SEVERE STORM

Much Damage Done By Storm In This County Last Week

Damage running up to a large sum was done in Crittenden county last week as a result of a heavy wind and rain storm last week. All during the middle of the week a large rain fell and on Wednesday night a severe wind prevailed.

It struck Mr. Al Dean's farm and blew down much of his fencing, unroofed one of his barns, blew down the buggy house and damaged the buggy, and the roof of his residence was blown off and a continued down-pour of rain did quite a bit of damage to his household goods.

Mr. Lester Terry's barn was unroofed and the outbuildings of Mr. Jim Terry on a farm nearby were also badly damaged, as well as the Oak Hall schoolhouse which was blown off the foundation.

The storm was not so severe in Marion but did some damage. The chimney of Dr. Clement's residence was blown off and other minor damages were done in the city.

The storm seemed to have been general in Kentucky and Indiana as the wind did much damage in the bottoms west of Hickman, property was destroyed in Daviess and Todd counties and Louisville suffered much loss early Saturday morning. Four towns near Rockport, Ind., and the section near Evansville suffered thousands of dollars loss to crops and property.

GREETINGS TO MY FRIENDS

I desire to offer thanks to my host of friends that contributed to me their vote and influence in my race for Representative of Crittenden and Livingston counties. I scarcely have words to tell you the appreciation that I feel toward all that helped in my successful victory. I have at all times in my life tried to live for the enterprise of my people and country.

I sincerely hope that I shall be able to serve my people in the General Assembly in a way that they may not have cause to regret what they did in honoring me by electing me to the office they did. Hoping to be able to serve my District honorably and render to my people the very best service that is in my power to do so, as a servant of the people that have so honored me, Your Servant

OYSTER SUPPER A SUCCESS

The oyster supper served at the Methodist church basement by the Cora Charles Missionary Society Tuesday evening was a huge success from all standpoints. Music was given by the orchestra.

A large number were present to relish the splendid supper and enjoy the general festivities.

Marion's New High School Building, Soon to Be Ready For Occupancy

The above is the new Marion High School building which was recently purchased from S. M. Jenkins. The building is rapidly being remodeled into a handsome High School. Partitions are being torn out and new ones added so that the rooms will be fitted for their new purpose.

The first floor will be divided into three rooms to be used for recitation or class rooms and a large hall way. The second floor is being fitted up into five rooms which can be used for class or recitation rooms or library. The third floor is thrown all into one large room. The basement extends underneath the entire building and is capacious enough for the heating apparatus and to accommodate toilet and bath rooms. There is a large and roomy campus and a fine tennis court on the grounds so that studies can be spiced with the proper amount of recreation.

MARION-PRINCETON ROAD WORK BEGUN

The construction of the Marion-Princeton State Highway began on Monday. Mr. W. R. Campbell and his construction crew are located near Crayne and the actual work has begun after several days delay due to the inclement weather. Weather permitting the construction work will be pushed rapidly and the bed made ready for the metal finish.

Mr. W. R. Cruce, who worked persistently and valiantly for this road put the first shovel of dirt on the road.

SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

December 13 the second number of the Lyceum course will come to Marion High School, consisting of a lecture and other entertainment by Dr. Sam Grathwell. December 16 Dr. H. H. Cherry, president of the Western State Normal School will be here. He will give a moving picture show and a lecture both afternoon and night. It is expected that the Crittenden Rural Schools will be closed for the occasion as the program is fostered jointly by the County Superintendent and the Marion Superintendent.

On Dec. 20th, the Christmas Pageant will be given in the School Auditorium. This will be the last program before dismissing for the holidays.

The Woman's Marion School Improvement Club has voted to affiliate with the State Parent-Teachers' Association and thus become a member of the National body. The Local association has started an active campaign for school improvement and it hopes to complete the work in the graded school building this year. Its first program for the fall will be given about December first, an announcement of the nature of the meeting will be given to the public as soon as details have been arranged.

MEETING CLOSSES

The meeting at the Southern Presbyterian church closed Sunday night. Rev. W. A. Hopkins, the synodical Evangelist preached only at night services except the two Sundays he was here. His sermons were of a high order and were not only edifying to the church but an uplift to the town. Mr. Hopkins is not only highly educated but a fluent speaker as well. The house was crowded for each service and extra chairs were used to seat the anxious listeners. The meeting closed Sunday night with services at the Methodist church where every available seat was occupied.

DR. MERONEY RESIGNS

Dr. W. P. Meroney, pastor of the First Baptist church resigned his pastorate here and has accepted a call to St. Jo, Mo., and will leave here on the 30th for his new field of labor. Dr. Meroney has had large success here as a pastor and preacher and no doubt his church gives him up reluctantly. The people of the city will regret to see him and his family leave.

KENTUCKY WOMEN IN THE LIMELIGHT

Kentucky has a woman legislator, a woman magistrate and women have long been interested in things for the upbuilding of the state but in the past week developed the first woman to put through a highway project up to the point of construction on record in the state according to announcement at the office of Chief Road Engineer Joe E. Boggs. This woman was Mrs. Anna Louise McElroy, of Fredonia.

Mrs. McElroy appeared at a meeting of the state board with an offer of the fiscal court of Caldwell of a gift of $41,000 to complete the Marion-Princeton road, a highway that when completed will be about 23 miles in length. Mrs. McElroy, it developed, went among the citizens of the county, secured rights of way and other things needed to put the project through and then persuaded the fiscal court to make its grant. The state highway commission accepted the gift and congratulated Mrs. McElroy.

Mrs. McElroy is the daughter of Mr. J. E. Dean and a native of Crittenden county.

STATE ROAD

A matter of great interest is the concurrence of the State Road Commission in the Caldwell Fiscal Court resolution concerning the Princeton-Fredonia road, which means that the road from this city through the town of Fredonia and connecting with the Marion road at the county line will be a state highway.

The concurrence in the Caldwell Fiscal Court resolution took place at Frankfort Monday and everyone, especially those living on the Princeton-Fredonia road will hail same with delight as well as the people of this city who are vitally interested in good roads.

A sixty foot right of way for the State Highway has been designated and practically all persons owning land through which the road will traverse have willingly consented to same without the slightest protest, all of which goes to show that a spirit of great interest prevails, which is right and proper. None should stand in the way of the great project as nothing is so important as a State Highway to be maintained by the State throughout years to come. A State Highway means that an experienced man will be in charge of every seven miles of the road in seeing that it is kept in perfect condition, after construction, at the expense of the State, the fencing along the Highway being constructed and maintained by the county.

Those connected with the great promotion are indeed to be congratulated upon their victory, both in the county and state, and we heartily extend the glad hand—Princeton Leader.

RESIDENCE DESTROYED IN TOLU FIRE

The residence of Mr. Braswell at Tolu, was destroyed entirely by fire Saturday night. The fire was discovered between 12 and 1 o'clock but was under such headway that the flames were beyond control of the bucket brigade. The fire was kept from spreading and no other building was damaged.

The building was a large residence standing nearly opposite the bank building. It had been vacated the evening before the fire.

Insurance will practically cover the loss.

DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

The disarmament conference in session at Washington has started in on its second week in session and much toward agreement among the great powers has been accomplished.

The five-five-three navy ratio for the United States, Great Britain and Japan as proposed by Sec. of State Hughes is still the stand of the United States on this issue. Japan refuses to accept this and is holding out for a larger ratio for their nation. Great Britain has accepted this ratio as well as the ten year naval holiday but remains silent on the Japan ratio question.

The Powers have agreed on the far east resolutions of Root to respect the territorial and independence integrity of China, to provide the fullest opportunity to China to establish and maintain a stable government, equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations in the territory of China and to refrain from taking advantage of present conditions in China to seek special privileges.

France has pointed out why they must maintain a large standing army due to the Russian and German menace and has drawn implied promises from the United States and Great Britain to come to their aid if the standing army is curtailed and this menace materializes.

The International Live

Stock Exposition

This world famous exhibition of hay, grain, and live stock will be held at Chicago this year November 26 to December 3rd 1921. Here the best live stock in the country compete for prizes and to be a winner at the "International" means much to a breeder of live stock. Railroad rates are one and half round trip fare to Chicago.

Pure-bred Poultry

An arrangement has been made with the Farmers Bank and Trust Company, Marion, to distribute a number of pure-bred setting eggs next spring. They will be put out on the return pullet plan of one pullet returned for each setting taken. These will be auctioned off in the fall of 1922 to the highest bidders. This plan should result in a great increase of pure-bred poultry over the county and pure breeds have long demonstrated their worth over mongrels when it comes to profit in poultry. Do you know that the U. S. census report credits Crittenden county with $78,000 worth of poultry and eggs marketed in 1920. This is a business large enough to warrant considerable care in the part of the poultry raiser.

Corn and soy beans are good producers of pork. Hogging off corn and soy beans is a means of rapid and economical pork production. A Marion county farmer who is co-operating with County Agent Childress and the College of Agriculture put five animals to hogging off a field of corn and soy beans and they gained a total of 218 pounds or 43 pounds each during 3 weeks and 3 days of the demonstration. They made a total daily gain of 9.9 lbs., almost 2 lbs each day during the trial. Some of them gained more than 2 pounds a day during 3 weeks and 3 days, according to results of the experiment.

Profit for Farmers in Home Butchering

Under present conditions the home butchering and curing of meats should be highly profitable to Kentucky farmers provided proper attention is given to the many important details connected with these processes according to E. J. Wilford of the College of Agriculture. Home killing and curing of meats during what is usually a slack season on the farm will make it possible for farmers to take advantage of the profits enjoyed by the middle men and at the same time obtain a product which should be superior for home use to that from the packing houses. In Kentucky butchering can be done any time after Thanksgiving, a temperature of 36 to 38 degrees being cold enough to cool the meat properly.

Health, condition, quality, age and weight are the important things to look for in the animal which is to be butchered on the farm. Watch carefully for signs of tuberculosis as well as indications of fever and other abnormalities.

Animals in high condition that are not losing flesh at the time they are slaughtered usually produce the best meats. Animals which are gaining weight rapidly at the time they are killed usually yield the best quality of meat. On the other hand extreme fatness increases the lard yield and decreases the quality of the bacon. High grade or pure bred animals will usually yield the best quality meat but the hog covered smoothly with deep flesh will produce well merbered meat.

Age is closely associated with quality, hogs between the ages of 6 and 8 months giving the most satisfactory results. Extremely young animals furnish meat which is watery and lacking in flavor while aged animals yield meat of more flavor but often dry and tough. Hogs weighing 180 to 250 pounds are to be preferred to the heavier ones. Those weighing between 140 and 180 pounds are of a handy weight and usually have sides capable of producing prime bacon with proper cutting and curing methods.

Make use of the bulletin board in the County Agent's office if you have anything to sell or wish to buy some farm need. No charge at all. Come and look over the things listed

American Legion Post Organized

Several ex-service men met at the Marion Barber Shop Monday evening to organize an American Legion Post for the men of this county who served in the late war. A large representation was present and much enthusiasm was manifested. Preparations were placed on foot to get a permanent charter.

The name selected for the local post is the Ellis Ordway Post No. 111, being named in honor of one of the first of Crittenden's boys who lost his life on foreign fields. Twenty-one ex-service men have already signed up as members of this Post and others have signified their intention of doing so. Temporary officers were elected to act till the charter is granted. Rooms have been selected and arrangements are now under way to furnish them for the use of the members. These rooms will be open at all times and money for this purpose is now being raised.

There will be another meeting of ex-service men at the Marion Barber Shop Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock and all ex-service men who served between April 1917 and November 11, 1918 are urged to be present at this meeting. The Post will open their permanent quarters and club rooms the first of the month.

MASONIC BANQUET

On last Friday evening the Masons held a banquet in the basement of the Methodist church. There were 120 plates and were all taken. The Ladies Aid of the Methodist church prepared and served the menu, that is all the recommendation necessary to give that it was the very best as Mrs. W. J. Deboe is the president of the Aid.

Hon. J. W. Blue was toastmaster and he is an expert. The after dinner addresses were made by the Toast Master, Judge Clem Nunn, W. D. Cannon, Hon T. C. Bennett, Rev. T. L. Hulse of Henderson was called and made an address, also Dr. C. G. Moreland, Joe Stewart and Levi Cook were called for.

Miss Lena Holtzclaw entertained with two readings as only she can. The Marion orchestra rendered some splendid music. Dr. T. Atchison Frazer had charge of the banquet and he is certainly an efficient master of ceremonies.

CRITTENDEN'S FIRST PIKE

The men, teams and tools are located at Crayne and actual work on Crittenden's first pike began Monday. Mr. W. B. Cruce, to whom the whole citizenship is debtor, placed the first shovel of dirt on the road. This promises to transform travel and traffic in the county when sooner or later these arteries will course through the entire county in every direction. A metal road via Fredonia to Princeton, another to Morganfield, Sturgis and Henderson and on to Louisville. A highway to Paducah through Salem and Smithland, pikes to Fords Ferry and Tolu then east to Shady Grove through Deanwood. This is not too much to hope for. Here's hoping it may all be realized in the near future.

It can all be looked for when we all get behind the movement and push. It would mean the expenditure of some money but would enhance the value of all property to a large extent.

BELIEFS ABOUT DOVES

There is a belief that the pigeon has no gall. The story goes that pigeons have no gall, because the dove sent from the ark by Noah burst its gall out of grief and none of the pigeon family has had a gall ever since.

To feed strange pigeons will bring true friends.

Turtle doves in your house are said to banish rheumatism.

In Scotland a white dove followed by a black dove means ill followed by joys.

The pigeon is supposed to look well to its own stomach; hence pigeon-toed people are said to be stingy.

When a pigeon perches upon the house in Hindustan the owner takes it to be a forerunner of ill luck.

In India if a young woman whose husband is away sees a pair of doves, it is a sign that he will soon come back to her.

In Lancashire the appearance of a white dove at the window means either a recovery or else a good angel to take away the soul.

If you hear the first notes of a dove in spring while you are lying down, you will have ill health all the year; if you are walking, perfect health; if sitting, moderately good health.

GATHERED FACTS

The interest of Great Britain's war debt to the United States amounts to $250,000,000 a year.

Bison are the only horned cattle native to America and they have never been domesticated.

It is said that soft wood under pressure becomes considerably harder than hardwood under pressure.

In many of the rural parts of England the singular belief prevails that in leap year all field-beans grow on the wrong side of the pod.

Rubber trees grow at a tremendous pace. At four years old from planting a rubber tree will measure 15 inches in girth and is then ready for tapping. For some years ultraviolet rays have been used for sterilizing water, milk and other fluids. The idea has now been applied to the disinfecting of barrels and casks.

The women of the Macus tribe of Africa have a rich brown skin, but ever since they saw the white skin of some Caucasian travelers they have been making a paste which they smear over their faces until it gives them the appearance of wearing a false face.

Even laziness has to find something to occupy it.

Foolishness that is modest is not so foolish after all.

Optimistically loving the masses is done by some men very capably.

Politics is bad only because the people don't watch politics carefully.

Debts are so disagreeable to some that they pay them off with haste and fury.

About the time one knows enough to give advice nobody wants to listen to it.

Some prodigious feats are performed by a man sometimes to keep a boy from losing faith in him.

Optimism's greatest victory is the popular belief in the power of money to secure all things desirable.

A middle-aged man will sometimes think if he could find the right kind of hat he would look younger; but he never can find it.

PHILOSOPHY

Women may be called the weaker vessel, but we've seen some regular dreadsnaughts.

Many a man when he's courting tells the object of his heart that he is unworthy, and spends the rest of his life proving it.

"Social Butterflies" is distinctly a misnomer. When one thinks of the way women go through clothes, "moths" would be more appropriate.

What good doctors know would fill an encyclopedia; but what bad ones do not know has filled the cemeteries. —Mass. Tech. Voo Doo.

CHAPTER VII.

Lonesome.

When John Moreland and Ben Littleford had finished their breakfast there in the dining room of the Blaisdell, they drank the water from their sugarbowl, threatened with sudden death the waiter who snickered, and found the way to the lobby.

To Littleford the minutes dragged suddenly. Finally he told Moreland, in a sentence filled with double negatives, that he could bear the suspense no longer, and proposed that they set out at once for Doctor Braemer's hospital. The hotel manager overheard some of the one-sided conversation; he plucked the surgeon and learned that the young woman was resting easily, which information he passed on to the mountain men.

Ben Littleford was quiet for five minutes, more or less. Then he again proposed to John Moreland that they go to the hospital to see Babe. Moreland refused flatly, and accompanied his refusal with an unmistakable look of contempt.

"You're as restless as a dog in a pen town," he told his old enemy, and with that he walked away.

A few minutes later Ben Littleford stole out unnoticed by his neighbor from the big time, and went at a brisk gait up the street. Moreland found it out shortly afterward; he followed the Littleford chief hotfoot, and overtook him. Trust your hill dweller to note landmarks when he goes into unknown territory—Littleford was headed straight for the hospital.

They walked for two blocks in silence. Moreland had assumed the air of a man who has had the guard-ship of an irresponsible person thrust upon him, but soon he softened somewhat.

"I shore can't understand, Ben," he drawled, "how Bill Dale ever could bear it to live here."

"I wonder," Littleford said absently, as though he had not heard, "what Bill Dale is at? It's mighty durned lonesome without him, ain't it? That was good how we had for breakfast, John."

"It wasn't ham. It was beef," he said. "It was ham."

"It was beef," he said. "It was ham."

"Don't ye reckon," bared John Moreland, "that I know a dang cow's meat when I see it? It was beef!"

They had halted in the middle of a stream of pedestrians. A policeman crowded his way to them.

"Move on!" he growled.

Bill Dale was at that moment entering the lobby of the Blaisdell with Robert McLaurin at his side. Dale had just told McLaurin that he meant to go to Cincinnati to borrow money from his wealthy friend Harris. Then McLaurin told Dale something that saved him the journey to Cincinnati.

"You haven't heard about Harris, Bill? I'm sorry, because he would have accommodated you. He went broke a few days ago in the cotton smash. He was here yesterday, and left last night for Clincy."

Dale did not try to conceal his surprise and disappointment. Harris, for all his youth, had been a business man.

"I'll have to try somebody here, I guess. But I won't take it from father—mother wouldn't permit it, anyway, if she knew—and there are several other reasons. Queer how a fellow's mother would turn him down like this! Usually, y'know, it's a fellow's mother that sticks by him the longest."

"I wonder where I could find old Newton Wheatley, of the Luther-Wheatley iron company? I know him, all right. He always liked me, Bobby."

"You'll find him at home," McLaurin answered. "He's out of business, and here all the time now. He might take a shot at coal. Why not phone him from here?"

"I'll do that," Dale decided. "Look up my two friends for me, Bobby, will you?"

He was soon speaking to Newton Wheatley. He was brief in stating his wishes. To the question as to why he did not go to his father for funds—well, he had his reasons, and it was rather a private matter. Wheatley, of course, remembered the near-wedding.

The old iron man was silent for what seemed to Dale a very long time. Then his voice came over the wire with an almost ominous calm:

"Who besides you has seen this vein, Carlie? Anybody that knows coal?"

"Yes, my father," Dale answered quickly. "He went over it years ago. Ask him about the coal in David Moreland's mountain. Phone him, and then phone me. I'm waiting at the Blaisdell."

Wheatley agreed a little reluctantly. Dale waited patiently for fifteen minutes. The clerk called him to the phone. He took up the receiver with boyish eagerness.

Wheatley began cordially: "Your father tells me it is a good proposition, Carlie, so I'll let you have all the money you'll need. And if you want a good mining man, I know where you can lay your hands on one; also I can furnish you, at half the original cost, all the necessary machinery and accessories. You didn't know the old Luther-Wheatley company dickered in coal as well as iron; eh? Well, it did. Let me see you at three o'clock this afternoon—"

Dale was jubilant. Here was a rare stroke of good fortune. He went to McLaurin—who had not yet found John Moreland and Ben Littleford—and told him about it. McLaurin was almost as happy as Dale over it. A bellboy appeared like a jack-in-the-box in the center of the floor. "Mistoh Cahyle Dale! Mistoh Cahyle Dale!" Dale wheeled. "Well?"

"Wanted immediately at Doctor Braemer's hospital, suh!"

Dale shook hands with McLaurin and hurried toward the street.

A few minutes later Doctor Braemer met him in the reception room.

"What's wrong, doctor?"

The surgeon beckoned. "Come with me."

He turned and led the way through a long corridor and to a sunny white room where Babe Littleford lay with a bandage about her temples. Ben Littleford was on his knees at his daughter's bedside; he was slowly wringing his big, rough hands and begging pitiously to be forgiven.

Habe stared at him a trifle coldly. She had not yet seen the two men who stood in the doorway. Then she interrupted her father:

"You hush, pap, and go away. I'd told ye a hundred times about fightin' a-bein' murder, and you never would pay any tention to me. You hush, pap, and go away. Ef I die, I'll jest haf to die. And ef I die, I shore do want to die in peace. Go way, pap."

"But ye must live, Babe, honey!" Ben Littleford moaned. "Ef you was to die, what'd I do?"

"I don't know what ye'd do, pap," Habe said wearily. "You ought to thought o' that afore, pap. It may be too late now. I want ye to go on off and le' me alone. Ef I die, I want to die in peace. The Lord knows I never got to live in peace!"

There was a worried look in her wonderful brown eyes, and the doctor saw it. He strode forward decisively and helped Littleford to his feet. The hillman wiped away a tear with his faded blue handkerchief, and hung his head. He had been made a broken man in one day.

"Go out to your friend Moreland," smiled the doctor, "and wait there for a little while."

Habe's father walked unsteadily out of the room. Dale went to Doctor Braemer and whispered, "Isn't she going to make it?" anxiously.

"Certainly she's going to make it," Braemer assured him. "Go on; she wants to see you."

Dale drew a chair up close to the white bed and sat down. Habe's eyes lighted at once, and she put a hand uncertainly out toward him. Dale took the hand in his. He saw that it was a little pale under its delicate sunburn.

"Glad to see you, Babe," he told her softly. "Why do you think you're going to die, Babe?"

She smiled at him. "Why, I don't think I'm a-goin' to die," she said. "I know I'm a-goin' to live, Bill Dale. I feel like I could walk fifty miles right now!"

"But I heard you tell your father—"

"I was a-tryin' to steer him out o' fightin' any more," she interrupted.

"And I believe I bout done it, don't you?"

Dale was relieved. "I do. Is there anything you want, Babe? If there is, I'll get it for you if it's in the universe."

"The universe!" she repeated inquiringly. "What's the universe, Bill Dale? Somethin' to eat?"

"The world, the sun, the moon, and the stars."

She smiled at him again. "No," she said, "the 'ole nothin' I want, and ain't nothin' ye can do fo' me, I reckon."

"But I thought, as they sent for me—"

Habe Littleford's fingers held tightly to his. "It was me that sent fo' you."

She turned her face the other way. "I was so lonesome, Bill Dale!"

Robert McLaurin's wife, Patricia, visited Babe twice daily, and a friendship that was none the less warm for being unique sprang up quickly between them. Patricia declared to her husband that she was going to keep Babe—whom she was already calling by her proper name, the same being Elizabeth—and educate her. There was room in the bungalow, Patricia said; and she really needed company, because Bobby was away so much.

Habe accepted little Mrs. McLaurin's offer as soon as Bill Dale convinced her that she wouldn't be merely an object of charity. The hill pride's first law is that one must pay for what he gets; and it's probably the first law God laid down for old Adam in Eden. Ben Littleford seemed bewildered and blue when they told him of the arrangement, but he voiced no objection. Dale pressed upon him a loan of a hundred dollars, and ordered him to give it to his daughter, which he did. Elizabeth Littleford, of course, would need new clothing.

"I ain't even got any dresses at home," she whispered to Patricia, "but two."

Bill Dale was sure now that he loved Babe, and he was almost sure that she cared for him. But he was quite properly in no haste to come to an understanding. He had known all along that Babe would have to be educated; and a woman's tastes, he reasoned, might change with education. And he wanted her to have the opportunity of knowing other men of his class. If she couldn't love him with a lasting love, he didn't want her to love him at all.

Oddly or not, he never thought of Jimmy Payne.

CHAPTER VIII.

Major Bradley and Henderson Goff.

When Bill Dale, the expert mining man Hayes and the two mountaineers stepped from a short passenger train at the halfway switch, they were approached by the moonshiner, Heck, and a man whom Dale had never seen before. He was tall, and his bearing was erect and soldierlike, though he was every day of sixty years old. His eyes were blue and twinkling with everlasting good humor; his gray mustaches and imperial were exceedingly well cared for; his teeth were his own, and as white as a school girl's, and they bore out his general air of nestness. He was, plainly, a Southerner of the old type.

"Who's that?" whispered Dale to John Moreland.

But Moreland didn't hear. He ran forward with his right hand outstretched, and so did Ben Littleford. Men could not have greeted a brother with more gladness, Dale thought.

"Hi, that, Major Bradley!" the hillman cried. "And how d'ye come on today?"

"I am very well, gentlemen, thank you," said the major, smiling.

He shook their hands heartily. The trainmen gave up their message yesterday; he went on, still smiling, "and we were delighted to learn that the young woman was out of danger. I trust you are all in good health, gentlemen."

They assured him that they were. Moreland turned to introduce Bill Dale and the dining man. From the moment that Major Bradley gripped Dale's hand they were friends.

"Mighty glad to know you, sir!" exclaimed the old lawyer. "I've been bearing a great deal about you, sir, over in the valley of the loce. They seem to think there's nobody just like Bill Dale! It was Bill Dale this, and Bill Dale that; it was 'Here's where Bill Dale whipped Black Adam,' or, 'Here's where Bill Dale was standing when such-and-such happened,' or, 'Here's where Bill Dale crossed the fence!'"

"Hah-hah-hah!" sluggishly laughed by Heck, who stood leading on the muzzle of his rifle. "Bill Dale is all right, major; ye've shore got my word fo' that."

The others laughed. Then John Moreland said they'd better be moving, or they'd be late for dinner.

When they had put a hundred yards of David Moreland's mountain behind them, the old Southerner tugged stily at Dale's sleeve and whispered:

"Let us fall behind a little, if you please. I want to speak with you privately."

They began to lag, and soon there was a distance of several rods between them and the others.

"I heard through Addie Moreland," began Bradley, his friendly hand on the younger man's arm, "about you and what you're planning to do for the Morelands. I tell you, sir, I thanked heaven for your coming, and you may count on me to help in any way I can. The Morelands are quite friendly to me now, though up to the middle of last summer they didn't like me any too well because I made Ben Littleford's cabin my home when out here."

"It was a simple thing that brought us together. John Moreland's little nephew was lost in the woods and his mother was frantic. There are panthers, you know, and wildcats, rattlers, and copperheads. I was fortunate enough to find the boy, and carried him home. That was all. They're a fine people, my boy, and so are the Littlefords. Good old English blood that somehow wandered off. There's no purer, cleaner blood in America, sir."

"And now—how are you getting along with your plans for the operation of the coal mine?"

"Excellently," answered Dale. "We have the necessary finance; a geared locomotive and cars and light steel rails have been bargained for."

"Good!" Bradley gave Dale a hearty slap on the shoulder.

"There's something else I wanted to say, Mr. Dale," he continued, his voice grave. "You're nearly certain to have a barrel of trouble with a shyster coal man named Henderson Goff. He's a villain, sir, if ever there was one! And he's quite the smoothest article I've ever seen. He can make you believe black is white, if only you'll listen to him long enough."

"Is he—has he been here recently?" Dale wanted to know.

"He's here now," answered the major. "He's been here for three days, and he's been working devilment fast. He was up here last summer, trying to buy the Moreland coal for a song; he knows all the people, you see. As soon as he landed here on this present trip, he found out about your intentions. Then, at night, he freed Adam Ball from his tobacco barn prison, and went home with him."

"Well, by Heck followed them and did some eavesdropping—poor By has his strong points!" the major went on. "Goff learned that Adam Ball's father knew about the coal vein long before David Moreland discovered it and got lawful possession of the mountain. Then Goff made the Balls believe that they were due a big share of the proceeds of the Moreland coal! It wasn't very hard to do, I guess. The Balls, this set, at least, were originally lowlanders; they took to the mountains, I understand, to keep from being forced to fight during the Civil war."

"Goff's idea," muttered Dale, "is to get the Balls to scare me into selling instead of developing, eh?"

"Exactly," nodded old Bradley. "Then he would settle with the Balls by giving them a dollar or two a day for digging coal; perhaps he would put them off until the mine was worked out for half of that, and then skip. Anyway, Goff would come out at the big end."

"I see," said Dale. "If there's anything that I can do, at any time, you must hesitate to let me know!" said the major.

"You may consider yourself attorney and legal adviser for the Moreland Coal company, of which I have the honor to be general manager," smiled Dale. "If you will."

Major Bradley's voice came happily. "My dear boy, I am glad to accept! And there shall be no charge for any service that I may render."

They were not long in reaching the green valley, which lay very beautiful and very peaceful to the warm light of the early July sun. The soft murmuring of the crystal river and the low, slow tinkling of the cowbells made music that was sweet and pleasing.

Suddenly John Moreland stopped, uttered a swearword under his breath, turned and went back to Dale.

"There's a man a-waitin' on us ahead, that, Bill," he drawled, "at ye shore want to watch like a hawk to keep him from a-strainin' the eyeteth out o' yore head. His name is Henderson Goff, and he wants coal."

They went on. Soon they met a man who, in clothing and manner, made Dale think of stories he had heard and read of Mississippi river steamboat gamblers of the long ago. His eyes were black, and as keen as a pair of spear-points; his mustaches, too, were black, and they had sharp, upturned ends like those of a Mephisto. The major had said that he was a smooth article; he certainly looked it.

He met John Moreland with an oily smile and thrust out his hand. But Moreland wouldn't see the hand.

"Anything ye've got to say about coal," he growled, "ye can say to Bill Dale that," pointing with a calloused thumb—"Bill he's the high light o' the whole business; and when he opens his mouth, ye can cock yore head to one side and listen fo' gawp."

Goff was delighted to meet Mr. Dale, of whom he had already heard. Dale had nothing whatever to say. They walked on toward the cabin of the Moreland chief, with Goff keeping up a running fire of talk concerning the scenery, the climate—anything but coal.

At John Moreland's gate, Goff nudged Dale with an elbow and whispered:

"Meet me at one o'clock down there where the big sycamore lies across the river. I've got something to tell you that will interest you."

He didn't wait for a reply, but turned away with By Heck. He went to the home of the Hecks ostensibly to have his fortune told—really, to get his dinner. The old woman didn't like him, but her inborn spirit of hospitality wouldn't permit her to refuse him a meal. She felt that she was almost even with him when, after shuffling and reading the cards, she told him that it would be wise for him to look out for a big, tall, grey-eyed young man with an oak tree in one hand and a couple of cliffs in the other.

Dale told Major Bradley and John Moreland of that which Goff had said to him at the gate. The major suggested forthwith that he go to meet the man; it couldn't possibly do any harm, and there was a chance that he would learn something of Goff's intentions.

So Dale went.

Goff was already there, waiting. He was sitting on a stone on the Moreland side of the river, whittling idly. When he saw Dale approaching, he smiled and nodded, rose and pocketed his knife.

"I want to make you an offer for that coal," he said at once.

"All right," Dale replied. "If your offer is big enough, it will be considered. But no shyster price is going to get that coal, Goff."

Goff frowned uneasily. "You don't know coal, Mr. Dale. You don't know the business of mining—or I've got you sized up wrong. Thousands of men have gone busted trying to do things they weren't used to doing. There's a big chance, too, that the coal isn't what it looks to be on the surface. You'd better take a sure thing, and avoid a possibility of loss. I'll give you five thousand, spot cash, for that coal."

Dale shook his head. "You'll have to come heavier than that, y'know, if you get the Moreland coal."

"And an extra thousand for your self!"

Dale laughed a low, queer laugh. "You amuse me, Goff," said he. "Seems to me you've misused your calling in life. What a peach of a king-villain you'd make in melodrama! You wouldn't have to act, either; you'd have to be just your natural self. And you make me mad, too, Goff. Because I'm on the square with the Morelands and everybody else—new, get that!"

The corners of the shyster coal man's mouth came down.

"Oh, hosh—don't pass me that virtue stuff. Every man has his price, high or low. You've got yours, and I've got mine. I'll give you five thousand, spot cash, if you'll persuade John Moreland to sell to me for five thousand, and nobody'll ever know you got a rakedown from me. It's all the coal is worth, that ten thousand. Well, yes?"

Dale was of the type that goes pale with anger, and he was pale now. He clenched his hands.

"You can't insult me like that and get away with it, Goff," he clipped. "We're going to fight, Goff, and I'm going to put a flicking on you that fifteen horses can't pull off. Get me?"

He threw aside his coat and rolled his sleeves to his elbows. Henderson Goff ran his right hand quickly to a rear trouser pocket and brought back a stub-nosed automatic pistol, which he turned threateningly toward Bill Dale.

"Go easy, friend," Goff said very complacently. "There's no use in getting sore. I want the coal, that's all. If I can't get it by fair means, I'll get it in another way. Oh, I don't mind telling you; one man's oath is as good in court as another man's. If you don't take me up at ten thousand I'll give you as much trouble that you'll be glad to sell to me later for half that amount. The Balls think they own a big interest in that coal. There's a lot of them, too, and they can keep you from working the mine. Well, I can't waste time in dickerin' with you. What do you say?"

"I say," Dale smiled an odd little smile, "that your plan appears to be perfect, except that you've overlooked one or two important details. For instance, there's the law, y'know."

"The law—now don't go and fool yourself!" exclaimed Goff. "The state couldn't afford to keep a hundred men here, month in and month out, just to protect your little mine. My patience is about gone, Dale—for the last time, what do you say?"

"I say that I'll beat you at any game you put up against me," very quietly. "Furthermore, I say that you are a coward and a scoundrel, and that you haven't got the insides in you to fight me a fair man's fight. If you'll only pocket that thing you've got in your hand, I'll mow down half an acre of meadow bush with your body."

The other turned red, then white, then red again. Bill Dale's words had leashed him keenly. His eyes became like hard black beads, and he began to raise the wicked-looking pistol as though he meant to fire.

Then there was the sound of a creaking twig behind him, and a voice bawled out:

"Drop it, Mister—drop the funny little gun, or the middle o' Tarment a pore pe'ion right now!"

It was the moonshiner, By Heck, and his rifle was leveled. Goff dropped the pistol. Heck grinned, advanced slowly, took up the weapon that the shiffock call a "coward's gun" and tossed it into the river.

"Now git—cut the mustard—light a rag away from here," he ordered, "before I let Bill Dale loose on ye!"

Goff went away rapidly.

"I wonder if you heard him say anything that would make you valuable as a witness," muttered Dale, "in the event we want to have him arrested?"

"I heard you tell him 'at he was afraid to fight ye a fair man's fight, and 'at ef he'd pocket that thing he held in his hand ye'd mow down twenty acres o' meadow bush with his low-down body—that'd be valuable in co'ts wouldn't it?"

Dale smiled. Then he frowned.

RED CROSS GIVES ANNUAL BUDGET

$19,361,657 Allotted for Current Program of Relief and Service.

MILLIONS FOR VETERAN AID

Medical Aid for European Children Will Cost $6,000,000 This Year.

Washington.—Expenditures totalling $19,361,657 for carrying through its program of relief and services in the United States and overseas are outlined in the budget of the American Red Cross for the current fiscal year. This total is more than $5,000,000 lower than the expenditure during the last fiscal year, when the disbursements reached $24,402,741. It is announced at National Headquarters in a statement calling attention to the necessity of continued support of the organization by response to the Annual Roll Call, November 11 to 24, if the vital work of the society is to be effectively carried on.

Outstanding among the items of the domestic budget is the appropriation of $3,800,000 for work in behalf of the disabled ex-service man and his family. This appropriation represents the amount allotted to this work from National Headquarters only and does not take into consideration the millions being spent in chapters for relief of the World War veterans. It is in the chapter that the greater amount is spent in meeting this obligation of the Red Cross, the statement continues, as manifested by figures of the fiscal year 1920-1921 when the total was approximately $10,000,000, of which $2,600,000 represented the disbursement of National Headquarters while the remainder was the chapters' contribution to this field of Red Cross service.

Vast Work for Disabled
 Chief among the sub-divisions of the appropriation for work with veterans is that which concerns itself with assistance to disabled men and women in government hospitals. This item of $1,700,000, an increase of more than $500,000 over the appropriation for the same work in last year's budget, will provide those personal services for the disabled and their families which are indispensable to equipment those provided by the government. The director of the Veterans Bureau has recently expressed his desire that the Red Cross should continue and extend these "humanizing services." Other items of the appropriation for veterans relief are proportionately increased. An additional appropriation of $400,000 has been made for Red Cross work in connection with regular Army and Navy hospitals and with the regular Army and Navy.

For disaster relief, the Red Cross has set aside for the current twelve months an appropriation of $10,000,000, thereby doubling the appropriation for the same purpose for the fiscal year 1920-1921.

More than $2,000,000 is provided for service and assistance to the 1,000 Red Cross chapters by the national organization.

Helping Destitute Children
 Other items of the domestic budget include $400,000 for miscellaneous activities, including contributions restricted for special purposes and $700,000 for management. Each of these items represents large reductions over similar appropriations of the previous year.

From a fund of $10,000,000, $1,000,000 of which was contributed through the European Relief Campaign and $1,000,000 allotted to the Red Cross for child welfare work in Europe, there remains $5,000,000 still available, of which it is estimated that $3,000,000 will be required for this work during the current year. For Red Cross participation in the joint effort to relieve famine conditions in Russia, for final work in the China famine, for Junior Red Cross and other overseas activities including the closing of the old general relief program in Europe $4,000,000 is made available.

In announcing the national budget, the Red Cross makes it clear that the figures do not include chapter expenditures or place any cost estimate on the invaluable service of volunteers in chapters.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL
 Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

ALICIA.

THIS name is derived from the same root as Alice, and represents an attempt at greater euphony. The curious part of it is that the name, in its original form, is really not that of a woman at all, but of a man. It is derived from the Anglo-Saxon Adelgis of which the feminine form was Adelgise, but was not frequently given to women. Instead it was sacred to the sons of the house, principally among the nobility. The name itself means noble, in both its masculine and feminine forms.

The name is purely English, having, however, a slight Teutonic flavor. An argument is put forward by some experts that the name is derived from the Frankish Adalbert or Adelchen, meaning "daughter." Alia or Alia in Lombardy was naturalized in England when Alia is the married Henry I.

The name, originally masculine, according to the best authorities, however, represents Adelgis and not Adelgise, making the proper feminine form Alia. Some believe that Elias, generally believed to be a derivative of Elisebeth is this missing form. For proof of Alia as the representative of Adelgis, the Liber Vitae of Durham records the changes in Adelgis from the first noble lady of that name, who laid her gifts upon the altar. By contraction it became Adelina and Alia.

The talismanic stone of Alia is the Alexandrite, a Russian gem. It is found in the emerald mines of that nation, being of a beautiful green shade which changes to columbine red. The Russians believe it brings great good fortune. When the subject of its mystic's dream it signifies hope. Monday is Alia's lucky day and seven her lucky number. Her flower is the white hawthorne, a beautiful bud.
