Farm Bureau News

Get Ready Now

Right now is a good time to think about the short pastures that late summer and early fall so often bring. On many farms the stock actually lose in flesh and go down in milk production as the pastures fail in the dry months. This is a loss always and it may be a serious loss to the keeper of milk cows.

The farmer who has a silo with some surplus silage in it is fortified against the time of dry pastures. Many however have no silage left for summer consumption and those as well as the farmers who have no silo at all should fortify themselves by planting some crop that will give a supply of green feed at that season. Cow peas, soy beans, sudan grass can be sown to furnish grazing then; any of these crops or corn or sorghum can be planted to as to come in right for soiling crops. Corn for soiling should be just coming into its roasting ear stage; sorghum should be well headed out, soy beans and cow peas should be setting their pods. Of course one can not tell exactly when the season of need will come, so it is well to plant with the idea of extending the season of available soiling and emergency pasture crops as much as practical.

Clover Milder

A white coating or covering is evident on many fields of red clover in the county and is causing farmers more or less concern. This mildew is not dangerous at all, no trouble has been reported from stock grazing on clover so affected. This will probably make the hay somewhat dusty, if not properly cured but there will be no danger from use of clover so affected.

The University Extension Specialist, Dr. T. P. Polk spent two days in the county inspecting farms that have parasitic and infectious diseases of live stock. In one flock of sheep visited a post-mortem was held and it was found that this animal was infected with intestinal parasites as well as grub in the head. There are a number of places to be visited in the next few days in regard to various live stock troubles.

Considerable interest is being manifested throughout the county in the tuberculin testing work. There are at present twenty-five people who have requested the work and more requests are being received right along. The County Agent recently received word from the State Veterinarian regarding the sending of a man to Crittenden county to continue the work. He states that almost every county in the state is asking for the work and as his force is limited he can promise no definite date as yet. As soon as a man can be sent to this county The County Agent will be notified.

WHY HE DOES NOT

LIKE MARION

Mr. Ben Wofford, the dry goods traveling salesman, said to a reporter "I visit this town twice a year and that is just twice too often." "Why?" asked the reporter, "Is business not good?"

"Business is all right" replied Mr. Wofford "But I travel over four states and have visited every town in my territory and this is the only town where I have to pay more than five cents for Coca-Cola. It is too bad. This is a fine little city with its large number of beautiful shade trees. And this is Marion, the birth place of Ollie James. Too bad about the Coca-Cola."

—Just received a beautiful line of Midsummer Hats. MRS. H. C. LAMB

Mrs. H. H. Kirk, of Crayne was in Marion Wednesday shopping.

MARION PURE FOOD BAKERY

Mr. E. R. Hutson, of Carmi, Ill., has come to Marion and will establish a first class bakery to be located in the H. V. Stone building on North Main Street. Mr. Hutson has for several years operated a bakery at Norris City Ill., and sold out only a short time before coming here. The bakery will be known as the Marion Pure Food Bakery.

Mr. O. R. Brown, an expert machinist of Battle Creek, Mich., has been employed to engineer the building of the oven and other machinery connected with the bakery.

The big oven when ready for use, will weigh more than 10,000 pounds and will have a capacity of 4000 loaves daily. It will be equal to that of the best of the big city bakeries and the people of Marion have cause to be proud that Mr. Hutson has located here. It is his intention to work up a wholesale as well as a retail trade for his bread.

When the bakery is established our home people would do well to make it a rule to buy only made-in-Marion bread.

DAD

He may wear a last year's straw hat, his finger nails may need manicuring; his vest may hang a little loose, and his pants may bag at the knees; his face may show signs of a second day's growth, and the tin dinner bucket he carries may be full of dents and doughnuts; but don't you call him "the old man." He's your father.

For years and years he has been rustling around to get things together. Never once has he failed to do the right thing by you. He thinks you are the greatest boy on earth, bar none, even though you plaster your hair back, wear smart clothes, smoke cigarettes and fail to bring home a cent. He is the man who won the love and life partnership of the greatest woman on earth—your mother.

He is "some man" and not "the old man." If you win as good a wife as he did you will have to go some, boy—The Silent Partner.

Selected by Mrs. Jas. A. Moore.

RE-ELECTED HERE

The Board of Education elected Prof. R. E. Jagers the second time before he consented to serve as Superintendent of our City Schools. He had decided to return but could not refuse the plea of the people of the city of Marion.

Mr. Jagers, while here, has certainly worked hard to build up our schools and succeeded in a marked degree. The Press congratulates Marion on having Mr. Jagers another year.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Rev. J. W. Flynn will preach at the Christian church next Sunday morning and evening.

Subject of morning discourse "A Message of Condolence." Evening sermon "What Think Ye of Christ?" All are invited to attend.

TOLU BANK PIG CLUB

On Saturday May 20th the Tolu Bank distributed 20 pure bred Duroc Jersey sow pigs to as many Junior Club members. The pigs are all pure bred and each club member will get the registration paper for his pig. The Club members will grow their hogs for breeding purposes and keep a record of the cost. Come to the Tolu Community Fair next fall and see some "sure nuff" hogs.

Mr. O. R. Brown, who is engineering the construction of the new bakery left for Cincinnati Wednesday.

Well-Known Collegian Male Quartet Here at Chautauqua

The well-known Collegian Male Quartet will be one of the popular attractions at the coming Redpath Chautauqua here. The members of this notable organization are exceptional singers, but they are also splendidly accomplished as a brass quartet. They have had long experience together and their ensemble singing and playing are exceptional. They are capital entertainers and the programs presented by them are sure to be a musical and entertainment treat, which will be long remembered by Chautauqua audiences.

MADISONVILLE BOY WINS COURIER'S $500 PRIZE

James A. Franceway Jr., of Madisonville, won the $500 offered by the Evansville Courier in its word contest. The "C" puzzle contest of this paper was participated in by many persons and it was quite an honor for a local boy to be adjudged winner of the first prize. He says the $500 he won will be placed in a bank and be used in completing his education.

The winner is in the Sophomore Class or second year of high school.—Hustler.

A large crowd attended Quarterly Conference at Siloam church last Sunday and an all-day meeting was held. Besides the pastor, Rev. W. F. Hogard, there were also present Rev. A. H. Godbey, pastor of the Carrsville church, and Rev. O. M. Capshaw, pastor at Tolu. At the morning service there was preaching by Dr. Godbey.

At noon a dinner, sumptuous and bountiful was served on the grounds so that none might go away hungry. In the afternoon there was more preaching, after which the Quarterly Conference was held.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY C. C. P. CHURCH CLOSED SUNDAY

A very interesting and well attended session of the General Assembly of the Colored Cumberland Presbyterian Church which convened Tuesday of last week closed Sunday evening.

It was a very successful meeting throughout the session. The visiting ministers were some of the ablest of that church in the United States. Sixty-five delegates and out-of-town visitors attended the meetings besides the large crowds of home folks. A number of white people also attended the services.

Among the visiting ministers was Rev. W. M. Wolf, president of the Bowling Green Academy, who preached Friday evening.

The meeting closed Sunday evening with a sermon by Rev. J. M. W. Deshong, of Fayetteville, Tenn.

HOME TALENT REVIVAL MEETINGS

A few days revival effort will begin at the Methodist church next Sunday, May 28th. We will have preaching only at night, beginning promptly at 7:30. It is greatly desired that the day time be given to prayer, Bible reading and personal work. Our own home people are fully capable of conducting a revival and there will be no out of town help. The hearty co-operation of the Baptist, Presbyterian, Christian, Cumberland and Methodist people is greatly desired. Each minister in town is most cordially invited to join with us in this work.

Our objectives in the meeting:
1—To get men saved.
2—To build up the spiritual life of the church.
3—To call men to life services.
4—To incline men to join the church of their choice.

G. P. DILLON, Pastor.

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

After a week's most delightful entertainment, the Commencement exercises of the Marion High School and the Marion Graded School closed Wednesday evening by an address at the school auditorium by Hon. George Colvin, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Mr. Colvin is an instructive speaker, an orator and a good entertainer and is deeply interested in the schools of Kentucky. His address was listened to by one of the largest audiences ever assembled in the auditorium.

Everyone was delighted with the address and at its close Mr. Colvin received many hearty handshakes from the audience, both old and young. Though admired by all Mr. Colvin seems to have an attraction especially for children and young people. The school faculty are to be congratulated upon procuring him to make the closing address.

FOUND A JOINT SNAKE

Mr. John T. Stewart who resides in the Deanwood section, while in town the other day related a story which, while he vouchsafes for its truthfulness, he admits it will be hard for his friends to believe. The story as related tells of the finding of what is called a joint snake. This reptile, if it be a reptile, has puzzled the scientists for many years and many persons even doubt its existence. He describes it as being about a foot long, as large around as his thumb and in appearance resembles the spreadhead, which at first he took it to be.

Mr. Stewart says that when he touched the snake with a stick it disjoined, separating and scattering itself into thousands of small pieces, each piece seeming to be an independent, living creature. Stopping to watch the disjoined members, which were scattered over a surface of several feet, Mr. Stewart says the pieces began wiggling around toward each other and hooking onto one another until finally all the particles had united and became again one snake.

Realizing that this story would probably be doubted when told to his friends and knowing, from the study of Scripture that from the mouths of two or three witnesses the truth could be established, Mr. Stewart called to Messrs. Fell Walker and Ben Drennan who were passing, and they too will vouch for the truthfulness of the story.

Who will now dare to say "There ain't no such a snake?"

ARRESTED AT PROVIDENCE

Deputy Sheriff Martin, of Providence, arrested Sherda Lewis, who is under an indictment of a Crittenden County Grand Jury charged with deserting his child. The prisoner was turned over to county officials and placed in jail to await Circuit Court.

RETURNS TO FIRST LOVE

Dr. R. L. Moore, who several years ago on account of his health, retired from the practice of medicine, will again take up the practice of his former profession. Since the expiration of his term of office as County Judge, though engaged in other pursuits, he has practiced the medical profession more or less. He will take a post graduate course this summer, after which he will return to his first love, doing an exclusive office practice.

MAIN STREET PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

In the absence of the Rev. E. N. Hart, pastor, who is assisting his brother in a revival meeting at Princeton, the Rev. Dr. L. B. Hart, of Princeton, will preach both morning and evening at the Main Street Presbyterian church on next Sunday the 28th. Dr. Hart will be remembered as having preached here recently, and a most cordial invitation is extended to all to come and hear him again. Come both morning and evening.

The Rev. Dr. J. T. Patterson, member of the Board of Foreign Missions, who has just completed a visit to all of the Presbyterian mission stations in Africa, will give a lecture on the Presbyterian mission work in that continent at the Main Street Presbyterian church on next Tuesday evening the 30th, at 7:30. No one should miss hearing this lecture. All are invited to come.

Regular Christian Endeavor meeting at the Main Street Presbyterian church Sunday, 6:30. All young people invited.

RANKIN-BOSTON WEDDING

Last Sunday afternoon, in order that they might steal a march on their friends, Mr. Ted Boston and Miss Jewell Rankin, accompanied by Mr. Gleaford Rankin, drove to Fredonia, where they took a train for Louisville.

On Tuesday morning, May 23, they were happily united in marriage at the Virginia Avenue Methodist church at Louisville, their former pastor, Rev. H. A. Short, performing the marriage ceremony.

The bride is the handsome and accomplished daughter of Mrs. T. A. Rankin, of this city. She is a graduate of the Marion High School, has a host of friends and is popular in church and other circles of society, possessing, as she does, all the virtues, that go to make up a most estimable young woman.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Boston, of this city, is a popular business young man and a member of the firm of J. N. Boston and Sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Boston left Louisville shortly after the ceremony for Nashville and other points in the south for a bridal tour. After their return they will make their home in this city and will be at home to their many friends.

CHAPTER XV.—Continued.

"Martin," she said, impetuously interrupting him. "I've got to talk to you! I've meant to write it—so many times, I've had it in mind ever since I left Red Creek!"

"Shoot!" Martin said, with his favorite look of indulgent amusement.

"There are marriages that without any fault on either side are a mistake," Cherry began, "any contributory fault, I mean—"

"Talk United States!" Martin growled, smiling, but on guard.

"Well, I think our marriage was one of those!" Cherry said.

"What have you got to kick about?" Martin asked, after a pause.

"I'm not kicking!" Cherry answered, with quick resentment. "But I wish I had words to make you realize how I feel about it!"

Martin looked gloomily up at her, and shrugged.

"This is a sweet welcome from your wife!" he observed. But as she regarded him with troubled and earnest eyes, perhaps her half-forgotten beauty made an unexpected appeal to him, for he turned toward her and eyed her with a large tolerance. "What's the matter, Cherry?" he asked. "It doesn't seem to me that you've got much to kick about. Haven't I always taken pretty good care of you? Didn't I take the house and move the things in; didn't I leave you a whole month, while I ate at that rotten boarding-house, when your father died; haven't I let you have—how long is it?—seven weeks, by George, with your sister?"

Cherry recognized the tones of his old arraigning voice. He felt himself ill-treated.

"Now you come in for this money," he began. But she interrupted him hotly:

"Martin, you know that is not true!"

"Isn't it true that the instant you can take care of yourself you begin to talk about not being happy, and so on?" he asked, without any particular feeling. "You bet you do! Why, I never cared anything about that money, you never heard me speak of it. I always felt that by the time the lawyers and the heirs and the witnesses got through, there wouldn't be much left of it, anyway!"

Too rich in her new position of the woman beloved by Peter to quarrel with Martin in the old unhappy fashion, Cherry laid an appealing hand on his arm.

"I'm sorry to meet you with this sort of thing," she said, simply, "I blame myself now for not writing you just how I've come to feel about it! We must make some arrangement for the future—things can't be as they were!"

"You've had it all your year ever since we were married," he began.

"Now you blame me—"

"I don't blame you, Martin!"

"Well, what do you want a divorce for, then?"

"I don't even say anything about a divorce," Cherry said, fighting for time.

"But I can't go back!" she added, with a sudden force and conviction that reached him at last.

"Why can't you?"

"Because you don't love me, Martin, and—you know it—I don't love you!"

"Well, but you can't expect the way we felt when we got married to last forever," he said, clumsily. "Do you suppose other men and women talk this way when the—the novelty has worn off?"

"I don't know how they talk. I only know how I feel!" Cherry said, chilled by the old generalization.

Martin, who had stretched his legs to their length, crossed them at the ankles, and stared at her with the staring blue-water with stammering eyes.

"What do you want?" he asked, heavily.

"I want to live my own life!" Cherry answered, after a silence during which her tortured spirit seemed to coin the hackneyed phrase.

"That stuff!" Martin sneered, under his breath. "Well, all right, I don't care, get your divorce!" he agreed, carelessly. "But I'll have something to say about that, too," he warned her.

"You can drag the whole thing up before the courts if you want to—only remember, if you don't like it much, you did it. It never occurred to me even to think of such a thing! I've done my share in this business; you never asked me for anything I could give you that you didn't get; you've never been tied down to housework like other women; you're not raising a family of kids—go ahead, tell every shop-girl in San Francisco all about it, in the papers, and see how much sympathy you get!"

"Oh, you beast!" Cherry said, between her teeth, furious tears in her eyes. The water swam in a blur of blue before her as they rose to go downstairs at Sausalito.

Martin glanced at her with impatience. Her tears never failed to anger him.

"Don't cry, for God's sake!" he said, nervously glancing about for possible onlookers. "What do you want me to do? For the Lord's sake don't make a scene until you and I have a chance to talk this over quietly!"

Cherry's thoughts were with Peter. In her soul she felt as if his arm was about her, as if she were pouring out to him the whole troubled story, sure that he would rescue and console her. She had wiped her eyes, and somewhat recovered calm, but she trusted herself only to shrug her shoulder as she preceded Martin to the train.

There was no time for another word, for Alix suddenly took possession of them. She had had time to bring the car all the six miles to Sausalito, and meant to drive them direct to the valley from there.

She greeted Martin affectionately, although even while she did so her eyes went with a quick, worried look to Cherry. They had been quarreling, of course—it was too bad, Alix thought, but her own course was clear. Until she could take her cue from them, she must treat them both with cheerful unconsciousness of the storm.

They reached the valley and Martin was magnanimous about the delayed lunch. Anything would do for him, he said; he was taking a couple of days' holiday, and everything went. Kow was chopping wood after lunch, and he sauntered out to the block with suggestions; Alix, laying a fire for the evening, simply because she liked to do that sort of work, was favored with directions. Finally Martin pushed her aside.

"Here, let me do that," he said. "You'd have a fine fire here, at that rate!"

Later he went down to the old house with them, to spend there an hour that was trying to both women. It was almost in order now; Cherry had pleased her simple fancy in the matter of hangings and papering, and the effect was fresh and good.

"Girls going to rest this?" Martin asked.

"Unless you and Cherry come live here," Alix said boldly. He smiled tolerantly.

"Why should we?"

"Well, why shouldn't you?"

"Loafing, eh?"

"No, not loafing. But you could transfer your work to San Francisco, couldn't you?"

Martin smiled a deep, wise, long-enduring smile.

"Oh, you'd get me a job, I suppose?" he asked. "I love the way you women try to run things," he added, "but I guess I'll paddle my own canoe for a while longer!"

"There is no earthly reason why you shouldn't live here," Alix said pleasantly.

"There is no earthly reason why we should!" Martin returned. He was annoyed by a suspicion that Alix and Cherry had arranged between them to make this plan the alternative to a divorce. "To tell you the honest truth, I don't like Mill Valley!"

Alix tasted despair. Small hope of preserving this particular relationship, he was, as Cherry had said, "impossible."

"Well, we must try to make you like Mill Valley better!" she said with resolute good-nature. "Of course, it means a lot to Cherry and to me to be near each other!"

"That may be true, too," Martin agreed, taking the front seat again for the drive home.

Alix was surprised at Cherry's passivity and silence, but Cherry was wrapped in a sick and nervous dream, unable either to interpret the present or face the future with any courage. Before luncheon he had followed her into her room and had put his arm about her. But she had quietly shaken him off, with the nervous murmur: "Please—no, don't kiss me, Martin!"

Stung, Martin had immediately dropped his arm, had shrugged his shoulders indifferently and laughed scornfully. Now he remarked to Alix with some bravado:

"You girls still sleeping out?"

"Oh, always—we all do!" Alix had answered readily. "Peter has an extra bunk on his porch; Cherry and I have my porch. But you can be out or in, as you choose!"

Martin ventured an answer that made Cherry's eyes glint angrily and brought a quick, embarrassed flush to Alix's face. Alix did not enjoy a certain type of joking, and she did not concede Martin even the ghost of a smile. He immediately sobered and remarked that he himself liked to be indoors at night. His suitcase was accordingly taken into the pleasant little wood-smelling room next to Peter's, where the autumn sunlight, scented with the dry sweetness of mountain shrubs, was streaming.

He began to play solitaire, on the porch table, at five, and Kow had to disturb him to set it for dinner at seven. Alix was watering the garden, Cherry was dressing. It was an exquisite hour of long shadows and brilliant lights.

Kow had put a tureen of soup on the table, and Alix had returned with damp, clean hands and trimly brushed hair, for supper, when Peter came up through the garden. Cherry had rambled off in the direction of the barn a few moments before, but Martin had followed her and brought her back, remarking that she had had no idea of the time and was idly watching Antoine milking. She slipped into her place after they were all eating, and hardly raised her eyes throughout the meal. If Alix addressed her she fluttered the white lids as if it were an absolute agony to look up; to Peter she did not speak at all. But to Martin she sent an occasional answer, and when the conversation lagged, as it was apt to do in this company, she nervously filled it with random remarks infinitely less reassuring than silence.

"How long do we stay here?" Martin cautiously asked his wife after dinner.

"Stay here!" she echoed, at a loss.

"Yes," he answered, decidedly. "I can stand a little of it, but I don't think much of this sort of life! I thought maybe we could all go into town for dinner and the theater tomorrow or Saturday. But on Monday we'll have to beat it."

"Monday?" Cherry's heart bounded.

"Martin, isn't it a mistake to go on pretending—" she began bitterly.

Peter's voice, in the drawing room, interrupted her. "I'll let you know—we'll talk about it!" she had time to say, hurriedly, before he came out to them. He flung himself into a chair.

CHAPTER XVI.

The evening dragged. Alix had suggested bridge, but Martin did not play bridge. So she went to the piano, and began to ramble through various songs.

Cherry and Peter, left at the table, did not speak to each other; Peter leaned back in his chair, with a cigarette; Cherry dreamily pushed to and fro the little anagram wooden block letters.

But presently her heart gave a great plunge, and although she did not alter her different attitude, or raise her eyes, her white hand moved with directed impulse, and Peter's casual glance fell upon the word "Alone."

When he laid his finished cigarette in the tray, it was to finger the letters himself, in turn, and Cherry realized with a great thrill of relief that he was answering her. Carelessly, and obliterating one word before he began another, he formed the question: "My office tomorrow?"

"Martin always with me," Cherry spelled back. She did not glance at Peter, but at Martin, who was watching the fire, and at Alix, whose back was toward the room.

"Come on, have another game!" Peter asked, generally, while he spelled quickly: "Will arrange sailing first possible day."

Alix, humming with her song, said: "Wait a few minutes!" and Martin glanced up to say, "No, I'm so good at that thing!"

Then Cherry and Peter were unserved again, and she spelled "Mart goes Monday. Plans to take me."

Peter had reached for a magazine; he whirled through the pages, and yawned. Then he began to play with the anagrams again.

"Can you get away without him?" he spelled.

"How?" Cherry instantly asked. And as Peter's hands went on building a little bridge of wooden letters, she went on: "Alix to train, Martin with me to city, impossible."

"Give him the slip," Peter spelled. And after a pause he added, "Life or death."

"Difficult to evade," Cherry spelled, wiping the words away one by one.

"Must wait—" Peter began. Alix, ending her song on a crash of chords, came to the table, interrupting him. Cherry was now lazily reading a magazine; Peter had built a little pen of tiny blocks.

"I'll go you!" Alix said, with spirit. But the game was rather a languid one, nevertheless, and when it was over they gathered yawning about the mantel, ready to disperse for the night.

"And tomorrow night we dine it town and go to the Orpheum?" Alix asked, for the plan had been suggested at dinner-time.

"I'll blow you girls to any show you like," Martin offered.

Remarking that he was tired, Peter went to his room. Cherry, with only a general good-night, also disappeared, to find Alix arranging beds and pillows on their sleeping porch.

"Oh, Alix—I'm so worried—I'm so sick with worry!" Cherry whispered. "He won't listen to me. He won't hear of a divorce!"

"I know!" Alix said, distressedly.

"But what shall I do—I can't go with him!" Cherry protested.

Alix was silent.

"What shall I do?" Cherry pleaded again.

"Why, I don't see what else you can do, but go with him!" Alix said, in a troubled voice. "You are his wife. For better or worse, for richer or poorer, till death—"

It was said so kindly, with Alix's simple and embarrassed fashion of giving advice, that poor Cherry could not resent it. She could only bow her head desolately upon her knees, as she sat, child-fashion, in her bed, and cry.

"A nice mess I've made of my life!" she sobbed. "I've made a nice mess of it! I wish—oh, my God, how I wish I was dead!"

"My own life has been so darned out," Alix mused, in a cautious undertone, sitting, fully dressed, on the side of her own bed, and studying her sister with pitying eyes. "I've often wondered if I could buck up and get through with it if some of that sort of thing had come to me! I don't know, of course, but it seems to me that I'd say: 'Who loses his life shall gain it!' and I'd stand anything—people and places I hated, loneliness and poverty—the whole bag of tricks! I think I would. I mean I'd read the Bible and Shakespeare, and enjoy my meals, and have a garden—" Her voice sank. "I know it's terribly hard for you, Cherry!" she ended, suddenly pitiful.

Cherry had stopped crying, dried her eyes, and had reached resolutely for the book that was waiting on the little shelf above the porch bed.

"You're bigger than I am," she said, quietly. "Or else I'm so made that I suffer more! I wish I could face the music. But I can't do anything. I'm sorry. One knows of unhappy marriages, everywhere, without quite fancying just what a horrible tragedy an unhappy marriage is! Don't mind me, Alix."

Alix was conscious, as she went out to speak to Kow about breakfast, and to give a final glance at fires and lights, that this was one of the times when girls needed a wise mother, or a father, who could decide, blame, and advise.

Coming back from the kitchen, with a pitcher of hot water, she saw Martin, in a welter of evening papers, staring at the last pink ashes of the wood fire. Upon seeing her he got up, and with a cautious glance toward the bedroom doors he said:

"Look here a minute! Can they hear us?" Alix set down her pitcher of water, and came to stand beside him.

"Hear us—Peter and Cherry? No, Cherry's out on our porch, and Peter's porch is even farther away. Why?"

"Take a look, will you?" he said. "I want to speak to you!"

Alix, mystified, duly went to glance at Cherry, reading now in a little funnel of yellow light, and then crossed to enter Peter's room. His porch was dark, but she could see the outline of the tall figure lying across the bed.

"Asleep?" she asked.

"Nope!" he answered.

"Well, don't go to sleep without pulling a rug over you!" he commanded. "Good-night, Pete!"

COCHISE, WHO TRUSTED ONLY ONE WHITE MAN

IF THE white man believed all Apaches "red devils," it will be interesting to know Cochise's opinion of his pale-faced brothers. It could not have been high. Back in 1837 a party of trappers invited some of his people to a feast, and then calmly murdered them. The governor of Chihuahua was offering $100 for every Apache scalp and the trappers needed money.

But Cochise had a more personal grievance. He had been friendly to the Americans until 1861, when he went into an army camp under a flag of truce to deny that his people, the Chiricahua, had stolen a white boy. The council was a long one and the officer in command became convinced that Cochise and his chiefs were lying. Turning to a sergeant he snapped, "Arrest 'em!"

In a second the council tent was a whirlpool of action. Cochise's brother was killed and four chiefs made prisoner. Cochise cut his way through the canvas tent and escaped in the darkness with three bullets in his body. As for the four chiefs—they were hanged.

Cochise went on the warpath. In the words of Capt. John G. Bourke: "For the next ten years he made Arizona and New Mexico and the northern parts of Sonora and Chihuahua about the liveliest places on God's footstool." The account, if put down by a treasury expert, would read something like this:

Dr.—The United States to Cochise, to one brother killed while "resisting arrest."

Cr.—By ten thousand (10,000) men, women and children killed, wounded or tortured to death, scared out of their senses or driven out of the country, their wagons or pack trains destroyed, ranches burned and all industrial development stopped.

But there was one white man whom Cochise respected. This was Capt. Thomas Jonathan Jeffords, owner of a freighting outfit. Cochise had burned Jeffords' wagon trains and in retaliation the captain had killed many Apache warriors. Finally deciding that it was time for a truce, Jeffords boldly entered Cochise's stronghold in the Dragon mountains and convinced the astonished chief that both would benefit by calling off their war. So they made a verbal peace treaty and became warm friends.

Later, through Jeffords' influence, Cochise settled upon a reservation. There, June 8, 1874, he died peacefully, a singular anti-climax to the career of a man whose warlike activities had once devastated an empire.

"A Nice Mess I've Made of My Life!" She Sobbed.

of it! I wish—oh, my God, how I wish I was dead!"

"My own life has been so darned out," Alix mused, in a cautious undertone, sitting, fully dressed, on the side of her own bed, and studying her sister with pitying eyes. "I've often wondered if I could buck up and get through with it if some of that sort of thing had come to me! I don't know, of course, but it seems to me that I'd say: 'Who loses his life shall gain it!' and I'd stand anything—people and places I hated, loneliness and poverty—the whole bag of tricks! Sabina, Ohio.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness and irregularity. I was weak and nervous and could hardly stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal. I was this way for about a year and had tried several medicines and had a physician, but to no avail. My sister was taking your medicine and finally induced me to try it. I now feel fine and can do my housework without any trouble at all. You can use this letter for the sake of others if you wish."—Mrs. WELDON G. HATFIELD, R. R. 3, Sabina, Ohio.

Housewives make a great mistake in allowing themselves to become so weak and nervous that it is well-nigh impossible for them to attend to their necessary household duties.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken when you first notice such symptoms as nervousness, backache, weakness and irregularity. It will help you and prevent more serious trouble. Give it a fair trial. It surely helped Mrs. Hatfield, just as it has many, many other women.

The Movie Publicity Man

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

© 1912, by Motion Picture Newspaper Syndicate.

Howard Cummings had been separated from his wife, Martha, for over a year when he one evening saw her on the screen in a neighborhood movie theater. She looked more beautiful than ever on the screen—she had always been a particularly pretty girl—and seeing her again after so many months, affected Howard deeply.

As Howard gazed at Martha's weaknesses and saw her familiar smile and quaint characteristics, he felt a sudden rush of his old affection for her. The quarrel which had precipitated their separation seemed small and petty; the time since her departure seemed of an intense desire to find Martha and make up at once.

But when Martha had left him a year ago she had said she was leaving him for good. And Martha meant what she said. Was there any possible chance of ever getting her back again? All the longing for Martha which Howard had suppressed during the year of their separation now swept over him in a tidal wave with his candid acknowledgment that he wanted her back again. Everything else in his life now seemed trivial and unimportant. But behind his longing loomed the great fear that he might not be successful in winning her back. And in addition there was another fear—the fear that he might not be able to find her.

However, Howard was a level-headed, practical, successful business man. Though young in years, he had already rolled up quite a fortune, so he had plenty of money with which to push his quest.

The first step in finding his wife was undoubtedly to ascertain the name of the film in which he had seen her and then try to locate her through the manufacturers.

Howard anticipated trouble in finding his wife. He knew that movie actresses are constantly changing companies, and that movie manufacturers themselves are also constantly coming and going. But, to his delight, his task proved to be surprisingly simple. The company making the film in which he had seen his wife was still operating, and his wife was still employed by the company, according to a telegram he received from the publicity manager of the company in response to his wire.

According to this telegram the company was operating at Fort Lee, N. J., a short distance from New York City. Upon receiving this information Howard started at once for New York in the earliest possible train for that city.

The third afternoon found Howard anxiously toiling up the hill at Fort Lee toward a big, glass-covered building—the studio where his wife was employed. At the door of the studio a rather flashy dressed young man was waiting for him.

"You are Mr. Cummings, I presume?" queried this young man.

Howard nodded. "I am the publicity manager for the Mammoth company," explained the young man. "Your wife is one of our most promising actresses. She will probably eventually be starred. Come this way, please."

With beating heart Howard followed his guide into the studio and out upon the huge floor, where furniture, lights and odds and ends were thrown about in apparent confusion. At first Howard was confused; ill at ease. He didn't like the old glances cast at him by all the people who were standing around or rushing back and forth. He wanted only to see his wife.

Suddenly Howard's heart skipped a beat. His wife was coming toward him beautifully dressed in an evening gown. Howard looked at her hungrily. Never had she seemed prettier to him. In a moment their eyes met. He saw surprise, then an inscrutable look appear in his wife's eyes before she averted them for a minute or two. Then she came to him and held out her hand cordially.

"How are you, Howard?" she said. "I—I—" stammered Howard.

On the instant he stopped. A great burst of light blinded him for a moment. He heard some one—it sounded like the publicity manager—saying: "That was a bully flash," and then his eyes focused again on his wife to find her looking inscrutable and distant.

"I want to talk to you, Martha," said Howard. "Can't we go somewhere and talk?"

"Not now, Howard," said Martha rather coldly. "I'm due to rehearse some scenes now. But come back to-morrow. Perhaps we can talk to-morrow."

A feeling of resentment swept over Howard.

"I'm at the Central hotel," he said briefly. "Suppose you phone me there to-morrow when you're not busy."

Without another word Howard turned and hurried from the studio. Rage and resentment swept over him. What a reception! What treatment when he had come such a distance for the purpose of trying to make up with his wife! He had half a mind to call the whole thing off and go back to his home without making any further attempt at a reconciliation.

Then again the thought of the loneliness of the past year, of his really great love for the wife who had never seemed prettier than now swept over him. He threw back his shoulders.

"Of course she couldn't be anything but distant and cold with all those people around her," he told himself. "It will be different tomorrow—I'm sure it will."

It was different on the following day, but not in the manner Howard thought.

At breakfast the next morning as Howard was casually glancing through his paper, his eyes suddenly focused in horror at a picture on the theatrical page. The picture was a photo taken in a studio. It showed a man eagerly shaking hands with a brilliantly-dressed, beautiful actress. The woman's face was cold and distant. Over the picture was this caption: "Prominent Midwestern Business Man Seeks Reconciliation With Wife Who Is Becoming Famous in the Movies." The woman was his wife, the man was himself. Now he knew the meaning of that photographic flash while he was at the studio.

Howard went fighting mad at seeing this picture and reading the accompanying paragraphs giving intimate details of his life.

"Of course, Martha was in on it," he told himself. "She's crazy for publicity. No doubt she put up that publicity manager to put the thing across. It's a rotten thing to do and I'm done with her forever!"

Howard packed his grip at once, determined to return to his home forthwith. But to his disgust, there was no train until late in the afternoon and this made it necessary for him to put in the day in New York.

Howard tramped back and forth on Fifth avenue and Broadway, trying to find interest in the glowing show windows and the never-ending crowds. But he couldn't get his mind off the distant end of his expedition.

At last Howard turned his steps toward the hotel, as it was nearing train time. Not once did he think of going back to the studio or even of calling up his wife.

His heart was exceedingly heavy as he opened the door to his room.

Then, as he stepped into the room, he gave a startled glance toward the window. There, seated in an armchair, was his wife!

"How did you get in here?" Why did they let you in? demanded Howard.

"I—I showed them that picture in the paper," said Martha. "They couldn't refuse me then."

Howard stepped in the room and closed the door behind him.

"That was a fine piece of publicity!" he answered. "I never thought—"

His wife rushed to him.

"Oh, don't, don't!" she cried. "I didn't know it was going to happen. It was awful! Horrid! I've had that publicity manager fired. There are mighty few film press agents who would do a thing like that. And, oh, Howard—"

Her eyes melted. She held her arms out to him. Suddenly Howard found himself holding her tightly in his arms. "Really," whispered Martha, "that horrid picture was a good thing!"

"Why?" Howard demanded.

"Because," said Martha, "when you first came I really wanted to make up. But I thought I'd be cold and distant and make you suffer a while. Then, when that picture came out I knew you'd never look me up again, so I rushed right over here. Perhaps we wouldn't have made up except for that picture."

"I'm glad—mighty glad," said Howard. "I was afraid—"

"You know you said you'd left me for good."

"I know," smiled Martha. "But—"

"I've resigned my job. I'm going home with you."

And she snuggled closer in his arms and kissed him.

Uncle Jake's Particular Reason for Going Over to That "Yank Plantation" in Texas.

The Yankee invasion of Texas is making things difficult for the native plantation owner. After years of tenantry satisfactory on both sides, and particularly favorable to Uncle Jake, the old negro appeared before his landlord and announced his intention of leaving him.

"Why, what are you going to leave me for?" asked Mr. Harris, who looked upon Uncle Jake as a lifelong pensioner.

"How come? Why, jes 'cause I is gwine w'k o'ah on the Yank plantation yondah."

"Why, you old shiner you! Haven't I always treated you fair and square? Given you your own garden and a good bit left over from your share each year to send your boy to Tuskegee and to buy Aunt Viny's clothes?"

"You shoud nuff hab did all which you say, Mistah Harris."

"Then why do you want to go over there when you can make more here farming my plantation on shares?"

"This away," confided Uncle Jake, half apologetically and half proudly. "I is gwine w'k o'ah the 'ah 'cause them Yanks they is call they niggers 'Mistah'."

He will travel but only for what he can bring back. Just as his father sends half-way across the continent for good corn or melon-seed, so he will make his village famous by transplanting and growing this idea or that. He will make it known for its pottery or its processions, its philosophy or its penicils, its music or its swans. . . . Russia's Reply at Genoa to the Allied Proposals Merely Dodges the Issues.

IS INACCEPTABLE TO FRANCE

Text of Russo-German Military Pact Published in Paris—No Peace Yet in Ireland—Chicago Wars on Labor Terrorists—Daughterly on Army Contract Frauds.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

RUSSIA'S reply to the proposals of the allied nations represented at the Genoa conference, awaited with greatest anxiety for days, was handed in last Thursday, and proved to be not a real reply but a long controversial document.

"Wholly unsatisfactory," was the verdict of the French and Belgians, but M. Barthou and his colleagues awaited word from Paris before withdrawing from the conference.

On the other hand the British, though far from satisfied with the answer of the soviet delegates, professed to see in it a chance for further negotiations which might well lead to an amicable settlement. They called the Russian note distinctly conciliatory.

Concerning the crucial clauses of the allied note dealing with the restoration of foreign property confiscated by the soviet, the Russians made the general proposition that all financial matters between Russia and the powers be placed in the hands of a mixed commission of experts, but they rejected the proposed mixed commission to determine the payment for nationalized property because it "would make the sovereignty of the Russian state a plaything of chance." Since the other powers refuse the immense loan the Russians demanded, the latter withdrew their renunciation of counter claims based on allied help given the various anti-bolshevik leaders.

Lloyd George was hopeful that, if the financial questions were turned over to a mixed commission, the conference might be carried along until his nonaggression pact is made a reality. The Italians are supporting him, while Japan shows signs of standing with France and Belgium in demanding immediate and definite reply by Russia.

THAT story of a military convention signed by representatives of the Russian soviet army and the German general staff in Berlin April 3, first sprung by the London Times and vigorously denied, will not down. Now the Paris Journal L'Esclair prints what purports to be the text of the pact.

In it the Germans agree to furnish the Red army with arms and material for 180 regiments of infantry and heavy field artillery for 20 infantry divisions; to train 60 Russian instructors in the latest developments of chemical warfare and to send technical experts to Russia to speed up the munition plants and open new ones. The German general staff pledges to reorganize the Russian Baltic and Black sea fleets and to supply at the earliest possible date 500 new airplanes together with a supply of spare parts, and 150 field wireless outfits.

The Russian army staff guarantees the establishment in Russia of three German plants, one for the manufacture of airplanes, one for poison gas and one for arms, on condition that the Russian army can use the output when needed. German specialists would be admitted to "the new arms factory in Afghanistan." The two staffs, it is agreed, will prepare a joint plan of operations to give Russia access to the Baltic sea.

ANOTHER session of the council of the League of Nations opened Thursday in Geneva with Count Quiroga de Leon of Spain presiding. Unexpectedly, the earl of Balfour interrupted the matter of Palestine, announcing that he would demand immediate approval of the British mandate, following formal agreement on the matter between Great Britain and the United States. It was feared this would create another opening for friction between France and Great Britain.

GENERAL WU PEI-FU'S victory over General Chang near Peking was complete. The Manchurian army was scattered and thousands were taken prisoners and disbanded, each man being given a sum of money which Wu obtained by levying on banks that had supported Chang. The defeated leader fled into the country with his body guard with Wu's soldiers in hot pursuit. Near Luangchow, on the railway to Mukden, Chang gathered some of his forces and entrenched, and at latest reports another fight was expected there. Wu, who appointed himself governor of Chihli province, approved the appointment of Wang Shih-Cheng as premier to succeed Liang Shi-Yi, who fled to Japan. President Hsu then dismissed Chang as governor of all his titles. More important was his action in decreeing that hereafter each province shall be responsible direct to the central government instead of through military dictators. He thus sought to abolish the system of tutuans or military inspectors who have been ruling over two or more provinces and were virtually independent of Peking. General Wu says his sole aim is the reunification of China and the end of militarism, and he urges the immediate calling of a national assembly. He has no choice as to the form of government except that it be democratic and representative.

FOR a few days it looked as if Ireland might have something resembling peace—but only for a few days. On Wednesday the peace committee, on which both sides were represented, reported to Dail Eireann that it was unable to agree on a basis for adjusting the differences between the Free States and the republican extremists, neither party being able to compromise without complete surrender. At the same time the truce expired automatically. The radicals declare they will try to prevent the holding of the election scheduled for the second week in June and the Free State men declare it shall be held; which conflict of intentions furnishes the basis for a continuation of the bushwhacking warfare.

NAGGED by congress through a resolution for an investigation of Attorney General Daugherty's failure to proceed legally against those who have been robbing the government in war contracts, that official made a report to President Harding in which he blamed the delay on congress.

The attorney general laid the blame for failure to prosecute upon congress and promised an energetic campaign against war profiteers as soon as necessary legislation is enacted. He called for prompt action on the measures creating twenty-three additional federal judgeships, the bill establishing a special grand jury in the District of Columbia to grind out indictments against accused contractors, and an additional appropriation of $500,000 to enable the department of justice to continue its inquiries.

Mr. Daugherty called attention to the fact that nearly all the transactions in question took place during the preceding administration and that naturally little was done then to bring them to light. He promised that he would soon make public the names of influential persons who had knowledge of the transactions but were personally interested in concealing them.

DIRECTOR OF THE BUDGET DAWES made a report to the President on the operation of the budget system in which he showed it had resulted in economies totaling $225,000,000 for the current fiscal year, and that there would be a reduction of over $1,000,000,000 from the actual expenditures for 1921. In transmitting the report to the house appropriations committee Mr. Dawes said it conveyed to the people the determination of those in authority to operate the government effectively at the least possible cost, to make the government's full contribution to a return to the normal ways of peace and ultimately lifting the excessive burden of taxation.

"Political bunk" was the retort of Democratic members of congress. They asserted the report was deceptive and that the actual expenditures for the routine business of the government have increased rather than decreased. They called attention to deficiency appropriations aggregating $292,000,000, but Representative Madden challenged them to deny that only $12,000,000 of this deficiency was attributable to the activities of the present administration.

MR. SPENCER, the junior senator from Missouri, got into an unpleasant mess through his efforts to have the senate confirm the unfortunate appointment of Nat Goldstein to be internal revenue collector for the eastern Missouri district. Mr. Goldstein was a delegate to the Republican national convention but was unseated after admitting he had accepted money from one of Frank O. Lowden's managers. The appointment was violently attacked in the senate, and Mr. Lowden, who was on an ocean steamer, sent a radiogram declaring that in his opinion Goldstein was unfit for the job. Finally, to relieve the President and Senator Spencer from embarrassment, Goldstein asked that the nomination be withdrawn. This was done, but the Democrats made it plain that they intended to keep the incident alive for use in the approaching campaign.

LEADERS of building trade unions in the Chicago district who have been fighting the Landis wage award appear to have overreached themselves at last. Not content with bomb throwing, incendiarism and blackmail, some of them or their hired gunmen last week killed two policemen who interrupted their operations, and wounded a third. The brutal murders aroused Chicago to the determination to wipe out the outlaw bands. Swift police raids caught a large number of labor leaders, including some who are ex-convicts and others who are now under conviction of crimes or awaiting trial. Among the prisoners, asserted the police, are the men really responsible for the reign of labor terrorism which has gripped Chicago for so long a time.

Samuel Gompers of course always has refused to countenance violence in labor disputes, but it is hard to see how he came entirely avoid some moral responsibility for these crimes in Chicago. In view of the open encouragement he recently gave the unions that are seeking to repudiate their agreements to accept the verdict which might be rendered by Judge Landis, the arbitrator chosen by themselves.

AMERICA lost one of her most eminent financiers in the death of Henry P. Davison, who passed away at the conclusion of an operation to remove tumor from the brain. By his own efforts he had attained high position among bankers and he had also accumulated a large fortune. During the World war he made a fine record as head of the American Red Cross.

AT THIS writing President Harding has not stated which of the plans for a soldier's bonus bill—the sales tax or the insurance—he prefers, or whether he will accept either one. The prediction in Washington is that he will veto the bill and that it will be passed over his veto. Leaders in congress have refused to let the matter go beyond July.

THE interallied war council, at Paris, has agreed that Germany shall manufacture a Zeppelin of 70,000 meters capacity to replace the one allotted to the United States by the Versailles treaty but destroyed in Germany. It will probably be delivered within nine months and a German crew is to bring it across the Atlantic.

THE federal railroad labor board issued an order last week that may serve to avert the threatened strike of 600,000 shovemen and switchmen. This ruling places a ban on the contract system of furnishing out job work under which many roads are said to have been evading the orders of the board as to wages, working conditions and other matters.

DEATH CLAIMS

W. L. CLEMENT

W. L. Clement, one of the oldest and best known citizens of the county, died at his home near Fords Ferry, Thursday of a paralytic stroke, aged 83 years. Funeral services were held at Mt. Zion church Saturday, conducted by Rev. G. P. Dillon, pastor of the Marion Methodist church. Interment at Mt. Zion cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was Miss Kittie
Williams, also by six children: Miss Ida Clement, Mrs. Eb Wathen and
Mrs. Will Alvis, all of this county;

Cos Clement of Los Angeles, Calif.;
George L. Clement, of Louisville and
Dr. J. M. Clement, of McLeansboro, Ill.

Two children, Virgie Lee and Dixie Clement, preceded their father to the grave. *

CARD OF THANKS

We kindly thank the people of Sheridan who so kindly assisted us during the illness and death of our darling wife and mother who died on the fifth of May. She was in her 69th year. May God's blessings be with all who assisted us. She leaves a husband, two sons one daughter and two grand-sons.

J. A. Jones, Bob Jones, Tom
Jones and wife and baby, Mrs. Albert Sweet.

AN ALL-DAY MEETING

A large crowd attended the all-day meeting at Deer Creek church last Sunday. Rev. Spickard, of Russellville, preached in the morning and at the noon hour a bountiful dinner was spread on the grounds. Special services were held in the afternoon, at which Messrs. John Reed, George Gass, Will Todd and Dave Humphrey were ordained Deacons.

Any well-informed garage mechanic will tell you the Special-Six leads in value from the standpoint of endurance, comfort, power and economy of upkeep. Drive one yourself and you will realize why thousands of owners have found in it those qualities which go to make up motoring satisfaction and pride of ownership.

—unusually comfortable, because of its deep, genuine leather upholstery and long semi-elliptic springs, front and rear.

—endurance and dependability have been built into it by the manufacturer through the use of high-grade materials and workmanship.

—a Studebaker-built L-head motor, 3½ x 5, develops fifty horsepower.

—economy of upkeep with repair shop attention reduced to a minimum.

—refinements such as you might expect only in higher-priced cars:

Jeweled eight-day clock on instrument board.

Cowl ventilator controlled from instrument board.

Tonneau lamp with extension cord.

Parking lights in lower corners of windshield base.

One-piece rainproof windshield and windshield wiper.

Large rectangular plate glass rear window—7½ x 23 in.

Transmission lock reduces cost of theft insurance to owner 15% to 20%.

One key operates the Yale lock on ignition switch, transmission and tool compartment.

In the Special-Six you get such value and satisfaction as only Studebaker, the world's largest builder of sixes, offers.

PE-RU-NA

For Coughs, Colds and Catarrh

Mr. E. W. Marshall, Bremen, Michigan, suffering from Systemic Catarrh involving Head, Nose, Throat and Stomach, claims a complete cure. His letter is convincing.

"For the past two years I have been troubled with systemic catarrh. I used several boxes of Pe-ru-na tablets and they have effected a complete cure. I do not hesitate to recommend Pe-ru-na for all catarrhal conditions."

Mr. Marshall is just one of many thousands who have been benefited by Dr. Hartman's famous medicine in the past fifty years.

It is by stimulating the digestion, enriching the blood and lining up the nerves that Pe-ru-na is able to exert such a soothing, healing influence upon the mucous membranes which line the body. It is a wonderfully effective remedy to evolve strength after a protracted sickness, the grip or Spanish influenza.

THINGS BEGINNERS MUST LEARN FIRST

Explanation of Terms Used in Radio and of Its Basic Principles.

Due to the great interest taken in radio since broadcasting stations have been started, many radio terms are seen and heard that may be unfamiliar to the novice. Some of the most commonly used terms are explained and defined below.

Like light, heat and sound, radio energy is propagated in the form of a wave motion. Every one is familiar with the wave motion set up on the surface of a still body of water by the dropping of a stone into it.

Every time a point on the surface of the waves goes through a complete set of motions and starts to repeat those motions the wave is said to have gone through a cycle.

The number of complete cycles gone through per second is the frequency.

The human ear is responsive to sound frequencies up to a few thousand cycles per second but is not capable of responding to the higher frequencies encountered in radio. Arbitrarily a frequency of less than 10,000 cycles has been called an audible frequency—one which can be heard—and frequencies above 10,000 cycles, radio or inaudible frequencies—because they cannot be heard by the human ear.

The particular type of wave which propagates radio energy is an electromagnetic wave. All of us have seen bits of iron and steel attracted by the little toy magnets made up in the form of horseshoes. This attraction of the magnet for the bits of iron and steel showed the existence of a magnetic

The high-frequency current is known as the carrier-wave and its function is to radiate into space in the form of electro-magnetic waves and by its variation in amplitude carry with it the variation in the tone at the transmitting station.

It is the frequency of the carrier-wave that determines the wave-length on which a radiophone station is transmitted. By experiment it has been found that electro-magnetic waves travel at the same velocity that light waves travel, that is, 186,000 miles per second. Wave-length is the distance between any two similar points on two successive waves; for example, the distance from crest to crest of any two successive waves in the same direction, measured in meters, a unit of length equal approximately to one and one-tenth yards. Converting 186,000 miles to meters, the equivalent is 300,000,000 meters. The length of an electro-magnetic wave is equal then to 300,000,000 divided by the frequency. Suppose a station was transmitting on a wave-length of 300 meters. The frequency of the carrier-wave would be approximately 1,000,000 cycles.

Just as a violinist tunes his instrument, that is, makes a certain string emit a note of higher or lower pitch, or, technically speaking, a sound wave of higher or lower frequency, by adjusting the tension on the string, so may the electrical constants of the antenna circuit of a radiophone transmitter be changed in order to have the station emit a carrier-wave of a different frequency.

If a tuning fork having a natural period corresponding to middle C be placed near a violinist who is playing, the fork will vibrate when the musician plays middle C, but all other times it will remain quiescent. This phenomenon of the tuning fork vibrating whenever the musician plays the corresponding note on the violin is known as mechanical resonance. If a radio receiver be adjusted so that electrically its natural period of vibration will be 835,000 cycles (300 meters wave-length) every time a station transmits on a wave-length of 300 meters, current will be set up in the receiver by field about the tips of the magnet and this same kind of a field propagates the electro-magnetic force, except that unlike the toy magnet, its power comes off in the form of wavy motions. This electro-magnetic force propagates radio energy in all directions.

The medium that transmits the electro-magnetic waves is the same medium that transmits light—the ether. This medium is supposed to fill all space, even that occupied by fluids and solids. Little is known about its properties.

In radio it is more common to speak of wave length than frequency. The wave length of any wave motion is the distance between any two successive crests in the same direction. The wave length depends upon the frequency. If the frequency is high the wave length is short. On the other hand if the frequency is low the wave length is long. Numerically the wave length is equal to the distance traveled by the wave in one second divided by the frequency. Suppose, for example, that it were desired to know the wave length of an electro-magnetic wave having a frequency of 835,000 cycles. Electro-magnetic waves travel at the same speed as do light waves, that is, 186,000 miles per second. Dividing the 186,000 by 835,000 the wave length would be .223 miles or 360 yards. In radio work it is measured in meters. A meter is equal to approximately 1.1 yards. Converting 360 yards into meters the wave length would be 330 divided by 1.1 or 300 meters. This is the wave length on which KDKA operates. It also means that the electro-magnetic waves sent out from this station have a frequency of 835,000 cycles.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

In a radiophone transmitter there are two requirements that must be fulfilled. First, there must be a source of high-frequency current, say, between 15,000 and 1,500,000 cycles so connected to an antenna and ground system that energy in the form of electro-magnetic waves will be radiated. Second, there must be some method of controlling this high-frequency current or modulating it so that the variations in the amplitude of the high-frequency current will be directly proportional to the voice or music to be transmitted.

How One Editor Uses Radio.

The editor of a paper in an isolated town in the northwest is using the radio in a most ingenious and effective way. An amateur radio friend in a big city 50 miles away buys the latest editions of the city papers as soon as they are off the press, reads the best news into his transmitter, and a typist in the country office copies the news as it comes in over the office receiver. The editor, through this ingenious plan, is always "First With the Latest" in his home town.

WAR ROBS THREE OF MEMORY

Three Among Most Unusual Cases on Record at Veterans' Bureau in Washington.

Three men who have lost themselves and whose memory does not extend back to the war where they received injury, are among the most unusual cases on record at the Veterans' bureau in Washington, D. C., among the long list of war victims. The American Legion is endeavoring to assist the unfortunate ex-service men in finding their relatives.

Hayward Thompson—at least that is what he is now called—is one of the most peculiar cases. He has forgotten who he is. In his head is an ugly shrapnel wound. His memory goes back to January 22, 1922, when he arrived at a hotel in Denver, with a bill in his pocket from one of the most expensive hotels in Colorado Springs. His memory, he now believes, lapsed somewhere, either far back in France or on the trip between Colorado Springs and Denver. Thompson remembers having had $1,200 in his pocket and access to many thousands more.

In searching Washington records for some trace of the lost man, it was found that a certain Hayward Thompson enlisted in the Marine corps June 5, 1918, and was discharged January 6, 1919. He had a wife and three children at Flemington, Mo., and a mother, Mrs. Louise Thompson, at Chicago. The man with a shrapnel wound in his head and no memory of any relatives at all, telegraphed in great eagerness to Flemington, Mo., and to Chicago. He received no answer.

Not so long ago a clean-cut young man appeared at a Los Angeles hospital. He wore an American Legion button. When questioned as to who he was he stated he did not know. "I think I am thirty-two years old," he said. "I am five feet, nine inches and weigh 130 pounds. My eyes are gray and I have blond hair. I believe I was a soldier. If any one can tell me who I am, or anything about my past, please let me know." The Los Angeles post of the Legion is making every effort to help the man find himself.

A third "unidentified living" lives at 735 North Thirty-first street, Louisville. He is known as Leonard Wells, to the neighborhood. His memory is hazy. He believes that he enlisted in the old First Kentucky Infantry, and with the command was transferred to France. His photograph was forwarded to his company commander, who recognized the face but did not recall a name. A machine gun bullet had pierced his abdomen and injured his spine. Another had injured the left shoulder cap. No compensation or insurance can be awarded to this man, the Veterans' bureau regrets, until his identity can be established.

ON "GREATEST HEROES" LIST

Sergt. Samuel Gluckman of the American "Devil Dogs" Rival for York-Woodfill Honors.

Another rival for the crown worn alternately by Sergeants York and Woodfill as the greatest hero of the World war has been uncovered by the United States Veterans' bureau in the person of Sergt. Samuel Gluckman, member of the American "Devil Dogs" during the war and decorated by both the American and allied governments.

Although born in Austria, Sergeant Gluckman enlisted with the marines at the outbreak of the war and although too modest to tell the story of his achievements while fighting against the Germans, the American Legion at Washington discovered that Gluckman fought in seven major engagements, Verdun, Belleau Woods, Chateau Thierry, Marbach, St. Mihiel, Soissons and Mont Blanc.

On the morning of October 3, 1918, Sergeant Gluckman started out to get water for his comrades. He returned without the water but with 20 Germans and a painful wound. The "Devil Dog" sergeant captured a lone German and instead of bayoneting his captive forced him to lead him to the rest of the advance party. Coming onto the whole batch of 20, Sergeant Gluckman waved a hand grenade and ordered them all out of the shell hole they were occupying and into the arms of his American comrades. By executive appointment Gluckman is now employed at the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H.

LEGION MAN, AID TO CUPID

Henry Sullivan, Phoenix (Ariz.) Organization Enthusiast, as J. P., Ties Many Knots.

Having secured plenty of experience in braving the perils of the deep while a member of the navy during the war, Henry J. Sullivan of Phoenix, Ariz., is now helping to launch the several ships of matrimony that set sail from his home city. When the service men of Phoenix start their wedding barks they seek out Justice of the Peace Sullivan to unslip the lines of their single blessedness.

Mr. Sullivan is also the man who started the "Under one head, the American Legion" slogan which has been adopted by all the war organizations of his home county to advance the interests of the service men, carry on hospitalization work, eliminate drives and working generally for the benefit of the men who served their country.

As Mr. Sullivan himself expresses it: "All war organizations in the county have united under one head for the purpose of centralizing our work. We expect to lend our efforts largely to hospitalization work and in other ways serving the disabled service men by placing the responsibilities on the various departments of government where they belong rather than by advancing their rights in a slipshod fashion."

FORCE PERSHING TO SPEAK

Legionnaires of Bement, Illinois, Hold Up Old Commander's Car and Demand an Address.

General Pershing was captured while attempting to pass through friendly territory by a group of American Legion men at Bement, Ill. The old leader of the A. E. F. started through the town on an interurban trolley car, but Legionnaires, aided by a powerful ally in the person of the motorman, gathered in front of the trolley and demanded a speech.

The rear platform of the car was turned into a speaker's stage and "Black Jack" addressed the service men and their friends for ten minutes. The Legionnaires were marshaled together by Sidney Morgan, their post commander, who stood on the platform with his old general, and it was not until he had given the word that the former members of Pershing's command would give the trolley the right of way.

Adjusted Compensation Wins

Adjusted compensation won a decided victory in the nation-wide referendum by the United States Chamber of Commerce—4,116 chambers voted favorably, 2,657 against the measure. The United States chamber has opposed the bill from the start. The commerce body in Toledo, O., protested the questionnaire which was sent out as being unfair in the way it presented the subject.

Carrying On With the American Legion

A community playground will be made by the Legion at Nashville, Tenn., the ex-soldiers bearing the expense of apparatus and upkeep.

In Korea, American ex-soldiers, most of them missionaries under the leadership of a Southern Presbyterian mission, have formed a post of the Legion.

During the war it cost Uncle Sam $300 to clothe each of his soldiers. The present doughboy is garbed in clothing costing but $180, the War department states.

The only woman field clerk in the army is Miss Jean Hodson of San Francisco, Cal., secretary to Major General Morton. She holds the rank of sergeant major.

The Legion in both North and South will henceforth observe the birthdays of Generals Lee and Grant, rival leaders of the Civil war. The birthday of General Grant was observed on April 27 this year and that of Lee will be observed January 10, 1923.

SEX OF EGGS AND CHICKENS

Department of Agriculture Says There Is No Dependable Method to Determine Sex.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Raisers of poultry have long wished for a reliable means for determining the sex of chicks and of eggs to be used for hatching, but, in spite of the promise of various manufacturers of devices, the United States Department of Agriculture says there is no very dependable method for determining the sex of chicken that a certain egg will produce, and that it is extremely difficult to determine the sex of chicks of most breeds.

The department has made tests of a number of devices claimed by the makers to give good results in sorting out male, female and infertile eggs. In all cases they have been found to be useless for the purpose, as two persons could never get the same result with a lot of eggs, and hatching tests showed that one could do just as well by closing his eyes and picking out the eggs at random.

On account of the difference in the color of the down of the sexes it is often possible to select with considerable accuracy the hens and cockerets of the Barred Plymouth Rock as soon as they are hatched, but in the case of most other breeds and varieties this selection cannot be made with any certainty until some time later. Those who know the breed well are able to distinguish between the sexes of Leghorns when they are three to four weeks old. The sexes of the medium-weight breeds, with the exception given above, have the same appearance until the chicks are 10 or 12 weeks old. The surface sex differences in the Asiatic breeds are not as apparent up until the birds are three or four months old.

There may be differences that will make it possible to sort the sexes earlier, but so far poultrymen have found no reliable basis for selection.

GREAT IMPORTANCE OF OATS

Used in Ration of Growing Chick It Does Much to Build Up Strong Frame and Muscle.

The importance of oats in the poultry ration cannot well be overlooked. It forms the backbone in many rations. It is chiefly important in the growing ration for young chicks, for it will grow frame and muscle more economically than any other grain. Street-cut oats, rolled oats, or growing mash containing ground oats or oatmeal as a base are exceptionally economical feeds for growing stock. Fed in connection with buttermilk, it makes the best growing ration known. Of course, a grain mixture should be fed for variety.

POULTRY NOTES

The busy hen is the one that lays the most eggs.

Chicks should not receive feed until they are 30 hours old.

The baby chick will not stand chilling. It must have access to heat whenever it desires.

Two-mark the chicks as soon as they are hatched. This enables one to tell their ages later.

Disease control and sanitation are among the most important things in poultry management.

In cold weather ten to thirteen chicks are sufficient for one hen, while in warmer weather fifteen to twenty can be cared for successfully.

Nothing Else. Charles (after the proposal)—Have you ever loved before?

Charles—No, Charles. I have often admired men for their strength, courage, beauty, intelligence, or something like that, you know; but with you Charles, it's love; nothing else.

Considerate.

Papa—Why did you permit young Gaybird to kiss you in the parlor last night?

Daughter—Because I was afraid he would catch cold in the hall.

HAD TO STAY IN BED FOR WEEKS

Omaha Citizen Says He Is Now Rid of Troubles That Had Kept Him Miserable for Years.

"I was almost out of commission when I began taking Tanlac, but it has made me feel like a new man in a short time," said W. B. Meadville, 7004 North Twenty-ninth St., Omaha, Neb.

"My liver and kidneys were out of order and I had terrible pains in my back and sides and was so bad off I often had to stay in bed for two weeks at a time."

"The results I got from Tanlac were a very glad surprise to me. It benefited me in every way and I believe the improvement I received will prove lasting and I feel stronger and better than in many a day."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

The Principal Inducement. "What sends men into the far corners of the world?" asks one of the magazines. Our guess is that it is the hope of seeing their names in the newspaper headlines.

A Feeling of Security

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy. The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything. It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper—Advertisement.

MADE WISE CHOICE OF WIFE

John Brown's Helpmate Apparently Ideal Woman for a Man of His Stern Disposition.

John Brown, whose body later on lay "a-moldering in the grave," once described the lady who afterwards became his wife as a "remarkably plain but neat, industrious and economical girl." These latter virtues seem to have atoned for her want of physical charm, for he and Dianthe Lusk were married when she was nineteen and he was only twenty.

Dianthe was a strong-minded woman, but she made John an excellent wife, and their twelve years of married life—terminated by her early death—were most happy. He was a man of decided and violent disposition, and his wife is said to have possessed the faculty of getting him to do as she wished and causing him to believe that it was his idea all along. She died in 1832, twelve years after their marriage and just after the birth of their seventh child.

Changing Figures.

"What is the population of Crimson Gulch at present?"

"No telling," replied Cactus Joe. "It was eighty-seven last night. But if Cactus Joe is as unforgiving toward Three-finger Sam as he was in the poker game broke up, I reckon maybe by this time it's only eighty-six."

One likes to be an optimist so far as believing that some day smoke will be abated.

More Quality for Less Money

There never was a time when Goodyear Tires were so good as now.

They are bigger, heavier and stronger today than any earlier Goodyears ever were.

Yet Goodyear prices are lower now than ever.

Not even in those remembered days before the war did Goodyear Tires sell at such low prices as today.

Look at the figures listed below.

They represent an average decrease of more than 60% from Goodyear prices of 1910.

When you can get these better Goodyears at such prices, there is no question of the tire value at your command.

Your Goodyear Service Station Dealer will tell you that never in his experience as a tire dealer has he known the equal of this value. See him today.

Postmaster General Has Preserved Specimens of Work of the "Inspired Composer."

Postmaster General Work has two choice specimens of typographical errors which he keeps on his desk handy to show to the discriminating. Like most everybody else in the world, Doctor Work appreciates that sort of thing.

Both of these "bulls" occurred in connection with printed portraits of Doctor Work when he was appointed to the highest position in the postal service. One of them bears the title: "Dr. Herbert Work, physician to the pope. Was with the late pope in his last illness."

Evidently the inscriptions of the two photographs got mixed up, and nobody caught the error, on account of the title of doctor of both physicians.

The other sample was a picture of the postmaster general, and an inscription which should have read: "Colorado Men Appointed Postmaster General."

But it got in like this: "Colored Man Appointed Postmaster General."

Raider of Garden Seemingly Had as Many Lives as Has the Pre-verbal Tammy.

My garden has flowers and fruits in it; my neighbor keeps chickens, but I do more than my share in keeping those hens plump. My son has an air-gun, and one evening recently a fowl foolishly met one of the shots halfway. We were anxious to dispose of her; we could not dream of eating her ourselves, so our neighbor on the other side promised to help us out by lifting the chicken after dark. That night we watched for his coming, and growing impatient, I started out to help. There was my neighbor quartering the ground without finding the bird; he had a flashlight and I a lantern.

Across the fence came the friendly inquiry, "Anything you are looking for?"

Like guilty conspirators we looked up to find the missing chicken safe in her arms. The hen evidently had recovered sufficiently to find her way home. We donned our gisms and scuttled for beds.—Exchange.

Here's Good Advice: Relieve Your Fatigue With Sleep. Avoid Stimulants

THERE is nothing in the world so reconstructive as sound, refreshing sleep. During sleep the system rids itself of the fatigue poisons that have accumulated during the day. The food elements are taken up by the various tissues that require rebuilding nutriment.

It is important that you get plenty of health-bringing sleep. Anything that interferes with your sleep hampers and hinders you—mentally and physically.

A common cause of physical weakness and mental depression is the reaction following over-stimulation by the drug, caffeine, and other elements found in both coffee and tea.

If you have an idea that coffee or tea drinking may be injurious to your health, why not stop it for a week or so, and drink delicious, fragrant Postum instead.

Postum is a rich, golden-brown, pure cereal beverage. It contains no harmful elements of any kind. You can drink Postum as many times a day as you or the children desire a grateful, refreshing beverage.

Your grocer sells both forms of Postum: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for fully 20 minutes.

Hail Destroys Millions of Dollars of Tobacco

The loss of tobacco by hail in this and other tobacco states within the last five years has run up into millions of dollars with only a small part covered by insurance.

Yet, the amount of insurance received by growers who had the foresight thus to protect themselves against such loss, was enormous and should make every grower not only feel the necessity of insuring his tobacco crop against hail storms but to do that very thing and do it at once.

What Dr. Halley Says: Dr. Samuel H. Halley, of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, upon congratulating an insurance company on lowering its rates on tobacco hail insurance, said, "Within the period that I have had hail insurance I have had four severe losses. The money I received exceeded considerably what I paid in, to say nothing of my peace of mind that I was fully protected in case of a storm. I have always advocated carrying hail insurance on tobacco without which every grower takes a chance to lose all. With it he can, in safety, go into the business of producing a crop which requires, as does tobacco, so much labor, time and money."

Now that the Burley Growers have gone into an organization to handle their business in a modern economic business-like way, I see no reason why all growers can not take out insurance on the reduced rates the companies are now quoting. Look up the insurance agent in your section now, and let him protect you against the loss of your tobacco. Policies effective July 10th, noon.

GO NO FARTHER

The Evidence is at Your Door
Marion proof is what you want and the statement of this highly respected resident will banish all doubt.
Geo. A. Clark, E. Depot St., Marion, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills in my estimation are a mighty good kidney remedy. I have had a great deal of trouble with backache at different times, and my back would be so lame across the small of it I could hardly straighten up after bending. When I have had these attacks I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Haynes and Taylor's Drug Store. A few of Doan's has never failed to rid me of backache. I am glad to recommend them to anyone in need of a good kidney remedy."
Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Clark had. Foster Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. — (Advertisement).
