CHAPTER XXXIII—CONTINUED

It was a beautiful day. The air was warm and thick with life, and I knew that I should love to feel it on my face and smell it in my nostrils, to breathe it deep and strong, to drink it into my very soul. I felt as though I could breathe it better than I had ever breathed it before, and I knew that I should love to feel it on my face and smell it in my nostrils, to breathe it deep and strong, to drink it into my very soul.

The sun was high in the sky, and the temperature was perfect. I could feel the warmth of the sun on my face, and I knew that I should love to feel it on my face and smell it in my nostrils, to breathe it deep and strong, to drink it into my very soul.

The air was full of the sweet fragrance of flowers and trees, and I knew that I should love to feel it on my face and smell it in my nostrils, to breathe it deep and strong, to drink it into my very soul.

Illinois Central Reviews Transportation Conditions of 1920

The railways of the United States have just emerged from a year of unprecedented difficulties. With a transportation plant untried to the degree that it is now, they made a remarkably good job, and in which forward-looking critics generally will say well.

Commercial requirements were the greatest in history. Because of a short in the winter in November and December, 1920, at the beginning of 1920 the country was 4,000,000,000 short of its normal supply of coal. Other commodities and coal were in great readiness. A food of traffic was turned upon the railways.

Traffic had suffered from the war. New equipment had not been purchased in sufficient quantities. Old equipment had not been made and used, and the material was almost exhausted. A food of traffic was turned upon the railways.

Fears, the great demands for transportation, with many obstacles in the way, the railways accomplished a task that seemed almost impossible. The result of a vast success was necessary. Traffic was turned upon the railways. A steadily increasing record of efficiency was built up, week by week, until the great load now falling upon the railways. The peak of the car shortage was passed early in September. Late in December a car shortage actually ended. The supply of transportation now exceeds the demand for the first time in five years.

An Appreciation

We want to thank the people of this community who have made the year's business that has just come to a close.

It was by far the best year we have ever had—and we have tried to merit your patronage by searching the country for goods for the merchandise you wanted.

During the coming year we will make every effort to serve you even better—and we are "Not Satisfied till You Are."

Lower Prices in 2021

In order to sell our goods for the least money possible and to give our customers full benefit of all decline on the market, we will from this date sell only for cash.

But all customers that have been trading weekly or every 30 days will be allowed to trade as usual. But accounts must be paid promptly at end of month or credit will be withdrawn.

We appreciate the loyalty of my many friends and customers and by adhering to the above plan we can save you money.

All accounts and notes we have are now sold or paid for since we will proceed by law. Take notice, this means you.
