IN CRITTENDEN

BY C. V. FRANKS

The one place—the Sacred Spot in Crittenden, the love and memory of which men and women have carried with them into all parts of the country, is the shaded, grass-covered and holy hill at Hurricane.

In any community of any State one may find some one who has either experienced personally the uplifting influence, or who has been bettered by coming in contact and touching elbows with those who caught a glimpse of the things higher and holier at Hurricane.

For thirty years the Camp-meeting has been an annual event—one to which all the people in the surrounding community, as well as those in adjoining counties, look forward to as being more momentous, perhaps, than even the Yuletide season.

Here for ten days each year, Methodists and Presbyterians, Baptists and the followers of Campbell, meet and mingle in one accord, offering up prayers of thanksgiving, while the hills echo with songs of praise to the Most High.

The first Camp-meeting was held in 1890, under the supervision of a reward. Of the original committee all of whom have gone to their committee of God-fearing men, practice remains but two—J. B. Perry and J. T. Terry, who are growing old in the service, and whose hearts and lives have been made bigger and better by the untiring endeavor for good.

The places vacated by fathers have been filled by sons, and thus the business interests of this religious enterprise have been successfully carried on while the wonderful story of mercy preached here to untold thousands has been carried and retold to peoples in all parts of the world.

Many of the most renowned evangelists and ministers of any age have participated in these revivals. Deep-thinking, soul-stirring men of God have given of their time and talent clarifying the plan of salvation to vast throngs assembled under the spacious tabernacle erected at the crest of the hill.

Listing a few of these — Smith; Bigham; Niles, the Baptist; Birdie Crow; Clark; McConnell; Johnston; Swape; Powell; Adams; Hogard; Hill — many others.

The great song leaders and religious workers have also been upon the roster; among them — Rhineheart; Fraithier; Denton; Yates and the Lears.

To many of these Hurricane has been and is "Home, Sweet Home." Their annual return is cause for rejoicing, and with souls filled with goodness and gladness and hearts tuned to praise divine, they bring a message of peace to an honest people who love God and honor their fellow beings.

In passing it is necessary to mention some of the laymen who have been instrumental in building and maintaining this holy institution: Guess; Crider; Perry; Terry; Love; Stevenson; Clark; Lucas; Hamilton; Daughtrey; Phillips; Franks; Franklin; while the light that shines the brightest is that of Uncle Jimmy Wooten, who has missed but a single service during all these years.

But let us touch for a moment another phase of the sanctity of this holy hill. While the passing years have seen thousands and thousands of lives pledged to the cause of Christ at Hurricane, the densely shaded slope is held sacred by men and women everywhere as the spot where they made other vows but little less holy.

And for more than a quarter of a century the hill at Hurricane has been a place for annual assembly of those whose lives were pledged there with thousands of others, many of whom have established homes in remote parts, and to whom the religious atmosphere and tender memories of the past are magnets which draw them back—year after year.

These are motives which will actuate the rebuilding of the tabernacle recently destroyed, and which will again be surrounded by new and better camps while His good cause goes marching on.

CALL TO PASTORATE DECLINED

Rev. W. P. Mernoy, of Louisville, who was called to the pastorate of the First Baptist Church in Marion, has declined to accept the work. He preached two sermons at the church Sunday morning and evening and returned to Louisville. It is not known yet who will be the pastor to succeed Rev. J. B. Trotter.

Miss Lenora Belt, of Dawson was in the city Saturday enroute home from Salem, where she accompanied her sister, Miss Golda Belt, who has been in a Louisville Sanitarium.

CHAPTER XI.

When Bryce Cardigan walked down the gangplank at the steamship dock in San Francisco, the first face he saw among the waiting crowd was Buck Ogilvy's. Ogilvy thrust forth a great speckled paw for Bryce to shake. Bryce ignored it.

"Why, don't you remember me?" Ogilvy demanded. "I'm Buck Ogilvy." Bryce looked him fairly in the eye and favored him with a lightning wink. "I have never heard of you, Mr. Ogilvy. You are mistaking me for some one else."

"Sorry," Ogilvy murmured. "My mistake. Thought you were Bill Kerrick, who used to be a partner of mine."

Bryce nodded and passed on, hailed a taxicab, and was driven to the San Francisco office of his company. Five minutes later the door opened and Buck Ogilvy entered.

"I was a bit puzzled at the dock, Bryce," he explained as they shook hands, "but decided to play safe and then follow you to your office. What's up? Have you killed somebody, and are the detectives on your trail? If so, 'fess up and I'll assume the responsibility for your crime, just to show you how grateful I am, for that hundred."

"No, I wasn't being shadowed, Buck, but my principal enemy was coming down the gangplank right behind me, and—"

"So was my principal enemy," Ogilvy interrupted. "What does our enemy look like?"

"Like ready money. And if he had seen me shaking hands with you, he'd have suspected a connection between us later on. Buck, you have a good job—about five hundred a month."

"Thanks, old man. I'd work for you for nothing. What are we going to do?"

"Build twelve miles of logging railroad and parallel the line of the old wolf I spoke of a moment ago."

"Good news! We'll do it. How soon do you want it done?"

"As soon as possible. You're the vice president and general manager."

"I accept the nomination. What do I do first?"

"Listen carefully to my story, analyze my plan for possible weak spots, and then get busy, because after I have provided the funds and given the word 'Go!' the rest is up to you. I must not be known in the transaction at all, because that would be fatal."

Three hours later Ogilvy was in possession of the most minute details of the situation in Sequoia, had tabulated, indexed and cross-indexed them in his ingenious brain and was ready for business—and so announced himself. Always an enthusiast in all things, in his mind's eye Mr. Ogilvy could already see a long trainload of logs coming down the Northern California and Oregon railroad, as he and Bryce had decided to christen the venture.

When Bryce Cardigan returned to Sequoia, his labors, in so far as the building of the road were concerned, had been completed. His agreement with Gregory of the Trinidad Redwood Timber company had been signed, sealed and delivered; the money to build the road had been deposited in bank; and Buck Ogilvy was already spending it like a drunken sailor. From now on, Bryce could only watch, wait and pray.

On the next steamer a surveying party with complete camping equipment arrived in Sequoia, purchased a wagon and two horses, piled their baggage into the wagon, and disappeared up-country. Hard on their heels came Mr. Buck Ogilvy, and occupied the bridal suite in the Hotel Sequoia, arrangements for which had previously been made by wire. In the sitting room of the suite Mr. Ogilvy installed a new desk, a filing cabinet, and a brisk young male secretary.

He had been in town less than an hour when the editor of the Sequoia Sentinel sent up his card. The announcement of the incorporation of the California Outrage (for so had Mr. Ogilvy, in huge enjoyment of the misery he was about to create, dubbed the road) had previously been flashed to the Sentinel by the United Press association, as a local feature story, and already speculation was rife in Sequoia as to the identity of the hare-brained individuals who dared to back an enterprise as nebulous as the millenium. Mr. Ogilvy was expecting the visit—in fact, impatiently awaiting it; and since the easiest thing he did was to speak for publication, naturally the editor of the Sentinel got a story which, to that individual's simple soul, seemed to warrant a seven-column head—which it received. In glowing terms he spoke of the billions of tons of timber-products to be hauled out of this wonderfully fertile and little-known country, and confidently predicted for the county a future commercial supremacy that would be simply staggering to contemplate.

When Colonel Seth Pennington read this outburst he smiled. "That's a bright scheme on the part of that Trinidad Redwood Timber company gang to start a railroad excitement and unload their white elephant," he declared.

When Bryce Cardigan read it, he laughed. The interview was so like Buck Ogilvy! In the morning the latter's automobile was brought up from the steamship dock, and accompanied by his secretary, Mr. Ogilvy disappeared into the north following the bright new stakes of his surveying gang, and for three weeks was seen no more.

On a day when Bryce's mind happened to be occupied with thoughts of Shirley Sumner, he bumped into her on the main street of Sequoia, and to her great relief but profound surprise he paused in his tracks, lifted his hat, smiled, and opened his mouth to say something—thought better of it, changed his mind, and continued on about his business. As Shirley passed him, she looked him squarely in the face, and in her glance there was neither coldness nor malice.

Bryce felt himself afire from heels to hair one instant, and cold and clammy the next, for Shirley spoke to him.

"Good morning, Mr. Cardigan."

He paused, turned, and approached her. "Good morning, Shirley," he replied. "How have you been?"

"I might have been dead, for all the interest you took in me," she replied sharply. "As matters stand, I'm exceedingly well—thank you. By the way, are you still belligerent?"

He nodded. "I have to be."

"I think you're a great big grouch, Bryce Cardigan," she flared at him.

"You make me unutterably weary."

"I'm sorry," he answered, "but just at present I am forced to subject you to the strain. Say a year from now, when things are different with me, I'll strive not to offend."

"I'll not be here a year from now," she warned him.

He bowed. "Then I'll go wherever you are—and bring you back." And with a mocking little grin, he lifted his hat and passed on.

Col. Seth Pennington was among those who, skeptical at first and inclined to ridicule the project into an early grave, eventually found himself swayed by the publicity and gradually coerced into serious consideration of the results attendant upon the building of the road. The Colonel was naturally as suspicious as a rattlesnake in August; hence he had no sooner emerged from the ranks of the frank scoffers than his alert mind framed the question:

"How is this new road—improbable as I know it to be—going to affect the interests of the Laguna Grande Lumber company. If the unexpected should happen and those bureau-steerers should actually build a road from Sequoia to Grant's Pass, Ore., and thus construct a feeder to a trans-continental line?"

Five minutes of serious reflection sufficed to bring the Colonel to the verge of panic, notwithstanding the fact that he was ashamed of himself for yielding to fright despite his firm belief that there was no reason why he should be frightened. Similar considerations occur to a small boy who is walking home in the dark past a cemetery.

The vital aspects of his predicament dawned on the Colonel one night at dinner, midway between the soup and the ash. So forcibly did they occur to him, in fact, that for the nonce he forgot that his niece was seated opposite him.

"Confound them," the Colonel murmured distinctly, "I must look into this immediately."

"Look into what, uncle dear?" Shirley asked innocently.

"This new railroad that man Ogilvy talks of building—which means, Shirley, that with Sequoia as his starting point, he is going to build a hundred and fifty miles north to connect with the main line of the Southern Pacific in Oregon."

"But wouldn't that be the finest thing that could possibly happen to Humboldt county?" she demanded of him.

"Undoubtedly it would—to Humboldt county; but to the Laguna Grande Lumber company, in which you have something more than a sentimental interest, my dear, it would be a blow. A large part of the estate left by your father is invested in Laguna

"I'll Not Be Here a Year From Now," She Warned Him.

Grande stock, and as you know, all of my efforts are devoted to appreciating that stock and to fighting against anything that has a tendency to depreciate it."

Carefully he dissected a sandwich and removed the backbone. "I'd give a ripe peach to learn the identity of the scheming buttinsky who bought old Cardigan's Valley of the Giants," he said presently. "I'll be hanged if that doesn't complicate matters a little."

"You should have bought it when the opportunity offered," she reminded him.

"I dare say," he admitted lightly. "However, I didn't and now I'm going to be punished for it, my dear; so don't roast me any more. By the way, that speckled hot-air fellow Ogilvy, who is promoting the Northern California and Oregon railroad, is back in town again. I think I'll write the San Francisco office to look him up in Jann's and Bradstreet's. I'd sleep a whole lot more soundly to-night if I knew the answer to two very important questions."

"What are they, Uncle Seth?"

"Well, I'd like to know whether the N. C. O. is genuine or a screen to hide the operations of the Trinidad Redwood Timber company."

"It might," said Shirley, with one of those sudden flashes of intuition peculiar to women. "Be a screen to hide the operations of Bryce Cardigan. Now that he knows you aren't going to renew his hauling contract, he may have decided to build his own logging railroad."

After a pause the Colonel made answer: "No, I have no fear of that. It would cost five hundred thousand dollars to build that twelve-mile line and bridge Mad river, and the Cardigans haven't got that amount of money. What's more, they can't get it."

"But suppose," she persisted, "that the real builder of the road should prove to be Bryce Cardigan, after all. What would you do?"

Colonel Pennington's eyes twinkled. "I greatly fear, my dear, I should make a noise like something doing. And as for Bryce Cardigan—well, that young man would certainly know he'd been through a fight."

"I wonder if he'll fight to the last," Uncle Seth.

"Why, I believe he will," Pennington replied soberly.

"I'd love to see you beat him."

"Shirley! Why say that, you're growing ferocious." Her uncle's tones were laden with banter, but his countenance could not conceal the pleasure her last remark had given him.

Shirley thrust out her adorable chin aggressively. "Kick 'em, then!" she answered. "Shake 'em up, boy!"

"You bet I'll shake 'em up," the Colonel declared joyously. He paused with a morsel of food on his fork and waved the fork at her aggressively. "You stimulate me into activity, Shirley. My mind has been singularly dull of late; I have worried unnecessarily, but now that I know that you are with me, I am inspired. I'll tell you how we'll fix this new railroad, if it exhibits signs of being dangerous." Again he smote the table. "We'll sew 'em up tighter than a new buttonhole."

"To tell me how," she pleaded eagerly.

"I'll block them on their franchise to run over the city streets of Sequoia."

"How?"

"By making the mayor and the city council see things my way," he answered dryly. "Furthermore, in order to enter Sequoia, the N. C. O. will have to cross the tracks of the Laguna Grande Lumber company's line on Water street—make a jump-crossing—and I'll enjoin them and hold them up in the courts till the cows come home."

"Uncle Seth, you're a wizard."

"Well, at least I'm no slouch at looking after my own interests—and yours, Shirley. In the midst of peace we should be prepared for war. You've met Mayor Poundstone and his lady, haven't you?"

"I had tea at her house last week."

"Good news. Suppose you invite her and Poundstone here for dinner some night this week. Just a quiet little family dinner, Shirley, and after dinner you can take Mrs. Poundstone upstairs, on some pretext or other while I sound Poundstone out on his attitude toward the N. C. O."

She nodded. "I shall attend to the matter, Uncle Seth."

Five minutes after dinner was over, Shirley joined her uncle in the library and announced that His Honor the Mayor and Mrs. Poundstone would be delighted to dine with them on the following Thursday night.

CHAPTER XII

To return to Bryce Cardigan:

Having completed his preliminary plans to build the N. C. O. Bryce had returned to Sequoia, prepared to sit quietly on the side lines and watch his peppery lieutenant Ogilvy go into action.

Ogilvy's return to Sequoia following his three-week tour in search of rights of way for the N. C. O. was heralded by a visit from him to Bryce Cardigan at the latter's office. As he breasted the counter in the general office, Maize McTavish left her desk and came over to see what the visitor desired.

"I should like to see Mr. Bryce Cardigan," Buck began in crisp businesslike accents. He was fumbling in his card-case and did not look up until about to hand his card to Maize—when his mouth flew half open, the while he stared at her with consummate frankness. The girl's glance met his momentarily, then was lowered modestly; she took the card and carried it to Bryce.

"Hum-m-m!" Bryce granted. "That's a nice fellow Ogilvy, eh?"

"His clothes are simply wonderful—and so is his voice. He's very refined. But he's curly red and has freckled hands, Mr. Bryce."

Bryce rose and sauntered into the general office.

"Mr. Bryce Cardigan?" Buck queried.

"At your service, Mr. Ogilvy. Please come in."

"Thank you so much, sir." He followed Bryce to the latter's private office, closed the door carefully behind him, and stood with his broad back against it.

"Buck, are you losing your mind?" Bryce demanded.

"Losing it? I should say not. I've just lost it."

"I believe you. If you were quite sane, you wouldn't run the risk of being seen entering my office."

"Tut-tut, old dear! None of that! Am I not the mainpring of the Northern California Oregon railroad and privileged to run the destinies of that soulless corporation as I see fit?" He sat down, crossed his long legs, and jerked a speckled thumb toward the outer office. "I was sure when I came in here, but the eyes of the girl outside—oh, you, then eyes! I must be introduced to her."

"Love at first sight, eh, Buck?"

"I don't know what it is, but it's nice. Who is she?"

"She's Maize McTavish, and you're not to make love to her. Understand? I can't have you snooping around this office after to-day."

Mr. Ogilvy's eyes popped with interest. "Oh," he breathed. "You have an eye to the main chance yourself, have you? Have you proposed to the lady as yet?"

"No, you idiot."

"Then I'll watch you for her—or rather for the chance to propose first."

"Nothing doing, Buck. Spare yourself these agonizing suspicions. The fact of the matter is that you give me a wonderful inspiration. I've always been afraid Maize would fall in love with some ordinary fellow around Sequoia—prettiness, you know—"

"You bet. Prettiness is the stuff. I'll stick around."

"—and I've been on the lookout for a fine man to marry her off to. She's too wonderful for you, Buck, but in time you might learn to live up to her."

"Duck! I'm liable to kiss you."

"Don't be too precipitate. Her father used to be our woods-boss. I fired him for boozing."

"I wouldn't cure two hoots if her dad was old Nick himself. I'm going to marry her—if she'll have me. Ah, the glorious creature!" He waved his long arms despairingly. "O Lord, send me a cure for freckles. Bryce, you'll speak a kind word for me, won't you—sort of boom my stock, eh? Be a good fellow."

"Certainly. Now come down to earth and render a report on your stewardship."

"I'll try. To begin, I've secured rights of way, at a total cost of twelve thousand, one hundred and three dollars and nine cents, from the city limits of Sequoia to the southern boundary of your timber in Township nine. I've got my line surveyed, and so far as the building of the road is concerned, I know exactly what I'm going to do, and how and when I'm going to do it, once I get my material on the ground."

"I have an option of a rattling good second-hand locomotive down at the Santa Fe shops, and the Hawkins & Barnes Construction company has offered me a steam shovel, half a dozen flat-cars, and a lot of freshen and scrapers at ruinous prices. We can buy or rent teams from local citizens and get half of our labor locally. And as soon as you tell me how I'm to get my material ashore and out on the job I'll order it and get busy."

"That's exactly where the shoe begins to pinch. Pennington's main-line tracks enter the city along Water street, with one spur into his log-dump and another out on his mill-dock. From the main-line tracks we also have built a spur through our drying yard out to our log-dump, and a switch-line out to our mill-dock. We can unload our locomotive, steam shovel, and flat-cars on our own wharf, but unless Pennington gives us permission to use his main-line tracks out to a point beyond the city limits—where a Y will lead off to where the point of construction begins—we're up a stump."

"Suppose he refuses, Bryce. What then?"

"Why, we'll simply have to enter the city down Front street, paralleling Pennington's tracks on Water street, turning down B street, make a jump-crossing of Pennington's line on Water street, and connecting with the spur into our yard."

"See here, my son," Buck said solemnly, "is this your first adventure in railroad building?"

Bryce nodded. "I thought so; otherwise you wouldn't talk so confidently of running your line over city streets and making jump-crossings on your own petticoat's road. If your competitor regards you as a menace to his pocket-book, he can give you a nice little stir for your money and delay you indefinitely."

"I realize that, Buck. That's why I'm not appearing in this railroad deal at all. If Pennington suspected I was back of it, he'd fight me before the city council and move heaven and earth to keep me out of a franchise to use the city streets and cross his line. Of course, since his main line runs on city property, under a franchise granted by the city, the city has a perfect right to grant me the privilege of making a jump-crossing of his line—"

"Will they do it? That's the problem. If they will not, you're licked my son, and I'm out of a job."

Bryce hung his head, thoughtfully. "I've been too reckless," he muttered presently. "I shouldn't have seen that twelve thousand for rights of way until I had settled the matter of the franchise."

"Oh, I didn't buy any rights of way—yet," Ogilvy hastened to answer him. "I've only signed the land-owners on an agreement to give or sell me a right of way at the stipulated figure any time within one year from date. Will the city council grant you a franchise to enter the city and join Pennington's tracks?"

"I'm sure I don't know, Buck. You'll have to ask them—sound them out. The council meets Saturday morning."

"They'll meet this evening—in the private dining room of the Hotel Sequoia, if I can arrange it," the girl declared emphatically. "I'm going to have them all up for dinner and talk the matter over. I know the breed from cover to cover. For leaving a preliminary conference, I'll let you know whether you're going to get that franchise without difficulty or whether somebody's itchy palms will have to be crossed with silver flat. By the way, what do you know about your blighted old city council, set way?"

Arbor Day.

Arbor Day was originated by J. Russell Morton in Nebraska, January 4, 1872. The day was first observed in Missouri in 1880 when the legislature passed a law fixing the first Friday after the first Tuesday in April as a day when trees should be planted. In many of the schools in the country the day is observed.

HISTORICAL SKETCHES

Of the Early Days Of Crittenden County

Written for the Press by R. C. Haynes

The stable stood back some distance from the river and was invisible from where the ferryboat lay, the object being to construct it above high-water mark. When the ferryman and I entered the stable and discovered that my gun was gone we knew that some miscreant had crept up to the building, unlocked the door with a skeleton key, stole the gun and again locked the door behind him. "Wright," spoke up the ferryman, "someone doubtless saw you enter the stable and knew you left the gun. There are all kinds of lawless men around here, burglars as well as robbers and murderers. As late as it is and you having to pass through Panther Hollow, I would not advise you to undertake the journey today. You are welcome to stay with me tonight and in the morning you can return home in daylight, perhaps unmolested."

"I appreciate your kindness, Barker," I replied. "But my wife is alone, and I think by riding fast I can reach home before the night's darkness comes on." Bidding the ferryman goodbye, I mounted the mule and rode off towards home, old Ben in a gallop. I knew from the way the mule traveled that old Ben was no less glad than I was that we were traveling homeward.

I gave the mule full rein and we went on at full speed up hill and down, old Ben's feet pounding against the hard roadway and his ears pointing in the direction of home.

You are a fine donkey, old boy, and no mistake, I said to the faithful beast, "and I promise you a full meal when we get home; however you must not overdo yourself on the start. You may have to make good use of your legs further on."

I drew the reins, forcing the mule to a trot, and on we jogged at a more moderate gait. Though I could see that the sun was now getting low in the west, yet estimating the distance I judged we could arrive home by candlelight.

On we journeyed, old Ben trotting amicably along. On either side of the road grew great trees of oak and hickory and ash, but everything quiet and at peace. Occasionally, however, coming up from the bottoms of Hurricane creek to the right, I could hear the ominous hooting of an owl. Farther down the creek came the doleful answer of his mate, "Who-who-who?"

I was doomed to another disappointment—a greater one than that of not being able to cross the river. When we had traveled perhaps five miles I discovered that old Ben was getting lame. Though the poor beast still trotted along, I could see that it was painful for him to bear his weight on his right fore foot. I brought him to a walk and still he limped. The mule had never been lame before, and I knew to cause for his lameness. We went on in a slow walk, but the farther we went the more lame he became.

When I dismounted and examined the foot I discovered the cause of his lameness. The mule had been tampered with! The same miscreant, no doubt, who stole my gun had so disabled old Ben that I would not find it out until I was miles away from the river and under the protection of the ferryman.

"There's nothing else to do, old fellow," I said to old Ben, "you with only three good legs can not be burdened with my weight. I must go the rest of the way afoot."

So tying the bridle reins around his neck I left him to hobble home the best way he could and started off on foot. The sun was almost down and I knew it would be impossible for me to reach home before night. I must pass through Panther Hollow at night, alone, afraid and unarmed!

But there was nothing to be gained by useless meditation. I was now about half way home and would care nothing for the distance I had to travel. Good old Joshua of old never desired the sun to stand still any more than I do on that occasion. But Old Sol, the great dispenser of light, went on his regular course and soon sank from sight.

When I had reached the path leading up through Panther Hollow shadows were rapidly gathering and in a short time the darkness of a moonless night set in. Only the faint light of the stars enabled me to discern the dim pathway as I trudged on through the wilderness of woods.

Still on I went at as rapid a pace as I could through the giant trees, dense foliage and thick underbrush, which almost interlocked the scarcely discernible pathway. I could now hear the screech of the owl and the cries of the wild beast coming up through the dense darkness.

On and on I trudged, and as I approached a place rougher and darker if possible, than any I had passed through, I heard a crackling sound in the underbrush near me. Knowing it to be, undoubtedly, a wild beast of some kind and having no means of defense I set off in a run, hoping thus to escape its observation. But in vain. I soon discovered that the beast was following me.

On I ran and on followed the wild beast, springing through the thick underbrush, and at every spring gaining on me! When the pursuer had come within a few yards of me, knowing that it would be useless for me to run farther, I turned, facing the beast as he approached. When within a few feet of me the beast uttered an angry cry and paused, ready to make a spring upon me! At this moment I heard a sound behind me and, turning, I saw a weird white form dart out from the dark depths of woods, and at the same instant an arrow sped by me and the wild animal fell dead, pierced to the heart!

Before I could realize what had taken place, the mysterious form had disappeared in the darkness. Who was the brave archer? I did not know I had a friend within miles, much less in the wilds of Panther Hollow! Whether man or ghost he or it had probably saved my life by the timely slaying of what I discovered to be a wildcat.

Having no time for solving the mystery, I again took my way toward home. The way was intricate and rough and dark. I could hear the howls and cries and screams of wild beasts in every direction. Would I ever get through this perilous wilderness? I meditated. Would I ever see wife and home again?

On I trudged, pushing my way through the thick woods, the way seeming to grow, if possible, more rough and dense and dark as I went. My path, made by the wild animals as they prowled through the woods, led off in every direction and I had difficulty in following the intricate roadway.

When I had pushed on perhaps a mile from the scene of the mysterious killing of the wildcat, I heard an ominous sound in the distance behind me. It was the howling of an immense number of wolves! Could it be that a pack of these ravenous beasts was on my track? Must I, like Maseppa, be chased by a pack of wolves? Unfortunately, I was afoot. How I wished for old Ben with four good legs!

But wishing being of no avail, I increased my speed and pushed on, anxious to put as great a distance as possible between me and the wolves. On I plunged through the woods, and as I went I could tell from the sound behind me that the wolves were on my trail, their howls growing louder and fiercer and nearer!

On I ran while the noisy beasts came rushing on, woof, woof, behind me and gaining at every bound!

I had now reached a place where the land was low, wet and swampy and the surroundings were more somber and ghostlike. The great pack of wolves came howling on, more noisy and angry as they approached. Though the darkness was so great I could not see the forms of the ravenous beasts, I could tell by the savage howls and the crackling of the underbrush that they were only a few rods behind. It will soon be all over with me I thought in despair, as I still hurried on, offering a silent prayer to the Great Defender of the defenseless.

At this moment, up through a dark ravine to the right I beheld a sight that, surrounded as I was, filled me with amazement and consternation. A red glare broke out, as coming up from the ground, and a great luminous ball, as of fire, came toward me gliding or rolling down the ravine! On came the mysterious light, and as it neared me, by its weird glare I could now discern the now startled beasts as they for the moment paused in their determined onslaught. Suddenly as the uncanny ball rolled on the frightened wolves took to their heels and scampered off through the woods, pell-mell, in every direction. The great ball of light passed on and disappeared down the ravine to the left.

Though I had never before seen a Jack-o-lantern, such I knew this must have been. After it had disappeared the woods seemed darker than ever; yet I again trudged onward, picking my way the best I could through the darkness, thankful for the Jack-o-lantern's timely appearance and, undoubtedly, the saving of my life.

I now hoped that the dangers were all behind me and that I would soon reach home. But all the demons of darkness seemed turned loose in Panther Hollow that night!

When I was within a mile of home breaking of a dry twig and, looking back, through the dim light I saw the form of a man creeping up behind me. The villain held a long knife in his hand and I knew he meant to take my life. How I wished for a similar weapon that I might have it out with him then and there. But having no weapon of any kind I knew it was a race for life between me and the murderous highwayman.

Realizing this I started off through the wilderness as fast as my legs would carry me. On I ran, and I could tell from the sound of breaking of the underbrush behind me that the demon was following me at full speed.

On and on I plunged, but my legs were now weary from so much exertion and I could tell that my deadly foe was gaining on me. In the darkness I could hear the panting of his breath as he approached me. Before me near the road stood a large over the pathway. As I plunged on by this tree there was a disturbance among the branches overhead and, with a piercing scream a panther sprang down, barely missing my back and landing with full force on the shoulders of the highwayman!

Though the darkness was intense, I could tell, from the screams of the panther and the curses of the highwayman, that a desperate struggle was going on near me. It would be a fight to the death between the huge panther and the desperate villain.

Still hearing the struggle, I left them there to fight it out and took my way toward home, thankful for another miraculous escape. The panther had undoubtedly saved my life at the hands of the murderous highwayman. The highwayman had kept me from being slain by the panther.

I was now only a half mile from home, so I hurried on and in a short time I had emerged from Panther Hollow into a more open country. I would soon be at home. Though my legs were weary and my knees worked like rusty hinges, I hastened on. I passed over the creek where later stood the old water mill, then took my way up the hill to my home.

As I approached the house everything seemed wrapped in silence and no sign of life or light about the place. Not even the dim light of a candle shown through the window. Could anything disastrous have happened to my wife? With sinking heart I stepped upon the porch. In the darkness I felt my way to the door. As I was about to take hold of the knob a form sprang from a sheltered corner of the porch and a pistol was pressed against my head!

"Hands up!" cried the holder of the weapon. "Move but a muscle and you are dead!"

My hands shot up toward the sky and I realized that I was never nearer death than at that moment. I could feel the cold steel against my head and the click of the weapon, cocked and waiting but for the pressing of a finger. In the darkness I could not see the form, I knew the voice of the one who stood so near me with the pistol pressed so firmly against my head. It was my wife!

Could it be that I had escaped the wild beasts and desperadoes of Panther Hollow, but to be killed in my own home by my own wife?

"Nannie!" I cried, my voice scarcely more than a whisper. Instantly the pistol fell from her hands and crashed against the floor.

"Oh, Abram—is it you?" she exclaimed. "I thought it was the desperado who has been prowling around here since nightfall. Oh, my dear, dear husband, what if I had killed you!" and throwing her arms around my neck she fainted in my arms.

The next morning I arose early and found old Ben waiting to be fed. The poor creature had hobbled home sometime during the night. After breakfast I took my way to the scene of the night before. There I beheld the evidence of a tragic encounter. In the road, side by side lay the panther and the highwayman, both dead. By the light of day I discovered that the dead man was the one who held me up the morning before. Near him was my gun, and I knew he was

JUST A FEW FACTS

When a farmer ships a car load of cattle, or a ton of hay, or any other product away to the city market the money he receives becomes a part of the wealth of this community.

It is upon the income from the products that we ship away that we depend for the prosperity of our home people.

That is plain to every thinking person.

Every article we consume or use must come from some source. If it is produced at home the money we pay for it all remains in circulation at home. But if it is not produced here we must buy elsewhere.

That, also, is a fact well known to all people.

A retail merchant can buy the article we want from the manufacturer or wholesaler for considerably less than we would have to pay if we ordered direct from the factory. That is the discount made by manufacturers to all dealers.

That is still another fact which requires no extraordinary amount of brains to understand.

If we send away ourselves for what we want all of the money paid for the article goes out from the community and helps to enrich some person in some other community.

If we buy from a local dealer the wholesale price only is sent away, the dealer's profit remaining in circulation as part of the wealth of our own community.

That is the most vital fact of all, and yet it is one which many excellent citizens seemingly fail to comprehend.

A home trading community is invariably prosperous.

A foreign trading one is more often depressed.

In either case, it is as we make it.

IS IT YOU?

Every one knows him.

He is energetic, painstaking in everything that he does, and honorable to a degree.

He is considerate of the faults of others, and realizes many of his own imperfections, striving consistently to overcome them as best he may.

He is not a saint, and neither is he a great sinner.

He is what we term a good citizen and a credit to this community.

Is it you?

Prices, we are told, are still coming down. With the use of smoked glasses they should soon be in sight.

MRS. STEWART SPEAKS HERE

Originator of Moonlight Schools
Addresses Big Audience in Marion Opera House

Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, one of the most brilliant women and first organizer of the moonlight schools in the mountains in this state, addressed a large audience at the Opera House Wednesday afternoon in behalf of the Democratic national ticket. More than half of the big crowd which filled the opera house was composed of women voters.

The speaker told her audience that she was glad she was a woman, an American and a Democrat. In view of the momentous issues of the present campaign, where wrong was lined up against right, she would be ashamed of herself if she was not a Democrat.

Mrs. Stewart, who made the speech seconding the nomination of Gov. Cox for president at San Francisco, gave a glowing account of the workings of the national convention, its earnestness and enthusiasm, contrasting it with the apathy and lack of interest shown at the Republican convention at Chicago.

Mrs. Stewart devoted most of her speech to a discussion of the League of Nations, saying it transcended in importance all other issues before the people. She advised every one who had not read the League of Nations to do so, as no one could read it without prejudice and not be for its ratification by Congress. She paid a tribute to President Wilson and commended the work of his administration.

Great interest and much enthusiasm was manifest by the audience and rousing applause was given the speaker from the beginning to the close of her address.

DEMOCRATIC SPEAKINGS

Public speaking in behalf of the Democratic Presidential candidates at the times and places given below has been announced. An opportunity is thus given the voters all over the county to hear these interesting speakers discuss the political issues before the people. Women as well as men are invited to attend the meetings.

REPUBLICAN COLUMN

By County Campaign Committee.

The voters of America will not endorse the League of Nations.

When the polls are closed November 2, 1920, one of the greatest victories ever recorded in the history of our nation will have been won by the election of Warren G. Harding as president of this independent, peace-loving nation of ours, and it will be heard around the world, that America is America for Americans first.

The miserable failure on the part of the Democratic campaign speakers to interpret the League of Nations to mean no more wars, and the Republican campaign orators on the other hand having shown so plain and clear that the League of Nations does mean war and more wars and that our boys would be pulled away from their happy pursuits of life here in America, to go across the ocean, and there bleed and die trying to settle the quarrels and disputes of the European countries, that the minds of the voters are now made up and are anxiously awaiting the election day to come when they can go to the polls as a mighty legion of liberty loving American citizens, and register their vote against this dangerous un-American League of Nations that Wilson and Cox say we must have.

President Wilson says that we would be morally bound to conform to any decree of the league council. And Gov. Cox says that he and President Wilson are perfectly agreed and are of one accord. Therefore a vote for Cox means a vote for the League of Nations.

In the famous interview which took place between various Senators of the United States and President Wilson, for the purpose of discussing the League of Nations, the President was asked by Senator Harding whether in his opinion we would be legally bound to conform to any decree of the league council. The President replied that no legal responsibility would exist. Senator Harding then asked Wilson whether or not there would be, under such circumstances, a moral responsibility. The President replied that the moral responsibility would undoubtedly exist, and in response to further questioning he (President Wilson) admitted that the moral responsibility of a nation was much higher than its legal responsibility and that morally we would be bound to conform to any decrees issued by the League of Nations.

Therefore, under President Wilson's own interpretation of the meaning of article X, the United States would be bound obediently to carry out the decrees of the League of Nations.

Men and women of Crittenden, let us all go to the polls and help make the Republican success so overwhelming that it will forever end wanton extravagance, inefficiency and autocracy in government. And let there be a new glory to the stars and stripes when the sun rises on the morning of November 3.

Mrs. J. W. Lamb, 207 Shepard St., Princeton Ky. says: "I was troubled with severe backache, which I think was brought on by standing. I suffered with nervousness and dizzy spells when black spots appeared before my eyes. When I stooped over to sit down my back nearly killed me. I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills from Doan's Directory and began their use. Two or three boxes of this medicine relieved me greatly. I am always helped by Doan's and gladly recommend them as being reliable."

COVENANT OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Complete Text of This Important Document As It Was Signed at Paris and Which Is Now Causing Discussion in This Country.

EVERYONE SHOULD READ IT

The people of the United States have been asked, by both the proponents and the opponents of the peace treaty and League of Nations covenant, to give expression to their desires as to the ratification of the treaty as it stands or with amendments or reservations. Some of them have responded, at the meetings addressed by the president and by the opposing senators, or by communications to their senators. But the vast majority of the people are handicapped by their ignorance of the matter. Probably not one in ten thousand has read the covenant of the League of Nations as it was presented to the senate, mainly because few have had the opportunity. In order that our readers may be prepared to do their full duty as citizens in regard to the controversy, the complete text of the covenant is herewith presented, and they are asked to read it carefully.

THE COVENANT OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

The high contracting parties, in order to promote international co-operation and to achieve international peace and security by the acceptance of obligations not to resort to war, by the scrupulous respect for all treaty obligations in the dealings of organized peoples with one another, agree to this covenant of the League of Nations.

ARTICLE 1.—The original members of the League of Nations shall be those of the signatories which are named in the annex to this covenant and also such of those other states named in the annex as shall accede without reservation to this covenant. Such accession shall be effected by a declaration deposited with the secretariat within two months of the coming into force of the covenant. Notice thereof shall be sent to all other members of the league.

Any fully self-governing state, dominion, or colony not named in the annex may become a member of the league if its admission is agreed to by two-thirds of the assembly, provided that it shall give effective guarantees of its sincere intention to observe its international obligations, and shall accept such regulations as may be prescribed by the league in regard to its military, naval and air forces and armaments.

Any member of the league may, after two years' notice of its intention so to do, withdraw from the league, provided that all its international obligations and all its obligations under this covenant shall have been fulfilled at the time of its withdrawal.

ARTICLE 2.—The action of the league under this covenant shall be effected through the instrumentality of an assembly and of a council, with a permanent secretariat.

ARTICLE 3.—The assembly shall consist of representatives of the members of the league.

The assembly shall meet at stated intervals and from time to time as occasion may require at the seat of the league or at such other place as may be decided upon.

At meetings of the assembly each member of the league shall have one vote, and may have not more than three representatives.

ARTICLE 4.—The council shall consist of representatives of the principal powers, and shall have the right to invite and to accept the invitation of four other members of the league. These four members of the league shall be selected by the assembly from time to time in its discretion. Until the appointment of the representatives of the four members of the league first selected by the assembly, representatives of Belgium, Brazil, Spain, and Greece shall be members of the council.

With the approval of the majority of the assembly, the council may name members of the league whose representatives shall always be members of the council; the council with like approval may increase the number of members of the league to be selected by the assembly for representation on the council.

The council shall meet from time to time as occasion may require, and at least once a year, at the seat of the league, or at such other place as may be decided upon.

The council may deal at its meetings with any matter within the sphere of action of the league or affecting the peace of the world.

Any member of the league not represented on the council shall be invited to send a representative to sit as a member at any meeting of the council during the consideration of matters specially affecting the interests of that member of the league.

At meetings of the council, each member of the league represented on the council shall have one vote, and may have not more than one representative.

ARTICLE 5.—Except where otherwise expressly provided in this covenant or by the terms of the present treaty, decisions of any meeting of the assembly or of the council shall require the agreement of all the members of the league represented at the meeting.

ARTICLE 6.—The permanent secretariat shall be established at the seat of the league. The secretariat shall comprise a secretary general and such secretaries and staff as may be required.

The first secretary general shall be the person named in the annex; thereafter the secretary general shall be appointed by the council with the approval of the majority of the assembly.

The secretaries and staff of the secretariat shall be appointed by the secretary general with the approval of the council.

The secretary general shall act in that capacity at all meetings of the assembly and of the council.

The expenses of the secretariat shall be borne by the members of the league in accordance with the apportionment of the expenses of the international bureau of the Universal Postal union.

ARTICLE 7.—The seat of the league is established at Geneva.

The council may at any time decide that the seat of the league shall be established elsewhere.

All positions under or in connection with the league, including the secretariat, shall be open equally to men and women.

Representatives of the members of the league and officials of the league when engaged on the business of the league shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

The buildings and other property occupied by the league or its officials or by representatives attending its meetings shall be inviolable.

ARTICLE 8.—The members of the league recognize that the maintenance of peace requires the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with national safety and the enforcement by common action of international obligations.

The council, taking account of the geographical situation and circumstances of each state, shall formulate plans for such reduction for the consideration and action of the several governments.

Such plans shall be subject to reconsideration and revision at least every ten years.

After these plans shall have been adopted by the several governments, the limits of armaments therein fixed shall not be exceeded without the concurrence of the council.

The members of the league agree that the manufacture by private enterprise of munitions and implements of war is open to grave objections. The council shall advise how the evil effects attendant upon such manufacture can be prevented, due regard being had to the necessities of those members of the league which are not able to manufacture the munitions and implements of war necessary for their safety.

The members of the league undertake to interchange full and frank information as to the scale of their armaments, their military and naval programs, and the condition of such of their industries as are adaptable to warlike purposes.

ARTICLE 9.—A permanent commission shall be constituted to advise the council on the execution of the provisions of articles 1 and 8 and on military and naval questions generally.

ARTICLE 10.—The members of the league undertake to respect and preserve against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league. In case of any such aggression or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression the council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled.

ARTICLE 11.—Any war or threat of war, whether immediately affecting any of the members of the league or not, is hereby declared a matter of concern to the whole league, and the league shall take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations.

In any such emergency should arise the secretary general shall on the request of any member of the league forthwith summon a meeting of the council.

It is also declared to be the friendly right of each member of the league to bring to the attention of the assembly or of the council any circumstance whatever affecting international relations which threatens to disturb international peace or the good understanding between nations upon which peace depends.

ARTICLE 12.—The members of the league agree that if a dispute likely to lead to a rupture, they will submit the matter either to arbitration or to inquiry by the council, and they agree in no case to resort to war until three months after the award by arbitrators or the report by the council.

In any case under this article the award of the arbitrators shall be made within a reasonable time, and the report of the council shall be made within six months after the submission of the dispute.

ARTICLE 13.—The members of the league agree that if a dispute arises between them which they recognize to be suitable for submission to arbitration and which cannot be satisfactorily settled by diplomacy, they will submit the whole subject matter to arbitration.

Disputes as to the interpretation of a treaty, as to any question of international law, as to the existence of any fact which if established would constitute a breach of any international obligation, or as to the extent and nature of the reparation to be made by any such breach, are declared to be among those which are generally suitable for submission to arbitration.

For the consideration of any such dispute the court of arbitration to which the case is referred shall be the court agreed on by the parties to the dispute or stipulated in any convention existing between them.

The members of the league agree that they will carry out in full good faith any award that may be rendered, and that they will not resort to war against a member of the league which complies therewith. In the event of any failure to carry out such an award, the council shall propose what steps should be taken to give effect thereto.

ARTICLE 14.—The council shall formulate and submit to the members of the league for adoption plans for the establishment of a permanent court of international justice. The court shall be competent to hear and determine any dispute of an international character which the parties thereto submit to it. The court may also give an advisory opinion upon any dispute or question referred to it by the council or by the assembly.

ARTICLE 15.—If there should arise between members of the league any dispute likely to lead to a rupture, which is not submitted to arbitration in accordance with article 13, the members of the league agree that they will submit the matter to the council. Any party to the dispute may effect such submission by giving notice of the existence of the dispute to the secretary general, who will make all necessary arrangements for a full investigation and consideration thereof.

For this purpose the parties to the dispute will communicate to the secretary general, as promptly as possible, statements of their case with all the relevant facts and papers, and the council may forthwith direct the publication thereof.

The council shall endeavor to effect a settlement of the dispute, and if such efforts are successful, a statement shall be made public giving such facts and explanations regarding the dispute and the terms of settlement thereof as the council may deem appropriate.

If the dispute is not thus settled, the council either unanimously or by a majority vote shall make and publish a report containing a statement of the facts of the dispute and the recommendations which are deemed just and proper in regard thereto.

Any member of the league represented on the council may make public a statement of the facts of the dispute and of its conclusions regarding the same.

If a report by the council is unanimously agreed to by the members thereof other than the representatives of one or more of the parties to the dispute, the members of the league agree that they will not go to war with any party to the dispute which complies with the recommendations of the report.

If the council fails to reach a report which is unanimously agreed to by the members thereof, other than the representatives of one or more of the parties to the dispute, the members of the league reserve to themselves the right to take such action as they shall consider necessary for the maintenance of right and justice.

If the dispute between the parties is claimed by one of them, and is found by the council to affect a matter which by international law is solely within the domestic jurisdiction of that party, the council shall so report, and shall make no recommendation as to its settlement.

The council may in any case under this article refer the dispute to the assembly. The dispute shall be so referred at the request of either party to the dispute, provided that such request be made within 14 days after the submission of the dispute to the council.

In any case referred to the assembly all the provisions of this article and of article 12 relating to the action and powers of the council shall apply to the action and powers of the assembly, provided that a report made by the assembly, if concurred in by the representatives of those members of the league represented on the council and of a majority of the other members of the league, shall have the same force as a report by the council concurred in by all the members thereof other than the representatives of one or more of the parties to the dispute.

ARTICLE 16.—Should any member of the league resort to war in disregard of its obligations under articles 12, 13, or 15, it shall ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other members of the league, which hereby undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade and financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the covenant-breaking state, and the prevention of all financial, commercial, or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking state and the nationals of any other state, whether a member of the league or not.

It shall be the duty of the council in such case to recommend to the several governments concerned what effective military, naval or air force measures the members of the league shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the league.

The members of the league agree, further, that they will mutually support one another in the financial and economic measures which are taken under this article, in order to minimize the loss and inconvenience resulting from the above measures, and that they will mutually support one another in resisting any appeal made by the covenant-breaking state, and that they will take the necessary steps to afford passage through their territory to the forces of any of the members of the league which are competent to protect the covenants of the league.

Any member of the league which has violated any covenant of the league may be declared to be no longer a member of the league by a vote of the council concurred in by representatives of all the other members of the league represented thereon.

ARTICLE 17.—In the event of a dispute between a member of the league and a state which is not a member of the league, or between states not members of the league, the state or states not members of the league shall be invited to accept the obligations of membership in the league for the purpose of such dispute, upon such conditions as the council may deem just. If such invitation is accepted, the provisions of articles 12 to 16 inclusive shall be applied with such modifications as may be deemed necessary by the council.

Upon such invitation being given the council shall immediately institute an inquiry into the circumstances of the dispute and recommend such action as may seem best and most effectual in the circumstances.

If a state so invited shall refuse to accept the obligations of membership in the league for the purpose of such dispute, and shall resort to war against a member of the league, the provisions of article 16 shall be applicable against the state taking such action.

If both parties to the dispute when so invited refuse to accept the obligations of membership in the league for the purposes of such dispute, the council may take such measures and make such recommendations as will prevent hostilities and will result in the settlement of the dispute.

ARTICLE 18.—Every treaty or international engagement entered into hereafter by any member of the league shall be forthwith registered with the secretariat and shall as soon as possible be published by it. No such treaty or international engagement shall be binding until so registered.

ARTICLE 19.—The assembly may from time to time advise the reconsideration by members of the league of treaties which have become inapplicable and the consideration of international conditions whose continuance might endanger the peace of the world.

ARTICLE 20.—The members of the league severally agree that this covenant is accepted as abrogating all obligations or understandings inter se which are inconsistent with the terms thereof, and solemnly undertake that they will not hereafter enter into any engagements inconsistent with the terms thereof.

In case any member of the league shall, before becoming a member of the league, have undertaken any obligations inconsistent with the terms of this covenant, it shall be the duty of such member to take immediate steps to procure its release from such obligations.

ARTICLE 21.—Nothing in this covenant shall be deemed to affect the validity of international engagements such as treaties of arbitration or general understandings like the Monroe Doctrine, for securing the maintenance of peace.

ARTICLE 22.—To those colonies and territories which as a consequence of the late war have ceased to be under the sovereignty of the states which formerly governed them and which are inhabited by peoples not yet able to stand by themselves under the strenuous conditions of the modern world, there should be applied the principle that the well-being and development of such peoples form a sacred trust of civilization and the securities for the performance of this trust should be embodied in this covenant.

The best method of giving practical effect to this principle is that the tutelage of such peoples should be entrusted to advanced nations who by reason of their resources, their experience, or their geographical position can best undertake this responsibility, and who are willing to accept it, and that this tutelage should be exercised by them as mandatories on behalf of the league.

The character of the mandate shall differ according to the stage of development of the people, the geographical situation of the territory, its economic conditions and other similar circumstances.

Certain communities formerly belonging to the Turkish empire have reached a stage of development where their existence as independent nations can be provisionally recognized subject to the rendering of administrative advice and assistance by a mandatory until such time as they are able to stand alone.

The wishes of these communities must be a principal consideration in the selection of the mandatory.

Other peoples, especially those of central Africa, are at such a stage that the mandatory must be responsible for the administration of the territory under conditions which will guarantee freedom of conscience and religion, subject only to the maintenance of public order and morals, the prohibition of abuses such as the slave trade, the arms traffic and the liquor traffic, and the prevention of the establishment of fortifications or military and naval bases and of other measures of a purely military or police nature, and the defense of territory, and will also secure equal opportunities for the trade and commerce of other members of the league.

There are territories, such as South-west Africa and certain of the South Pacific Islands, which, owing to the sparseness of their population or their small size, or their remoteness from the centers of civilization, or their geographical situation, or for other reasons, are best administered under the laws of the mandatory as integral portions of its territory, subject to the safeguards above mentioned in the interests of the indigenous population.

In every case of mandate the mandatory shall render to the council an annual report in reference to the territory committed to its charge.

The degree of authority, control, or administration to be exercised by the mandatory shall, if not previously agreed upon by the members of the league, be explicitly defined in each case by the council.

A permanent commission shall be constituted to receive and examine the annual reports of the mandatories and to advise the council on all matters relating to the observance of the mandates.

ARTICLE 23.—Subject to and in accordance with the provisions of international conventions existing or hereafter to be agreed upon, the members of the league:

(a) will endeavor to secure and maintain fair and humane conditions of labor for men, women, and children, both in their own countries and in those of other countries, to which their commercial and industrial relations extend, and for that purpose will establish and maintain the necessary international organizations;

(b) undertake to secure just treatment of the native inhabitants of territories under control;

(c) will intrust the league with the general supervision over the execution of agreements with regard to the traffic in women and children and the traffic in opium and other dangerous drugs;

(d) will intrust the league with the general supervision over the control of the trade in arms and ammunition with the countries in which the control of this traffic is necessary in the common interest;

(e) will make provision to secure and maintain freedom of communications and of transit and equitable treatment for the commerce of all members of the league. In this connection the special necessities of the regions devastated during the war of 1914-1918 shall be borne in mind;

(f) will endeavor to take steps in matters of international concern for the prevention and control of disease.

ARTICLE 24.—There shall be placed under the direction of the league an international bureau already established by general treaties if the parties to such treaties consent. All such international bureaus and all commissions for the regulation of matters of international interest heretofore constituted shall be placed under the direction of the league.

In all matters of international interest which are regulated by general conventions but which are not placed under the control of international bureaus or commissions, the secretariat of the league shall, subject to the consent of the council and if desired by the parties, collect and distribute all relevant information and shall render any other assistance which may be necessary or desirable.

The council may include as part of the expenses of the secretariat the expenses of any bureau or commission which is placed under the direction of the league.

ARTICLE 25.—The members of the league agree to encourage and promote the establishment and co-operation of duly authorized voluntary national Red Cross organizations having as purposes the improvement of health, the prevention of disease, and the mitigation of suffering throughout the world.

ARTICLE 26.—Amendments to this covenant will take effect when ratified by the members of the league whose representatives compose the council and by a majority of the members of the league whose representatives compose the assembly.

No such amendment shall bind any member of the league which signifies its dissent therefrom, but in that case it shall cease to be a member of the league.

DO YOU USE SUGAR?

Why are you paying more for it to-day than you ever paid before?

Here's the reason:
The Sugar Equalization Board was formed in 1918. There was a sugar shortage. The Board bought the unrefined Cuban sugar crop and made an agreement with the refiners and brokers. So the public—YOU—could buy sugar at 10 cents.

Next year (July, 1919) George A. Zabriskie, president of the board, told the Democratic Administration of another sugar shortage, and the Board passed resolutions urging the buying of the 1919 Cuban crop.

Only one lonely member said the Cuban sugar would sell cheap to you even if the Government didn't buy it in advance in bulk and hold it for you; but the Democratic Administration took that one man's advice against the advice of the other seven Board members and in spite of what had happened the year before.

Wouldn't Let You Have It.

In September, the president of the Board sent another letter to President Wilson: "Please let us buy the Cuban sugar; we can get it cheap now (65 cents a pound), and sell it cheap to the people; if we don't buy it, profiteers will get hold of the sugar and sell it dear."

He said he believed this Cuban purchase "was necessary to assure the people of the United States a regular supply of sugar at a reasonable price during 1920."

President Wilson, then a well man, didn't even answer him.

Who's To Blame?

In October, Senator McNary drew up a bill, which became a law, giving the Democratic Administration absolute power to buy the cheap Cuban sugar for you.

But the Democratic Administration wouldn't use that power to buy sugar for you at 65 cents a pound.

Instead of pursuing such a course to protect you, through its Attorney General, A. Mitchell Palmer, the Democratic Administration made a deal with the Louisiana sugar growers, Mr. Palmer promising he wouldn't call it profiteering if they charged you 17 and 18 cents a pound—AND THEY DID!

Herbert Hoover said:
The present high retail cost of sugar is 100 per cent in excess of what it would be had President Wilson and his cabinet heeded the advice of the Sugar Equalization Board."

You Pay!

So there you are. The Board told the Democratic Administration that profiteers would get hold of sugar and boost its price if the Democratic Administration would do what the board wanted it to do, and now the Democratic Administration can't stop the gouging.

In just this matter of sugar, the Democrats' neglect will cost the American people $1,500,000,000—more than running the whole Government for a whole year before the war.

WHO IS DODGING?

The people will draw their own conclusions on Governor Cox's talk about campaign funds. Promised to go before the senatorial investigation committee, Governor Cox said:

"I do not see the need of my appearing before the committee. I am entitled to the privilege of giving the facts to the voters at such time and in the manner I SEE FIT."

Chairman Hays said, when informed of the senatorial investigation:
"Splendid! That is exactly what we desire. We welcome fullest publicity now and later and as often as possible."

Quite a difference in the Republican and Democratic attitude toward publicity, isn't there?

Baby's Photograph

By OTILLIA F. PFEIFFER

(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Humph!" muttered Joel Dorkins, and the accents were those of a disappointed man.

He had chanced to cast his eyes upon the bureau where lay his wife's writing materials. It held a letter which he recognized as from their married daughter, Eunice, who lived in Brampton, and beside it was a photograph, that of a child perhaps two years old. Either it was a poorly taken picture, or the subject was outrageously ugly looking naturally.

"Homely as sin," growled Joel, feeling wronged as a grandparent. "The first in the family, and squints, big nose and ears, and Ma egging me on to be prepared to give it a pretty present. Why, it ought to have a mask!"

Eunice and her husband had not been back home since they were married. Now they had announced a two weeks' visit, and little Virginia was to be brought in triumph. "Little cherub," took the prize at a baby show. "So smart and cute!" and like enthusiastic sentiments from its fond grandmother had aroused pride and anticipation in the mind of Joel Dorkins. Now he was disillusioned, with a positive shock. The photograph lay before him, probably just sent by Eunice. He had gone to a jeweler the week before and had ordered a costly neck chain, he had written out a check for one hundred dollars to be presented to the wonderful granddaughter as the start of a savings account.

"I'll cancel the order and tear up the check," declared Joel wrathfully. "I hope they don't parade the child around to have people endure its appalling homeliness. 'Cherub.' 'Pretty as a picture.' 'Looks just like mother!' Wow!"

Joel swung from room and house in a fever of dissatisfaction and resentment. Half a mile away lived Harper Driggs, the father of Eunice's husband. Driggs was a retired farmer, well-to-do, and Joel located him in the upper floor of the barn where he had a workshop. Originally Driggs had been a weaver in straw and split cane. To while away his idle hours he once in a while indulged in pottering at his old trade, purely for pleasure. He was now making a chair for his granddaughter.

"Whatever possesses father?" more than once during the week Mrs. Dorkins observed to her daughter. "He has a regular groch all of the time. Goes around as if the coming of your sister and Walter and the baby was a bore and annoyance to him."

"Oh, you're mistaken, mamma!" insisted Nora Dorkins. "He is just so anxious to see the little one, and coo-die it, and crow over it that he can hardly wait until Tuesday arrives."

Joel Dorkins overheard the latter opinion expressed and shook himself, and growled, and went out in the garden and kicked up the turf. Those big eyes! That flat nose!

Tuesday took him to town. The Driggs trio were expected to arrive about noon. Joel returned home about two o'clock. He was slightly penitent as to his aversion for the ugly child he was expected to go into ecstasies over. He could not feel pleasant or welcoming, but he felt it a duty to appear glad and cheerful at having Eunice once more under the home roof. As he peered the house he fancied he distinguished a flutter of feminine skirts disappearing. As he walked up the gravel path he stared hard. Seated in the wicker rocker that Driggs had made and presented was the most exquisitely perfect and beautiful little child his gaze had ever rested upon. Her eyes were starlike, her ringlets suggested an aureole of burnished gold. The moment she saw him approaching she arose, clasped her hands, and then, extending them earnestly towards him, exclaimed in wild and joyous glee:

"Dear Anaps! I see Virginia Estelle Driggs. How did you do?"

Joel fairly reeled. As there came a suppressed uttering from beyond the screen door leading into the hallway, he realized that the child was repeating a tutored lesson framed for his especial benefit. The child fairly sprang into his arms. There he held her, quivering all over with emotions he could not analyze.

Then he came in for a hugging from Eunice, which his son-in-law followed with a genial, heartsome greeting. And while they all babbled over the delighted little one, Joel stole out to the kitchen. He hung around his wife in a wavering, unaccountable way until she challenged:

"Joel, what ever possesses you, acting like a man in a daze?"

"I was just wondering," blurted Joel. "I noticed a photograph of a baby on your bureau—"

"Oh, that—your picture when you was a baby," replied Mrs. Dorkins. "What about it?"

"Oh, nothing at all!" answered Joel, with a wince.

"Your mother gave it to me years ago. You wasn't much of a looker in those days, eh, Joel?"

He made for his little den of a library in the wing of the house, pondering over his egregious mistake. He closed its door and took up the telephone to call up the town jeweler. "Send up that neck chain," he ordered. "Thought you didn't want it?"

"Changed my mind. Send it up this evening, will you?"

And then, going to his desk, he opened his check book and filled in a blank for five hundred dollars.

REGRETS

SCHOOLS STAND STILL

Everybody and everything appear to move forward while the rural school stands still. Few people ride in buggies or surries these days; but the children go to pretty much the same kind of school their parents attended.

That this tendency to let the schools stand still is the same in many portions of the country can be seen from the following extract from a letter written the Bureau of Education at Washington by Governor W. L. Harding, of the great and progressive state of Iowa:

"I spent a week last September visiting one-room country schools. I was amazed at the small progress that had been made in the last 20 years in these schools. I was equally amazed at the interest manifested by the people who supported these schools, doing whatever was necessary to improve them."

AUTOS OR SCHOOLS, WHICH?

Even big, rich New York City is beginning to realize that her schools and her teachers are not getting a fair deal. Here is a statement recently published in School Life. It does not speak of rural schools; but the reader can mentally change the figures to suit his or her local conditions and the shoe will fit all right.

"Of the 2,000,000 new automobiles of the pleasure-car type, valued at approximately $2,000,000,000, that will be sold in the United States during the present calendar year, it is conservatively estimated that New York City alone will purchase 50,000, valued at $50,000,000. It is estimated that there are in the city of New York 100,000 chauffeurs, whose salaries will amount to approximately $150,000,000. Garages (there are 250,000 cars, approximately, in the city) will be not less than $25,000,000, probably much more. Certainly a community that can afford to pay nearly a quarter of a billion dollars a year for pleasure-car service can manage to provide the teachers of its 500,000 children with a decent living. Really, the $30,000,000 paid our teachers for the year 1919 is a bagatelle by comparison."

BETTER SCHOOLS IN NORWAY

Some of the nations on the other side of the Atlantic are pushing ahead in the practical education of their children. Besides school work, children are taken on long excursions so they may become acquainted with what other people are doing in other localities. All of which proves conclusively that we in America must make our schools real schools for real 20th Century Children.

The following extract from School Life will give the reader an idea of these excursions which are being developed for school children in Norway:

"Excursions of pupils which were much in vogue before the war are again conducted and on a much larger scale than formerly. During the summer vacation many of the school buildings are opened as 'travel bureaus.' The seats and desks are moved out or placed out of the way, and the schoolhouse is equipped as a pupils' hotel. 'Folkesholen' reports that an arrangement like the following has been found satisfactory: A certain schoolroom in Stockholm is furnished with 22 cots, mattresses, pillows, and blankets, and 6 washbasins. These arrangements accommodate a group of 50 pupils, with the 2 teachers in charge. Towels and sheets are brought by the travelers themselves.

"Every school in the cities is furnished with a school kitchen. Permission is given to the travelers to use this and the cooking utensils in preparing breakfast. The midday meal is taken at some of the inexpensive, and yet very good, hotels that are found at all principal points. All arrangements are made beforehand, so that each bureau and hotel knows when every party is to arrive.

"Boys and girls travel separately. If the trip is short, it is made on foot; if longer, the boys use bicycles. Trips to more distant parts requiring 10 days or 2 weeks are made by rail or steamboat. It is always possible to get very much reduced rates for a school excursion. Pupils from different countries visit each other in this way; the present season will bring pupils together from Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Holland and Germany."

BIG MEN ENDORSE NEW SCHOOL LAW

Democratic Senator and Republican Leader In Accord
On Welfare of Children

Senator J. C. W. Beckham was seen some time ago by your staff representative who asked the Senator for his views upon the new County School Administration Law. The Senator's very hopeful statement is given in full below:

"While I have not had a chance to read the entire school law passed by the last session of the Legislature, I have been informed of its general provisions and am very hopeful that it will accomplish great good for our county schools and enable them to make greater progress than ever.

"It is hardly necessary for me to say how deeply interested I am in the school work in our State, for during the time I was a member of the Legislature, and Governor, I always gave special consideration to the progress and development of our school system. It is a great work. The rural schools have not, of course, and the advantages of the city schools, and I earnestly hope that the new system adopted under this law may prove satisfactory and successful in every way.

"I understand that under the new law County Boards of Education are to be elected in the state on November 2nd, and I trust that the people of every county will realize the great importance of this election and see to it that the best persons possible to secure for that work shall be elected.

"The success of the law will depend to a very considerable extent upon the character and intelligence of those who make up these county boards.

"There is no more important work in our State than the improvement and development of our schools, and especially the rural schools. I was for three years a teacher in the common schools in this State, and I have realize that good schools for all of the children are the solid foundation stones upon which a republic like ours is erected. Good schools mean an educated public which will think sanely, act sanely and vote sanely at all times and on all questions. That every child, everywhere may be educated, good schools must exist in our cities, in our small towns and in our most remote rural districts.

"Many of our large cities and towns have developed strong school systems which are giving splendid service. A few of the rural districts in Kentucky have done the same thing for their children, but many counties have been backward in giving the country child a real opportunity for a first-class education because of laws which have permitted the schools to be pulled into local politics.

Hon. A. T. Hert

"It is indeed fortunate that both of the political parties in Kentucky at the last session of the Legislature laid aside all party feeling, got together and passed a group of strong school laws that will remake the rural schools. These new school laws will practically take the County Boards of Education and the County Superintendent out of politics and keep them out of politics if the voters will think of the children when they go to the polls in November.

"Every right thinking man and woman should vote for strong men for the new County Boards of Education. These right thinking people should also urge others to do likewise that every small school shall be developed to serve the children, and in serving the children make the State what it should be in the future."

DON'T SKIMP ON SCHOOLS

always watched, with particular care, the development of our school system, and aided in it whenever possible. I am truly glad, too, that provision has been made for increased salaries for our school teachers. Considering the work they do, so important and so far reaching, training the minds and characters of our children, they have been paid incommensurably low salaries and no class of people deserve increased pay more than they do."

The Hon. A. T. Hert, National Committeeman for the Republican party, sent the following strong statement for publication concerning the election of County Boards of Education under the new law next November:

"Every right thinking man and woman in this enlightened age must

Every magazine and newspaper in the land is printing editorials concerning the schools of the nation. The Youth's Companion has the following to say concerning the schools in America:

"The schools of America were founded and maintained by sacrifice; only so can they be preserved. The teacher must be convinced of the value and dignity of his service that he will not lightly abandon it for some occupation that offers more ease or excitement or money. And on the other hand the public must stop being niggardly. It must tax itself more heavily for schools than it has been in the habit of doing, and it must pay salaries that do not degrade the teacher in the eyes of the community. Wherever else a county must skimp, let it not skimp on its schools."

We Show You How to Save on Clothes

We start right by featuring the products of manufacturers who have the greatest buying leverage of any clothes makers in the world. The purchasing power and large scale production of enables them to sell clothes at a very narrow margin of profit. Then we follow their example. We specialize in clothes for men and young men exclusively and by operating on a mark-up basis so small as to have broken all rules and customs of the clothing business, we are able to offer values that the best judges pronounce to be "the best ever shown."

FORDSON

TRADE MARK

Farm Tractor

More than 100,000 Fordson Tractors have been sold to farmers in the United States. They are helping those farmers do more and better work in less time and less cost. North, East, South, West—everywhere the Fordson has proven itself a money-maker and a real necessity to the farmer. Besides it is helping mightily to solve the labor problem.

These one hundred thousand and more practical farmers have affirmed the economy—the exceptionally low fuel and operating cost—of the Fordson; its time and labor-saving qualities and its ability to increase production. The Fordson was built to be the most economical tractor; it is compact and devoid of excessive weight. And it is built of the same strong iron and steel as in the Ford car.

Winter or bad weather does not hinder the Fordson's usefulness. Day or night—twenty four hours a day if you choose—you can utilize the Fordson.

Only so many Fordsons are allotted this territory. Orders are being filled in sequence—first come first served. Let us have yours now.

There's a practical use for the Fordson every day of the year. Let's tell you and have a tractor talk. Give us the chance to make a demonstration on your own farm.
