"Oh, my love!" he cried happily. "I hadn't dared dream of such happiness until today. You were so unattainmble-the obstacles between us were so many and so great-

"Why today, Bryce?" she interrupted him. He took her aderable little nose in his great thumb and forefinger and tweaked it gently. "The light began to dawn yesterday, my dear little eqemy, following an interesting halfhour which I put in with his honor the Acting upon suspicion only, I told Poundstone I was prepared to send him to the rock pile if he didn't behave himself in the matter of my permanent franchise for the N. C. O .-and the oily old invertebrate went and promised me anything if I wouldn't disgrace him. So I promised I wouldn't do anything until the franchise matter should be definitely settled-after which I returned to my office, to find awaiting me there no less a person than the right-of-way man for the Northwestern Pacific. He was a perhad a proposition to unfold. It seems the Northwestern Pacific has decided to build up from Willits, and all that powwow and publicity of Buck Ogil wy's about the N. C. O. was in all probability the very thing that spurred them to action. They figured the back for—and that is a perfectly C. M. & St. P. was back of the N. C. O. derful daughter-in-law for you!" -that it was to be the first link in a chain of coast roads to be connected ultimately with the terminus of the C. M. & St. P. on Gray's Harbor, Wash-Ington. And if the N. C. O. should be built it meant that a rival road would get the edge on them in the matter of every stick of Humboldt and Del Norte redwood-and they'd be left holding the sack." "Why did they think that, dear?" "That amoving raseal, Buck Ogilvy, wised to be a C. M. & St. P. man; they thought they traced an analogy, I dare say. Ferhaps Buck fibbed to them. At any rate this right-of-way man was mighty anxious to know whether or not the N. C. O. had purchased from the Cardigan Redwood Lumber conpany a site for a terminus on tidewater (we control all the deep-water frontage on the bay), and when I told him the deal had not yet been closed he started to close one with me."

"Did you close?" "My dear girl, will a dack swim? Of course I closed. I sold three-quarters of all we had, for three-quarters of a million dollars, and an hour ago I received a wire from my attorney in San Francisco informing me that the money had been deposited in escrow there awaiting formal deed. That money puts the Cardigan Redwood Lumber company in the clear-no recelvership for us now, my dear one. And I'm going right ahead with the building of the N. C. O .- while our Boldings down on the San Hedrin double in value, for the reason that within three years they will be acceswible and can be logged over the ralls of the Northwestern Pacific!"

"Bryce," Shirley declared, "baven't I always told you I'd never permit you to build the N. C. O.

"Of course," he replied, "but surely you're going to withdraw your objections now."

"I am not. You must choose between the N. C. O. and me." And she met his surprised gaze unflinchingly.

"Shirley! You don't mean it?" "I do mean it. I have always meant I love you, dear, but for all that you must not build that road."

He stood up and towered above her sternly. "I must build it, Shirley. I've contracted to do it, and I must keep faith with Gregory of the Trinidad Timber company. He's putting up the money, and I'm to do the work and operate the line. I can't go back on

"Do you realize what that resolution neans to us?" The girl's tones were grave, her glance graver.

"I realize what it means to me " She came closer to him. Suddenly the blaze in her violet eyes gave way to one of mirth. "Oh, you dear big booby!" she cried. "I was just test ing you." And she clung to him, laugh ing. "You always beat me down-you always win. Bryce, dear, I'm the Laguna Grande Lumber company-at least I will be tomorrow, and I repeat for the last time that you shall not build the N. C. O .- because I'm going to-oh, dear, I shall die laughing at you-because I'm going to merge with the Cardigan Redwood Lumber company, and then my railroad shall be haul Gregory's logs to tidewater for him also. And-silly, didn't I tell you you'd never build the N. C. O.?"

"God bless my mildewed soul!" he murmured, and drew her to him. In the gathering dusk they walked down the trail. Beside the madrone feetly delightful young fellow, and he tree John Cardigan waited patiently. "Well," he queried when they joined him, "did you find my handkerchief for me, son? "I didn't find your handkerchief. John Cardigan," Dryce answered, "but I did find what I suspect you sent me back for-and that is a perfectly won-

CHAPTER XIX.

Col. Seth Pennington was thoroughly crushed. Look which way, he would the bedeviled old rascal could find no loophole for escape

"You win, Cardigan," he muttered desperately as he sat in his office after Shirley had left him, "You've had more than a shadedn every round thus far, and at the finish you've landed a clean knockout. If I had to fight any man but you-

He sighed resignedly and pressed the push-button on his desk. Sexton entered. "Sexton," he said bluntly and with a slight quiver in his voice, "my niece and I have had a disagree ment. We have quarreled over young Cardigan. She's going to marry him. Now, our affairs are somewhat involved, and in order to straighten them out we spun a coin to see whether she should sell her stock in Lagunn Grande to me or whether I should sell | a day and found. I don't care what his last year's business, plus ten per cent out the logs, hang his rascally hide, will determine the selling price, and I and I'm for him shall resign as president. You will, "I'm afraid you in all probability, be retained to manage the company until it is merged dryly. with the Cardigan Redwood Lumber company-when, I imagine, you will be given ample notice to seek a new tob elsewhere. Call Miss Sumner's attorney, Judge Moore, on the telephone and ask him to come to the office at nine o'clock tomorrow, when the papers can be drawn up and signed.

That is all." The Colonel did not return to his home in Redwood boulevard that night. He had no appetite for dinner and sat brooding in his office until very late; then he went to the Hotel Sequola and engaged a room. He did not possess sufficient courage to face his niece ngain

At four o'clock the next day the Colonel, his baggage, his automobile, his chauffeur and the solemn butler, James, boarded the passenger steamer for San Francisco, and at four-thirty sailed out of Humboldt bay over the thundering bar and on into the south. The Colonel was still a rich man, but his dream of a redwood empire had faded, and once more he was taking up the search for cheap timber. Whether he ever found it or not is a matter that does not concern us.

At a moment when young Henry Poundstone's dream of legal opulence was fading, when Mayor Poundstone's hopes for domestic peace had been shattered beyond repair, the while his cheap political aspirations had been equally devastated because of a certain damnable document in the possession of Bryce Cardigan, many events of importance were transpiring. On the veranda of his old-fashioned home John Cardigan sat tapping the floor with his stick and dreaming dreams which for the first time in many years were rose-tinted. Beside him Shirley sat, her glance bent musingly out him up, and Rondeau went to his old pal." across the roofs of Sequolo and on to the bay shore, where the smoke and last I saw of him he was headed over Hgan smiled up at his boy. The presence of the pest may readly be determined, however, by the detection of small areas from poultry houses, on the boards specked with black and white as though dusted with salt and pepper. This is the excrement of the mites, which are hidden in adjacent cracks or rough places. More careful examination will reveal masses of mites in hiding, together with their eggs and the silvery akins cast by the

In moderately infested poultry houses the injury to the fowls is not easily apparent, but the constant blood loss and fritation are shown by decreased egg production and the poor condition of the fowls' flesh. In heavily infested coops it is not unusual for the chickens to become droopy and weak, with pale comb and wattles. Sitting hens desert their nests and thus ruin the eggs or, as is the nest, being killed outright by the attack of thousands of miles. In exfreme cases a considerable number of fowls succumb, even though not sitting, and all are so weakened as to less waste. be very susceptible to various dis-

Owing to the fact that mites feed during the night and secrete themselves in cracks and crevices during the day, their presence very often is everlooked until a very heavy infestation has developed. In such cases they should be attacked energetical-Although not hard to kill, the greatest obstacle is the difficulty of reaching them in their hiding places. Dust baths will not control them, as, at most, only the few which remain on the chickens during the daytime will be destroyed. The first step necessary to destroy the mites is to get rid of the hiding places so far as possible. The roosts should be taken down and all unneces essary boards and boxes removed. In heavily infested houses the mites are to be found in all parts of the building, including the roof. Where they are less numerous the infestations usually are confined to the roosts and nests and the walls immediately adjacent. For small coops a hand atomizer will suffice for applying insecticides as sprays, but for larger houses a bucket pump, knapsack sprayer, or barrel pump is desirable. A rather coarse spray should be applied from all angles and thoroughly driven into the cracks. The floor also should be treated, as many mites fall to the floor when the roosts are being removed. In tests conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture during the last two years a considerable number of materials used as sprays have proved effective. One of the so-called wood preservers was found immediately effective, and its killing or repelling power lasts for months. As this material is rather expensive (about $1 per gallon), and ts too heavy to spray well, it is advisable to reduce it with equal parts

Crude petroleum is almost as effective, retains its killing power for several weeks, and in most localities it is very cheap. It will spray better if thinned with one part of kerosene to four parts of crude oll.

It has been found that one thorough application of either of these materials will completely eradicate the mites from an infested chicken house, but ordinarily it is advisable to make a second application a month after the first, and in some cases a third treatment is required. These subrequent applications may be made | termelons will grow so rapidly next with a brush, using the materials undiluted and covering only the roosts. paid.

SHOCKED CORN GOOD SILAGE

Refilling Silo With Surplus Even in Middle of Winter Is Most Economical Practice.

"Corn cut at the proper time and put into the shock can be made into good silage, even in the middle of the winter," says Alvin Kezer of the agronomy department of the Colorado Agricultural college. "Of course, such sitage will not be as palatable as when siloed early and there will be more mechanical waste of leaves and other parts of the corn plant because the shocked corn had been stored for part of the winter, either in the shock or in stacks. But if this dry fodder is run aften the case, they are found dead on through a silage cutter and the proper amount of water run in with it, it will make good sliage and a much more palatable feed than the dry fodder, which will be eaten by the stock with

VERMIN CARRY HOG DISEASES

Lousy Animal Will Consume More Feed Than Clean One, According to Many Experiments.

A hog affected with lice can't make as profitable use of his feed as one that is free from this pest. No succeasful hog man will dispute this statement; yet, judging from the condition of some farmers' hogs, it is doubtful whether all realize that it really costs money to feed lice. However, feeding experiments have been conducted from time to time which show plainly that a lousy hog consumes more feed per pound of gain than a clean hog. This loss of feed, however, is not the only reason for keeping hogs free from lice. Lice are also disease carriers. They will carry infection from one hog to another and that, perhaps, is as strong a reason for holding lice in check as any other.

VENTILATION FOR POTATOES

Tubers Tend to Sweat Upon Being Put Into Storage and Air Is Needed to Dry Moisture.

Large piles of potatoes should have ventilation channels provided, either by lattice work or by rows of crates. Petatoes tend to sweat upon being put into storage. Ventilation is necessary to dry this moisture. Only a general rule can be given, but potatoes chould be kept as dry as possible, yet avolding shriveting, and should be kept as near the freezing point as possible, yet avoiding freezing.

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.
