Farm Bureau Notes

SWEET CLOVER

Excellent results may be obtained by seeding sweet clover in April and May if a good seed bed is prepared. After the soil has been well pulverized and firmed down as hard as possible with a roller, the seed may be sown with a clover drill or broadcast and covered lightly with a harrow and drag. Seeding in the spring is most successful when done under good moisture conditions. In case of dry weather immediately after seeding the ground may be rolled with a corrugated roller or cultipacker.

Land Gets Best Rest by

Producing Legumes

Although many Kentucky farmers still follow the unprofitable practice of allowing land to remain idle for a year in which to rest there is a more profitable plan which accomplishes the same end. This plan is to grow a legume crop instead of leaving the field barren and subject to washing and leaching. Such a crop will not only rest the soil but will also prevent from washing and at the same time increase its content of nitrogen and organic matter. Cow peas have been found to be one of the best crops to plant for this purpose. The crop will grow even on the poorest soil and a bushel of the whippoorwill variety broadcast on an acre will give a ton or more growth to the acre.

The greatest improvement of the soil will be made if the entire crop is turned under but the peas may be pastured sufficiently to pay for the cost of growing them and then the residue turned under with good results. Following the cowpeas rye may be sown to furnish fall and winter pasture and a mixture of grasses sown in the spring in the rye plowed under in preparation for the planting of a cultivated crop.

Have you preserved your winter's supply of eggs? The water glass method is very satisfactory. For further details call the County Agent's office.

Save the stable manure, Crittenden county's soil needs all the manure and organic matter it can get. Don't you know that over half the fertility value is lost by laying out exposed to the weather for a period of only three months? A manure shed is a very wise investment and a number of the best farmers of the county have them.

Better Sires—Better Stock

This is a nation-wide crusade fostered by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Kentucky State Agricultural College to improve the quality of live stock through the use of pure bred sires. The week of May 2nd will be the Better Sires—Better Stock Campaign in Crittenden county. A representative from the Bourbon Stock Yards at Louisville will be here and in co-operation with County Agent John R. Spencer will conduct an active campaign for better sires. Do you know that the farmers of the state of Kentucky lost last year an average of $5 a head on all live stock marketed because they did not use enough pure bred sires?

The plan in a nut shell is this—the live stock owner signs a pledge agreeing to use only pure bred sires on his cattle, sheep, horses and poultry and try to induce his neighbors to do the same. The owner receives a certificate from the Department of Agriculture certifying his use of pure bred sires. These certificates are a distinguishing mark of a good farmer.

To promote this campaign the State College of Agriculture in co-operation with the Bourbon Stock Yards will hold a pure bred bull sale of 260 animals on June 22 at Louisville.

Every one interested should get in touch with the County Agent for further details.

INJURED BY DYNAMITE

Mr. C. C. Walker, of Deanwood, happened to a serious accident Thursday of last week. Mr. Walker was at the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. Spurgeon Towery, assisting him in digging a well. They were preparing to put off a charge of dynamite and while attempting to place a cap on the dynamite, the charge exploded and tore off the thumb and two fingers from his left hand. Several pieces struck Mr. Walker in the face, one fragment cutting a severe gash in his right eye. He is expected to lose his sight in this eye. Mr. Walker left Sunday to take treatment from his brother, Dr. Frank Walker of Princeton.

REVIVAL AT PRINCETON

Caldwell county citizens are regarding the river route with interest and it is proposed to use the bond issue for this route. The sum of $25,500 has been allotted for the road connecting the Caldwell and Lyon counties. It is also proposed to construct a road from Princeton to the Crittenden county line and the sum of $120,000 has been suggested for this route.

THE STATE OPPORTUNITY

"Old Kentucky Home Week" in the State from May 8th to the 14th should see laid upon the altar of State pride and historic memory the whole $100,000 asked for by the State commission. We know not what portion of it has already been sent in, but that there are certainly 2,000 Kentucky men and women easily eligible to the Fifty Dollar Club we do know and these alone would complete the assurance of a noble ideal realized.

The judgment of the State commission that every child and every family should be privileged to contribute "from pennies to pounds" is in keeping with the ideal of the movement itself; but those able to give the pounds should not wait upon the pennies. It is a most difficult task to reach a whole population and a very small sum mount up slowly. It would be a splendid record for State sentiment to see this fund oversubscribed before May 14th by those able to give from $5 upward. Such a fact might well go around the world with the fame of Foster's song. The privilege of helping should not be allowed by Kentuckians to degenerate into a "drive" for help.

There would be no mistake in oversubscribing the fund. The commission is composed of men and women who have the development and building of the state at heart: Democrats and Republicans—they are of both camps—but they all belong to the greater camp of Kentuckians fighting in one line for the greater glory of the State. They have announced their desire to obtain more than the mere purchase price in order that the grounds may be beautified and the historic house and contents put in perfect repair. The finer "show place" it is made the better the investment for the ideal and the practical. As we have heretofore pointed out, this should be one link in a chain that will make Kentucky greatly attractive to travelers from everywhere—"My Old Kentucky Home," Lincoln Memorial, Mammoth Cave the Jefferson Davis Memorial.

Let us not close our eyes to the fact that the world is always ready to take us on trial at the value we first put on ourselves. We must "deliver the goods" then to have that value maintained. But if we set no value upon the things of infinite interest that we possess what wonder if the world passes us by without notice. After all it is the interesting things more than the prosaic that attract people. California has actually prospered more from its well-advertised climate, its Yosemite Valley and its picturesqueness than from its gold fields. In Mammoth Cave Kentucky has a wonder equal to the Yosemite. But what Kentuckian away from home ever saw the Mammoth Cave on a poster advertisement as an inducement to travelers to come this way?

We need capital invested in Kentucky, but we are not using the capital that nature and fortuity have given us. These are considerations for business men and sentimentalsists alike. There is nothing in a sentiment that does not speak in practical deeds, works. There is nothing in a business that has no sentiment to render it noble and expressive. The two united make a strong people. The opportunity to combine them in the buying and preserving of Federal Hill is one that every Kentucky business man should act upon. It "means business."—Courier Journal.

C. S. Nunn and Miss Ethel Hard have been appointed as County Chairmen of the "Old Kentucky Home" Committee by Governor Morrow. The drive to raise money for the purchase of the house in which Stephen C. Foster wrote "My Old Kentucky Home" will start May 8. Everyone is wanted to donate a little but the committee will not accept a large amount from anyone.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

All persons having claims against the estate of Louis A. Guess, deceased, who have not heretofore proven their claims, will present same to me properly proven as required by law, at my office, on or before the first day of June, 1921, or be forever barred.

D. A. LOWRY, Master Commissioner, Crittenden Circuit Court.

STORM DOES BIG DAMAGE AT SMITHLAND

SMITHLAND, KY.—Damage of approximately $10,000 to $25,000 was done Tuesday afternoon by a storm that swept over Smithland, unroofing business houses, breaking windows, toppling over trees and causing general disorder. Although the wind reached a velocity of 39 to 40 miles an hour none of the citizens were injured seriously.

Will Hollingsworth, a young man, had a narrow escape from injury when he was driving down the street and a large tree crashed down on the buggy he occupied. He was thrown to the street and stunned but escaped with only a few minor bruises.

Shortly after 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon a dark cloud appeared from the southwest and it was accompanied by the hard wind that unroofed the Masonic building and damaged the roofs of nearly every business house in Smithland. During the windstorm a heavy rain descended and large hail stones dropped for several minutes. The hailstones rivaling in size that of large marbles, broke window panes in every section of Smithland. It is feared that the hail did damage to growing crops.

The roof on the building occupied by the produce store of Rudd & Wilson was lifted off, also that of the residence of Mrs. M. H. Smith. Trees in almost every section of Smithland are blown down and caused considerable damage to the telephone wires.

BIG CROWD

Last Saturday being a bright day and the farmers could not plow they brought their wives and daughters and sweethearts to Marion to see the big street parade and many went under the tent to see the show. However the social features were the most interesting of the day. Every body seemed to be in a good humor and the day passed off quietly. The merchants reported good business.

SEE VALUE OF PLAYGROUNDS

Cities Spending Much Money Now for Recreational Centers, Which Might Have Been Saved.

Memphis, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Akron and Hartford have in the course of the last year doubled their appropriations for playgrounds, while Dayton trebled its appropriation the year before. Detroit has issued $10,000,000 in bonds for parks and playgrounds; Portland, Ore., has issued $500,000 for the purchase of playgrounds, and Pittsburgh $381,000 for the same purpose. With the increase of congestion in the streets of American cities the business of being a child becomes more and more hazardous. In this connection the American City states that 23 children a month, on an average, were killed in the streets of New York city during 1920. Few blocks in the city have provision for play space. Of the 15 play centers planned by the Playground association all but six remained closed because of lack of funds. It is pointed out that the policy of providing accommodations for play should be adopted in connection with rebuilding and the construction of new buildings.

The time to lay out playgrounds and recreational centers is before the town has grown to an extent that makes it necessary to condemn property for such purposes. Let there be a properly understood, comprehensive plan followed in the development of the town from its start.

Trees Public Property.

The pioneers planted forest or shade trees when there was scarcely an argument for their planting—when they were hemmed in and surrounded by virgin forest, writes C. F. Riley in the American Forestry Magazine of Washington. Today we are enjoying the fruits of their devotion, wisdom and forethought. Shall we do less—when there is so much more need—for the rising generations and for those yet unborn? Not every husbandman has appreciated the value of shade-trees, witness the ruthless cutting down and making into cordwood of whole lines of noble, stalwart sugar maples! A legal enactment in every state providing that every tree now or hereafter standing within the legal road boundary shall be considered public property is suggested.

Appropriate Symbols.

Symbols are curious things. Our language is full of them and so is religious ritual, the ceremonies of secret societies, and at times it is very picturesque. When we wish to imply that a man's head is full of absurd, chaotic ideas we say in slang that there are "bats in his belfry." Do you not see how in a dream a belfry could symbolize a head, and bats, morbid, sinister and absurd ideas?

Friday Was Columbus' Fate.

It was on a Friday that Columbus set out from Spain to seek a new world; on Friday that he first caught sight of land; on Friday that he started on his return voyage; on Friday that he safely arrived back in Spain; on Friday that he first sighted the American mainland on his next voyage; on Friday that he first set his foot upon it, and again on Friday that he landed in his native land.

REVERSING THINGS.

The end of the baseball season was drawing near and, as had been the custom, the team from the local police force and a team from one of the lodges in town were playing their annual game of ball. A citizen who owned a fast motorcar was "Umps." The wenders of the star were at bat, Jim Clancy, a special cop, had connected with a slow one, which went short. It was a close play.

"You're out!" yelled the ump.

"What! I was safe a mile," said Clancy.

"I said you're out," repeated the ump with emphasis, as he started toward his place back of the pitcher.

Clancy said something about robber, and needing games, when the umpire turned.

"Say, Clancy," he said, "remember the other day when you said that I was going 35 miles an hour? When I tried to argue with you you told me not to talk back to the law! Well, I'm the law here, and you're out."—Stars and Stripes.

Nearly Fooled.

"Well, Diogenes," said the inquirer over the city, "tell me, did you ever find that honest man you were looking for?"

"I did," said Diogenes, grinning. "and do you know, the crook would have fooled me if the tax assessor hadn't asked him a couple questions in my hearing."

"You say your respect for kings is increasing?"

"It is," replied Senator Sorghum, "in a strictly personal way. A king's job used to be a luxurious sinecure. But to be a monarch of any kind just now requires some nerve."

Friendly Advice.

"I don't know anything about cooking."

"Well?"

"So we're going to live largely on bread and cheese and kisses, and some of our meals we'll take out."

"Don't take the kisses out."

Strategy.

"Don't forget," said the fair defendant's lawyer, "that when I give you the signal you begin crying."

"I won't forget."

"And if you can contrive to smile through your tears our case will be as good as won."

Married Life a la Mode.

Wife—Wait just five minutes.

Husband—Will it be ready then?

Wife—No, but then I'll go with you.

"They are," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I don't know whose family they used to belong to, but I expect 'em to be long to mine for generations to come."

We Are Members of the American Bankers Association

Members of the American Bankers Association are protected by a world-wide detective service. Pursuit by this service of criminals who have robbed or defaulted member banks is so relentless that burglars have been known to return stolen money when they learned that the bank robbed was a member of the American Bankers Association. In one such case it is reported that the returned money was accompanied by a note in which the burglar asked, "Why didn't you hang your membership sign where I could see it?"

There are, of course, other advantages in American Bankers Association Membership but this one should be of interest to our customers and prospective customers.

SEEDLING GROWTH IS RETARDED BY BRUSH

Close Spacing Desirable to Produce Best Timber.

When Tops of Trees Begin to Inter-mingle and Crowd Each Other Some of Them Should Be Cut Out for Best Results.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When cut-over land is planted in hard-wood seedlings, it may happen that a natural bushy growth will for a few years outgrow the planted trees, overtop them or crowd them, and thus interfere seriously with their development. To insure the proper development of the seedlings, forest specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture say in Farmers' Bulletin 1123, "Growing and Planting Hardwood Seedlings on the Farm," it is necessary to cut down the brush for two or three years. When old trees with wide-spreading crowns threaten to shade the seedlings so they will not develop properly, the bulletin suggests that such trees be cut out a few years after the new planting has been started.

To produce clean-bodies timber, close spacing is desirable. When the tops of the trees begin to intermingle and crowd each other, however, they become like overcrowded vegetables in a garden. Growth is stagnated. A good gardener will pull some of the vegetables in a garden that have reached this condition. When trees have reached a similar stage, some of them should be cut out. In both cases the result is the best development of the remaining part rather than a poor development of the original number. The best formed and most healthy trees should be permitted to remain, and the others that are likely to interfere with their growth should be removed.

Thinnings are usually necessary when a plantation becomes twenty years old, sometimes sooner. The openings in the crown-cover of the stand made by removing trees should not be too large to prevent the growth of the remaining tree tops from covering the gaps in from three to five years. When poles are cut for farm use, a crude form of thinning may be accomplished by care in the selection of trees with a view to the improvement of the stand.

Pruning of tree branches is usually unnecessary, and because of the cost of labor, undesirable. If a tree is pruned too far up it may become top-heavy and easily broken by severe winds. The catalpa, ash and black cherry are known to have suffered from this, and it seems likely the same is true of many other species. If, because of wide spacing, pruning is necessary, it should be conducted in late winter or early spring, and should not be overdone.

SPRAYING KILLS MONEY BEES

Discovered That Solutions Applied to Apple Trees Are Destructive to Little Insects.

A series of tests to determine the effect of spray solutions on honey bees is to be undertaken by the California College of Agriculture, following the discovery that heavy spraying of apple trees when they are in bloom has resulted in great loss to bees seeking nectar. It is pointed out that bees are the orchardists' best friends, as they help pollination.

BEST FOWLS FOR BACK YARD

American Breeds, Such as Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes and Orpingtons, Are Recommended.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hens of the medium-sized breeds—Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds and Orpingtons—are best suited to back-yard conditions. Large hens kept in close confinement are likely to get too fat to lay well. Small, nervous hens are apt to develop such vices as egg eating and feather eating. The bad tendencies mentioned do not prohibit the keeping of large and small breeds in small back yards, but make it necessary for the keeper to use extraordinary care to keep them in good condition and productive. White and light-colored varieties are not desirable for small back yards, because their plumage soils too easily.

As a rule it is most satisfactory to buy hens of a local poultry keeper or dealer in live poultry. Desirable small flocks are frequently offered by people who are obliged by change of work or of residence to sell their poultry. Dealers in live poultry everywhere sort out from their general receipts the hens that show good breeding and quality to sell to back-yard poultry keepers. When satisfactory stock cannot be obtained locally, the advertising columns of poultry papers, agricultural papers or newspapers that carry poultry advertising should be consulted, and the hens bought from the nearest breeder who can supply what is wanted at a reasonable price.

For the back-yard flock kept to produce eggs only it is not necessary to have hens of extra good standard quality. What breeders of standard poultry call choice utility hens are as good as any for egg production and cost but little more than ordinary mongrels. Hens of this grade in the medium-sized breeds are usually a little under standard weights and have superficial faults—as unsoundness of color, or irregularity of markings, or of the shape of the comb—which in no way affect their laying capacity but make them suited for exhibition and undesirable for breeding purposes.

When buying hens in person, particular attention should be given to general condition—whether the bird seems vigorous and lively—and to the appearance of the comb and the condition of the feet. Healthy hens have bright red combs and bright eyes, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. A slight paleness of the comb is simply an indication that the hen is not laying at the time; but a bird whose comb has either a yellowish or a bluish cast should be rejected, for these are symptoms of internal disorders. The skin and scales of legs and toes should be smooth and the soles of the feet soft and free from corns.

BETTER SIRES FOR BANTAMS

Culpeper County (Virginia) Farmer Raises Purebreds From Chickens to Dairy Cattle.

From bantam chickens to Holstein cattle is the range of live stock on the farm of Sam Sullivan & Sons, who recently enrolled in the "Better Stock—Better Stock" movement that is being directed by the United States Department of Agriculture. This farm, which is located in Culpeper county, Virginia, raises Holstein cattle, Duroc Jersey swine, Rhode Island White chickens, White Holland turkeys, white guinea fowls, Cocker bantams, and Muscovy ducks.

Purebred horses also are kept on this farm, but no stallions are maintained. In accordance with the requirements of the better-stock movement, which is aimed to improve the average quality of farm live stock, all of the stock listed is bred to purebred sires.

EGGS FROM GEESSE IN WINTER

Good Plan to Arrange So That Goslings Will Be Hatched by Time There Is Good Pasture.

Geesse are fed a ration to produce eggs during the latter part of the winter, so that the goslings will be hatched by either hens or geese. Some breeders prefer to raise all the goslings under hens, as geese sometimes become difficult to manage when allowed to hatch and rear their young. The period of incubation of geese eggs varies from 28 to 30 days.

More Price Reductions by Harvester Company

Entire Line of Implements Now at LOWER PRICES

In view of the recent reduction in the price of steel, we now announce lower prices for our entire line of farm machines and implements not covered by reductions previously announced.

All lower prices take effect at once

The reduction in the price of steel comes after all the material for the machines and implements we will sell this year has been provided, and will therefore have no bearing on the manufacturing costs of such machines. However, it does enable the Company to buy materials at lower prices for future manufacture, and in accordance with our announced policy we now quote those prices, the Company taking the loss on machines already finished and materials on hand.

Full information regarding our lower prices on binders, mowers, and all other harvesting, haying and corn machines, tillage implements, tractors, engines, and all other I H C farm machines can be obtained from any International Dealer.

History's Great Men Were Warm Friends of the Thoroughbred

The annual spring season of thoroughbred racing will soon be at its height in Kentucky, and there is every indication that interest in the famous old sport, this year, will surpass any of the days that have gone before.

Chief among the perennial attractions of thoroughbred racing is its genuine democracy. The thoroughbred has his charms for us all today just as he did in the days of George Washington and Andrew Jackson.

Both these presidents of the United States were great lovers of the thoroughbred and loyal supporters of the sport of horse racing. They bred and raced their own horses, and history records the fact that the former acted as a judge at the Newmarket Course, Charleston, S. C., on one occasion. Washington, as we all know, was a noted horseman, who enjoyed his spirited thoroughbred for riding and hunting through the field until very late in life, and his stable had a reputation for the number and quality of the horses it contained.

Andrew Jackson was an enthusiastic patron of horse racing long before he became president. He maintained a formidable stable, which included Truxton, a horse of which he was exceedingly proud, and with which he won the famous match race for $5,000 against Greyhound. After his inauguration as president, he brought his horses to the Capitol, and in 1834 trained them in person. Vice President and Mrs. Van Buren often being present to witness the morning workout of the horses personally, superintended by the president, with characteristic impetuosity and plain speech, for "Old Hickory," as history records, "had a temper of his own."

The Washington Course, located about two miles from the Capitol, was built in 1862. The Jockey Club, under whose auspices it was operated, numbered among its members the most distinctive men of affairs of the day. Racing was regularly attended by the presidents, from Jefferson to Van Buren. On one occasion John Quincy Adams walked to and from the course, surrounded by the equipages of the wealthy.

"Generals Washington and Jackson," writes one leading commentator, "are examples of the fondness that great statesmen and military men have so generally entertained for the horse and sport of the turf. Though equally bold and aggressive riders in the field, General Jackson was the more successful on the course. The racing annals of the west record his numerous victories, and according to the anecdotes which are told of him, he sometimes intimidated his adversaries of the boldness of defiance, where he might not have won by the speed or bottom of his horse."

One of General Jackson's closest friends was the Rev. H. M. Cryer, a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who was a breeder of thoroughbred horses and who raced one of them in the name of his partner, Col. Geo. Elliott. The reverend gentleman, having been charged with horse racing, was summoned before the tribunal and asked if he had anything to say in his defense; "nothing," was his reply, "except that I would like to have you let me know how I can arrange it for my half of the horse to stand in the stable while Col. Elliott's half is racing. The horse belongs to us jointly. He has the same right to control him that I have; and he will race him and I cannot keep him from it."

Needless to add, Mr. Cryer was duly acquitted.

The utter absence of prejudice against the turf in earlier days brings into sharp contrast our sporadic latter-day agitations in disapproval.

For example, it is mentioned in the Catholic Churchman, published at Annapolis in 1744, that among the legitimate pastimes of the population, which met with the approval of the church itself, was the new one of racing horses, which had grown to be highly popular among the gentry of the country. However, we of today, have every reason to believe that the turf is on the eve of a greater measure of popular support than it has received in a decade—not only as a matter of healthful out-of-door entertainment but also because of its importance as an adjunct to the industry of breeding thoroughbred horses for use in supplying the army with cavalry mounts and other highly utilitarian purposes.

Live Stock Facts

GREAT AID TO CITIZENSHIP

Intelligent Contact With Farm Animals Always Will Insure Quality in the Farmer.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In a message to the directors and members of the Wisconsin Live Stock Breeders' association, Andrew W. Hopkins, until recently its secretary, makes the following statement: "It truly is a noteworthy fact that where live stock farming has attained a high standard of perfection there also has citizenship attained an equally high standard. An intelligent contact with farm animals always has and always will insure quality in the men; and a closer kinship with the better types surely brings forth fruits not yet compassed. General education, honesty of purpose, righteous living, culture."

REDUCE LARGE WASTE IN CELERY SHIPMENT

Transactions Indefinite Because of Lack of Grading.

Establishment of Two Grades of Rough Product Would Enable Dealers and Receivers to Work on More Profitable Basis.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Rough celery" is the market term applied to celery that is taken from the field and packed in crates with little or no trimming. Transactions in rough celery always are more or less indefinite, because of the lack of grading. The bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture, has been conducting investigations in the celery markets of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio, to learn if it will be practicable to establish standard celery grades. In 1919, the railroads reported that 1,900 carloads of celery had been moved from the states mentioned, and that most of it was shipped in the rough.

The establishment of two grades of rough celery would eliminate much waste and would enable dealers and receivers to place their orders and sales on a more definite basis. The first grade, as contemplated by the specialists who are conducting the investigation, would include sound stock that is practically free from pithy stalks, stalks that have gone to seed or are damaged from disease or insects. A minimum diameter for this grade of 1 1/2 inches would be fixed. The second grade would include any celery that did not meet the requirements for the first grade.

In small cities there is little opening for carlot shipments of fruits or vegetables. Shippers of carloads should never consign to such markets unless previous arrangements have been made with a dealer, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The small cities are easily oversupplied and only at certain times offer an opening for a carload of any kind of perishable produce. Often a mixed carload is more salable in such markets than a car filled with one kind. The most reliable plan is to load and ship the car according to requirements previously ascertained from the dealer who handles the sale. It is still better to dispose of the car f. o. b. shipping point. This may be done when the dealer is in need of the supply and when the shipper is able to convince the buyer that his guarantee is good regarding the grade and quality of the produce.

A "Pig" in the Bed.

Many words in everyday use have quite another meaning in remote corners of the country. An auction is a dirty or untidy place; and some rustic, when unwell, tell you that they feel "comical." A pig or piggy is a hot-water bottle—hence the story of the traveler who returned to civilization with a tale that in Northumberland the people slept with a pig in the bed for warmth.—London Express.

SELECTING BREEDING STOCK

Stock Improvement is Closely Related to Heredity Control Which Insures Best Matings.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Raising the standard of farm animals and poultry and bringing out certain desirable characteristics by selective breeding is receiving more attention as methods of farming for profit become intensified.

The breeding of domestic animals dates back to remote antiquity, when the most advanced races of the old world were still on the border line between savagery and barbarism. It far antedates any but the simplest mechanical arts. Yet while our knowledge of the laws of nature as they apply to mechanics has reached very great magnitude and complexity, it is comparatively only a few years since the principles of breeding have been more than a collection of unrelated traditional beliefs.

The same superstitions on which the shepherds of Asia based their practices at least 50 centuries ago are still widely current, while the one sound principle known to the ancients—selection of the best for breeding stock—is still largely neglected.

The principles of successful animal breeding, as they have been learned by practical experience in the United States and other older countries, and by careful scientific study along definite lines, are outlined in Department Bulletin 906, recently issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

This bulletin goes into the first principles of reproduction and follows the means by which certain characteristics of one or the other parent are transmitted to the offspring, the methods of selection best suited to intensify the desirable characteristics and weed out the undesirable, the characteristics which can with certainty be expected to continue from one generation to another, those which are uncertain, those which will blend, and those which cannot be inherited.

Aside from mere increase in numbers the purposes which the breeder is likely to have in mind fall under two more or less distinct heads, namely, production of a uniform product, and improvement. A uniform product depends on such control over the heredity of the stock that matings can be made with the assurance that the offspring will be of a certain definite type for which there is a demand. Improvement is, of course, closely related to control over heredity, but the methods which give the greatest control are not necessarily those which lead to the most rapid improvement.

In a broad sense the whole subject of practical breeding comes under the head of selection. The most obvious basis for such selection is the performance of the animals themselves. Unfortunately, the merit of most kinds of live stock cannot be measured directly. The study of conformation as an index of useful qualities has accordingly held a high place as a basis for selection of breeding stock. Live stock judging has this for its purpose. An animal of good breeding is a better one to breed than one of equal individual merit but of mixed or common breeding. Pedigree, though often abused, is a valuable aid to selection, apart from following a general policy of mating. The soundest basis of all for selection of breeding stock is the record of past performance as a breeder, provided the record is sufficiently extensive to give a fair test.
