LETTER FROM E. JEFF TRAVIS

EDITOR'S NOTE: This letter was written by E. Jeff Travis, a prominent figure in Marion, to share his insights and observations.

In your last letter, you mentioned the importance of community engagement and the role of citizens in shaping local policies. I couldn't agree more. As a long-time resident of Marion, I have seen firsthand the impact of community involvement on the quality of life in our city.

One of the most significant changes in Marion in recent years has been the increase in community events and initiatives. The Marion Community Center has been instrumental in organizing various events, from art shows to cookouts, which have brought people together and fostered a sense of community.

However, despite these positive developments, there are still areas where we can do better. One issue that has been a concern for many residents is the lack of accessible recreational facilities. It's important to invest in parks and recreational areas to ensure that all members of our community have access to healthy and safe spaces to enjoy.

Furthermore, the local government should continue to work with community leaders to address the needs and concerns of all Marion residents. By doing so, we can create a more inclusive and vibrant community for everyone.

In conclusion, I believe that community involvement is crucial to the success of any city. Let's continue to support local initiatives and work together to improve the quality of life for all Marion residents.

Sincerely,
E. Jeff Travis

CHAPTER III

One day. . .

When you are a girl, you are the mistress of a house. You have your own room, your own clothes, and you are the one who runs the household. You have the power to make decisions and you are in charge of everything. You can have your own friends and you can do things on your own. You are not dependent on anyone else for anything.

And in a sense of the word, she was the mistress of a house. The feeling of her heart, the desire to be in control, was much stronger than the desire to belong to another. She was not interested in marriage, she was not interested in having children, she was not interested in anything but being in control. She was the mistress of her own destiny, and she was not going to let anyone else take that away from her.

But then, she was not a typical girl. She was not interested in the traditional roles of a woman. She was not interested in being a housewife or a mother. She wanted to do something more, to be someone different.

And so, she went out and started her own business. She opened a small store and she worked hard. She worked long hours, but she never gave up. She never gave in to the pressures of society. She never let anyone else tell her what to do.

And so, she was the mistress of her own house. She was the one who ran the store, the one who made the decisions, the one who controlled her own destiny. And she was not going to let anyone else take that away from her. She was going to be the mistress of her own fate.

ENDS SITTING BULL'S REIGN

Chief Red Tomahawk, Sioux Indian, and Commanding Chief of the Sioux Indians, was shot and killed by Sitting Bull on the plains of the Black Hills.

Since the passing of the Red Clouds, the Sioux have been without a leader.

"The Sioux have had no leader since the Red Clouds passed," said the Chief.

"The Red Clouds were a great and powerful chief, but he left no successor."

"The Sioux are now without a leader, and they will be unable to protect themselves from the whites."

"The Sioux will be a weaker people without a leader, and they will be more easily subdued by the whites."

WHY I DO LIKE MARION

There appears to be the present of a hot house reporter and a traveling man who will sell me a “bottle of water” at any time the weather is too warm. There is also to be found in the warmer areas of the town a few who will sell me a “lunch box” for a few dollars. It is in this way that I am able to obtain the necessary supplies for my daily life.

Fortunately for Marion this week is it is anticipated that we have some of the finest children whose chief object is to drink water.

The price of any commodity depends on the laws of getting it and the laws of the market. Not so with water. It is a free product. No one can own it except in so far as he can make a living profit. We have as high a price on water as on any other food, and the simple fact that water makes up a tow worth-while living is one of the mysteries of modern life.

OUR NEW HIGHWAY

During the winter and spring months, when the new highway program has been in progress, the Marion and county roads have changed and worked out by the drainage department. The county road has been worked out the past few months and ready for use in the near future.
