CHAPTER XI

"Why, don't you remember me?" he asked.

Fanny looked at him closely. He was a tall man with a receding hairline. "I think I do," she said. "You were the man who showed me around the station when I first arrived.

"It's been a long time," he said. "I didn't think you'd be coming back." He pointed to a seat across the aisle. "Here's a seat for you. I'll get your luggage.

Fanny thanked him and settled into the seat. She was wearing a long dress and a hat with a veil. She took out a book and began to read. The conductor returned with her luggage and placed it by her seat.

"Thank you," Fanny said. "I'm glad you remembered me."

The conductor nodded and left the car. Fanny opened her book and began to read.

Farm Tractor

More than 10,000 Fordson Tractors have been sold to farmers in the United States. They are helping these farmers to do more and better work in less time and less cost. North, East, South, West—everywhere the Fordson has proved itself a man-ey-maker and a real necessity to the farmer. Besides it is handling gently to solve the labor problem.

There are hundred thousand and more practical farmers have adopted the economy—economy exceptionally high for all operating cost—of the Fordson; its time and labor-saving qualities and its ability to increase production. The Fordson was built to be the most economical tractor; it is compact and devoid of excessive weight. And it is built of the same strong iron and steel as in the Ford car.

Winter or bad weather does not hinder the Fordson’s usefulness. Day or night—twenty-four hours a day if you choose—you can utilize the Fordson.

There’s a practical use for the Fordson every day of the year. Let’s talk it over. Come in and have a talk with the Field Man. Give us the chance to make a demonstration on your own farm.
