FOOT-BALL DOPE

Blue And White Fighting Eleven Triumphs Over Clay In Second Battle

The Blue and White defeated Clay on Armistice day by a score of 8 to 0. The past week has been a great one for the Dillards. Isaac Dillard ran up a great score on the election gridiron and won the Tax Commissioner championship of Crittenden county and Perry "Wop" Dillard, halfback, ran wild in the foot ball game making it possible for Marion

Clay's hosts came over in touring cars, roadsters, spring wagons, etc., thereby hangs the tale of Marion's first score, a safety. In the latter part of the first quarter Wilson punted from Marion's forty yard line and the icy breeze accomodatingly carried the ball over the head of the Clay safety man who gave chase to the ball. He grabbed it behind his own goal line and being chilled through and through by the winter wind went back toward the ticket office searching for the automobile in which he had traveled over from Clay, determined to M. FARM LIVE STOCK

RUNTS ARE LOSS TO GROWER

Questionnaire Shows Many Can Be Eliminated by Good Breeding and Proper Feeding.

(Prepared by the U. S. Department Agriculture.) The question, "Why is a runt?" has been answered by hundreds of live stock raisers who have filled in and returned questionnaire reports sent out by the United States Department of Agriculture. These reports-nearly a thousand of them-show that inferior breeding, poor feeding, and parasites are the three principal causes of undersized and underdeveloped animals. In fact, about 75 per cent of runtiness is traceable to these factors. All of these factors are under the control of breeders or stock raisers who by controlling them, can, in a large degree, eliminate runts, which, according to the reports, constitute 7 per cent of all farm animals.

The information gained from the reports is of much interest and value

ed When a Calf, Mainly for Lack of Suitable Food, but When Given Adequate Feed and Proper Care Developed Rapidly and Later Took First Prize in His Class at the State specialists consider it dependable, for the replies have been received from a large proportion of farms on the accredited-herd ifft (having cattle free from tuberculosis), and most of the remainder are from farms whose owners are cooperating with the Department of Agriculture and state agricultural colleges in the "Better Sires-Better Stock" campaign. Those who answered the questionnaire are, there fore, interested in the control of disease and the improvement in quality of domestic animals, and, in general, are progressive live stock owners.

In addition to the three principal causes of runtiness previously men tioned, the reports show that there are numerous other Bro. Ledbetter filled his appoint- causes. A summary of the opinions the principal causes of runty live stock are: Inferior breeding, 31.6 per Miss Dolcie Watson visited Miss cent; inadequate or unsuitable feed, 30.4 per cent; parasites and insect pests, 15.1 per cent; inadequate hous ing and care, 12.4 per cent; contagions per cent; accident, 1.0 per cent; other causes, 1.7 per cent. It appears that Pleasant Grove school is planning the breeding of well-selected purebred animals, but that with scrubs- espe runty stock is high.

The reports show that runtiness is nost prevalent among hogs, the average percentage reported being 10.1. This, moreover, includes a number of Mr. C. B. Collins and family have farms which reported no runts at all One farmer who is breeding good, purebred hogs and feeding them Mr. R. Crowell was in Blackford variety and plenty of feed, states: "We have not had a runty plg in two years, although the litters sometimes contain from 9 to 11 pigs each." The results of the inquiry indicate that the size of an animal of good breeding at birth has but little relation to the mature weight where proper feed, care and management are provided. This is shown in a number of cases of successful hog raisers who report that lack of uniformity in fairly large litters has been overcome Mr. E. E. Phillips and family vis-ted relatives in Blackford Sunday, in Moutana reports that proper feeding and care of a runty animal resulted in developing it to such a finish that it took first prize in its class at the state fair.

It appears from a summary of 929 reports that a comparatively small number of antinals are born runty. and that most stunting of growth begins a relatively short time before weaning, or soon afterwards. More than 50 per cent of runty live stock appears during infancy or before weaning, according to reports, while

It was altogether by accident that the Littleford chief found his weapons. He had dropped a small coin through a crack in the floor. Babe was quick to say that she would crawl under the bouse and look for the coin, although she had just put on a freshly laundered blue-and-white callco dress. Her anxiety showed plainly in her face. Her father questioned her sharply, and she stammered in spite of herself. Hen Littleford's suspicions were aroused.

So he came out from under the cabin floor with his hands full of the steel | out !" of rifle barrels, and with the money forgotten. He placed the rifles carefully on the floor of the porch, turned and caught his daughter by the arm.

"Who hid 'em?" he demanded gruffly. "I hid 'em," was the ready answer, defiant and bitter-"L me! What're you a-goin' to do about it?"

Littleford flung his daughter's arm from him. He was king, even as John Moreland was king. His keen eyes stared at the young woman's face as though they would wither it.

"What made you hide 'em?" he growled. "Nay, what made we do it?"

"To try and save human lives, 'at's | iastin' fightin'," she said. why!" Babe snewered. "That man a doin' this away, a fightin' like crazy | they knew it. Babe went on:

"Ef he don't like the way we do here, he can go back home," retorted the angry mountaineer. "He ain't tied, is be?

Babe smiled a smile that was somehow pitiful, and turned off.

The sin't no use in a argyin' with you, pap," she said hopelessly. "I-I might' pigh wisht 4 was dead."

At that instant the gate creaked open. Babe glanced toward it and saw coming that black beast of a man, Adam Ball the Golfath, and he was armed heavily; in one hand he carried a new high-power repeating rifle, and around his great waist there was a new belt bristling with long, bright smokeless cartridges fitted with steeljacketed bullets.

two sycamores on the nearer side of the river he saw a puff of smoke rising lazily from behind a water oak on the farther side; a Littleford had fired first. Date west on, moving rapidly and trying to keep himself always in plain view.

Then came a puff of white smoke and a report from one of the Moreland rifles, then shots from both sides - and the battle was on. Dale heard the nasty whine of a builet in full flight; be heard the coarse "zzz" of a half-spent ricochet. He knew that he was in some danger now, and he was surprised to find that he was not frightened.

When he halted again it was on his knees behind the big white sycamore that sheltered John Moreland.

"Back, are ye?" frowned the mountaineer. And with the grimmest humor, "I reckon ye had a fine, large time in Cincinnaty. Yore friend Harris was well, I hope. Git that money from him?"

"Cut that out," said Bill Dale, "It doesn't get us anywhere-"

A bullet threw particles of sycamore bark to his face, interrupting. John Moretand pointed to a green furrow in the side of the tree.

"Ben Littleford hisself," said Moreland. "He's shind o' that water oak acrost thar. Don't stick yore head

"I don't believe ye, Babe!" snapped the Moreland chief. "Yore people can hold up a white rag jest as well as We can !"

Babe went paier. There was a sudden burst of Bring from the Moreland riffes, and she crept a little nearer to John Moreland in order that he might hear pininiy that which she had to tell him next.

"I'm a-goin' to tell ye o' this danger," she said, "and trust to you a-bein" man enough to do what I axed ye to Black Adam Ball, he's got a new-fashtoned rifle and smokeless ca'tridges and steel bullets; and in a few min utes he'll be bid in a cium o' sassafras back thar in yore meadow, whar he means to set and pick off you Morelands one by one-and you and Bill two put on him! Babe thoughtlessiy arbse to her feet, and one side of her brown head appeared before the sights of her father's riffe-her father fired quickly, too quickly for a perfect aim-the builet burned its way across her temple and through her hair, and she crumpled at Biil Dale's knees, totally unconscious. Dale gave a hoarse cry and gathered limp figure into his arms. John Moreland waved aloft the white handkerchief and beliewed to his kinsmen to stop firing. Then silence came.

And to his brother Abner, whose right forearm was wrapped in a blood-

stained blue bandous:

mendow; go and ketch htm, and don't take no chanst with him. Shoot him like a dawg of he tries to trick ye!"

A dozen men ran to look for the would-be sniper. The Littlefords, still armed, came dashing across the river. Ben Littleford threw down his rifle and knelt beside his daughter; he wrung his big hands and cursed the day that had seen him born.

Dale held her close. His face was as white as hers, and his eyes were

"Why don't you shoot all your womenfolk?" he said to the Littleford chief, and every word cut like a knife. "It's by far the simplest way; it's merciful, y'know. See, she isn't breaking her heart over your murderous lighting now. No, keep your hands awayyou're not fit to touch her!"

They brought water and wet the young woman's face, and bathed the red streak across her temples. They did all they knew how to do to bring her back to consciousness, but, except for her beating pulse and her breathing, she remained as one dead. Hours -passed, leaden hours, and her condition was unchanged.

Dale beckoned to John Moreland, who had just-returned from having seen Adam Bull caught, disarmed, and imprisoned in an old tobacco barn. Moreland hastened to Dale, the new master. When does the next south-bound train pass the Halfway switch?" Dale wanted to know.

Moreland looked toward the sun. "We could make it, all right, but it's She had crept up through the tall a fast train, and it don't never stop at the switch."

"Then we'll hold it up," declared the new master in a voice of iron. "This is a case for a surgeon. Get a blanket and two poles and make a litter."

John Moreiand hastened away obediently. Date turned to Ben Littleford, who sat in a motioniess heap beside the still figure of his daughter.

"It was only a few hours ago," he said accusingly, "that this poor girl told me she'd be giad to give her life to stop your lighting, and now, perhaps, she's done it! You're a brute, Littleford. I like to fight, myself, but not when it costs women anything."

CHAPTER VI.

Back Home. Every mother's son of the feudists was numbered in the party that filed across David Moreland's mountain to intercept the pext south-bound train. The old enmity was for the time being forgotten. Members of one clan rubbed elbows with members of the other cian, and thought nothing of it. John Moreland himself carried one end of the crude litter that held the limp form of Babe Littleford; Bill Daje carried the other end. Close behind the litter walked Babe's father, seeming old and broken with remorse for the thing he had done. The grief of Ben Littleford was touching now, and Dale was a little sorry that he had spoken so bitterly to him.

They reached the Halfway switch ten minutes before the arrival of the Dale fust, 'count o' the beatin's you fast mail. A short passenger train was on the long siding, waiting for the south bound to pass. Dale gave his end of the litter to Caleb Moreland. and strode up to the locomotive. The engineer sat quietly smoking to his Daie wanted the fast mall stopped, and gave his reasons.

The engineer smoked and considered. It was against rules. Dale swore at rules. The engineer said he would see the conductor. He did, and the conductor stepped to the ground and began to consider. "Better put her on my train," he sald finally, "and take her to Barton's station. There's a good doctor at Bar-

"But this is a case for a surgeon!" impatiently interrupted Bill Dale.

They disagreed. The old trainman was a close friend of the doctor at Barton's station. What was the difference between a doctor and a surgeon, anyway?

Dale became angry. "You'll stop the fast mail for us," he snapped, "or we'll take your d-d red flag and hold her up long enough to put the girl aboard, and you've got only half a second to decide which!"

The conductor was obdurate. The mountain men were too hot-headed to ear with him longer. The positions a dozen rifles underwent a sudden change. The conductor immediately went pale and meptioned the lawbut he agreed to stop the southbound. As he ordered his flagman up the tracks, the sound of the fast train's whistle came to their ears.

The flier came to a screeching halt with sparks streaming from its wheels. Bill Dale and John Moreland passed the litter and its burden into the baggage car and followed it hastily, and Ben Littleford climbed in after them. John Moreland leaned out of the doorpromptly.

There was a shrick from the whistle, and the brakes were released; the train began to gather momentum. A baggageman approached John Moreland and asked why the rifle. More- eh?" land half closed one keen grey eye and patted the walnut stock of his word last night that a mountain girl

Within five more minutes he returned in company with an elderly man wearing a pointed beard and nose

"Doctor McKenzie," he said politely; "Mr. --

"Dale." The two nodded, and the physician knelt beside the litter, which had been placed with its ends on boxes to allow the center to swing free. He made as thorough an examination as was possible under the conditions, then arose and stood looking down upon the young woman with something like admiration in his sober, professional eyes.

"Perfect physique," he said as though to himself. . . . "She will have to undergo an operation," he told Dale. "The bone there is broken in slightly, making a compression; she will doubtless be unconscious until the pressure is relieved. But she has fine chasces for a quick and entire recovery, with a good surgeon on the job, so there's not much ground for worry."

Date was giad. They were all giad. Ben Littleford inughed nervously in his sudden Joy. He went down to his knees beside his daughter, took up one of her limp hands and stroked it in a way that was pitiful.

When he arose he spoke cordinity to Moreland. But Moreland didn't reply. He still looked upon his old enemy with contempt.

Doctor McKenzle was leaving the train at the next town of importance, and he would wire Doctor Braemer to meet them with an ambulance, if Dale wished. "If you please," said Duie. They reached the city shortly before the surgeon. Braemer took charge of the patient, put her into his ambulance and hurried her to his private hospital. Bill Dale and the two clan chiefs followed in an automobile. The hillmen had never before seen an automobile; but they asked no questions about it, and the only word of comment was this, from John Moreland: "I don't like the smell." Everything had been made ready for the operation, and habe received surgical ald without delay. The two mountaineers and Date waited in another room. Dale had induced John Moreland to unload his rifle, both chamber and magazine. Babe's father paced the floor auxiousty now and then. Moreland sat like a stone, with his empty rifle between his knees, and watched his old enemy queerly.

It seemed a long time before Bruemer came to them and told them smllingly that it was all over and that the girl was then coming from under the effects of the ether. She would be all right soon, he was reasonably certain. No, they'd better not see her just then. But perhaps they could see her at some time during the afternoon of the fellowing day.

Date escorted his two companions to a modest hotel and then put them in a room that had but one bed; by thus throwing them together in a strange land, he hoped to do some thing toward making them friends. Then Dale went to another room, undressed and went to bed.

It may be noted, parenthetically as it were, that John Moretand and Ben Littleford quickly reached a wordless agreement not to sleep together-they divided the pillows and linens evenly. tore the odd coveriet exactly in half, and slept on the floor.

When Dale went down to the lobby way and ordered his son Luke to pass the following morning an alert-eyed him his rifle, and Luke obeyed young fellow sprang from a chair and hastened up to him "By George, Bobby!" Dale ex-

"The story mustn't be published, Bobby," Dale replied. "For one rea-son, there is a feud; and if the law knew, it might take a hand-you see, I think there is a better way to take care of that feud. And I am of the opinion that the girl wouldn't like the publicity. Suppose you forget all about it, Bobby if McLaurin was disappointed, he kept it well to himself.

"They said she was handsome, a sort of primitive Venus," he winked. "Is there a romance connected, Bill?" "Not yet," smiled Dale.

"But soon?" "Who can tell?" Dale shrugged a ittie. "Tell me the news."

"All right." McLaurin drew his friend toward a pair of empty chairs. "I married Patricia Clavering the day before yesterday. We-

Yesterday we went to housekeeping in a cute little suburban bungalow, furniture on the installment plan. Her people won't even look at us, Bill! But do we care? Bill Dale, I ask you, old dear, do I seem to be worrying? Honest, I'm so happy I'm afraid some thing is going to happen to me. I'm to have a lift in salary soon, and we won't be long in paying for the furniture; and when that's done, we'll buy the bungalow. "And I'm informing you now, old savage," be continued, "that you're baving dinner with us this evening. You'll find it pleasant. We do as we please, you see. If you like, you may stir your coffee with your finger, eat with your knife, reach clean across the table, and pick your teeth with your fork. You can eat with your hat on, and you may have your dessert first. You can have an extra chair for your feet, and you can go to sleep at the table. Don't fall us. Pat wants to thank you for 'casting her aside' at the altar."

Dale laughed boyishly. McLauria went on:

"There's more news. Your father has been trying hard to find you. He sent a man to Atlanta to look for you. He told me he'd give me a house and lot if I'd find you-and if there was a little more of the highway robber in me, I'd call his hand!"

"And mother-have you seen her?" Date muttered.

"I've seen her twice since the near-

"I see," said Date. He brightened and went on, "As soon as I can get my two friends down to the dining room, Bobby, you're going with me to father. We're going to claim that house and lot for you." "For Patricia's sake, I've a thundering big notion to take you up," laughed McLaurin. "Your dad would never tialf an hour later they caught a passing car that soon carried them to a palace of granite and stone and cream-colored brick-the home of the old coal king, John K. Dale.

At the wide front gateway young Date drew back. "Bring father out here," he said in a low voice. "From what you told me, I guess mother wouldn't want me to come in. But you can find out about

"And if she wents to see me, Bobby, let me know."

McLaurin smiled a somewhat worried smile, and went up to the front door. A moment later he was shown in. Yet another moment, and John K. Date, his flortd face beaming with giadness, hastened out to the gateway. Young Dale was instantly touched by his father's new attitude toward him; then he remembered the long night of David Moreland's people, and he stiffened a little and drew back a pace. "You've come home to stay, haven't his voice was filled with pleading, and Sunday. "What you did is all right; we'll never mention it again. You'll stay, won't you. Carlyle, my boy?"

You might have helped the Morelands without their even knowing that it was you-especially as they seem to have known you by another name-and that's the only way you could have helped them. Here you have one reason why I cannot accep assistance from you; don't you see, fa ther? The Morelands wouldn't have

THE SAUCY CLOUDS.

O NE night as Mr. Moon-man looked over the tops of the trees and mountains he saw a number of fleecy little clouds scudding about.

"O dear!" sighed Mr. Moonam afraid I shall have trouble tonight with those saucy little clouds. I was hoping as I came up that they would be in another part of the sky instead of right in the place where I want to

Mr. Moon-man was right; he was to have trouble with the saucy, fleecy lit-the clouds, and just as his bright face on her broomstick, her long black cape peeped over the treetops all the little fleecy clouds scudded right into his

Mr. Moon-man ducked and dodged until at last he found a space between the saucy little clouds to shine upon the earth below, but no sooner had he done so than the little clouds danced and frolicked in front of him until he was quite hidden again.

Mr. Moon-man is a very nice old fellow, so he said very pleasantly: "Go along with you and play in another part of the sky. There is plenty of room without getting right in front of me so the Earth folk can't see my
